 How to Make a ROUGH SKIN SMOOTH

There are some whose skin is naturally very tender, so much so, that a slight change in temperature, either heat or cold, will cause it to become rough and scale. This is very annoying, whether it makes the skin sore or not. A trouble of this kind is due to the skin being too dry, the underlying glands not giving it food enough. It must, therefore, be fed artificially. This may be done by using OLA CREAM, a scientific skin food. OLA CREAM is not a thin, watery fluid, but is of a creamy consistency. Prepared from a valuable formula, consisting of healthful ingredients, which feed the skin, building up the tissues, supplying to the glands that which they lack to prevent roughness.

Anyone who is troubled with roughness of the skin or chapped hands will find OLA CREAM a sure preventative.

We are receiving many testimonials for OLA CREAM. We have made a study of the care of the skin, and will be glad to give any information to anyone writing us.

Unfortunately for science, pedagogy and morality, a con-siderable part of this teaching is not in accord with the views of specialists or the results of the latest scientific investigation. Thus it comes about that there is in the United States a great educational movement which is attempting to build up moral reform up-on a basis of doctrine which scientific authority disproves."

at the New Grand last night, proved one of the best melo-dramas yet seen here this season, and is probably the best play that Lincoln J. Carter has given to the stage. It is a realistic picture of life in the far west, and the scenery was approprite and pictures-que. The Indian camp of the first act and the council fire of the second act were worthy of special note. In the latter case the Indians seated amid wild and rugged surroundings, and plotting vengeance against the whites on account of their territorial encroachments, presented a picture that was intensely real and convincing. The Indian actress, Go-Won-Go Mo-hawk, gave an effective presentation role of White Eagle, and the subordinate parts were in satisfactory keeping. The two equine actors, Wongo and Buckskin, came in for much of the applause accorded by the audience.

Hypnotism at the London Opera House.

Last night a well-filled house greeted the second performance of Prof. Pull and his vaudevillians at the London Opera House. Prof. Pull did some marvellous mindreading feats without contact, receiving gratifying applause. Rice and Raymond received well earned recognition for their illustrated songs, as did the other performers in their respective lines. Prof. Pull closed the evening with his hypnotic scenes, placing his subjects under complete control, and making them perform some side-spliting antics. A special matinee (reserved) will be given today, when Prof. Pull will perform the wonderful test that killed the famous mind-reader, Irving Bishop. It will be remembered that Bishop was performing the feat of reading the mind through copper wires before the students of Bellvue Hospital, New York, when he fell into a cataleptic sleep and the doctors pronounced him dead. Being curious to see the brain of such a mental marvel as Bishop, they agreed to open the skull. Upon doing so they discovered life and tried to replace the portion of the skull, but to no avail, as Bishop died after lingering a few days. His mother recovered a large sum after a long legal fight.

It is in the third act that the author has drawn his strongest climax. Overcome by his love, madedned with the thought that the woman he loves is in danger of contamination with the world, imbued with the revelation that he must kill her body to save her soul, John Storm bids her prepare for the end. With the fervor of the Glory he had known in youth, she brings back to him the love of their young days, their parting when the world came between them, appeals to his love, and conquers and saves herself.

Sensational Affair in St. Thomas-A Well-Known Dentist involved.

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 31.-Quite an exciting and sensational affair took place on Talbot street today. For some time things have not gone pleas-antly in the home of Dr. I. P. Cunningham, dentist, resulting in the separation of the doctor and his wife. Farley & McLaws, barristers, were instructed by her to take proceedings for alimony, and have issued a writ. Today her brother, J. H. Hessian, of Covington, came to the city. Hot words passed between the doctor and his brother-in-law on meeting, and on the stairs leading to her solicitors the doctor struck Hessian in the face. POLITICAL

Hon. Mr. Harty Likely To Be Opposed by J. H. Metculfe.

Special Visit of Mr. J. P. Whitney to Ottawa-Mr. Harty's Successor.

The Kingston Conservative Association has elected delegates to choose a candidate to oppose Hon. W. Harty. The candidate will be selected Thursday night. James H. Metcalfe will doubtless be the man.

Hon. Wm. Harty will round out the year as a member of the Ontario Legislature, and on Jan. 2 will forward his resignation to Speaker Evanturel. It is possible that a new election will be held there during January, as King-ston wishes to have a member at the coming session of the legislature. There are names already mentioned for the vacancy on the Liberal side, among whom are John Carson, R. F. Elliott, John McKelvey and Mayor Kent. Mr. Gross, of Welland, will move the address in reply to the speech from the throne at the opening of the legislature, and Lieut.-Col. Mutrie, of South Wellington, will second it.

