JONTEEL is the latest thing

Many new lines have come on

TO THE
Civic Electors of St. John's

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—
After considerable deliberation on the matter, I have decided to offer myself as Candidate for Councillor in the coming Municipal Election.

Despite the fact that I have not had a seat before, I am firmly convinced that I could do much to further the betterment of my native city, if I am fortunate enough to be elected by you.
I intend to make a house to house canvass and endeavour to have an individual interview with one and all, as far as time permits, and falling that, please bear in mind that this must stand as my personal appeal.

Should opportunity present itself in a public meeting, I shall be glad to deliver my views on matters of civic improvement.
Thanking you in anticipation of your hearty support,
C. F. GARLAND,
Ex-Lieut. Royal Newfoundland Regiment.

"Flowers of the Valley,"

MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER XIX.
 AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH.
 "Certainly I will excuse you," she said. "Pray rest and take some refreshments before you go!" and she glided away with that serene hauteur which is the most pointed form of rebuke from such personages.

Paul had gathered his music together, and a little frightened and dismayed by the applause—the sensation she had created, and more than all, by the duchess' evident displeasure and Mabel's agitation, he limped into the ante-room.

Iris, still with her hand upon his arm, followed him. Lord Heron took a step as if to accompany them, but at that moment a thin, cracked voice said:

"Hallo, Coverdale! Smitten like the rest of us? How do you get on? Just in the tea, and the great singer finished. Just my fortune!"

"I was never better in all my life," the lord answered, smiling.

"You must ask the duchess if you want to know who the young lady is."

close to Iris' feet; "and, what is more, so refined and cultivated; that goes for so much with me, you know. I wonder who she is? I will ask Stapleton, the manager of the Lyric; her discoverer, I suppose?"

"Yes," said her companion, with a smile; "we shall see her at the theatre directly. By the way, did you notice that Lord Coverdale made his way to the piano? He looked to me as if he meant to try and speak to her. Rather bad form, wasn't it?"

"Rather—very!" returned the other; "especially as Lady Lillian's here?"

"The other lady made a little mone. 'Do you really think there is anything between them?' she said. 'Well, they say so. It would be a great thing for Lady Lillian. You know the father, Lord Foyle, is a needy Scotch peer, and Lord Coverdale is one of the wealthiest. If not the wealthiest, in the peerage. He is seen about with her a great deal.'"

"He knew her father," said the other lady as if in explanation. "Knew him when he—Lord Coverdale—was quite free, you know!"

"The other lady smiled. 'Yes, and Lillian Foyle would have nothing to do with him. Now it is different, of course. Mind, I don't say there is anything between them; perhaps, it is only the friendship between Lord Coverdale and her father; but you must admit that Lady Lillian is beautiful enough to catch any man, and she has so many advantages in her father being an old friend of Lord Heron's.'"

"Oh, very good," she replied, with the serene superiority of her class for the class below her; "a very good voice, indeed, but rather affected, wasn't it?"

Iris' cheeks burned. "Oh, do you think so?" responded Lord Forthingbridge. "It struck me as being very natural and unconventional."

"Was it? I am no judge. I dare say it was very good of its kind."

"She made a very great sensation," said his lordship, "and the duchess is quite pleased at discovering so great an attraction. I dare say we shall hear her again."

"I dare say," said Lady Lillian, languidly, "that kind of person is not wont to hide its light under a bushel. Is this my carriage?"

At that moment a tall figure came out from a side door and stood at one of the lobbies, looking down at the crowd anxiously, and, as it seemed, eagerly. It was Lord Heron.

"There is Lord Coverdale," said Lord Forthingbridge. "He is looking for you, I dare say."

Iris looked at the fair beauty to see how she would take the speech, but Lady Lillian's face did not change colour.

Sound as a Dollar, He Now Feels Like a Brand New Man

Vancouver Lumberman Says It's Great To Feel As Good As He Does Now.

"I'm feeling like a new man now and I certainly am a believer in 'Tanlac,'" said O. B. Joneson, a well-known lumberman of 7 Cordova St., Vancouver, B.C.

"Before Tanlac fixed me up I used actually to dread for meals time to come round, as my stomach was so upset that often the sight of food nauseated me. I was never without a mean, sickening taste in my mouth and my stomach seemed as sour as a vinegar barrel. I had awful headaches every day and I never knew what it was to get a good sound night's rest."

Tanlac had me feeling like a new man in a short time. It completely knocked out every one of my troubles and to-day I'm as sound as a dollar. It's great to feel like I do now."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

scorning playmates and in later life to make grown-ups sniff sardonically when the catalogue of "handlax" was trotted out. Think again, ye devoted parents, before you decide to give your offspring a collection of front names for the bestowal of which they may later on be anything but thankful to you. Before you fasten upon the ultimate cognomen just picture to yourself the array of "handlax" names.

Now, if Miranda Gwendoline Marguerita Smith at her christening showed any symptoms of developing one day into a thousand-pound-awake "movie" star, her sounding names would be quite all right. In fact, they might eventually prove to be the bait for landing a colossal prospective employer to enter the somewhat ordinary vocation of a typist in a city office, might not her jealous Kelvinite colleagues be tempted to sneer and say, "Heavens, what a name for a room and kitchen!"

How awkward this sort of thing would be for our Miranda Gwendoline, on reaching flapperhood, were to enter the somewhat ordinary vocation of a typist in a city office, might not her jealous Kelvinite colleagues be tempted to sneer and say, "Heavens, what a name for a room and kitchen!"

Handicapping the Baby.
 LUDICROUS FRONT NAMES FOR INFANTS.
 What are you going to call the new baby, asks "The Pointer" in Glasgow Weekly Herald. Is it to be Miranda Gwendoline or just plain Jane? I am afraid dotting parents in general do not fully realize their responsibilities in this matter of naming the baby. They are so carried away by pardonable enthusiasm over the advent of the "gitt" which has been vouchsafed them that they thoughtlessly proceed right away to handking the miles for the battle of life by bestowing upon it a string of ludicrous names, which in childhood tend to make it the giddy goat of its Fashions and Fads.

 Suits-coats are rather long. There is a decided return to jabots. Perilaine is the leading wool fabric. Girdles have a tendency to be scarce. Very short capes of monkey are worn. Clipped rabbit is favored as trimming. Steel is the most used metal for winter. A white tricorne makes a smart motor hat. Steel is the smartest of metal trimmings. Steel beads are delightful on grey crepe. Bright blue lace is effective over silver cloth. Side panels are often used to add length of line. Black satin broadcloth is used for dinner gowns. The inverted pleat is frequently used on coats.

THE CORONER.
 The coroner is busy, he seldom has a rest; he rides in his limo. Lizzie to hold another quest. He wears out teams of horses when Lizzie will not go; to sit on clammy corpses he joins, and, owing to the nature of his work, his eyes become run-down. I took a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found great benefit from this medicine. They did me a great deal of good. I have not been bothered at all with indigestion since, and can sleep just better. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends, as I think it splendid for anyone run-down and needing a tonic.

