A NEW BRUNSWICK STORY.

The Remarkable Experience of a Husband and Wife.

The One Suffering from General Debility and the Other From the After Effects of Typhoid Fever Were Gradually Growing Weaker When a Cure Came—Both Now Restored to Health.

From the Newcastle, N. B., Union-Advocate.

Quite recently there came to the knowledge of the proprietor of the Union Advocate, two cases of residents of Newcastle having been greatly benefited by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these were thought to be of sufficient interest to warrant their being published in the interests of humanity, if the parties interested had no objection to the facts being published. Consequently a reporter of this paper called upon the parties and obtained from them cheerfully all the particulars. Mr. and Mrs. Hammill removed from Fort Fairfield, Maine, to Newcastle, N. B., about fourteen months ago. For two years previous Mrs. Hammill had been in a very poor state of health and was steadily growing weaker and running down, until she was unable to do the necessary work about the house, and the little she did used her up completely. Pains in the back and limbs, weakness, dizziness and other disagreeable symptoms troubled her. For some time she was under treatment of several doctors at Fort Fairfield, and also since she moved here. But they effected no improvement to her run down system and she was gradually growing worse and had given up all hope of regaining her health. Having read accounts of the cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills she decided last night to try them and see if she should be benefited thereby. She purchased some from Mr. H. H. Johnstone, druggist, and commenced to take them and has since continued to take them with, to her wonderful results. She had taken but a few boxes when a gradual improvement seemed to be taking place. The pains in her back and limbs left her as did the other unpleasant symptoms, and at the present time she is as well as ever she was and without feeling the tiredness and exhaustion of her former state.

At her recommendation her husband also began the use of Pink Pills. About a year before coming to Newcastle he had suffered from an attack of typhoid fever, from the effects of which he did not recover his former health. His blood seemed to be thin and watery, and he was weak and easily worn out. Through all this he kept steadily at work, although he says that when night came he was thoroughly wearied and depressed, not knowing how to obtain relief. When his wife began to feel the beneficial effects of Pink Pills she urged him to try them and he did so. After taking three boxes he began to feel a wonderful change. The tired feeling left him and he had a better appetite and enjoyed his food with a relish he had not had before. He continued taking the Pills for some time and is to-day fully restored to his old-time health and strength. Mr. Hammill was very willing to tell of the benefits both he and his wife had derived from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, with the hope that their experience might lead others to test the benefits to be derived from this wonderful remedy.

The gratifying results following the use of Pink Pills in the case of Mrs. Hammill prove their unequalled powers as a blood builder and nerve tonic. There are many throughout the land suffering in silence as did Mrs. Hammill, who can readily find relief in a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are a specific for the troubles peculiar to women, such as irregularities and all forms of weakness. They built up the blood, restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks driving out pains in the back and limbs, weakness and other disagreeable symptoms which make life a burden. They also cure such diseases as rheumatism, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance, nervous headache, nervous prostration, the after effects of la grippe, influenza and severe cold, diseases depending on humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc., and in all cases arising from mental worry, over-work or excess of any nature.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark. They are never sold in bulk, or by the dozen or hundred, and any dealer who offers substitutes in this form is trying to defraud you and should be avoided. The public are also cautioned against all other so-called blood builders and nerve tonics, put up in similar form intended to deceive. Ask your dealer for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and refuse all imitations and substitutes.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and Schenectady, N. Y., and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. from either address, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

LYNCHED IN A COURT ROOM.

Mother of the Victim Brings the Rope—Her Father Fights the Mob—One Thousand Angry and Excited Men Take Vengeance Upon Fred Gustavson.

OTTUMWA, Iowa, Nov. 24.—Swift and awful vengeance was visited upon Frederick Gustavson in Justice Truitt's court room on Tuesday. While being arranged for assault for upon the little four-year-old daughter of Jonas Sax a crowd of infuriated citizens closed around him and with a rope furnished by the mother of the child he was hanged from the stair railing of the court room. The father of Gustavson's victim adjusted the rope around the man's neck and assisted in the execution. The sheriff and the mayor of the town appealed to the crowd to let the law take its course, but the men refused to listen. Gustavson pleaded and prayed, and shrieked for mercy as the rope tightened around his neck, but there was no mercy there. The crime for which the wretch was lynched was committed the previous night. A complaint was lodged with the police at once, and Captain Hermon, of the police department, soon had Gustavson looked up. The crime was known to only a few that night and hence the prisoner was safe. When the facts became known, however, there was great excitement, and it was soon evident that the wretch had not long to live.

Before being taken to the Justice's office for his preliminary hearing, Gustavson was brought face to face with his little victim. He was well known at the Sax House, where he had often been, and the child recognized him at once and identified him. The father was practically insane from grief and rage, and would have killed Gustavson had he not been restrained by the officers. Gustavson was sullen and would say nothing in his own defence. The prisoner was taken to the court room of Justice Truitt after the identification. When it was learned that he was there a mob of a thousand men seemed to spring up out of the ground. Word was passed along Main street and crowds hurried to the Justice's court, where the examination was to take place at half-past two o'clock.

The little court room was speedily filled and although the officers guarding the prisoner felt that something was to happen, the latter did not appear to be disturbed. He sat in a chair by a big police officer and pulled his moustache nonchalantly, gazing at those about him as if he were a spectator and not particularly interested. The mother of the little victim suddenly appeared and succeeded in fighting her way to the top of the stairway leading to the court room. She had a long new rope in her hands, and made no attempt to conceal it. Standing at the top of the stairway, Mrs. Sax turned her face to the surging mass of men below her: Will you permit this brute to live? she shrieked. Will you permit such a beast to disgrace the earth? Not a man in a mass of thunder from the excited crowd, now lashed to the highest pitch of fury. We'll hang him! Gustavson grew pale as death, and clutched the arm of the officer near him for protection. Closer pressed the mob, and the officer felt they could not long hold out.

Here's a rope! shouted the maddened mother. Now, men, do your duty! Remember you have children of your own at home. Another shout went up and the crowd surged closer, while the prisoner's teeth chattering with fear, cried out to the officers to save him. Sheriff McIntyre and Mayor Force attempted to restore order. Don't bring disgrace upon the city by an unlawful act, shouted the Mayor, but no heed was paid to what he said.

The Sheriff attempted to form a posse for the protection of the prisoner, but his efforts were in vain. The crowd was thirsting for blood, and blood it would have. The rope was quickly thrown over the balustrade of the stairway and the end fastened securely to the top railing. The father of the child stood at the bottom of the stairway, waiting for his vengeance. The mother was on the top landing, her eyes gleaming like those of a tigress. Now take him, shouted the mother, and then there was a rush: The officers were swept aside as if they were children, and the frenzied men of the mob had their fingers around Gustavson's throat. For the love of God, he shrieked, spare me! Mercy! Mercy! No heed was paid to his pleadings and in a moment he was hurled to the bottom of the stairway, to the place where the lower end of the rope was dangling. As he passed the upper landing the grief-stricken mother spat upon him savagely and attempted to strike him. By the lower end of the rope stood the father of Gustavson's victim. He did not say a word but waited. As the crowd shoved the prisoner along the father sprang upon him, and getting a firm grip upon his throat tried to strangle him, but this was not what the crowd wanted.

Gustavson was lifted up bodily, and then the father fastened the rope around his neck, and fastened it so tightly that the wretch grew black in the face and his eyes started from his head. Then the body was allowed to fall, and the prisoner's whole weight rested upon the rope, which was tightened and soon choked out his life. For ten minutes the corpse was left hanging, the mob standing by to see that there was no interference upon the officers, and from the landing above the mother looked down to see that the wretch had no chance for his life. At the end of ten minutes the police made their way through the crowd and out the body down. It was taken to the county gaol, the mob following and swearing that if Gustavson was not dead they would hang him again. It was not until the announcement of the result of the post mortem examination was made that the crowd dispersed. The mob was composed principally of working men. Sheriff McIntyre says he will make a list of those he recognized and see that they are prosecuted.

The Girl in the Novel.

Once I adored a pretty girl
Of most angelic mien;
Her hair was never out of curl,
Her wit was ever keen.
Her eyes reflected heaven's blue,
Her talk was never dull,
And as I studied her, she grew
Quite "strangely beautiful."
Her "bosom heaved," her heart was stirred
When'er her ear was lent,
And when sweet words of love she heard,
Her color came and went.
Her form was "half divine," her smile
Was "limpid" as could be;
Of money she had such a pile,
It seemed infinity.
And yet I could not hope to win,
Her, though, as I have said,
I loved her. For she dwelt but in
A novel that I read. Tom Mason.

