CHAPTER XXXI.
The Crisis.

"You have been ill, dearest," she murmured. "Lie still!" Her arm went across his chest with a gentle, living pressure. "You've been very ill, Harry."

"Lil!" He frowned at her perplexedly, silent for a moment; then he gripped the slowly returning memory and uttered a faint cry, which made her arm tighten round him. "I remember! I was—shot!" His eyes flashed, his hand closed on her arm. "Shot! In my own woods. I remember—peachers. Have they got the poor devil? I hope not. Let him go, Eva. He didn't mean to kill me—and I'm not dead—yet."

He was silent, as if he were fighting for a complete memory, searching amongst the shadows for something; and presently she saw by his face that he had found it.

"Eva! You have been away from me—separated! It's all coming back! The other woman—the other Eva—the woman I mistook for you! Is it all a dream, am I still off my head? Are you not really there, but only a shadow, a vision? Tell me, quickly! Don't keep me in suspense—I can bear anything but that. I tell you I can't bear—"

His voice had risen, his hand was gripping her arm feverishly, fiercely. She knew the danger, the relapse that might follow if she could not soothe him, quiet the whirling brain. She half-sat, half-kneel on the bed and, drawing his head to her heaving bosom, whispered, as steadily as she could:

"Harry, Harry! I am here! Your wife, Ah, you know it! See, dearest, my arms are around you, your head is on my bosom. I have been away; we—we have been parted, but I have come back, never to leave you again, never, never—unless you send me," she added almost inaudibly. "I will tell you everything, yes, everything, but not now. You could not bear it, you are not strong enough—nor I, nor I! You must sleep first. Ah, Harry, you must sleep. When you wake, I will tell you. I will confess—"

His eyes opened on her and he

"And you did all this for love of me! My love, my wife!"

The relief, the gratitude, the unspeakable joy, almost overwhelmed her. The tears rose to her eyes, she had to clutch the coverlet to save herself from falling; but, half-blinded by her tears, she saw him stretch out his arms toward her, and the next moment, half-swooning, she lay on his breast, his lips on hers, his arms holding her, as if fearful that she might leave him again.

The rapidity with which Lashmore regained his strength astonished the doctor and every one else, excepting Kittle and Lashmore himself; for these two knew that it was not so much Herdale's shot that had laid Lashmore low as the terrible strain and anxiety which he had undergone before Herdale's attempt at murder. Very soon he was out on the terrace, of course leaning on Kittle's arm and friends surrounded them with unfeigned congratulations and satisfaction at his recovery, for Lashmore had the knack of winning their hearts—and keeping them, which is quite another thing. But he was happiest when Kittle and he were in a solitude of two. And how much she had to say and how intently, with what emotion, he listened! He wanted all the details of her early life, got to know all the boys by name and not a little of the Bohemian himself revelled in the scenes in which they appeared.

"I must know them, all of them, Kittle," he said. "We must have a big dinner; they must come down here and stay. Bickers must bring his mother—good chap, that Bickers! And the dear old lady must be a brick. Oh, yes, we will have them all!"

They often spoke of Eva Lyndhurst and several times Lashmore dwelt upon the extraordinary resemblance between the two girls, and expressed his amazement. But, on this point, Kittle was silent and cast down her eyes or averted her face, every expression of which Lashmore's love made him quick to interpret. She could have thrown some light on this strange resemblance, but she would not speak; she was leaving it to others.

One day Osborne came down and was received with an eager welcome. "Takes a lot of killing, Lady Herdale, doesn't he?" he said, as he gripped Lashmore's hand. "But, you see, he has a great deal to live for." He glanced at the house and round about him, but his eyes came back to Kittle's face and rested there significantly.

"Have you—have you brought any news?" said Lashmore in a low voice. Osborne's face became clouded. "No," he said. "Nothing has been heard of Herdale. We inquired at his club, everywhere; but no one seems to have seen him or to have any idea where to look for him. It is a complete disappearance. May I speak openly? Of course, my dear Lashmore, I, and Levison, know why he has gone."

Lashmore nodded and frowned. He knew now; for Kittle, when he had got strong enough to be told, had described how she had come upon him lying unconscious in the wood, the would-be murderer bending over him, and the villain's start of horror and cry of "Eva!" as he saw her. Lashmore sent Kittle in, and told Osborne. Osborne nodded.

"He thought it was Miss Lyndhurst who had discovered him," he said. "He concluded that the game was up, that the marriage was impossible; he saw the gallows before him. He will not come back—unless you fetch him back at the end of a rope, Lashmore."

Lashmore shuddered. "Let him go," he said grimly. "I was partly to blame; I was a fool to trust him. There was murder that night in his eye, behind his smile, if I had been in a condition to read the signs. Yes, let him go. After all, I have won; I have got the title and estate, and, better than all else—my wife! I'll tell you her story some day, Osborne. It is a story of a girl, a mere girl, who risked all for love. And I reaped the reward. But Miss Lyndhurst!"

"She has been ill, is still ill," said Osborne gravely. "And Sir Talbot is like a man distraught. There is some money-trouble—with which I have a strong suspicion, Herdale is concerned; indeed, he is, I think, the

GOOD WORK FOR SICK WOMEN
The Woman's Medicine Has Proved Its Worth.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies were first introduced, their curative powers were doubted and had to be proved. But the proof came, and gradually the use of them spread over the whole country. Now that hundreds of thousands of women have experienced the most beneficial effects from the use of these medicines, their value has become generally recognized, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard medicine for women.

