Railway Accident on the C. P. R. at Guelph.

A Number of Passengers More or Less Cut and Bruised.

Guelph, July 26.-The C. P. R. passenger train on the Guelph branch met with an accident this morning about couple of miles from here on its way from Guelph Junction to the city. The train was running about 30 miles an hour through a bad cut. All at once there was a jolt, and a freight car, the passenger, smoker and express cars were lying on their sides.

There were six passengers on board, all of whom received a severe shaking up. Mr. R. L. McKinnon, barrister, of this city, was cut considerably. Mrs. Blair, wife of Rev. Mr. Blair, Presbyterian minister at Campbellville and Nassagaweya, was cut about the face with glass, and Miss Annie Little, a relative, also cut. Mr. Albert Brandenburgh, a commercial traveler from Stratford, was the most seriously injured. He has an injury to shoulder blade, and is also hurt on the head. He was partially unconscious when taken to the Royal Hotel, and did not know where he was. He was taken to the General Hospital.

The accident is attributed to a bent axle on the freight car. The engineer and the trainmen lent every assistance and brought the passengers to the city Mr. Chris. Little, a passenger, says that he had to walk along the windows of the passenger car lying on its side, to force the door open, and that some of the occupants were pinned in their seats.

The radical difference between the culex and anopheles mosquito was also established. It is the latter species that carries malaria. This is the scope of the enormous task ahead of the people of Long Island and other mosquito-infested course, it cannot be expected that the extermination will be immediate and far-reaching. The great expense of the work has to be taken into consideration, and though in private property the cost and labor of destroying breeding places is small, there must be generous appropriations from the public funds the proper drainage or diking of the salt marshes. Public sentiment must accordingly be aroused and "no mosquitoes" be as prominent a part of the summer hotel advertisements 'southern exposure' and "salt water bathing.

Lord Spencer and Mr. Morley are as fully convinced of its practical impossibility as Mr. Balfour and Mr. Wyndham. Mr. Russell was right in assuming that at the root of the Irish policy lies the land. He is wrong in supposing that the Parliament of the United Kingdom can take the place of the landlords and not come into conflict with the Irish people. To buy out a particular proprietor at a fair price on the ground that his estate has become a source of danger to the public peace is possible, though it might be held to put a premium on mismanagement.

It would be premature to attempt to discuss this scheme until fuller details are disclosed, but it is of good augury that such a proposal should have emanated from a company, which has already given proofs of its ability to conduct a great ocean service on sound business lines. There is at present no better service on the Pacific than the service of fast steamers which the Canadian Pacific Railway Company runs between Vancouver and the Far East. The Empress steamers, as they are familiarly known, compare favorably for comfort, punctuality and equipment, in regard both to freight and passenger accommodation, with any other line which at present plies across the Northern Pacific. and the same company possesses another useful line of steamers running between British Columbia and our Australian Colonies. From the point of view of Imperial interests, the services rendered by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, not only in construction of the great link across the Dominion, but in developing a new ocean highway across the Pacific to our dependencies and great trading committies in the other hemisphere, have already proved of the highest value. The establishment of better and more rapid means of communication between mother country and Canada on suitable conditions would constitute an even greater service to the interests of the empire, while the fresh element of healthy competition it would import into the North Atlantic could hardly fail to benefit directly and indirectly those who are interested in the promotion of trade and intercourse across the great ocean, which nowadays seems more and more not to divide but to bring together the peoples of Europe

CHAMBERLAIN'S POSITION. One of the Canadian Pacific Rail-

They have no doubt the British Government will provide a chief requirement of the Imperial Govsubsidy equaling the Canadian Government subsidy. Mr. Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, is known to favor subsidy. Mr. Chamberlain, the Co-Its founder, William O'Brien, is too ex- le dal Secretary, is known to favor this plan, and parliament will unvoice of the Irish people for want of doubtedly gratify the government's recommendations along such lines. The chief requirement of the Imperial Government will be that the steamers shall become auxiliary cruisers, just as the Canadian Pacific Railroad's Empress (Pacific) liners are. The principal points on which the Canadian Government will insist relate to refrigerating plants, speed and cargo capacity. It is admitted on all sides that the present movement was hastened by, if it was not the immediate outcome the formation of the American shipping combine.