Strength
 Strength of muscle does not indicate strength of nerves. On this account many people who look healthy enough suffer from nervous troubles and cannot understand what is ailing them. Sleeplessness and irritability are among the early symptoms. Indigestion and tired feelings soon follow.

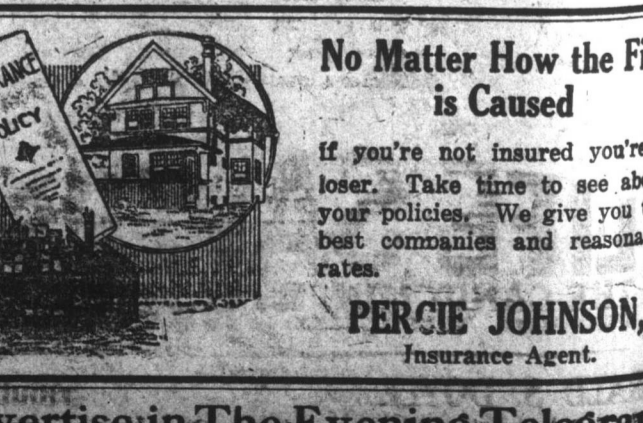

"A Pleasure To Take"
 Read this letter from an Ontario man: "Mr. W. L. Gregory, Charles St. E., Ingersoll, Ont., writes: 'I had been troubled for quite a while with indigestion. At times there would be a twinging of the nerves of my stomach; and I also found it difficult to get a good night's sleep. I am a motorist, and owing to the nature of my work my system became run-down. I took a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found great benefit from this medicine. They did me a great deal of good. I have not been bothered at all with indigestion since, and can sleep just better. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends, as I think it splendid for anyone run-down and needing a tonic.'

Fishermen! Here's the Boot for You-"Excel"!

"EXCEL"
Made 'All in One Piece'

"EXCEL"

The Fishermen's Friend

All fishermen know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of rubber and how the uppers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

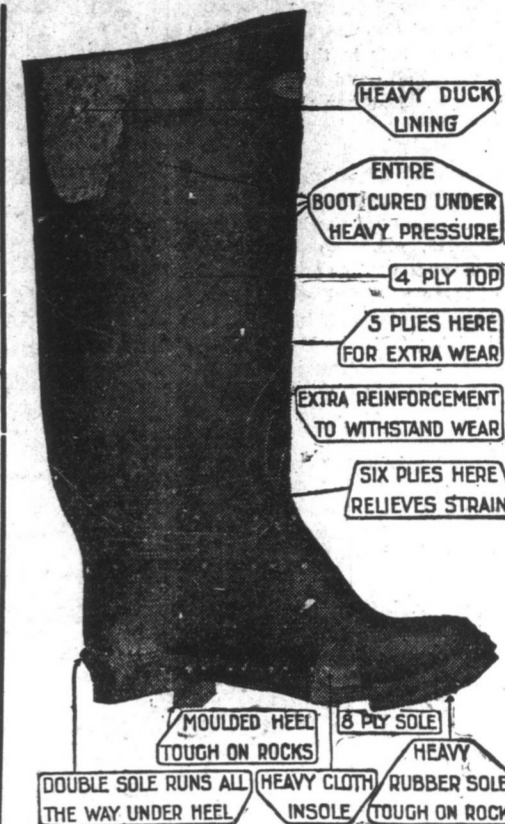

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life or resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and extreme cold far longer than other boots. Consequently they don't crack anywhere near so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto-Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "fire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure, which leaves the rubber pliable, weatherproof and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Pliable Uppers. Weatherproof and Wear Resisting. Tough Tire Tread Soles. Made "All in One Piece."

"EXCEL" Boots are sold by all reliable dealers from Coast to Coast.

Sir James Craig Asks for Confidence of Ulster.

Future of Empire at Stake--Opposition to Anglo-Japanese Treaty--Open Door Policy in China Demanded--Norway and Denmark Exercised Over Greenland.

CRAIG ASKS CONFIDENCE VOTE.
BELFAST, Nov. 16. The Ulster Premier, to-night, wrote from London to leaders of the Ulster mass meeting held here in protest against an all Ireland Parliament, asking for a vote of confidence to continue present negotiations in the following terms: "May I ask a simple though momentous question? Will you support my colleagues and myself in every step we consider necessary to maintain our freedom from Sinn Fein domination, while still striving to attain an honourable peace? I shall be much strengthened in the stand I am taking as much in the interests of Great Britain as of Ulster, by an expression of your confidence and support. It appears to be that the honor, prestige, and it may be the whole future of our empire is at stake."

complicated problems of the Far East. A meeting of the Far East Committee, which means a gathering of all the delegates behind closed doors, for all are members of this committee, was scheduled for this morning. It is altogether likely that the United States will take the initiative. It is known that the United States delegation has proposed a statement of policy which may serve as a starting point for the conversations. There are, it is said, two principal points in the policy of the United States in regard to Far East affairs. One is a demand for the "open door" in China, and the second is opposition to the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. In both these the United States is likely to find Canada behind them.

THE CHINESE PROPOSALS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. Preservation of the territorial integrity and political and administrative independence, together with the open door policy and prohibition of secret treaties in the Far East were included in the proposals of China.

FAR EASTERN QUESTIONS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. (By Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—Delegates to the Conference on Limitation of Armaments were prepared this morning to tackle the outlined at the opening session of the Armament Conference Committee on the Far Eastern question to-day. In return China offers to agree not to alienate or lease any portion of her territory to any foreign power, and all special privileges, rights, immunities or commitments now held by foreign powers would be carefully re-examined. All existing limitations upon China's political, jurisdictional or administrative freedom of action would be removed, and provision made for future conferences from time to time for international discussion of Far Eastern questions. Other elements of the Chinese proposals provide for China's rights as a neutral in all future wars to which she is not a party, and for peaceful settlement of international disputes in the Pacific and Far East. Dr. Koo, who presented the Chinese proposals, said they were made in the interest of all powers involved in the Far East, as well as of China, and, if adopted, would pave the way to a solution of many problems there.

NORWAY PROTESTS GREENLAND.

CHRISTIANIA, Nov. 16. The Norwegian Government has informed Denmark that it cannot recognize the extension of Danish sovereignty to the whole of Greenland, which was announced last May. Norway contends that the Danish action is prejudicial to the rights of Norwegians to whaling, sealing and fishing, which they until now carried on unchallenged in Greenland waters.

THE REPLACEMENT PROPOSALS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. Technical experts of the big five sat down to-day to work over the details naval experts had first proposed. There were intimations that the most vital element of the plan of naval replacement scheme was framed by four United States delegates, themselves all civilians, the original scheme, suggested by their naval advisers, having been regarded as probably unacceptable to Great Britain and Japan.

SUBMARINE LIMITATIONS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16. British naval thought in Washington has suggested 250 tons as the limit of the size of submarines, it was learned to-day. It was also learned that the United States was unwilling to accept such limitations as it would represent a type of craft not now existing in the first line of the United States navy. The smallest of the first line submarines is about 600 tons, while the largest run up to nearly one thousand.

