brought back. They succeeded in capturing only three out of nine events—one ladies' singles, one men's singles and one men's doubles. Just wait, though!

A JOY RIDE came to a sad termination at London at 4:45 o'clock Saturday morning. Running wild, with its engine at high speed and with the momentum of its own weight and a down grade hurling it forward, a seven-passenger Packard touring car plunged at a four-foot embankment at the side of the Pipe Line road hill, immediately west of the Woodland cemetery, and leaped the high ridge, then careened downward like a shell over a thirty-foot bank, causing death to one, serious injuries to two and minor injuries to a fourth.

If all the auto mishaps that we are asked not to say anything about were reported at length, we could run an "auto accident column" in the Guide-Advocate once a month. Some people like to read about other people's car troubles, but when anything goes wrong with their own machine about the first thing they do is to rush to the phone and ask the editor to say nothing about it; then others, who do not know the reason why, blame the paper for not reporting Mr.
So-and-So's accident. The editor's lot is not a happy one.

A ST. THOMAS editor, in discussing the frequency of holidays, says:—"For the past season, and the present as well, the merchants of the old town have been up against it, and every idle hour for themselves and clerks means much to many of them. The people, too, have to be accommodated. To make a long tale short, there is too much of this dashed holiday business, in season and out, and the business community would not suffer, neither would the household object, if half of them were eliminated." These sentiments apply to a good many other places in Ontario, especially the smaller towns. Business men at the present time should have every opportunity to make ends meet.

THE regular meeting of the Watford Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. D. Brown on Wednesday evening, July 14th, the president presiding.
Meeting opened by singing "The Maple Leaf." After hearing reports of committees, the Institute voted $10.00 for the Red Cross Fund, to be used where needed most. Miss L. Wang gave a paper on "Women and Nation Building." A solo, sung by Miss M. Richardson, also an instrumental by Misses Jean and Margaret Cameron, and one by Miss Elsie Brown. All were much appreciated.
A vote of thanks was given to all those who took part in the program. The hostess served lemonade and cake at the close of the meeting.—SEC.

THIS section was visited Friday afternoon with the most severe electrical and rain storm of the season. The lightning was very vivid and brought an attack of nervousness to many of the timid ones.
The storm seemed to divide over Watford, passing to the north and south, and considerable damage was done in some places. The barn of Robert Morgan, lot 3, con. 5, Warwick, was struck by lightning and considerably damaged; John Berdan, of the Warwick-Plympton town-line, had a cow killed; the silo of Harvey Parkey, Sutorville, was blown down;
Geo. Lucas, 12th line, Brooke, had a cow killed; and some damage was done on almost every concession. In some places large trees were blown down and standing crops badly lodged.

WITH the object of teaching his employees how to eat only the most nourishing foods, and incidentally reduce their grocery bills by about a million dollars a year, Henry Ford, Detroit's philanthropic multi-millionaire, has directed his attention to dietetics. In the new general hospital now being erected by Mr. Ford a department has been arranged where under the guidance of medical experts, engaged solely for this purpose, men will be taught how and what to eat. The new department is in line with Mr. Ford's propaganda looking toward increased efficiency in his employees.

"Eat only when hungry and then eat less than you feel you need. Try this for a week and I'll guarantee you'll feel much better," is the way the Detroit wonder-worker defines the question of nourishment.

Capt. Swift a Prisoner in Germany

Friday's London Free Press says a Windermere cable to The Free Press from London, England, gives news of several Western Ontario officers whose fate has been in some doubt. In most cases they have been reported as missing, but they are now definitely located at prison camps in Germany. Among these is Capt. T. L. Swift, of Watford, an officer in the 27th Regt., 1st Battalion.

In the engagement at Festubert, on June 15th, Capt. Swift was known to have been left wounded in the second German trench, but it could not be ascertained whether he had died from the effects of his wounds or had been taken prisoner. The cable dispatch to the Free Press was based on the fact that a photograph received in England showed Capt. Swift, together with two other Ontario officers, as prisoners of war in Germany.

Capt. Swift's relatives and numerous friends were pleased to get tidings of him and were much relieved to know that he is alive, even if the fortunes of war had handed out to him the roll of prisoner in the enemy's camp.

Death of Frank Restorick, Jr.

Francis Herman Restorick passed quietly away on Monday morning in his 50th year, after a long and tedious illness. He had been in failing health for some years with tuberculosis and for the past eight months was confined to the house. He was a native of Warwick Village and was well known though the county having been associated with his father in the horse and cattle business for some years and having kept hotel in Warwick Village and Watford. Besides his father, Mr. Frank Restorick, he leaves two brothers, John and Richard, of Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. Henry Conn, of Sarnia, also three half-brothers, Walter, of Toronto, Percy and George,
of Crystal Springs, Sask. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at Warwick Village, Rev. W. M. Shore taking the service. The pall bearers were T.
Roche, J. McManus, J. F. Elliot, T. G.
Mitchell, J. Shaw and G. Early.

A Very Creditable Record

The High School Entrance list published last week is an interesting one, especially to the parents of Watford who have children nearing the High School entrance age. Forty-three candidates wrote here. Of these 35 passed.
The Watford school sent up 14 candidates. Seven of these took honors and were the only honor graduates among those writing here. Of the remaining seven, four headed the pass list in order of merit and the other three were only a few names behind; thus it will be seen that the eleven highest marks obtained by those writing at Watford were made by pupils of the Watford Public School.
Another feature worthy of note is that one of the Watford class, Miss Sadie Howden, obtained the highest marks in the county, thus winning the gold medal. The record made by the Watford school pupils is exceedingly gratifying to all parties interested in educational affairs, and shows that the most thorough and painstaking work is being done by Principal Shrapnell. The record is not only a credit to Principal and pupils, but must be a source of satisfaction to the Board of Education, and also to all parents in the Village who have children working their way up to the entrance tests. Mr. Shrapnell is to be warmly congratulated on placing the Watford Public School in such an enviable position.

CHOP STUFF.

Alvinston has 52 widows and 15 spinsters on the voters' list.

Blenheim school board will expend $2,500 on a new heating plant for the school.

There were 48 applications for teacher in Junior room of the Parkhill public school.

Sturgeon sell for 25 cents per pound at Leamington, and are scarce. No doubt succers are plentiful.

During the storm Friday afternoon the home of Calvin Hodgins, London, in road east, had a chimney shattered; the barn of George Addison, some miles west on the same line, was struck and timbers splintered; the barn of Joseph Scott, near Camlachie, also received a bolt which did some minor damage to the frame.

William Hester, a former resident of Arkona, died at Port Huron, Mich., on June 27th, to which city he moved twelve years ago. He had been employed as an engineer, and the cause of his death was heart trouble. His wife, who had predeceased him several years ago, was Eliza Ann Clark, a daughter of Mrs.
H. Clark, 10th con., Bosanquet.

Alex. Mason, an aged Wabash resident, had a terrible experience with a bull last Thursday, and considers himself fortunate that he escaped with his life, though severely bruised and scarred. He was leading the animal to water when it suddenly turned upon him, and with a fierce lunge jammed him against the fence. In some manner Mr. Mason managed to drag himself over the fence, but not until he had received many bruises in various parts of the body.

