CHAPTER XXIV.

THE SELFISH PASSION.

It was a miserable apartment. If degrees in comparison are permissible under the circumstances, it was fearfully poverty-stricken. There was only one chair, backless and seatless; a rag of a curtain hung before the window; the ornaments on the mantel-shelf were cracked and broken; there was no carpet on the floor; and the common deal table was without a cover. On the table itself were two or three books—a Greek grammar and a couple of scientific works, and a bundle of papers. A penny bottle of ink and a sheet of paper half written on lay beside them. An atmosphere of poverty hung about the whole room. Clifford Revel looked around, and smiled with an air of satisfaction.

"Poor devil!" he murmured. "Yes, he'll do!"

Then he dropped into the chair, tilted it on its back legs, and smoked with half-closed eyes and masterly patience.

Half an hour passed; he was not idle, his acute brain was working as hard as if he had been in his own comfortable chambers, and then there sounded a man's step upon the stairs.

It was a heavy, weary, dispirited step, and Clifford Revel was not surprised when the door opened and the man who had stopped him at the Albany entered the room.

He had looked seedy and woe-begone then; he looked far more seedy and poverty-stricken now. The well-brushed black suit had grown more threadbare and rusty; the thin figure had become more gaunt; the pale face more haggard. Want is one of the most graphic artists we possess; his etchings on the human countenance are always masterpiece of execution. The man started as his eyes fell on the well-dressed figure lounging in the broken chair, and he put his right hand behind him quickly, but not before Clifford Revel had seen that it held a half quarter-loaf.

"You here!" he said, hoarsely, and with anything but pleasant surprise.

"How do you do, Nagle?" responded Clifford Revel, extending his hand.

Instead of taking it, the young man drew his own hand across his forehead and leaned against the table, keeping his eyes fixed on the cool, self-possessed, well-to-do face of his visitor.

"What do you want here?" he said, at last.

Clifford Revel smiled and raised his eyebrows.

"That's a strange question coming from a man who has given me his address and implored me to call."

Nagle looked up with a troubled frown.

"If you wanted to come, why have you not come before?" he demanded, feebly.

Clifford Revel laughed softly.

You will get infinitely better results in liquid draw from an infusion of Fine Tea, than you can from a greater quantity of "Just Ordinary Tea,"

"SALADA"

Tea is fragrant and Delicious, of uniformly high character, Rich in the Cup, and therefore the most economical of all Teas.

BAIRD & CO. WHOLESALE AGENTS ST. JOHN'S

"Because I did not want to come. But sit down, my dear fellow, I've got your chair!" and he got up and sat on the table, which creaked beneath him.

"Sit down and have a cigar," and he took out and extended his dainty case.

Nagle looked at it wistfully, turned his eyes away, then looked again—and yielded.

Only those who are smokers know the extent of the temptation which that cigar-case offered to the man who had not enjoyed a cigar for months, who never passed a tobacco-shop without longing for a smoke.

He took a cigar slowly, reluctantly, but he took it, and Clifford Revel smiled with satisfaction.

"A light!" he said.

But the young fellow got up and reached a match-box; he would not be indebted for more than he could help.

He smoked in silence for a moment or two. The cigar was a good one, the comfort derived from it was intense. Clifford Revel watched him also in silence, then he said:

"I am sorry to see you in such bad quarters, Nagle."

"You know the strait I was in; I told you," he said, stubbornly.

"Yes, yes, I know, and I'm ashamed that I should have let so much time slip by; but I have been very busy. You know that I am not an idle man. I am a mere government clerk."

Nagle's eyes went over the well-cut, fashionable garments of his visitor, and then dropped to the floor.

"I am heartily sorry that I did not look you up at once; but, at any rate, here I am."

"Yes, but why?" asked Nagle, suspiciously.

Clifford Revel looked hurt.

"Because—you compel me to speak plainly, my dear fellow—I am desirous of helping you."

"Why didn't you help me the night I accosted you—the night I told you that I was starving, and I told you the truth?"

"Because I had not a penny about me!" said Clifford Revel, promptly.

"And, besides, I was taken by surprise, and you know of old how I hate that!"

"Yes, I know," retorted the young fellow. "You never liked to be taken by surprise. You were always cold and calculating at college. I was a fool to speak to you that night. I might have known that you would have left me to starve, as I should have done but for—"

"But for what?" asked Clifford Revel, knocking off the ash from his cigar and eyeing his companion curiously.

"But for the man who was with you. I don't know his name. I shall never, in all probability, know it, but I shall never forget him. He had money in his pockets, and he emptied them!"

He paused a moment to stifle his emotion, then went on, more coolly: "He gave me every penny he had about him, and he wanted me to go with him to his chambers."

"But you did not!" said Clifford Revel, with suppressed eagerness.

The young fellow shook his head.

"No! I have some shame left. I did not want him to see my face, and I was more than satisfied with what he had done."

said, "and I do not think you have changed since then. I did not, the other night, think that you had changed; I never gave you credit for being touched by any story of distress—even that of an old college mate—and so I ask you again why are you here? I remember in the old days that you had always some end to serve; that you never made a friend of a man unless you needed him to help you to the attainment of some object. You were always cool, and self-possessed, and clever, Clifford Revel!"

He flung the cigar into the empty fire-place as he spoke, and went to the window.

Clifford Revel turned his head to watch him.

"And yet not half so clever as you are, my dear Nagle," he murmured.

"You were a hard-reading man; took your degree with honors, while most of us were plucked, dishonored."

"And see what my cleverness has brought me to!" retorted the young fellow, bitterly; "a miserable room in a miserable slum, with nothing but a loaf of bread"—he flung the loaf on the table as he spoke—"for dinner; Dinner! I have not broken my fast to-day! while you are prosperous; a gentleman; the member of half a dozen aristocratic clubs; dressed in Bond Street clothes, smoking a cigar, and wearing a flower in your coat that would keep me for three days!"

"True, quite true!" assented Clifford Revel, pleasantly; "but I have been careful of to-day and you have not, my dear fellow. But come, all this is at an end."

"At an end?"

"Yes, if you like—if you choose."

"What do you mean?" demanded Nagle, turning and facing him.

Clifford Revel threw the end of his cigar in the fire-place, and lighted another coolly, slowly.

Then he looked at the haggard face opposite him with a smile, confident, assured.

"Simply this, that you can be of assistance to me."

"Ah, I see! Assistance to you!"

telligence by telling you that I came here inspired by a charitable impulse."

"No, indeed!" ejaculated the young fellow.

"No. If I said so you wouldn't believe me, so why say so? No; I came here because I thought, and still think, that you can be useful to me."

"In what way?" demanded Nagle.

"Patience, and I will tell you. First, let me say that I am prepared to pay you well for the work I want done."

The young fellow started, and the blood flew to his face, but left it again instantly, and paler than it was before.

"Judging by your preface it must be evil work and dangerous," said Nagle, eyeing him steadily.

Clifford Revel shrugged his shoulders.

"That all depends upon how one takes it. I am a philosopher, and you should be one, too, unless your misfortunes have taught you nothing, and, therefore, been thrown away. What one might feel inclined to call evil I, perhaps, should be disposed to call good. Desperate diseases demand desperate remedies, desperate straits require desperate actions. I wish you would sit down, my dear fellow. I want to talk this matter over with you quietly."

Nagle dropped into the chair, and mechanically broke off a piece of the loaf and ate it, still keeping his eyes on the cool, impassive face opposite him.

Clifford Revel put his hand in his pocket and drew out a sovereign.

"Don't be offended if I suggest that we take a little liquid refreshment with our talk. A bottle of wine will assist us to digest the matter."

Nagle laughed with bitter irony.

"A bottle of wine! They wouldn't understand you at the public house at the corner. Wine! They don't keep it. Brandy, beer, gin—but wine!" and he laughed again.

"Let us have the spirit which you think contains the least amount of local poison," said Clifford.

Nagle went to the door and called the grimy one, and nodded toward Clifford.

"This gentleman wants some brandy," and he pointed to the coin; he would not touch it himself.

"A bottle," said Clifford.

The girl started, turned the coin over in her black hand suspiciously, and clattered down-stairs.

Clifford looked around the room.

"Seriously, my dear Nagle, this is not a fitting abode for genius and talent such as yours!"

"No, but for dissipation, improvidence, laziness, it may be," he retorted.

"Be improvident and dissipated no longer," said Clifford Revel. "Make a turn for the better. I offer you the chance."

"On conditions, I presume?" said Nagle, sarcastically.

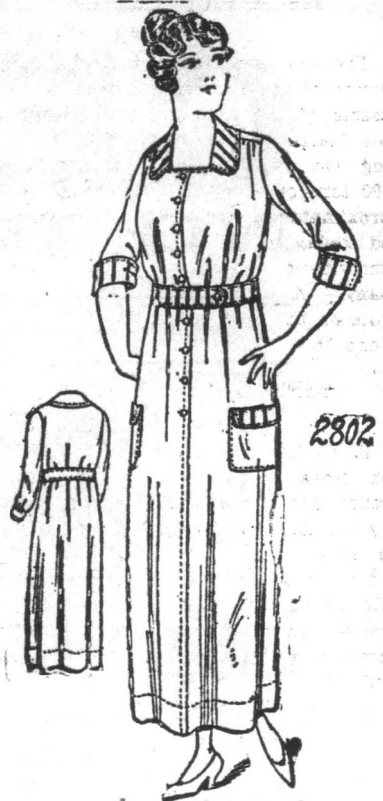

Clifford Revel shrugged his shoulders.

"Yes, but easy ones. Let us wait until the brandy comes before I tell you. I am thirsty, and you—great Heavens! how can you eat dry bread?"

"Because I am used to it," retorted Nagle, grimly.

Fashion Plates.

A SIMPLE DRESS FOR HOME OR SERVICE

2802—Gingham, khaki, drill, seersucker, percale or lawn, could be used for this style. The garment is a "one-piece" model—with a sleeve that may be finished in wrist or elbow length.

The Pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 38 will require 6 yards of 36 inch material. The dress measures about 2 1/4 yards at the foot. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A Dainty Dress for Mother's Girl

2805—Batiste, voile, charmeuse, satin, taffeta, velvet, serge or gabardine could be used for this model. The tucks on the skirt may be omitted. The dress may be finished without the bolero and with long or short sleeve. This style lends itself nicely to combinations of material.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Size 8 requires 3 1/2 yards of 27 inch material for the dress, and 3/4 yard for the bolero.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Newspapers here this morning generally express the highest praise for the intrepidity of Harry Hawker, the British aviator, and navigator, Lieut-Commander McKenzie Grievie, who knew when they started on the Atlantic voyage that they must win the race or perish in the attempt. The Tribune says: "Our hats are off to the sporting courage behind such daring. POPE'S APPEAL.

ROME, May 20. Cardinal Gasparri has written in the name of the Pope, an official note to the House, transmitting the arguments addressed to the Pontiff by the German bishops, to demonstrate the impossibility of that country fulfilling the peace conditions imposed. In the note Cardinal Gasparri explains, the Pope takes steps in favor of Germany as he would for any other country requesting assistance on humanitarian grounds. He adds that the Pontiff was urged to take this initiative by a country belonging to the Entente.

TERMS UNACCEPTABLE.