Canada Holds the Key.

f John W. Gates, who is associated with J. Pierpont Morgan in railroad combinations, says that in a very few years all the railroads of the United States will be comprised in three or four systems, which will partition the country. Mr. Gates claims that this centralization road, rolling stock and equipment to that the amateur empire-builders be reduced and the tendency of freight rates in the next ten years will be lower.

Every trust is organized under the pretext that it will effect economies of which the public will get the benefit, but experience has discredited the theory. The pooling of the American railroad systems, has a practical interest for Canada, because of its relation to the Atlantic carrying trade. The Morgan steamship merger is an extension of the railroad combination. The same group of capitalists is behind both. A monopoly of land transportation is in sight, but to make the ocean a private highway would seem an impossible task be bent to any shape at any time. even for the modern money power. But control of the land lines means afford protection. That in a great imperial project. 1s, provided the Canadian railroads kept out of the clutch of the American octopus. T. R. and C. P. R. as feeders to an Atlantic freight service, would protect the United States as well as Great Britain and Canada, against a railroad and steamship combine, and would carry a great volume of American exports to the Atlantic seaboard which would build up Canadian ports.

In Good Hands.

Canada holds the key to the situation.

Mr. Frank B. Leonard, of this city, has been appointed as the fifth member of the Temiscaming Railway Commission. The choice is an excellent Mr. Leonard will bring to the work of the commission a life-long experience as the head of a large manufacturing concern, and a fine practical judgment. Men like Mr. Ames, Mr. Gurney and Mr. Leonard have nothing to gain by membership on the commission, but have accepted it from a sense of public duty. The Temiscaming Railway will involve an expenditure of over two millions of dollars and is the first attempt in Ontario to apply the principle of Government ownership of railways. The credit of the Province is staked on its success. The Government feels its responsibility for this bold and aggressive policy, and has determined that the management of the undertaking shall be intrusted to men of the highest qualifications. The commission will finance the railroad and superintend its construction and operation, and the Province is to be congratulated that the work will be in such good hands.

Sir Wilfrid and Sir Edmund.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Edmund Barton, the premier of Australia, are undergoing a similar experience. Both are being assailed because they are not | that should not present insurmountable publishing their views in advance of the conclusions of the Imperial con- $1,500,000 a year from parliament, and ference. In a speech the other day, Sir Edmund Barton touched on this as follows:

"I have been attacked rather bitterbecause I have not indicated with absolute clearness and definiteness the attitude I propose to take up with regard to the more important subjects that will come up for discussion at the conference. I think you will agree with me that to enter the conference definitely and irrevocably pledged to the adoption of a particularly attitude towards the subjects to be discussed would be to go a long way towards insuring the failure of that conference. I should be doing injustice both to the people of the Commonwealth, to has too much the air of an ephemeral my fellow-representatives at the consuccess in temporarily harmonizing ference, and to myself if I were to bind myself at this stage by the expression of definite conclusions with regard to the subjects that are to come to for discussion. A conference ends with its concluion-it does not generally begin with Its object is to enable those conclusions to be arrived at after the fullest light has been thrown upon the subject and the fullest consideraion given to the different interests nvolved. In taking up this attitude am not asking for the grant of my confidence beyond what must be secessarily reposed in one who is to ict in a representative capacity. ould not bind the Commonwealth by iny engagement if I would, and I would not if I could. Fortunately, however, I am not likely to be confronted with any such engagement or agreement."