At Belleville 467 voters have been registered under the manhood suffrage act for the parliamentary election. J. P. Whitney, leader of the Ontario opposition, who was in Ottawa on Tuesday, is said to have made arrangements with the local Conservatives to bring out in Ottawa an Irish Catholic nand Slattery, who was defeated in the last election. At that time Messrs. Lumsden and Powell, respectively Liberal and Conservative, were elected, and there was great dissatisfaction because both Irish Catholic candidates were defeated. Afterwards the local Irish Conservatives were very dissat-isfied, and the visit of Mr. Whitney is said to be with the object of patching up of the difficulty, and asking Mr. Slattery to run again in the Conservative interest.

Our Times and "The Good Old

Here we are at the end of another year, obliged to read, or skip over, more than one homily in current periodical literature, on the degeneracy of the age, and the awful outlook that there is for "society." Are such fearful outpourings and dreary forebodings warranted? Is the present a time when the pessimist should be allowed to hold undisputed sway? We do not so think. The facts do not warrant It. The world is not growing worse. It is growing better. Never at any previous Christmas time have the great mass of our people been better employed, at higher wages, or with more comforts of life. In no previous era have our people been better behaved, more moral, more inclined to give their support to that which is noble and elevating and to discountenance that which is low and calculated to degrade. We could easily establish a contrast between conditions now and what they were in this part of Canada 50 or 75 years ago, but we need not go back so far to prove that there has been real and substantial progress in this country. Even in the last 25 or 30 years there has been improvement, and careful observers will bear us out in this view.

If, however, we go back 100 years and take conditions as they existed in England at the beginning of the nineteenth century, and contrast them with be greatly impressed with the improvement. The people are better fed, betpoverty, and much better education for good deal about gambling among those who are called "the classes." Gambling there is today, and occasionally lapses from virtue are chronicled, but 100 years ago everybody gambled, immorality was widely prevalent, condoned, and winked at, even in court Would such a condition of affairs be tolerated today?

The temper of the people-their standard for punishing those found guilty of crimes-has vastly improved in 100 years, as is well shown by a recent writer on the condition of London 100 years ago. Detected crime was condignly and often most barbarously punished. In November, 1800, one John Butler, convicted of having "received several trusses of hay, knowing them to have been stolen, and for which he gave an inferior price," was publicly whipped from Whitechapel Bars to the further end of Mile End Town, a distance of two miles. On a parade of this sort the executioner flogged the culprit as mercilessly as he pleased, and the mob encouraged him to lay it on well. An exposure in the pillory, if the victim were in any way unpopular, was an ordeal to be dreaded almost as much as a whinping at the cart's tail; what with dead cats, rats, addled eggs, potatoes, turnips, mud and garbage, he was made to feel the "force of popular opinion," sometimes to within an ace of death. The gallows did a very brisk trade in those days. During one session at the Old Bailey, in 1801, sentence of death was passed upon "Thomas Fitzroy, alias Peter itzwater, for breaking and entering the dwelling house of James Harris, in the day-time, and stealing a cotton counterpane; William Cooper, for stealing a linen cloth, the property of George Singleton, in his dwelling house; J. Davis for a burglary; Richard Emms for breaking into the dwelling house of Mary Humphreys, in the day-time, and stealing a pair of stockings; Richard Forster for a burglary and stealing six silver spoons; Robert Pearce for returning from transportation; Richard Alcorn for stealing a horse; John Nowland and Richard Freke for burglary and stealing four teaspoons, a gold snuff-box, etc.; John Goldfried for stealing a blue coat; Joseph Huff for stealing a lamb, and John Pass for stealing two lambs." The "condemned sermon" at Newgate was a more or less fashionable entertainment, the felons sitting in an open pew with a coffin on a table in the middle. Suicides were buried at cross roads, a stake driven through the body-an indignity strangely severe when we contrast our present disposal of those who take their own lives.

We do not sigh for these "good old times." Our present-day times are good enough for us. They are a vast Improvement on those that have gone before. And they are largely what we Felicity of the deaf: they do not have to listen to long talk.

We notice in a Brantford paper that the Liberals of Brant are in "a most disrupted condition." because so many leading men are eligible candidates for the Legislature, and willing to run. This is a comical characterization of the situation. All that has to be done to insure victory in a constituency so well provided with eligible legislative material is to hold a convention, and choose the strongest man. Intelligent Liberals do not play into the hands of the enemy by refusing to stand by the choice of a representative assembly of the party.