Scams of Thought.

In every soul is a slabbed grave where some fond hopes lie sleeping;
There must be love back of the hand that is reached out to save another;
Happiness is a roadside flower growing on the highways of usefulness;
The best education in the world is that got by struggling to get a living;
Buy what thou hast no need of, and ere long thou shalt sell thy necessities;
A craving for sympathy, is the common boundary line between joy and sorrow;
Life appears to be too short to be spent in nursing animosity or registering wrong;
Be not afraid of enthusiasm; you need it; you can do nothing effectually without it;
He who puts a bad construction on a good act, reveals his own wickedness of heart;
Language cannot express to any one much beyond what he has lived or experienced;
Metal will certainly rust if not used and the body will assuredly become diseased if not exercised;
The hero never asks what will people think of me if I do these things, but what will I think of myself if I do not do them?

CONFIDENCE OR RESISTANCE.

Which of These Keeps the Market Steady?

Reasons Noted in Favor of Growing Strength Out of General Stagnation—Gossip of Bulls and Bears.

New York, November 25.—The general business outlook in this country is in a remarkable condition. Whether foul weather or fair is ahead is absolutely uncertain. A few straws have appeared to show which way such wind as there is, blowing, but in most cases it has generally been seen later that they were moved only by fitful little gusts. So far as signs go, indeed what the mariners call a "Portuguese hurricane" prevails—no wind at all.

This is reflected completely in the stock market. Midsommer stagnation makes one day almost the counterpart of any other, except that one day the brokers, who must make a living some way drive prices down a half a point or a whole one and the next allow a recovery. That such variations are really significant of values these brokers themselves do not maintain. But they are not without important meaning, and this is one of the straws that some think is more than a gust, a steady under current of air from the clear quarter. They show, in the first place, that even the bears, who ever present as they are, are now especially numerous, see reason for caution. They are proof also that stocks are held in stroudd holders for the most part, and that the holders, who are bulls, of course, see reason for retaining what they have. The absence of any decided buying movement at home or abroad is evidence that those who hope for better things are cautious also. In such markets the pessimists generally have the better of it, dullness being a chief element of weakness, which is usually contemporaneous with gradual nipping off of values; it is a well known axiom of the "Street" that you can pick away with your bare hands, but that you can't build up without material. The fact, therefore, that since the reaction following the repeal of the silver purchase law there has been no decided decline in the general list is regarded as a symptom of great strength.

But only the most sanguine see in this a trustworthy weather-vane pointing to clear skies, for who can tell whether it is the strength of mere resistance, which may give way at any time, or whether it is the strength of confidence? There lies the key of the situation.

A few points have revealed themselves upon which private judgements may be founded. On the side of growing strength may be noted the following: In all the banks here and in England a great mass of money has accumulated which is available not only for rapid investment on the first really favorable symptom, but also as a guarantee against forced liquidation. This probably more than anything else is what holds the bears in check. There are some stirrings of reviving trade. One of the most interesting of these was the sale at auction this week of $2,000,000 worth of dry goods in this city, at which representative dealers from all parts of the country showed an eagerness to buy that was a surprise to the trade and financial circles in general, and resulted in prices fully equal to market value. With this is connected the low stocks held by merchants in all lines. These of course must be replenished, and it is believed that an active demand cannot be delayed. The approach of the new year is almost universally considered favorable, furnishing as it does a natural explanation. At the approach of the annual settlements it is not unusual for merchants to lay from hand to mouth pending the opening of the new ledgers. This is believed by many to be the reason for the hesitation abroad.

Finally, on the bull side is the extension of confidence that was so rudely shaken. Nothing since the silver purchases were stopped has given this such a fillip as the strong address of Secy. Carlisle at the Chamber of Commerce dinner on Tuesday night. Mr. Carlisle is regarded as a representative of the South. It is not yet forgotten that when the $100,000,000 fund of gold which the treasury used to hold in superstitious awe was threatened with impairment he was the man to make acute the fear of silver payments by his unofficial utterance in favor of redeeming the Treasury notes in the base metal against which they were issued, yet the keynote of that address was sound money—the gold standard—now and for all time, and he proclaimed it with a force and earnestness which Grover Cleveland himself could not surpass.

On the other side are chiefly the still falling railway earnings likely to be further cut down by the smallness of the wheat crop, and the depressing effect on business of the tariff changes. This latter cause as the readers of the star have been informed, is not a unanimous argument on the bear side, but it is unquestionably a principal reason for the unfavorable view of many. With this is linked the expectation of commercial failures at the close of the year.

It is to be noticed in this connection that the temporary causes for gloom have been ignored. The failure of the Thurber Whyland Company, at one time among the three most important commercial corporations in the country, caused not a ripple of excitement; nor did it furnish a word in the argument for lower prices. The same is true of the Lehigh Valley Railroad strike. Such an irritation is generally the signal for weakness in the strongest markets, and the present one might well be used against railway stocks, pregnant as it is with possibilities of very serious trouble on several roads. Yet Wall Street acts as though it were ignorant that the most vital principle between railways in general and their employes is at stake.

Another curious feature of the situation, which has been especially conspicuous this week, is the failure of successful drives against special stocks, notably the industrial, and affect the list more than to check advances. Sugar, often the leader, has been kicked up and down, especially the latter, without beneficial result to the railways, while the unfortunate General Electric Company's stock has been the victim of protracted depression, accompanied by the most disfiguring reports with similarly slight effect on its neighbors. It may be mentioned in passing that there now seems to be little doubt that this company will be reorganized or undergo a readjustment of ownership. National Cigar stock has also contributed to the group of individually weak stocks. It is to be noticed in the case of that stock, however, that the transactions based on the reorganization committee's reports have been light and that there is nothing to indicate that the plan of reorganization is generally looked upon with disfavor. The majority of its stockholders undoubtedly expect good things of it.

The re-organization of the Union Pacific Railway, now in progress, attracts considerable attention, but there is nothing definite yet to show its scope or probable effect.

On the whole it is a regular Midsommer market, with this single qualification, that something pretty big will have to turn up on one side or the other to get it fairly going again.

The elephant is a nocturnal animal, but in captivity is forced to work during the daytime, and so, in India, suffers greatly, the immense size and weight and dark color causing the animal to become overheated. To relieve itself it draws from its stomach a quantity of water and sends it in a shower of spray over his body about every five minutes.

Clever relates the story of a wolf which was brought up as a young dog, became familiar with the persons he was to be the victim of, and in particular followed his master every where, evincing loyalty at his absence, obeying his voice and showing a degree of submission scarcely differing in any respect from that of a thoroughly domesticated dog.

Out at the Pocomo Prison, Oregon, there is a horse that has developed a singular characteristic, which consists in an earnest desire to eat all the red and green peppers he can get hold of. The animal behaves just like any other horse, except in the particular matter above mentioned. He is a good worker and tame and manageable. How he acquires the love for peppers is a matter of conjecture. There is in Memphis an old squirrel, with a handsome tail, who is a great traveler. He is rarely seen on the ground, preferring to run along the electric light wires, telephone cables and guys. Anything that is as large as a lead pencil is a good enough right of way for him. He gets his dinner at Francois's Hotel, on the corner of Union and Second streets, three blocks from the square, and may be seen any fair evening about six o'clock wending his way along the wire to or from that hotel.

Coming down the street the other day on the front platform of a surface car, I noticed the driver looking another way as we approached a switch. The switch was turned the wrong way and the old white horse on the near side shoved his fellow outside the track upon the table skillfully avoiding the inside plate himself by a half hop, skip and jump, and we went around the corner all right and flying.

A POWERFUL LIGHT.

46 Million Candle-Power Secured by a New Arrangement of Lenses.

46,000,000 candle-power beacon light is to be located near Quimper, France, at a projecting headland bearing the name of Penmark, says Locomotive Engineering. This enormous intensity of light is said to be obtained by an arrangement of the lenses of the lamp. In the ordinary lamp the lenses, consisting of a number of rectangular panels, are placed in steps in a manner that the source of light occupies the principal focus of each of them. The rays of light then emanate from this part of the apparatus in a horizontal pencil. By reducing the number of panels, the quantity of light received by each is consequently correspondingly increased. At La Hève there are four panels, the total light emitted by the lamp being triple the amount received in an apparatus with twelve panels, each of them occupying a half square. Each lens will, therefore, receive half of the total light emitted by the lamp, and, consequently, will emit a pencil of rays of a power double that furnished at La Hève. Like the lighthouse at La Hève, the new lighthouse will be lighted by electricity. The lamp will be fed by an alternating current of 100 amperes at its maximum.