The following letter is only one of the thousands on file in the Pinkham office, at Lynn, Mass., proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an article of great merit as shown by the results it produces.

Anamosa, Iowa.—"When I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered with a displacement, and my system was in a general run-down condition. I would have the headache for a week and my back would ache so bad when I would bend down I could hardly straighten up. My sister was sick in bed for two months and doctored, but did not get any relief. She saw an advertisement of your medicine and tried it and got better. She told me what it had done for her, and when I had taken only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my head began to feel better. I continued its use and now I don't have any of those troubles."—Mrs. L. J. HANNAN, R.F.D. 1, Anamosa, Iowa.

I have not been able to see her—and I want to—badly. I think Levison knows something; but you know what he is, close as an oyster, and he won't speak or move until he chooses to do so."

"If it is money," said Lashmore shyly.

Osborne pressed his shoulder. "Thanks, dear fellow! But that's not worrying me. I'm rather flush myself, just now. A speculation out there has turned up trumps, and I'm perfectly comfortable. But it's no use; Sir Talbot would not take it, would not accept any help from a mere acquaintance."

"You won't be only that long," said Lashmore.

Osborne shook his head gloomily. "I don't know. You'll see, she still considers herself bound to that scoundrel. She doesn't know what we know. I'm just waiting on Providence; and waiting is a poor game, as you know. Who's this coming up the drive?"

Lashmore looked at the approaching fly, then sprang to his feet.

"It's Coke! Kittle!" He was half-way down the steps as the fly drove up, and he almost dragged Coke out. "Why you dear old chap! Is it really you? To think of your coming over! But of course you would! It's just what you'd do! Kittle—my wife—Eva," he colored at the slip, "is just inside. She will be half-crazy with joy to see you. Osborne, here is one of the best friends a man ever had. Coke, this is another; Owen Osborne, the great Owen Osborne. Kittle! Kittle!"

She came running out all anxiety and fearful at his excited tones; and her face went pale as she saw Coke; but Mr. Coke, who had been diligently reading the newspapers, and had been preparing himself for the meeting, showed no embarrassment, but took both her hands and with a "May I, Lashmore?" kissed her paternally on the forehead.

LONDON, May 24.—That the second phase of the Italian offensive, begun yesterday, was made possible by the thorough defensive work of the Anglo-French troops during the past few weeks. The British have not for the past week, he said, but in the midst of one of those lulls which are necessary development of long continued modern battles. The present lull is exactly like the lulls during the battle of the Somme. The enemy's communications during the past few days are interesting, as indicating a loss of morale and jumpiness of his troops who repeatedly report developments. British offensives at spots where they never made the slightest movement beyond the usual artillery bombardment. Discussing the battle of Arras as a whole, General Maurice said: "The best comparison is still with the battle of the Somme. Our losses for the year continue 50 per cent. smaller, although larger forces are engaged. We already have gained four times as much ground as during the Somme battle and have taken many times more prisoners and guns. The British captured 21,000 Germans at the battle of Arras, while losing only 3,000 captured themselves. General Maurice attaches great significance to the continuance of the capture of the Germans by the Entente forces of the Franco-Belgian front. The German army, he commented, has everything to impress the men that must not surrender. Von Hindenburg recently issued an order to every

LONDON, May 24.
That the second phase of the Italian offensive, begun yesterday, is meeting with remarkable success, was announced by General Maurice, Director of Operations at the British War office today. The entire Italian effort of the past ten days was praised by General Maurice, yet the Italian offensive, he continued, was only made possible by the thorough offensive work of the Anglo-French forces during the past few weeks. If we had not been keeping the Germans busy the Italians would not only have found an offensive impossible, but would actually have been faced by a great Austro-German attack. The British have been for the past week, he said, in the mist of those lulls which is a necessary development of long continued modern battles. The present lull is exactly like the lull during the battle of the Somme. The enemy's communications during the past week are interesting, as indicating a loss of morale and jumpiness of his troops who repeatedly report development of British offensives at spots where we never made the slightest offensive move beyond the usual artillery work. Discussing the battle of Arras as a whole, General Maurice said: "Our Maurice attaches great significance to the continuance of the captures of the Germans by the Entente forces on the Franco-Belgian front. The German army, he commented, has done everything to impress the men they must not surrender. Von Hindenburg recently issued an order to every unit that no commander should allow his men to surrender under any circumstances. Any soldier giving himself up is committing an act of treachery, for which he will be duly punished after the war. Any commander who surrenders ground will be held summarily to account.

LAURIE DENIES REPORT.

OTTAWA, May 24.
Sir Wilfred Laurier, leader of the Liberal party, authorized an emphatic denial of the reported statement of Tanerode Marcell, at the Montreal anti-conscription meeting, that he had received a letter from Sir Wilfred Laurier in which the latter stated he proposed to oppose conscription and extension of the life of Parliament. No such communication was ever written or sent. Sir Wilfred authorized Senator David to issue this statement.

AGAINST CONSCRIPTION.