EN ROUTE TO FUNCHAL.

GIBRALTAR, Nov. 16. Former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary and former Empress Zita, arrived here to-day on the British cruiser Cardiff, en route to Funchal, Madeira, on which island they will be exiled.

MOPLAH REBELS DEFEATED.

LONDON, Nov. 16. A Reuter cable from Delhi, India, says that a company of the Gurkha Rifles Regiment, holding Pandiklad post, had a sharp engagement with 2,000 Moplahs. Two-thirds of the rebels and one British officer and three men were killed.

WOMEN'S DEMANDS.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 16. The National Council of Women of Canada, to-day, passed resolutions asking the newspapers to omit particulars of such cases as Fatty Arbuckle's, and demanding that the economic position of the wife in the home be defined and a proper income allowed her.

LUCY R. LOST.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Nov. 16. The British three-masted schooner Lucy R., owned by James F. Rood, Halifax, and built at Weymouth, N.S., a year ago, which was abandoned last night when she struck on Old Horse Ledge, has disappeared to-day.

1920 versus 1921.

Overheard on Water Street, discussed by two respectable ladies, re the difference in money value of 1920 and 1921. Mrs. B. stating to her friend of a coat she purchased last fall at BOWRING'S for $42.00, describing at the same time that a good coat it was, etc., but regretted she had not waited to purchase until this fall, as the VERY SAME COAT can be bought to-day at BOWRING'S, including a nice stylish Felt Hat, 1 pair Ladies' Lace Boots, 1 pair Ladies' I. R. Shoes, 1 pair good Cashmere Hose, 1 pair Spats, 1 pair Corsets, 1 Suit Ladies' Underwear, 1 pair long wrist White Wool Gloves, and a fine large kitchen Apron, all for the $42.00—the amount paid last year for the coat only. The discussion resulted in a visit from Mrs. B.'s friend who found her statement absolutely correct, and the $42.00 purchase has convinced her that Value for your money at BOWRING'S is hard to beat.—nov16.31

Unspoiled Kurds.

Their Three Laws of Etiquette.

"An unspoiled country inhabited by an unspoiled people" is hardly the popular impression of Mesopotamia. But the scene of Capt. W. R. Hay's "Two Years in Kurdistan," published by Sidgwick and Jackson, is not the dreary region of the Arabs and the oil wells but the wild northern lands stretching to the Persian frontier. Here the Kurds, the ancient Medes, still inhabit Arbil, the sacred city of the Assyrians, which existed under the same name as early as 1900 B.C. Here it was that Alexander the Great pursued the fallen Darius, and here, too, at one time ruled the "best-known Kurd in history," the great Saladin.

The Kurds are a race, not a political entity, a "collection of tribes without any cohesion, and showing little desire for cohesion." Capt. Hay describes them as the "finest type I have yet met in the East."

They possess almost a northern temperament, being exact counterparts to the volatile Arab and the decadent Persian. The Kurd, in the first place, is exceptionally industrious, steady-going, and thrifty. The day that the Kurds awake to a national consciousness, and combine, the Turkish, Persian and Arab States will crumble to dust before them.

One of their odd characteristics is that they are not fond of music. "They are terrible Puritans," Capt. Hay says, "and I believe they consider it immoral." Subject to three rules, Kurdistan is a land of boundless hospitality. The three things to remember when visiting a Kurdish chief are: Never stretch your legs out, in any case in the direction of another person; never convey food to your mouth with your left hand, and never fiddle a dog.

Chief's £500 Wife.
Kurdish women, the only women of the East who wear a turban, are treated with a certain amount of respect and enjoy much freedom. Most chiefs are for a greater or less extent under the thumb of their women-folk, who, I think, exercise a great influence for good and do much to prevent their husbands from making fools of themselves.

FROM STORIES FROM WEST AFRICA.

Mr. Alan Lethbridge, in his book "West Africa the Elusive" (Bale and Danielsson), gives a clear and interesting account of our West Coast Colonies as they are to-day, of their "heat and horror," of their immense wealth, and of their strange medical problems. Wounds in the white man will not heal there and no white child may be born. Nor has the secret of tropical fever yet been mastered, though Sierra Leone is no longer "the white man's grave."

He has some grim stories to tell—one, which is new, of the haunted castle at Elmina, where no one sleeps without a quail. It appears that a party of three men and one woman were playing bridge very keenly in the tropical night: "Of a sudden the lady put her hand to her eyes as though dazzled. Asked if anything were the matter she denied anything wrong and continued playing. Then again she clapped her hands to her eyes, gave an exclamation, and fainted dead away." What she had seen she could not or would not say, but the tradition is that a headless woman walks the castle.

Nor does Mr. Lethbridge reject the power of native magic. He vouches for one strange story: that at a point in the Niger delta in a hut near a store were a number of native workers, under medical supervision. Their headman said it was "no good place." "One morning a Kroo boy was reported dead; a post-mortem revealed no apparent cause of death. Next morning two men had departed this life and again post-mortem revealed nothing. On the third morning four men were dead and there was something like a panic."

All the men were at once removed and a fresh batch brought up to be placed in "the same sinister house." They too died in the same mysterious way, and it was down to the ground and was seized by the headman, who rushed up to the doctor shouting, "Here be plenty bad things, sah! Pit to kill all men, sah!" He held at arm's length two human finger bones which had been tied together with a bit of native twine in the shape of a rough cross.

When this ju-ju was disposed of the deaths ceased. The Niger delta is not a place for lonely white men to take walks in the gloaming; an instance is mentioned of one "youngster" who did so and "two days later his mutilated corpse was found waterlogged in the sinister mangrove swamp." Nor is it a place to be buried in; we are told that in digging graves the water is reached, and the mourners have to stand upon the coffin to hold it down.—Daily Mail.

Centenary of Asparagus.

The Pride of Argenteuil.

Asparagus, king of vegetables, is celebrating its centenary this year. At least it is the centenary of the Argenteuil variety, which is practically the only one cultivated in France—the fat, white, luscious sort with purple tips, which is perfect hot with melted butter or mousseline sauce, and even better cold with oil and vinegar. The story of how Argenteuil, a little village on the Seine a few miles from Paris, came to give birth to the giant which replaced the stringy stuff that our grandfathers called "spruce" is rather curious. Formerly Argenteuil and the neighbouring hamlets that slope down to the river produced a rather famous "small" wine much beloved by Parisians.

At the beginning of the last century the grape vines were attacked by a disease called pyrale. Just as fifty years later all the vineyards of France were destroyed by the phylloxera and had to be replanted with American stock. One day a peasant, standing among his stricken, stunted plants, had the idea of planting asparagus among the rows. Three years later, when they had come to maturity, he was able to send to the Paris markets asparagus of a size and succulence that astonished and delighted the gourmets. "The old peasant had endowed mankind with a new pleasure. Next year all his neighbours were pulling up their vines and planting the "Argenteuil" giant," and even to-day though the place is now a big railway junction surrounded by belching factory chimneys, the finest asparagus in the world is still produced in the district, sticks weighing pound each being by no means unusual. And all over the world the thick juicy variety has replaced spruce, fit only for soups and garnishing. But, alas! exactly a hundred years after this rebirth the spirit of the grape is taking its revenge of the usurping vegetable. The Argenteuil plantations are attacked by a certain "fly" with a long Latin name which threatens to destroy the beds. That is why the local authorities have decided to postpone till next year the official celebration of King Asparagus's centenary.