Cigars at the Dinner Table.

It is the Prince of Wales who is directly responsible for the spread of the habit of smoking at the dinner table, the London correspondent of the Sheffield Independent declares. When he first began to dine out, smokers were fain to wait the opportunity of retirement to the smoking room. H. R. H. began modestly enough with a cigarette, and has long ago reached the cigar. There are still one or two houses in London where cigars are not produced, and more where one is put off with the inadequate cigarette. But they are growing fewer. It is not to smoke at the table where Mr. Gladstone dines, but I have personal knowledge of a case in which the Premier, knowing the habits of the company he was to meet, begged in advance that the cheerful cigar might, at the usual time, circulate.—Westminster Gazette.

THINGS A WOMAN CAN'T DO.

With a Companion List Dealing With a Man's Shortcomings.

These are some of the things that a man thinks a woman cannot do:

Keep a private expense account and have it balance.
Wear a linen collar or a linen shirt waist, starched stiff as a man's, and keep her temper.
Buy a pretty necktie,
Order a dinner from a bill of fare.
Tie a "four-in-hand."
Understand a game of baseball.
Or a game of football.

Go to church and not notice the other women's bonnet.
Abstain from talkin' fashions.
Play whist and remember what's trumps.
Refrain from drinking ice cream soda in winter.

These are some things that every woman knows that a man can't do:

Build a grate fire and make a success of it at the first attempt.
Remember to wear his smoking jacket when he smokes.
Put his ashes in the ash receiver.
Sit in a chair without taking the tidie with him when he gets up.
Refrain from tying the pillow shams into knots and throwing them into corners.

Abstain from drawing the curtains back as far as they will go and sending the window shades skyward with a bang.
Use his comb without having something to say about the long hairs he finds in it.
Listen to stories about other men's smart children.

To Brighten Blue Moments.
What word is that in the English language, the first two letters of which signifies a man, the first three a woman, the first four a great man, and the whole a great woman? Heroine.—New York Ledger.

He—My income is small, and it is cruel of me to take you from your father's roof.
She (anxiously)—I don't live on the roof.
Clara—Do you know, people are actually beginning to call me an old maid.
Maud—You mean that you are just beginning to hear them.—Vogue.

The next train for Chestnut Hill leaves at 5.17—17 minutes after 5. Train now ready on track No. 5. Track No. 5 for 5.17 train to Chestnut Hill.
These were the words of the guard, and they rang through the waiting-room in Boston with penetrating distinctness. As soon as he had uttered them a fair young thing rushed up to him and said: "Is the train for Chestnut Hill ready yet? And what time does it leave—New York World?"

A Rising Market.
Yes, said the old man, addressing his young visitor. I'm proud of my girls, and should like to see them all comfortably married; and as I've made a little money, they won't go to their husband's penniless. There's Mary, 25 years old, and a real good girl. I shall give her a thousand pounds when she marries. Then comes Bet, who won't see 35 again, and shall have two thousand; and the man who takes Eliza, who is 40, will have three thousand and with her.
The young man reflected a moment or so, and then nervously inquired, "You haven't one about 50, have you?"

SHE WAS A HAPPY BRIDE.

And Eight There the Blithe Young Thing Had the Advantage of the Groom.

A slim-built young man in clothes of a billigerent cut walked timidly into the marriage license office recently. He was allowed closely by a resolute-looking young woman in holiday attire.

The young man glanced around suspiciously for an instant and then reached for the clerk's ear. His companion assumed an air of unostentatious preoccupation, turned her back and gazed far away at a corner of a ceiling, but she was careful to keep between her companion and the door.

She, hissed the young fellow, bending far over the counter in his effort to prevent his companion overhearing anything. She, say can't we duck out of sight somewhere? She don't shout?

The clerk shook his head.

The stranger continued his cautious whispering: Say, he said, she's in a hole see? It's agin me to hitch to that she devil, see? How can I jump the game, eh?

The clerk shook his head. There are courts all about here, he suggested: try 'em.

The stranger bent closer.

Say, he continued with an apprehensive glance at the back of his companion. She'll land me dead to rights if you don't give me a lift. She's swore to give me a divorce after we're hitched, but what good'll that do, eh? he concluded mournfully.

The clerk remained silent.

Say, went on the visitor in pleading tones, 'trow her out, and I'll fix it with you. Run her in: do anything; anything goes.

The clerk shook his head.

Say, suddenly exclaimed the woman, wheeling about resolutely, what game are you puttin' up on me now? Scratch out that license lively.

This here man's been keepin' company with me for two years and he's got to do some lively marryin' no'w, an' don't you forget it. Scratch along lively! His name's Westmore. James J. Westmore, an' he lives at 200 Jessie street, an' he's 25 years old, 'n' my name's Cora—C-o-r-a. Cora—Gale.

Monroe started. Bust me if I ever knew that before.

You'll learn lots when you've married me, was the answer given, with calm superiority.

'N' sometimes they call him West 'n' sometimes they call him Tommy White, 'tut 'em all in, if you want to, an' charge the bill to his bills here.

The clerk made out his bill, and his wife paid it with a sigh.

'N' now start us for the nearest Justice, an' we'll get nearer marriage 'n' this fellow's been since he was born.

They were started, and ten minutes later there emerged a happy, beaming bride and a woful, disconsolate groom.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Have You Thought of It?
For four thousand years or more the world groaned, suffered, and fumed about its sorrows, for there was no positive relief—no certain and painless cure until Dr. Scott's Patent gave to the world his great Corn Extractor. If there is suffering now it is a result of carelessness, for the remedy is at hand. Try Patnam's Corn Extractor. It is sure, painless and prompt. Beware of substitutes. N. C. Patnam & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

The man who delighted to mow the lawn, With a clickety-clickety-clang! Is waiting, now that the summer's gone, For snow above's reign complete to dawn, With it's blinkety-bunkety-bang!

Teacher—Who can tell me what useful article we get from the whale?
Johnny—Whalebone.
Teacher—Right. Now, what little boy or girl knows what we get from the seal?
Tommy—Sealing wax.

A Story for Students of History.
I hear the other day a good—and trustworthy of a little girl; too good to keep and so I will give it away.
An old sister was hearing her lesson in American history, the subject being the capture of Ticonderoga by Ethan Allen—who demanded the surrender in the name of Jehovah and the Continental Congress. The sister asked, "What was the Continental Congress?" and the child gave a satisfactory answer. Who was Jehovah? Well, I don't exactly know. I think it was either Columbus or George Washington.

The Conclusion.
He—Would you consider it an impertinent question if I should ask you to marry me?
She—Certainly not. And would you consider it a pertinent answer if I should say No?
He—Certainly not.
She—Well.
He—Well!
And so they were married.

Loyal to Excess.
King Oscar of Sweden once passed through a little town, which was festively decorated for the occasion. Among the rest, a huge transparency, affixed to a gloomy-looking edifice, attracted his attention. It bore the inscription: "Welcome to Your Majesty! In gigantic characters."
What building is that? the King inquired.
That is the county prison, your Majesty, replied one of the aldermen.
The King laughed and was heard to observe: "That is carrying matters a little too far!"

THE MAYORALTY.

Considerable interest has been around among the electors in the forthcoming election for Mayor of Fredericton for 1894.
Two gentlemen are in the field viz: Mr. Harry Beckwith, the present Mayor and Mr. H. Jordan Q. C. of the firm of Black Jordan and Bliss, Barristers. Both are well qualified to fill the position. Mayor Beckwith has served for two years and has given fairly good satisfaction. Mr. Jordan is as fully competent to discharge the duties appertaining to the office and as Mr. Beckwith has now had two years occupancy of the office undisturbed, the "Globe" with many others, would like to see the present incumbent give way to another man. Some local papers have advanced the argument that as Mr. Jordan has never sat at the Council Board he is not qualified to discharge the duties of the office of Mayor satisfactorily. This idea is quite absurd for how many times has Fredericton selected its Mayor from gentlemen who never sat at the Board. Did Mr. Fenety or Mr. Allen both of whom have been Mayor of Fredericton ever sit at the council previous to their election as Mayor? And the same applies to other cities. In fact it is a rare thing to elect a Mayor from the board of Aldermen. Any such argument against Mr. Jordan's candidature is therefore uncalled for and the "Globe" would be pleased to see him elected to the chief magistracy of this city for 1894.