COPENHAGEN, May 20. The conference of German political leaders and German peace delegates at Spa on Sunday agreed that the peace terms were unacceptable, according to a German semi-official statement, and that Germany will leave no stone unturned in an attempt to "find a practicable basis of peace which takes into account our opponents' justifiable demands and those capable of being borne and carried out by the German people."

PONTA DELGADA, May 19. The seaplane N. C. 3, which had not been heard from for more than forty-eight hours until this afternoon, arrived here at 5:50 p. m. (Greenwich) to-day. The members of the crew were in splendid shape considering their experiences and were given a hearty welcome by naval officers and seamen. The N. C. 3 came in under her own power to within fifty feet of her buoy when a power boat from the U. S. S. Melville passed her a line.

Non-inflammable Gas.

Airships will in future be inflated with helium, if the claim made by the Americans that it can be produced cheaply turns out to be well founded. This hitherto rare gas was first discovered spectroscopically by Lockyer in the sun's rays in 1868. Nearly thirty years later Sir William Ramsay made it in his laboratory, but it cost him about £250 a cubic foot. Now, it is said, the same quantity can be made for 5d.

The reason why helium is ideal for airship inflation is that it will not burn. Having regard to the present price of our household gas, one is almost tempted to wish it would.

Rent Raising Extraordinary.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In conversation with a friend the other day, I was told of a case of rent raising extraordinary. I bring it to the attention of the public because the Citizens' Committee has gone on record as favoring the control of rents, and because the Legislature is now considering some system of controlling same.

An acquaintance of mine lives in a house, the rent of which had been previously $150 a year. Recently the rent was increased to $300, and the tenant has now received notice that in future he must pay $600 a year. I have made enquiries and am satisfied as to the truth of the statement I have just made.

Now there might possibly be reasons for making these increases, which a judge or other controlling authority might consider fair. I do not know them. The house has not been improved, nor does the tenant owe rent. Why I bring this matter forward is to show the need of some authority to control rents. These people may be justified in their action towards their tenant; but the fact that they are able to demand so extraordinary a rent shows that others with maybe less reason can do the same.

I may say that I am not opposed to landlords, as such, any more than to merchants, simply because they are merchants. My own landlord has been content with the same rent ever since I entered the house. I am now ready to profit on his investment, why cannot others be compelled to act justly?

We do not make laws for honest men; we make them for those who act unjustly. Why not make a law that would vest a controlling authority in the judge? The provision that there shall be no increase in rent does not help the man whose rent is already too high. The three hundred a year limit does not help the party whose case I have brought to your attention. There may be others paying more than that who are entitled to protection too.

I have only this to add, namely, that the principle of control of rents involved in Mr. Anderson's Bill is perfectly just and right. The methods by which this control is to be exercised may admit of a difference of opinion.

Yours truly,
WARWICK SMITH.

Can You Answer?

Scientists are very brainy folk. Here are a couple of problems, however, which "leave them guessing," as they say in the States.

We all know that this old earth of ours revolves. Does the air revolve with it? Experts say it must do, otherwise everything would be swept off the face of the earth. Accepting this as true, to what height above the earth would an airship have to rise, where, if it hovered in ether, its passengers could see beneath them the revolution of the world?

Scientists declare that it is impossible for an airship to float in ether, and that passengers could not live. But suppose they could live and the airship could ascend to any height, what would be seen?

Tekkish, Isn't It?

It is a question which, perhaps, is more likely to be answered some day than this one, which has been propounded to the bewilderment of scientists.

Suppose a pipe which would permit of the passage of a man's body were pierced through the earth from London to the Antipodes, and a man commenced to descend by means of a ladder running the length of the pipe. Naturally he would descend feet foremost. On reaching the centre of the earth he would, on account of the revolution and formation of the globe,

Aged Murderer Kills Three People

AND ESCAPES INTO THE BUSH.
Moncton, May 15.—One dead, another, dying and a third wounded is the shocking result of a shooting escapade perpetrated by an aged man named Robert Childs at Rexton, Kent county, this morning. The victims of the tragedy are Mrs. Joan Childs, niece of the murderer, Louis Hebert, a neighbor, and Harold Childs, son of Mrs. John Childs. Mrs. Childs tonight died of her wounds and Hebert is not expected to live. Young Childs was not shot in a vital part and will recover. After shooting Mrs. Childs, the murderer set fire to the house and barn, the latter being destroyed together with some live stock and farming utensils. John Childs, the owner of the farm, was absent from home at the time. Robert Harding, the hired man, was fired at by the assassin but escaped. Hebert who lives near the Childs' home was shot while trying to get the livestock out of the burning barn.

The murderer after committing the deed escaped into the near by woods and is still at liberty. The sheriff and a posse are in pursuit of him. Childs, the assassin went to Rexton yesterday from Moncton and had previously been heard to make threats as to what he would do to his nephew if he did not get off the farm in which the old man claimed some sort of interest.

The murderer is about 75 years of age and unmarried.

New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

House of Assembly.

(Yesterday.)

The House met at 3.30. Following the reading of the minutes, and before the Orders of the Day had been called, Sir M. P. Cashin, member for Ferryland, rose in his seat and moved, "That the House adjourn until Friday afternoon next and that the Government as at present constituted, does not possess the confidence of the members of this House." In moving this resolution he traced the political events since August, 1917, when the National or Coalition Government was formed. His chief reasons for supporting this were: the war conditions, the financial condition of the colony, loans, etc. With the unexpected consummation of the signing of the armistice the plans of the National Government had been upset, and the goal of its ambitions was reached with the ending of the war. No need existed to-day for the continuation of the Government, and it were better were they to get back to pre-war conditions. He had to be frank and state that there was no confidence existing between the factions comprising the Government. As the senior member of the House on the Government side, he deemed it proper of him to make the motion of "want of confidence." He then went to some length to warn the country to economize. Referring to the problems yet to be dealt with, he spoke of the Bowring Coastal Contract, predicting larger subsidies and much higher passenger and freight rates.

The Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. Sir W. F. Lloyd, spoke next. Sir M. P. Cashin had handed him his resignation a few minutes before. He agreed that there was no desire for the parties to work together. However, there was no necessity for the vote of want of confidence. He did not wish to remain Premier, and his resignation had been handed to the Governor. Speaking for himself, Mr. A. B. Morine was at a loss to know how to vote, as the intimation of the Premier's resignation had put a funny complexion on the whole proceedings. He would support the motion.

The Speaker then drew attention to the fact that the motion had not been seconded, and stated that he did not propose to permit any further debate until this was done. The House then waited for a seconder in death-like silence for a minute or two, but no person seemed anxious to perform the duty, the Opposition members sitting very tightly in their seats, when the Prime Minister, Dr. Lloyd, arose and said that as no member seemed ready to second the motion, and if there were any difficulty in finding one, he would second the motion himself.

Mr. J. S. Currie said that in his opinion the moving of a vote of lack of confidence in a Government whose leader had already resigned, was a strange procedure, but it was stranger still to find it moved from the Government side of the House and seconded by the Prime Minister himself. He agreed that there did not seem to be any necessity for the vote; but as it had been moved, and as the Premier wished to have it pressed, speaking for what might be termed the official Opposition, they were prepared to vote for it, and could do so consistently because they had no confidence in the Government for nearly two years.

Hon. W. F. Coaker said he intended to support the motion, and that the defeat of the Government did not cause him any grief. When he joined the National Government there were breakers ahead, but these had all disappeared, and the water was clear. He had done nothing to be ashamed of. He was invited to join the National Government, and he took it that this motion was an invitation to him to get out. He did not raise any objection to it. Coaker made the National Government, and Coaker was breaking it, for the motion was, of course, aimed at him.

Mr. Parsons wished to state his position, which was that as soon as the war was won he had no further obligations to the Government and would support the motion. He also stated that had the National Government gone to the country as such, that he could not have given it any support whatever.

The motion was then put by the Speaker and carried unanimously and without a division.

The House was then declared by the Speaker to be adjourned until Friday.

Tag Day.

On Friday, May 23rd, a Tag Day for Animals will be held under the auspices of the Society for the Protection of Animals. The work of this organization has never been greatly appreciated here, and it has not received the sympathy and co-operation of the community to any great extent, so that the movement has never expanded as it might. On this, the first occasion of the Society's asking for contributions to its funds from the public, it does not ask for large sums from the few, but for smaller contributions from the many, that the giving may be general. The S.P.A. can do its appointed work much more efficiently when it is assured of the good will and co-operation of the public.

College Extension Campaign.

It is the intention of the Publicity Committee of the College Extension Campaign to issue a weekly bulletin in reference to the work in general, so that the public may be kept in touch with what is being done, and note what progress is being made. It is expected that the first issue will be published this week, and arrangements are complete for the editorials and contents. This step is a wise one, and should certainly create a deep interest in the campaign and be instrumental in advancing its aims. Like all such projects, this one has its difficult problems, and it will have its usual share of criticism and queries; and it is to cope with this phase of the work that the bulletin will be published. The number of copies will be about two thousand, but later on the number may be increased. The entire contents of each issue will bear directly upon the work of education and upon the plan of the campaign now launched in its favor, and as far as possible the committee hopes to clear the way and remove the doubts from those who may not be in full sympathy with the movement. But we are pleased to be in a position to state that as far as the general committee are concerned, there is entire harmony and hearty co-operation.

We bespeak for the bulletin a cordial welcome from our people. They will find it sent to them free of cost, and we ask that its message be considered, and its appeals be heard, and that in response to the same, a liberal offering be made. The work which the bulletin advocates is among the most important of the age, and is worthy the liberal support of the public. This we feel assured will be forthcoming, and therefore the presence of the little weekly visitor shall not have been in vain.

There was a fair attendance at the general meeting of the Women's Patriotic Association yesterday afternoon in Grenfell Hall. The object of the meeting was to discuss certain lines of work that had been suggested to them. One of these was the building and furnishing of a Recreation Hall for tubercular soldiers and sailors at the Government Sanatorium, Bowcock's Farm. This was considered a very suitable undertaking for the Association, and the money required was voted unanimously. The next matter that was brought before the meeting was, the question of assisting the Childs Welfare movement both in St. John's and other parts of the Island. A paper was read by Miss Kendall on the cause of infant mortality, in which it was suggested how, in various ways, the W. P. A. could be of use. Before the meeting closed a committee was formed to organize and carry on a definite programme of assistance in connection with this much needed work.

The three principal officers of the new chapter are E. H. P. Rev. Companion, A. W. Nichols; E. K. Com. E. G. McKay; E. S. Com. T. P. Moffatt. "Victory" Chapter starts its career with three men at its head of wide Masonic experience, who have the esteem of all members of the craft in Nova Scotia, and whose names stand for all that is big and best in the Masonic fraternity.

Obituary.

With regret we record the death of Mrs. Caroline Brown, relict of the late James Brown, which sad event took place here on May 1st. Mrs. Brown had been ailing the past two years or more, during which time she was mostly confined to her room, and on April 21st she was stricken with paralysis from which she never recovered. During her last days she was quite conscious until the end came. She was the mother of thirteen children, 23 grand-children and two great-grand-children. She was of a kind and charitable disposition and devoted to her family, which feeling was heartily reciprocated by her children. Her life was peaceful as also was her last moments, and surrounded by her family and fortified by the rites of that church she loved so well, she passed peacefully away.

New Brunswick Man Tells All Sufferers from Insomnia How He Found the Way to a Good Night's Rest.