Those picayune Canadians who have been attacking Sir Wilfrid Laurier with the malignant suggestion that Imperialism does not appeal to him as a French-Canadian, cannot explain the attitude of Sir Edmund Barton on any such ground. They cannot say that Mr. Barton does not represent Australian sentiment. He knows that if he committed himself to any castiron scheme of Imperial defense or preferential trade he would be infringing on erning colonies of the empire are in substantial accord on these questions, will enable the cost of maintenance of and they represent a body of opinion should take into account.

The London Globe quotes a provincial German newspaper as saying that "Sir Wilfrid Laurier has decided that the procession that was arranged for Friday shall take place as arranged, and that the Queen and princes shall be present" This is almost as good as the oft-repeated story of the French-Canadian habitant, who, on hearing that Albert Edward had been proclaimed King, remarked "What a pull he must have had with Laurier!"

The Montreal Star thus comments on Rev. Dr. Langtry's letter anent the salary limit for marriage among bank clerks.

"There are pleasanter ways of representing marriage than as an alternate to dissolute habits. The real wrong is in making a complete life, the only life in which the affections find complete satisfaction, impossible to a large number of men of a superior class. and in cultivating a very inferior type of life, one of foppery, social frivolity and selfishness. An institution that does everything that has this tendency incurs a serious responsibility. All great institutions should be very careful as to the influence they exercise by their corporate action on the lives of their employes.

The Toronto Globe, speaking of the proposed subsidy for a British-Canddian fast Atlantic steamship line, very wisely says:

"If we have only the same nominal control over rates on the proposed steamship line which we now have over rates on the railways, the subsidy would be a waste of public money. It is the duty of parliament to first devise a means of controlling rates, and difficulties. It will not do to begin by creating a gigantic monopoly drawing strong enough to control parliament trusting in some special dispensation of Providence to give parliament control of the monopoly. The subsidy should wait on the perfecting of a scheme of parliamentary control."

Not Her Fault.

British vs. French Premierships. The customary French premiership has too much the air of an ephemeral conflicting interests. In this there is no promise of stability, and little of real power even for the day. Premiers come and go. But the English Government strikes its roots deeper. Its chief is such through representing and controlling stronger and more enduring political forces than a French prime minister even feels at his back. Mr. Balfour may not be in his own person a more attractive or puissant figure than M. HORNELLSVILLE'S BIG CLOUDBURST

Leaves Death and Destruction in Its Path.

TWO LIVES REPORTED

Bridges Washed Away Near Hor nellsville, Howard and Fremont-Farms and Streets Flooded

Hornellsville, July 28 .- There have been many cloudbursts in this vicinity the past month but none have equaled the terrible downpour of water which took place Saturday af-

At about 5:30 heavy clouds which had been gathering east of this city suddenly discharged their contents. A small valley leading from this city to Howard, known as Glen avenue, caught the entire force of the great storm. Suddenly a huge wave of water, filling the entire valley over four feet in depth, came roaring down into this city, carrying bridges, fences and all movable property with it.

Bridge after bridge was torn out, and in the flood could be seen chairs, beds and other articles of household goods. One house, belonging to a man named Ellis, is known to be gone and no one at the present time can tell how many others.

WASHED AWAY PROPERTY. The flood struck this city and poured across East Main street, emptying into the river. It swept through the large tannery of Prindle & Son, located on East Main street, washing out the vats and all movable property. The damage at the tannery alone will be very heavy. Lawns were covered with slime and debris of all kinds, logs, stumps, telegraph and telephone poles, and the beautiful street is a scene of ruin by the flood. No one can go up the what the water did up there, but judging from the debris which comes down the angry stream, the damage will be something enormous.

STREET CARS STOPPED. At one place the water lifted a flagstone sidewalk and moved it some distance. The water at the present time is going down, but it continues washing a hole twenty feet deep in East Main, one of the principal streets of the city. The electric car tracks are washed out and no cars can cross the flooded district. Not before tomorrow can any correct estimate be made of the great damage done.