MONTREAL, May 24.
The atmosphere of this city is becoming surcharged with the movement against conscription. Numerous gatherings are being held to-night to protest against the measure. Denunciations of the Borden Government, as well as demands for a general election, are being made in language that borders on inflammatory and seditious. Emphasis on the growing disposition amongst a certain class of the younger men to cause trouble because of the pronouncement of Premier Borden on the conscription question was brought out this morning in connection with a parade of several thousand men that primarily was meant to be a protest against the high cost of food but which developed into an anti-conscription parade, which was followed by a fight at Phillips' Square between two soldiers and some civilians who had been parading. The parade itself was orderly. Banners bearing these mottoes were conspicuous and were supplemented with cries along similar lines, "Down with Conscription," "Give us a new Government," "We Want Elections," "Down With Trusts," "Degregatory cries about Sir Robert Borden and cries of 'Vive Laurier' were heard from men in the parade as it wended its way from La Fontaine Park to Phillips' Square where it disbanded. The row in Phillips' Square was precipitated by a returned military officer and private endeavoring to wrest one of the banners from a civilian in the parade. Pleistouts were indulged in, but as no person engaged in it was seriously hurt, the police took no action.

QUEBEC IN LINE WITH MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, May 23.
"Down With Conscription," was the sentiment which prevailed at the gathering in Park LaFontaine to-night estimated between 15,000 and 20,000, largely comprised of men whose ages run from 15 to 30. The open air meeting having been called for the purpose of opposing Conscription, M. Britton, who presided, said it was the duty of all men to "protest against this damned Conscription." Further he said, "Let us show the Government that the French-Canadians are not sheep." He considered that Canada had done her whole duty when she sent 40,000 of our fellow citizens to England. Tanerode Marcell, proprietor of the local French daily, La Liberté, said he had received a letter from Sir Wilfred Laurier in which the Liberal chief said he would oppose the prolongation of Parliament and Conscription. "I want to register this statement," said Marcell, "that before we have Conscription we will have revolution." Marcell said the French-Canadians were ready to do their duty as volunteers to defend the Empire but they did not want Conscription, especially Conscription imposed by a Government which has no mandate from September, 1916. We claim, he said, general elections so as to put an end to this Government.

Urbain Papquin, a young newspaper man, said, "Borden has come home here to murder some more thousands of citizens. This measure he proposes is organized murder." Stating that General Hughes had said in Toronto that Conscription was only to be applied to places where they had not done their duty, Mr. Papquin said, "that means that they want to take men from the French-Canadian race where the women are not afraid of having children. He was in the midst of a sentence in which he asked that protestation be made, and was saying, 'If these means do not prevail,' when he was interrupted by cries, 'we will take other means.' The meeting was orderly but was watched by a large force of policemen.

ANTH-Submarine Campaign.

LONDON, May 23.
The sinking of eighteen merchantmen of more than 1,600 tons is reported in the weekly shipping statement and 9 vessels of less than 1,600 tons. Three fishing ships were also sunk, and nine merchantmen unsuccessfully attacked. For the third week in succession the losses of British ships from the submarine war have been held substantially below the average figures which caused so much alarm last month. The losses reported last week were considerably less than half of those in the preceding week, being eighteen ships more than 1,600 tons, 5 less than 1,600 and three fishing vessels. The heaviest losses were shown in the report of April 20th which announced the sinking of forty vessels of more than 1,600 tons each. This week's figures of ships sunk by submarines showed the Allied navies keeping up the good work of the previous fortnight, and the American unit, although still a small one, shares the credit for the excellent work. Not only are the sinkings being kept at a fairly low figure, but the offensive against the submarines also continues to show favorable results. The actual figures in this respect, however, are not known. The British Admiralty this week wears a pleased smile at the mention of the submarine campaign for the results of the naval work in the past two weeks are regarded as really indicating an important victory over the Germans. The German naval people throughout the early months of the ruthless campaign predicted that England would be "on her knees by June 1st." Gloomy pictures were painted of the grim fate certain by that date for the people of Britain and France. "June 1st is almost here and the German victory in the submarine warfare seems to be as far distant as ever. There has been constant improvement in the methods of the Allies in opposing and suppressing the U-boat activity. These methods have become more and more successful with longer days and finer weather and increasing familiarity on the part of the skippers of merchantmen of the methods of the naval control." An Admiralty official speaking to the Associated Press said, "The American destroyers were playing no small part in the anti-submarine war. Our officers expressed the greatest enthusiasm at the spirit of enterprise, acumen and quickness with which the American unit has taken up its work. It is the old American doctrine of keeping everlastingly at it. The Germans who at first said they would strip us of our tonnage by June 1st, have now advanced the date to October. We are confident that when October comes they will be

Capt. Brooks, No. 4 Company, 7th Battalion, writing from the front, says: "Tell my friends, if they want to help us, we should be awfully glad of some Zam-Buk. We find it just splendid, and can use all that is sent us."

Nothing takes the place of Zam-Buk amongst the soldiers. They use it for rheumatism, blistered feet, sore hands, cuts, burns and scratches. NO TROOPS UNDER 20.

OTTAWA, May 23.
It has been officially announced that the minimum age at which conscription shall be applied in Canada is 20 years. The Government's reason for raising the minimum age for conscription from 18 to 20 years is that experience at the front has shown that men of 18 have been too immature to stand the rigors of war. In England for this reason it has been the practice to hold most of the Canadian volunteers until they reach the age of 19. The United States bill puts the minimum at 21, but the Canadian authorities on overseas experience deemed it wise to draft no men under 20 years. Otherwise there is little change in the situation today. It is probable the measure may not come down to Parliament before Monday or Tuesday owing to the great care being taken in drafting it.

