PROFESSOR PAUL.

The Story of a Life's Love.

(By Stuart Livingston, Barrister, Hamilton.)

"I had with me the picture of her which I painted at Saxon village when a boy, and I might look at her when I pleased, and no one could take it from me. And then I had my dreams. They were often of her, very often. I have sometimes thought perhaps the good angels were sorry for me."

"Ah, my friend, how I longed to see her face no one can ever know. Just to see it—to see it, if only for a minute. A minute is not long; listen."

He counted slowly up to 60, as the second hand of his watch completed the circle of its little dial. Then he said:

"No, a minute is not long, my friend, but it was all I asked for then."

He stopped speaking, his face was working nervously, and with one hand he was pulling at a loose piece of covering on his chair. Then he suddenly arose to his feet and turning toward me exclaimed:

"I was wrong, my friend. I say I was wrong when I told you why I went to the convent. That was not my reason. I went that I might gaze at those gray walls, and say to myself, 'She lives, Paul! She lives!' and you will surely see her, ah, yes, surely, because she lives."

As he stood before me his whole body was trembling, and he appeared to be again in the same excited state in which I had seen him once before. I felt sorry for the old man, and was about to make some soothing remark, when, without again speaking, he turned to the door and went out.

I saw him no more that night.

"I think," said Professor Paul, "that upon the occasion of your last visit, my friend, I told you somewhat concerning my life in the village of St. Par. If I did, I must have mentioned how distasteful to me its dull monotony became."

"The village, situated as it was, upon the river Oise, a small stream which bears its tribute to the earlier waters of the great Garonne, was withdrawn so far from the main line of travel that a strange face was seldom if ever seen there. Most of the people if not all—my friend, I believe I might say all, and not beyond the limit of the truth—at all events most of the people had been born there, and by the unassuming rusticity of those parts this fact alone was always considered sufficient reason for living and dying upon the spot. Someone has said that one of the four things which prevent a man otherwise capable from becoming great is love of home, and it may be that this sense of the dull apathy which seemed to have taken possession of the entire population. If there was a spark of life hidden away in the souls of any of the inhabitants it only showed the truth of this assertion, for it certainly never showed itself in their native village."

"At various times I was obliged to make at various times to the nearest town, for the purpose of purchasing food and other necessities for the farm, were indeed a slight relief, but even then I do not think I could have endured my existence in the village, had it not been that the one great object which absorbed all my thoughts called upon me so earnestly to stay."

"It was during my absence on one of the trips I have just mentioned, that an event occurred in the village which was destined to draw the long days of my sojourn there to a sudden close. I had been away purchasing seed as usual, but as the kind I wanted had become somewhat scarce, the crop having been very small that year, I experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining the required quantity. I was thus delayed longer than my accustomed time, and it was not until the evening of the third day after my departure, that I came within view of the village again. It was just after dusk as we rounded the last turn in the road, and saw beneath us the light twinkling in the valley. It was a beautiful sight even to my eyes, which had looked upon it so many times before."

"Below our feet lay the village, its many glittering lights making it appear like some quiet lake, embedded among the tall hills, and yielding back again to heaven a pale reflection of its stars. Far to the westward, like a broken vein of blood, rushed the great Garonne down towards the dull red of the sunset. For though it was already dark in the valley, the sun still lingered above the horizon, and the surrounding hills, which caught its last rays, each added a superb pinnacle of flame to the wild beauty of the scene."

"It was a long time ago, my friend, that I looked upon that picture, but the event which so quickly followed impressed it forever upon my mind."

"We were obliged to make our descent to the plain below very slowly and cautiously, and the low gleam of light which for some time vanished from the hills, before we drew up in front of the village inn. We alighted, and my companion, finding his horses very much heated, remarked to me that he would water them when he came out.

"How distinctly I remember each trivial circumstance of that awful night!"

"We entered the inn, and finding no one there, I called loudly for the host. A young girl, whom I knew to be his daughter, answered my summons, and told us her father had been called away suddenly by one of the villagers shortly after noon hour, and had not yet returned. She added, however, that she was expecting him every moment, and would if he wished, attend to our wants until he came, to which we gladly assented."

"We took seats at the table, and she left the room to execute our orders."

"During her absence I expressed my thanks to my companion for his kindness in bringing me so long a journey, and added:

"It will not be necessary for you to take me any farther for the brothers do not live far from here, and I can walk it in a few minutes."

"He began to protest that he could not think of allowing me to do so, when I stopped him by saying:

"No, my friend, I will walk, as in that case there will be no noise of the horse, and I can slip in quietly without waking the brothers."