Second Falls, N.B., May 20th, (Special).—"Those who spend sleepless nights should use Dodd's Kidney Pills." Such is the advice of Mr. W. A. Gilmour, of this place, and it is given out of a full heart. He knows what it means to toss around on a sleepless bed and get up feeling hardly able to move. He used Dodd's Kidney Pills and now goes to bed and enjoys a good night's rest.

"I had not known a good night's sleep for two years," Mr. Gilmour states. "I dreaded going to bed. I also had a very lame back, caused, as I thought, by driving through the country for twenty years. Reading Dodd's Almanac led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Surely they are a wonderful remedy, and will do all that is claimed for them. I now get six hours of beautiful sleep, when one or two hours was all I could get before."

"Anyone who gives Dodd's Kidney Pills a fair trial will get relief." Impure blood caused by weak kidneys falling to do their work irritates the nerves and causes sleeplessness. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not make strong kidneys.

BECAUSE HER NOSE

I was told of a husband recently who took his wife's best friend aside and with much mystery preliminary asked her if she would do him a very special favor.

Would she tell his wife that her nose was shiny and suggest she powder it?

"Is that all?" you tell her that yourself?"

"I don't dare to," confessed the husband. "She would say I never used to think her nose was shiny, and she'd ask how long I had noticed it, and if that was why I hadn't seemed to enjoy dancing with her lately, and she'd brood over it and begin to wonder if I loved her as much as I used to."

The Two Sexes React Differently.
Now maybe the husband exaggerated. I don't know. But I certainly recognize the general outlines of a type of wife or husband who cannot stand the slightest criticism from his or her mate.

This is not, you understand, an essentially feminine weakness. Both sexes show it, though the reactions are different. The wife is aggrieved, whereas the husband is made angry.

For the wife, with ten thousand generations of dependant women behind her, instinctively fears the loss of love. Whereas, the husband with ten thousand generations of dominant males behind him, instinctively resents an attitude varying ever so slightly from the all admiring.

And yet what is one to do? Throw two people together and no matter how genuinely and deeply they love one another there will be little surface things which grate. As the feminist writer, Mr. George, so ably puts it:

So Many of These Cruel Little Things
"There are scores of these little cruel things which wear away love. The dilemma is horrible; if the offended party speaks out he or she may raise the sort of thought: 'He didn't seem to mind when we were engaged, he loved me then and little things didn't matter. He doesn't love me now. I wonder whether he is in love with someone else. Oh dear, I'm so unhappy.' If, on the other hand, one does not speak out the offender goes on doing it for the rest of his or her life and there is nothing to do except

BECAUSE HER NOSE WAS SHINY.

I was told of a husband recently who took his wife's side and with much mystifying preliminary asked her if she would do him a very special favor.

"Is that all?"

"I don't dare to," confessed the husband. "She would say I never used to think her nose was shiny, and she'd ask how long I had noticed it, and if that was why I hadn't seemed to enjoy dancing with her lately, and she'd brood over it and begin to wonder if I loved her as much as I used to."

"Let's."

Mr. George apparently sees no way out of the dilemma since he thinks that the marriage in which both recognize this difficulty and are willing to accept mutual criticism is "a little calous." Mr. Stevenson, on the other hand, happily does and ends one of his beautiful essays on the eternal subject with this helpful sentence: "Nay, you will be wisely glad that you retained the sense of blishments; for the faults of married people continually spur up each of them hour by hour to do better and to meet and live upon a higher ground."

As I open my book to copy this passage I find that beside it is written "Let's."

Making Liquor Respectable.

A movement to offset the activities of the prohibition party, which is becoming powerful in the State of New South Wales, has been launched by a group of citizens. The purpose is to reduce some of the evil aspects of the liquor traffic rather than to do away with liquor entirely. The group has taken the name of Citizens' Rights and Liquor Reform Association, and its program calls for agitation for the reduction of the alcoholic content of liquors; to cause the cancellation of licenses of unscrupulous proprietors; to eliminate undesirable hotels, and to have legislation enacted providing that every licensed hotel shall be in reality a place of public accommodation and of reputable social entertainment.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE.

I like to see the juices in a scarlet flood and sweet.

I don't want my strawberry shortcake standing stiff and prim and neat.

Out precisely to a measure like a church's corner stone.

Let the men who want it that way claim my portion for their own.

I don't like the market shortcake that is sold for sordid pelf.

I want the sweet and luscious kind the missus makes herself.

The hotel chef is fancy, he may trim it up with cream.

And may think it look enticing, but there's nothing to the scheme.

He may have it gay with berries, but his art has gone to waste.

Though his work may look like shortcake it has lost the real taste.

So I leave that pretty mixture on the hotel kitchen shelf.

And wait the juicy product that the missus makes herself.

I want the strawberry shortcake that has caught the breath of spring. It may not be much to look at, but I tell you, it's the thing.

Let me have the crimson berries crushed and swimming in the dish.

And I've got a piece of shortcake for which all the gods wish.

I don't sigh for tony pastry, but I am a greedy elf.

When confronted by a shortcake that the missus makes herself.

Advantages of the Electric Range.

Speaking about its automatic electric range, an electrical manufacturing company has the following to say. The use of the range in the long run is not an expense but a saving. It helps cooking to become such an exact science that no food is spoiled. Results once obtained can be exactly duplicated. Meats actually shrink less in an electric oven than when cooked in the ordinary gas or coal range. Cooking by this method is absolutely sanitary as every part of the electric ovens can be thoroughly cleaned. Ranges can be obtained in sizes suitable for large families and small enough so that they are economical when cooking for two. The ovens are made to hold the heat. This saves electricity as most of the cooking is done with stored heat, and it keeps the heat in the stove instead of scattering it in the kitchen or over the house. This is a wonderful relief in baking or in any cooking in the summer time. The oven will cook a whole meal. Vegetables may be put in with the meat at the same time. Breakfast can be put in the oven the night before, the clock set and a few extra winks are possible in the morning; for the automatic range gets on the job at the desired time. All parts of the ranges are of metal, substantial and fireproof and approved by the Fire Underwriters. All of the electric heaters can be regulated for three distinct heats—high, medium and low—Scientific American.

PRIZES FOR PIGMANSHIP.

Every year a pig race is held at Crone-sur-Marne, in the North of France, a prize of 2,000 francs being awarded the lucky rider of the winning pig. This race is held in accordance with the terms of the will of a wealthy tradesman of the village, who died forty-two years ago.

He ordered that amongst the amusements of the annual fete should be included a race with pigs, to be ridden either by men or boys. The prize, however, was not to be handed to the winning jockey except on condition that he wore deep mourning for the deceased for two years after the race. The municipality accepted the eccentric bequest, and these singular races have been held regularly ever since.

PEER'S SMART REPARTEE.

The best story about Lord Liverpool, who is resigning the Governorship of New Zealand, concerns the occasion when he was leaving Dublin, after acting as State Steward and Chamberlain at the Viceregal Lodge.

An unsatisfactory minor official, seeking special recognition, approached. "I have been in this department ever since you were made Chamberlain, sir," he began.

"I know it—I know it," said his lordship. "Everyone knows I am a very patient and considerate man."

The amount of dew that is nightly deposited on any object depends to a great extent upon the particular color of that object. If four pieces of board are taken and painted respectively red, yellow, green, and black, then exposed during the night, it will be found next morning that there is no dew at all on the red and black boards, that the green is damp, and the yellow covered with moisture.

Cats, large and small, make the most careful toilet of any class of animals, excepting some of the opossums. Saved His Life.

The conversation veered round to thrilling adventures.

"You fellows," said Horatio Pribberly, "remind me of a little experience I had some time ago. I was riding a brakeless bicycle down a steep hill, when suddenly the chain snapped and I careered down the rest of the hill quicker than a flash of lightning with the jim-jams. The road down the hill took a turn at direct right angles, and in the corner of the angle stood a thatched cottage.

"I was wondering what the verdict would be at the inquest, when I saw a man rest a plank of wood against the eaves of the cottage. I went straight for the plank, and soon I was on the roof. At the back of the house the cottager's wife and daughters were shaking carpets, and my machine and myself toppled into the midst of them and were caught in the outstretched carpet and gently lowered to the ground."

A dead, dull silence descended on the company, and even the soda-water siphon wept.

THE KNOCKER.

I used to be a chronic knocker; I wore the cynic's gloomy frown; I was a most persistent mocker of all the worthy schemes in town. If some one cried, "Let's pave the village, and make our streets as slick as wax," I said, "That's but a form of pillage, a scheme to raise the poor man's tax." I blocked the plans of local boosters, and found in blocking them much bliss, and crowded like fifty-seven roosters, when schemes progressive went amiss. I found myself so doggone lonely it broke my heart and made me sad; I said, "I'd give my wad if only I had some friends in this here grad." But no one visited my palace, save when some gent of sterling worth came round and asked, in seeming malice, what I would take to jump the earth. "This town can reach no high condition," my callers said, upon a day, "until our skilled, urbane mortician has come back and carted you away." I yearned for friends, and to obtain them I ceased to knock and learned to boost; it was the proper way to gain them, and now they flock around my roose. I put away my little hammer, it hangs, all dusty, on the wall; and when the village boosters clamor, my voice is loudest of them all.

FISHERY RULES.

Rule 58 is amended as follows:—

"No cod-trap, part of trap, leader or moorings, no net, netting or twine of any sort shall be set, for the purpose of securing a cod-trap berth for the ensuing season, in the water between Sugar Loaf and the Northern Head of Petty Harbour, before 6 o'clock a.m. on the 25th of May in any year.

"No cod-trap shall be set in these waters before the 26th day of May in each year."

"In order to facilitate the setting of cod-traps on the date specified all nets, netting, lines, twines and gear of every kind and description shall be removed from the said waters before noon on the 24th day of May in each year, and shall not be reset until noon on the 26th day of May in each year."

"From noon on the 24th to noon on the 26th of May, no gear as above described—with the exception of cod-traps—shall be set in these waters."

"If during this period stress of weather shall prevent the removal of any gear previously set, no such gear shall in any way hold a cod-trap berth."

"If the 25th day of May fall on a Sunday in any year, cod-traps may not be set until 6 o'clock a.m. on the Monday immediately following."

"In this event all gear as above mentioned shall be removed from these waters from noon on the Saturday until noon on the Tuesday immediately following, during which period no such gear shall be set."

"On the day on which traps are set, no person shall use or employ any steamer of any description, or any boat propelled by motor power the total development of whose engine or engines exceeds 12 horse power, conveying a trap, traps or fishing gear to the fishing grounds in setting a trap or traps or in the said waters."

Political Playacting.

There have been numerous political surprises and startling incidents in this country, since we were blessed, or cursed, with responsible government, but the greatest farce of all was enacted in the House of Assembly yesterday afternoon when a motion for a vote of want of confidence in the Government was acquiesced in by the government themselves, the Opposition saying neither "yea" or "nay."

The whole thing looked like a prearranged affair staged for the benefit of the few spectators, who having heard rumours on the street, occupied the gallery and were seated outside the bar, in larger numbers than have hitherto attended the Sessions. Briefly the position is this—there is either a Government at the moment or there isn't, because the government itself voted a lack of confidence measure in itself, the members of the House to the right of the Speaker's chair not participating in any way when the motion was put. There was no division called, consequently the few feeble "ayes" which were heard carried it.

