A BIG DAY IN THE RAILWAY COM. MITTEE ROOM.

The Business of the House-The Number and Religion of the Civil Service-An Early

Vesterday was a private members day and there being no discussion on the business which they brought forward, it was quickly got through with, the house adjourning at 4.30, as in the absence of the icational report the estimates were not gone on with, educational items being next in order.

Mr. Bell introduced a hill to amend the public and separate schools act. The house went into committee on th bill to amend the act respecting lunatic asylums and the custody of insane persons and passed it with amendments. A bill to amend the Ontario joint stock be gone on with in the absence of the education report. Mr. Merrick again inquired as to the return of those in the civil service with their religion, as it was said the house was to adjourn the week after next. Mr. Fraser said it would be brought down as soon as it could be got ready. Mr. Meredith said that perhaps the ob-jection to and delay in producing it came from Mr. Fraser as he had taken a certain stand in regard to appointments of his coreligionists and it might not show well in regard to them.

Merrick wished the report. Mr. Morris thought there should be no difficulty about the report as the Dominion had brought down a similar one, including a much larger number of officials.

Mr. Hardy, who had just arrived, was well laughed at for jumping up to present the reports and returns which had pre-viously been given in by Mr. Fraser, and next. the house adjourned.

Mr. Waters' bill to amend the municipal act was taken up. In 1880 an act was passed amending the municipal act and providing that the qualifications for mem-bers of municipal bodies should be held "over and above all encumbrances." Mr. Waters, by his bill, sought to strike out the words "over and above all encumbrances" in the amending act, so that the act should stand as fermerly. The bill was discussed briefly, the feel-ing being that while the qualification was required it should be a substantial one, and that the difficulty lay in the assessors not assessing up to the full value of property. The bill to give certain powers to muni-cipalities in the county of Hastings was taken up. The municipalities ask for power to dispose of minerals under road allowances; power not to increase the rate of taxation on the property of certain parties, in consideration of the promotion of a railway; and power to agree not to in a sulway; and power to agree not to in a sulway; and power to agree not to in a sulway is and power to agree not to in talway the dispose of minerals under road allowances in consideration of the promotion of a railway; and power to agree not to in the sult of the substantion of the promotion of a railway is and power to agree not to in the sult of the sult of the sult was the sult of the sult was the sult of the substant of the sult was the sult of the sult was the sult of the substant of the sult was the sult of the sult of the sult was the sult of the sult of the sult was the sult of the sult was the sult of the sult

There was a doubt expressed as to whether this bill should be considered by timate to the losses of those who have neither asked nor required assistance, which are known to have been of great magni-tude. Nor of those of a public nature, among which were 51 school-houses and a large number of churches and highway bridges. The destruction thus wrought left men, women and children destitute of either clothing, food or shelter. It cover-ed a territory of over eighteen hundred square miles, and the progress of its ravages swept the entire district within from two to four hours after it began. The wonder is not that so many perished, but so many secaned. The thanks of the state are due the private bills or municipal committees but pending a decision the bill was pro ded with Mr. John Bell, solicitor for the county of Mr. John Bell, solicitor for the county of Hastings, opposed the bill.