NORTHWEST REVOLT

The significance of the victory for the Liberals in Winnipeg arises from the fact that until now the North West has been the great mainstay of Toryism. The reasons for this have been many, the last of which was belief in the government. The fact is that the whole Northwest has been overrun with government officials and every influence had been brought to bear against the Liberals in every election struggle, Toryism holding its head high in consequence, and marching to victory with an insouciance not assumed in other portions of the country. The farmers being scattered and unorganized, many in a measure dependent upon the government for favors, and unreasonably afraid of opposing those who could do much to render their prosperity impossible felt it would be like cutting their own throats were they to oppose the government. In fact a reign of terror has existed there, the great country being cowed and crippled, the few bold and independent spirits among the electors who dared to kick against the tyranny were speedily suppressed in some contemptible manner. But they have revolted at last. The last straw was added at the time Foster and Angers passed through and ridiculed their cries for relief, upholding at the same time with all the old boldness and conceit the sufficiency of protection to remedy the evils under which the people were suffering. This protection added nothing to the price of what was being produced, but added materially to the cost of production. The great Northwest with all its vast natural resources has not progressed as it should under more favorable circumstances.
At last the spirit of independence has been aroused and the people who have been suffering from the effects of a most cruel policy, have asserted their rights by turning upon their oppressors and expressing their determination to be free once more. The government will undoubtedly inspire its beelers to threaten the city of Winnipeg with loss of public grants and patronage, and promise every conceivable thing in the way of subsidies and favors if the electors will undo what has been done and stand by the old policy for some time longer. But it is impossible, now that the people of the Northwest have thrown off the yoke, that such expedients will have any influence with men whose very existence may almost be said to depend upon a large and immediate decrease of taxation, the opening up of larger fields for the disposing of their products and a return to honest methods of government.

It may be safe to predict that the sharp and salutary lesson given the government in the late Winnipeg election will postpone the induction into office of the present members for Cardwell and Soulanges, and possibly the creation of senators out of such material as Dr. Cameron of Inverness, Mr. Temple of our own county, and others whose constituencies may now take a view of public questions similar to that of the majority of good people in Winnipeg.

The Gleaner of Monday last published the fact that the office of the GLOBE was taken possession of by Deputy Sheriff Hawthorne on Saturday last, but put it in such a manner, that it gave the public the impression the GLOBE was a thing of the past. When the fact that the GLOBE was open Saturday night until nine o'clock, and not until that time did the proprietor have as much as a hint that any papers were in the sheriff's hands, or likely to be, and that it was again open for business Monday morning, is taken into consideration, it would have been just as well if he had not mentioned it but when he did think it necessary to do so, he might have had the decency to say that at the time he published the "items of news," as he terms it, the GLOBE office was as usual open for business. We have been informed that on Saturday last a brother of the proprietor of the Gleaner, and a former partner of the proprietor of the GLOBE, was informing a few of his friends that he was going to run the GLOBE commencing with Monday last. This will probably explain the reason of the anxiety of the Gleaner to give the public the opinion that the GLOBE was not running.

Although the field may be limited the "spicy little paper" is still in the ring, brother Armstrong, and we hope to be able to exchange for your own "spicy little paper" for many years to come.

At the City Hall.
Arthur Behan's company of players will appear at the city hall on Monday and Tuesday evening of next week, presenting the first night the great comedy entitled "The Plunger." This play has been put on several times during the company's stay in St. John and is pronounced by all a most interesting and entertaining production. On Tuesday night "Mixed Pickles," cast to the full strength of the company with special scenery and mechanical effects, will be presented. Reserved seats on sale at Fenety's bookstore.

Robbed the Mail.
While Mr. Isaacher Boyer, who drives the mail between Florenceville station and Centreville, was at the station last Friday night waiting for the down town train, the bag of mail for East Florenceville which was left lying in the wagon was cut open and the contents abstracted. A package of letters were taken, said to contain $300, belonging to parties in Centreville. The robbery was not discovered until after the bag was delivered to the postmaster at East Florenceville.

Last night's snow brought the first sleighing of the season and today numerous sleighs and sleds are gliding easily and noiselessly along the streets, while the merry jingle of the bells ring in the ears of our citizens. The stores all present a holiday appearance and should the snow remain, the prospects are that the storekeepers will be well satisfied when they balance up their accounts at the end of the year. Of course, that is if they advertise in the GLOBE.

HORSE NOTES.

Selected and Condensed for the Globe Readers.

Bodd D. Able says his stable won $60,000 this year.

The yearling filly Lady Alcyon, 2 3/4 won for her owners this season $1,335.

The yearling pacing filly Rosedale lowered the record to 2 22 at Stockton, Cal., last week.

Palt. Alto farm has filled an order for an European firm of fifty cow-bellies and blood mares.

The yearling Pansy McGregor reduced the yearling record to 2 23 1/2 in a race last week in Kansas.

Intervium was shown at the horse show and won first prize and $750 as the fastest stallion on earth.

In 1890 Alvia Whiteside placed the 3 year old record at 2 39, and this year Fartary placed it at 2 08 1/2.

Gordon Sin has been sold to western parties for $2000 and should be quite a horse next year, although he was off the last of this season.

Peter Carroll, it is said is thinking seriously of locating at Rigby Park, Portland, Me., next year, and Geo Taylor says it is the best track he ever struck.

The stallion Greenlander by Princeps broke the two mile record at Terre Haute on Nov. 4th, going the distance in 4 32 each mile being made in 2 46.

Because a Lore has a record down in the teens to a bike, it is no sign that he can not be beaten up the road to sleigh this winter by a horse that has no record.

Masool, the pacer has the fastest mile ever made in a race, 2 04, the fastest second and third heats, 2 04, 2 09, and the fastest three heats in a race 2 04, 2 04, 2 07 1/2.

Alcantara's service fee has been reduced $100 for next season, notwithstanding the fact that he won two blue ribbons and over $500 at the New York horse show last week.

Allerton will be put in training next year and, if the bike assists him as much as it does all fast horses, the stallion record should be nearly 2 03. His service fee is $200.

Hal Pointer the pacer, has won 33 races and lost seven and has paced 61 heats under 2 20. 65 heats under 2 15 and 18 heats under 2 10—a remarkable showing for the old horse.

The champion 2 mile yearling stallion Perial has been sold to go to Italy as a competitor for the international stake for three year olds to be trotted for in 1895 in that country.

The Geo Wilkes family herd all others in new 2 30 performers. With 58 sons they have 229 performers, while sons of old Hambletonian come next with 51 sires and 132 performers.

The Kentucky Stock Farm says, The stallion Edgardo, who won the third and fastest heat ever trotted in a race in Maine, was very lame at the time but fought out the race on his game and pluck.

The ringer is said not to be the greatest curse to the trotting turf, but the judges stand is the thing that wants to be purged. A movement is on foot for the National Association to allow no one in the judges stand who is not licensed by said association.

Lucia, dam of Edgardo, was sold at auction on November 20 to A. H. Moore for $2000, and Stranger, by Gen. Washington dam Goldsmith Maid 2 14, brought $500 and goes to J. H. Shultz, Sonnet by Jay Gould brought $2500, which were the highest prices of the sales.

M. C. Delano, who won the first free for all ever trotted over St. Stephen track with Maggie Miller, and who this year drove the two Maine stallions Bayard Wilkes, 2 13, and Robinson D., 2 17, to their records, has taken his wife and child and gone to California to live. Mr. Delano is said to be one of the best drivers ever raised in Maine and his removal is a heavy loss to the horsemen of the state.

The Globe Will be Published.
Notwithstanding reports to the contrary THE FREDERICTON GLOBE will continue to make its appearance once a week as heretofore.

Some parties who have manifested a deep amount of interest in this paper, and who have left no stone unturned in order to hamper the prospects of its proprietor, will possibly be much disappointed on learning that THE GLOBE will be published as usual. These parties will have to "rest their souls in patience for a time longer," as the Attorney General told the opposition just after the last election.

Next week the publisher of THE GLOBE proposes to change its appearance in many ways, thus making it a much brighter and more readable sheet. The whole make-up of the paper will be changed and with new life and energy on the part of its staff. THE GLOBE will endeavor to please the people and make itself welcomed by a large body of readers. Encourage us and we will do our part to reciprocate.