As it stands, however, it is obvious that there has been a split. The F. P. U. representatives appeared to be perfectly satisfied with their position, and the followers of the Finance Minister, who made the motion, were likewise delighted with themselves. The thing looked so like another frame up,—and more deliberately so when the Prime Minister, seconded the motion,—that the severance was made amidst a silence that could be felt, and it was difficult to tell which was the most embarrassed—the adherents of the Cashin faction or those who follow the leadership of the President of the F. P. U.

In the above, reference has been made to the Minister of Finance as being the introducer of the resolution. As a matter of fact it was the member for Ferryland, Sir M. P. Cashin, who was responsible, as the honourable member for that district had resigned his portfolio previous to moving the lack of confidence vote, and we presume that the said resignation was accepted as the Prime Minister in his reply referred to the late Minister of Finance. From this we must assume that Sir Michael has gone back to the status of a private member of the House, and that, for the present, there is no Minister of Finance and Customs.

Such a burlesque has not been witnessed in Newfoundland, nor perhaps in any white legislature in the world, and it all simply goes to show that under National Government this dominion has been used to buttress and support the ambitions of certain aspirants to honor and office without having regard to any benefit to the people, other than that which could not be cast aside. A burden of debt, an exorbitant tariff and a reckless expenditure is the legacy, which the now happily defunct National Administration has left to Newfoundland and her future rulers,—who pray Heaven may be men of principle, integrity and political honor—to adjust.

An Appreciation.

Evening Telegram, St. John's. Dear Sirs,—By Saturday's mail I received the registered parcel from you, much obliged for same.

I had put that loss with the many I have had since 1915, but it looks as if I was a little hasty (on account of Telegram.) No wonder you publish "Don't say paper, but Evening Telegram."

One thing sure, wherever I am the Telegram's got to follow. You have only to take up the paper and note the ever-increasing number of small ads. on the front page to see that it is "Newfoundland's Leading Newspaper."

Yours very truly, JACOB BISHOP. Cavendish, T.B., May 19, 1919. N.B.—The parcel referred to, contained a pocket book with $25.00 in it, which Mr. Bishop lost on the day of the arrival of the American Dirigible.

Citizens who are interested in the Jensen Camp will have an opportunity of helping the good work by attending the musical entertainment in the Presbyterian Hall this evening, the 21st. The programme is a varied one, including the bright little sketch, "That Blonde Person," in which several ladies of the company takes part. The rest of the programme will consist of plantation songs, duets and solos with mandolin accompaniment, and other interesting features. Admission, 50c.

Gower St. Troop Boy Scouts.

The Gower St. Troop will hold a Scout Tournament and Field Sports on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in St. George's Field. Admission, adults 15, children 10 cents. The Scouts are busy practicing every day, and hope to have a good day of sport. Following is the list of events: knot-tying, signalling, fire-lighting, inter-patrol football, baseball, company A and B companies, 100 yds. senior and junior, 1/2 mile senior, 1/4 mile junior, potato race, senior and junior, throwing baseball, senior and junior, relay race, three-legged race, broad jump, senior and junior, high jump, senior and junior.

Coming Home.

A cable was received in the city yesterday from Nurse Gardner, announcing her arrival in London from the Eastern war zone. Miss Gardner offered her services as a nurse in the early part of the war, and was accepted. She did service both in England and in Egypt. Twice while in Egypt she contracted malarial fever. Two of her brothers, Lieut. and Corporal Gardner, made the supreme sacrifice, and her father also has died since her leaving home.

Parliamentary Burlesque.

Government Defeats Itself!

Ex-Finance Minister Proposes and Prime Minister Seconds "Want of Confidence" Resolution --- Members Agree to Disagree --- Is There Another Plot Behind Yesterday's Farce? --- Governor Must Act Cautiously and Constitutionally --- Leader of Opposition Should be Called Upon to Form Temporary Ministry.

The long expected political sensation was staged at the House yesterday afternoon, when, immediately the Speaker took the chair, Sir Michael P. Cashin, senior member for Ferryland district and until 3.20 p.m. Minister of Finance, stood in his place and moved a resolution for the adjournment of the House because of lack of confidence (of which he himself is a member) to continue the work of Government. The resolution did not come unexpectedly as for days there have been street rumours that a break was inevitable and imminent, but the manner and method of its accomplishment was so unusual that the House auditors were astounded at the palpable audacity of the proceedings. They were so transparent that a blind man could see through them and the wonder is that such an outrageous attempt should have been made, when it was clearly patent to the least observant that the whole affair was prearranged, and that there was another plot being engineered to further shackle Newfoundland to the forces which have for so long misgoverned and misused her. The oddest exhibition of Parliamentary procedure was given when the want of confidence resolution was seconded by no less a personage than the Prime Minister. Could political depravity go further and act more barefacedly. Here was an obvious gerrymander, framed by both the conflicting factions forming the Government, its purpose being to transfer the eyes of public opinion from its chief object, and to possibly lead the King's representative to believe that the whole process was genuine. As the National Government was conceived in political iniquity and born in political sin, so the latest move is of kindred birth, because the parents of the latest political child have delivered it publicly and unashamedly. This offspring however bears a mark which will not be eradicated and its progenitors will either have to deny parentage or destroy it immediately. The illegitimate fruit of such a political union is not acceptable to the family of voters, and consequently the political infant will have to be strangled at birth. It cannot be foisted upon Newfoundland for adoption, neither will it be sponsored by the electorate. No clearer evidence of a great conspiracy than has ever been plotted, could have been offered than that which was presented yesterday afternoon. Honorable members certainly agreed to disagree in the hope of putting a hoodwink over the eyes of both Governor and people. As the custodian of our rights and privileges the former must act cautiously and constitutionally in this new and unprecedented debacle. The eyes of Newfoundland are upon His Majesty's representative and if he intends to uphold the ancient charter he must "play the man." Subterfuges and temporisings will not avail now. The challenge has been thrown down and must be accepted. The people of this dominion ask for the protection of their inherent rights, and the Governor cannot refuse to stand by them. The electorate will refuse to have anything to do with a Government made up of either faction of the discordant elements which at present constitute (or supposedly constitute) the administration, or who are seeking to be the future administration. Neither faction represented in the Legislature has the confidence of the other, hence the people can have no confidence in either. The farce which was staged yesterday will certainly have shown His Excellency where his whilom ministers stand and have stood, and in order that our constitutional rights may be preserved intact, he has only one course open, and that is to repudiate both parties, formerly controlling the Government, and formally call upon the leader of the Opposition, to form a temporary Ministry for the purpose of passing the necessary bills before the fiscal year expires. Only by following this course will the dignity of Parliament be preserved. Moral courage is now needed by the Governor. Has he the stamina to make a decision which will be at once constitutional and popular? The answer must be given by Friday.

Congressmen returning from London report that food in Great Britain is far cheaper than in the United States, where most of the food comes from. This is a fact of common knowledge among intelligent readers of newspapers, but it is well that our congressmen should make the discovery from their own practical investigation and experience. As to the reason why this difference between the English and the American people in their attitude toward profiteering, an attitude which is not only individual but national and governmental. Now that some of our congressmen have seen and observed for themselves, the question arises, what will they do about it? They can at least help to change our governmental character in this respect.—New York World.

Brilliant Lecturer Coming.

A cable received from Halifax yesterday announced the fact that Prof. Shaw, of Halifax, accompanied by his wife, is taking passage on the Digby for the Old Country. Prof. Shaw is a Scotchman who has been in Halifax for the past five years as Professor of Theology in the Presbyterian Divinity School and will be well remembered in St. John's as being present at the Methodist Conference last June, when he delivered a series of very interesting lectures. Prof. Shaw is a brilliant lecturer and has recently won great distinction by his literary work.

Sir Robertson Nicholl, speaking of his articles in the recently published Encyclopedia of Ethics, says, "His treatment of his themes is certainly the most comprehensive which has been given the English reader. He is evidently capable of the most notable work in the future."

During the war Professor Shaw contributed many articles to the "Bulletin of Information," published for the purpose of giving speakers points on the war issues, and since the armistice he has devoted a good deal of speaking on the "Church and Reconstruction." Professor Shaw will address a meeting in St. Andrew's school room on the Church and the Forward Movement" on Thursday evening of this week, and at the close a Fire Alarm.

At ten o'clock last night an alarm of fire was sent in from box 116, calling out the Central and Eastern Co's to King's Bridge Road. The soot in the chimney of the house of Mr. A. J. Harvey had ignited, and fearing the dwelling might catch, the alarm was sent in. However, the firemen's services were not required, and very little damage was done.

Grand Musical Performance.

MOZART'S TWELFTH MASS. Under the direction of Mr. F. J. King, one of the finest musical performances ever given in St. John's was presented at the Methodist College Hall last night, when the Choral Society rendered that magnificent composition "Mozart's Twelfth Mass." The audience, though large, was not, however, so great as it might have been, yet what it lacked in numbers was made up in appreciation, something which no matter how flattering to the performers, did not assist in making the financial end a success. The applause which greeted the various numbers was spontaneous and frequent and the performers were individually congratulated at the close. On the street to-day there have been heard many highly complimentary testimonies of the excellence of the presentation. Following is the programme, which was divided into two parts:

Quartet and Chorus—"I Will Call Upon the Lord." Quartet and chorus—"Glorious is Thy Name." Duet and chorus—"Remember Thy Tender Mercies." Quartet and chorus—"Praise the Lord, for He is Gracious." Chorus—"Thou, Lord, art God Alone." Chorus—"Nations Shall Do Him Service." Tenor Solo, Quartet and Chorus—"Bow Down and Hear Me." Chorus and Quartet—"God is Gone Up." Chorus—"Holy Lord God of Sabaoth." Quartet and chorus—"He is Blessed that Cometh." Chorus—"Lord Have Mercy on Us." Contralto solo and chorus—"Praise the Lord, Ye Nations, All." The soloists, who also formed the quartet, were Mrs. Small, soprano; Miss M. Ryan, contralto; Mr. K. Trappnell, tenor, and Mr. F. Ruggles, baritone. The duet, "Remember Thy Tender Mercies," was splendidly rendered by Miss Ryan and Mr. Trappnell, while "Glorious is Thy Name," "Thou, Lord, art God Alone" and "He is Blessed that Cometh" by the quartet and chorus were alone a treat well worth the admission fee. The one weak point in the first part of the programme was the chorus, "Lord Have Mercy on Us," in which the leads were not got so well. The chorus, consisting of some fifty voices was however excellent throughout.

The 2nd part of the programme comprised the part songs, "The Miller's Wooing," by Elgar, which the Society interpreted perfectly; the "Comrades song of hope," by Adam; the "Frog," by H. E. Button, which were given by the double male quartet; the song "Mon Coeur S'ouvre a ta Vie," by Miss Ryan, who was encored and responded with "The Danza," by Chailwick, and two items by Mrs. Small. These were "Song, Jest, Perfume and Flowers," by Gounod (valse song from Romeo and Juliet), and "Carmens" by H. L. Wilson. A new star has arisen in the musical firmament, in the person of Mrs. Small, who appeared last night in public for the first time and created quite a furore. She has a soprano voice of remarkable range and with an apparent ease that has never been equalled by any local singer, but the late Mrs. (Hon.) Jno. Harris, Mrs. Small has been only about twelve months under the training of Mr. King and her splendid performance is truly a matter of pride for both Mrs. Small and Mr. King.