William Millman, an old and much respected resident of Bosanquet township, died at his home on the 3rd con. on July 12th, after a lingering illness of eighteen months, in the 76th year of his age. He was born in Devonshire, Eng., and when 20 years of age came to this country. In 1861 he married Amelia Benson. He was a Methodist and was a very ardent worker in the church for a number of years. Besides his widow he leaves six children—John and Thomas Millman, Theford; Mrs. Wm. Fleming, Bosanquet; Mrs. Thomas Porter, Mrs.
John Kirby and Mr. Geo. Millman, of Sarnia.

A meeting was held in the Court House, Sarnia, on June 17th, for the purpose of taking into consideration the re-arrangement of the division courts of the county. It was proposed that The-ford and Courtright (Nos. 6 and 7) be done away with—placing Arkona in Watford (No. 2) and Theford and Bosanquet (No. 6) in Forest (No. 5). No change will be made as far as No. 6 is concerned. Through the efforts of Dr.
Marty, M.P., and a petition containing the names of over three hundred ratepayers, which was presented at Toronto last week, word has been received here that no change will be made here.—
Theford Tribune.

Miss Sadie Howden, of Watford, the 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W.
Howden.

Six hundred candidates wrote and Miss Howden headed the list in the number of marks obtained, getting 558 out of a possible 650, or 85 per cent. A West Lambton pupil came next with a record of 557 marks. The medal, after being suitably engraved, will be presented at the High School commencement exercises in the fall. In the meantime Miss Sadie is receiving the congratulations of her many friends, both old and young, for the excellent showing she made at the exams.

Won Gold Medal

The gold medal offered for competition by Dr. Flett, of Detroit, a former Lambton teacher, to be awarded to the public school pupil in Lambton obtaining the highest standing at the Junior High School examinations, was won by Miss Sadie Howden, of Watford, the 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W.
Howden.

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Flover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Flover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

WATFORD, JULY 23, 1915.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Germany gives a semi-official denial to the Russian report of the destruction of a German battleship. In view of past events we're inclined to believe Petrograd.

Buffalo Express: The captain of the American liner Philadelphia gives this information about the way British vessels hunt for submarines. Two fast patrol boats take each an end of a steel wire net which sinks about 25 feet below the surface. When the hawseers show a heavy strain the boats turn inward toward each other and thus wrap the net around the submarine which it is supposed to have caught. Then they cut it loose, and net and submarine go to the bottom. It is said British officers believe that more than a score of German submarines have been destroyed.

An invalided officer, a man of sober mind and mature judgement, a man who has lived for months in the Valley of the Shadow of Death, and who has come home seared to the very soul with the foulness of Hell, tells of how in France and Belgium every house visited by German soldiers was violated. Not a woman, not even the young girls escaped the clutches of the miscreants. Girls were even carried to the trenches and kept there by these men who are built in God's image. There are things which cannot be written, but they may be visualized. They will never be forgotten.

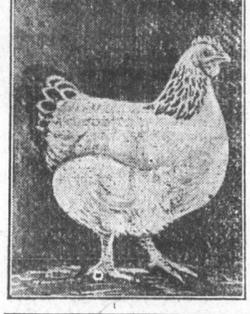

Worms sap the strength and undermine the vitality of children. Strengthen them by using Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator to drive out the parasites.

POULTRY and EGGS

CAPONIZE COCKERELS.

Fowls So Treated Give Better Returns Than as Spring Broilers.

Caponizing the cockerels is the efficient method of handling, writes H. M. Cuddeback in the American Agriculturist. A capon is an unsexed cockerel. The advantages of caponizing are about the same as those gained by altering cattle or swine—that is, the fowls grow larger, the young males are quiet and more easily fattened, and the flesh is more tender and of better quality. Although capons are only a little larger than cockerels of the same age during the first part of their growth, when put on the market they sell for a higher price to the pound. They will not get tough and starchy as cockerels will when mature, but stay tender and can be sold when the market is most advantageous.

The Columbian Rock breed of hen appeared in 1807 and is a single comb sport from the Columbian Wyandotte, which originated in a cross of White Wyandotte male and a Light Brahma hen. The Columbian has the beautiful markings of the Light Brahma and the size and characteristics of the Rocks. It has a yellow, juicy, meaty carcass and lays a goodly quantity of eggs. The hen shown is a Columbian Rock.

The best fowls for caponizing are the large, rapid growing breeds such as the Plymouth Rock, Rhode Island Red, Wyandotte, Orpington and Brahma. The latter breed is used by specialists in capon growing. It is sometimes crossed with the Plymouth Rock breed. Very often the cross makes a capon weighing from twelve to fifteen pounds. However, the smaller birds, such as Plymouth Rock, weighing from six to nine pounds when eight months old, are more in demand. It is uncertain and not desirable for the average person to cross breed. Plymouth Rock capons grow fast, have a large breast and the desirable yellow skin and legs. Then, too, Plymouth Rock pullets which can be conveniently raised at the same time are good layers and early maturing, combined with good weight when killed.

The caponizing operation is simple and can be done by the farmer with a little practice. A good set of instruments may be purchased directly from manufacturers of surgical instruments or through poultry supply dealers. Complete directions for caponizing are furnished with the instruments.

The average farmer raises about 200 chickens a year, about half of which will be cockerels. If they are sold as spring cockerels the farmer has about 500 pounds at 22 cents a pound, or $110, but if they are caponized he has about 700 pounds at 28 cents, or $196. That will be $86 additional receipts for the two or three days' extra work in caponizing the fowls. Professionals will caponize for 5 cents a bird, and an expert operator will caponize from forty to sixty fowls in an hour. The above figures are conservative. Moreover, the fact that capons eat less than cockerels must be considered.

Animal Food For Poultry. Remember that until the bugs and insects come the laying hen must be fed something in the way of animal food. Fresh ground bones with some meat on them is the best food of this kind. Then come good beef scraps. In lieu of either of these skim milk or buttermilk will take the place of meat. All grain and no meat for the laying hen spells the difference between failure and success in the poultry business.—Kansas Farmer.

Ashes in the Hen Yard. Coal and wood ashes are good things to carry to the poultry houses these days. From the coal ashes and clinkers the hens can pick many a piece that answers the purpose of grit, and if the coal ashes are sifted they make the best kind of a dust bath for the hen. From the wood ashes the fowls can pick lots of good in the way of a blood purifier.

Millet For Poultry. Millet seed is an excellent poultry feed, especially when you want the hens to do some exercising. The seed is so small that it takes quite a time for them to pick up any great quantity of it. It should be scattered in the litter of chaff, cut straw or hay. It will keep the hens bustling, and it is the busy hen that does the laying. It is also fine for young chicks.

WOMEN SOLDIERS.

They Posed as Men and Fought With the British Army.

The British army has had its women soldiers, and two of them are buried in the cemetery of Chelsea hospital. One of these dames—Hannah Snell, a truculent looking person, whose portrait is preserved in the great hall of the hospital, served in the siege of Pondicherry and was badly wounded, her sex being discovered when she was removed to the hospital. She became a pensioner and wore on occasions the three cornered hat and uniform coat of Chelsea and was at her own request buried in the graveyard of the hospital. Christina Davis was the other female soldier buried in this cemetery. She is described as a "fat, jolly woman."

Another Englishwoman who successfully posed as a man and enlisted as a soldier was Phoebe Hessel, who was a private in the Fifth foot regiment and fought at Fontenoy in 1745, under the Duke of Cumberland, being severely wounded. Ultimately she died at Brighton in 1821 at the age of 108.