TOPICS OF THE DAY. What the Gossips have to Remark about. The Trend of Matters Political Parliamentary or Otherwise. The bye-elections in Ottawa will be held on Thursday, December 14th. Sir James Grant has been chosen the government candidate for Ottawa. Although Sir James is an eminent physician he has made a poor diagnosis of the case of Canada if he thinks the national policy and high taxes are what is wanted for her welfare. The two venturesome skater should learn to be more cautious, as these are the times when holes are inclined to yawn in the thin ice ready to swallow up the unwary. Several accidents have already happened, but fortunately help was always at hand. Be careful. Next time the result may be different. Thomas McCreery and Nicholas K. Conroy, the contractors who conspired to defraud the people of Canada, have been found guilty and sentenced to one year each in prison. The members of the government who aided and abetted them in their corrupt schemes should have been sent along to keep them company. Referring to the proposed new tariff, a Washington special says that a strong effort is being made to induce our ways and means committee to make saved lumber, as well as logs, free of duty in the new bill. The agricultural schedule of the McKinley bill, it is further said, will be practically overthrown. The Wilson bill will take off the increased duty on hay and put the rate back to $2 per ton. The Canadian farmers will be again favored on hay, potatoes, beans and other things of that kind. It is proposed to reduce the duty on potatoes from 25 cents a bushel to 15 cents. Other agricultural products will be treated in about the same way. The Canadian farmer will no doubt be pleased to hear the news. At the same time if the American consumer had not made a demand for cheaper vegetables, the Canadian farmer would not have received much consideration in the framing of the new tariff. ST. Mr. Warren D. Wentz. Tells of His Fearful Sufferings After Gastric Fever and His Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla. All who know Mr. W. D. Wentz give him the best of recommendations for honesty and integrity. For many years he has worked for Mr. D. P. Wilson, the harness maker and member of the Geneva Board of Health. He says: "I was taken sick last October with gastric fever and my chance for recovery was considered almost hopeless. After 7 weeks the fever slowly left me, but I could not eat the simplest food without terrible distress. It seemed that I had recovered from the fever to Die of Starvation I took pepin compounds, bisulph, charcoal, cod liver oil and malt until my physician said that his skill was about exhausted and he did not know what else to try. Everything I took seemed like poison. I began to think I had part of a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla that had been in the house for two or three years, that I found had benefited me previously for dyspepsia. I began taking it and soon began to feel better. I have now purchased over two bottles and can truthfully say I feel well again and can eat anything without distressing me, even to Pie and Cheese which I have been unable to touch for years. The English language does not contain words enough to permit me to express the praise I have for Hood's Sarsaparilla. W. D. WENTZ, 124 Castle St., Geneva, N. Y. A Good Voucher "I have known Mr. Warren D. Wentz for many years and can vouch for him as a man of veracity and one well known about here. I have sold him several bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla during the past few months." M. H. FARRINGTON, Druggist, Geneva, N. Y. Hood's Pills Cure Liver!!

ENTERTAINING FOREIGN CHAT.

Shirking Military Duty—How the Czar Travels—Jollies.

France intends to commemorate the memory of Marshal MacMahon by a statue, to be named after the distinguished soldier, and already there is much speculation as to whom the honor of executing so important a commission will be given.

The Matabele have a very singular marriage custom. The husband does not buy his wife, who, therefore, remains the property of her father, and when children are born of the marriage their own father has to buy them from his father-in-law.

Madame Nilsson (Comtesse de Cass Mirande) now lives in Paris in a most luxurious hotel in the Quartier Marignan. She has an unique collection of art treasures, among them being a beautiful clock which belonged to Charles XII of Sweden and a magnificent fan, the property of the Swedish Queen Christina.

Over a couple of tons of ripe strawberries were recently gathered in England by some large growers. The fruit is some what small, was excellent in flavor, and is, of course, a second crop, the plants evidently not having exhausted their rugged properties, owing to the exceptionally dry summer.

For the first time since 1844 a woman has been executed in Berlin. She was the cold-blooded murderer of her husband and her head was cut off on a block with a sword in the fashion of the middle ages. Her execution was witnessed by an excited multitude.

It is said that the Czar travels with no fewer than 300 trunks of considerable size sufficient to fill 14 railway vans! Several of the Emperor's pack-cases are filled with presents which he distributes with great liberality. About 10,000 francs were recently divided among the household at Fredericksburg and there were valuable rings for the police, and gold watches for station masters, railway engineers, guards and telegraphists.

A youth of Prince Bismarck's Duchy of Lauenburg, avowed a military service, named by copying lectures of strategy and rubbing his body with acetic acid to get into such a condition that he was rejected; but the foolish fellow, having communicated his recipe to some others, who blunderingly attempted to carry it out, the dodge was discovered, and he now finds himself serving in the artillery. A conscript, both in France and Germany, has to get up very early to avoid service.

The octroi duty, so familiar to all in Paris, is an import precisely similar in principle and practice to the customs duty paid on goods entering a foreign country. You go out of Paris for the day to visit a friend who has a charming garden in the suburbs, and he hospitably loads you on your departure with new potatoes, peas and fresh salad. When you reach Paris there is, whether you arrive by rail or road, a functionary who wants to know "what you've got there," and unless it be of very trifling sort you will have to pay a percentage on its estimated value.

It Happens That Way.

I hear that you have been moving? she said, as she found herself in the same seat with acquaintance on a Michigan avenue car.

Yes; we are down on Tweelfth street now.

And do you like the new place?

Quite well but the family next door is just awful. There's a bit of a million young uns, and the women sodas and the most cute drom and my little handie Lora Le'll have the whole lot arrested.

It's too bad you got a beside of such people. What did you say your number was?

No—

Why your sister lives at No—, right beside you! You must have reference to her!

Dear me, but—

I don't understand—

Excuse me, but I have to get off here. Do come down and see me. We never were so pleasantly situated. It is one of the nicest neighborhoods in all Detroit, and I'm aim st' lonesome to hear a child crying.

Seven—it's no motive, ma'am; it's a suffer.

A teacher in one of the Brunswick public schools a few days ago called for a companion of the adjective "big." The bright boy who answered the question replied by saying, "ill, coarse, dead. The boy is still very much alive."

THE CHEAPEST FENCE IN THE WORLD!

Heretofore Woven Wire Fencing has been a luxury, the price being so high that only the wealthy could afford to buy it. This Machine brings it within reach of all—so low indeed that it will not pay to waste money on any other kind of a fence. This Machine is taken into the field and weaves the fence on the spot where wanted. A man to work the machine and a boy to spool the mesh wire, can make and put on the posts from 50 to 60 rods per day. Over Twenty different styles of fencing can be made on this machine. It is Very Simple and does not Require a Skilled Person to run it. The fence can be made light for yard or lawn, or made strong enough to stand a breaking strain of 40,000 pounds. It takes up little room, and is Fire and Wind Proof. It is the coming Fence.

A Few of the Advantages of Woven Wire Fencing Made with the Kitzelman Machine

It is strong, easily handled, durable and ornamental. It will not be injured by sleet, snow, heat, cold or fire. It will turn horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, dogs and poultry. It will protect both as perfectly as the best "board" fences. It will not put the wool from sheep. It is strong, and will not obstruct or mar the beauty of the landscape. It is a net work without barbs, and will not injure stock in any way. It will not allow wire to be pulled apart to make space to climb through. It will cost less to put up this fencing and keep it in repair than any other. It can be taken down, rolled up and carried to other points without injury. It will make safe enclosures for the worst animals, and reliable line fences. It is much stronger and more durable than any barb fencing, being closely woven. It will not shelter enemies to crops and will last a life-time with very little repair. It is fire proof and cannot blow down, and will not injure persons or clothing. The twist in the wires will not slip or permit breakages by expansion or contraction through heat or cold. It is the only general purpose wire fence known, and will not collect snow-drifts or be injured by snow storms. It is the strongest, cheapest and best wire fence ever made, considering the many different styles and variety of its uses. It is the only combination wire fence in the world, and can be made high enough for cemeteries and narrow enough for lawns. It will not cast a shade on growing crops, and will permit cultivation up to the fence; by this means you can keep your fence rows clean. It will not rust and break in the twists, as it is made from the best Bessemer steel wire, galvanized, thus making it proof against age and weather.

CABBAGE A PAYING CROP.

