DOMINION NEWS.

A Record of the Week's Events in Ontario.

ONTARIO.

Belleville post-office will probably be removed to the new Government building next week.

Hastings County Council on Saturday resolved to memorialize the Ontario Legislature in favour of woman suffrage.

Walls County Council has resolved to memorialize the Ontario Legislature to adopt a school grant for the benefit of women.

Misses teachers have been appointed in Kingston for 1884. The salaries amount to $10,000. In 1883 the amount was $10,300.

John Macdonald, of London township, lost a valuable horse a few days ago from scarlet fever, a disease that has recently appeared.

Steps are being taken towards the submission of the 20th Act to the electors of the united counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengary.

Mr. G. W. Ross, Mr. Mowat's new Minister of Finance, will probably be appointed to oppose Mr. Alex. Johnston for the local election in West Middlesex.

A meeting of Mr. David Plews' creditors was held at Toronto on Saturday last. It was decided to accept of the offer of forty cents on the dollar, payable in one and two years.

John Murphy, station agent on the Grand Trunk railway at Bowmanville, died there on Saturday from a heart attack. He was quite well just before the attack, and did not rally.

Mrs. M. J. Powell and family left Belleville on Monday evening for Los Angeles, California, where Mrs. Powell will remain during the winter for the benefit of her health.

The funeral of ex-Adm. Lindley at Brantford on Friday last was very large. The deceased was a member of the Masonic and Foresters societies, and was buried with the honours of those orders.

The Bailey branch of the Salvation Army were taken on a tour of inspection on Saturday night by a gang of ruffians. Mr. Bayley got an accident in his forehead. He was otherwise unharmed, and did not rally.

Farmers back of Kingston are greatly incensed at the wanton slaughter of deer by a party of American hunters who recently visited the district, and intend to take steps to secure legislative action for its prevention.

The joint committee on the Hastings Industrial farm met on Saturday last. It was decided to postpone action until after the opinion of the people has been ascertained in the forthcoming municipal election on all sides.

Hon. Mr. McLean is Acting Minister of Customs in the absence of Hon. Mr. Bovell, who will be away for a fortnight or more in connection with the case of Mrs. Ross, a divorcee requiring her removal for the winter to a milder climate.

Intercessory services for the Bishop of Toronto are being held at St. Andrew's church, and there were services on other parishes also, an evidence that a welcome will be given to Bishop Baldwin on all sides.

The celebrated red swamp of Biddeford, so much heard of in connection with the Donnelly tragedy, will soon be a thing of the past. The proprietor has been offered two hundred dollars, and the purchaser is to completely clear the ground.

A young girl aged about 16, an adopted child of Joseph Brown, of West Niagara, died on Thursday evening from cholera, while returning to her home at the house of her mother, where she was dead before he arrived. Cause rupture of blood vessel on the brain.

John Hanter, a young Englishman, was arrested on Monday last for stealing a watch from the Rev. Mr. Hamilton, who was then on his wedding trip. The watch was valued at $100 and was found on his person. He was released on bail.

Wentworth County Council met Monday. Among the communications presented was one from the Ontario Agricultural Society, requesting the Council to petition the Ontario Legislature to grant the political and municipal franchise to women in Wentworth County. An action has yet been taken upon it.

The Liberal-Conservative Association of the township of East Simcoe, held its annual meeting on Monday, the 19th ult. There was a good attendance considering the bad state of the roads. The following officers were elected: President, E. H. Jones; Vice-President, Walter Lawson; Secretary, John McDermott; Treasurer, J. G. M. Fraser, secretary.

Two engines and a large staff of men are pushing the Ontario and Quebec west of Peterborough. Tracklaying is proceeding rapidly, and if the present open weather continues for a few days more, the line will be run from Toronto to that place before Christmas, and by the time the ice is laid on the bridge at Peterborough the track will be ballasted to Ottawa. Engines and men can run from Toronto to Ottawa.

The commandants of the new military schools about to be opened in the Dominion, are being instructed by the Rev. Dr. Sutherland, secretary, to convey to Mr. Wm. Goodenham their high appreciation of his very generous offer of a beautiful site of 11 acres of land and a donation of $20,000 for buildings and endowment, for the use of Victoria University. While at this juncture the commission could not pronounce definitely in regard to the proposed change of location of the University, they sincerely hoped that the generous offer would remain open for a time until the matter could be definitely considered and decided.