Later news has been received of the great cloudburst in this vicinity. The towns of Howard and Fremont are reported to be washed out beyond all estimate of damages. On Big Creek, a tributary of the Canisteo River, every bridge, so far as known, has been washed away. The water rose in the valley 15 feet in one hour. Farm lands are washed in a way that it will take years for them to recover from the effects of the flood.

TWO REPORTED DEAD. On the highway leading from this city a man on horseback nearly lost his life, as the water was level with the horse's back. The town of Canisteo suffered thousands of dollars'

As far as known two lives are reported lost. The storm was preceded the wick by a hailstorm which destroyed all meantime. crops, cutting them to the ground. DEBRIS ON RAILROAD TRACKS. Canisteo, July 28.—One of the most terrible and disastrous floods that has occurred in this territory in years visited Canisteo Saturday night. Shortly after 6 o'clock heavy clouds gathered, it became dark and a heavy rain

At about 6:30 o'clock a tremendous cloudburst took place about two miles west and north of Canisteo, in the town of Howard, and this poured down the small streams with such force as to carry barns, sheds, logs, stumps and all kind of such stuff imaginable along with it. This stuff poured out on the Erie Railroad tracks which run near the hills and in nearly every instance at the termination of every hitherto small creek the tracks are covered with from three to ten feet of this flood stuff and gravel. For about five miles all the bridges are completely washed out and in most cases carried away. It will probably railroad traffic can be resumed on the Erie.

the 1992 wool auction sales closed today with a limited number of buyers present. The offerings numbered 5.622 bales. Only a few merinos were offered, and they were in keen demand. Following are today's sales in detail: New South Wales, 800 bales; scoured, 9d to 1s 7½d; greasy, 5d to 11½d. Queensland, 53 bales; scoured, 1s 2½d to 1s 5d. Cape of Good Hope and Natal, 200 bales; scoured, 8½d to 1s 4d; greasy, 4¾d. During the series merinos were in active demand. The price at the opening was unchanged to 5 per cent higher for well-conditioned. Greasies gradually hardened under the influence of American support, and at the close showed a full advance of 5 per cent. Merinos wer in exceptionally keen request, owing to the scarcity, and 5 per cent higher. Greasy cross-breds were also 5 per cent higher at the close. Medium and coarse cross-breds weakened under large supplies, but toward the end of the sales competition broadened and prices advanced to a level with the May average. Cape of Good Hope advanced 5 per cent and closed firm under good demand for the home trade and the continent. The position of merinos appears to be assured in view of the Australian reports of a reduction in supplies during the coming season. During the sales 203,494 bales were catalogued. Of this number 68,000 were sold to the continent. $000 to America and 38,000 were held over. The remainder were taken by the home trade. The arrivals for the fifth series amount to 137,199 bales, including 44,000 forwarded direct. The imports during the week were: New South Wales, 252; Queensland, 1,387; Victoria, 277; New Zealand, 1,492; Cape of Good Hope and Natal, 3,331; Philadelphia, 1,473; Bremen, 952; elsewhere, 555. All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.

They litter the whole system. Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestroubles are due to them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove all humors, overcome all their effects, strengthen, tone and invigorate the whole system. "My health was poor and I suffered much from hives and kidney trouble. After was cured. I regard this medicine as superior to all others." MRS. JOSEPH HOL-LINSHEAD, Harrison, Ontario. Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

TRAMP POET SENT TO THE PENITENTIARY

His Verse Was Marked by a Pessimistic Quality.

The police picked up a poet the other day, says the Buffalo Times. They tions of the desk sergeant:

"What's your name?" "Grim Lewis."

"Where were you born?"

"How old are you?"

"Married?" "What's your occupation?"

