BRITISH HOLD ALL GAINS AFTER YESTERDAY'S DRIVE Situation on the Western Front Satisfactory, Says Ex-Premier Asquith

ANZAC RIDGE IS CRITICAL SECTOR IN RECENT ADVANCE OF BRITISH

Haig's Forces After Week of Preliminary Artillery Bombardment, Assail One of the Most Important Points in Teuton Line

By Courier Leased Wire
London, Sept. 20.—(By the Associated Press)—The scene of the present British offensive includes one of the most important and strongest parts of the German line in this section and has been marked by some of the most bitter fighting of the war since the Allies seven weeks ago began their drive, which has become known as the battle of Flanders. The wooded elevations east and southwest of Ypres, among which are such dominating positions as Glencorse Wood and Inverness Copse, were the vital points and the Germans had made their defenses as nearly impregnable as they were able, being determined to retain them without regard to the cost. The battles of the past few weeks bear witness to the strength of the defenses at these points.

The crucial sector may be said to begin with the ridge known as Anzac, which lies a mile west of Sommebrake, southwest of Anzac is Nuns Wood and just east of this is the famous forest known as Polygon wood. When the British in August fought their way forward to Polygon wood, they found Nuns Wood so flooded that they were forced to go around it and the ground here still presents great difficulties to the movement of troops because of its swampy condition. Nuns Wood merges into Glencorse Wood on the south and a little further down and outside the Ypres-Menin highway is Inverness Copse, of undying fame. Between Glencorse Wood and Inverness is an open stretch of ground of some 400 yards and here on the Fitz-Clarence Farm, the Germans had built great steel and concrete redoubts whose machine guns dominated the southern part of Glencorse Wood and the northern section of Inverness.

Below Inverness are Dumbarton Lakes, and the ground about them is pitted with shell craters, which are filled with water. The paths and trenches here were wiped out by artillery fire, and the shell holes are so close together that there is no space to walk around them. In most places the mud and water are knee-deep. Still further south is Shrewsbury Forest, through which the British line ran and the ground in front of the British trenches is a mass of tangled barbed wire. Just below Shrewsbury Forest is Belgian Wood, which lies near Hollebeke. There are many other little forests scattered through this section, most of them in marshy ground which was rendered still more difficult by the devastation wrought by the shells.

Between Hollebeke and the River Lys, the country is more or less open and is dominated by Mesines, and North of Ypres. The railway of the country presents the same difficulties from marshy ground, although there are a few wooded stretches.

The British began an intense artillery preparation on the night of Sept. 18, and this continued with unabating fury until today. Counter battery work resulted in a large number of German guns being silenced, and many enemy ammunition dumps near battery were blown up by shell fire. The entire front over which the attacks were to be made was searched out by high explosives, and as an additional precaution the British gunners kept putting down a heavy barrage fire, first in one place and then in another and sweeping the whole country before them.

The German guns, of course, have not been silenced, but their fire was comparatively weak. All this artillery preparation by the British was vital if there was to be hope of success, for they had to lead the strength of this front before and knew that their infantry faced a task that would try their mettle to the fullest. In previous attacks the shell hole warfare conducted by the Germans in this region has proved a grave embarrassment, and it was only by a bombardment such as was conducted, that could wipe out these concealed positions. It was impossible that the Germans should not have known that an offensive was being prepared, but it appears from statements by prisoners that there was much doubt as to the exact position where the British would strike. For the past fortnight the policy of the Germans has been one of inaction, although they undoubtedly made every effort to improve their positions since the offensive in August.

DEVELOPMENT OF ALL LATENT RESOURCES Is Essential to Victory and Lasting Peace, Says King George

By Courier Leased Wire
London, Sept. 20.—King George, after concluding a tour of the merchant shipbuilding yards and the marine engine works of the Clyde district and the principal steel rolling mills of Scotland, addressed a letter to-night to the Lord Lieutenant of Glasgow, expressing his interest in the effort of the workmen to maintain the strength and efficiency of the merchant marine.

TURMEL HIMSELF ASKS LEGAL PROCEEDINGS

By Courier Leased Wire
Paris, Sept. 21.—The report of the special committee approving the appeal for the authorization of legal proceedings against Deputy Louis Turmel, was adopted by the Chamber of Deputies last night after a raising of hands, without discussion and in the deepest silence. The report expressed astonishment at the delay shown in taking up the case. The resolution authorizing the suspension of parliamentary immunity was read by the President of the chamber, Paul Deschamps.

DETAILED REPORTS CONFIRM COMPLETE BRITISH VICTORY

Number of Strong Points Near Langemarck Taken by Haig's Men; Advancing Germans Wiped Out by Concentrated Fire

By Courier Leased Wire
London, Sept. 21.—Field Marshal Haig, in later reports regarding the British offensive on the Belgian front to the east of Ypres yesterday, when the British troops pushed through the German lines for a distance of more than a mile, says that the completeness of the British success is confirmed by detailed accounts of the battle.

The British war office after the receipt of Field Marshal Haig's report, to-day issued this bulletin:

"More detailed accounts of yesterday's battle confirm the completeness of our success.

During the evening local attacks delivered by us in the neighborhood of Tower Hamlets and northeast of Langemarck, cleared up a number of strong points and completed the capture of our objectives in these localities. It is now established that in the many counter-attacks delivered by considerable forces of the enemy during the afternoon and evening, his casualties were unusually great.

ASQUITH TO TELL TRUTH ABOUT WAR

Ex-Premier Will Set Public Mind Right on the Military Situation. COMBAT PACIFICISM

By Courier Leased Wire
Montreal, Sept. 21.—A special cable to The Gazette from London says:

Mr. Asquith has returned from a visit to the western front where he had been the guest of Sir Douglas Haig, and will on Wednesday next speak at Leeds at a meeting arranged by the war aims committee, of which the late premier, together with the present prime minister, Lloyd George, are presidents.

A counter propaganda which as yet has not attained the dimensions of that which it designs to offset, has been begun by the war aims committee. Asquith is expected to set the public mind right in regard to the character of the operations on the western front and particularly to remove the impression which exists in some quarters that Sir Douglas Haig's offensive this year were failures, in the sense that they did not break through the German lines.

HUNS SOUGHT TO BUY NEUTRALITY OF UNITED STATES

Amazing Disclosures by Washington of Teuton Intrigue.

By Courier Leased Wire
Washington, Sept. 21.—Secretary of State Lansing to-day disclosed in a series of disclosures covering German intrigue in America and elsewhere, a message sent by Count von Bernstorff in January of this year to the Berlin foreign office requesting authority to pay out $50,000 to influence Congress through an unnamed organization, apparently known to the Berlin authorities.

Count von Bernstorff indicated in his message that money had been paid this organization on former occasions to perform the same work.

Whether the State department is in possession of other evidence has not been revealed, but it is the fixed belief that additional chapters will be added.

The reference to avoiding war is taken as an indication that knowledge of his government's intention to proclaim a merciless widespread submarine warfare and that he was equally confident that the United States Government could not easily be placated by mere promises.

Fifty thousand dollars, it was pointed out, would go but a short way towards buying the influence of congressmen, judiciously expended, however, it might do much in compensating paid agents, such as are now known to have belonged to the elaborate machine Bernstorff had so carefully built up for the production of propaganda and for purposes of espionage.

By Courier Leased Wire
London, Sept. 21.—This morning's newspapers herald the new British offensive in Flanders as the Entente Allied answer to Germany's latest peace manoeuvres. The Chronicle declares that the Allies have nothing more to say and adds:

(From our own Correspondent) Simcoe, Sep. 21.—The event of yesterday was the address delivered in the parish hall by Miss Templeton-Armstrong, of Port Rowan, Norfolk's most gifted public speaker. The meeting was arranged by Mesdames Penlinson and Langford and Miss Hadwood, who attended the thrift convention in Toronto some time ago, and the object was to popularize the thrift card movement. About a dozen men and three or four score of women were present.