The most famous Englishwoman "soldier," however, was "Dr. James Barry," who joined the medical corps in 1813 and served at Waterloo and in the Crimea. In 1853, after many promotions, she became inspector general, and it was not until many years later that the fact that she was a woman was discovered.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

ELECTRICITY AND WATER.

Little Danger in Turning a Hose on Heavily Charged Wires.

The slight danger that firemen run through the electric current passing from heavily charged wires up the stream of water they are squirting is proved by an experiment conducted by Ugo Tartaglioni and reported in La Scienza per Tutti.

A trolley car wire charged with a direct current of 525 volts had one end grounded; on the other end he directed a stream from a hose with a nozzle fifteen millimeters in diameter. At 2.20 meters distance a voltmeter attached to the nozzle registered twenty volts. At sixty-five centimeters distance it registered seventy volts and at twenty centimeters 210 volts. The average man can stand a current of fifty volts without serious shock, so a fireman who holds his nozzle five or six feet from a live wire runs no great danger.

Mr. Tartaglioni made the same experiment on two lines of alternating current, one with 2,300, the other with 4,600 volts, and the voltmeter did not register any current in the stream of water, although a slight shock was perceptible when he put his hand into it. With a chemical extinguisher he got a current of 1,550 volts at 225 millimeters from a wire with a current of 2,050 volts.

Ypres and Death.

In Holland and Flanders, according to the Manchester Guardian, Ypres is connected in the mind of the people with the idea of death. If a Dutchman or a Fleming wishes to describe a particularly lugubrious person he will say, "Hij ziet er uit als de dood van Ypres." "He looks like the death of Ypres." This expression has been proverbial since Ypres was ravaged by the plague in 1349; "the death of Ypres" is a vivid expression like our "black death." But it is also taken literally, for Ypres is in sober truth one of the dead cities of Flanders. It is more dead than "Bruges la morte," which owes its reputation in this respect more to George Rodenbach's novel and the verses of other artists than to actual fact. "Ypres sleeps and Bruges slumbers," says a Dutch writer of travel pictures.

The Glory of the War.

At this stage of the war the only virtues demanded from the peoples who are vicariously bearing the burden of the active side of the hostilities are those of patience and confidence. The latter is easily accorded, the former, light to begin with, daily becomes more grievous to be borne. Much of the anxiety visible in the current discussion of the war is evidently due to the paucity of authentic information. The public is beset with reports, usually belated that only partially reveal what is actually transpiring. Absolute concealment is less nerve-racking than glimpses into the latest methods of war.

There may be reason for the policy adopted by the British censors in refusing to identify regiments and locations of the expeditionary army. Many deeds of magnificent bravery have been rewarded, but who can doubt that many more have passed unwitnessed and unreported? Regiments from all parts of the British Isles and from all parts of the British Empire have been practically wiped out, have given their lives willingly that the cause of freedom and self-government may be saved. The glory of this war is big enough to go round and needs no particular estimate.

His Mother's Gift

It Came to Him on St. Patrick's Day.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Emmet Doolan, a young man living in County Tipperary, Ireland, was one day walking on the bank of the river Suir doing a hard job of thinking. His eyes were on the ground before him, and so intent was he on the subject that he did not even hear a bird chirping in a tree above his head. Suddenly he was stopped both in his progress and his reverie by a girl who stood directly before him and was looking at him with a merry face.

"What are you thinking about, Emmet, that you can't see a yard before you?"

A change came over the young man's face at sight of the cheery maiden before him. His own lighted up with a momentary pleasure.

"I'm goin' to America, Eileen," he said, "and, considerin' that I haven't a penny to my name, I was wonderin' how I was goin' to get there."

It was now the girl's turn to look sober. The twinkle left her eye, and the smile left her lips.

"And what are you goin' to America for, Emmet?" she asked in a tremulous voice.

"To make me fortune."

"And leave your poor old father?"

"Yes."

"And your mother—what will she do without the boy she loves so well?"

"Yes, I must leave both father and mother. I'm doin' 'em no good here, and once in America, where they say there's plenty of work for all, I may be able to send 'em enough to make 'em comfortable."

They walked to the bank of the river and sat down on the turf under a tree. Eileen had spoken one word for Emmet's parents and two for herself. The two had grown up together, and, though they had not been aware of it, this intention of Emmet to put 3,000 miles of ocean between them had revealed it to Eileen and had given a glimmer of it to Emmet. The mind of man full of plans for conquest does not so readily settle upon the sentimental features of life as the woman whose inactive sphere gives her more opportunity. Eileen sat mute and dejected.

"You don't approve of my plan?" said Emmet. "Will you tell me why?"

To this there was no answer.

"You're thinkin' maybe that it's foolish for a man to talk about goin' to a foreign country when he has no money to pay his way?"

Still there was no reply. Eileen sat looking down on the gently flowing river beneath them, apparently as much wrapped in feeling as Emmet had been in thought when they met.

"If it's leavin' father and mother you're thinkin' of I believe I can do 'em more service by goin' where I'll get plenty of work and good pay than stayin' here, where there's little work and poor pay."

Even this suggestion failed to elicit any word from Eileen. Emmet was looking down upon her and saw that her eyes were wet. "Tell me, Eileen," he said softly, "why you oppose my goin' to America?"

She looked up at him, and at last he received his answer. "I don't want you to go."

The few words, spoken almost in a whisper, revealed to the man not only that the girl loved him, but revealed to him that she was as much to him as he was to her. It was the only proposition ever made between them that their lives should be linked, and, singularly enough, it came from the girl. But it sufficed for these two lowly creatures, and it enabled Emmet to speak more plainly—to tell her that he would not only send his parents the wherewithal to make them comfortable, but would work hard and save every penny that he might have enough beyond what he needed for them to send for her, and they would find a home in the new country where—so they believed—all grew rich.

How Emmet Doolan managed to get to America without the wherewithal to pay his way concerns this story only so far as to show that a man who could accomplish such a feat was bound to succeed. And Emmet did succeed in time, though he found it uphill work. Had his mind not been fixed on a definite purpose he would probably not have had the stimulus to work and pinch that he might accomplish it and attain his goal.

Eileen was not the girl to let her lover do all that they required. She obtained a position as lady's maid in the home of a wealthy family in Dublin, where she received good wages, nearly all of which she saved. Long before Emmet was able to send his father and mother any funds Eileen was sending them small amounts, which she permitted them to think came from their son in America. They discovered the deception in time, but not till Emmet himself began to remit.

Of the two lovers Eileen advanced the more rapidly so far as savings were concerned. Emmet had his trade to learn, and it was hard snatching at times even to make a living for himself. He was not only a faithful worker, but had a mechanical bent which served him well. Even as a helper he managed to save a little, though he sometimes went hungry to do so. But when he became so proficient in his trade as to command the regular union wage his finances began to improve rapidly.

All this took time. It was several years before he was able to earn his $4 a day, and even then there was not always work to do. It was not till Emmet had been in America four years that he began to put aside a fund to bring Eileen to him. This fund he started at the beginning of a new year and calculated that he would have enough by the following autumn to buy Eileen's ticket across the water. Unfortunately he was laid up by illness soon after he began to put aside this fund and was idle for two months.