"Poet." 'Prove it." The patrolman who arrested Lewis searched him and found in his pocket round mirror, as big as a dollar; a soiled handkerchief, a piece of plug tobacco and a scrap of paper. "Hardly a poet's outfit," the desk sergeant as the stuff was laid on the desk. Then he picked up the piece of paper to see what it contained. He found a comb, somewhat toothless; a small

this written on it, being an extract

Beneath the above verse were these four lines, which Lewis unblushingly confessed he had written himself: do back! Sit down! Oh, what's de use, Dis sounds all right in verse,

But I'll bet me bottom dollar Dis poet had no purse.' "No so bad," commented the desk sergeant, after he had suffered the reading of it. "It could be worse-not Then his eye fell upon another piece of poetry on the same grimy piece of paper. It ran: "I hold it truth with him who sings,

To one clear harp in divers tones, That men may rise on stepping-stones their dead selves to higher things." Beneath that Lewis had written this comment, putting it in verse as here "Dis fits a day long since gone by, When men wore knickerbockers;

But now it has no place at all-There are too many knockers." "That's better, but not much," remarked the desk sergeant, as the paper was given to Lewis to put back into his pocket. Then the poet was led away to a cell. The next morning he faced a morning justice, and, being unable to prove that he was not a tramp, he was sent to the pen for a brief stay. It might not have been so brief had he tried to inflict his poetry on the morn-

[Washington Star.] The passing of the scythe causes a sincere regret. Not only is the deliberof peace and contentment, but there is a something refreshing in the smell of the falling grass which cannot be detected in the wake of a modern mowing monster. The softly hissing sound of the sharpening whetstones became a soothing melody to the farm boy. stretched at full length under a tree, resting, while the men labored on. The methodical advance down the grain field, the cradles throwing out windrows of wonderful regularity, the exquisite skill of the sweep, so elusive to the beginner—these have gone. In their place are beauty-sacrificing machines, and the city man of today, who was once a farmer lad, sighs as he locks across the capitol grounds and sees the modern engine, making excellent lawns, to be sure, but adding no picture or pcetry to the landscape.

Many person in Europe are now learning for the first time that the distinguished French Academy of Science was once guilty of an egregious blunder. At the beginning of the nineteenth century it offered to give a prize to the first person who would solve the following problem: If you take a vase full of water and put a stone or similar body in it the water will flow over. If, however, you put into it a fish, the volume of which is equal to that of the stone, it will not flow over. Explain this phenomenon. Learned essays on the subject poured in from all quarters, but the problem was not satisfactorlly solved in any of them, and consequently the prize was not awarded. In the following year the same question was again propounded, and for five years answers continued to pour into the academy. Then it suddenly occurred to one of the academicians that, after all, the problem night be incapable of solution, and he determined to make a test for himself. Filling a vase with water, he put a stone into it and saw that the water flowed over. Then he took out the stone, filled the vase again with water, and put into it a fish the volume of which was the same as that of the stone, and saw, to his surprise, that the water again flowed over.

He told the academy of his discovery, and the result was that the offer of a prize was at once withdrawn.

LIGHTNING HIT BICYCLES DIED OF BLOOD-POISONING

Slid Down Church Tower and Mr. James Elson Passes Away at Struck Several Wheels.

Tower Was Not Damaged Much But Trees Were Punctured.

The following story about a caper the lightning cut comes from Westminster and no fairy tale was every known to originate in that township. A large congregation was attending service at the First Presbyterian Church, where Rev. Dr. McCrae preaches, on Sunday afternoon, and several of the worshipers had ridden to church on their bicycles, thinking maybe that as J. Pluvins had turned off the rain long enough for them to go to church, he would duplicate his kindess for the return trip. They left their wheels standing below the tower that adds dignity to the First Church and were soon afterward absorbed in listening to Dr. McCrae's sermon. Whether it is believed or not it is stated as a fact that no rain fell for as long as twenty-seven minutes and then a storm arose, with lightning. The steeple was struck and the lightning slid gracefully down it, carefully divided into a number of parts, each of which picked out a bicycle, went over and punctured the tires.