Utilizing Old Battleships

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Naval re- trenchment is being put into practice with the utilization of naval repair ships in the salvage of old battleships and otherwise materially assisting in the countless jobs which ordinarily have gone to navy yards. It has been the custom heretofore to allow repair ships to undertake small necessary jobs for the fleets only when they were anchored far from navy yards or other land bases. Through the rearrangement of ship repair allotments, it now has been found practical to have these indispensable "mother" ships do much more than was formerly required of them. So henceforth they will spend long periods in the navy yards and, it is expected, effect economies in naval work. The Prometheus, Atlantic Fleet repair ship, and the Black Hawk, flotilla ship are lying in the New York navy yard after having engaged in dismantling the "pre-dreadnoughts" which cruised around the world in 1908 and now lying out of commission in the Philadelphia navy yard. Machinery, motors, blowers, searchlights, telephones, copper cable and even furniture, which may have future usefulness, have been removed and brought from Philadelphia to be used in the outfitting of the Great Northern as flagship of the Atlantic fleet. Extensive alterations are to be made by the Prometheus, with a force of 350 artificers. This work will be completed in time to allow the Great Northern to leave for the winter manoeuvres early next year. The Prometheus, of 12,000 tons gross, was converted from a collier in 1915 to a modern repair ship. It is equipped to handle heavy machinery and blacksmith work or shipfine tasks as adjusting of chronometers and binoculars. It is commanded by Captain Paul Foley. It is expected that another source of economy will be the establishment of a reclamation store at the naval operating base, Hampton Roads. There, all salvaged material of further usefulness will be stored and issued.

All for the Best.

MR. GOSLINGTON PHILOSOPHIZES ON HUMAN ILLS.

"Glimmerby, my friend Glimmerby," said Mr. Goslington, "propounds the theory that both poverty and worry are conducive to longevity, and I think there is something in that. I am not so sure about the worry, and yet, I think even that may be true! I can see, for instance, that if a man worried hard enough he would keep himself lean and so escape the ills and inconveniences attendant upon obesity; but that poverty tends to lengthen life I have no doubt whatever."

"The man who is poor, as we most of us are, has to work for a living. Surely it is in work that we are most blessed; and if we have work to do in which we are interested, that appeals to us, then are we fortunate indeed; we find a pleasure in labor and a joy in accomplishments; and it makes me smile to think how in such work we forget our worries entirely. "So we don't really need to consider whether worry is a life prolonger or not; all we want to lengthen our days is to be poor, poor enough so that we have to work and keep plugging; but I do wonder that Glimmerby did not mention along with poverty and worry, as among the things that might tend to prolong life, our physical ailments."

"Some years ago a friend of mine began to lose weight and he kept on in that way until he had lost 25 pounds. Then he consulted a doctor. It was something that could be checked, controlled and perhaps entirely cured if the patient would follow faithfully the prescribed treatment; and then he was told that the general benefits he would derive from the treatment were such that his life might be prolonged to a greater limit than it would have reached if he had never had this ailment at all. "I might add that this friend has now recovered several of his lost pounds, he is feeling very chipper and cheerful and he fully expects to live to be a very old man. "The fact is that many things that we may look at, when they come upon us, as drawbacks are in reality blessings in disguise."

There's only one thing that stops hair from growing on bald heads, from making short men tall and fat men plump-like and that is a perfect endocrine system. This is according to the statement of a New York physician at a meeting of the Pennsylvania Medical Society. The endocrine system, which consists of secretory glands, is still a secret from medical science.

House of a Thousand Rooms.

Mystery of Population that Disappeared.

When we read of the giant hotels of America that have a thousand rooms or more—the latest has four thousand rooms—we imagine such buildings are a product of the twentieth century, and that the men who lived hundreds of years ago would rub their eyes with astonishment if they could return and see these marvelous structures.

Yet a building of a thousand rooms is by no means a new idea, for one has just been unearthed in the south of the United States. It was built more than ten centuries ago.

It has been discovered near Santa Fe, the capital of New Mexico, by the archaeologists of the School of American Research. More than five years will be needed to unveil it completely.

Apart from the wonder of such a building, there is a great mystery connected with it. The house itself is splendidly preserved, and plenty of domestic implements have been found inside, yet there are absolutely no traces of the inhabitants. So marked is this absence that the scholars who have unearthed the place are non-plussed. They declare that all the evidence points to the belief that the people who lived in the house did not make a hurried flight, but left in a leisurely fashion. They simply appear to have stepped out of history, leaving no trace why or where they went.

Shifting Sands Clue.

The sands of this district are much driven by the winds, and it was their shifting that gave the first clue to the existence of a building underneath. The thousand-roomed house has a curved frontage of seven hundred feet, and it is estimated that fifty million pieces of stone were used in its construction.

Archaeologists are convinced that the building was produced by a free people, and not by slaves. There is evidence everywhere of painstaking craftsmanship.

Dr. Edgar J. Hwitt, Director of the School of American Research, is convinced that these people belonged to a race which developed its culture without serious interruption from outside, and it is hoped that further excavation will reveal the secret of their sudden and mysterious disappearance.

A careful examination of the great building and its surroundings indicates that the community that lived in and about it must have consisted of about ten thousand people.

All the doorways of the building were found closed by massive masonry, as if, when the people went away, somebody had seen to the shutting up of the rooms. From a technical point of view this building compares favorably with a modern structure.

The walls are strengthened by heavy timbers arranged among the stones, as steel rods are used today to strengthen concrete walls.

To the Electors of St. John's Municipality!

After considerable deliberation and some advice, I have decided to add my name to the list of those offering for election as Councillors in the forthcoming Municipal campaign.

It has been expressed by one of the candidates for Mayor that owing to the condition of civic finances it will be impractical to do a great deal regarding city improvement.

I am personally of the opinion that a great deal can be done with very little expenditure to make St. John's a better city to live in, and I propose using a little newspaper space during the next few days to embody my suggestions in this respect, which suggestions, in the event of my being returned, I shall advocate strenuously, having always due regard for the taxpayers' pockets.

SUGGESTION No. 1.

THE PAVING OF WATER STREET DECENTLY.

The present condition of the paving of Water Street is a disgrace to a civilized town. After every rain storm, pools form along the street from the Institute to the Railway Station with the result that every passing motor and horse driven vehicle deluges the people on the sidewalks (and the store windows) with filthy liquid mud. If Water Street cannot be re-paved entirely, surely, with mighty little expense, those hollows could be filled up, making it possible for the ordinary pedestrian to conduct his business on the principal street of the city without being obliged to take the "mud cure". (Next suggestion: "The Paving of New Gower Street". See Friday's issue).