It is claimed that the admission of Mr. G. W. Ross into the Ontario Cabinet is an improvement because he is not a lawyer. Those who make this claim are evidently unaware that Mr. Ross was made a non-lawyer by an Act of the Legislature last session. That is what qualifies him for his office. It is a crucial principle of Mr. Mowat's policy to have a layman in the Cabinet of six. The lawyers in the Cabinet are Messrs. Mowat, Fraser, Crowe, and Durnford. Mr. Ross is becoming a lawyer by a short cut. Mr. G. W. Ross is the only layman in the Ministry.

At a meeting of the directors of the West York and Vaughan Agricultural Societies, held at Woodbridge Monday, it was decided by N. C. Wallace, M.P., and seconded by John P. Bull, "That this meeting has heard with deep regret the death of Mr. Jacob Bonbride, who for more than twenty years, as vice-president and director, had taken a deep interest and active part in promoting the prosperity of this association. We desire to convey to Mrs. Burkhoffer and her family our sympathy in their loss of a kind husband and affectionate father, and this association will deplore the loss of a firm friend, whose services have always been cheerfully given for the promotion of all its objects." The motion was carried and the secretary instructed to have it engraved and presented to Mrs. Burkhoffer.

Recovery of Darius's Jewellery. Hamilton, Dec. 4.—News was received yesterday by the jeweller, Messrs. Darling, Simons, that a man from Darling, Simons, had been returned to him with the exception of $400. Mr. Jackson, counsel for Almond and Lawlor, was the man who gave up the jewellery. He denies that Lawlor squandered, or that Almond had anything to do with the burglary.

Partisan to the Governor-General for Compensation of Harding's Sentence. Toronto, Nov. 28.—The Hon. Mr. M.P.P. last night made a numerous signed petition to the Governor-General for a commutation of the sentence of Harry Harding, the condemned murderer. Harding was kept locked in a cell since his accomplice Greenwood escaped, and not allowed to communicate with the other prisoners.

Rewards for Saving Life. The Department of Marine has forwarded to Mr. J. M. Macdonald, a reward of $100 for his glass with suitable inscription to be presented to Mr. Frank Tinney, in recognition of his humane and successful effort to save the life of a young man, who was drowned in the schooner "The Fish," on the 29th of October last.

The department has also forwarded to Mr. J. M. Macdonald, a reward of $100 for his services in presenting to Michael Troy, of Wolfe Island, for saving several lives, as detailed in this paper.

Provincial Appointments. His honor the Lieutenant-Governor has appointed the following to the various appointments, viz.:—

Thomas Parks, Esq., barrister-at-law, and Charles H. Bell, Esq., solicitor, to the Supreme Court of Ontario, both of the city of Toronto, in the county of York, to be notaries public in and for the Province of Ontario.

John A. Macdonald, Esq., to be a commissioner for taking affidavits in and for that part of the Dominion of Canada called Quebec, in the county of Quebec, to be notary public in and for the Province of Ontario.

John A. Macdonald, Esq., to be a commissioner for taking affidavits in and for that part of the Dominion of Canada called Quebec, in the county of Quebec, to be notary public in and for the Province of Ontario.

Napoleon Fink, Esq., to be Inspector of Licenses in and for the license district of Victoria, in the county of Victoria, to be notary public in and for the Province of Ontario.

John A. Macdonald, Esq., resigned.

Mary Bell Tried and Released. The following was received from Guelph on Monday:—Miss Mary Bell, the young lady who dressed in men's clothes, hired a horse and buggy, and endeavored to elope with a man, appeared before Judge Giesbrecht on Friday last for her unfortunate case was enacted. She was very comfortably attired, and the witnesses had doubts as to her being the person they were looking for. She was found guilty on one count, that of trying to steal the horse. His Honor refrained from passing sentence, saying he would refer the case to the next session.