"I see the Conservation of Resources Committee are together at last," said Mayor Williamson, to Chairman H. H. Groff, as they with Frank Reid took seats at the rear of the auditorium. And before they got time to discuss plans for the future, all three were escorted to the platform. Mrs. L. Sharpe presided. Short addresses by His Worship and Mr. Groff were over at 8.40, and the speaker of the evening occupied less than three quarters of an hour in putting the matter squarely and forcibly before the meeting. It was decided to request Mr. Hanna to prohibit the waste of all cereals in the manufacture of beverages. The suggestion for an expression of opinion came from Mrs. Sanderson, of Delhi, H. F. Cook and J. B. Jackson, who fathered the motion, were with Frank Reid, appointed to draw up and forward the memorial.

Has No Appetite for Bacon
Mayor Williamson observed that his hearers should be thankful that the speaker is not food controller. He would prohibit bacon entirely, and beef too, except from men doing manual labor. "The rest of us," he remarked, "could get on all right with the lamb chops, fowl and the like." He thought Mr. Hanna a joke, or extremely modest. He knew there were more than a thousand ways to economize, but would transgress on the time of the speaker on the evening long enough to mention just one, and he proceeded in substance: "The waste of the last five years would purchase a good hospital site, and that of ten years more would put up a small hospital to start with. I have gone as far as I dared in warfare on the dogs, from sanitary and none-tary motives, and hope you are aware that many cities and towns no larger than ours, prohibit dogs running at large on the public streets.

Will Lead a Petition
I intend next year to raise a petition to have the curs and dogs banished from our streets as well. The time is ripe.

Mrs. Sharp observed that farm dogs earned their living and they followed a little clamour during which a score or more expressed their views re cats, and dogs and then

Mr. H. H. Groff Spoke Briefly.
He rejoiced that there was in Simcoe an urban hysteria regarding food shortage. We were, he thought, too close to the source of supply. He thought we might thank our lucky stars that the United States had taken a hand in the world war.

Lack of Interest and Perhaps of Knowledge
Miss Templeton-Armstrong, on rising thought such a meeting should be unnecessary; there is little to do but get together arrange about the work and circulate the cards. "But," said the speaker, "I learn that there is a lack of interest and perhaps a lack of knowledge of the situation. You are hardly prepared." And the speaker proceeded to do the preparing. In substance: "We have done the big thing—have sent the husbands and sons. Mr. Hanna, the modern Howard of prison reform, has asked us to do a little thing. Some of us are perhaps too proud, like the leper of old, to wash in that in the last twelve months the Britain has been put on rations, homes can be searched there for stored goods. That Germany says Britain must be starved, and that the sinking of food ships is most important. In peace Britain bought food in Europe and Australia. To-day she looks to Canada, and there are bottoms sufficient only for the least bulky forms of food. When on the temperance platform, I used to say that we imported food by the million in value, and spoiled millions at home in the brewery and malting tanks.

It is extraordinary that there should be trouble on the food question. We are not asked to starve, but to vary diet.
We must see that our men in Europe fare as well as we do at home, else how can we meet them when they come home. 1918 may yet stare us as a famine year. We must not waste, we are here to deary. There are few wanting to-day. It is adjusting ourselves to conditions. We must save for the men overseas what they need and what can be most easily delivered to them. We must conserve our energies, moral and spiritual. No one knows when this war will end. The thought of the purpose for which our dieting is regulated, ought to sweeten every morsel.
The work of the kitchen and household is in league with the work at the front trench. All interest, wisdom, courage and self-denial

Bread Down to Ten Cents
Simcoe bread went off at 10 cents yesterday. Shortly after yesterday's Courier reached town, Miss Thompson called up to refute our statement that she contemplated going out of business—of course we meant bread business—that the second birthday in business had been passed, and that our interviewer had nothing to complain of.
Mr. Britton refutes our estimates of 1000 loaves a day of imported bread. Another dealer says that during the summer months, the figures given would doubtless be low, but that farmers were buying less bread now than during the busy season.
The Reformer yesterday makes a sane appeal for patronage of the home ovens in lieu of paying bread money to the express companies. One of the local bakers claims that the home oven can bake sufficient for the local demand.

must merge to the ending of this war. You may not like the order but you have to like the object. In great historic times of stress as at the siege of Derry, men held on and fought through starving. Let us too, have nothing on our consciences when the war is over. "Not Enough to Go Round."
Mrs. Sharp thought it best to look upon the matter as a simple case of "not enough to go around," and that the men under arms should be first served, and expressed her unbounded confidence in the women of Norfolk, that they would carry on during their bit.

Wheat a Small Item
Frank Reid gave figures to show that the amount of wheat used to make spirits during the last fiscal year, was a mere nothing—about 4,000 bushels, but the figures for barley, rye, corn, sugar and black strap were astounding. He thought that all the food required, but there was a shortage of shipping, and as the meats took less space, they should be reserved for the men.
The committee named the following ward captains for the work of circulating the cards. Most of the ladies present signed their cards before leaving the hall. The matter proper developed into a discussion of ways and means of instructing those with limited knowledge of economic knacks of stretching out a larger and making the best of food stuffs.

THE REX
William S. Hart, idol of thousands of film fans, heads the program at the Rex for the first of the week in "The Patriot," a powerful story of the Mexican border and of a man who strives to still the love of country from his heart. The artistry of William S. Hart, natural and convincing always, has never been seen to better advantage than in this picture, and his portrayal of the embittered American who joins a band of Mexican guerrillas, only later to repent and to save his countrymen, is one of the most powerful delineations of character ever placed upon the screen.
The first episode of Vitagraph's stirring serial of the out-of-doors, "The

Duncan and Carroll Holloway, more than lives up to advance promises.
Jacques and Clark, in comedy singing and talking, have a line of patter that is snappy, entertaining and different, while Gordon and Jolliffe present a comedy skit out of the ordinary.

THE BRANT
An epic of the goldfields of Caliand such penetrating insight into human nature, that it might well have come from the pen of Bret Harte. Such is "A Romance of the Redwoods," Mary Pickford's latest Artcraft release, heading the weekend program at the Brant. Its success is threefold: the merits of a strong story of actual life, blend successfully with the artistic staging and production of Cecil de Mille, never better exemplified than in parts of this picture, while the characterizations throughout are beyond criticism. In the role of Jenny Lawrence, the New England maiden who goes to the goldfields in search of her uncle, Little Mary adds but one more to her seemingly never ending list of triumphs, and her well known comedy and dramatic abilities have never been seen to better advantage than in "A Romance of the Redwoods." Elliott Dexter essays the most powerful role of his career as "Black" Brown, the road agent led to better things through the influence of Jenny, and achieves a high degree of marked success in his characterization. Ruth Roland and other stars appear in the tenth chapter of the Paths serial "The Neglected Wife." The Edith Richardson trio, three dainty singing comedienne,

have a musical offering of unusual merit replete with pleasing features for all.

"FLORA BELLA"
"Flora Bella," queen of the season's musical offerings, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House
on Tuesday evening next, Sept. 25th, with a cast of 50 people. The producer sends the attraction here with a specially brilliant cast and a record of six months at the Casino Theatre,

New York, Charming music, bright lines, an original book and love that is aglow, clever principals, lively dancing and a subtly steady virtue that can't be asked for what more can one ask? The story of "Flora Bella" concerns the young Princess Manja Demidoff, who leads a Jaegerish existence in the country, cultivating the homespun virtues of the folkies of the her secret past as a famous cabaret artist of Petrograd.

Her red-blooded husband, Prince Nicholas, chafes under the monotony of a quiet life. Then comes his discovery of a photograph of the princess as a dancer, which leads to the declaration that it is Flora Bella, a twin sister. The Prince is fascinated by the picture and quietly steals away to meet his supposed sister-in-law at the Sign of the Golden Calf.