BRASIL.

WASHINGTON, May 23.
Brazil's entry into the war is regarded here as a question merely of days. Those who have watched South American developments closely believe the sinking of the steamer Tijuca, of which the Brazilian Government has received official notification, may provide the incident required to place the more pacific members of the Brazilian Congress on the list of those willing to vote for active hostilities against Germany. The President of Brazil asked Congress yesterday to revoke the declaration of neutrality. If Congress accepts his suggestion, a formal declaration of war probably will follow immediately. Brazil was one of the first South American countries to sever relations with Germany.

An Amsterdam despatch states that the Roman Catholic newspaper Tyd, says it understands on good authority that in accordance with the wish of Pope Benedict, the Austrian Court is initiating a new peace effort.

The Italian official mission, headed by the Prince of Udine, son of the Duke of Genoa and first cousin of King Emmanuel, arrived at Washington yesterday, for conferences with United States officials similar to those of the British and French missions. Other members of the mission are Marconi, the wireless inventor, and Marquis Luisa Borsarelli Di Freddo, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive. Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas Range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. Does Your Stenographer Use a LINE-A-TIME?

It enables her to increase her speed 30 to 50 per cent. daily and frees her from eye-strain, nervousness and headaches. And the cost is comparatively trivial. The Line-a-time is made in a variety of sizes to support any "copy" from stenographer's note book to any size statistical report sheet, for billing, and copying from mailing lists, etc.

Stands on its base behind and separate from the typewriter, with an operating lever beside the keyboard. May be used on any desk with any typewriter, with a bookkeeping and billing machine, and with a check-writer. A slight pressure on the operating lever with the right-hand little finger brings up the line next to be copied into view from behind the stationary line-finder, so that the line of "copy" being transcribed is on a level with the typist's eyes. Thus the typist is free from eye-strain, nervousness and headaches that go with following "copy" without a line-finder, or with one that moves.

It practically eliminates the making of errors in transcribing and copying, because it removes the condition that is the cause of errors.

Used by many of the largest firms in town. We will gladly send you one for a day, a week or a month free trial, no obligation to buy.

Summer Hats in February.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new, And God fulfills himself in many ways, Lest one good custom should corrupt the world"

RUTH CAMERON

Long ago when I first read "Arthur" I loved that passage, mostly, I think, because it sounded so beautiful when one said it aloud.

I still love it, and now not only because of the music but because I begin to glimpse the meaning.

I think that passage belongs with "Grow old along with me, The best of life is yet to be."

The first law of life is continual change. The world is changing all the time. It is not the same to-day as it was yesterday, nor quite the same this minute as it was when you started to read this talk.

Out of Tune With The Infinite. And you've got to acquiesce in these changes unless you want to be hopelessly out of tune with the infinite.

When I tell you what started me on this train of thought you may think it is a very litty sermon for a very simple text.

A neighbour of mine who is on the far side of thirty-five was talking about the way people have of putting on summer hats in February.

"It just makes me mad," she said, "it's so silly. Why they put them on earlier every year. I make it a rule not to get mine before the middle of April, the same as I always have."

And she threw her head back with the air of one who has shown her devotion to a worthy principle.

Let Her Buy When She Wants And Let Other People Do The Same.

Now of course there is no reason why she should buy her hats earlier if she doesn't want to.

But why make a virtue of it? And why be "mad" because other people buy early. There's nothing wrong about that change, and it's the most foolish waste of energy to set your mind against changes that are not intrinsically harmful.

The person who wants to grow old gracefully need not change her mode of living or thinking according to each new style, but she must be tolerant of other people's modes of living and thinking.

"When I Was A Girl Forty Summers Ago."

"We didn't use to do so-and-so,"—didn't it try your soul to have someone always saying that to you with an air of great superiority when you were young?

Surely then you will never say its equivalent to other young people.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new" in little things and big.

Be tolerant to it. You might just as well. For your interference will only turn on you and rend you.

And the Worst is Yet to Come--

A Prophecy of a Century Ago.

The following is from the Philadelphia "Ledger":— In 1817 Richard Rush, of this city, was appointed American Minister to the Court of St. James. He had several sons, for whom he had engaged a tutor. One day the tutor asked one of the young lads to lend him "The Star Spangled Banner," as he wanted to read it. He accordingly took it home with him, and the next day he returned it, with the following verses added to it:

Now hushed be that strain, they our foes are no longer,
Lo! Britain the right hand of fellowship extends,
And Albion's fair land he beholds with affection,
The hand of the fathers, the land of our friends.

Long, long may ye flourish, Columbia and Britain,
In amity still may your children be found,
And the Star Spangled Banner and Red Cross together
Wave free and triumphant the whole world around.

This was written a hundred years ago. Mr. Rush, his sons and their tutor are long since dead, but the verses remain. May they long be regarded in the light of a prophecy, which, please Heaven, is coming true.

The Irish at the Front.

Westminster Gazette: The most encouraging thing one hears about the Irish question in these times come from the fighting front. A friend of mine wrote to me the other day that if it could only be referred to a mass meeting of the Irish regiments, North and South, he verily believed it would be settled in a few hours. From the beginning of the war till now there has been the best feeling between Nationalists and Ulstermen and the fact that they are both Irish is a bond against all-comers. I have heard both Nationalists and Ulstermen say that, if their own drafts failed them, they would rather be recruited from each other than take English recruits. A little of this spirit is wanted in Ireland.