Rival Religious Organizations. At present there are lively times at Harrow, where the Saved Army are operating. A red ribbon army, the same as the Salvation Army, has been organized, and they steal the benches out of the hall and kick up a general row during meetings. The Salvation Army are very angry, and are at loggerheads, and great rivalry exists. Rev. Mr. McQuade, in writing to the Hon. Mr. Macdonald, says:— "An arrangement with the Canada Pacific and Ontario and Quebec railways."

FOR LEISURE MOMENTS.

Write Them a Letter to-night. Don't go to the theatre, lecture, or ball. Stay in your room to-night! Dear yourself to the friends that call. And a good long letter to write. Write to the old folks at home. Write to the folks in the States. With folded hands and downcast eyes. And think of the absent ones.

TORONTO WHOLESALE MARKETS—WEEKLY REVIEW.

THURSDAY, Dec. 5, 1933.

PRODUCE.

The local market has been quiet since our last issue. Some of the quotations have been checked for the week. Another has been that most receipts of everything combined with large shipments of barley.

How to keep water out of your house.

A well-known politician of this city was lately flooded out by the heavy rains, and he vowed that he would build a brick basement to his house, two feet high, and he guessed the water would not get in then.

THE AGENT'S DAUGHTER. OR SCIENCE AGAINST SAVAGE FORCE.

CHAPTER I.

KANSAS RIT KNABED BY KIOWA. An Indian stronghold on the borders of the Territory and Texas, in a piece of timber, bounded by the Red river and one of its tributaries on two sides, and by wooded mountains on the third. Rude huts and wigwags were scattered among the trees, and a large square space, marked by the sides of the trees and the clearing, was the scene of a busy and bustling life. A young man, with a fair complexion and a lasty and confused manner. One hand came from Texas, rich with the plunder of towns and villages; the other from the reservations, with the spoils of the settlements, and red with the blood of the squatter and half-blooded Indians.

Every conceivable sort of plunder was there. Clothing and trappings, and the women and children, stained with their blood, articles of merchandise from the great stores of the frontier traders, horses and cattle from the plundered farms of Texas, and the arms and clothes of the desperate men who had vainly tried to defend their own dear country.

The squaw, assisted by the boys and dogs, were striving with great uproar to get the frightened cattle and horses into a corral for them by a circle of ropes and stakes set in the ground. Others were lighting fires and setting up poles, and soon all along the sides of the clearing the camp fires were crackling and blaring, and the smoke and smoke were curling up in fifty places.

That pretty girl with the sad robes and sad face, and the long hair, was in the midst of all this hubbub. She is intended for the bride of the chief.

Soon the slaughter of cows and oxen began a large scale, and in a very short time the camp was filled with the carcasses of the animals. The women were busy with the skins, and the men were busy with the bones.

It was a sound of wonder that he should be taken, for he was not only the most daring but the most slippery of the daring sons of the frontier, the leader of most of the successful expeditions, and the most successful of the Indians. Even while the savages gave vent to their joy at his capture, they looked at him with a mixture of awe and respect.

He was a sound of wonder that he should be taken, for he was not only the most daring but the most slippery of the daring sons of the frontier, the leader of most of the successful expeditions, and the most successful of the Indians. Even while the savages gave vent to their joy at his capture, they looked at him with a mixture of awe and respect.

The words of the Apache had given him hope, but it was not long that the expression of Lone Wolf's face, and his words, gave him the reckless spirit of resistance great proportionately.

"Well, old top," he said, looking up with an expression of humor that it must be confessed belied the ferocity of his heart. "How are you, and how rest all the rest of them? When were you at the station? Did you get your bullets, and blankets, and rum and sugar? You grumbled, you know, last time I saw you there, because you didn't get as much as you deserved for murdering the settlers at Skinner's Bend."

"Sinnos, dog!" exclaimed the angry chief. "Don't wonder a bit at you being angry," answered Kit. "It's on my mind to make a mile trail to the west, and to see the country. If I'll even give you two or three yards of rope, now, with a slip-knot and the loan of a axe."

With a cry of rage Lone Wolf struck his moccasins! Lone Wolf struck his moccasins! Lone Wolf struck his moccasins! Lone Wolf struck his moccasins! Lone Wolf struck his moccasins!

There was there room for a ray of hope now? There was, was the mysterious Wind Spirit who had promised rescue? His chance was to come in a still more curious way than any of these.