Mr. Gordon Christian, L.R.A.M., was the organist and won new laurels by his manipulation of the instrument which, however, as noted by musicians in the audience, needs retuning. The double male quartet consisted of Messrs. K. Trappnell, F. Cornick, T. Seymour, D. MacIntosh, F. Ruggles, H. Bastow, G. Somerville and M. Martin. The National Anthem brought to a close a presentation of which Mr. King, the conductor, and all assisting music lovers will hope may soon be repeated.

To-day's Messages.

ALL HOPE ABANDONED. LONDON, May 21. All reports that aviator Hawker and MacGonigle have been sighted of the coast of Ireland, or that the air plane, in which they made the attempt to fly the Atlantic, has fallen into the sea of Estuary of River Shannon are unconfirmed. The only exact news received here from the two daring flyers is that they left St. John's on Sunday. In view of the Admiralty's statement, that reports current, yesterday afternoon and yesterday, were unreliable, and because of the obscurity surrounding the source of these reports, they are now regarded as negligible. The opinion held in Admiralty circles is that Hawker came to grief soon after he started, but it is pointed out that the Aviator almost certainly would have sent a farewell message before getting out of radio range, had an accident befallen him in the meantime. In the House of Commons last night, Joseph O. Wedgwood and other members, severely criticized the Govt for neglecting to provide means for assisting Hawker in his flight across the Atlantic. Captain Elliott declared the country would hold the Government had been lamentably remiss and desperately careless of the honor of the country, and the lives of "those gallant gentlemen."

IN FORCE WHEN RATIFIED. PARIS, May 20. The text of the clause in the Peace Treaty, under which the treaty shall become operative between the ratifying countries, and soon as Germany and three of the principal powers sign the document, is as follows: "The present treaty shall be ratified, and deposit of ratifications shall be made at Paris as soon as possible. Powers, of which the seat of Government is outside Europe, will be entitled to inform the Government of the French Republic, through their diplomatic representatives at Paris, that their ratifications have been given, and in that case they must transmit their ratifications as soon as possible. A process verbal of deposit of ratifications will be drawn up as soon as the treaty has been ratified by Germany and by three of the principal Allied and Associated Powers. From the date of this process verbal the treaty will come into force between the high contracting powers who have ratified it."

THE WINNIPEG SITUATION. WINNIPEG, May 20. Although the deadlock between labor and industrial employers in the general strike here, will enter into its fifth night without a decision, there were signs to-night that the marking process was rapidly coming to an end. The leading strike development was a conference between union delegates and Premier Norris and other officials, regarding the officially announced willingness of the union men to discuss settlement of the strike on the basis of general union recognition and reinstatement of all idle members, who were employed prior to the strike. The question of reinstating all former union employees is being considered, apart from the question of union recognition. Winnipeg, which has been calm since the strike began, was on the verge of excitement this morning, when the arrival of Canadian soldiers from France, for a time was mistaken for confirmation of rumors that martial law was to be declared.

THE CRUISE OF NC-3. PONTA DELGADA, May 19. (Associated Press).—"Exceptionally bad weather, which was totally unexpected, was the sole reason for the failure of all three of the American flyers' seaplanes to fly from Trepansey to Ponta Delgada on schedule time," said Commander John H. Towers to the correspondent of the Associated Press to-night. The man who commanded the overseas flight in the seaplane NC-3, and members of the crew who received such a severe beating, both from the storm overhead and turbulent sea, when the plane was damaged Saturday in alighting on the water, were much refreshed to-night, after regaining sleep lost while fighting the storm for sixteen hours, and being adrift fifty-three hours, on the water. "Individually," the members of the crew of NC-3 gave up hope of being rescued Saturday night, but collectively they showed no signs of fear, and carried on until they arrived in port here Monday, and the forts firing salutes in welcome, and witnessed scenes of general rejoicing over their escape from the sea. "Having run short of fuel, and encountering heavy fog, NC-3 came down at one o'clock Saturday afternoon, in order that we might obtain our bearings. The plane was damaged as it reached the water, and was unable to sail. While we were drifting for a hundred and five miles in a heavy sea, high seas washed over or under the plane and the boat began to leak. So that did the water enter the boat that members of the crew took turns in bathing the hull with a self-hand pump, while others stood on the wings in order to keep the plane in balance. Meanwhile we were steering landward. That our radio was out of commission was known to the crew until our arrival here. Communication had been cut off since nine o'clock Monday morning, owing to our having lost our ground wire. We ate chocolate and drank water from radiators. This was our only means of subsistence. The crew smoked heavily, in order to keep them awake while we were drifting. No one of us obtained more than four hours of sleep after leaving Trepansey until Ponta Delgado was reached. The hands of all the members of the crew of the NC-3 were badly swollen, as a result of their heroic work at the pump, otherwise they did not undergo any suffering, except Lieut. Commander McCullough, pilot, who had a rather severe attack of seasickness. The men have now fully recovered from their trying experiences. I believe the trans-Atlantic flight is practicable, without stop, with planes a little larger than the NC type. The engines of all three planes worked perfectly, and we could have run for six thousand miles more, if there had been sufficient fuel on board."

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Hydro Electric Smelting Co., Ltd., was held at the Board of Trade on Friday, 16th inst. Following directors were elected: W. A. Mackay, Pres.; W. S. Monroe, Vice-Pres.; Hon. Tasker Cook and J. J. Mulcahy. Work on the tunnel is being pushed with up-to-date air drills and the old workings will be unwatered this summer, when active mining operations will be undertaken and a concentrating mill installed. Shipments of copper precipitate and iron oxide for paint manufacture will be made and much optimism prevails regarding the future of this once world-famed copper production.

Mining Prospects.

In 1880 about 5000 men were employed in Notre Dame Bay on copper mining, but for the past twenty years there has not been over 200. Signs point to the rediscovery of the copper region and many mining men are coming to investigate this summer. The Telegram interviewing a prominent mining man of local production learns that the future of Newfoundland as a copper producer is extremely bright. Modern metallurgy has made the large low grade deposits at tidal-water commercial, and that when these are equipped the porphyries of the west will have difficulty in competing, considering the ideal physical conditions existing in Newfoundland.

Orphanage Committee Meets.

The Men's Committee of the C. E. Orphanage Garden Party met at the officers' room, C.L.B. Armoury, last evening. There was a large attendance and the meeting was a most enthusiastic one. After the reading of the minutes by Secretary Pittman, the various sub-committees reported and it was gratifying to know that all were able to table favorable information. Many suggestions were put forward to make the day, August 13th, a memorable one in the history of the Orphanage and were freely discussed. Another meeting will be held in a fortnight's time after which it is hoped to hold a joint meeting of both ladies' and gents' committees.

Missed a Treat.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Editor.—Those who failed to attend the rendition of the Choral Society at the Methodist College Hall last night missed a rare treat, a feast of high-class music that would have done credit to a much larger city. The interpretation of Mozart's Twelfth Mass was flawless of the variety and being sustained with perfect ease and the deepest sentiment. The quartettes, especially, "Drink to me only with thine eyes" was the rarest excellence, their exquisite harmony sending thrills through the hall. One of the features of the evening was the beautiful singing of Mrs. H. H. Small. She has a pure, clear, and flexible soprano voice, not particularly powerful, but of exquisite sweetness. Her style is natural and sympathetic and she won enthusiastic applause last night. Mr. King will be the gratitude of the community for adding this new star to our musical armament.

Miss Ryan's full, rich voice was heard again to great advantage in a beautiful French song which charmed her audience. The whole rendition was a complete and perfect success, drawing forth terms of admiration and appreciation from all sides. The feeling was general amongst those present that Mr. King should be induced to give those who were unable to attend an opportunity of enjoying a treat, the equal of which is seldom heard in our city. After a surfeit of the inferior and bizarre music of our modern jazz-bands and rag-times it is invigorating to enjoy the fascinating beauty of Mr. King's composition and we hope that Mr. King will accede to the wishes of a large section of the public by repeating the magnificent performance of last night. I shall anxiously look for the announcement. Yours truly, C. H. May 21, 1919.

Get Wounded— And Live Long.

How Battle Scars Appear to Have Helped Many to a Rippe Old Age. It is good to know that the average wound, if properly healed, does not mean that life is going to be shortened thereby. Let us take a few examples from the old wars, when the methods of surgery were not quite so up-to-date as the 1914-1919 period. The Duke of Grafton died last December at the advanced age of ninety-four. He was severely wounded—that is the official description—at the Battle of Inkerman, nearly sixty years earlier. Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., who is now in the eighties, was also severely wounded whilst carrying a scaling-ladder in the attack on the Redan in 1854. Sir Evelyn has taken part in many little wars, and is even now busy with writing and military functions.

Field-Marshal Lord Methuen, G.C.H. who is nearly seventy-four years of age, lost a leg in the South African campaign. Previously to that he had fought in Ashantee, Egypt, and Buchanaland. To-day he is hale and hearty. He has been Governor and Commander-in-Chief at Malta since 1915. Field-Marshal Sir Charles Egerton is a veteran of seventy-one, with quite a large number of wars to his credit. During the Miranzai Expeditions of the 'nineties he was severely wounded.

Colonel Sir T. Thackeray, a V.C. of the Indian Mutiny, was severely wounded during the Afghan War of 1879. He has passed his eightieth milestone. "Birdie," of the Australians, is now fifty-four, and a hero of five campaigns before he began at Gaba Taba in the Great War. General Sir W. R. Birdwood was severely wounded in the South African War but he seems little the worse for his experience. General Sir Archibald Hunter is now sixty-two. His name is known in parliamentary worlds as well as in the military. He was wounded severely in Egypt in 1885, and slightly wounded in 1889.

And also one might go on with the list of wounded officers. With the ranks the same experience applies. One has only to read the local papers to find that week after week deaths are just being recorded of the men who fought in our wars of the 'fifties and 'sixties. Many of them have been wounded, yet they lived for forty and fifty years afterwards.

The naval ratings which arrived here on Monday morning by the Meigle and Sagona complain that they did not receive any reception on arriving here, though at Halifax and North Sydney they were heartily welcomed and treated with the greatest kindness.

Household Notes.

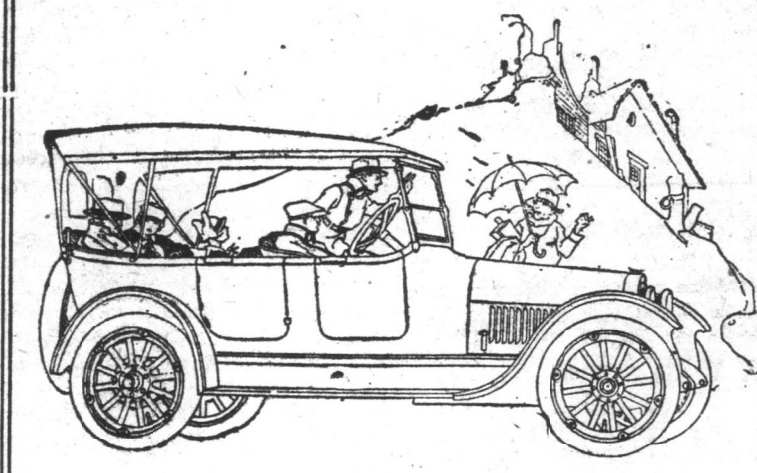

A crematory should be built in the chimney of the cellar that rubbish may be easily destroyed. Ivy in hanging baskets is a cool and pleasant thing to have in a city room in the hot weather. A white enamel platter that will fit into the broiler underneath the broiling rack is economy. Peel bananas, dip in French dressing, roll in chopped nuts and serve on salad with dressing. In buying a house lot remember that a large plot of ground increases the beauty and value of the house. Children should be weighed as regularly as babies in order to be sure that they are gaining properly. Never let wet rubbers and umbrellas drip on an oak floor, especially if the water of the region has much iron in it. The iron of water and an acid in the oak wood form a sort of ink.