Germany's Fever.

New York Commercial: According to reports from Amsterdam and Copenhagen, typhus fever is raging in Germany, and all efforts to check its ravages in the cities have failed. German physicians and health officials know how to deal with typhus fever; in its ordinary form. It is frequently epidemic in Russia and southwestern Europe, and is one of the most terrible plagues in countries where sanitary conditions are not good. But there is a condition under which science is almost helpless to cope with typhus fever. When the masses are underfed and weakened by months of semi-starvation they succumb to typhus fever and the disease becomes more contagious. The terrible famine fever which decimated Ireland during the famines of the forties of the last century was typhus fever. It has been epidemic in parts of Mexico when the people have been starving in the last year or two. If famine fever is now epidemic throughout Germany, as described, it means that famine stalks in the land just as it did in Ireland, when for one that started to death a thousand died of this terrible war.

German Perseverance.

(From the London Morning Post.)
The "Stargarder Zeitung" has received particulars from Tichenorff, in Saxe-Weimar, of an incident characteristic of the prevailing conditions in many parts of Germany. The local clergyman in the course of a sermon exhorted his parishioners to practice the utmost economy in regard to foodstuffs, as the supplies of the district verged on exhaustion. In conclusion he quoted the famous imperial dictum "We must persevere" urging the congregation to get accordingly. The following night burglars broke into the pastor's larder, removed every vestige of its contents, including a dozen hams and a quantity of bacon, etc., and left a placard nailed to the door inscribed: "We shall now be able to persevere."

The Regiment's Colours.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In reference to a letter re "Regimental Colours" which appeared in your issue of Wednesday, I think the following extract, taken from "The British Army Book (page 212)" edited jointly by Paul Danby and Lieut.-Col. Cyril Field, Royal Marine Light Infantry, would settle this question.

"Regimental Colours."
". In the case of Line (Infantry) Regiments, each corps has two colours, called (1) The King's Colour (2) Regimental Colour.

(1) The King's Colour is nothing more or less than the old Union Jack, with the Royal Crown, and the name of the regiment inscribed thereon.

"So 'A Son of England' is right. It was the King's Colour which was presented to the Regiment by Lodge Dudley, Sons of England Benefit Society, at Pleasantville."

(2) The Regimental Colour is of the same colour as the facings of the (peace-time) uniform of the corps to which it belongs, and on it are the Royal Crown, the badges and titles of the regiment, and the names of the battles in which it has fought. When, however, the regiment has white facings to its uniform, as no fewer than thirty-two regiments have, the Regimental Colour is a White one with a large red cross on it. (Facings, it may be explained, mean the cuffs, collars, etc., on the peace-time uniform)."

Our regiment (not being in existence before the war) had no peace-time uniform, but apparently has adopted the white facings uniform Regimental Colour.

I take it from the above, that the Flag which was bought on Wednesday, Tag Day, is the Regimental Colour of the First Newfoundland Regiment, and not the King's Colour. The Regimental Colour was presented to the Regiment by the Daughters of Empire.

Thanking you for publication of the above,

I remain, yours truly,
FRANK F. WILLS,
Member S. O. E. B. Society,
Empire Lodge.

The following note, which we have received from a military authority, seems to settle the question finally:

The King's Colour of the Newfoundland Regiment consists of a Union Jack with the lettering "First Newfoundland Regiment" (not the Coat of Arms) in the centre in gold letters. This Colour was presented by the Sons of England Benevolent Society to the Newfoundland Regiment at Pleasantville in 1914.

The Badge which was sold on the 23rd May, is a reproduction of the Regimental Colours, in everything but colour. The Cross is not St. George's Cross which is red, but is a Claret colour. The colours of the Newfoundland Regiment being claret and white.

This flag was presented by the Daughters of the Empire, and officially presented to the Newfoundland Regiment by Sir William McGregor at Stobbs' Camp, in 1915.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, May 24.
The official statement issued to-day by the Italian war office says: On the Carso yesterday, after 10 hours' violent bombardment, the gallant troops of our Third Army assaulted and broke through the well-organized lines of the enemy from Castagnavizza to the sea. While we were heavily engaging the enemy on the left, our troops after carrying enemy trenches in the centre and on the right, occupied part of the area south of Castagnavizza of the Bascomalo road, passed Boscomalo, captured Jamiano, important and strongly-fortified heights of Hill 92, one kilometre east of Pietra Rossa, Hill 77 Hill 58, and Bagliand Hill 21. The enemy was at first surprised and non-plussed by our sudden onslaught, but towards the evening he counter-attacked in force, supported by an exceptionally heavy bombardment. He was repulsed with severe loss. During the day we captured more than 5,000 prisoners, including more than 300 officers. Our aerial squadrons, consisting of 130 machines, including a group of navy seaplanes, dropped ten tons of bombs on the enemy lines and brought their machine guns to bear on masses of the enemy. Our airmen all returned safely. Ten British batteries, which are on our front as evidence of the brotherly co-operation of our ally, made large contribution to the artillery preparation. Our naval guns also proved very effective. In the Gorizia area our troops repulsed heavy enemy attacks, captured a strong point northwest of Stoles San Marco, and after severe fighting made considerable progress in the Monte Santo, Vodice area.

