CENTREVILLE.

The marriage of Victor Hughes and Miss Letta Foster, of Windsor, last week, occasioned an unusual excitement in that usually quiet town. It being a runaway match, both principals being minors. They drove to St. Croix, N. Hants Co., and were married by Rev. H. H. Hovey. The relatives of the bride, however, followed, and the bride was taken from her young husband and carried back to Windsor, where she was held captive in her old home, while the groom was arrested on a charge of abduction. He, however, obtained his liberty the following evening and backed up by a thousand of the citizens went to the house where his bride was imprisoned and entered by force. The police were called, but unable to control the crowd. The bride's relatives had to give way and the couple were reunited, let us trust to "live happy ever after."

The thunderstorm of Sunday evening last was terribly severe in P. E. I. Telephone and telegraph lines were damaged and many buildings struck. Several persons were also injured. In some sections the hail did severe damage to the crops.

King Edward Visits the Humble Dwellers at Dublin.

MADLY CHEERED BY THE MULTITUDE. London, July 25.—King Edward yesterday paid the Dublin shims a visit which will long be remembered. He was to be housed by the official programme, he went from one tenement dweller and maintaining a real interest in their welfare. As he walked through those streets, hat in hand, the enthusiasm of the people knew no bounds. It had been arranged that the King should visit two of the corporation tenements, but this did not satisfy His Majesty, and, to the astonishment of all, he pursued his investigations in a thoroughgoing fashion. A noteworthy incident occurred as the King was leaving St. Patrick's Cathedral on his way to the slums. An old woman struggled through the dense crowd which had gathered at the entrance and reaching forth her right hand endeavored to get close to the King, her intention evidently being to shake hands. Several officials were about to push her away, when His Majesty interposed, saying: "Leave her alone, God bless her. With a fervent, 'God bless your Majesty' the old woman then snatched the King, who shook her hand warmly. In the course of his rounds the King called on a man who had been out of work eight months, and gave him a five pound note. After visiting one tenement house the King walked quickly from the street into a narrow alley leading to a court, where he spent several minutes. When he reappeared the crowd of poor people in the street outside rushed forward and cheered again and again. Along Westing street the narrow pavement just permitted His Majesty and Sir Charles Cannon to walk side by side. In their wake came Mr. Wyndham and Lord Dudley. Otherwise His Majesty was practically unprotected. The poor folks of the neighborhood crowded along the path, cheering continually. Children, too, little bare-legged, hatless and unwashed, who never before witnessed a royal king, were by their gutter playground, joined in the demonstration, while from windows and doorways men and women shouted a chorus of "God luck to ye." As for the King, his smiling face told unmistakably how much he sympathized with what he saw, and how delighted he was with the reception by some of the poorest of his subjects. Presently His Majesty turned up in a close, his object being to visit certain tenements erected over shop property, and having access only from the rear. Residents of the close came out in force here, and again the welcome was rapturous and heartfelt. King Edward entered several tenements, conversing freely with the occupants and putting them quickly at their ease. When the King stepped into a room occupied by Joseph Healy, he found Healy at his occupation of boot making. Healy, subsequently giving an account of the visit, said: "I was partly going on with a pair of boots when the King came in, but of course he did not mind working-man at his work. It was very much obliged to His Majesty for visiting a poor man's room. The King replied pleasantly that he was very glad, indeed, to come." Mrs. Healy's estimate of the sovereign was simple, but expressive. "He's every nice gentleman," she said. "His Majesty in the course of his examination of the room passed before a memorial picture in green and black of the late Queen Victoria. Subsequently, he observed the colored picture of the commander-in-chief of the British army. He said: "There is my old friend, Roberts." On leaving the slum area, the King received a hearty send-off from the inhabitants.

Retrenchments on the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. The George's River quarry works of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company were closed down Saturday for the summer, as a consequence of which over 300 men are thrown out of work. These quarries are working only when it is impossible to secure dolomite from Marble Mountain, the company's principal source of supply, as in winter time. Of the open hearth plant, seven of the furnaces have been closed, three only being kept going. About two hundred men, mostly laborers and handy men, have been laid off. The company has about twenty thousand tons of steel billets on hand now, awaiting shipment. The Herald correspondent learns that the company proposes to make considerable retrenchment in the way of superintendents and clerks, who are paid high salaries and have not much work to perform.

THE TESTS OF A GOOD FLOUR. The text book on Hygiene prescribed for use in our public schools says of flour: It should be white or only tinged with yellow. It should not feel gritty or lumpy. Its smell and taste should be neither acid nor mouldy. If a handful is compressed, it should not re-opening the hand, fall too readily into powder; this would indicate adulteration or a deficiency of gluten. It is worthy of note that when these tests are applied to "Ogilvie's" flour they prove it to be unadulterated flour, and as a matter of fact, "Ogilvie's" consists of nothing but what's best of the wheat.