The Princess at the same time is induced to return to the home of her former triumphs. Just for one night, that she may be placed the one time manager in his position. Nicholas makes violent love to the dancer who continues the character of Flora Bella. Then in the end he learns that the fascinating Flora Bella and the demure Manja are just a dual personality and boredom is replaced by marital passion.

The music is by Charles Cuvillier and Milton Schwarwald rises to the heights of genuine musical comedy,
and includes a sensuous waltz duet that is tremendously popular. The book by Felix Doermann, revised and adapted by Gene and Hamilton and Dorothy Donnelly, is really witty,
as are the lyrics by Percy Waxman.
The ensemble comprises a score of girls that can surely sing.

New York, Sept. 21.—J. Franklin
Baker, leading batsman of the New York American League Club, for the last two years, announced today that he had retired from organized baseball. He reported at the Polo Grounds on Tuesday, prepared to play, but was told that his suspension will remain in effect until the end of the season. He has taken this and the club's final answer, and is preparing to leave for his home at Trappe, Md. Baker's contract, which called for close to $10,000, has another year to run.

OFFENSIVE
of the German positions, where tons of high explosive bombs were dropped. German machines were far less active. A large number of prisoners already have been brought in, but it is impossible to give an accurate estimate of the total.

Heavy fighting along this front is expected to follow to-day's attack
because it is certain that the Germans will not relinquish these positions without a bitter struggle. Air pilots report that the roads back of the German lines are filled with troops being rushed up for a counter-attack; but this is a pleasing feature to the British artillerymen, who express the desire for nothing better than to get as many Germans as possible out in the open, where their shells will reach them.

SWORN DAILY CIRCULATION 4892

Friday, September 21st, 1917.

THE SITUATION

Field Marshal Haig reports that the big drive of the British on the Ypres front was attended with "great success," and that all the objectives were attained. As the outcome, a gain of over half a mile was made on an eight mile front, and the achievement is regarded as one of the most important taking place for some months. There seemed to be some idea last evening that the operations had been completed, but to-day's despatches indicate that the movement is on a much wider scope.

Petrograd reports that Russian troops yesterday repulsed German attacks on the Riga front, and inflicted heavy losses on the foe. On the Caucasian front, the snow is now stated to be four feet deep in the mountain theatre.

Stewart Lyon reports that pressure on the defences of Lens is proceeding with unrelenting vigor, and that prisoners recently taken agree in saying that the garrison would welcome orders to evacuate.

The assertion is made that American troops now in France number far more than the general public imagine. Many of them will soon be gaining trench experience, but it is not believed that an American offensive, as such will be launched before next summer.

Baron Rhonda, British Food Controller, yesterday inaugurated a new food economy campaign. He said in this regard:—

"I am now able to limit the profits derived by those engaged in the food industries of the United Kingdom. We examine the books and apply a system of cost and expense. I expect to hear that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Hanna have taken similar steps, so that we will be able to assure the people that the existing high prices of imported food do not represent profiteering."

Baron Rhonda also announced, with regard to food restrictions, that if voluntary measures failed he would have no compunction about putting the nation on voluntary rations.

SPAIN READY TO SUPPORT POPE'S PEACE PROPOSAL

Government Indicates Willingness to Aid Pontiff in His Effort.

VATICAN DISPLEASED

Wilson Guilty of Breach of Etiquette in His Reply to Pope.

By Courier Leased Wire. Amsterdam, Sept. 21.—The Berlin Vossische Zeitung, a copy of which has been received here, says concerning the Pope's peace note: "We are informed that the Spanish government has indicated a willingness formally to support the Pope's efforts to bring on a world peace."

The paper adds: "We learn from a reliable source that the Vatican is painfully embarrassed by the irregular procedure of President Wilson's politics. The Pope's note to Mr. Wilson like that to each of the other sovereigns, was personally signed by the Pope. It was therefore the communication of one sovereign to another. Elementary rules of diplomatic etiquette demanded a corresponding counter-communication. Aside from the essential contents of the note, the Vatican is offended at the inadmissible procedure whereby Lansing (the American Secretary of State) and not the President, appears as the signatory. Unintentional disparagement of the Pope's sovereignty, to say the least, is construed as a breach of diplomatic usage."

THE ITALIAN CAMPAIGN.

Italy was exceedingly slow to strike her war stride, no doubt for excellent reasons, but the splendid and successful offensive which she is now conducting leads a correspondent of the New York Times, writing from Italian headquarters, to voice the opinion that it is quite possible for the struggle to be ended on this front. He quotes the saying of Napoleon, over a hundred years ago, that Germany can be reached only through Austria from Italy, and goes on to explain:—

"And in this, the fourth year of this war, I recalled poignantly that Napoleon followed up his assertion by the deed. For Napoleon went to Laibach. When he arrived there the Austrian army was in such full flight that only Austerlitz remained between Napoleon and his dream. To-day from the outposts of the Italian lines in Austria the town of Laibach is only forty miles away. If the Italian armies get to Laibach it is a safe prophecy that the war is finished. Why? Because if the Italian armies get to Laibach the Austrian army is beaten. A beaten Austria is a beaten Germany if the Allies will that it shall be so, and a beaten Germany naturally ends the war."

"At Laibach the mountains end, and the plains, practically unfortified, stretch away across Hungary. But more important is the fact that the fall of Laibach means the finish of Austrian railway communications to the Dalmatian coast. Fiume and Pola will be cut off. Austria's navy would soon be out of action and there would be an abrupt termination to submarine activity in the Adriatic and Mediterranean. These indications may show in some degree the plight of Austria if the Italians get to Laibach."

Without any doubt a decision on the Western front is a very remote proposition indeed. That must needs be the case in view of the vast network of entrenchments constructed by the foe and against which three years of fighting has demonstrated that progress can only be painfully and laboriously made. On the Eastern front a demoralized Russia does not hold out any hope. Under the circumstances the Italian possibility certainly presents a pleasing aspect.

NEW USE FOR PARLIAMENT

When the closure rule is applied in the Dominion House, the speeches of members are restricted to twenty minutes. The "Journal-Press" of that city, in referring to the undoubted advantage of this curtailment, made the suggestion:—"Why not a half hour rule, except perhaps for the budget speech."

"Is there one single member of Parliament, not to say one single human being in all Canada, who will say that such a rule would not be an improvement in our public business?"

In response to this proposal, the paper in question received an anonymous letter signed "Advertiser," as follows:—

"If the Journal-Press was not such a proper fool it would realize that Parliament is our very best industry, and that the longer it remains in session the better for every line of business in Ottawa. The Journal-Press is maintained by advertisers, Ottawa merchants get the great bulk of their business during session time, and when Parliament is spending money and attracting thousands of people here for social and legislative business. Are you willing to advocate a short session with its consequent loss of thousands of dollars to your advertisers? If you are, please continue your present line of argument regarding a short form of speech, and I promise to bowl you out to your advertisers in one of the other newspapers which has sense enough to keep its mouth shut on this subject."

To keep Parliament going just for the sake of the pockets of the Ottawa people, certainly reads almost like Toronto.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

SCHOOL FAIR. Physical Instructor George Moseley of the local Y.M.C.A. is in Paris to-day conducting a school fair.

CONFERRED DEGREES. Mohawk Lodge, I. O. O. F., met last night and conferred the second degree on several candidates, a large attendance being present. The lodge is to be congratulated by having Bro. Robt. Jones, P.G. of Mohawk, elected as D.D.G.M. for District No. 10 for the year 1917-18.

DECLINES. Fort William is arranging for a week's campaign for the Y.M.C.A. and the board of directors of the Y. there have telegraphed to G. H. Williamson, general secretary of the local institution, who formerly held that position in Fort William, asking him to take charge of the canvass for funds. Although he is gratified at having received such a request, Mr. Williamson has replied that it will be impossible for him to leave his duties in this city.

REMOVING TREES. A number of trees on the square surrounding the Court House are being removed by Gaoler Cook, with the assistance of some of the guests now in residence in the cells. At the last meeting of the county council, the buildings and grounds committee recommended that certain trees be removed, because they obscured the view of the buildings and made them damp, keeping out the sunshine. It is in accordance with these instructions that the trees are being taken from the ground.