A Suggestion for Growers—Cows That Eat a Great Deal More Profitable Than "Easy Keepers"—But Straw and Ground Fruits as Cattle Food.

Experiments made in New Jersey this season with ordinary late Flat Dutch cabbage, and the use of about 400 pounds of mixed fertilizer per acre, show that by supplying an abundance of plant food, and the use of the best seed, cabbages can be made an important crop. One plot of 250 cabbages now averages 12 inches across the heads, some of them being 15 inches. It is plain that such cabbages will bring at least 10 cents each later in the season, and as from 4000 to 5000 can be grown on an acre (according to the distance planted), a large profit should be obtained. It does not pay to grow inferior cabbage.

The land was plowed with a two-horse plow and well harrowed. Early dwarf peas were planted, harvested and the ground again plowed for cabbage, the fertilizer broadcasted, but a small proportion was withheld for use around each plant. The rows were four feet apart, the plants being about three feet apart in the row. They were cultivated once with a one-horse cultivator, and then with a hand-wheel hoe during the remainder of the season. The plants were set out the middle of July, and in the proportion of 3500 plants per acre. A slight sprinkling of fertilizer was applied around each plant for a few days after they stood up. For a while the season was very dry, but not sufficiently so to do much injury, as the location is somewhat damp. The plants were worked after each rain, so as to keep an inch of the top soil always loose. The size of the heads makes the crop three times as large, by weight, as was ever before grown on the land, the secret being the liberal use of fertilizers, good seed, and keeping the soil stirred and loose.

The cabbages will be stored away roots down. The usual custom of burying the heads in New Jersey is that they become sealed up when frost is in the ground, and they then rot when the frost leaves. Last winter (a cold one) the cabbages were placed in a row, roots in the ground and heads out; then another row close to the first, and so on, the whole forming a compact mass of cabbages, which bed of cabbages was covered with six inches of salt hay, stalks placed on the hay and a few boards (to shed water) placed on the stalks. When cabbages were wanted the hay was removed, the heads cut from the stalks and the hay replaced. They could be had at any time, and were always green and fresh-looking. Not one rotted, although they were frozen. The hay prevented sudden thawing. When the cabbages were gone the hay was removed, and the stalks produced early greens. By this method the cabbage plant is kept over winter alive, as the sprouting of the stalks in the spring demonstrates. Cabbage growers should try it.

ALL FOR THE FARMER.

The World's Fair Dairy Tests—Green Food and Steamed Grass.

The dairy test at Chicago showed that, while some cows were capable of producing more milk and butter than others, the cost of the product for each cow also differed. The cow that the farmer should have is not the easy keeper, but the one that can eat a large quantity of food and convert it into milk and butter. It matters not how much the cow eats, provided she produces accordingly.

Green food that has been preserved, such as ensilage, differs greatly from that which has been first dried and then steamed. When the water is evaporated from grass there is a rearrangement of the particles, and no amount of water added afterward will restore it to its original condition. The natural juices are solvent that cannot be replaced by any artificial methods. Ensilage contains the juices of the plants at the time of harvesting, and is therefore, more easily digested than corn fodder that has been moistened or steamed.

The man who manages the dairy will sometimes complain of his failure to secure a profit, and ascribe his lack of success to his stock, when he is at fault in lacking knowledge of his business. Years spent in following old methods are sometimes wasted. It is the man who is not afraid to learn, and who does not know it all who succeeds.

The manure from a horse or cow, according to experiments made at Cornell University, is estimated at about eight cents per day, or $29.20 per year. In estimating the receipts from each animal the value of the manure should be included, and it may change a supposed loss into a profit, as the manure is as valuable as the crops.

A point not to be overlooked in the World's Fair Dairy Test, was that a large number of cows were rejected as lacking in constitutional vigor. They were capable of producing more than the average amount of butter, but could not stand the test of feeding at the Fair, owing to close inbreeding and the hot-house condition under which they had been kept.

Try irrigating a small plot next year, by way of experiment. The windmill will supply the water. It will at least teach something, and may even lead to a revolution, especially in the cultivation of small fruits and vegetables.

Home-made manure is more valuable than any other because it contains a greater variety of substances than commercial fertilizers, but its quality depends upon the materials of which it is composed, and their preservation in the heap. No two loads of manure are alike, and unless it is of the best quality the manure may not pay for the cost of hauling to the fields.

HONORED BY HER MAJESTY.

New Titles for Sir John Thompson and Christopher Robinson.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—The Right Honorable will hereafter be part of the Canadian Premier, Sir John Thompson's title. He has been created an Imperial Privy Councillor for his valuable services in Paris in the Behring Sea arbitration.

Sir Christopher Robinson will hereafter be the proper title for the well-known and popular Toronto Queen's counsel, who was associated with Sir Richard Webster and Sir Charles Russell in the case. The latter gentlemen have been honored with the Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George.

Christopher Robinson, K. C. M. G., Q. C., is the third son of the late Sir John Beverley Robinson, for a long time Chief Justice of Upper Canada, and subsequently Chief Justice of the Court of Error and Appeal, and looked upon as the most prominent jurist in Canada. Christopher was born in Toronto about sixty years ago, and was educated at the Upper Canada and King's colleges, graduating with honors from the latter in 1850, when he was called to the bar. He has been for a considerable period editor-in-chief of the Ontario law reports, and is looked upon as a leading man at the bar, and one of the first men in his vocation in Canada. The rapid strides he made in his profession soon earned for him an appointment as Queen's Counsel, and he has since been engaged in some of the most important trials in the history of the country, among the more interesting being the one in which Whelan was tried for the murder of Thomas D'Arcy McGee at Ottawa.

In this case Mr. Robinson acted for the Crown and conducted the final steps of the prosecution, his speech on the occasion having created a sensation among the profession as well as the public. He also acted for the defence in the famous suit of the Queen vs. Wilkinson and introduced the application to the court to have the late Hon. George Brown committed to goal for contempt of court for his attack on Judge Adam Wilson. He was also sent to England as one of the leading counsel, when the boundary case was argued before the Privy Council. In appearance, Mr. Robinson is anything but imposing, in fact, he assumes a weakness of manner well calculated to lead a stranger into the belief that he would make but a poor fight. While prosecuting he shows that he possesses to an eminent degree a judicial rather than a partisan mind, and in his large experience of crown cases his fairness to prisoners has been long established, although he has the reputation of pressing where he finds evidence of guilt, and giving nothing away to which the Crown is entitled. In a recent case in which he took part, the opposing counsel paid him a homely compliment by remarking, "My learned friend's logical conclusions have long been recognized, and I must admit his mill grinds exceedingly sure. He puts a sheep in at one end, and out comes a boiled leg of mutton and a roll of parchment. For the past eighteen years he has been a partner of Henry O'Brien. In politics he is a strong Conservative, and in religion an active member of the Church of England. He is looked upon as a good man and a grand lawyer one in whom the people have the fullest confidence, and one who could not be influenced in any way in the performance of his duty.

CLOSER THAN A BROTHER.

His Spouse Kept an Eye on Alexander Nebuchadnezzar Thompson.

The cable car was going at full speed. It is the manner of this sort of vehicle that it does not gain acceleration gradually after starting, but goes on the jump at the end of the first dozen feet.

At this critical moment a young colored man dashed across the street and swung himself upon the grip car. Just at the same instant a shriek was heard and a comely woman of African descent and robust physique made a sprint after the traction train. Though the latter was by this time going about seventy miles an hour she made a grab at the rail on the last platform, and became a passenger by sheer force of muscle and athletic dexterity.

It did not take her half a minute to make her way forward to the grip car and take the seat beside the young colored man, who was most astonished to see her. Said he:

What you gwine? Gwine whar you gwine, she replied loftily and with an air of assumed indifference.

Whar's dat? Wid you. Whuffo? Just 'cause. Cause why?

Cause I feel like it. Well, I don't want you follerin' me. Alexander Nebuchadnezzar Thompson, I'm gwine to keep my eye on you. I ain't gwine to have it, be protested. You git right offen dis car, now I tei you.

Pool! responded the young woman contemptuously. You hear what I say? Yeepp.

Aint you gwine to mind? Not if dis lady knows herself. You goller.

I won't. The young man looked disgusted. After spending a minute or two in reflection an idea struck him, and he said triumphantly:

You kin pay my fare. I won't do it. Alexander Nebuchadnezzar, you're a low-down man. If I knowed you 'fore I married you as I do now you'd have had ter git some other lady for a wife.