Begin Right.

The time is at hand when human nature, as on countless former occasions, will manifest itself by a fresh crop of New Year resolutions. With the tearing off of the last page of the old calendar and the beginning of the new, there is a sense of completeness regarding the past and a desire to begin anew, with higher aspirations and new ideals. On so many such former occasions have people begun well and fallen short in the race, that the subject of New Year resolutions has become a matter of burlesque. In spite of all that has been said, by comic writers, and all that has been pictured by caricaturists, it is well worth one's effort to resuscitate the old practice and come forward with our list of good resolutions for 1902. Even though one may fail, the mere effort of reaching out will lift him to reached. A good resolution, even when broken, gives a certain amount of mental training. Probably a good idea would be moderation in one's resolutions, a matter which would render them more easy of attainment.

We will not advance anything by way of specific advice in regard to New Year resolutions. That can best be done by each individual for himself. There are a few cardinal virtues, however, in each man's make-up, which it would be well to broaden and deepen. Man is essentially a moral creature, and the danger lies not in an incapacity for forming proper conceptions of right and wrong. Even the most immoral man has in him a sense of right, which, if followed, or only partially followed, would place him on a higher level. In a certain sense virtue is knowledge, but as a general uinversal acquisition than is the prac-

Social Function of the Saloon.

Recently some of the journals have called attention to what is termed the social function of the saloon. That is the place which the public house occupies as an easily-accessible social club. There can be no doubt that this a side of life that demands consideration. In England there are many public houses where men meet for social intercourse, and where the drinking is merely an incident, and not the essential thing. In olden times there were more places of this character; in fact, the harmful thing in connection with the drink traffic in the large cities of England is the increase of "long-bars" and "gin-palaces"; that is, places that are for drinking and nothing else. Drink as much as you can in as short a space as possible and get out. This seems to be the motto of such places of business, if such a traffic can be called business. Their aim is to sell a large quantity of vile liquor at as large a profit as possible. All sober citizens feel that something should be done to check that kind of thing. In the more and sometimes excess. Many a young man had been attracted by the social allurements and then led into indulgence. But at any rate, those oldfashioned, respectable inns recognized that they existed for the public and not the public for them. Even the old name, "public house," has a social flavor in it. One point is clear, that the social instinct cannot and ought not to be rooted out. One form of temperance activity in England is to provide "a public house without the and think." And still another is to althing, knowledge of right is a more many-sided question. But one thing not be passed we have to deal with human nature as it is, and we must

Forgiving Time.

[Milwaukee Journal.] With all of the Christmas giving that everyone is busy about at this time, let there be a forgiving. New York, Dec. 31.-Andrew Carnegie has given away $40,000,000 in 1901. In 1899 Carnegie gave away $5,000,000. On New Year's Day, 1901, his gifts aggregated $20,000,000. In 1901, as Carnegie has had nothing else to do, he has multiplied the amount of all his sent year Carnegie has not given away more than his income, estimated at $15,000,000 a year. Now that he has broken into his principal the income has, of course, been reduced as well and this will continue to grow smaller until Mr. Carnegie is an ordinary millionaire.

The exact amount of Carnegie's wealth has never been made public, but the estimate of $250,000,000 is accepted as conservative by Wall street men and financiers. Carnegie's gifts in 1901 have been as

A Message From America.

Sir Wemyss Reid, after spending a few weeks in America, sends home an account of the situation so far as he ould become acquainted with it. He arrived in New York at the time of the municipal election and found feeling running very high, and those with whom he met were fighting with passionate energy against Tammany. As a proof that all "the lies" were not on one side, he quotes the statement that to defeat "Squire Croker" would disappoint the English, and that King Edward was interested in the success of "The Boss." He found that Americans were tired of the Boer war; their nterest in it was passing away; but many of them looked upon its prolongation as a serious business for

He was evidently very much struck by the Congressional Library at Washington. "Many pages might be devoted to a description of this noble national institution, over which the chief librarian, Mr. Putnam, presides with so much grace, and so genuine an enthusiasm; but I must sum up everything by saying that if it were only for the sake of the Congressional Liited by every stranger who lands on the soil of the United States." . He notes also the "dignified simplicity" of the White House. "I learned with pleasure from the lips of President Roosevelt himself when .I had the honor of being presented to him, that he at least recognizes the eminent fitness of his official home for the purpose to which it is dedicated, and that he has no sympathy with the demand of a section of the American public for its enlargement or reconstruction." The Englishman was astonished in the light

Thus, Sir Wemyss Reid discourses pleasantly of a pleasant visit. He found the intelligent people interested in British affairs. They held a high opinion of Lord Rosebery, but Mr. Chamberlain had gone down in their estimation. On the whole, there was not much hostility towards England, the stranger was well received, and was much impressed with the strong,

De Sauty and Marconi.