Eileen received a letter early in January telling her of her lover's intentions and another shortly afterward that he was laid up with an illness. She had saved enough money to pay her way to America and made up her mind to go to Emmet of her own accord since he was not able to send for her. She came to this resolution in February, but it was March before she could make her arrangements to depart. Then, too, she must go home to say goodbye to her parents and receive a blessing from Emmet's father and mother to take to him. However, she got away at last, anxious to reach her lover, who was still an invalid.

Eileen's intention was to surprise Emmet, and in none of her letters did she give him the slightest hint of her coming. She wrote him that she longed to be able to nurse him back to health, and he replied gratefully that if she were with him he would recover more rapidly, but his greatest disappointment was that he was using up the fund he had started with which to bring her to him in necessary expenses, including doctor's bills.

The last letter Emmet received from home before Eileen sailed was from his mother. She was a very pious woman and had often written her son to be sure not to neglect his church duties. In this letter she told him that she was sending him a gift that he would receive on or about St. Patrick's day. She believed that it would make him well, for she sent with it her blessing.

Emmet was very curious to know what this gift was his mother was sending him and wondered how it would come. He saw no way except by express, and, although his mother had his address, he sent a postcard to each express company's local office that it might not be delayed for want of his street and number.

On the morning of St. Patrick's day Emmet's gift had not arrived. There was a telephone in the house in which he lived, and since he was too weak to leave his bed he asked his landlady to telephone the express offices to ask if any package had been received for him. Every office declared that nothing had been received for him, and he was disappointed. About 11 o'clock in the morning the landlady came to his room and said to him:

"Your St. Patrick's day gift from Ireland has arrived. Shall I bring it up?"

"Of course. Bring it up at once."

"I don't know that I'm able to carry it."

"Is it very heavy?"

"I think it must weigh about 100 pounds."

"Well, well! I suppose it must stay there till I can get up and handle it myself."

"Maybe it can come of itself."

Before Emmet could reply to this apparently absurd proposition the door was flung open, and Eileen ran to Emmet's bed and, kneeling beside it, threw her arms about him.

"I'm the gift your mother sent you, Emmet," she said. "Both she and your father hoped I would arrive on St. Patrick's day. They said they'd be thinkin' of us all this blessed day as bein' together."

"Thanks be to God!" was all the invalid could say, clasping his arms about Eileen.

"And now that I've come you must get well right away."

"That I will. I'm thinkin' I'm well already. But how did you manage about the money for your passage, Eileen, seein' I had none to send you?"

"I saved it from my wages."

"At that moment there came strains of martial music from without."

"It's the parade," said Emmet. "I'm thinkin' I'll get up and we'll have a look at it."

"Are you strong enough?"

"Strong enough? I could carry an ox on me back now."

Emmet, wrapped in the bedclothing, with Eileen's assistance, managed to get to a window, where a chair was placed for him. The arrival of his love, the sight of the paraders moving by, the sound of bugle and beat of drum, were so inspiring that he said if he had known how strong he was he would be marching with them, and Eileen needed to hold him in his chair to keep him from starting up. She managed to keep him quiet by giving him a green flag to wave to the boys below, while with the other hand he held hers under the window sill, where they could not be seen.

Under such a stimulus Emmet could not be kept in bed. He was soon up for good, the banes between him and Eileen were published in the church and they were duly married, but this was not till Emmet had returned to work and they had hired rooms, which they entered immediately after the wedding.

All this occurred years ago. Emmet is now a contractor and has built many a structure of which he may be justly proud and which together have made him prosperous. He and Eileen have a large family. The holiday the children enjoy most is Christmas, but for their parents St. Patrick's day is nearest to their hearts.

A SURE CORRECTIVE OF FLATULENCY. When the undigested food lies in the stomach it throws off gases causing pains and oppression in the stomachic region. The belching or eructation of these gases is offensive and the only way to prevent them is to restore the stomach to proper action. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do this. Simple directions go with each packet and a course of them taken systematically is certain to effect a cure.

Spain has developed only about one fifth of its coal lands, the area of which is nearly double that of France's and only one third less than England's.

More Boys After Battles

In England there are, according to the last census, 1,068 females to every 1,000 males. In other words, women in the British islands outnumber men by nearly 1,100,000.

In most civilized countries the case is similar. Women are in a considerable majority. Among the few European exceptions are the Albanians and Montenegrins. Both these are warlike races, which even in times of peace, constantly carry arms. In both cases men are slightly more numerous than women.

Among the Afghans and the hill tribes of Northern India where tribal vendettas are always raging, the case is the same. There, where men are constantly meeting with violent ends, it might well be supposed that women would be in a considerable majority. This is not the fact, for mother Nature balances matters, and the proportion of boy babies born exceeds girl babies by nearly five to four.

After the Franco-German war of 1870, it was noticed that in both countries for some years afterwards, more boys were born than girls. It was as if Nature had set herself deliberately to repair the upset in her usual arrangements which had been caused by the death of so many men.

By far the most startling instance of this sort of thing is afforded by the South American Republic of Paraguay. From 1664 to 1870 Uruguay joined with Brazil and Argentina in trying to destroy Paraguay. Never in modern history was any country so terribly used. Before that war, Paraguay's population was 1,337,439. After it, she could number but 221,079. Of these only 23,746 were males of over fifteen years of age, while there were 106,254 women of over fifteen.

For years afterwards boy babies outnumbered girls by nearly three to one! Within less than thirty years the sexes were again equal in numbers.

We may be sure that the next census will bring to light some startling figures as regards the birth-rate in this country, and, however many of our brave fellows fall before we settle with Germany, the loss will eventually be made good.

Soldiers and Cigarettes

It is gratifying to observe a declining tendency in certain directions to curb the cigarette smoking at the front. No one with a sense of humane feeling would wish to deny the consoling weed to the poor, tired fellows at the front. A few weeks ago a nurse, who had been at the front, was heard describe a pathetic incident of a youthful soldier, who was lying apparently happy with both arms smashed or blown off, while a sympathetic nurse was putting a cigarette to the lad's lips. The nurse said that the expression on the soldier's face would live with her forever.

Britain's Fate It Defeated

(Extract from a speech by Rudyard Kipling)

"There has been nothing like the horror of their fate (Belgium's) in all history, and this system is in full working order within fifty miles of the English coast. Where I live I can hear the guns that are trying to extend it. The same system exists in such parts of France and Poland as are in German hands. But whatever has been dealt out to Belgium, France and Poland will be England's fate tenfold if we fail to subdue the Germans. That we shall be broken, plundered, robbed and enslaved like Belgium will be but the first part of the matter. Over and above this, no pledge we can offer, no guarantee we can give will be accepted by Germany as binding. She has broken her own most solemn oaths, pledges and obligations, and by the very fact of her existence she is bound to trust nothing and to recognize nothing except immediate superior force backed by illimitable cruelty. So you see there are no terms possible. Realize, too, if allies are beaten there will be no spot on the globe where a soul can escape from the domination of this enemy of mankind. There has been childish talk that the Western Hemisphere would offer a refuge from oppression. Put that thought from your mind. If the allies were defeated, Germany would not need to send a single battleship over the Atlantic. She would issue an order, and it would be obeyed. Civilization would be bankrupt, and the western world would be taken over with the rest of the wreckage by Germany, the receiver. So you see there is no retreat possible. There are no terms and no retreat in this war. It must go forward, and with those men of England who are eligible for service, but who have not yet offered themselves, the decision of war rests."