The Peerless Olympic.

The German-built Leviathan, transformed into a transport, has, according to the Brooklyn Eagle, achieved a record for the carrying of human beings across the ocean such as has never been approached by any vessel in the history of the world. In a space of less than a year the Leviathan carried to Europe 94,189 American soldiers. She did this in ten voyages, averaging 9,418 soldiers to a voyage. Every time she crossed the ocean she was doing the work of four or five ordinary transports. She took to the battlefields of France about three and a half American divisions, notwithstanding the fact that the Germans were employing every effort to "get her" and that their submarine commanders were instructed to sink the Leviathan at all costs. She went her way back and forth across the Atlantic almost with the regularity of clockwork, passing unscathed a score of times through the war zone, in which so many fine vessels met their fate. Since the war the Leviathan has brought back 35,381, making the total carried both ways 129,570.

This is a fine record, but it is still a long way behind the record of the Olympic, "the premier troopship of the world." The Olympic transported from Halifax alone 70,000 Canadian soldiers. She has brought back almost as many more, and the sum total of the troops carried by the giant White Star liner during the war is not far short of 300,000 men, all of whom were transported in safety and without mishap of any kind.—Morning Chronicle.

But Who Are the Jugo-Slavs?

Strange human nature! The more we get the more we want. Before the war, the Italians would have gone into hysterics of joy to get half the distance to Fiume, and the Jugo-Slavs would have turned somersaults of delight to be allowed to get together short of touching the Adriatic coast at all. But having each got a great deal, both want the last pound of human flesh, and despite their recent joint horrible sufferings are ready to fight each other for it and upset the peace of the whole world. Of course, the sympathy of the world in this issue ought to be with the Jugo-Slavs. Apparently they can get no good port save Fiume on the Adriatic or Mediterranean.—Ottawa Journal.

Poles and Poles.

The fool-killer might with propriety get busy occasionally among the scientists. Word comes from London that plans are under way for another expedition to the Antarctic; that an airplane will be taken along and a "flight to the South Pole is contemplated." That imaginary pole was discovered some time ago, and the search for it cost the life of Captain Scott. No good came to humanity by its discovery, and mighty little may be expected from this new plan to determine whether it is still there. The money might be better spent in reconstructing the live Poles in Mr. Paderewski's domain, or in helping other disheveled sections of the habitable globe.—Phillade:phis Record.

Obituary.

RICHARD FENNEL.
The passing of Mr. Richard Fennell came suddenly and unexpectedly at his home about midnight. When the summons came Mr. Fennell was discussing certain business affairs with his wife, having but an hour or so previously come in from outdoors. Deceased was well known and widely, both in St. John's and the outports. For a number of years he was a member of the firm of St. John & Fennell, and later carried on a provision and grocery trade under his own name. Up to the hour of his death he was engaged in the commission and brokerage business. A widow and three daughters—Mrs. P. C. Mars and Isabel, of this city, and Clara, graduate nurse at the Boston City Hospital,—are left to mourn, to whom the sincere condolences of the community are tendered.

Brigade Rally.

AT BELL ISLAND.
The big rally of the C. C. C. at Bell Island, on Sunday, by "C" (Wabana) Company, proved to be a wonderful success, a total of 150 being on parade, comprising many returned soldiers and sailors. A church parade was held in the morning at St. Michael's Church where an eloquent sermon was preached by the Chaplain, Rev. Father McGrath; and in the afternoon the Company assembled in the Armoury for the enrollment of recruits, when thirty were added to the roster. The drum and bugle band under Sergeant-Instructor J. Stone made its first appearance and was very favourably commented upon. Following the conclusion of regular business, Capt. J. M. Green, O.C. "C" Company, announced that the annual inspection would take place on Sunday, May 25th, when Lieut.-Col. C. O'N. Conroy would be present officially, accompanied by Major G. T. Carty, Capt. and Adj. J. J. O'Grady, Capt. G. Byrne, M.C., and Capt. Leo C. Murphy.

The rendition of "God Save the King" by the band brought this most successful rally to a close.

The credentials of the German delegates to the Peace Conference, says a Paris despatch, are written on parchment, and bear the signature of Franz Ebert, President of the German State, and that of Philip Scheidemann, the Chancellor, together with the seal of the President, says an article in The Temps, giving details regarding the verification of these credentials. The credentials are bound in red satin, and the document is enclosed in a case of watered silk, with a golden band.

Women as Electricians.

It was really most impressive, when attending a lecture on laundry methods in America, to note how exceptionally clearly and simply the lady lecturer discoursed upon the advantages of electric washing-machines and electric irons. Practical demonstrations proved, too, that the duty of getting clean clothes became almost a pleasure.

It is said that a woman's delicate touch and her sureness—which is not found in man—makes her almost indispensable in electric-lamp factories. What is called in San Francisco "the expert in illuminations" is a woman. She specializes in the interior decorating department, and also is "illuminating engineer." She understands the placing of fixtures in harmony with various interiors.

One cog-wheel factory in the U.S. failed more than once under management; but when the American Association of Mechanical Engineers admitted a manageress, the factory prospered at once.

At one time it was regarded as highly dangerous for anyone but a "mighty male" to touch anything electrical; but that was before the war came, and proved conclusively that women had the ability and courage to take on almost any class of "man's work."

Electricity is an interesting and delicate science, and the ready and sharp brains of woman should make her an acquisition to the calling.

Noah's Leading Place.

Ararat, a Province of Armenia, is Now a Republic.

The recent appeal made by the newly-established republic of Ararat for recognition will be better understood, at least geographically, when it is explained that the region in question is a province of Armenia.

It takes its name from the mountain on which the Ark made a landing after the flood—Ararat meaning Noah's Mountain.

The whole world, according to the Bible story, was submerged during the period of the deluge and Ararat's topmost peak was the first dry land to appear above the waters, for the simple reason that it was the loftiest—in Armenia, at all events.

As viewed to-day it gives a notion of the depth of the flood, inasmuch as the peak is more than three miles above sea-level. It is dome-shaped, and its slopes for 9,000 feet from the top are covered with everlasting snow and great fields of glittering ice.

The climb down must have been rather difficult for Noah, his family and all the animals disembarked from the Ark. As for an ascent to the top, it was formerly believed to be impossible. The Armenian monks declared that remains of the Noahian bark still existed on the summit, and that by reason of their sanctity a supernatural influence forbade approach.

Nevertheless, in September, 1829, a bold climber, Dr. Johann Parrot, succeeded in reaching the top of Ararat, and on coming down stated that he had found not even the keel of the Ark up there. Since then the feat has been repeated by several other adventurous persons.

Ararat comes pretty near to being the most beautiful mountain in the world. It is a long-extinct volcano, standing almost isolated save for a lesser peak, called Little Ararat, which (really part of it) is a cone of exquisite symmetry—an ideal volcano of a type plainly recognizable as an ash-pile formed about an eruptive chimney.

Below, in the valley of Araxes, was the Garden of Eden, according to Armenian tradition. At Marsand, in that neighborhood, was (so say the monks) the burial place of Noah's wife. At Arguri, a village near a great chasm that runs into the heart of the mountain, Noair planted the first vineyard.

Modern Marriage Markets.

The Azandi, a tribe living in the North-East of the Belgian Congo, sell wives amazingly cheap. There is no need for the intended bridegroom to wait months before he can pluck up courage to "pop the question." A knife, costing about three shillings, will procure him a life's partner.

Another "marriage market" thrives in the mountainous district of the Mafalees, in New Guinea. The price of each girl is one pig, augmented with dogs'-teeth necklaces, and so on, according to the wealth of the girl's parents. The proposal is usually made by proxy, the boy sending a female relative to the lady of his choice.

The preliminaries to courtship among the Mafalees are rather picturesque. When a young man, wishing to marry, goes out to seek his "ojande" (literally, his "flower"), he will light a fire on a still day in a bush, or in an open space outside his village, and wait till a slight breeze carries the flame or smoke in one direction or another. He then takes that point of the compass as an indication, and walks to the next village to find his "flower."

The Santali Indians must literally purchase their brides. They pay a sum of money to the girl's parents—usually about a hundred rupees—and, in addition, they present the mother and the female relatives with new saris or shawls.

Should the bridegroom choose a widow for his wife, she will only cost half the sum mentioned. The reason why the Santali Indians hold widows in less regard than unmarried females is because they assert that in the next world man and wife are reunited, hence a widow who marries again is only "lent" to her second husband.

When a young man courts a girl who does not favor his suit, he adopts an eccentric way to cure her stubbornness. After having dipped his finger in red paint, he goes in search of the lady and imprints his mark on her forehead. He may claim her as his wife.

Who Owns the Air?

Do you own the bit of air over your back garden?

Has an aviator any more right to fly over your cabbage patch than a stranger has to trample over it? Similarly, many foreign aviators fly as they please over this country, and vice versa, do British aviators enjoy a similar liberty and privilege?

Freedom of the air is a question as vitally important as freedom of the seas. A nation's rights over the sea are supposed to extend three miles into the ocean from its coasts, and ownership of land to whatever is beneath it for half the distance through the earth.

Free Passage.

Now the Peace Conference says that each nation owns the air above its own territory, but that it can only own it on condition that it allows free passage through it for all other countries.

That means to say, said Mr. Handley Page to the writer, as we discussed the development of the air services of the world, that aerial alliances will have to be entered into with all foreign countries, and until they are ratified we have no more right to fly over other kingdoms than we have to free use of their railways and ports.

It is an interesting fact that up to the outbreak of the war our Government always maintained that every State should claim full and absolute sovereignty in the air above its territory. This principle was recognized by practically every country except Germany.

Animals are so defenceless against the cruel man's brutality, that it ought to stir up the humane man to greater efforts to protect the helpless creatures all about us. Help them by giving to the S. P. A. on Tag Day, may21,2i

How They Died.