Cordially soliciting the vote and support of every taxpayer who wants "A Better St. John's."

P. E. OUTERBRIDGE.

To the Electors of St. John's.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—

Having been waited upon by a select body of citizens, I have, after due consideration, and having leisure time, consented to be placed in nomination for Councillor at the coming Municipal Election. I have the honor to be the first candidate to represent the new extension of St. John's, and respectfully solicit the support of all citizens of both the new and old sections of the city. One of my planks to help relieve present taxpayers will be to introduce, if possible, a tax upon all vehicle traffic that comes into the city from outlying settlements, and which makes much work for the Council's staff in cleaning the streets. I further promise to do my best at all times for the advance of the civic improvements that are so urgently desired in that section of St. John's that has recently come under the Municipality. It is my purpose, and desire to make a personal canvass of the city.

Yours for a better, brighter, cleaner and bigger city,
MICHAEL J. O'BRIEN,
Retired Mechanic.

"Safety First" Campaign

Dear Sir—The Executive of the Newfoundland Motor Association has decided to inaugurate a "Safety First" campaign with the object of making the streets safe for pedestrians and occupants of vehicles. The Association has already asked the Municipal Council to erect signs at street corners, and special signs near schools, churches, etc., warning motorists to slow down when passing drivers to avoid colliding with—

1. Pedestrians who walk in the centre of the streets, even where good sidewalks are located.
2. Those who cross the street without taking the trouble to look for motors or other vehicles which may be approaching especially between crossings.
3. Children who play games in the centre of main streets which are most used by motorists and other drivers.
4. Children and grown-ups who stand there the motor driver (This is a frequent occurrence.
5. Children who stand out in the street as far as possible and think it great fun to throw their caps under the wheels of a passing car.
6. Children who steal a drive by clinging to the rear of a motor car when in motion. (A boy stepped in front of a car and was killed last spring in St. John's, because the driver was giving his attention to another boy clinging on behind.)

The Motor Association is using its influence on all motorists to drive cautiously and at fair speed, and to warn corners with car under close control—after giving proper signals—realizing that pedestrians have undoubted rights in the use of the streets.

In developing the campaign for the benefit of all concerned the Association requests that all schools in the city and in the Peninsula of Avalon be asked to send a writing lesson at least once a week using headings such as—

- "I must keep to the left of the road."
- "I must keep to the sidewalk wherever possible."
- "When crossing the streets I must look out for motors and other vehicles."
- "Playing games on very busy streets is dangerous."
- "I must not throw my cap or any other article under motor cars."
- "Riding on the rear part of motor cars is dangerous," and other similar headings.

The Association feels that if the cooperation of all teachers can be obtained, an impression will be made on the minds of thousands of children who attend our schools, and many accidents fatal or otherwise, would be avoided.

Trusting you will see the wisdom of inaugurating this campaign in the schools under your jurisdiction.

THE N.F.L. MOTOR ASSOCIATION,
Wm. White, Vice-President.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

NAVAL REDUCTION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. Severe criticism in certain leading British Liberal papers regarding reservations to Hughes naval reduction plan, which were proposed by the British delegation, is based on misconception of the actual attitude of the delegation, according to statements made by British representatives here. The plan of keeping one small naval building yard in operation in each country, during the naval holiday, was, it was said, necessary, in order to keep ships in repair, and perhaps to replace ships lost by accident.

ULSTER LOYALISTS HOLD MASS MEETING.

BELFAST, Nov. 16. Ten thousand Loyalists, in three meetings to-night, emphatically protested against the British Cabinet's treatment of Ulster and great enthusiasm was displayed. The Lord Mayor of Belfast, presiding over the principal meeting, declared Ulster would never be the vassal of a Sinn Fein Parliament. The mention of Lloyd George's name was greeted with groans. A resolution was adopted endorsing the action of Sir James Craig and colleagues in the peace negotiations.

NUMBER OF UNEMPLOYED INCREASING.

TORONTO, Nov. 16. Although labor conditions just now are slightly better than last year, Captain Meath, Superintendent of the Employment Office here to-day, predicted the appearance of unemployment and distress, as serious as that of last winter, with the first cold snap. Those out of work here now number 10,000, and are increasing at the rate of one hundred per day.

M. J. O'Brien

whose card is published to-day, as a candidate for Councilor, has outlined in his policy of civic plans, should be honored by the electorate with a seat at the Council Board, one or two suggestions that are of no small importance. He, in his interview with these staunch supporters of his who called upon him as the "Young Tribune" of St. John's West's new extension, assured them that one of his first moves would be to have that portion of the road from Brazil's Field widened to enable traffic to be free of congestion and which is a danger to life and limb as at present; he also intends seeing that as his section is not being assessed for the city tax, to see that this portion, recently taken in, will get its proper share of the good things the city offers. His statement in regard to placing a nominal tax upon all vehicle traffic, such as taxicabs and other products, is one that is both fair and just. These points create much work for the sanitary department in cleaning up the refuse and droppings that they create and leave about. Mr. O'Brien realizes that one must have leisure to attend to Municipal duties and while yet a young man, in the prime of life, having retired from the Cordage Co., after twenty-five years of faithful service, feels it his duty, after being called upon by his fellow citizens, to offer himself and give his time for the betterment of this his loved and native town. The name of O'Brien has been one that has done much for to advance our country and we feel sure that should Michael be honored by his fellow citizens he will carry his duties with that respect for others that will make him a power for good. We understand he has a strong committee who are organizing the campaign for the purpose of holding a public meeting and canvassing the city.—COM.

Opening of the Ricketts Memorial School.

Addresses by Dr. Blackall and Our Own V.C. Hero.