The Marconi experiments in wireless telegraphy are having a reception somewhat similar to that accorded by gautions people to the first Atlantic cable. It was believed to be a failure, and the first operator. De Sauty, was looked upon as a myth. Concerning the matter the United States poet, Oliver Wendell Homes, wrote a somewhat humorous poem, in which he imagines De Sauty to be a spontaneous product of the electric current. The persons in the dialogue are skeptical professor and a "Bluenose," designated "Ceruleo-Nasal" in the poem; the latter is from the New-

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 81 .- Albert Hanon, 22 years old, a farmer, of Avoca. a., is the hero of 56 proposals of marlage and 56 rejections in 120 minutes. Hanson came to Omaha with the vowed purpose of taking a wife back ome with him, who would be prettier an his sweetheart in Avoca, with shom he quarreled. He went to the ourt house and asked for a marriage

When asked the name of the person whom he proposed to marry Hanson ne did not know; he expected the icense clerk to furnish a girl. Hanson was taken to the county judge and the matter explained to him. The judge took the young man around to the diferent offices, introduced him to each woman in the building, to whom Han-son promptly proposed in these words: "I have a farm and my uncle has a aloon, which I will inherit on his Will you marry me?"

In several cases his answer was, This is so sudden."

After being refused by all the girls in the county building, Hanson was taken to the city hall, where the same programme was carried out. Then the party went to the public library, but failed to find a girl willing to become the farmer's wife. Hanson declared he did not want a red-headed girl or a widow, and he went back to Avoca saying "Omaha girls were stuck up."

LUCK CAME TOO LATE

The Janitor Heard of a $21,000 Legacy Coming to Him and Prayed in Vain to Live.

New York, Dec. 31.-If Chas. Robert Kuhen, who was buried yesterday from his home, 710 East one hundred and forty-fourth street, had lived until the middle of next month, he would have come into possession of $21,000 left to him by his mother, who died recently in Wurtenburg, Germany.

Kuhen came to America thinking he would soon get rich here. He did not get along as well as he expected he would. In fact, his affairs went so ill that a few months ago he was glad set a job as janitor to keep his wife and three children. Three weeks ago he was taken ill with pneumonia, and his wife pawned almost every thing in the house to buy medicine and keep her children from starving. Last Friday Kuhen died, and that was the first inkling the tenants in the house had of the troubles of the family. Mrs. Hattie Robinson, who lives in the house, did all she could to help the family, and interested the other tenants in Mrs. Kuhen and the children. When Mrs. Robinson first learned of condition, Mrs. Kuhen said that the children had been without food for two days. She had then pawned even the bedclothes to get a few cents rather than make herself an object of charity. Some of the neighbors took up a collection along the street and ith a small insurance policy Mrs. Kuhen had on her husband's life, she was able to save the body from going to Potter's Field, and to provide food for the children. Some of the tenants said yesterday that Kuhen had been notified of his good luck a few days before his death, and that he had prayed for life, but the physician who came to attend him dur-ing his illness said his physical condition was too weak for him to survive the disease.

COULD SCARCELY WALK

This Man Was in a Very Bad Way, But at Last Found a Perfect Cure. Arnprior, Ont., Dec. 30. - This most significant statement is being published by Mr. J. H. Martin, of

"For eighteen years I have suffered with a severe backache, which was so bad that I could scarcely walk or lie down at times. I tried many medicines, but got no better till I ised Dodd's Kidney Pills. As soon as I began this treatment I commenced to improve very rapidly, and now I can do my work without any trouble. They are the greatest medicine I have ever used, most heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for Backache." Those who know Mr. Martin know that he means every word he says, and his plain statement must carry great weight. Dodd's Kidney Pills are very popular in Arnprior.