GARDEN TEA. A garden tea under the auspices of the Wesley ladies aid, held Thursday afternoon on Mrs. (Capt.) Ward's lawn, was a very successful affair. There was a large attendance, and a very enjoyable time was spent by all present.

FISH SOLD. Some ten thousand pounds of fresh fish were placed on sale yesterday by the City of St. Catharines and disposed of at ten cents per pound in a few hours. A recommendation from the local high cost of living committee that the Brantford city council take steps to secure for this city an adequate supply of fish, made some weeks ago, has not as yet been acted upon.

TOWNSHIP COUNCIL. The work on the Parkdale drain will be proceeded with immediately in accordance with the recommendations of the Township engineer, in a report submitted by him to the township council last night. The clerk was instructed to take procedure as required by the Municipal Drainage Act. Engineer Jeffries of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, was in attendance at the meeting, and arranged for a meeting to be held with the officials of the Brantford City Hydro Electric System, when arrangements can be made for the sale of power to the township. The first car load of poles for wiring have arrived and the work of installation will be proceeded with without further delay.

MEDICAL BOARD. A medical board will meet at the Armoury at 7.30 on Monday evening, Sept. 24th, and each night thereafter except Sundays, for the purpose of examining all men for draft under the Military Service Act. All unmarried men and widowers between the ages of 20 and 34 inclusive of Brantford and outlying districts, should avail themselves at once of this opportunity to ascertain their physical fitness. The first board will likely be composed of three officers. The names of Lieut.-Col. Palmer, Captains Chaplin and Fissette are mentioned. Major Ashton has been appointed in charge of the local medical depot.

TO BUY SQUIRRELS. W. Glover, secretary of the Parks board, this morning received a letter from Wm. Thompson, of Orillia, inquiring as to the possibility of purchasing a few squirrels from this city. At the last meeting of the local Parks Board, complaint was made that the animals were becoming too numerous in the city, and Mr. Thompson is desirous of supplying a few for the parks of Orillia.

LAST GAME. The last game of the local season will be played on Saturday afternoon between the 20th Century Club of Hamilton and the D.S.P. team, champions of the City League.

AUTO OVERTURNED. When the automobile in which he and four companions were going on a fishing trip, turned turtle on the Cocksbutt road yesterday, C. H. Williams of Detroit, who is visiting in the city, suffered serious internal injuries. He was taken immediately to the Brantford General Hospital where he is reported to-day as resting easily.

CITY FOREMAN IS FULLY CONVINCED

Suffered Twenty-five Years and Spent Hundreds Without Relief.

"My first bottle of Tanlac convinced me that I had found the right medicine at last, for although I had suffered for twenty-five years, and had spent hundreds of dollars in a vain search for health, a few bottles of this wonderful preparation have entirely relieved me of all my troubles."
"Ever since my stomach got in such a terrible condition through Mr. Simms, I have been spending money and trying everything I could hear of to get my health back. I even tried special diets abroad without getting any benefit and I had almost given up hope of ever getting well. My appetite failed entirely and I just had to force down everything I ate. My wife had a hard time trying to fix up something that I could eat with safety, for strong foods, such as meats, potatoes would make me miserable for hours. After eating anything I would swell up so with gas that I would almost choke. My heart would flutter and act so strangely that I was greatly alarmed. I was constantly belching up sour, undigested food and many a time cramps in my stomach would almost draw me double. I actually had to give up two different jobs on account of my shape."
"When I read in the papers where Tanlac relieved Mr. McKeenan after he had suffered for twenty years, I felt encouraged to get me a bottle. It wasn't long before I felt my appetite returning and I was enjoying my meals for the first time in many years. I have taken four bottles in all and I can now eat anything I want, meats, potatoes and other things I wouldn't have dared to touch a few weeks ago and I never have any trouble with gas or anything else. Those swellings never bother me, my heart is acting all right, my indigestion seems to be entirely gone and I am feeling better in every way than I have in many a year. I have taken Tanlac laxative tablets too, and they act more like nature than anything else I have ever tried."

Edmonson-Thomson. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thomson, of Cainsville, was the scene of a very charming wedding on Wednesday, when their second daughter, Louisa Belle, became the bride of Wilfrid A. Edmonson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Edmonson, of Brantford.

The ceremony took place on the lawn, under a floral arch of asters and ferns. Lohengrin's Wedding March was played by Miss Alice Edmonson, sister of the groom. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. L. Campbell, of Brantford. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a very becoming gown of champagne duchess satin with pearl and georgette crepe trimming, with tulle veil and orange blossoms, carrying a shower bouquet of white Ophelia roses. Her attendants were Miss Annie Thomson, sister of the bride, who wore rose crepe de chene and carried sunset roses, and little Miss Muriel Thomson, niece of the bride, prettily attired in pale green crepe de chene. Mr. Edmonson-Thomson, Brantford, cousin of the groom, acted as groomsman. The groom's present to the bride was a five pearl ring; to the bride's-

PARIS RED CROSS AND W.P.L. MET

(From our own correspondent)

Paris, Sept. 21.—Yesterday afternoon the third annual meeting of the Paris Red Cross and Woman's Patriotic League was held with the president, Mrs. John Harold, in the chair. Rev. Mr. Nicholson opened the meeting with prayer, after which reports were read, which were most gratifying, and showed the societies to be in a flourishing condition. Short addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Armstrong, Father Cassidy, Rev. Mr. Nicholson and T. Scott Davidson, M. P., all speaking of the good work being done by the societies. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Davidson and Mr. John Harold for their kindness in paying for the rooms for the past three years. After the reports had been read the following resolution was passed by Rev. Mr. Nicholson: "That the citizens of Paris do express their appreciation of the work done by the Patriotic and Red Cross societies, and especially their able and energetic president, for the excellent work done, the splendid self-sacrifice made and assures them of our continued support."

This was seconded by Rev. Father Cassidy. A vote of thanks was also extended to the retiring officers and also to Mr. O. R. Whitby, the auditor, and to the Penman Co., Limited, for supplying the societies with packing cases.

Mrs. Harold, in her annual report recorded with gratification that during the third year of the great war the society had increased in every branch and cash received more than for the two former years combined, as follows: Total cash received $5,358.79 Two former years 4,469.96 Total since organization $9,828.75

LEARNING TO FLY

An Aviator's Breaking In, Told By One Who Knows; Perils and Vagaries of a Novice in the Air.

(By R. Johnson) Learning to fly is a ticklish business. Even to-day, when so much improvement has been made in every department of the craft. You must keep your wits about you; for no matter how much you take to heart the advice that "when in difficulty, leave go of the controls, and the machine will recover itself," it is not nearly so easy as it sounds.

Two years ago, however, the beginner had considerable reasons for diffidence, and it was, I must confess with a certain amount of fear that I undertook my first "solo" flight. It was a beautifully calm evening, however, and all went well. Needless to say, I was on excellent terms with myself when I taxied gently up to the hangers, and stepped out of my machine amidst the cheers of the mechanics and pupils. A proud moment was that, and more than worth the initial risks to enjoy.

I already considered myself a pilot—and began to foresee days in the very near future when I would be up in the clouds, blue searching for Huns. But this was a far flight into the clouds of fancy for I was, as yet, uninitiated into the hardships and difficulties of pilots in the R. F. C.

Early next morning—so early indeed, that it was yet dark—after a cup of hot tea, I made my way to the aerodrome—where the mechanics (wonderful fellows) were feverishly repairing machines for the day's flying.

Machines want a good deal of keeping up at schools of instruction. Even the best of pilots make bad landings, and when one is a beginner you are a babe among sceptics, who are prone to grudge that "Even beginners occasionally make good landings." I chose my pet machine, and with my instructor's consent, it was wheeled out into the aerodrome—and rested on the damp, dewy grass, a gaunt spectre silhouetted against the sun which was rising in a few minutes I was in the air.