Dr. Blackall has just returned from Seal Cove, White Bay, whither in company with Mr. T. Ricketts, V.C., D.C.M., C. de G., he had travelled for the special purpose of opening the Ricketts, V.C. Memorial School. The building, which is of concrete, had been erected during the year with local help by Messrs. J. & W. Murdoch. It is handsomely spacious and, except for some finishing work which will be done next summer, is complete. Some photographs have been taken which it is hoped will prove successful so that some prints of them may be published a little later for general information. The cost of the building has been met out of monies subscribed during 1919 by the people of Newfoundland. Mr. Ricketts and Dr. Blackall reached Seal Cove on the 6th inst. and the opening ceremony which was made the occasion of a festival, took place on the evening of the 7th. Pretty well every inhabitant of Seal Cove was present to do honor to the young hero, as were also Messrs. Geo. and Will Hendor with their families, who were good enough to travel from Southern Arm to do honor to him. The speeches delivered on the occasion by Dr. Blackall and Mr. Ricketts are given below. They were followed by a short programme of song and recitation, and Mr. Watton very kindly gave a selection of gramophone records. All this was much enjoyed. Then came a supper and dance. The ladies of the settlement furnished the supper—in great style, too. Every man, woman and child had an opportunity of doing justice to the feast. While supper was being served, dances and games afforded recreation and delight to young and old alike. The whole programme was carried out in the Ricketts Memorial School which proved amply spacious for it. Mr. Raymond Oake, the teacher, and Mrs. Oake organized the programme. Mrs. Joseph Osborne captained the ladies who provided the feast. Although nearly were showered upon him and a fund established to afford to him an education becoming the dignity he had reached. It was at that time the inspiration came to me that some lasting monument should be erected to perpetuate the memory of his youthful valour. A school-building—substantially constructed—suggested itself and the people of the country were invited to give to the cost of the erection. From all parts of the country an admiring people sent in their contributions and the result is that the school, constructed of concrete, in which we are this evening assembled and which in a few minutes I shall with proper ceremony open, has been built. It was originally intended that this monument should be placed in Middle Arm. Owing, however, to the fact that the Arm has been almost entirely deserted, this was considered impracticable. Consequently, it has been erected in the great settlement, Seal Cove. People of Seal Cove, you are fortunate in having this monument in your midst. I want all of you to open your hearts, to give our hero three-times-three, and to resolve that this school shall be held dear to you. It is a monument of the deed of a great hero, a boy-soldier who was born and bred among you. A few years since you all knew him as Tom. He is now Thomas Ricketts, V.C. de G. And I want you to feel that there is one thing at least in this building that you yourselves have placed there. I know that many of you have given a helping hand in the work of erection, and if you expect any thanks for performing so pleasant a task, I thank you most sincerely. But I believe you desire to do more; you desire to look upon something that you can look upon as your own peculiar contribution. Of course you do. And I suggest that you undertake to meet the cost of the memorial tablet embedded in the front wall. Further, I ask you to fence this property, and to maintain it and the building in good condition. For these purposes I propose that a committee of three be appointed from among you, and that the Committee shall continue in office through all time by the appointment from time to time of new members to take the places of those who may either leave Seal Cove to live elsewhere or pass to the great beyond. And now I turn to the inscription that has been placed in the interior of the School to serve as an inspiration to teachers and scholars alike, and I declare this Memorial School open, praying that the God who ever was and is and shall be may abundantly bless it.

SPEECH BY MR. RICKETTS,
V.C., D.C.M., C. DE G.

Ladies and Gentlemen—
Through you I desire to thank most heartily the generous public of my native land for erecting this beautiful and substantial school, which is in my honor. I was born and bred among you, and you, therefore, know what little opportunity I had as a boy of attending school. I cannot tell you how much in my army life I felt the need of education nor what delight has been opened to me since that returned from the war by the education that has been afforded me. I have entered into a new life. You can well understand, then, that I am much pleased that this memorial takes the form of a school. We have just been told that it was the hope of the organizers of this school that it might have been erected at my birthplace, Middle Arm. It was, however, in the end considered unwise to place it there, owing to the Arm being deserted, and consequently it has been built at the nearest settlement, distant two miles. I hope that the people of Seal Cove will, for the sake of the children, see to it that the school becomes through generations a blessing to the children that are born here. I speak from the bottom of my heart when I express the hope that the advantages of an education will not, through negligence on the part of parents, be denied to any child whose home is within two miles of this building. Finally, I desire to thank sincerely, Dr. Blackall, for he it has been who has inspired this undertaking and put it into effect. May God bless and prosper this school and all who may at any time be associated with it.

SUCCESSFUL BRIDGE HELD.
The energetic and wholehearted work of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the C.L.B.C. was responsible for making last night's Card Tournament one of the biggest and best of its kind ever held in St. John's. Over 90 tables were taken and nearly 450 people were present. The tournament was held in the C.C.C. Hall, which was splendidly decorated for the occasion. The walls were illuminated with coloured lights and lanterns, and chromatic paper streamers were suspended from the ceiling. The letters C.L.B.C. written in coloured lights, were on the wall at one end of the hall, and balloons of many hues floated over all. The tables were all neatly arranged in rows so that as much space as possible was saved, and players had no difficulty in finding their places. Play started at 8.30 p.m. and continued until 10.30 p.m., when an excellent buffet supper was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary in the Supper Room. After supper Mr. Reg. Dowden, in a short speech in which he assured those present that he was not looking for a vote, announced the prizewinners as follows:—
Bridge—Miss M. Bennett, Mr. C. C. Robertson.
Forty-Fives—Mr. Gus Lester, Mrs. W. E. Edwards, Mrs. R. Dowden.
A short but delightful dance was held later, the C.L.B.C. Dance Orchestra, under Capt. Morris, providing the music, and many of those who had not taken the floor for many years were prevailed upon to fill up a square for the Lancers. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the C.L.B.C. have good reason to be proud of the results which rewarded their efforts. Although only organized last year, they have, under their hard-working president, Mrs. W. E. Fraser, accomplished wonders and everything they attempt always proves a success. They were helped greatly yesterday by the kindness of Mr. Lester and Messrs. Bowring Brothers, who gave the use of their trucks for collecting the chairs. To-night the Grand Band Concert will be held and as some of the best local talent will take part, it is bound to be a success.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH.

The ice cream parlor does more harm than the saloon. Very likely the American people have gone wild on sweets and soft drinks. The a bio v e statements were not made by an irresponsible sensation-seeker, but by a professor of the Harvard College Medical School. Doubtless you will feel that he goes far in likening the ice cream parlor to the saloon. Very likely he is right. But you never can hammer a truth except by strong statements.

Candy is Guilty on One Count. What is the case against alcohol? That while under its influence inhibitions are loosened and he does things they would not do normally. Secondly, that it injures the health.

On the first count, candy and soft drinks and ice cream come through the gut. We don't do crazy things under their influence.

But how about the second? If you could somehow find a unit of reckoning of the harm done by overloading the stomach with this sort of thing, it might not come so far below the harm done by alcohol.

Here That Didn't Make Her Ill. On a coastwise voyage which I took last one of my fellow passengers, a young girl, was exceedingly sick, although it was not a rough voyage. She afterwards confided to me that while waiting for the boat she had bought and eaten a whole lot of caramels. But she was sure she did not which had made her sick, as she had often done it before without bad results. Evidently the motion of the boat had acted as a last straw to an already overburdened stomach. Other times we had been on such last straw trips and had managed to deal with this outrage. But think of the cumulative effect!

The youngster who goes to the soda fountain and eats four or five chewing rich Sundae is a humorous character in fiction, but in real life is a really serious situation. Another stomach outrage is the Soda Club or Afternoon Tea, where

The Stevedore's Job.

When passengers see the cargo pouring into a steamer's hold, it looks as easy to stow it away as packing a box of toy bricks.

But to load a vessel properly with a mixed cargo is an art in itself, a profession only learnt by years of experience, and the master's stevedore has much to contend with.

Many steamers take cargo for several ports, and it stands to reason that the cargo for the first port of call should be on top. Also, most of the heavy cargo, which should go at the bottom, is delayed, while the light cases and crates which should go on top of it are ready and waiting.