The two grim monstrosities of the doomed had retired, probably to perform the same office on other wretched prisoners, and his Apache guard sat at his side grinning now, grotesquely at the sight of the white bones in the snow black mouth of the prisoner, when suddenly the idea seemed to strike him that his suit of mail was more valuable than the frontier homestead which he wore, and he commenced operations for their possession, and in a very short time he had the prisoner in a trembling expectation. There were three ways to accomplish the Indian's object. First, to rip the prisoner's clothes, and strip him of his moccasins; second, to kill the prisoner.

And then take that of his, and third, to loosen its bonds in order to get into his hands and feet. The first of these savages would not do first, that he dare not do the second, and he only prayed to Heaven that he would never be foolish enough to attempt the third. The savage rubbed his head by the temple, and the depth of his insanity, but his fear of consequences was equally strong.

Kit pretended to be asleep, and when the Apache bent his face down to him and washed his face with a cup of water, he took his knife to quickly sever the bonds that tied his feet, and with expert hands he moccasins, leggings, etc., off in a twinkling. He lay still and waited. The savages were prudent for he tied the bare feet as tightly as before. But Kit suffered without moving a muscle. It was his high hope, and the freedom of the feet would soon follow. It was torture for all that, for the Apache coolly proceeded to divest himself of his old garments and put on his new.

At length the red-skinned gentleman got things below fixed to his liking and turned his attention to the prisoner's shirt. He threw and the prisoner's shirt. He threw and the prisoner's shirt. He threw and the prisoner's shirt. He threw and the prisoner's shirt. He threw and the prisoner's shirt.

Wary to the last, he leans over the prisoner and watches his countenance, and listens to his breathing, and even takes his hand to feel the pulse of his life. He is sure to find it as strong as ever, and he is sure to find it as strong as ever, and he is sure to find it as strong as ever.

Oh, how the blood of Kansas Kit boiled! How he longed for the freedom and a weapon the Indian's face, and hear his teeth crunching on the bone, in his endeavor to give an alarm. The evening was closing rapidly in, and the red light of the western sky glinting through the forest trees, and the chimka of the wind made the rolling eyes of the savage grim like living coals.

Now comes the point of fate. The wicker door is thrown back, and the heart of Kansas Kit gives a jump, as he sees the tall figure of Lone Wolf appear, followed by several of his murderous gang, but he rooked himself to stand, and his laugh was louder and more guttural than before, and he was joined by the half dozen Kiowas as they noticed the captive's grotesque endeavor to make signs or speak.

"Dog of a white man!" cried Lone Wolf, striking the helpless savage with his foot. "You will be white no more. The children of the Kiowas have darkened your face so that your paleness may not make their hearts like the hearts of squaws."

The prisoner writhed and grined and groaned to the great delight of the savages. "Now, white man, listen to the words of Lone Wolf," said the chief, with his foot still on the breast of the dark form. "I call you O-mah-ee, the Snake, for you have crept in among our people as a friend, and got our squaws and boys to take you for one, that you might find out the talk of our council. You told about us, and sent the Quick Rider and his black horse men to kill Lone Wolf. Our brothers, the Chiefs Santana and Big Tree, are kept in the strong prison in Texas, because you said they'd murder O-mah-ee, you shall be no more. My younger brother could result in his delay. The corral lay beyond where she was held prisoner. He knew by the laughing of the morning, and he knew by the laughing of the morning, and he knew by the laughing of the morning.

He was a sound of wonder that he should be taken, for he was not only the most daring but the most slippery of the daring sons of the frontier, the leader of most of the successful expeditions, and the most successful of the Indians. can see through sheet iron. But I'm afraid they'll know you by your pretences, white as black. Let us go!"

The young lady was not used to her companions—she was not the manner of her people; but to whom is a compliment not made, and she was not the manner of her people; but to whom is a compliment not made, and she was not the manner of her people.

Then they hurried on toward the crowd, the weakness of the girl increasing as she moved forward, one bound, one crushing blow was made, and she lay lifeless. Kit caught the rope, and he held it as he held it into the darkness.

The prisoner was tied to the stake, still gagged, and still in buckskin. His face was horrible to look at—the very picture of wild agony and despair. Both hands were bound in exquisite torture. The strange manner of his death was its aggravation. In spite of the fact that he had been a hero, the torture-post of his enemy he could have smiled defiantly at death and sung his own dirge.