"I was just making the latter part of this remark when the inn keeper entered, and as I finished speaking he slowly walked over to where we were sitting and said:

"You may well slip into that house tonight, my friend, without waking anybody."

"Ah," said I, turning with a laugh to my companion, "your good host will always have his jest. Yes, he is right, the good brothers do sleep somewhat soundly, especially Sugar, but then after long life of toil like his, one deserves his rest. Is that not so?"

"I turned toward the inn keeper, and noticed for the first time that his face wore a very quiet and grave expression."

"He said slowly:

"Sugar never slept so soundly as he sleeps to-night—he is dead."

"I uttered no sound. A strange feeling came over me. The lights in the room grew dim and indistinct, and yet I caught every word he said as he proceeded to tell me what he knew."

FUN, FACTS AND FICTION

A Judicious Compound of Wit and Wisdom

According to an Australian writer, the average young man in that part of the world walks up to a woman and says, 'Hello, my friend, how are you?' and then he says, 'Let me see your programme,' proceeds to write in his own name wherever he sees a dance that pleases him, without consulting the woman's wishes at all."

"Release" or "Thank you," and becomes irritable if the woman hesitates to hand over her programme at the first demand.

A man's wife should always be the same especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous and uses Carter's Little Liver Pills, she cannot be, for the pills make her a different person, at least so they say, and their husbands say so, too.

The fashion which certain women have lately taken up of trotting about town followed by huge, heavy-jawed, broad-chested and savage-looking bulldogs is mainly a bid for sensationalism.

There are times when all persons require to pay particular attention to the hair. To keep the hair luxuriant and natural is a simple matter if taken in time. Dr. Dorend's Great German Hair Magic will do the work. It works in accordance with nature, supplies fresh nourishment to the glands, keeping the hair luxuriant and natural in its growth. Be sure to get it; you cannot afford to miss it. Every druggist sells it. It is money well spent. See Dorend's advertisement in another column.

Reports from the lumbering sections in the Saginaw district are to the effect that nearly two-thirds of the logs put on the skids have been barked and if the present weather continues, with a few inches of snow to freeze the track, nearly all of the logs will be secured. The sun is so high and generally clear that it is difficult to maintain ice roads on which to haul logs.

Asa Larned, a resident of Port Huron since 1852, died on Sunday, aged 82 years. Mr. Larned served as justice of the peace for 25 years, and for 21 years conducted the Larned House on Butler street, Port Huron, as a temperance hotel. CANADIANS Work Too Hard!

The Result is Sleeplessness, Nervousness and a Broken-Down System, often Ending in Insanity.

Thousands of overworked business men, wearied brainworkers, industrial mechanics, and tried women, in all parts of the Dominion are to-day in a terrible position. Their nerves are weak, digestion poor, head aching, and they cannot sleep, work or live in comfort. This is what fills our Insane Asylums. This is the cause of that terrible Paralysis. Before it is too late, use Dr. Phelps' wonderful discovery, Paine's Celery Compound. It removes the results of overwork, restores strength, renews vitality, regulates the whole system, and tones up the overworked brain and body. Do not despair, but use this wonderful remedy, and be restored to health and happiness, the same as was Mr. John L. Brodie, of Montreal, who writes:

"I have great pleasure in recommending our Paine's Celery Compound. My system was run down and I was not fit for business, could not sleep well at night and was nervous and irritable. I commenced taking Paine's Celery Compound and improved immediately. I am now able to transact my business and endure any amount of excitement without fear of effect."

Paine's Celery Compound can be purchased at any druggist's for one dollar a bottle. If he should not have it on hand, order from WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Montreal.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal. GENTLEMEN:—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscopes, and find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar Refining. Mrs. Macdonald, of London West, has gers between Glencoe, Bothwell, Thames-ville and the C. P. R. stations for these places. The line runs a short distance north of these places.

The plan opens at 10 a.m. to-day at Williams' music store for the concert of the London Vocal Quartet Club, which takes place in Victoria Hall on Tuesday next, the 18th case," said a London lady yesterday. "I McGinty was, although I knew he was connected with the murder." This is severe on McGinty.

Educational Matters.
The regular meeting of No. 1 Committee of the Board of Education was held last evening. Present: Chairman Stephenson, evening. Present: Jeffrey, Cryer, Yates, Johnston, Jeffers, Inspector Boyle and Secretary Abbott. The motion of Trustee Brady re-supplying music books was referred to the committee, was taken up. The motion called for 25 books for each school. It was decided to procure all that were required.
The object lessons were ordered to be secured for Talbot street schools. A communication was read from Miss Evans, secretary of the London Teachers' Association, asking for a library and reading-room for the city teaches and was laid over on account of the unsettled state of school matters. The committee appointed Misses Laird and Gray to temporarily fill the place of Mrs.
Gahan and Miss Ferguson at the Rectory and North Waterloo street schools to be assigned as the inspector sees fit.