After practising a few "turns," I was seized with a sudden desire for exploration, much as a child sets out confidentially in search of adventure. Adventure, with an aviator is never far absent, but no thrill is quite equal to those experienced by a novice upon his first flight alone. My ecstasy prompted me to show myself off at neighboring towns, over which I gave of my very best displays, and then bethinking me of the punishment which awaits truant

SHOP-LIFTING CASES AIRED

Thos. Aird, Acquitted on Charge of Receiving Stolen Goods.

Although there were seven cases on the police court list this morning in connection with the alleged thefts from the Crompton, Levy and Coalbeck stores of this city, and throughout the entire morning was given to the hearing of evidence, all the cases hinged on the decision given by Magistrate Livingston in the case in which Thomas Aird, a carter residing on Wellington St. was dismissed on a charge of receiving stolen goods. The testimony that was given by the witnesses in this case, the first on the list, covered the whole story in so far as the Crompton store was concerned.

Aird pleaded not guilty, and was defended by M. W. Meehan. Detective Mitchell, of the Toronto detective force, testified how he and three other members of the department had visited a house occupied by Miss Johnson, a friend of Aird's, and her sister. There a quantity of goods identified by representatives of the Crompton store, was found. It had been produced by Miss Johnson without demur immediately a demand had been made for it by the detectives. A search of the house was made, but nothing more discovered.

Miss Johnson, a friend of the defendants for the past three years, on returning to her home in Toronto on the night of the 11th, had found a trunk in the hall-way. Aird had given her the trunk and told her not to ask any questions. He had returned later and taken the trunk away, explaining that there was some trouble in Brantford, and he did not wish to become involved.

Mrs. Stewart, one of the most important witnesses told the court that she had been a friend of Miss Milne, who is charged with the theft of the goods, for about three years. During that time they had been intimate and had done favors for each other. Miss Milne had given her many things that were sold at the store, including two pairs of linen sheets, two small tray cloths, valued at approximately twenty dollars. Considerable other goods had been purchased by Mrs. Stewart from Miss Milne at less than the usual selling price. The discount would be even greater than the 12 1/2 per cent allowed the employees by the firm. One instance of this economical purchasing was a table cloth valued at $4.00 which Mrs. Stewart secured for $3.00.

Rippling Rhymes

In olden times the hardy knight went forth with lance and mace to fight. He rode upon his foaming steed, and hoped to do some goodly deed. And in the fray it often chanced that he was shot or slugged or lanced, and he would lie upon the field, encumbered by his arms and shield, and lie for weary days on end, without a surgeon or a friend. Oh, dying was a painful stunt for old time soldiers at the front. But when the modern soldier falls, struck down by shrapnel, shells or

WE'RE THE NEXT
The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and players of the Hamilton City League are staging a lively battle, and a number of the players have been disgraced for their actions in playing the D. S. P. here last Saturday and for playing against the champion Toronto in their barnstorming trip. Brantford is the next place to be cleaned up, judging from the words of W. J. Smith, secretary of the Ontario Amateur Baseball Commission, who says:
"I was sorry to read of the game in Kitchener which shows six Hamilton men in the line-up. They have no come-back now. I cannot see what object they hoped to achieve, and the onus of their actions rests entirely on themselves. The fact of throwing their league open next year might work out best in the end, as then you would have all those suspicious characters in one place, where they belong. These fellows are done as ball players, and the young fellows coming up is what we want. We are going to start to work on Brantford now, and hope to have them lined up for next year."
The Hamilton Herald has the following to say in regard to the tangle: Hamilton's amateur baseball association is in for a busy session at its next meeting. All of the local players who accompanied the Park Nine to Brantford last Saturday, as well as those who have played against LaJolie and Co., this week will draw down suspensions, and it looks as if there will be more local ball-players under the ban when the H. A. B. A. completes its task than there are in good standing. The ball-players don't seem to care one bit what action the amateur authorities take. Yesterday Lamond, Gordon, Shaw, Wally Carter and Finlayson played for the Kitchener club. Jack McKelvey, former Hamiltonian and a suspended athlete, was also on the Kitchener team, and the Smith mentioned is said to be our own "Kid" Smith, who only recently was reinstated. To-day the same crew will play for Tom Nelson's brigade in

(By Patrick MacGill, author of "The Great Push," etc.)
The billeting sergeant, accompanied by a corporal, walked down the street of the village of L—. He was on the look-out for billets for the battalion which was to come in that night.
"It's a good while since we've been here," said the corporal. "Ten months ago or more, isn't it?"
"I think it's all that," said the sergeant.
"Before we went up to the Somme—a good village too. I had a splendid billet then. One of the best. I'll try and get it this time again."
"Shall we begin here?" asked the corporal, pointing at a door on which was chalked in big ungainly letters "Seven men." "I think that the last regiment billeted here has gone away."
The sergeant went to the door and knocked. A middle-aged woman looked out.
"We want to billet some men here," said the sergeant, speaking in French—an accomplishment attained by him in spare moments snatched from the prosecution of war.
"How many can you keep here, Madame?"
The woman stared at the sergeant's hat badge.
"The London Regiment!" she exclaimed. "Coming here again? Ah! the good boys. They went away from here to the Somme. I am glad that they are coming back again."
She held out her hand to the sergeant, then to the corporal.
"Come in," she said. "I'll get you something to eat."
The two men went in. They were very hungry for their last meal had been taken in the trenches and since then they had walked many long miles on the hot and dusty French roads. The sergeant, a bit of an epicure, pronounced the wine which the woman supplied to be the best which he had ever drunk. No doubt round his legs. On his head he wore a Glengarry bonnet, decorated with many badges not belonging to Scottish regiments, and round his waist was tied an army belt from which hung two murderous clasp knives. He came up to the two men at the table and looked at their hat badges.

"Where's Pudhoe?" he asked.
"Pudhoe will be here to-night," said the woman, catching the young brave in her arms, and kissing him. But now that Spudhoe was coming the youngster could not descend to such a trivial thing as a motherly embrace. The present was a moment when he could take a hand in household administration. Breaking away from his mother, he rushed over to the table and gazed at the sergeant.
"Don't drink all the wine, soldier," he said. "Pudhoe likes wine."
That night near 12 o'clock a battalion entered the village of L—. The villagers were up and waiting for friends who they knew and loved were returning. At one door a woman and child stood, listening to the crunching ammunition boxes coming nearer and nearer. By looking in through the door a table could be seen piled with eatables, and a large coffee-pot was steaming on the stove. A platoon halted opposite. A ser-jeant spoke.

"Two men fall out here," he said. The remainder—"Quick march!"
Two men fell out and came to the door of the house. The woman and boy rushed to meet them.
"Spudhole!" the woman exclaimed. "Cheerio," said the man, who was indeed the worthy Spudhoe.
"Pudhoe!" said the little boy, clinging on the soldier's tunic. Then in almost the same breath he asked: "Souvenir pour moi, Pudhoe?"
"Plenty of souvenirs for you," Pierre," said Spudhoe. Haven't we Bow-dy?"
"Hundreds of souvenirs," said the other man.
"I have the two knives still, the two you gave me Pudhoe," said Pierre. "And I've a bottle of wine, vin rouge, and you must drink it all to-night," concluded the youngster.
"Fumba up," said Spudhoe, as he entered the house.
And what a night! How many tales were told. What souvenirs little Pierre obtained! At four o'clock in the morning the little party was still out of bed, though Pierre, with his Glengarry still on and his two-clasp-knives still hanging from his belt, was asleep on the floor. And even at that hour further stories of the soldiers' previous visit were recalled and commented upon.

"When the war's over I'll come back again and see them all here," said Spudhoe, as he went upstairs to bed an hour later. "There are no people like the French."

New Gauge Tells Distance Travelled Under as by Submarines.