New York Herald: The only persons now engaged in a crusade to make this county a "militaristic" nation are those who advocate a premature peace in Europe. If that should come the United States would have to vastly increase its army and its navy in self-defence against its "Day".

It is not improbable that a coalition Government will be formed in British Columbia for the duration of the war. The question has been in the air for the past few months and with the return of Premier McBride it is again to the fore. Though no definite steps have been taken it is said that not a few leading Liberals would be willing to accept positions in the Cabinet, though the rank and file are reported strongly opposed to the proposal. No election will take place for some months yet, perhaps not until the fall of next year, and in the meantime it is suggested in many quarters that a coalition ministry will do much towards solving some knotty problems that confront the Government at the present time.

War Notes

London, July 20.—The Serbian armies are being re-equipped and reorganized, according to semi-official advices reaching London, and will soon be in a position to resume the offensive.

"An explosive bomb of greater power than anything hitherto used in the war is being investigated by the greatest scientists of France," stated Arthur Lynch in a speech in the House of Commons this afternoon.

"If it is found practicable it will be invaluable to the Allies," he added.

A fleet of 35 Turkish sailing vessels, laden with war materials for the Turkish army of the Caucasus, has been destroyed by Russian torpedo-boat destroyers, according to a despatch from Sebastopol to Reuter's Telegram Co. The sailing vessels were on a voyage to Trebizond, a seaport of Asiatic Turkey on the Black Sea. The crews of the Turkish ships were made prisoners by the destroyers.

Field Marshal Sir John French to-day made the following announcement in a report to the War Office:—

"Yesterday evening, after successfully exploding a mine just west of the Chateau Hooge, east of Ypres, our troops occupied about 150 yards of the enemy's trenches. This gain has since been consolidated.

"We captured fifteen prisoners, including two officers, and also two machine guns. Two other German machine guns were destroyed by the explosion.

"Elsewhere on the front there is nothing to report."

Vanna (via London), July 20.—Radom, capital of the province of Radom, which lies 77 miles south of Warsaw and 30 miles southeast of Ivangorod, was captured to-day by the Teutonic allies, according to an official communication issued this evening. The acute peril to Warsaw is accentuated by the Russian official communication, which says that German columns are within artillery range of the fortress of Novo Georgievsk, the key to the capital from the north-west, and only twenty miles from it.

A Prediction

London, July 20.—Writing in The World, W. F. Wend-Fenton says:—

"In my judgment Warsaw is certain to fall within a fortnight and within 60 days from now America will have declared war on German merchant vessels in New York harbor and will have placed her powerful navy at the disposal of the allies.

"I predict that this step on the part of the United States will be the signal for Germany to open peace negotiations, having Warsaw and Poland to the credit of her account, and the excuse which America's intervention will provide, to save her face to her own people.

"When these peace negotiations will prove successful will depend on the ability of Germany's statesmen and the attitude of Russia."

The Cardinal's Enemy

A Bit of History That is Also a Romance.

By F. A. MITCHEL

If one were asked what period in history furnished the most themes for stories he might be right in replying that containing the administration of the government of Louis XIII. of France by Cardinal Richelieu. Louis' queen, Anne of Austria, was a bitter opponent of the cardinal, and what Richelieu was to the king the Duchess de Chevreuse was to the queen. The duchess was one of the most beautiful, the most attractive and the most intriguing women who ever lived.

After the exposure of a treasonable plot the cardinal banished her to Lorraine, where she infatuated the king, Louis XIII, mixing him up in another conspiracy. The cardinal's policy forbade him to imprison a woman, so after banishment from France had failed he sent Mme. Chevreuse to a country estate she owned. There, having no better subject for her fascination, she bewitched an octogenarian official.

This amusement failing to satisfy her, she turned her attention to another intrigue with a view to overthrowing the queen's and her own detested enemy, Richelieu.

At this time the queen was secretly corresponding with those opposing the cardinal, among them Mme. de Chevreuse. The person who conducted this correspondence was one La Porte, her secretary. He was the keeper of her cipher code, translated her letters into it, forwarded them to their destination and received the replies, handing them in the same way.

But the cardinal was watching and suspected the frequent goings and comings of the man. One of the queen's supposed adherents was won over and told La Porte that he was going to Tours, where Mme. de Chevreuse was held in restriction, and asked if he had any message for her. If so he would carry it. La Porte replied that he had a letter and would bring it to him. While doing so he was arrested with the queen's letter on his person and lodged in the Bastille. The letter was not important, but the queen and her friend had been forbidden to correspond. The cardinal at once ordered the seizure of the private papers of both the queen and the duchess.

When the queen was accused of treason she falsely made an oath that she had not corresponded with any foreign power. Richelieu knew better, and on promise of the king's pardon the queen confessed that she had written her relatives in Madrid and in Brussels, but not on matters of state. La Porte declared that he had carried no letters for the queen except to Mme. de Chevreuse. Knowing that La Porte's statement and hers would not agree, Anne desired to post him on what she had declared and ask him to make the same statement. This she hoped would satisfy Richelieu and prevent his investigating further.

But how reach La Porte in his cell at the Bastille? So carefully watched was he that a warden quitted him only for a few hours during the day and slept in his cell at night. One of the queen's maids of honor and devoted to her, Mlle. de Hautfort, not only suggested a plan of conveying a letter to La Porte, but volunteered to carry it herself.

The Chevalier de Jars, who had been involved in a former conspiracy against the cardinal, was confined in the Bastille and occupied a cell directly over that of La Porte, though between the chevalier's and La Porte's cell were two others. It was hoped by the queen's adherents that De Jars might find some way of conveying a letter from the queen to La Porte. De Jars had suffered a paralytic stroke and was allowed the privileges of an invalid, being permitted to receive friends and converse with them in the courtyard of the prison.

Mlle. de Hautfort early one morning issued from the palace of the Louvre before the inmates were awake, being dressed in the costume of a maidservant. Mademoiselle's hair, which was luxuriant and beautiful, was concealed under a large coil, and she was robed in loose gown which concealed her superb figure. Calling a sacre, she was driven to the Bastille, where she asked to see the Chevalier de Jars, saying that she was a lady's maid of a niece of the chevalier and bore a message for him.

The hour was before the prisoners' time of rising, and the queen's maid of honor was obliged to wait in the guard-room among a lot of soldiers of low degree. After some time the chevalier arrived and asked what was wanted. Mademoiselle drew him into the court and, raising her coil, showed him who she was and handed him the queen's letter with her majesty's request that he find means to convey it to La Porte.

De Jars was no coward, as he had demonstrated in the schemes in which he had embarked to overthrow the cardinal. Nevertheless he hesitated to become mixed up in a scheme which it discovered would cost him his head. But when mademoiselle reminded him of the terrible risk she was herself running he consented.

The queen's messenger returned to the palace without having been discovered. De Jars, who was full of resource, worked out the problem of getting the queen's letter to La Porte. Had the latter occupied a cell directly beneath his own he might contrive to get the letter through the floor. But to pass it through other floors was impossible. The next cell below the chevalier's was occupied by some men who had been implicated in an insurrection in Bordeaux. The next cell below theirs held the Baron de Tenace and a man named Revellon, who had been a servant of a nobleman who had lost his head for a conspiracy against the cardinal. The chevalier planned to pass the queen's letter through these two cells to that of La Porte.