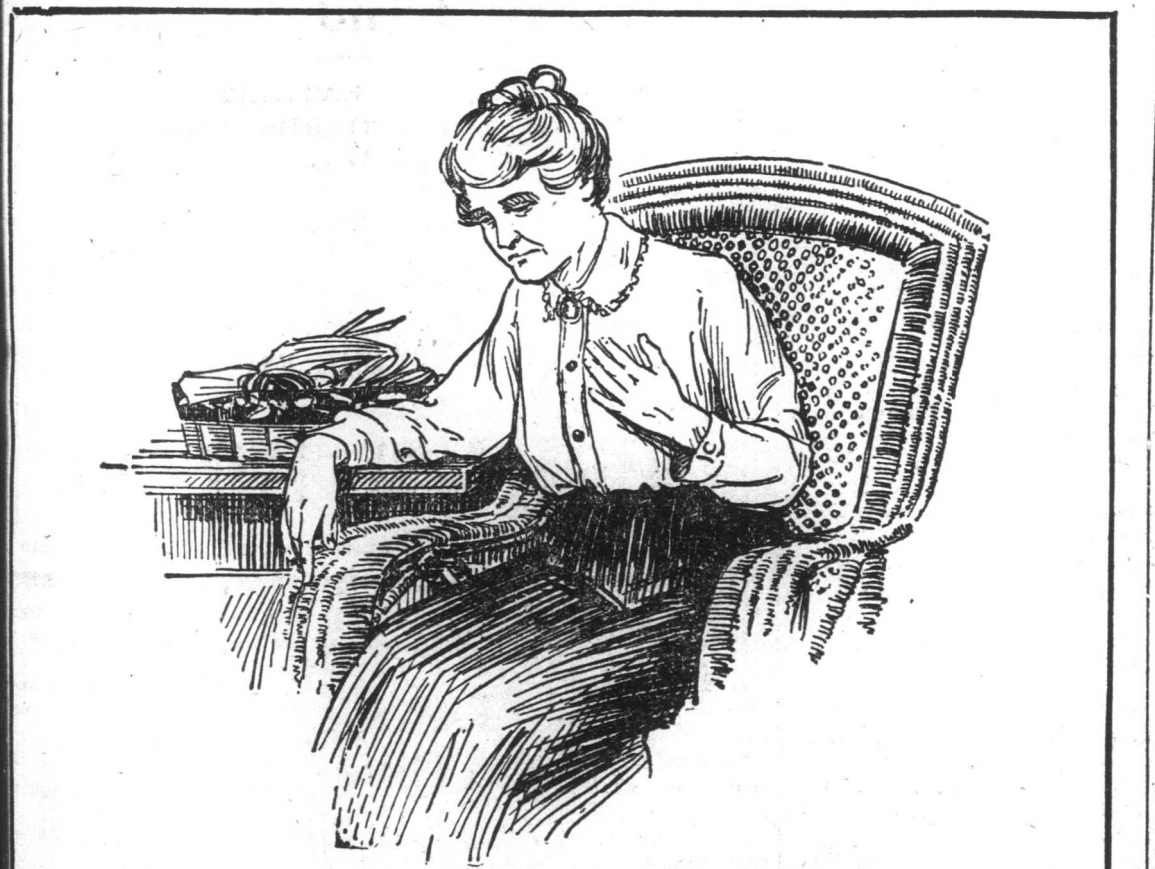

In a railway carriage the other day the conversation turned upon gardening.

"I guess," said an American, "none of you ever saw such parsnips as I grew out in the States last year. Why, I had to hire a steam-derrick to get 'em out o' the ground!"

"Talking about parsnips," said Bragson, meekly, "reminds me of some I once grew in my back garden at Shepherds Bush to try the effect of a patent-fertiliser my brother had invented. The result was astonishing. Those parsnips for-size easily beat all

"I Am So Afraid it is My Heart"

VERY many people live in constant dread of heart trouble when the heart is in no way diseased.

There is perhaps no organ in the human system which is worked so hard and yet the heart seldom goes wrong so long as it is supplied with plenty of rich, red blood.

In fact the heart repairs its own waste and plods on, lifting tons of blood each year and pumping it through the body.

But the heart's action is the result of the contraction and expansion of muscles and these muscles are operated by the nervous system. When the blood gets thin and watery and the nervous system is starved the action of the heart, just like that of the stomach, bowels and other organs, is slowed down.

As a result, you are easily tired out, experience shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and general bodily weakness.

The quickest and most rational way to overcome this condition is by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood and build up the exhausted nerves.

With the nerves in a run-down condition you are sure to get downhearted and discouraged and to imagine that all sorts of dreadful things are likely to happen to you.

But when you have been using the Nerve Food for a week or two you will begin to see the silver lining to the cloud and to realize that you are on the way to health, courage and happiness.

Mrs. Nellie Dertinger, Simcoe, Ont., writes: "I was a great sufferer with my nerves and with pains about the heart. I could not sleep at nights and though I tried several doctors could not get much relief. A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and I am happy to say the results have been a surprise. My health has been built up wonderfully. I have no more pains about the heart, my nerves are steady and I sleep and rest well."

Ol' Eight Squar.

(By KEMPER H. BROADUS.)
If you had known old Bill Linsey as long as I have, you would have discovered that he has a most remarkable fund of hunting yarns; some of them once had a vague foundation of fact, others are the products of his imagination—but all are works of art. If, as I say, you do not know him, you swallow them all like the best butter, but otherwise numerous grains of salt are required.

Billy settled himself back comfortably in his chair, his feet on the edge of the stove and his pipe going nicely.

"D'ye remember," said he, "the time when that there dook an' his outfit of servants an' 'siders an' all came out here for three weeks' huntin' in the Rockies. Ol' Eight-Squar, the guides used ter call him, after a kind of contraption that he brought along to kill big game with. By golly, that sure was some gun! She weighed maybe 'bout eighteen pound, an' had all kinds o' fixin's an' dinguses on it to tinker with. There was a spy-glass on top to sight through; an' the shells was near six inches long an' an inch thick. She was a terror."

When Ol' Eight—I mean the dook, an' all his servants gets here, he asks me to sorter take a look at his outfit. He sez to me kinda proud-like jes' after he's hired me. "I have brought with me what I think is one of the most compact and simple equipments ever used!" I kinda gasped, but I figured out what he meant, an' then he says kinda lofty-like that I can take a look at it. It was a son-of-a-gun, all right. Why, there was foldin' chairs an' foldin' tables, an' foldin' stove, an' enough guns to make him president of Mexico. There must have been six ton of truck there. "Either you take an' dump about four ton of this d— fool business here at the station," I sez, "or I don't guide no tenderfoot on no huntin' trips." "Come, come, my man," he sez, "these things are quite necessary for comfort."

"Necessary," I yells. "We ain't a walkin' hotel! Do you mean to say you're goin' to take all that parlor stuff through Broken Rock Pass?" "It took some argytin'," all right, but he finally left about half o' the stuff behind; an' all the furniture but one table an' a chair. It was the best he could do.

Well, we finally got started. There was the dook an' me, an' a cook that I'd got—Frenchy, his name was—four servants o' the dook's, his personal secretary, an' one o' the packers that Macintosh had one with him the summer before. "We had a string o' twenty horses an' his bunch rode, an' when we got started it looked like all Alberta comin' back from a three days' drunk.

One of the hosses got ornery about ten miles out an' bucked off the dook's fancy table an' then rolled on it. I guess it wasn't meant to be sat on like that 'cause what we pulled out from under the hoss would have done credit to a steam-roller. It was plumb successful—fer the toothpicks.

Well, we reached the 'ead o' the pass that evening an' started to pitch camp. Sure was some camp. Ol' Eight-Squar's servants was about as useful as a bunch o' steers, an' after they had monkeyed 'round fer a couple o' minutes, I told 'em to vamoose while the packer an' I cussed those patent tents o' his into workin' order. Since there wasn't no table fer the cook spread out a pack-cover, dealt out the grub—it was sumpchuous too—an' hollers 'grub-ple.' The packer an' me hustles over an' sets down—the servants an' the secretary figures that they was meant an' comes along too. When we was about half-way done eatin' the dook sings out that we can "bring his supper to him at once!"

"Your grub ees right here," answers Frenchy, "an' by gar, you come here to eat heem." This sure did seem to rub the dook the wrong way, but pretty soon his belly was too strong for him, an' he turns up to tuck away his flapjackets—they was real cold by that time—lookin' 'bout as friendly as the business' end of a hornet.

The dook wanted to get started bright an' early next morning, so 'long about six o'clock Frenchy cuts loose on the bottom of a pan, an' in about half-an-hour, 'Eight-Squar' comes along all fixed up fit to kill. He had a yaller coat fair crawlin' with pockets, an' pants an' hat to match. His boots was wondrous—nice, pointed toes like he was goin' fer a dance, an' soles that was thinner'n a sardine can. I had a bunch right then 'that he was goin' to have his troubles, but I sez to myself, "Jest you lay low an' say nothin'." Billy, 'cause the dook o' his fer sport, an' those shoes o' his will sure give him some."

So the dook an' me started out fer a place a few miles away where I'd got three grizzlies the year before. After about two hours goin' them 'narrow boots o' his started pesterin' him, an' pretty soon he couldn't go no further. So I sez to him, "Take 'em fer foot things off, an' I'll fix you up proper," an' pulls a pair o' moosehide moccasins out o' my pocket an' tells him to put 'em on. After that we went along a piece further an' I sees some b'ar tracks big enough fer him to be Airship Problems.

Advantages of the Smaller Ships.

Brigadier-General E. M. Maitland, R.A.F., presided at a lecture given by Lieut.-Colonel T. B. Cave-Browne-Cave at the Royal Society of Arts last night on "Lighter-than-Air-Craft." The lecture was illustrated by lantern slides.

The Chairman said that Colonel Cave-Browne-Cave was specially selected before the war to study the problem of airships, and his association with them dated back to 1912, when he began to study Army airships at Farnborough. At the outbreak of hostilities he took over design and production of new rigid airships, and the Service owed him a deep debt of gratitude for the work he did in those strenuous days. No one individual in the speaker's opinion, had done more for the development of airships in this country than he.

A great deal had been said in and out of the Press about rigid airships, what they were going to do, and what they had done. He had read in a recent paper that the two rigid airships building at Barrow and Selby were to fly to America and back in two days. That was rather more in the nature of a pious hope than anything else.

The Airship Service being principally concerned with anti-submarine operations had been of necessity more or less of a mystery. Airships had flown in all kinds of conditions miles out at sea without being in sight of land from early morning until just before dusk. They had flown two and a half million miles during the war and escorted a tremendous number of convoys. Young pilots had been flying over the North Sea with little chance of individual distinction, and had made good. One had flown 101 hours 21 minutes—a record for this and all other countries but Germany.

In his address, which dealt largely with the technical side of the subject, Colonel Cave-Browne-Cave said that the variation in the lift of an airship depended primarily upon the volume of gas in the envelope and the density of the surrounding air. Air density decreased with altitude, and, owing to the decrease of pressure, the hydrogen contained in the gas space would expand at a corresponding rate that—other things being equal—the available lift of the airship would remain the same. This process would continue until a height was reached at which the air had been totally expelled from the air-chambers, and further expansion of the gas necessarily resulted in the discharge of some gas from the relief valves in the envelope.

Any further rise would therefore produce a decrease in the lifting power of the ship. A ship which was full of gas would have considerably greater lift on a day when the barometer was high. The reduction of lift caused by rain falling on an airship was comparatively small provided the surface of the envelope was made waterproof. Snow would not in general stick to the surface of an envelope, but in the event of meeting snow sufficiently wet to stick to the surface, and possibly later to freeze on to it, considerable increase of weight might very rapidly be acquired. There had been considerable experience of ships meeting snow while in flight, and as far as was known no serious trouble had actually been experienced due to snow sticking to the surface of the envelope.

The non-rigid variety was entirely satisfactory for small craft, as the envelope was amply capable of providing sufficient rigidity with reasonably small internal pressure. For very large ships it became necessary to divide the gas-chamber into a number of compartments, and the large diameter would render the tension in fabric, caused by the necessary excess of internal pressure very considerable.