As the boy grew, it was not likely that he would submit to the control of a mother who ruled by fear rather than love. Petticoat influence, indeed, is seldom either much regarded or dreaded by a man under thirty. By degrees he slipped his neck out of the yoke, I am bound to say, with perfect temper and good conduct. He never spoke harshly or disconduct. He never spoke harshly or disrespectfully to Lady Olivia; but he simply absented himself as much as possible from her society, and ignored her authority altogether. Such a state of things was unnatural, and could not possibly lead to good. Then came all the excitement and temptations of the great world to be encountered in their most seductive form, without the one controlling principle which steadles even when it fails to guide, as the helm of a ship keeps her head well up to windward in a gale. A young man of fortune loose upon London, without domestic ties, and without a strong sense of religion, is not unlikely to make shipwreck. That Gilbert escaped so long, I can only attribute to scaped so long. I can only attribute to his excellent natural disposition, to a certain degree of innate refinement that thrank intuitively from vice, even when the dame draped herself, as she well knows how to do, in her daintiest attire, and to a grave brotherly regard he entertained for his cousin Gertrude, whose elternate sarcasms and good counsels. alternate sarcasms and good counsels, did not fail on more than one occasion to rouse in him that sense of self-respect and that strength of self-control, which and that strength of self-control, which the extremes of prosperity and adversity are so prone to annihilate.

Why he never fell in love with Gertrude it is not easy to say. Perhaps the very facility of winning prevented him from entering the arena; perhaps the most tempting fruit is always that which hangs out of reach, and it is near sport hangs out of reach, and it is poor sporto strike the quarry without the excite ment of the chase. At the time when ment of the chase. At the time when my story opens the girl had almost made up her mind to marry him, and when such young ladies are in earnest they are not easily folled. It is folly to speculate on what might have been. Would such a marriage have insured his happiness here and hereafter? or would happiness here and hereafter? it but have made confusion worse confounded? There is no such thing as a suppositional past; and yet how prone are to lament and bewail! "If ly known. If I had but been sooner." If so, you would have been a different world; and the whole hypothesis explodes in its own absurdity.

Long before he was thirty, Gilbert had become a good-humored, easy, unprincipled man of the world. I use the latter diective in its narrowest sense. I do not mean to say that he was capable of any mean to say that he was capable of any infamous act, and for what the world calls honor he had the most scrupulous regard; but I do mean to say that of such latitude as that world allows, totally irrespective of religion and morality, he was quite ready to ave it himself. The was quite ready to av ! himself.

was quite ready to av ! himself. Like the bulk of his associates, he was also somewhat bored and blase, as those must in hunting butterflies; but, like them he accepted this weariness as an indispensable condition, and only strove to dispel it by a fresh pursuit after a fresh insect. If the butterflies had all been alike, flitting the same unvarying round within the garden walls, this would have been of less importance; but in a fatal mothe garden wans, this would have been of less importance; but in a fatal moment he was attracted by one of fairy colors and far-extended flight. Hot, breathless, and exhausted, he followed it beyond the bounds of lawn and pleasurepeyond the bounds of lawn and pleasure-grounds, far out and away into the wild-erness. When Gilbert Orme first met Ada Latimer, he thought he had exhaust-Ada Latimer, he thought he had exhausted all the sensations and experiences of life. He fancied in his ignorance (was it pitiful or envisble?) that he had felt every thing, done every thing, that he was getting old in mind if not in body, and that there was very little left worth but the common needs such a state of torpidity was in itself delicious. There was a zest in every thing now that even boyhood had failed well as the passions were concerned. I have seen him, when a boy, plunge into a study which interested, or take up an amusement which fascinated him, with an energy and a persistency that of themselves predicated success. Contrary to one of the fundamental rules of mechanics, his violentum was also persections and he was a gray instance of impetum, and he was a rare instance of petuosity and perseverance combipetuosity and perseverance combined. Beneath that careless, indolent exterior lay, dormant indeed, but only awaiting be aroused, strong passions, unbending to be aroused, strong passions, unbending resolution, an iron will that could strike fierely on the instant, or wait doggedly for years, the whole tempered by a rare generosity and kindliness of heart. Such a character, indeed, is powerful for good or for evil; such a character, above all others, requires some guidance superior to the corridor motives that commonly sordid motives that commonly