He talked at a distance of nearly half a mile to a neighbor's house on Christmas evening, and has, in the presence of a numof reputable citizens, conducted tests which were convincing for the distance of which the trials were made. Stubblefield claims that it is just as easy to communicate for miles as it is for yards. He contends that the earth by its revolving creates a certain amount of electricity, which encircles it like a blanket, and by absorbing which the earth has become practically a great magnet. STRANGE SHOOTING CASE. Vancouver, Dec. 31.—A strange shooting case took place last evening. Edgar Hull, a bridgeman, was found with a terrible bullet wound across his face. It is supposed the revolver was accidentally discharged while Hull was cleaning it. As a result of the accident he may lose the sight of both eyes and be terribly scarred for life. Hull is 27 years of age, and a native of Lancashire, England.

SALISBURY MAY BE A DUKE.

England's Premier Likely to Retire With New Rank.

Chief of the British Cabinet Declared To Be Planning a Return to Private Life.

London, Dec. 31.-It is stated that Lord Salisbury will retire from political life after the conclusion of the coronation festivities and that the King will grant him the dignity of a dukedom.

As a matter of fact, the prime minister might, without any initiative of his own, have become a duke at any time within the last fifteen years. On at least three occasions Queen Victoria urged him to accept a dukedom, and each time he respectfully declined the proffered honor.

There is one other wealthy and influential peer who is understood to be in the running for the ducal coronet and that is the Irish viceroy, the Earl of Cadogan.

ANOTHER ROSEBERY RUMOR. From a source which is generally well informed in the internal affairs of the Liberal party there comes a guarded but fairly confident assertion that Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman has approached Lord Rosebery with a view to the resumption by the latter of his place in the regular ouncils of the party. The announcement also includes a definite statement to the effect that Lord Rosebery firmly declined the invitation made to him, prefer ring for the present to retain the position of greater freedom and less responsibility which he has held since his renunciation of the leadership. There is nothing in either part of this rumor which is in the least degree incredible.

DELAY IN ARMY REFORM. Sir William St. John Brodrick's scheme of army reform is making slow if sure progress. Last April the war secretary promised that corps would be ready by Christmas. The appointed time has come, but the three army corps still only have paper existence. The promise was a rash one, but was made upon the supposition that active military operations in South Africa would by this time be sufficiently toned down to allow the return of the bulk of the troops. The war office now regards the formation of the three premier army corps as an impossible matter for at least another twelve months.

He could not deny to himself the principle of loyalty to the seigneur. It would have been all plain enough had he felt sure that the seigneur was on the right side; but the conflict of allegiance puzzled him terribly.

And now, having thus made the acquaintance of one who will play an important, though apparently obscure, part in this history-for its real importance.

portant, though apparently obscure, part in this history—for its real importance is not diminished by the fact that the name of the cure of Saint Felix will henceforth occur barely more than once again-it is time to leave the warm room and its fragrant blaze and to turn out into the night, in order to become ac-quainted with certain persons whose parts, if not more really important, will be far less obscure.

DETROIT'S DECEIVERS AND E. SIEVER.

Of the six nitchers who began the sea son with Detroit—Miller, Yeager, Cronin, Frisk, Owen and Siever—all we connected with that club in 1900, says a writer in the Sporting News, in an interesting review of the American League pitchers of 1901. The only man of the sextet who fell by the wayside was Frisk, who exploded early in June. In July "Lefty" High was secured from the Virginia-High was secured from the Virginia-Carolina League, and in his first game gave evidence of being a wonder. Celled on to do relief work later, however, he foozled and was banished. As High took part in but one full game. Owen in five and Frisk in one, the burden of Detroit's box-work fell on Miller, Siever, Yeager and Cronin. The former took the lau-rels, getting a percentage of .648 (.647 against the first division, .650 against the of the country, more rough-looking even than they, who walked by their side, and occupied himself by talking to them from time to time in some unknown tongue, and looking about him at the thick gray clouds that hung everywhere around. Whatever might have been his appearance under ordinary circumaround. Whatever might have been his appearance under ordinary circumstances, at present he certainly looked unpleasantly formidable. He carried a long knife without a sheath stuck through a sash which might or might not once have been of the orthodox tricolor; in spite of the cold his feet were bare; his clothes were ragged, and of no particular description, so much had they lost all pretence to form; and, instead of a cap, he wore a linen bandage wrapped tightly over his forehead and completely covering one eye. Had the scene been in the Pyrenees instead of the Jura he would have been taken for a contrabandista bearing off his cargo of sait or tobacco from a hardly-won battle with the douane. What the cart really contained could only be guesed at by an occasional movement among the cloaks second), and his performances stamp him as a twirler of the very first rank. That he is not a quitter is evidenced by his record in extra inning games. He his record in extra inning games. He won contests of 10, 11, 12 and 16 rounds in length, and the only over-time event he lost, a 15-inning game, in which he held his opponents down to two runs and seven hits, was decided through poor support accorded him. The Athletics support accorded him. The Athletics were the only proposition that proved troublesome to Miller, and against the two leaders his record of nine victories out of eleven games is the best achieve-ment of the season. For a left-hander Ed Siever was unusually reliable, though Ed Siever was unusually reliable, though he did fail to get a game from Washington and landed but one out of six from Chicago. Boston, Baltimore, Cleveland and Milwaukee could do little with him. Joe Yeager failed to exhibit such form as he did in 1900, though he took a ball from every club and had a percentage of over .500. Boston and Cleveland were his taplocas. Big Jack Cronin began the season in good style, but during June and July he was of little use to his team. Near the season's end he took a brace, and his appearance on the rubber was not, as before, the signal for general rejoicing on the part of his opponents. Cronin exhibited chief effectiveness against the Athletics, and was least succasional movement among the cloaks and wrappings with which it seemed filled, and by an occasional moan of pain, as if some woman lay there whom the cold and the jolting of the clumsy conveyance caused to suffer terribly.