"When passing through the North sea we ran submerged for six hours," read the Deutschland's log. But how her captain knew how far he had gone under the surface and when it was safe to come up has always been a puzzle to the lay mind. If the Deutschland is equipped with one of the automatic dead reckoning devices
 now being fitted on American sub-mersibles, her captain simply read a gauge which told him how many miles he had gone on that particular course without any computations on his part whatever, says the Scientific American.

Use Propellers
 The device makes use of the revolutions of the propellers to produce an automatic dead reckoning means which are as simple as reading time on a watch. It consists of two small rotary air pumps driven off the propeller shafts. These produce vacuum or pressure in pipe lines leading to gauges equipped with bellows which contract or expand to move the reading hands.

The gauges are placed on two panels, one in the engine room and one in the navigating station in the submarine's conning tower. These gauges are so adjusted that a certain number of revolutions of the propellers, sufficient to move the vessel a head a certain distance will show that distance direct on the dial gauge by the movement of its hands. The device does this automatically and eliminates the necessity of the engineer reading the revolution counters, watching the clock and then calculating with pencil and paper the number of miles that the vessel should cover with the engine running at that speed.

Inform Directly
 The device has the added advantage that it gives this information directly to the navigation officer, by simply reading the gauges in front of him, thereby doing away with the necessity of calling down a speaking tube to the engine room to get the information.

The engine room panel carries one revolution counter for each propeller shaft, and one for the average of the two shafts, the former operated through one-way gears. The panel also contains a one-hand tell-tail and an automatic stop clock. The counters and stop clock are operated by means of bevel gears and shafting driven from the propeller shafts. The counter for each shaft shows the revolutions of that shaft while the average counter gives the algebraic average of the two. The stop clock indicates the average revolutions a minute for both engines.
 This information is used to indicate the speed of the vessel in knots by means of a small hand which points to a series of figures on the extreme outer edge of the dial.

Carries Indicator
 The instrument in the navigating station consists of a small portable panel which may be taken to the bridge when the vessel is awash. It carries above a revolution indicator for each engine in the centre, a log dial to give the total distance traveled, the distance traveled since last setting and the average revolutions
 of both engines, and, at the bottom,
 a stop clock similar to that in the engine room.

All three of these dials are operated by the vacuum or suction in the connecting pipe lines between the pumps. While the hands of the bellows which contract under vacuum and expand under pressure from the two pumps, are made to move to right or left to show in what direction the shaft is turning, the piping of the stop clock and log is so arranged that these are operated from one pump. This is because one engine may be running astern and the other ahead, or one may be at rest, thus mutually tending to release the pressure of vacuum.

The log dial has two hands, one of which indicates the total distance traveled since the last setting. The other used in determining the distance made on any course may be set to zero just before submerging and will then show the distance covered while proceeding beneath the surface. As the bottom becomes fended, this hand
 may be adjusted to indicate the speed of the vessel.

Practical Housekeeping Hints

How to Care for Food

Food may contain sufficient nourishment to give it high value as a food and yet if proper care is not taken of it the food may become unfit for consumption.

Foods may be divided into three classes: Those that spoil easily; those that do not spoil so easily; those that may be kept a long time with proper care.

The foods that spoil easily are milk, cream, uncooked
 meat, uncooked fish, certain fruits, such as peaches and plums, and vegetables that wilt easily, such as lettuce and spinach.

Milk and Cream—Milk and cream bottles are usually dirty on the outside when delivered to you.
 Wash them carefully, particularly the top of the bottle, before opening, so that no dirt can possibly get into the milk or cream.

Uncooked Meat—Do not keep your meat in the paper in which it is wrapped when bought.

Unwrap it as soon as you get it home and wipe off with a clean cloth that has been wrung out in cold water. The meat will keep better and the juices will remain in it longer, if you will wrap it in wax paper
 until you are ready to use it.

Uncooked Fish—Never put uncooked fish into the ice-box unless the fish is closely covered. You will find a tin lard pail useful for this purpose.
 If the fish is not covered other food in the ice-box will absorb the strong odor from it and be made unfit for use.

Fruits—All fruits should be kept in a cool, dry place, and spread out, if possible.

Vegetables—Vegetables that are to be eaten
 in a raw state should be washed well in clean, cold water, placed directly on the ice, or in a very cold place, to preserve their crispness. Lettuce should be carefully picked over and washed at once.

The foods that do not spoil so easily are eggs, butter,
 fruit such as apples, oranges and lemons, cooked
 meat, and cooked, salted and smoked fish.

Eggs—Care is necessary in the handling of eggs,
 as the spoiling is partly due to unclean handling, the shells being more or less porous. It is best to wash them as soon as you get them home. When only the yolk of an egg is used, the white may be kept in a cup or glass, covered with a damp cloth fastened with an elastic band; or, if only the white is used,
 the yolk can be kept in the same way.

Butter—Butter should be kept well covered and in a cool place.

Cooked Meat and Fish will keep much better if they are well covered before placed in the ice-box.

The foods that can be kept a long time with proper care are flour, salt, coffee, tea, all dried groceries, spices and chocolate. All these should be kept closely covered to keep out dust and dirt. Coffee, tea and spices will lose their flavor if left uncovered.

Cheese should be kept in a cool dry place. It should be wrapped in a clean cloth moistened with vinegar. This will prevent the formation of mould.

WOMEN'S STOMACH TROUBLES

The Great Woman's Medicine Often Just What Is Needed.

We are so used to thinking of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy exclusively for female ailments that we are apt to overlook the fact that it is one of the best remedies for disorders of the stomach.

For stomach trouble of women it is especially adapted, as it works in complete harmony with the female organism, since it contains the extracts of the best tonic roots and herbs. It tones up the digestive system, and increases the appetite and strength. Here is what one woman writes showing what this medicine does:

Newfield, N. Y.—"I am so pleased to say I can recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as an economical and beneficial remedy in most ailments pertaining to women. At least I found it so by only taking two bottles. I had indigestion in a bad form and I am now feeling in the best of health and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. BURR WILLIAMS, R. D. No. 29, Newfield, N. Y.

Many women suffer from that "all gone feeling," and "feel so faint," while doing their work. Ten chances to one their digestive system is all out of order. A tablespoonful of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after each meal should completely remedy this condition in a few days.

MILITARY ROAD-MAKING

British Labor and Pioneer Units Work in the Fire Zone, Exposed to Frequent Danger and Considerable Hardships.

(By H. B. C. Pallard)

There is a suggestion of easy open-air conditions when the term road-making is used. It conveys a mental picture of leisurely laborers stolidly tending a road surface, and calls to mind visions of steam rollers, piles of road metal, and a slow, heavy and uninteresting avocation. This may be true of roadwork in the happy days of peace, but the task of the road maker during war is by no means leisurely, nor peaceful, and is absorbingly interesting.

From the earliest days of warfare road roads and communications have been absolutely essential to the successful prosecution of military aims. In these days when war is a colossal struggle of millions and the operations are largely stationary in character, roads become of the utmost importance, and the business of keeping them in repair becomes one of the abiding pre-occupations of the engineering staff of the army.

The Road Staff has a separate existence of its own, for it is one of those bodies of specialized engineers that have been created to cope with a situation unforeseen before the revelations of modern European warfare. Their duties embrace not only the subject of road maintenance and the creation of new roads for military purposes but, in addition to this, they have to prepare in advance for the repair of the roads in occupied territory, roads which are always damaged as much as possible by the enemy before a retreat, and have to consider the whole problem of getting supplies of material for road maintenance to the places where they are needed.

This last named task is one of the least obvious, but in point of fact one of the most serious problems that has to be faced. In a country such as Belgium, whole districts, like the young Ypres, are simply clay and gravel sand, and natural stones suitable for road repair must in the ordinary way be brought from far away. To-day, in many cases, these natural sources of supply lie behind the enemy lines, and, in addition, the existing road and rail service upon the Allied side is already taxed to its utmost to bring up supplies of food and war material.