I have heard a theory broached which I have heard a theory oroached which at first sight may appear untenable, but on which the more I reflect, the more I am convinced it contains a considerable leavening of truth. It is this: that there is a strong similarity in the characters of the very good and the very bad; nay, that their prevailing qualities are actually identical, and that the difference, as in the mountain-stream, depends upon the channel into which they may happen to channel into which they may happen to be turned. It is a startling consideration truly, and more especially for those who have to do with the young. Doubtless it is difficult to define the exact point less it is difficult to define the exact point at which a virtue carried too far passes into its corresponding vice. It requires, indeed, a skillful moralist to decide where faith ends and fanaticism begins; where courage becomes rashness, decision degenerates into self-conceit, or perseverance patrifics into obstinacy. The more generates into self-conceit, or perseverance petrifies into obstinacy. The more I reflect on such ethical inconsistencies, the more hopelessly I lose myself in a maze of conjecture from which I feel there is no egress but by the light of revelation. No system of man's philosophy has ever yet been sufficient to satisfy the cravings of man's reasoning pwers. It is better to accept humbly at we feel we cannot do without; it is better to believe than to understand, and, while we take morality as a staff, to held fast by religion as a guide. to hold fast by religion as a guide.
Yes, we come back at last to the Druid's stones, to the Norseman's runes,

"Little children, keep yourselves from idois!" Even in these Christian times idolatry is one of the crying sins of the human race. Be it the money-worship that reduces every thought and feeling to a golden standard; be it the ambition that leaves not a moment for reflection or repose—be it the more amiable yet no less fatal folly that exalts a fellow-creature into a divinity—too surely does it mete out for itself its own retribution. It is a fine thing to be rich. It is grand to have power, and station, and influence. Above all, it is a golden dream to love. How sweet it is to treasure up something so dearly! how ennobling to adore it so devotedly! what unspeakable happiness in the utter self-abandonment and self-sacrifice! can any pleasure of gain or success compare with that which we feel in pouring out all our wealth of life and hopes at our idols' feet?—and yet—I wonder what the poor negro thinks of his fetich, when, as must sometimes happen, he finds it break to pieces in his series seems to be in and the reason for it is not altogether clear. The Paris club dropped out of the race entirely on Saturday, and no one blames them much. The team were woefully weak, and with the season half vanished, they found themselves face to face with a string of five defeats, unbroken by a single victory. Stratford is in little better plight, and the Iroquois' failure to keep their engagement with the London club on Saturday may be taken as an admission of their weakness. Of course the boiler-plate sporting editors throughout the district will tell you that the poor Indians were intimidated by a certain bloodthirsty London newspaper; some of them have already become hysterical over the matter. The fact is the Iroquois are bullies at home and quitters abroad. The excuse offered for their non-appearance at Tecumseh Park Saturday was childish. If they rather than by accident.

With Stratford and Paris out of the running, it looks as if the finish of District No. 2 would be anything but a brilliant one. In the meantime Brantford, St. Kitts, Orangeville and the Tecumsehs are making a pretty fight in the other district. It is doubtful, indeed, whether the eastern teams are playing better lacrosse than the first three teams mentioned. Brantford, considered by all odds the strongest team in the west, fell down Saturday before the Atheltics, a fact which indicates how evenly the teams are matched. The Tecumsehs, who started out with a great flourish of trumpets, batter waging a masterial and terms batter waging a his guard, leaving an seem to have found the pace too hot, opening which Jeffries took advantage and the prospects are that, despite the that this was not done intention-

LACROSSE. A THREE-HOUR CONTEST.

The game commenced at 4 o'clock and lasted nearly three hours. At the end of time the score stood 2 The teams decided to play 20 minutes more, or until one side scored. At this period of the game one of Hanover's best players was so battered up that he had to be removed from the field. To even things up Durham dropped one of their men, and the play continued for 15 minutes, when Mc-Carthy made the winning shot, giving Durham the game by 3 to 2.