He was a sound of wonder that he should be taken, for he was not only the most daring but the most slippery of the daring sons of the frontier, the leader of most of the successful expeditions, and the most successful of the Indians. He carried the banner.
"Talk about war record," said an Arkansas orator at a public meeting. "My war record is a part of the State's history. Why, gentlemen, I carried the last Confederate flag through this town."
"Yes," replied a bystander, "for I was here at the time."
"Thank you for your fortunate recollection," gratefully exclaimed the orator. "It is pleasant to know that there still live some men who can move aside envy and testify to the courage of their fellow-brothers. As I say, gentlemen, my war record is a part of the State's history; for the gentlemen here will tell you that I carried the last Confederate flag through this town."
"That's a fact," said the man who had witnessed the performance. "He carried the last Confederate flag through this town, and he carried it so blameworthy that you couldn't have told whether it was a Union jack or a smallpox warning."

Joseph Miller Wants to Buy a House.
"The wild-eyed yod of the Sierras has been in Washington looking about, and being manoeuvred of the Pompeian red of its brick dwellings concluded to buy one. He tells the Philadelphia Press how he came to it. I picked out my house, one marked for sale, and one which I thought might be within reach of my very few thousand dollars, and went to the agent.
"Ah, that house is only about half a mile from Senator Blaine's, and we shall have to ask a pretty good sum, sir, a pretty good sum."
"Well, put it at your lowest figure and say at once how much?"
"Sixty-two thousand dollars, sir."
It took my breath away. I went into the street and looked up a house of humbler front.
"How much for the little house with the Queen Anne gables, Pompeian complexion and Jerusalem tower?"
"Let me see. Ah, that is only a mile from Senator Blaine's. Well, sir, I can let you have that for forty thousand; only a mile from Senator Blaine's, sir."
In despair I fled, and found at last the smallest house in all the north-west portion of Washington. In fact, I think it had been a brick chicken coop up to the time when they got up this tremendous boom in real estate here. It belonged to a negro, and of course was for sale at a bargain; for the black man does not quite keep up with the progress of Washington city. This black man had had a bay window annexed to his little brick house; and, in cold truth, the big, big Pompeian red bay window was bigger than the house. I did not go to the agent this time, but spoke directly to the man and brother.
"How much do you want, uncle, for your little house here?"
"No dis-brick house, sah, wid bay window?"
"Yes, uncle."
"Wal, boss, you see I've powerful close to de nex' President heah, sah, an' I'm to get a cap of money for dis. Yes, sah, nex' President over dar in a quarter of a mile."
"And who is this next President, uncle?"
"Jimblaine, sah."
I did not buy that bay window with the house annexed.

The Isle that's Crown'd with Shamrock.

Words by JOHN J. MORONEY. Music by FLETOHER BAKER.

France has got the Fleur-de-Lys, And England's got the Rose; Scotland for her on-sign, The Heather, Thistle shows, But Ireland's got the Shamrock, In all her valleys seen, And ev'ry wears up-on her breast, The Triple leaf of Green, Then, I rish-men re-member, Where ev'ry you may roam,.... The Isle that's crown'd with Sham-rock, Is still your na-tive home. Then, I rish-men re-member, Where ev'ry you may roam,.... The Isle that's crown'd with Sham-rock, Is still your na-tive home.

FOR
A wife is a blessing; hence a dumb wife is an unrepayable one. What fruit does a newly-married couple reap? A green pair. Don't colour meerschmanns for a living. It is simply dyeing by inches. Speaking botanically, the rooster is the crow-ness of the backyard. Don't buy a coach to please your wife. Better make her a little sulky. A young lady is not like a tree—you cannot estimate her age by counting her rings. Man is very much like an egg—keep him in hot water and he is bound to become hardened. The reason men succeed who mind their own business is because there is so little competition. A boy that was kept after school for bad orthography excused himself to his parents by saying that he was spell-bound. The oldest song in existence is said to be "We won't go home till morning." It evidently belongs to very early times. When one patent medicine will cure so many diseases, it is not understood why druggists keep so many kinds of medicine. A health journal says—"Too thick underclothing causes unnatural redness in the face and nose." We never heard it called that name before. "When a man knows to me for advice," says Josh Billings, "I find out what kind of advice he wants, and I give it to him; this says him that he and I are two smart men." There are few things so irritating in this life as to wait half an hour for your adversary at checkers, then have him look up, as if just aroused from a nap, and stupidly inquire: "Whose move is it?"