UNABLE TO LEAVE CANADA.

OTTAWA, May 24.
An Order-in-Council issued this afternoon, taking effect from coast to coast, to-morrow morning, makes it illegal under heavy penalties for any male person within the ages of 13 and 45 years, ordinarily resident within Canada, to leave the country without written permission from a Canadian immigration inspector or other person duly appointed for the purpose of giving such permission. Application for such a permit must be made on special forms which may be obtained from any railway ticket agent or postmaster. The applicant must declare under oath the purpose of his leaving the country, how long he expects to be absent, give full description of himself and references for identification.

ADVOCATES OPEN PORTS.

RIO JANEIRO, May 23. (Delayed.)
The opening of all Brazilian ports to warships of the Entente Allies was advocated in the chamber of deputies to-day by the Foreign Minister and several other members of parliament during a spirited discussion on the proposed new Brazilian policy on the international situation. Senor De Andrada, urging the opening of the ports, declared such a measure would be in the interest of Brazil whose existence depended upon the freedom of the seas.

DRAFTS.

A Draft is something which the bank gives to the customer in exchange for the privilege of loaning out his money at eight per cent. This is a highly satisfactory arrangement for the customer, as he does not have to pay anything for having the draft written, if he is a director of the bank, while if he buys a money-order he has to help pay for the fuel, towels and liquid soap consumed by the first assistant-postmaster general.

Before the bank issues a draft for a customer, the cashier is obliged to look and see if his checking account is fully charged with quick assets. These assets have probably been loaned out on first farm mortgages, but the bank does not charge anything for that. The draft is then written on a machine with bright red teeth, and sent to some eager wholesale house which had about given up hope.

From the standpoint of the bank, the most popular form of draft is the sight draft, which carries a gentle rate-off and does not hurt anybody's feelings, except those of the party drafted, who probably does his checking at the other bank, anyway. It is a sad experience to have an unconcerned bank teller walk into the store and throw down a large, pungent sight draft on the counter, face up, so that at one glance the customer who is being waited upon can hear the approaching footsteps of an action in bankruptcy. When, after months of patient industry, some merchant has secured a collection of sight drafts which have not been absorbed by legal tender, the bank begins to call in his notes with a series of reports like first-thing-buckshot through a hot house.

The most melancholy form of draft known to commerce is the overdraft, by which the customer is able to meet over-due bills without tapping the Sunday-school funds. Owing to the pernicious and unrelenting form of bank inspection now prevalent, it is becoming harder every year to slip a noiseless, well-lubricated overdraft past the board of directors, which sends the customer a curt form letter, inviting him to be present when the bank opens Monday morning, with some real currency. This has prompted many a prominent business man to transfer his account to some bank with which he is connected by marriage.

"Do Not Speak to the Man at the Wheel."

WHY WE SHALL PULL THROUGH BY PAYING THE FULL PRICE OF LIBERTY AND PEACE.

"In days to come, when we have the leisure to survey temperately and dispassionately the devils and perilsous ways by which the nations' regained the priceless boon of peace, we shall be able to recognize that Great Britain's contribution to Armageddon was determined by, and grew in proportion with, her initiation into the mystique of self-sacrifice," says the Glasgow Herald.

"This country has had to submit to a rigorous discipline for the purpose of learning that no nation, any more than any man, can live to itself alone; that there are times and causes in which the whole is to be so much more esteemed than the component parts that the individual can only be said to be playing a worthy role when he ceases to think of himself, and that each of us will only rejoice in a newly-found freedom of soul, after a purifying experience in the selflessness of the mass.

"Knowing all the facts, the worst as well as the best, Mr. Lloyd George declares that we can do it—we can beat the submarine and defy the enemy. There can be only one reply—we shall do it. Step by step we have been thrown back on ourselves. Some of our most cherished institutions and principles have had to be dearer and more precious things have had to be laid on the altar. It is a hard matter that we should now get down to the simplicities of life and bear some little chastening of the flesh! Not sorry if we believe as we have so often professed, that the last man and the last shilling would not be too great a price to pay for the inextinguishable blessing of liberty and peace," replies the Glasgow Herald.

In the stockhold.

"The heaviest parallel to the present condition of England is provided by the scene in a stockhold of a crack liner," writes Mr. Archibald Hurd in the Daily Telegraph.

"Anyone who has watched the men, stripped to the waist, shovelling in the coal, will never forget the experience. It looks, at first sight, as though they were struggling to avert some disaster, whereas in fact they are probably endeavoring to beat the record in spite of a head wind and a rough sea. No one fears that port will not be reached, but when—that is the cause of anxious interest, and hence the frenzied activity in the stockholds.

"This is very much what is happening to-day in this country. The public realize that the submarine presents an entirely new problem, and they learn that a large number of merchantmen are being sunk—22 since February 12—some of them loaded with valuable cargoes; and they are impatient to complete the circuit of victory with a snap, and this development is delaying it. So there is behind the scenes that peculiar form of energetic participation in war which is characteristic of a nation, free Press, and free speech—all employed in raising speed in the State's behalf. Unhappily the Germans are strangers to all three, and cannot recognize their activities; and consequently, their Ministers are able to serve up such ludicrous prophecies of our speedy downfall as that attributed to Admiral von Capelle.