The securing of adequate supplies of suitable road metal therefore presents grave problems, particularly when it is borne in mind that a cubic yard of macadam weighs a ton, a ten ton truck will only hold enough road material to repair thirty yards of six foot road, and the army averages served by one railroad may contain a hundred miles or more of road. Under such conditions it is obvious that anything like a high standard of road surface is out of the question. All that can be done is to strive incessantly with the problem and keep the roads in as good repair as is humanly possible.

To begin with, most of the Belgian roads were made of prismoidal blocks of granite called pave. These were set together with their wedge-shaped points inlaid upon a bed of clean sand overlying the surface of the natural soil. Along the edges of the two metre track of pave are set a series of big slabs one foot long, six inches wide and two feet deep. The purpose of these is to maintain the pave blocks within limits and prevent lateral spread. Beyond these "longins" runs a two metre wide strip of clay, then comes a shallow ditch. The camber of the pave is set high, almost hog backed in its curve, in order to shed rain water, and no system of sub-soil drains are provided because in this part of Flanders there is little or no drainage fall, and in the wet season mud ditches are full and have no apparent flow of water in either direction. The absence of sub-soil drains serves the purpose of keeping the road bed of clay free from permeating water and though contrary to established practice, was yet the custom of the country and based upon experience.

These pave roads were called upon to withstand stupendous wear and tear, for it has been calculated that three days' army traffic, was more than the annual traffic of normal times. As a result, in the winter of 1914, the clay boundary banks were soon churned into mud, the longins displaced and the pave loosened and overturned, till it sank into deep potholes.

In order to cope with this clay sides were also rendered negotiable by wheeled traffic and were corduroyed with alternate faggots of brush wood and billets of green wood, the whole held, rope ladder fashion, by single strand 9 millimetre galvanized iron wire which was used locally for the staving of hop poles. Lateral support was provided by staking the longins with horizontal poles staked in place, and bordering the corduroy upon the ditch side with a similar system of longitudinal poles and stakes so arranged as to prevent the outside ends of the faggots lifting. In setting the narrow corduroy for road borders care must be taken to reverse the camber when laying the new track. After a certain amount of traffic has gone over it, it will be sufficiently depressed to come into correct line and should then be given a top dressing of fine macadam which holds well upon the shilling provided by the corduroy and is extremely wear resisting. When pave has gone too far, and cannot be reset or patched up, it should be set upside down and used as soiling. With a six inch layer of macadam and broken house Military Take Two pluce wears well and is water resistant to a surprising degree.

Another difficulty which needed special measures was the extreme narrowness of the turning angles in secondary and by roads. These routes had in the past been arbitrarily determined by local land interests, and in many cases were unsuitable and dangerous to motor traffic. In these cases the whole curve had to be reset, and a new road made across the corner of the old agricultural land. As the mud is peculiarly slippery and dangerous to motor traffic in it with weather, the camber of the curve has been met in some cases by high banking, almost resembling a cyclone track. This has been found to minimize accidents and prevent congestion.

The actual repair of roads damaged by artillery fire is best carried out by pioneer troops, equipped with light motor transport in the shape of motorized road rollers. The special need has created a special vehicle, so sprung and reinforced that it can carry a five ton load of road material over bad roads without being knocked to pieces. At the beginning it was found that the ordinary transport lorry could not cope with the dead weight of metal, but the problem is now satisfactorily solved. Shell craters involve a considerable amount of work, and the repair of a big crater can easily absorb some forty tons of metal. In practice repairs are made with a filling of earth or soil, then macadam and only in the cases of extreme urgency is the hole-filled with road metal in its entirety.

For the road repairs during an advance, strips of wired corduroy can be lifted from old roads, rolled into drums and carried up on lorries to be re-laid in recaptured territory. Speed is the essential factor, and roads so laid over ordinary agricultural land are easily negotiable by transport pending repairs to the existing routes which have been damaged by artillery fire or enemy mines.

The British labor and pioneer units work in the fire zone exposed to frequent danger and considerable hardships. The personnel usually consists of old and slightly invalid soldiers, but the work is all important and is carried out with wonderful disregard of danger and with genuine soldierly spirit. Their efforts have been the subject of a commendatory order by the Field Marshal, and they have proved their vital importance as a modern military unit.

THE AERODROME AT NIGHT

British Birdmen, Ever on the Alert, Keep Watch Through Long Hours of Darkness—An Epic From the Battle Front.

(By Lieut. R. Johnson)

The afternoon had passed in peace. Giant fleecy clouds had moved across the sky and vanished beneath the horizon. Up from the west rolled darker clouds, grey and black, and they too passed leaving only a few drops of rain. Then the pale sky had changed to a deeper hue. The rustling breeze of the summer's day died down under the influence of night. In the aerodrome the busy daytime hummers had ceased their tinkle, the khaki workmen had gone home and only four men were left on duty. All was in darkness—except for a single light burning in each of the two huge canvas hangars. But though they were lighted they were empty. Outside on the smooth, dark and silent—waiting for the time when they would be called to work—the work that puts such a strain as has never before been endured by man or wood or iron.

Both machines, for there were but two in this quiet country place, were fully equipped with machine guns, already loaded, aerial torpedoes and flares for landing purposes. Each wire was shining flat and thin—ready to bear its strain in the event of any difference. The aeroplanes are in their hangars. They have done their nights' work, and the people of England sleep on undisturbed.

The officer below watches. He sees the stars blotted from sight, first one, then another, as the aeroplane circle around gaining their height. They turn eastward and soar far away the sea becomes visible, a ragged white line of phosphorescent foam marks the coast. In the distance they can see the twinkling lights of a town which never sleeps, and far down below passes a stream of red. It is the midnight London mail train. Still higher they climb, until the cold becomes intense, and they smuggle in the warmth of their heavy leather coats and fleeces lined thick boots. Forced landings in the dark are dangerous. It does not do to lose one's way. They make direct for the coast, then turn southwards. No sign of the raiders is to be seen. The sky is empty except for themselves and the twinkling stars above. Petrol and oil becoming scarce, they head for home, and glide quietly to earth. It is just two hours since they went up.

Another contemplative pause. But this time Sally did not dream. She sat quite still in speculative wonder, troubled with a vague alarm as disturbing as the sound of distant thunder in the evening, of an August day. "Cue, please!"

The girl replied in a low tone: "Evening a happy one!"

"Yes, Add. Affectionately yours—Or wait! Have you written?"

"Affectionately yours—yes."

"No matter; leave a space for my signature, and add this: P. S. You will be glad to see, no doubt, that your letter to Adele has been returned (fruit period). Miss Manwaring does splendidly as an amanuensis (period). Your judgment was always trustworthy (period). And address the envelope, of course to Mrs. Cornwalls English. She is stopping I hear, with the Lorimers, at Bleak House—the gray stone house on the hill at the end of West Harbor Drive."

After a time Mrs. Gosnold said almost sharply: "Well, Miss Manwaring! You have little time to waste. Bring me the note, please, and a pen."

With a gesture of despair the girl twisted in her chair and showed the woman a stricken face.

"Are you sure?" she stammered.

"Yes?" Mrs. Gosnold prompted with an accent of surprise. "What is it, Sally?"

The girl gulped hard, and mechanically put a hand to her throat, rising as she spoke.

"Are you sure Mrs. English is on the island?"

"What of it? Why, I presumed you would be glad of the opportunity to thank her for that letter of—"

"There was no letter!"

"I beg pardon?" Mrs. Gosnold opened wide her eyes.

"I say," Sally faltered, yet with determination, "there was no letter. Mrs. Standish—that is—we both lied to you. I don't know Mrs. English; I never spoke a word to her in all my life. I didn't take any letter to her. Standish. That was a story manufactured out of whole cloth to account for me—get me this position here."

"Oh, yes?" Mrs. Gosnold assented coolly. "I felt quite sure of that in the beginning. You never could believe a word Adele said from the time she was able to talk. Even if the truth would have served as well and with less trouble, she was sure to disguise it beyond identification. And Walter's just as bad. But you, my dear, will never make a good liar; the first words we spoke together I saw your eyes wince, and knew you were tormented by something on your conscience. Moreover, the last person Edna English would send any one with a letter of recommendation to is my niece, who has not yet been proved guilty of one unselfish act. So I thought I'd test you. Mrs. English is in Italy this very day, to the best of my belief—and tell me what it's all about."