The stevedore does his best by running up sections and leaving spaces below for what should go there; but he has to contend with the ship's officer in charge, who sees that if large spaces are emptied, the crew must break down other cargo and fill, or partly fill, these, and this he objects to.

Many Points to Watch. Also, the stevedore must not stow liquids where a leakage may damage other goods. No bales must go near bottled stuff, and the arguments in consequence between the ship's officer and the stevedores are frequent and free.

Then the vessel must be loaded so that she will lie on an even keel, or level in the water; she must not have a list, or leaning, to one side. She must also be loaded to suit her steaming, generally from three to six inches by the stern. A vessel deeper in the water at the bows than at the stern would probably work like a pig rooting in a field, although occasionally a sailing vessel has been known to do better with the bows deeper than the stern.

And although much weight must go into the bottom of a ship, or she will be top-heavy, and perhaps turn turtle, yet if too much is there it will act like a pendulum, and the ship will roll badly. The weight may have to be raised, or some put along the orlop or tween decks.

The vessel must not be loaded too deeply. There is a plimsoll mark or disc to guide those in charge, and the ship's officer will have her well above this if he can, while the owner will instruct the stevedore to put the mark under water in dock, allowing for a rise of a quarter of an inch to the foot immersed when the vessel reaches the sea.

Another most important work is to see that every bit of cargo is securely blocked off. If any should work loose, havoc may ensue, and not only would the cargo roll about and be damaged, but the safety of the vessel would be jeopardised.

Lastly, the loading must be completely in time for the steamer to leave on the date advertised, and as a number of shippers think that if their cargo goes on top it will be least damaged and landed first, there is usually a rush at the last, causing hurry, bad temper, and often neglect of necessary precautions.

Massacre of Officers in Kaffir Land.

Information was received on November 17, 1921, of the death of five British officers—Captain W. L. Y. Baker, Lieut. Faunt, and Ensign Burdop, of the 73rd Regiment; Dr. N. S. Campbell, Surgeon, and Assistant Surgeon Loch, 7th Dragon Guards. The headquarters camp was on the Kombe, about ten miles west of the Kye, Colonel Somerset, with a strong force, being in advance, and in position on the heights commanding the Kye drift, at the usual wagon road. About seven miles away there was a conspicuous rock, or mountain, and as the beauties of the country were much spoken of, the ill-fated officers resolved to satisfy their curiosity by visiting the spot. They started on Saturday, taking no escort of any kind, but each carrying a double-barrelled gun, more as a precaution than from any apprehension of attack. The party were six in number, but, being overtaken by a shower of rain, Lt. Littlehales, of the 73rd, who was suffering from a severe cold, resolved, after riding about five miles, to return. The only approach to the mountain was along a narrow ridge, terminated by a deep and narrow gien, and thence through a valley encumbered with rocks and bush. As far as the traces could be seen, the officers were permitted to gain the summit of the mountain without molestation, although their movements were watched. No apprehension was felt until Saturday evening, when, not making their appearance, Lieut. Littlehales became uneasy, and at eight o'clock a search party started off. Traversing the ridge, they reached the brow leading to the narrow gien, but into which, at that hour of the night, and with so small a force, it was not deemed prudent to descend. Several rounds were fired as signals, but hearing no response, the party returned to camp, and a strong party was ordered to start soon after midnight to renew the search. At dawn they found their comrades' bodies, savagely mutilated. The unfortunate men must have been attacked in passing up the valley, but on endeavoring to escape, their retreat was completely cut off, and they became easy victims to overwhelming numbers. The spectacle presented was frightful. Mr. Burdop had three bullets in his head; Capt. Baker was stabbed and mutilated in several places; Dr. Campbell must have suffered greatly, the flesh being actually pared from his body. The naked body of Lieut. Faunt had been flogged with chains. The dead bodies of two Kaffirs lay at no great distance, killed, it was assumed, by the officers at the first moment of the attack. The poor fellows were buried on Sunday, in one grave. Orders were at once given to punish the Kaffirs, and on Sunday night a large force reached a point close to the scene of the disaster. The natives showed great determination, but nothing could resist the impetuosity of the troops, who rushed fearlessly over Oceans of Metal Vapour.

HOW SUN-SPOTS AFFECT THE EARTH.

(John O'London's Weekly)
Just three hundred years ago learned people in Europe were agitated over the question whether there were spots on the sun. A certain Italian named Galileo Galilei, who had not much respect for tradition, said that "the eye of the universe suffered from ophthalmia," as a later wag put it. All over Europe the question was fiercely debated, and learned men probed by demonstration that there could not possibly be any such blemishes on the fair face of our luminary. And three hundred years later—or only a few weeks ago—millions of people were examining a great "sun-spot" through bits of smoked glass or in bowls of water, and were reading in the Press how a terrific disturbance on the sun was pouring some influence across ninety-two million miles of space and throwing our telephone-wires, if not our weather, out of gear.

MODEST ASTRONOMERS.
Astronomers are a cautious and modest body of scientific men. They are always very ready to say: "We don't know." In fact, most of their remarks on the recent great spot which appeared in the Press were apt to give the general reader the idea that we really know little about such things. On the contrary, the way in which the modern astronomer can deal with things so remote from us is a revelation of the power of science.

The man who took his bit of smoked glass into the back garden during the recent spot period saw only a dark or black blotch lying across part of the shining disc of the sun. He may be surprised to hear that this stuff—whatever it was—was not black, or even dark. It was hundreds of times more brilliant than the full moon on a clear night; it was as bright as a powerful arc lamp. But the golden disc of the sun is an ocean of fiery metals at so fierce a temperature (7,000 deg. C.), and so blindingly luminous, that the matter of the spot seemed dark by comparison.

HERSCHEL'S THEORY.
A great British astronomer of earlier days, Herschel, thought that a sun-spot was a great rent in the shining clouds which surrounded the body of the sun. He thought that through this rent, or hole, we caught a glimpse of a dark, cool surface far below the clouds, and that there might even be living things on the surface! We have gone very far since Herschel's time. We can tell that this "black" material of the spot has itself a temperature far beyond that of a cauldron of molten iron.

There is a wonderful instrument used in modern astronomy with the most marvellous capabilities. It will analyse a red stain on a murderer's coat as confidently as a chemist can, and it will, with just the same ease, analyse the incandescent metals of the sun in broad daylight and examine at his leisure any single part or any particular level in the gery wrack of gases and metals. He can see mighty flames of red-hot hydrogen gas, so large that they would stretch from the earth to the moon, soaring upward as more than 50,000 miles an hour. He can see spurts of glowing metal shoot up to a height of 100,000 miles and fall back within an hour in a shower of liquid fire.

A SUN-SPOTS EFFECTS.
And there he begins to understand how a sun-spot can effect the earth across the tremendous abyss of space. All round the edges of a sun-spot are vast flames and fountains of the fiery metal of the sun. Often they are as broad as the earth, and they flame out at a speed two hundred times greater than that of a rifle-bullet. We know, of course, that matter at this high temperature gives off floods of those tiny particles, the "electrons," of which all atoms are composed. We know from experiments that these marvellously small and marvellously energetic little particles can travel at more than 100,000 miles a second. So we have only to imagine immense floods of them driven across space, as we have every reason to believe, by the stupendous flames and eruptions round the edges of a sun-spot, and we begin to understand how the sun can affect us.