CHAS.
El Mohdi, the False Prophet, was originally a ship-carpenter at Senoala, on the Nile. He had only a rudimentary education, and after a time became a public reader of the Koran. He had or pretended to have the same visions as Mohammed, but did not openly proclaim himself as the Prophet until France and England agreed to help Egypt put down the slave-trade in the Soudan, when he rose in revolt and called upon the faithful to follow him. He headed a slave-catchers' rebellion, which he has since transformed into something like a holy war. In July, 1881, he was defeated, and retired into the interior of the Soudan, but in June, 1882, he appeared again and massacred 6,000 Egyptians under Yussuf Pasha. In January last he captured El Obeid by siege after losing 10,000 men in his attempt to storm it. In May last he was defeated in an advance upon Khartoum, and fell back into Kordofan, whence General Hicks marched against him a short time since, with what terrible results need not be told.

"Has it occurred to you," said Mr. Sabson, addressing his wife, "that we have been married twelve years to-day?"
"Until you spoke, but I suppose it is true. The time seems very long though, and when I look back it appears a wonder that I have lived through it all."
"Why, my dear," rejoined Mr. Sabson, turning with an air of annoyance, "you do not regret that we were married, do you?"
"Oh, no, for it is a woman's province to get married, and the sooner the duty is performed, the sooner she has been the life for which she was designed."
"I suppose then that love did not enter very largely into the arrangement?"
"It did at first."
"But the woman always discovers her mistake, I suppose?"
"Yes, more or less."
"Let me see, when you speak so. All along I have cherished the idea that you married me out of regard."
"And you have given me very little upon which to base a hope that you were actuated by the same high motive."
"Oh, now here. You are just trying to get married with me. What have I done?"
"That's what I want to know. What have you done?"
"Confound it, haven't I made you a living?"
"A sort of one, but I haven't lived any better since we were married."
"Haven't I helped you in all your troubles?"
"Not at all."
"Didn't I get up the other night and hold a lamp over the paragon over the lamp chimney?"
"Just once."
"Well, I'll declare. A man's kindness is never appreciated. Give me a spoon and I'll hold it over the lamp till it melts."
"No use to talk that way. You know you can't melt me."
"Didn't I bring you a whole armful of goods last night, and didn't you go out the other day and buy a whole cart load of stuff?"
"I don't recollect your thinking of you," and the angry gentleman arose and left the house. He was troubled as he walked along the street, and when he turned towards home he felt heavy and cheerless. "If I could only take her something," he mused. "There was a time when her eyes brightened at my approach. I did not have to take her anything then. I'll reproduce one of those early visits if I can."
He plucked a rose that hung over a fence. A very common rose, but he carried it tenderly.
When he entered the room his wife sat rocking one of the children. He spoke softly and she looked up. He handed her the rose and she smiled. He took it and looked back into her eyes. She put the child on the bed and hastily approached her husband.
"You do think of me, don't you?" she said.
"I always think of you."
"Let me see the flower in a vase."
The yard was full of beautiful flowers, and she could have gathered a basketful, but in all the grand floral array there was not one so full of sentiment as this common rose that grew in a wild place and hung over the fence. It is the little remembrance that a woman prizes and a true woman's soul is not made up of love for fine dresses and gorgeous display.

An agricultural exchange says: "To keep flies from horses, brush them lightly with a brush that has lately been used in petroleum. Bosh! You brush a fly with a shingle or any thing that comes handy, and he'll go away."
Mr. Charles Mackay, in the Pail Mail Gazette, gives the origin of the now much-used designation "Masher." It went over to England from this country, into which it had been introduced by Irish emigrants. The word masher is derived from the Gaelic mas, pronounced masher, and signifying fine, handsome, and was originally applied in derision to a dandy. It is now in similar derision appropriately applied to modern undeveloped men, whose sole aim is to dress well and ogle ladies.