"Hold Out, Fritz."

"What is happening is this. The poor Germans throughout the Empire—about 70,000,000 of them, associated in misery with about 50,000,000 other sufferers—as they tighten their belts are led to expect early victory; they say to one another, 'Hold out, Fritz; it is now only a matter of a few weeks at most; Prussianism will be triumphant; and then think how glad we shall be that we did not give in.' That is the tragedy of the present position. The whole world is paying the price of this misrepresentation of the condition of England, and only the Germans, spoon-fed, do not realize that the issue of the war is now beyond all possibility of doubt.

Reduce Consumption.

"Our recent losses have been grave, and we must organize our resources so that the deprivations may be made good as soon as possible. In the meantime we must reduce our consumption of everything, so as to relieve the pressure on shipping, the complementary agency of Navy and Army—in other words, restrict our demands for everything until they coincide with the limited supply.

"But we do well not to overlook one fact. We are to-day where Germany was a year or eighteen months ago. We are far better placed to hold out in the economic struggle than any other country in Europe, belligerent or neutral, if we enter on a whirlwind shipbuilding movement. Ships are the one thing necessary to us. The outlook has been immensely improved by the intervention of the United States. If we must suffer such restriction as Germany has been suffering for many months past we have the assurance that long before we reach such a crisis as now confronts that country, 'resourceful hands will be stretched across the Atlantic.

"Germany may raise her eyes to the hills or drop them to the valleys, but she can expect no help. She exists in a ringed fence, her only partners, Austria-Hungary, distracted, hopeless, and bankrupt; Turkey, bankrupt of everything else besides money, with her hands red with the blood of the thousands of massacred Armenians; and Bulgaria, the atrocious despoiler of Serbia. She is opposed by the Allies, with a free population of about three times that of the Central powers. It is probable that within a few weeks we shall be able, in general terms, to claim that our cause is the cause of all the civilized world, for other Powers are showing signs of coming in.

"Is it imaginable that the submarine will bring to their knees the United States, France, Russia, Italy, Britain, and the other Allies, representing immense resources of intelligence and man-power?

Germany's Reverses All Round.

"May it not be that the recent heavy losses at sea are traceable to a very simple cause? For the first time since the war opened, there is no spot on the 'war map' where Germany and her dupes are not suffering reverses. The Western front is changing to their disadvantage, and grievous losses are being sustained; the Russian army stands firm on the East, having, owing to the pressure of the British and French troops, gained time for readjustment after the revolution; in Mesopotamia and Palestine the Turks, under German leadership, are being punished; the iron domination of the Allied fleets is strangling the life-blood of the Central Powers, and even the submarine liners can no longer run; the German colonies have gone; German commerce is dead; the German flag has been driven off the seas. The hungry and distressed people may cast their eyes east, west, or south, and nowhere can they find anything to relieve their depression.

"It may be pointed out that the intensity of the submarine piracy became apparent after the British offensive on the Western front had chilled Germany's heart. The British losses of ships at sea doubled at the moment when Germany's losses of men and material in France attained proportions unparalleled in any former months.

"Can we not imagine Marshal von Hindenburg and the other villains of the piece consorting together to discover some means, in face of increasing depression and civil disorder from Hamburg to Vienna, of providing one cheerful prospect to support hopes deferred at a moment when Count Reventlow had declared, 'No victory, no Monarchy'?

able that orders would be given to send to sea all the reserve of submarines, which had been held back for an emergency, so as to produce a coup. Every vessel which could be manned would be pushed out on to the trade routes. The Germans today, as their newspapers reveal, are living on the stories of piracy, a diet wanting in nutritive value to their bodies, but of value to support the much-affected minds of these desperate people. But is this reel of film of sufficient length to interest and sustain for many months? Everything else to which they pinned their faith has proved to be ashes in their mouths.

"Army, Navy, diplomacy, the code of frightfulness—and their vision is fixed on the submarines they used to despise—hoping against hope that the official prophecy of February 1 may be fulfilled, which stated that underwater craft would be the best and only means of a war's speedy three months have gone by, and Admiral von Capelle and all the other gramophones are still grinding out the same tune. One wonders how long the record will last. When will the Germans gain any conception of the vast resources of the Allies, including America, which are now being mobilized to defeat this new form of piracy?

Trust Him.

"On excursion steamers in the days of far-off peace there was, if I remember aright, a signboard, 'Do not speak to the man at the wheel.' It was a wise admonition.

"Choose your captain, and then trust him' is another motto. At a moment when the British Navy stands between us and Prussianism, it is not an act of patriotism for critics, who are necessarily unfamiliar with the conditions at sea, and know nothing of the shoals and eddies, to distract the attention of those who are taking the ship of State into the port of victory," concludes Mr. Hurd.

"The objection to the submarine as a commerce destroyer is not only that it is inhuman and illegal, but that it requires the whole world to be attacked," says the Westminster Gazette. "Do these Germans really believe that the world is going to take it lying down, that there are to be no counter-measures to their attacks, that, because we are pinched for food, we are going to submit to a practice which leaves every one of us at their mercy, and would enable them at the end of the war to start again as soon as they chose, and, in the meantime, to hold all their neighbors to ransom?"

"The submarine and mine are manifestations of desperation on the part of the enemy, and they may involve this nation in privation and suffering," says the Daily Telegraph.