Carrying Capacity.

The carrying capacity of an airship was perhaps the feature of greatest importance both from a Service and commercial point of view. The weight available for bombs, passengers, merchandise, or fuel, depended upon the volume of gas contained by the ship and upon the weight of the ship's structure and all necessary parts. As the size of the ship increased, the proportion of her gross lift available for lifting capacity would also increase. The non-rigid ship having no hull structure would for the same size have a considerably greater proportion of available lift. It might be assumed that it was at the present time practicable to design with a rigid ship and a non-rigid ship which would be able to carry as useful load a weight equal to that of the ship—i.e., 50 per cent. of the gross lift of the ship would be available for useful purposes. The size of a non-rigid which would give this ratio was approximately 500,000 cubic feet, and for a rigid approximately 2,000,000 cubic feet.

For many commercial purposes there was much to be gained by carrying a given weight in several small ships rather than in one large one. For naval purposes, when the airship was used as a cruiser, her function was to carry observers and a W. T. installation for a certain distance at a certain speed, and a ship that would do this with a small crew was as effective as one with a big one. The small ship could get away on a large proportion of the days when the large ship would be weather-bound. The best figures available as regards the cost of our largest rigid and non-rigid indicated that some six of the non-rigids could be built for the same price as the equivalent rigid.

The first "S. S." ship was constructed by suspending a "B.E." aeroplane, stripped of its wings and tail, under a suitable small envelope. The trials of the first ship were made in less than 20 days from the time the instructions to proceed were received. The first flights were so satisfactory that the Admiralty gave instructions that the production of these ships was to proceed at once. There were at that time practically no firms capable of constructing airship envelopes or even of constructing airship fabric in anything like adequate quantities. The building up of this fabric and envelope constructing organization almost entirely among firms of waterproof garment manufacturers was not the least difficult or interesting part of our early airship development.

An envelope of the "Astra" type was obtained from a ship which had been built before the war as a Belgian millionaire's yacht. A suitable car to take four men was constructed and rigged below it. This was the beginning of the "Coastal" type. The envelope had to be re-designed, but the modifications made to the car were comparatively small. This class of ship was modified in 1918 to the type known as "C."

The requirements for the "S.S." ship altered somewhat, and it became desirable that the ship should be capable of landing on the water and also suitable for being towed from a seagoing ship. For this purpose the "Zero" type of car was designed and constructed at the Airship Patrol Station near Dover.

A ship larger than the "Coastal" was required for extended cruising in the North Sea and work with the Fleet, and the "N.S." ship was therefore designed. Her machinery is in a unit quite separate from the main car which only carried the crew and navigating party. The petrol carried by this ship amounted, in certain circumstances, to about three tons.

Development of the Keel.

The development of the rigid airship showed fewer obvious features, although it may certainly be claimed that the improvements in strength and details of construction have been very satisfactory. The most obvious change has been with respect to the main keel of the ship. This keel has primarily to distribute the loads carried by the ship to the main transverse frames of the hull. In the earlier ships this keel was an external one of triangular section. Our next development was to eliminate the distinctive keel altogether, while in the "33" class the keel had returned, but as an internal part of the structure.

The first towing experiment was carried out in 1912, when one airship broke down and was towed home by another. The towing ship landed alongside the disabled one, and a wire was taken from her to a suitable point on the latter. The ships then rose, and no difficulty was experienced in the towing operations. This operation in itself has not been used since, but it offered attractive possibilities for conveying large weights of material at a comparatively slow speed, when the airship tug might tow a number of air barges after her.—The Times.

Self-Development.

THE LAW OF SELF-RESPECT.

(The Times.)
The modern man claims the opportunity of making the best use of his life. He is content neither with his circumstances nor with himself. He protests loudly against the first, but his discontent with the latter is far more profound. He is aware of faculties, powers, and aspirations which would lead him beyond his present attainments and experience, and these he desires to develop to their fullest extent, that he may enjoy all that they promise of a larger life.

Self-realization is not quite a satisfactory term for a man's work is never to be judged by his present attainments. His value consists in what he is becoming; in his power to acquire new qualities and to enjoy higher experiences than he already possesses. Self-development is a truer description of a man's true progress. We are what we are, and it is important that we should have a true apprehension of this fact, but our worth is to be judged by what we are becoming.

Self-development is a sacred trust. We have to give account for it. We are not sole masters of ourselves. We are not so our own. Life is not a possession to be used only for our own satisfaction. We have the loan of it, and we are expected to use it with that mingled care and courage which will add to its power for other ends than those which are merely self-regarding. We have to live as wise-stewards, not only using, but improving, that which is given into our charge for various ends beyond our own. Self-development is a duty which has a triple challenge. It is demanded by fidelity to ourselves, by service to our fellow-men, and by loyalty to Him who is the Author and Fulfiller of life.

The present discontent, which is felt by all classes, and not the least by those who appear the most complacent, springs from a desire to reach to something that will make life worthier, fuller, happier. Men have felt the shock of a great crisis that has given free course to hopes and fears, and reactions of unprecedented violence. We have come face to face with the stark facts of life and death, of honour and dishonour, and have learned that these are the things that matter. They have kindled the desire for freedom, so that we may meet them with the full consciousness of our powers. It is because the present conditions in which men live seem to make this larger liberty impossible that they are demanding what is recognized to be nothing less than a revolution in personality.

If self-development is to be secured, men must not only reorganize the conditions of their lives, they must have a true regard to life itself. We need not be troubled by the vehemence of the demand for larger opportunities of self-development. Our anxiety springs from another source. Men may wish to attain a higher life than that which is now theirs, only to find themselves baffled because in their eagerness to reach an ideal which is provided neither by themselves nor their fellows, but by Eternal Truth. If a man would attain his highest self he must live in the power of that which is Divine.

Self-love has its own justification. Without it we can have no true love for others, for our love of our neighbours is to be as our love for ourselves. A man may be rightly self-regarding, but never selfish. He must think of his own gain not in terms of self-interest, but as the opportunity of service for others. Self-development is impossible without self-sacrifice for others, and the wider that service is the larger be-

Strike as Political Weapon.

(By ALEXANDER M. THOMPSON, in "Daily Mail.")

The threat of industrial strikes is becoming the normal habit of our national life. Even while the miners are voting to-day as to whether they will strike against Mr. Justice Sank-er's recommendations, a Labour Congress, suggested by Mr. Smillie at last Thursday's League of Nations Conference, will assemble in one of the committee-rooms of the House of Commons to discuss his project of a general strike against the Government's policy in Russia and their proposal to maintain a system of conscription for the reinforcement of our Armies of Occupation.

Feeling on these subjects runs very high in the councils of organized Labour. There is a strong current of vague sentimental sympathy with the Bolshevik propaganda among the extremists, and there is also a very general hostility to the permanent establishment among us of the Continental system of compulsory military service. Hence the joint meeting in the House of the Labour Party's executive and the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress under the probable chairmanship of Mr. Arthur Henderson.

Mr. Smillie's suggestion of a general strike to coerce the Government is scarcely likely to be adopted. Such action would be obviously undemocratic, and its initiation would establish a precedent fraught with very dangerous possibilities for a future Labour Government.

The professional middle classes which the Labour Party is trying to attract to its ranks are at this moment organizing themselves for the protection of their interests. The Society of Technical Engineers which put in a claim to representation on the National Industrial Council at last Friday's conference in the Central Hall is being organized practically as a trade union of the highly trained persons constituting the technical and managing staff of industry. If the principle of industrial stoppage as an instrument of practical politics were accepted by the Labour Party, this body of experts might easily exercise a very formidable power of opposition to a Labour Government's programme of legislation for the benefit of manual workers. Similar trouble might arise with the union of medical men in relation to hospital work. There would always be the threat of industrial action by the extremists of the Labour ranks.

To-day's meeting is therefore likely to embark on the perilous path advised by Mr. Smillie, but it is assumed that it will decide on the adoption of a very vigorous campaign of constitutional electoral propaganda throughout the kingdom.

"Protection" For Your Home—No "Free Trade" With Decay

Everything with a surface needs surface protection. Not only the outside of your home, but every part of the inside—the floors, walls, furniture, woodwork and meta parts.

To paint, means protection and preservation and money saved on repairs, for wear and decay always start at the surface.

To leave a surface unprotected by paint or varnish, means "free trade" with decay and waste.

Save the surface and you save all. Paint & Varnish

Toledo Preachers

Vainly Protest the Great Fight.
Toledo, May 16.—Protest against the Willard-Dempsey heavy-weight championship fight scheduled to be decided at Bayview Park, a municipal owned plot of ground here, on July 4th, is expected to be in the hands of Governor Cox, of Ohio, and Sheriff Mathias, to-day. These officials together with Mayor Schreiber, of Toledo Ministerial Union, an organization of 250 churches, to prohibit the contest. The protest mailed to the state officials and Mayor Schreiber, yesterday, characterized the coming battle as a "gladiatorial contest worthy of the Roman arena of infamous memory," declared that it would teach youths "to see red," and would result in an invasion of gamblers and thieves to Toledo.
The protest also declared that although the government sanctioned boxing as a war measure, the government also endorsed bayonet fighting, but the same government would not encourage bayonet fighting in peace times.
Mayor Schreiber's answer to the protest was a statement, to-day, that the government had made boxing a part of the curriculum in the army and navy, and that the battle would bring thousands of visitors to Toledo, who will spend hundreds of thousands of dollars. The contest, the mayor's statement added, would stimulate Toledo's business, provide employment to labor, bring the advantages of Toledo, natural and industrial, to notice in every section of the country and result in enriching the city's charity fund by $35,000. Seven per cent. of the gross receipts of the contest are to be donated by Tex Rickard, the promoter, to the fund.
"I am moved to concur in the action of the boxing commission granting authority to the Toledo Athletic Club to hold the bout because of these reasons and because it will be conducted in the same manner that all boxing contests are conducted in this city; that is, under the control of the commission," the mayor said. "The contest will be an exhibition of clean sportsmanship, and free from any fraud in any form."

The "Killer" Whale.
(Scientific American.)
The American Museum of Natural History has recently placed on exhibition a life-sized model of a "Killer" whale or "Orca" which is one of the most ferocious animals that inhabit the sea.
It will attack any living being within its reach, be it fish, flesh or fowl. The animal grows between 20 and 30 feet in length and its mouth is armed with teeth. All other whales are afraid of him, even the great sulphur-bottom—the largest animal the world has ever seen. Frequently these giant whales are captured with badly mutilated flippers, evidently the work of "killer" whales. Apparently their only defence is in flight. The big gray whale is so afraid of the orca that it becomes paralyzed when attacked. The orcas are said to be particularly fond of the tongues of the whale. A number of them will attack a gray whale, worrying it until it opens its mouth, when they will dart in and bite off its tongue. Seals, porpoises and fish are the principal food of the orcas. The seal are not even safe when they are ashore; for at any moment an orca may dart out and seize them if they are near the water's edge. Birds too are captured in this way or when swimming. An orca has even been known to attack men who were on a large cake of floating ice. The whale repeatedly hurled itself upon the ice in its efforts to reach the men.
Apparently the orca has nothing to fear. He is not hunted by man because his blubber contains little oil, and so he is free to roam the seas, a terror to all his inhabitants. He may be found in all oceans, but is more frequently seen in the northern Pacific waters.