Stop yer foolishness and git off de car, he replied gallantly. I ain't gwine to. Then you'll git put off.

Just then the conductor came forward to take up the fares on the grip car. The colored man refused to pay for the woman, who addressed an eloquent appeal to the knight of the bell punch.

This yere is my husband, she said. I see 's'picion dat he's got a meetin' on hand wif another woman. He got on de car to get rid of me, and I followed to keep an eye on him. I 'pose you're a gentleman and you wouldn't chuck a lady off.

The conductor had a heart, as was evident when he replied: Stay on. I'll pay your fare myself. This happy turn of events caused the young woman to giggle comely. The man, on the other, expressed his disgust with vague and semi-articulate muttering. All of this had happened while the car was going three blocks.

Just as the cable train was traveling at its most rapid gate between two corners the recalcitrant husband jumped to his feet without warning and leaped off the car. Evidently he supposed that his wife would not dare to imitate his manoeuvre but he reckoned without his host.

With a flying bound she sprang off and after him. In twenty seconds she had caught him and grabbed him by the arm. Now you fall nigger! she exclaimed. Just come straight home wid me.

I'm 's'comin' rejoined the man sulkily, evidently recognizing the situation as hopeless from his point of view, and the two walked away arm in arm.—Washington Star.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Grand Lake Range, Queen's County, N. B.
March 10th, 1893.

THE GRODER DYSPEPSIA CURE CO., Ltd.

GENTLEMEN:

I am 72 years of age and have had Dyspepsia for several years. I have employed numerous physicians and taken many patent medicines, but all were of no use in my case. I began to grow worse. There was severe distress in my stomach; everything I ate, even the lightest food caused me intense agony. My appetite was poor and I could not sleep. I was almost without hope when I saw a testimonial in the newspaper stating that Groder's Syrup had done for others. As a last effort to regain health, I thought that I would buy it. Just before Christmas last my son Fred went to St. John and brought me home a bottle of your remedy. I used with the following results:

I eat as I wish and have no distress from my food; my appetite is first-class, my food is good to me now. I sleep as sound as a child. I do all my own work without the aid of a servant and can do a day's washing without feeling much tired whereas I could not do it at all before taking Groder's. I do feel grateful to you, gentlemen, for placing so valuable a remedy upon the market. I give all the credit for present state of good health to your medicine.

I am willing to answer any questions concerning the above, for I firmly believe your remedy will cure other sufferers as it has cured me. I conscientiously make this statement without any inducement or reward knowing that to be one of the best medicines in the market for Dyspepsia.

Respectfully yours,

ELEANOR BURKE

MRS. MARSH'S XMAS PARTY

Mrs. Marsh sat at the old red secretary that had been her great-grandmother's writing names on two slips of paper in a stiff, angular hand.

She was a good-looking old woman with no little force of character indicated in her firm chin, her dark and still lustrous eyes, and tightly compressed lips. The day was cold but bright and sunny and Christmas was near at hand.

It had snowed the night before, a light feathery snow, and it still clung to the leafless branches of every tree and shrub hiding their bareness and blackness, and making them wondrously beautiful.

Old Mrs. Marsh was a woman who thought little about the beauties of nature and she never gazed about anything, but when Jane Day her one servant came into the room to ask if she should smash or just bile the potatoes for dinner, Mrs. Marsh had said:

"The trees look beautiful to-day, don't they, Jane?"

"They do, ma'am for a fact, replied Jane. I must look like Paradise over yonder in the woods."

"Paradise Jane? I hope there isn't going to be any snow in Paradise. I'm chilly all the time in winter, Where's Letty?"

Letty came into the room at that moment. She was a slender, pretty young girl of eighteen, with a delicate pink and white complexion, and eyes like her grandmother's but larger and more vivacious.

"They had never yet sparkled with the wrath that sometimes made the old lady's eyes what Jane Day called 'killin' black.' It had been a long time since Letty had seen her grandmother seated at the old secretary, for her grandmother had given nearly all of her correspondence to Letty herself.

"Therefore Letty said, in some surprise; 'Writing letters, grandmother?'

"No! I'm not. Then she laid down her pen and said:

"I'm making out a list of persons I want to send some invitations to."

"Invitations?"

"I said invitations."

"The old lady spoke sharply and her voice had a note of irritation as she said:

"I'm going to have a party Christmas evening and invite my friends."

She accented the last word strangely, and her still strong and firm voice grew harsh as she added: "Yes Letty Marsh I'm going to let some folks in and around Derby know just what I think of 'em. I'll let 'em know that their room's better'n their company at my house and that I don't want anything to do with 'em."

"Why grandma?"

"The old lady went on harshly.

"There's folks here in Derby that's told stories about me and done all they could to injure and spite me in all sorts of beautiful ways. I know 'em through and through, and I'll let 'em know that I know 'em too! I'll give 'em something to talk about!"

"The old lady's faded cheeks had grown rosy, and her black eyes were sparkling behind her spectacles, and she had patted the floor steadily and angrily with one of her small, alighted feet.

"Letty stared in silence. She had not seen her grandmother so worked up for a long time."

"I've been all the morning making out a list of the names of them I'm going to invite as well as a list of those I'm not going to invite; and—Letty!

Mrs. Marsh looked sharply at the girl over the top of her glasses.

"Well, grandma?"

"I haven't invited George Parks, and I don't intend inviting him."

Letty's face crimsoned, and she did not look at her grandmother.

"No, I suppose not, she said.

"No, I haven't, said Mrs. Marsh; it'll be just as good a way as any, of letting him know that I'm not going to have him hanging around you so much. I never did think much of that Parks family."

She turned to her desk and put the cards in her ink bottle wiped her pen carefully on a bit of chamois skin, and put her writing materials away carefully doing everything in a neat, precise way.

"I wish, she said to Letty, who had sat down in a big chair-covered rocking chair, and was pretending to read a paper she had taken up, I wish you'd go into the village after dinner and see if Letty Lake can come to-morrow and write out and address these invitations for me. You write a very neat hand, but Letty does all sorts of fancy writing."

"I've heard she's taken to writing cards and invitations and things of that kind to help support herself since her father died. She's a nice girl, and it'll help her along a little and give her a little more spending money for Christmas if I hire her to do this writing for me."

Netty Lake came out to the Marsh house the next morning. She was a bright, tidy-looking young woman, still wearing mourning for her parents, who had left her quite alone in the world and partly dependent on her own exertions or her support.

Letty had gone into Derby to spend the day with one of her girl friends. Letty had been an orphan for years, and had always lived with her grandmother.

Now I'll tell you just what I want you to do Netty. I am going to have a Christmas party, and I want you to write the invitations for it, and make 'em just as neat and elegant as you can. You'll find everything you want right there in the secretary. Write one for yourself too.

"Oh, thank you, Mrs. Marsh, I'll write mine first for practice, and then show it to you to see if the form suits you."

"Very well; that's a good idea. You'll find a list of the names of the persons to be invited on a slip of blue paper in the box of writing."

"I must go now and see to my mince-meat. I prefer to make my own. Then it's done to suit me."

She went out into her exquisitely tidy kitchen, and Netty sat down before the old red secretary and wrote a well-worded and neat invitation in a clear, round hand. Then she took it out to the kitchen and read it to Mrs. Marsh.

"That'll do very well, the old lady said approvingly. I'm not used to giving parties, and I don't know just what the latest wrinkle in invitations is, but I'm very well pleased with that. You found the list of names?"

"Yes, I have it."

"Then you may go ahead and write the invitations, and if it wouldn't be too much trouble, I'll have you take 'em into Derby with you and mail 'em for me. They ought to have been sent out before, but I never thought of giving this party until yesterday."

"No trouble at all. I'll be very glad to mail them for you."

"They were all written, sealed, stamped, and tied up in a neat package before noon."

"But you ain't going home before dinner Netty? Mrs. Marsh said, when Netty asked for her hat and cloak."

"Yes, I must. I have some copying to do for Squire Padgett, and I told him I'd call for it before noon, if I could. I'll mail the invitations on my way to his office, and I'll be sure to come myself. I know we'll have a lovely time. It's very kind of you to go to so much trouble for the pleasure of others, although, of course, it will be a pleasure to you to have your friends around you."

"Yes, said Mrs. Marsh, in an abstracted manner; yes, that's so, Netty, and then she added, a little defiantly, but I'm giving this party on purpose to spite certain persons. I know it ain't the right spirit but I can't help it. I've stood a good deal from some that ain't never had no call to abuse me, and I can see right through the hypocrisy of others who pretend to be my friends."