De Jars enlisted in his service a young fellow named Bois d'Arcy, the valet of a prisoner who was confined with his master. D'Arcy while in attendance on his master at the hour of exercise found a broken stone with a sharp point, which by eluding the observation of the sentinel he managed to slip in his pocket and at the same time asked the aid of the Bordeaux prisoners. Any prisoner was ready to do anything for another unfortunate, and they at once granted the request. Then they were given the broken stone for an implement.

The men succeeded in boring a hole through the floor to the cell next below and passed the letter through to Baron de Tenace and Revellon. These made another hole in the floor of their own cell and had not La Porte been so closely watched would have had no difficulty in passing the message on to the queen. They learned that the warden usually left La Porte for a few minutes in the morning. Waiting till they heard him go out, they passed down the letter.

The goal was won. La Porte made his confession tally with that of Anne of Austria, and the cardinal for once was outwitted. Being convinced that he had got the truth and the whole truth, he advised the king to pardon his wife, whom Richelieu believed to have been led into mischief by Mme. de Chevreuse. The pardon was granted on condition that the queen would hold no further correspondence with the mischief maker.

Anne, whose conscience was very elastic, regarded this promise solely as pertaining to letters. Through Mlle. de Hautfort she had contrived to inform the duchess that if their machinations against the cardinal were going well she would receive a prayer book bound in green. If there was danger it would be bound in red and she must look out for herself. Through some misunderstanding Mme. de Chevreuse one day received a prayer book bound in red. She decided upon flight. An official whom she had enthrallied provided her with directions for proceeding to Spain, and thither she directed her course. Ordering her carriage, she gave out that she intended to visit friends in the neighborhood. She set out near evening and as soon as it was dark ordered her coachman to stop and stepped out disguised as a man in a long cloak and riding boots. A horse was waiting for her, and mounting, followed by two servants also mounted, she rode southward.

In her excitement she had left in the carriage the official's directions as to the route and was obliged to proceed without them. Riding all night, she arrived at a town near which a nobleman, La Rochefoucauld, was at the time stopping. He had carried messengers between her and the queen, and she knew she could trust him; but not willing to compromise him, she wrote him as a stranger who had killed a man in a duel and was flying from the authorities, begging him to send a carriage and a valet.

La Rochefoucauld sent the carriage and the valet, and the duchess set out for another of his houses occupied by a gentleman in his service named Malbast, where she arrived before daylight the next morning. Mme. Malbast recognized the valet as a servant of La Rochefoucauld, and the man told her that the gentleman he was conducting was an intimate friend of his master and related the story about the duel. M. Malbast asked the duchess how he could serve her. She replied that she would tell him tomorrow and asked him to go with her, since the two men she had brought from town might be recognized, and she wished to leave them behind until she should send for them.

Malbast consented, the carriage was sent back, and, mounting a horse which was provided for her, the duchess proceeded on the journey, accompanied by her host and the valet. She had bandaged her head to conceal a wound that she said she had received in the duel.

The hairbreadth escapes from recognition that were made by the fair fugitive were many. She was constantly meeting persons who knew her and was obliged to resort to various devices to avoid acknowledging her identity. One man she met said that if she were dressed as a woman he would certainly mistake her for the Duchess de Chevreuse. She replied that she was a relative of the duchess.

Despite the fact that as soon as her flight was discovered the cardinal sent after her in great haste, she reached Spain, where she was safe.

Philip IV., brother of Anne of Austria, was then king of Spain, and as soon as he learned that his sister's adherent was within his dominions he ordered that she be received with great distinction and sent several royal carriages, each drawn by six horses and occupied by his representatives, to fetch her to the capital. On her arrival the people turned out en masse to see the distinguished stranger who had come to them after so many romantic adventures. The king, like all other men, was captivated with her, and the queen showed her every attention.

From Spain the duchess went to England, whose queen, Henriette Maria, was a sister of the king of France and a bitter enemy of the cardinal who dominated her brother. There she received no less a welcome than in Spain.

Just Why We Sneeze.

Sneezing may be due to one of a number of causes. A bright light will cause many people to sneeze, as also the pollen of certain plants, while there are few people but will sneeze in the presence of dust. When you have a cold the sneezing is due to an attempt by nature to cure you. She is trying to make you sneeze for the same purpose that she wants you to shiver—to generate heat for warming the blood and preventing you from taking more cold—to help relieve the cold you have. For one does not sneeze with his nose, but with the entire body. During the act every muscle of the body gives a jump, as it were. It goes into a sort of spasm that warms the entire system.—New York American.

Forgot Her Sister.

A woman from a small town, in the city to do some shopping, stepped up to a clerk at the hosiery counter in one of the department stores. "Say," she said, "I want to get two pairs of stockings like my sister from Kentucky bought here last August." "I don't know your sister, and I probably would not remember what she bought, even if I were acquainted with her," explained the clerk. "You must remember my sister," insisted the customer. "She is a little, heavy set woman."—Indianapolis News.

The Duke's Walk.

"To meet one in the duke's walk." This is an invitation to fight a duel. In the vicinity of Holywood house, Scotland, there is a place called the duke's walk, so called from its being the favorite promenade of the Duke of York, afterward King James II. This walk is said to have been the common rendezvous for settling affairs of honor, as the site of the British museum was in England.

Revenge!

"Why are you so crazy to take mud baths?" "There's nothing the matter with you." "It's this way, doctor. I was brought up in a lace collar and a Fauntleroy suit. And I always vowed that I would get my share of playing in the mud some day."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It Made a Difference.

"Billers is always talking about his love for the plain people." "Yes?" "Well, the other day somebody called his daughter plain, and he was hotter than a red headed hornet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Curious Old Custom.

In Peru it was once the custom for domestic servants to have two of their upper front teeth extracted. Their absence indicated servitude.

Hard and soft corns both yield to Holloway's Corn Cure, which is intrinsically safe to use, and certain and satisfactory in its action.

Wb-n cooked by electricity meats shrink less than when cooked by coal.

POULTRY CACKLES.

For market profits the Toulouse and Embden varieties of geese are about equal.

Better have a few chicks and feed them well than a lot of scrawny, underfed youngsters.

Our common grains are the best foods for poultry. Feed well, but see that there is no waste.

Pinhead oatmeal is one of the best things that can be fed to young chicks. Cracked rice is also a good feed, though it is better when boiled.

A good ration for ducklings is composed of four parts bran, one part middlings, half part beef scrap, a little sharp clean sand and a pinch of salt. Mix with milk and feed in a crumbly state.

RAISING GEESSE IS EASY AND PROFITABLE

For the keeping of geese little if any special equipment is needed. They seldom seek the shelter of buildings, spending virtually all of the time in the open, regardless of cold or storm. Of course it is always well to provide some inexpensive place to which the birds may go if they wish, but these coops need not be large in size and may be most simply and roughly constructed.

A liberal sized pasture must be supplied. One containing a stream, pond or marshy land is best, though sufficient water to permit a swimming place is not absolutely required.

If it is desired that the geese be kept confined to a certain tract of land this may be inclosed with a low fence of wire netting. However, free range is best and is usually given where conditions permit.

Geoslings may be successfully hatched in incubators and reared in brooders, but the natural method is used almost exclusively.