CHAPTER XI

Within the span of an exceedingly bad quarter of an hour for Sally the cat was completely out of the bag, the fat as irrevocably in the fire, and Sally was out of breath and in tears of penitence and despair; and Mrs. Gosnold—

—was out of her chair, thoughtfully pacing to and fro, and in full possession of all the facts materially bearing upon the transition of S. Mainwaring of the hardware-notions to S. Manwaring of the Golden Destiny.

No vital detail had escaped her penetrating probe; she proved herself past mistress in the art of cross-examination and found in Sally a willing witness.

For the latter, however, it had seemed less giving of testimony than a hysterical confession. She had wrung her conscience dry, deriving from the act a sort of awful joy mitigated by the one regret that she had not more to confess, that the mystery of her favoring must remain a story which, with all the good-will in the world, no word of hers could elucidate.

As for the secret history of last night's dark transactions, however, that was not altogether hers to disclose. The interests and affairs of others were involved; she dared not reveal her disastrously; she was only sensitive to the feeling that something black and foul and hideous skulked behind that shut door. Heaven forbid that hers should be the hand to open it and let ruin loose upon this pleasant world of Gosnold House!

It seemed incumbent upon her to explain that Mrs. Standish had brought to her room a jewel-case for Sally to hide or otherwise dispose of. Beyond this she feared to go. She would not mention Lytleton, or Tresso or the yacht, or the window of the signals.

In the end, stopping tears and sobs as best she might, she waited listlessly for her sentence of expulsion. Now nothing mattered; if her heart was lighter, her future was darker; and presently the nobody that she was would return into the drab not where whence some ill wind of chance had waited her.

"Don't be a fool!" Mrs. Gosnold counseled her abruptly with unworldly brusqueness. "Do you really think you wish fair words and flattery for the sheer, inhuman pleasure of seeing you suffer until I choose to see you admit? See how you've upset me already, metaphor is never safe in a woman's hands, but I'm seldom as bad as that!"

Sally sniffled abjectly. "I'm willing to do anything—" "You've done enough. Be content. If it were not for you and what you've been able to tell me, I'd— Well, no matter; I don't know what to do. As it is—look here!"

She paused in front of Sally, dropped one hand kindly on the girl's shoulder, with the other lifted her chin, exploring her tear-wet eyes with a gaze at once charitable and discriminating.

"I've taken a fancy to you, if you are a bit of an idiot. And I believe implicitly every word you've uttered. Perhaps I oughtn't to, and I probably didn't chime so exactly with what I know about my dutiful niece and nephew. But, you see, I do know them, and very well—and that and more to boot. Adele Standish in especial I know far too well to believe for an instant she'd burden

SERGEANT AT ARMS OF COMMONS DEAD

Col. Henry Smith Passes Suddenly Away at His Home in Kingston.

By Courier Leased Wire—Kingston, Ont., Sept. 21.—Col. Henry R. Smith, sergeant at arms of the Canadian House of Commons since 1872, died suddenly at his home on William Street, early this morning, from effects of an attack of grippe. Col. Smith had come home from Ottawa a week ago, and was planning a month's hunting trip in Quebec. He took suddenly ill at dinner in the Frontenac Club on Tuesday evening, but was better yesterday afternoon. When his sister went to his room about seven o'clock this morning, she found that he had passed away.

Col. Smith was born in Kingston, in 1843, son of the late Sir Henry Smith. He had been in the Canadian public service since 1869, and also took a prominent part in Canadian military matters for the last fifty years.

For the latter, however, it had seemed less giving of testimony than a hysterical confession. She had wrung her conscience dry, deriving from the act a sort of awful joy mitigated by the one regret that she had not more to confess, that the mystery of her favoring must remain a story which, with all the good-will in the world, no word of hers could elucidate.

Help to Save Canada's Fruit Crop

A Practical Thrift Suggestion

This year, as never before, every quart of Canada's fruit crop should be used to the very best advantage. Though it all ripens within four months, it can be made to supply every table, every day in the year, at moderate cost.

Canning and preserving, done at home at the time when each fruit is cheapest, provide in delicious and economical form the daily fruit so necessary in a wholesome diet. Fruit put up at home is much cheaper than that which you buy, and the slight increase in its cost, due to the higher price of sugar, is small compared with the mounting cost of other foods.

Successful preserving and canning are by no means difficult, either, if you are careful to boil everything, and use

THE WHITE FEATHER.

It is a terrible thing for a mother to lose her child. But there is something much more terrible. And that is for her to let that loss make her determined to take no happiness in the children the Lord has left her.

A woman in our town lost her son about a year ago. He was a very good son, an unusually good son. And the illness which took him from her, was sudden and short. Naturally it was a great shock. Naturally her heart was overshadowed by a bereavement so terrible.

But unfortunately she has become almost cruel to her other children.

But she doesn't want to be comforted.

She has two dear young daughters. They have always been very dutiful daughters, and since their brother's death they have done everything to help assuage their mother's grief. They are bringing her from time to time, little gifts from town, they try their best to think of ways to divert her mind and comfort her.

But she will not be comforted. She will not have her grief assuaged. She has put an iron wall about her grief, and she seems to be trying to keep it perfectly intact.

"I don't think you'll ever complain for want of that," Sally told her very seriously. "But can you afford to run the risk of the police coming here to find Sarah Manwaring, who disappeared last week after breaking into a house—burglarizing it—leaving her discarded clothing behind her for one positive clue—"

"You must make your mind easy to that; unless I'm vastly mistaken, no police will ever look for you!"

"You wouldn't be admitted; and if they wouldn't find Sarah Manwaring, they wouldn't find Sarah Manwaring."

Sarah Manwaring, you're to remain here—for good. If I think best, Don't imagine I'm going to permit you to resume your right name and spoil everything. I hope I make myself clear."

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Gosnold— (Continued in Saturday's Issue.)

VALUABLE CARGO LOST ON STEAMER

British Vessel Port Clemba Sunk by Explosion Off New Zealand.

By Courier Leased Wire—London, Sept. 21.—A Melbourne dispatch to Reuters' Limited, says that the British steamer, Port Clemba, which was sunk by an explosion near Cape Farewell, New Zealand, carried no passengers, but a valuable cargo. The explosion blew out almost one side of the steamer and she sank in twenty minutes.

HOW BOBBY'S SADNESS WAS TURNED TO GLADNESS

"Mamma, may I go fishing with the boys?" asked little Bobby. "I'm afraid not, dear. Wait till you're bigger, then I'll let you go with them," answered his mamma.

Bobby's lip quivered. "I can't do anything," he cried, and ran down to the shed to put. He climbed to the roof to watch his friends go down the road.

"Be careful, dear! You'd better get down before you fall!" warned mamma, from the kitchen door.

"Fall nothing! I can't fall as long as I hold on tight!" Bobby muttered to himself. Just then a great big LADY'S DRESS. By Anabel Worthington.

Valuable Suggestions for the Handy Home-maker—Order any Pattern Through The Courier. Be sure to State Size

The whole secret of the smartness of this dress is the clever use of the exaggerated points for trimming. A simple little frock like this is almost indispensable to the average woman, and this pattern is especially recommended because it requires so little material. It buttons down the centre front. The plain waist and also the three gored skirt are gathered to each side of a very wide belt. The matter of the sleeves is to be decided by the wearer, as the pattern is perforated for short sleeves as well as for the long, close fitting ones. Large square pockets are stitched over the hips and trimmed with the same material as the collar and cuffs.

The dress pattern, No. 8450, is cut in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Width at the lower edge is 2 1/2 yards. As on the figure the 36 inch size requires 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material with 1/4 yard of 30 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send 10c to the office of this publication.