The second of the Jura on the westaffords anything like the grandeur that belongs to its eastern face; but winter aggrandises all things, and now this pass which the travelers were ascending had become not only grand but even terrible. In summer, no doubt, like a hundred other passes of the kind that run along the border of the Franche Comte, it led between hills covered from base to summit with green turf and waving woods, of which the monotony was only occasionally broken by some against the Athletics, and was least successful against Boston. He was the only one of the quartet who failed to get a percentage of over .500. High had a clean record, winning a game from Milwaukee. Frisk could defeat Cleveland and Milwaukee, and that was about the extent of his chility. the extent of his ability, though he did reel off .555 in nine games. Owen pitched was only occasionally broken by some sudden mass of dark gray rock, be-neath which the river leapt and sparkled in only a few games, and exhibited splendid form in a contest with Chi.ago. In comparison with 1900, Owen gained 400, Frisk .180 and Siever .035, while Cronin lost .015, Miller .030 and Yeager .073 The record. like a mere silver thread. But in the depth of winter the whole scene is trans-formed, so that instead of being green and gray the hills were now white with limitless snow and black with leafless trees; while under the massive sky the 079. The record: river no longer leaped and sparkled, but, fed by countless torrents, gloomily rushed along with a dull ceaseless roar. He would be a bold man, even though well versed in the country, who should seek to guide himself or another through seek to guide himself or another through the hopeless sameness of those round, dome-shaped hills, undistinguished from one another by any of the sharp and varied outlines that among the Alps make every peak a landmark. Only one summit in the whole landscape stood for a sign, which, unlike the rest, was high enough to stand bald and bare out of the forest; and this in the darkness only looked like a vast cupola of cloud. The road itself, besides those caused by the snow, was not without other and more serious dangers—for it hung high above the river; and although the descent could not properly be called precipitous, still it was quite far and steep enough to make a fall fatal, in one way or another. The travelers proceeded for a long time without a word, unless one could call words the sounds addressed to the mules by their guide. At last, however, a man's voice cried out from the cart—"Diarrel". SIEVER A COMER. Another writer in the Sporting News says of London's former pitcher: "Siever, Detroit's tall southpaw, has been hold-jout for a salary of $3,000, but satis-

tory terms were arrived at on Satur-f, and he affixed his name to a con-act. Stallings found him pitching for Canadian club in 1900, sized him up as "Do not call me 'Monseigneur!' How far are we from Les Vacheries?"
"Six miles," and he stirred up the mules, who had taken advantage of this slight conversation to slacken their pace. comer, and brought him out in fast company. He has an inch or two the best of six feet, but is an athlete from the ground up. He has a wide, swinging delivery, good speed and command, and did very well for the Tigers last season. "Pierre!" again called out the voice from the cart. "Monseigneur?" Interesting New York State Statistics-In "Monseigneur?"
"How often am I to tell you not to call me 'Monseigneur?" How long will it be before we reach Les Vacheries?"
The guide shrugged his shoulders; but the gesture, though significant, was not seen by Monseigneur, who repeated his question crease in Number of Recoveries.

"But we must get there tonight."