Give the geoslings reasonable protection and a plot of tender grass and they will thrive without much attention. It is possible to grow them on no other feed than that found on a good range, but this is not a satisfactory plan. They develop slowly and fail to reach satisfactory weight.

Geoslings do not require the services of a French chef. A mash mixture of American poultrymen recognize six breeds of geese as being pure bred—the Toulouse, Embden, African, Chinese, Egyptian and the wild or Canadian. Among these the Toulouse is the largest and is a fine market bird. The White Embden is also a favorite market bird. It possesses the advantage of white plumage, which is a big factor in profit producing ability, since white geese feathers are in strong demand at top prices. The goose shown is an Embden.

two-thirds wheat bran and one-third cornmeal, with a little beef scrap added after the third day, is about all they require. Feed the moist mash three times daily and watch them grow.

Fresh water in abundance is positively required, and green feed must be given if the supply of grass is limited. Provide plenty of shade and protection against sudden, chilling showers.

In from three to four months the youngsters will have reached market size. For two or three weeks before killing them induce them to eat heavily, increasing the amount in the mash until it comprises two-thirds of the mixture.

Market geoslings are killed by bleeding in the mouth and striking on the head with a short club. They are picked clean, excepting the first joint of the wings and the upper half of the neck.

Special care must be used to insure thorough cooling before shipping.

Any large city furnishes a good market. During the summer months hotels at summer resorts are especially good customers.

ANIMAL TOILETS.

Cleanliness Rules and Some Creatures Wash Each Other.

Most animals love cleanliness. We have all seen sparrows fill their feathers with dust and then shake themselves until they are clean. This is one of their ways of washing. And we have all watched the cat lick herself till she is spotless and shining. For her toilet the cat makes use of her tongue, tail and her paws. A cat's tongue is rough, having all over it tiny horny papillae that are directed inward. Pussy brushes herself all over with her tongue, using the hard rough pads under her paws upon those parts that are beyond the reach of her tongue. Her claws she uses as a comb to take tangles and matted foreign substances out of her fur. She also picks her teeth with her claws.

The cat uses the pads of her feet like a sponge, moistening them with saliva and passing them repeatedly over her head and face. Finally, to complete her toilet, she gives herself a few whisks with her tail.

Some animals wash each other. Condors, vultures and eagles after a feast of carrion fly to the nearest water and splash about in it until their feathers are clean. The care that animals which live together in communities take to keep their homes clean is astonishing and is well seen in the nests of moles and especially among the bees and ants.—New York World.

SAFETY FROM FIRE.

A Method For Insuring Escape From a Crowded Building.

In discussing the best means of emptying a loft or factory building of its occupants in time of fire or panic, H. F. J. Porter, expert on safety from fire and known as the father of the fire drill, points out a method for solving the escape from a crowded building.

This method is a fire wall so arranged on a building as practically to bisect it. This wall must be continuous from cellar to roof and be provided with doorways on each floor, closed by automatic fire doors. The building must be designed with two sets of egress facilities of ample proportions, one set located on each side of the wall accessible from each floor.

No fire is at all likely to occur on both sides of this fire wall simultaneously, unless it is of incendiary origin. Should a fire occur the alarm sounds, and the occupants of the building on the side where the fire is merely have to pass through them and be perfectly safe.

A fire drill will empty either side of a building so equipped, no matter how many stories high, in a minute. The refugees remain in the safe side of the building until the fire has been put out, or they may at any time without haste use the egress facilities provided there, which would be free from smoke or fire.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

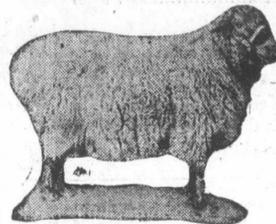

It is usually safe to say that when a child is pale, sickly, peevish and restless, the cause is worms. These parasites range the stomach and intestines, causing serious disorders of the digestion and preventing the infant from deriving sustenance from food. Miller's Worm Powders, by destroying the worms, corrects these faults of the digestion and serves to restore the organs to healthy action.

LIVE STOCK HUSBANDRY

RAISING WINTER LAMBS.

Ewes Must Be Bred Early to Secure Profitable Results.

Any one within a radius of 150 miles of a large city, on investigation, is very likely to find a well established market for specially bred winter lambs, writes R. L. Adams in the Country Gentleman. These lambs, often called hothouse lambs, are marketed when not more than ten or twelve weeks of age, after having been heavily fed from time of birth and rushed along in growth to reach the market at weights of from thirty to fifty pounds.

The Tunis sheep, as its name implies, had its origin in Africa. These sheep are noted for their early maturity, their prolificacy (rearing two sets of lambs per year) and yielding a fine and long staple of wool. The cross of the rams on our mutton breeds yields an improved fleece and excellent mutton. The cross of the Tunis and Merino makes an excellent sheep for every purpose. The Tunis ram pictured is an excellent specimen.

Placed on the market during December, January and February, they command prices as high as $15 apiece, with $10 to $12 a common quotation.

In order to turn off these lambs ewes must be bred in May or June so that the lambs will be dropped in October or November. This is an off season for usual breeding, but good results are obtained with pure bred Dorsets or with ewes that are the result of crossing Dorset rams with Shropshires or Merino ewes.

The ewes are kept in good condition throughout their period of pregnancy, the extreme in feeding that will cause the putting on of too much fat being carefully avoided. Following the birth of the lamb a ration containing plenty of succulence is provided to insure a heavy flow of milk. As soon as the lamb is old enough to nibble a little, feeds are provided in a lamb creep that will exclude the mature sheep.

In feeding the lambs greatest stress is placed upon wheat, bran, cracked corn and ground oats, with a little oil meal or soy bean meal. The lambs are given as much as they will eat, frequent changes of feed being practiced to prevent the lambs from tiring of one kind. The production of winter lambs is essentially a cramming process and the final result depends upon the feeder's ability to force the lambs.

CLIP TUSKS OF PIGS.

Needle-like Teeth Should Be Removed Soon After Birth.

Every little pig should have its tusks clipped off when one hour old or sooner. It is not too late to do some good if they are quite good size, writes R. A. Hayne in the National Stockman. Catch a little fellow and look at the needle pointed teeth on each side above and below.

Have a care while looking, else he will treat you as he does his mates and often his mother when she suddenly jumps up while the pigs are tussling for their places at dinner. When the sow does this a pig has cut her udder with one of those tusks. Look at the lips and noses, faces and eyes of pigs a few days old and see the sores and scars from these same teeth. Cut them off, save all this pain and have larger, growthier pigs.

A pair of small, stiff steel pincers is the thing to do the job. Have a pine stick six inches long, one inch wide and half an inch in thickness, round the edges and put this in the pig's mouth like a bit. Sit on the ground or a low stool, set the pig on his rump between your knees with feet toward you, hold his nose and stick with one hand, hold his body with your knees and clip his upper teeth off clean and smooth with gums. Don't pull them out. Then turn him with back toward you and cut out lower ones the same way. Now he is disarmed, no more sore and cut lips and eyes, and the mother will let him still till all are fed.

Lung Worms in Swine.

Lung worms is a disease which it is almost impossible to treat successfully after a pig is once badly infected. The application of preventive measures is about the only treatment that can be recommended. The spread of the disease might be largely controlled by the use of crude oil applied to the floors of the buildings, thus killing the eggs. Frequent changes of bedding and litter and the burning of all this material is also advisable. In a badly infested herd it will be a good plan to change the lots entirely, starting on fresh ground.