"But neither the one nor the other can bring victory to Germany unless all the teaching of history is unlearned. We should play into the hands of the enemy if we were to lose either courage, patience or composure, endeavoring to deflect the naval administration from the course it is pursuing to bring the enemy to his knees, amid the ruins of an Empire which already is under a constriction rendering life almost impossible."—Public Opinion.

FOOLISH TALK.

"Twas in the state of Wis., a senator got his. He sprung a line of talk that gave the state a shock, disloyal, foolish stuff, of which we've had enough. His fellow statesmen rose, and a d seized him by the nose, and fired him from his place, all loaded with disgrace. His little courage is run, his statesmanship is done; in outer darkness now he clasps his clammy brow, and doubtless wishes that he hadn't used his hat through which to speak a piece; his woe will never cease. And other folks whose jaws wag heedlessly should pause. The man whose active tongue, on roller bearings hung, upon the zephyrs flings unpatriotic things, may find himself, some morn, dislodged, a thing of scorn. Perhaps, he means no wrong, by his opinion's strong; but men are under strain, and foolish talk and vain may stir their souls to ire, to doleful sneer and dire. And then the gabsmith sees that talk is a disease. While riding on a rail he lifts his bitter wall, and wishes he had canned the words at his command.

Had a ship's anchor fall on my knee and leg, and knee swelled up for six days I could not move it or get help. I then started to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and two bottles cured me.

HIPRESS with the RED LINE round the top

One Piece Strength!

The seasoned sailor never likes to use a spliced hawser. He wants a single length line every time. Why? Because splicing weakens. There's strength in a single length.

The same principle is used by The B. F. Goodrich Company in making rubber boots. By their wonderful High Pressure process they MOLD the toughest rubber ever known—Goodrich automobile tire rubber—into ONE SOLID PIECE boots and shoes!

They call it "Hipress," and it's the only footwear in the world made by this method. It absolutely does away with all the faults of the ordinary stuck-together layer footwear. No layers to loosen and come apart under hard work—no cracks—no peeling—"Hipress" simply can't leak.

And one pair will wear two and oftentimes three pairs of any other boots ever made. In fact, there's so much more wear, so much more comfort in "Hipress" that as soon as it appeared on the market many manufacturers made footwear that looked like "Hipress." But it only imitates the color. It hasn't the "Hipress" wear. See that your boots have a "Red Line 'Round the Top"—it's the mark of genuine "Hipress."

First U-boat Chaser off the Ways

110-Foot Craft, Nucleus of Fleet, Launched Five Weeks After the Keel is Laid.

Washington, May 13.—The first of the new submarine chasers being built by the Government has been launched at the New York Navy Yard, according to an official announcement made to-night by the Committee on Public Information.

The keel was laid on April 1st, and within five weeks the 110-foot vessel was in the water. Another chaser, begun at the New Orleans Navy Yard on April 1st, is ready to be launched in the next few days.

Considerable work must be done on these vessels after they have been launched, and they will not be ready for use for a month.

Many others of the 110-foot motor craft are nearing completion and will be put into the water within a few weeks. Private builders and navy yards are rushing construction, so that a large number of the vessels may be available soon for coast patrol work and attack on submarines.

Laid to Rest.

Yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in the Chapel of Our Lady of Good Counsel Solemn Requiem Mass for the repose of the soul of Sr. M. Teresa Cuddihy was sung by Rt. Rev. Mgr. McDermott, V.G., with Rev. Fathers Pippy and Conway as Deacon and Sub-Deacon, respectively, His Grace Archbishop Rodde officiating the throne. The funeral services were Rev. Dr. Kitchin and McGrath; Rev. Dr. Greene and Fr. Sheehan were the chanters, assisted by the Boys' Choir under the leadership of Rev. Bro. Fennessey. The members of the Community to which the deceased Nun belonged, the Christian Brothers, the friends of the Institute and the school children occupied seats beside the coffin. At the conclusion of the Holy Sacrifice the prayers at the catafalque were sung and the last blessing given by His Grace the Archbishop. Then the funeral procession slowly wended its way to the Convent Cemetery. The prayers at the graveside were recited by Rt. Rev. Mgr. McDermott, over which the body of Sr. M. Teresa Cuddihy were consigned to Mother Earth to await the Resurrection Morn. May her soul rest in peace.

Fads and Fashions.

Linon and serge in the new corn yellow shade is a fascinating arrangement.

Attention to detail means a great deal to the smartly gowned woman of to-day.

A cherry-red straw hat braided with chertle in self color is very smart. The smock has about disappeared and in its place we have the slip-on blouse.

Braid embroidery makes the bodies of any plain frock rich and becoming. New collars and cuffs are made of organdy and many of them are pleated.

A Wonderful Help in Keeping the Complexion Youthful and Clear.

Perhaps you wonder how so many women manage to have a complexion that is always fresh and clear, and how you can make your complexion better. Here's the secret:—

This is the Vanishing Cream that softens the skin and gives it that soft, velvety radiance that we all desire.
Nyal's Face Cream is not oily or greasy, and it is readily absorbed by the skin, vanishing without leaving any tell tale gloss on skin. The skin welcomes this pleasant, soothing, cooling cream. It makes dry, tight skin soft and pliable. It makes rough skin firm and smooth, and gradually gives to coarse rough skin a finer, more delicate texture.