"As Monseigneur pleases." And again, after a long look at the sky behind him, he urged on the mules, who, considering the circumstances, certainly did their best. Frobably they, too, wished to pass the night at Les Vacheries.

The flakes of snow, which had hitherto been fluttering through the air languidly and undecidedly, now began to increase both in size, in number, and in speed. They seemed to have been seized with a sudden purpose.

PARTIAL TO OLD GLOVES

Once Suited, Player Never Likes to Break in New Ones.

Some Fielders Are as Hard to Please in This Particular as a Sum-

Baseball players are as erratic about the kind of gloves or mitts they use as they usually are in the kind of game they play. Infielders want catchers mitts, first basemen wear a second baseman's glove, outfielders use a first baseman's mitt and so on. They are as hard to played as a summer cirl, and when to please as a summer girl, and when once they get a glove or mitt that suits them, with a hole in the center big enough to hold the ball, even if they don't get the sphere fairly in their hands, nothing can induce them to use another or get a new one another or get a new one.

"One thing that helps me out wonderfully in fielding my position is the mitt
I use, instead of a glove," said Lave Cross, the Athiletics' third baseman, one day last season, in Chicago, while sitting on the bench watching Connie Mack's new youngster, McKinney, cavort about third and short.

"I can't use a glove, and I find that many times balls that otherwise would have gone through me stick in my mitt. I what a mitt because I have always been used to it. I used to be a catcher and got used to it. I used to be a catcher and got used to wearing a big mitt all the time. Why, I was lost in a little thin-fingered glove. Felt too much as though I had on kid gloves, and so I got me a mitt made to the very limit of a third baseman's size."

of a third baseman's size."

Comments on the way Cross went after balls around third, and the way he almost always got them, or at least knocked them down, often cutting to a scratch single what had all the tags of a sure double, are frequently heard in the grand stand.

Herme McFarland, Comiskey's clever left-fielder, also used a mitt instead of the conventional outfielder's glove. His explanation is similar to that of Lave the conventional outfielder's glove. His explanation is similar to that of Lave Cross. "Mack" began professional ball as a backstop, and he has never been at home with anything but a mitt since. "Some ball players can't use a glove at all," says Cross. "It all depends on the man. I have frequently heard people wonder how I could use such a big mitt and get away with all these plays, and I guess that is the experience of every other player that uses a mitt instead of a glove.

"On the other hand, there are those who cannot use a mitt to save their lives. For instance, Lajoie can't catch a ball with my mitt. He played first base for a time for the Quakers. He started in with the first baseman's big mitt almost as large as a catcher's started in with the first baseman's big mitt, almost as large as a catcher's, but after he dropped a couple he went back to his thin-fingered second baseman's glove. He tried the various sizes of mitts to see if he could get used to them, but gave up in despair, and used only his light glove, where most players want a mitt as big and thick as a mattress."

"He couldn't throw his mitt in the air to stop some of those drives to right as Isbell attempts so often, then," cut in Joe Cantillon, who had gone over to the Athletics' bench in time to hear Lave's

"By the way, what would you do in case the ball was brought down and the base runner put out by such a play?" queried Lajole. queried Lajole.
"What would I do? Wouldn't the man

"But the first baseman has no more right to throw his mitt at a fly ball than he has to throw a clothes basket."

"Oh, yes," returned the umpire; "the mitt is in the game, isn't it?"

"But it is an improper use of the mitt," urged the captain of the Athletics.

"Well, I'm not worrying about having to decide such a question right off," is the way Cantillon turned off the questioner. "I've seen thousands of them try for it, but I never saw one of them come near the ball. Even if they did hit it, the ball would probably carry the mitt some distance, and would be more "But the first baseman has no me mitt some distance, and would be more likely to prevent the right fielder from making a catch than in any way injur ing the chances of the base-runner."

How a Michigan Trapper Gets Many Pelts and Much Bounty.

Baraga, Mich., Dec. 31 .- For several months Wendelin Krisch, a trapper residing near Nestoria, has at frequent intervals appeared at the county clerk's office with wolf pelts on which he has been paid a bounty of $17 a plece, and in the aggregate has drawn a large sum. The success of the trapper has caused much speculation as to the methods he followed, the wolves being very cunning, shunning poison, and not often being trapped. Now Krich's secret has leaked out It developed that some months ago he managed to catch a female wolf in a trap. He built a large yard near his shanty, and in it kept the wolf, fastened to a log chain. Her howls bring wolves for miles around, and the trapper sitting in his cabin, calmly shoots them at his leisure.