Birds of Distinction.

The crow and the bird of paradise were talking about fame.

"Why, you are so homely you are only known to the farmers," sneered the proud bird of paradise. "Now, I am so beautiful I have my feathers on the hats of the society women."

The crow laughed sardonically. "That may be, my friend," he chuckled, "but I have my feet under their eyes."—Chicago News.

Dark Days.

There are a number of daylight darkneses recorded in history, among them being those in B. C. 295, A. D. 252, 746 and 775. There was a dark day in England in January, 1807, and another on Oct. 21, 1816. There was also a dark day in Detroit on Oct. 19, 1762. On May 19, 1780, there was such atmospheric gloom over Hartford, Conn., that the legislature adjourned for the day.

Now He Reminds Her of It.

"Ha! I've a good joke on my wife."
"What is it?"
"She wouldn't give me a letter to mail because she was positive I'd forget it, and then she carried it around three days in her shopping bag."—Boston Transcript.

A Lesson From the Clock

A CLOCK that strikes is better than a non-striking clock. It tells us the time through our ears as well as through our eyes. It saves our steps. It signals, spurs us on, arouses us, speaks to us in the dark and from far away. It is useful far beyond the usefulness of the silent clock.

So with a business that advertisers. A shop or store that sends out its message to us in the form of advertisements in our newspaper serves us far beyond the shop or store that is silent—that must be visited before its service or merchandise can be known.

The shop or store that advertises saves our time and money, etc. Speaks to us at the right time, arouses us to attention, and stirs us to action. We buy more as the result of advertising, and we buy from advertisers.

Drainage Case

At a sitting of the Ontario Drainage Court held in Sarnia last month before Drainage Referee Henderson, of Ottawa, the following case came up:

Carruthers vs. Township of Bosanquet.—Appeal against drainage scheme affecting plaintiff's lands. Adjudged till next sittings of the drainage court at Sarnia. The Referee expressed the opinion that the engineer should reconsider the report and provide for a drain across the flats on appellant's property, it not being in the referee's opinion a proper case for compensation.

An electric motor to vibrate fruit trees so that the sap flows to the buds and blossoms and enables them to resist frost has been patented by a Colorado man.

Pie Culture

(By Peter McArthur)

An article published some days ago in which I mentioned the fact that the cherry pie was at one time considered the supreme test of a housewife, or rather, the test by which it might be discovered whether a girl was competent to be a housewife, has brought me a good story from Dr. Hugh MacCallum, of London. According to him the cherry pie plays a much wider part than I suggested in the life of the New England States. He says:

"At a medical banquet which I once attended our great Dr. Osler, of Oxford, stated that Dr. Weir Mitchell, of Philadelphia, had once put his culture to the final test. Dr. Mitchell, who was present, nodded gravely.

"He gave me a piece of cherry pie, to eat and watched me while I ate it."

"Once more Dr. Mitchell nodded.

"And, continued Dr. Osler, 'I ate it to his entire satisfaction.'

"Dr. Mitchell applauded enthusiastically.

"Naturally the assembled medical men wanted to find out how a cherry pie should be eaten for the test was one that any of them might be obliged to face at any time.

"All we could learn," said Dr. MacCallum, "was that he ate it with a spoon and that he rejected the pits."

This information contains the possibilities of much further discussion. It will be news to the eaters of factory made pies and even to housekeepers who are making their own cherry pies during this cherry season, that the cherries should always be used with their pits. Also the writers of books of department must record the fact that in the case of the cherry pie the fork must give place to the spoon. But the most important fact is that no matter how a cherry pie is eaten it is the best pie that is made.

$9,000 in Purses Offered at Port Huron Race Meet

Four weeks from to-day the starter's "go" will be heard at the Port Huron Driving Park and the horses will be off for another season. August 17, 18, 19 and 20 are the dates.

Nine thousand dollars in purses, just $1,000 more than has ever been hung up on the Port Huron track will be offered by the Port Huron Driving Park & Agricultural Association in 1915. Fourteen big races, just two more than have ever been carded for a local meeting will be offered to the race loving public of Port Huron and vicinity.

There will be four early closing $1,000 stakes, well filled, one each day of the meeting.

"You can say for me," said Secretary Knill, of the local association, "that not in years has the prospect been so bright for a track. I look to see the largest number of horses here that has ever graced our track and naturally filled to make the sport worth while, while the purses, as you see, are more attractive than ever before."

There appears to be a reason for all of this optimism. Horse racing is a dead issue in Canada this year, owing to the European war. All the big stables are being used as concentration camps by the Canadian soldiers with the result that there will be no revival of the sport across the border until the war is ended. The big stables are being practically all of the Canadian steppers, and they boast of some mighty fine steeds, too, have invaded the confines of the United States and the competition this season promises to be more keen than ever.

One doesn't have to go away from home this summer to see real harness racing. As Secretary Knill states, the outlook was never so bright and Port Huron's annual harness meeting for 1915 should eclipse any in the history of the local track. Don't forget the dates, August 17, 18, 19 and 20. "Paste 'em in your hat."

Sheppard—Robertson

The beautiful home of John Robertson, second line, Plympton, was the scene of a happy event on Saturday, when his youngest daughter, Miss Eunice, became the bride of Russell Sheppard, at 12.30. Only the immediate friends of the frimly gathered in the spacious parlor to witness the beautiful ceremony. The bride wore her travelling suit, and was attended. Rev. J. McGillivray, of Petrola Presbyterian church, tied the nuptial knot. After congratulations and a dainty repast, the bridal party motored to Sarnia, embarking aboard the S. S. Noronic for a tour through the Western provinces, which will extend until fall. Heartiest wishes follow the bride, who is popular with a large circle of friends in this district.

The bride travelled in a handsome moss green silk crepe de chene, with white sailor hat.

THERE has been inaugurated a great Empire-wide movement to send rations to the soldiers at the front. A leading canteen firm at Sheffield, Eng., has volunteered to put in as good shape as new all of the rations sent in, and they will then be distributed among the soldiers. Hardware dealers all over the empire have been asked to co-operate in the gathering in of old rations. If you have on around the place, hunt it up and hand it to T. Dodds & Son.

THE Canadians have earned for themselves an undying name. The story is told of one of the members of the second contingent, conversing with an officer of the first unit back in England from Salonika. "We are having a hell of a time living down the reputation you fellows made at Salisbury," said the second contingent man. "Yes," replied the veteran from the front, "and you will have at either hell of a time living up to the reputation we made in France."

THE Post Office Department call attention to the fact that letters addressed to soldiers at the front should be signed by the writer in full. Where letters are signed by Christian name only, can not be delivered owing to address being missing, wounded or dead. It is impossible for the Canadian postal service to return them to the senders. In view of this, the public is urged to fully sign all letters addressed to soldiers at the front and in addition to this to indicate their name and address of the sender on the upper left hand corner.

Big business men compelled to sign couple of hundred cheques for incidents expenses every month occasionally realize what is meant by writer's cramp. The Ford Motor Co. is making preparation to attend to a little office detail of this kind in connection with the $15,000,000 bonus to be distributed among Ford owners in August. The company has about to write 300,000 checks for $5 each, to be mailed to owners throughout the world. A staff of thirty stenographers is to be employed in this task requiring six weeks for completion.