THE "NORTHERN LIGHTS."

The electric "current," as we call it, in our wires is, we now know, a flow of electrons; and we are no longer surprised that the flood of electrons from the sun can interfere with it. Even the beautiful—and mysterious—"northern light," or aurora, begins to be intelligible. It is probably a vast part of the stream of electrons from the sun drawn toward the earth's magnetic pole, and in its fierce rush lighting up the rarer regions of the atmosphere. In the thunderstorm, too, we feel the influence of the sun, as we now know it. All day long the electrons are gathering in the upper regions of our atmosphere, and in the storm, when the clouds of vapour give the opportunity, the electric energy crashes its way to the earth. We cannot as yet trace any definite laws of the sun's influence on the earth, but we may say that, since the sun-spot always has this fringe of fiery eruptions, hurling myriads of electrons across the abysses of space, we are at last on the track of the connection between spots and weather.

What the sun-spot really is astronomers candidly confess that they do not know; but they are nearer agreement than is generally supposed. Everything points to the fact that the relatively dark mass which we call a spot is an immense ocean of metal-vapour cooler than the rest of the sun. In the centre of it we can trace a downward rush of the cooler vapour from the higher parts, with mighty whirlpools stretching across the sun. It looks as if the weight of this ocean of cooler vapour causes the great "splash" of fiery metal round its edges that sends the showers of electrons across space.

Local Beauty.

Lovely women for ages past have ruled the world and guided its destinies. Man has been swayed to higher heights of ambition by her smile or to depths of despair by her frown. She is indeed the power behind the throne.
It has been predicted that one of the largest gatherings of our most beautiful women will soon be seen at their very best with flashing eyes and flushing cheek at the Felidian Club Dance. nov17.11

Sale of Work Opens.

The Sale of Work by the Columbus Ladies' Association was formally opened in the Columbus Hall yesterday afternoon by Archbishop Roche. In his address His Grace referred in glowing terms of the wonderful work performed by the C.L.A., and he intimated that in the near future they would be called upon to give their valuable aid in rebuilding the Palace. At the conclusion of his remarks His Grace declared the Sale open. All through the afternoon and evening the stall attendants were kept busy catering to the requirements of the very large number of people present. Delicious afternoon teas and suppers were served in a very capable manner downstairs, and all who partook of the dainties were highly pleased with both the excellence of the menu and the admirable service. For the kids who were present in legion a fish pond was prepared which was productive of much interest and enjoyment. The proceeds of yesterday's Sale including admissions and suppers, etc., amounted to $1.100. The Sale will be continued this afternoon and evening when it is anticipated that the remaining stocks will be cleared off. A dance will be held in the K. of C. Hall Friday night for the tableholders and members of the K. of C., as a conclusion to this most successful Sale of Work.

Midnight Fog Drama.

Shen Sank by Rescue Ship—Heavy Death-roll in Irish Channel Disaster.
In dense fog, at midnight, a terrible shipping disaster occurred in the Irish Channel, off the coast of Wigtownshire, involving a loss of at least 36 lives.
Two separate collisions occurred, in involving three vessels, the Laird liner Rowan, 1,493 tons, bound from Glasgow to Dublin; the American cargo steamer West Camak, 6,000 tons, from San Francisco to the Clyde; and the Clan Malcolm, 3,724 tons, of the Clan line, proceeding from Glasgow to Liverpool. The result was that the first-named ship sank in two minutes. She had on board 104 persons all told—67 passengers and 37 crew. Leaving Glasgow in the evening, the Rowan was detained at Greenock for an hour and a half, to wait for the Southern Syncoated Orchestra, composed of 32 coloured performers, who had just finished a three weeks' engagement in Glasgow. Going down the Clyde, banks of fog were encountered, but everything went well until off Corsewall Point, on the Wigtownshire coast, a few miles from Ailsa Craig, a well-known Clyde landmark. This was about 15 minutes after midnight. In a thicker fog bank the West Camak suddenly bore into view, struck the Laird liner a glancing blow astern. This shook her severely; but, beyond listing slightly, the Rowan showed little sign of serious damage, and it was soon evident that she could reach port without help. All the passengers were below at the time, but they soon rushed on deck.
Some in Night Attire.
Hearing what had happened they hurriedly dressed and prepared to put on lifebelts. Ten or fifteen minutes later, when everyone seemed assured that there was no cause to leave the ship, a second collision occurred. The Clan Malcolm, it appears, had received a wireless call sent out by the Rowan and rushed to her aid. She came on the vessel unaware and struck her with great force amidships. A large hole was torn in the Laird liner, which tottered from stem to stern, and within two minutes went down. Capt. Donald Brown, of Fairlie Park-drive, Glasgow, who was on the bridge at the time, perished with his ship. When down on board, he realized that had happened dreadful scenes occurred. The passengers who were just quietening down after the first shock, lost their nerve, and pandemonium seemed to break loose. Men, women and children rushed about in all directions, and while several endeavoured to lower the life-boats, the majority were simply swamped and went down with the Rowan. One of the ship's officers was standing on the promenade deck when the Clan Malcolm crashed against the doomed ship. He sprang, and landed on board the Clan liner. Others were not so fortunate, and a few were badly knocked about. Lieut. Thomson, R.I.C., formerly wounded, and died after being picked up by a rescuing ship. Pete Robinson, the burly drummer of the Syncoated Orchestra was completely exhausted by his struggles in the water, and he also Died Soon After Being Picked up.
Although badly damaged, the Clan Malcolm was able to give some help. She was aided by the West Camak, which had stood by after the first mishap. H.M.S. destroyer Wrestler and the Burns liner Woodcock also arrived on the scene. Woodcock was too late to pick up any survivors, but stood by till daylight. Wrestler was 18 miles away when she got the first distress call—going by North of Scotland to Rosyth. The calls for help were repeated by the Rowan's wireless operator, who bravely stuck to his post when the vessel was sinking. In half an hour after receiving his summons, the destroyer, commanded by Captain Hamersley Heenan, was on the spot. She managed to pick up 28 survivors, her boats and dinghies scouring the waters, and her powerful searchlights helping the other rescuing vessels. Altogether, 81 people were 18.

A BOOM IN OIL!

Quoting from our New York correspondents, "all signs indicate that an oil boom of enormous proportions is in the making just now, with the likelihood of the recurrence of two years ago, which witnessed the greatest bull market ever seen. We are about at the end of a long depression; production has been lessened and present stocks of crude and refined oils are rapidly being used up, the result of which must be a gradual advance in the price of oil shares."

We especially recommend Midwest Petroleum, Pacific Oil, Texas Company, Middle States and Pure Oil—all consistent dividend-payers, and certain to advance in the immediate future. We are fully equipped to trade on margin in these issues.