Preparations for the party went actively on, but Letty took little part in them; and it was evident that she had small interest in the event.

She would have looked forward to it with such eagerness and would have been so happy in helping to arrange and plan everything if George Parks had been invited.

He had known Letty all his life, and he was very fond of her, and she had lately come to realize that George was dearer to her than anyone else in the world.

Mrs. Marsh was a warm and true friend to those who basked in the sunshine of her friendship, and she felt her heart glowing with affection for these old and favored friends as she dressed in her best silk and laces to receive them on this Christmas night.

Her house was aglow with warmth and light. The rooms were tastefully decorated with plants and holly and Christmas wreaths.

She had met with no disappointment in her cakes, rolls or salads. All had gone well.

She thought of the pleasure her friends would find in the preparations she had made for their entertainment, and she wished that the uninvited might have a peep into her dining room and thus have a fuller appreciation of what they had missed because of their antagonism to her.

Thoughts of these uninvited persons were uppermost in Mrs. Marsh's mind as she dressed to receive her guests.

She had been too busy all day to think much about anything but her household duties, and there had been little of the Christmas-spirit in her activity.

She had planned to give herself a half-hour or more of quiet rest in her room before the guests should arrive.

In this hall hour something of the true Christmas-spirit came into the heart of Mrs. Marsh.

She had gone to a window in her room, and was looking out into the Christmas night, as fair and peaceful a night as it must have been all those centuries ago when the shepherds watching their flocks, saw that bright star in the east, that herald of peace on earth and good will toward men. As she looked at the Christmas stars and out over the snow-covered fields toward the town, she could see lights twinkling in the houses of the persons she had wilfully offended and put a slight upon. She could see between her house and the village the humble home of Esther Parks. A home in which she had once been a welcome guest, she thought suddenly of that quarrel between them. It had been, after all, for a trifling cause, and Mrs. Marsh remembered suddenly how they had been girls together. They were old women now, with little time left to make their peace with each other and with God.

And there was old Mrs. Lewis. She remembered how she had come and stayed with her when Letty's father was born, and they had been such dear friends then.

So many forgotten deeds of kindness were suddenly remembered; so many dead memories were suddenly quickened into life.

A party of young people went by in a sleigh. They were singing an old Christmas carol. Their voices rang out clearly and sweetly in the frosty air. The old woman at the window heard them distinctly as they sang:

"Now to the Lord sing praises,
All you within this place,
And with true love and brotherhood
Each other now embrace;
The holy tide of Christmas
All others doth efface."

"Glad tidings glad tidings,
For all that are astray,
For Jesus Christ, our Saviour,
Was born on Christmas."

She stood at the window several minutes. Her fingers had gone on down the road; then turned and walked across the room with traces of tears on her face.

"I oughtn't to have done it, she said to herself in keen self-reproach. I oughtn't to have done such a thing right at Christmas time. It's no time to feel malice. I'd ought to have charity to me, if at no other time."

There wasn't a bit of the holy tide of Christmas in my heart, and there oughtn't to be anything else in the heart of an old woman like me.

"I've been hard and bitter toward my enemies always; I ain't known what charity was; I'm a wicked old woman. Poor old Esther Parks, and Lucinda Drake and Hannah Deane, and all the others I've tried to spite will feel that—"

The door bell rang sharply, and Mrs. Marsh hurriedly wiped her eyes and went down stairs to welcome her first guests. The rustling of her handsome silk sounded hateful to her, and the Christmas decorations seemed a sort of mockery.

Two persons were standing in the hall below—a young man and an old woman.

The old woman was struggling with a woollen muffler wrapped around her bonnet, for the night was very cool. She came forward eagerly, but with a feeble gait, when she saw Mrs. Marsh.

"Oh Lucy! she said with outstretched arms."

"Why Esther! Esther Parks! cried Mrs. Marsh and her hands clasped those of the other old woman, and their arms went around each other's necks.

"I made George fetch me early a-purpose, so I could see you a minute or two before the others came, said old Mrs. Parks brokenly. I was so 'trailed I couldn't come; rheumatism had been real bad this winter, and I've conked a good deal. But I've saved up my strength and George fetched me in a sleigh. I was bound to come the 'minnit I got your invitation, and—"

"My invitation, Esther?"

"Yes Lucy; and I never in all the days of my life was so glad to get anything. You don't know how much I've wanted to make up, and I nearly cried my two eyes out over that invitation. I'd come over right then and see you, only I wanted to save up for to-night, and—"

The door bell rang again, and the next minute Mrs. Marsh was saying:

"Why Hannah Deane!"

"Did you think I wouldn't come?" cried Mrs. Deane, excitedly, and in a high voice suggestive of tears. Nothing could have kept her away. I've kept away from you too long how Lucy. My husband's with me. He's out blanketing the horses but I couldn't wait another instant to see you, and tell you how I cried over that blessed invitation of yours."

"I made me so sorry for all the petty hateful past, and I wouldn't have missed coming to-night for—here's Mr. and Mrs. Drake, Lucy."

Lucinda Drake! said Mrs. Marsh. O Lucy! and Mrs. Drake could say no more but silently put her arms around Mrs. Marsh and they kissed each other with streaming eyes.

A second shrill, high-pitched old voice suddenly cried out gleefully—

"Well I've come, Lucy Marsh! Here I be, and it's the first time I've been out at night for five years. But I said the minute I got my invite, that I was a-comin', for you'd come more'n half way in asking me to come and I was bound to come the other half, and here I be."

"I'm—am so glad to see you, Abby Lyman."

"Oh I knowed you wanted me to come, or you wouldn't have sent me. There never was any two-facedness about you Lucy an' I'm 'goin' to say right here fore everybody that I was a deal the most to blame in that old trouble bet-ten-us."

"Oh no no, said Mrs. Marsh, quickly; it was my fault abbe. But we won't say anything more about it."

"But I'd—d hold a spy, Lucy."

"No I Abbe—no a bit. It's Christmas time you know."

"The arrivals followed each other in quick succession."

Mrs. Marsh was too dazed to try to fathom the mystery of it all until Netty Lake came and then she drew her aside to say: "Netty, Netty there's been a mistake of some sort. I didn't invite one of those persons here."

"Why, Mrs. Marsh!"

"I didn't. Netty. Don't you remember I told you that I was going to have the party to—spite certain ones? Well these are the people I intended a-iting. I can't make it out."

"Well Mrs. Marsh I wrote the invitations and sent them to the persons whose names I found on the slip of paper in the box of paper in the secretary and—"

"Just wait a minute, and Mrs. Marsh hastily left the room. Netty heard her come back.

Netty Lake gave you the wrong list of names, and I destroyed the right one."

"Why Mrs. Marsh! Netty looked frightened."

"But Netty as it turned out, I really gave you the right list and burned the one I ought to have burned."

"It's all right. Don't you worry. I'll explain matters to those who'll think they've been slighted, and I can have another party or something. I'm so glad it's turned out as it has. Just look at my Letty and George Parks sitting over in that corner? Did you ever see two happier looking youngsters? He is a fine manly-looking young fellow isn't he?"

"I'll be so glad to give a wedding party some of these days."

"Don't you ever breathe to anyone that I didn't invite these people here. I'm a thousand times happier than I'd been if the others had come instead."

Here came old Esther Parks and Hannah Deane. I'm going to take them out into the dining-room and show them how nice the table looks, and get them a cup of coffee in advance. Esther always used to say that my coffee was coffee and went down stairs to welcome her first guests.

At midnight Mrs. Marsh again stood at a window, looking out into the Christmas night.

The kindly good-by's of her guests still sounded pleasantly in her ears.

Her heart was full because of the tender words they had said at parting.

By her side, on a table, were the little gifts some of them had brought her—good-will gifts and offerings of peace. All the old enemies were dead, the old enemies forgiven.

"The sleigh-load of young people who had passed the house early in the evening now went by on their homeward way, and Mrs. Marsh lips moved with an unspoken "Amen" as they sang:

"All glory to the God on high,
And to the earth be peace;
God-will henceforth from heaven to men
Begin and never cease."

WANTED--A WIFE

Beautiful and with a Clear, Healthy Complexion

Of course every man wants his wife to be beautiful; but how can she be beautiful if the face and hands are disfigured by rough skin, freckles, tan or eruptions? Nothing will bring such a damper on love as a blemished face.