An Old-Time Favorite.
McKee Rankin, supported by Miss Mabel Bert and a concert company, will appear at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, matinee and night, in "The Runaway Wife." The play is the story of a young and talented artist, who married a high-born lady for love. By too constant devotion to his art he loses his eyesight, and the young couple are compelled to seek a home with his sister, a cold, uncharitable woman.
She takes a dislike to the wife, and by a series of persecutions drives her away. She deserts her husband and son, going abroad as a companion to a family. After some years she returns, and her husband and son are dead and married again. Her husband has not died, but has reared his son under an assumed name. He became a proven of his mother, who is unknown to him. The husband finally recognizes his wife by her voice while she is paying a visit to the son's studio. The wife denies her identity, but it is revealed to the blind husband by his old family physician. The husband then takes his son to America, where they are followed by the wife and mother, who has become a widow in the meantime. A successful operation restores the husband's sight, and mutual explanations follow with a happy reconciliation.

Coming of Nellie Bly.
Miss Nellie Bly, whose recent circum-navigation of the globe in 72 days surprised all the world and delighted her followers, has followed the lead of other famous travel writers and is to lecture platforms. There was bitter rivalry among the managers to secure her as an attraction, but Mr. J. M. Hill is now touring her throughout the city. Going around the world in 80 days is said to be the most famous woman in America of the present day, and her own efforts and a marvellously short space of time. After the death of her father, by which she and her aged mother were left practically destitute, she became a reporter on a small country newspaper, but rapidly rose to the rank of a reporter on one of the great New York dailies, and while engaged in that capacity undertook and carried to a successful termination several journalistic feats which made her name a household word. Notable among these was her feigning insanity, being committed to the insane asylum and spending several weeks there and on being released writing up a history of the institution such as only a person who had been confined there could write. The astonishment of the doctors who pronounced her insane and committed her to the asylum and the authorities of that institution who had her in charge may well be imagined when the article appeared. Going around the world on a couple of days' notice with only one dress was her greatest feat, and eclipsed all previous records, even those of fiction. Jules Verne is compelled to take of his list and acknowledge that "Around the World in 80 Days" is no longer fiction, because around the world in 72 days is fact. Miss Nellie Bly's lecture consists of a very interesting description, which occurred an hour and a-half, of her trip, and what she saw, heard and did while on the fly. She has already met with the greatest success wherever she has appeared, her lectures in New York and Boston having been attended by immense crowds who were anxious to see and hear her, and the press have united in pronouncing her lecture

Catarrh

Is a blood disease. Until the poison is expelled from the system, there can be no cure for this loathsome and dangerous malady. Therefore, the only effective treatment is a thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best of all blood purifiers. The sooner you begin the better; delay is dangerous.

"I was troubled with catarrh for over two years. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine cured me of this troublesome complaint and completely restored my health."—Jesse M.
Boggs, Holman's Mills, N. C.

"When Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me for catarrh, I was inclined to doubt its efficacy. Having tried so many remedies, with little benefit, I had no faith that anything would cure me. I became emaciated from loss of appetite and impaired digestion. I had nearly lost the sense of smell, and my system was badly deranged. I was about discouraged, when a friend urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and referred me to persons whom I had cured of catarrh. After taking half a dozen bottles of this medicine, I am convinced that the only way of curing this obstinate disease is through the blood."—

A Dinner Pill.—Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment it becomes a poison to the system. Dr. Farnes's Vegetable Pills are a powerful corrective of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and convert the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia.

It is an Established Fact that consumption can be cured; but it is far better to prevent the cruel disease from fastening itself on the system, by the timely use of Wm. Carter's Cough Cure, which will cure a cough or cold. Consumption often yields to its great power.

THE "NORMA" CIGAR.
All competent judges of a good cigar are unanimous in pronouncing the "Norma" one of the finest 10-cent cigars made in Canada. The cigar is of the delicate flavor of an imported cigar, without any of its faults. The cigar is the product of H. McKay & Co., of this city, who most carefully prepared. The result of this strict attention to quality of raw material is that the "Norma" stands to the front of all 10-cent cigars, and although there is a prevailing idea that a cigar manufactured at home cannot be equal to an imported article, this prejudice is being rapidly overcome by the growing popularity of the "Norma."