In every section of the Peninsula wolves are reported unusually numerous this year. The deer, in consequence, are suffering, as the many carcasses seen in the woods testify, and lately, even men have been atf the article told of the latter transpired in Dickinson county. Claude Freckelton, employed as a cook at a logging camp, six miles from Floodwood, started in the evening to walk to the village. When half the distance he heard something running and it is the toward him and turning saw a welf close by. The man, not being armed, was badly frightened. The yelps of the wolf were answered by others, and soon four other of the animals had joined their companion. Freckelton luckily managed to find a club, and thus armed began backing away. The health but also gives hungry animals would circle around him, and snap at his legs, and whenever they came near enough he would strike at them.

In this manner the three remaining miles were traveled. Freckelton expected every minute would be his last, and finally, when just at the outskirts of the town the wolves made a jump at him, the leader was laid low with the club, and the man turned and ran safety, the wolves, frightened at the proximity of the houses, giving up

HELD AS A HORSE-THIEF. A man giving his name as Thomas Sellers and his age as 30 years, was brought to jail here last night from Strathroy by Detective Northgreaves and Constable Paisley, of Ilderton. He is charged with stealing a horse and set of harness from Albert Needham, of London township, on Friday night last. Squire Lacey remanded him till Jan. 4.

SABBATH SCHOOL CONCERT. The annual Sabbath school concert of the Centennial Methodist Church was held last night, proving a wellattended and successful event. Tea was served in the schoolroom by the ladies of the church congregation, and an interesting programme of songs, re-citations and dialogues was afterwards given in the church by the children of the Sabbath school.

SHENANGO AGROUND. News comes from Port Stanley that car ferry Shenango No. 2 struck the bottom in taking her dock here last night and soon became helpless and gradually worked down the lake. She now lies hard aground about 300 feet east of the harbor on a sandy bottom, and so far is taking very little harm, but if wind comes in off the lake she is in a bad position.

A very pleasant evening was spent last night at the asylum, when the at- vention. tendants and officers entertained about 200 friends from the city. A dance was first held in the large dancing hall and afterwards dainty refreshments were served to the guests. Three special cars were needed to convey the party to and from the place of amuse-

THE COPP COMPANY. A Hamilton dispatch says: The Copp Bros. Company, Limited, stove and furnace manufacturers, have paid their creditors in full since winding up its business. The company was compelled to make enormous sacrifices in order to accomplish this during the year, but since disposing of the foundry to the McClary Manufaacturing Company, of London, they have cleared off every dollar of debt and have proved beyond question the firm's perfect solvency at the time of the crisis.

MR. WM. GAMMAGE AS SCHOOL TRUSTEE.

The fourth ward is priding itself on the opportunity presented of electing to the school board a good business man-progressive, upright and popular -in the person of Mr. Wm. Gammage, the well-known florist, who is making his first appearance as a candidate for municipal honors. If elected-and indications are that he certainly will be -Mr. Gammage will devote to school board duties the same energy and foresight so evident in his own business and in his work in connection with horticultural and fraternal societies and the Western Fair board. By returning Mr. Gammage, electors of No. ward will emphasize their des're for efficient and economical management of the city schools.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY. The Women's Auxiliary to the Young Men's Christian Association held their monthly meeting in the parlors on Monday, Dec. 30, the president, Miss Ware, in the chair, with a fair attendance of the members. Devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. Canon Dann, who led in prayer and followed with a Bible reading and very helpful talk. The several reports were then given, that from the treasurer and convener of the finance committee being especially encouraging. At

The withdrawal of Ald. Winnett and Mr. Peter Birtwistle from the mayoralty contest, and Mr. Beck's acceptance of the nomination, caused only half surprise. Ald. Winnett and Mr. Birtwistle had repeatedly declared to The Advertiser that they were in the field to stay, come what may, and had appearbefore the electors Monday night and had canvassed right and left. However, the influence worked. They withdrew. As yet they have made no public explanation of their sudden change of front. They had their opportunity last night at the public meeting at the East End hall, but did not take it. Only Ald Parnell and Mr Bartram appeared. Mr. Beck was not present. As the number of electors present was small, the meeting was adjourned until Thursday night at the city hall. Whether the explanation of the withdrawals will then be made to the public remains to be seen. In pri-Mr Birtwistle has said that as Ald. Winnett is out of the race, his object is accomplished, and it would be useless for him to run. In private, also, Ald. Winnett has said that if Ald.