THE USUAL FAKE STORY. San Francisco, July 28. - The assertions that the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons bout was a fake, fixed to finish with the defeat of the Cornishman in the eighth round, has stirred up more pother than any previous charge of the many of this kind that have been made here. Mayor Schmitz is making an investigation that may ultimately result in the closing of San Francisco to the padded mitts game. His inquiry is based on a signed and sealed statement that was handed to him by W. W. Naughton, the well-known pugilistic writer, prior to the fight, which Naughton represents that he has information from some person, identity not disclosed, that the fight is to Naughton's statement is to the cffect that the fight is to come to finish in the eighth and that Fitzsimmons is either to be knocked out or is to simulate a knockout. Fitz did go out in the eighth. Those who claim that the outcome of the fight was prearranged, base their allegation principally on the fact that Fitzsimmons, waging a masterful and telling dencious. There was a zest in every thing now that even boyhood had failed to find; he triumphed like a miser in his newly-discovered treasure, pondered on it in secret, and hid it away in his immost heart. In such a disposition as his there was a considerable leavening of the womaniv element, which makes an amiable companion, but a weak man. The "besoin d'aimer" was strong within him. He had never got through that disease which, like the measles, it is best to encounter in early life, consequently it took a firm hold of his constitution. Jeffries is equally vehement in his denials, and both are courting a full investigation. Fitzsimmons is badly hurt. The terrific body blows that he received on Friday have unquestionably affected his heart. His right thumb is dislocated and two knuckles of his left hand are badly out of place. He is now under the care of a physician. Fitzsimmons said Saturday: "It's a shame to call it a fake. I fought the greatest fight of my life, and here le have been branded as a cur. There was, winning all the time, but I could not have won anyway. Both hands were gone. I know that some women had written to Naughton that I was thought to lay down in the eighth. When I got in distress in the 8th last night I thought of the letter and tried to stall off the end, but I could not do it. I got what I gave many a good man. It was the same blow that I gave Corbett, only it was a lit-

THE COLORED CHAMPIONSHIP. London, July 26,-The contest between "Bob" Armstrong and "Denver" Ed. Martin, the American pugilists, for the colored championship of the world, which took place at Crystal Palace last night, attracted a great crowd. Armstrong started in a favorite, but his performance did not justify this, as Martin proved to be the more clever from the outset, and never gave his opponent a chance, being declared an easy winner on points at the close of 15 rounds.

Hurst was selected to referee the bout by the committee which has been arranging the preliminaries of the contest. No reason was assigned in the dispatch from "Young Corbett's" manager for his objection to the choice of the committee. A message was sent by "Young Corbett," to Harris, Mc-Govern's manager, who is now at New London, notifying him that the selection of Hurst could not be accepted, and inviting him to a conference on Sunday next in this city.

CLOSE AT CLEVELAND. Cleveland, July 28 .- The closing day of the best race meeting Cleveland has ever known was characterized by a desperate and long-drawn-out struggle for supremacy in the 2:21 pace. Dandy Chimes, from the Geers stable, was the favorite, and began his losing in the second heat, when the driver was second heat, when the driver was caught napping at the wire. King Charles managed to last another heat, and the Sylviaone came to the front. Dandy Chimes was freshest for the fifth heat, but was outraced by Sylviaone in the succeeding trips. The winner was a 12 to 1 shot when the race began. The Roman kept up his winning streak, started early in the season, and had no trouble in taking the 2:18 trot when the time came. He was an oddson favorite. Martha Marshall, never taken seriously in the betting, landed the split-up 2:08 pace. Spinx S. was the pick of the talent, and lost race by a break a few feet from the finish. Martha Marshall had the speed of the entire party, but bad acting in getting away lost her the second and third heats. She started badly in the fourth heat, and the manner in which she overhauled the leaders was one of the best efforts of the week. The play in the fourth race made upon The Questor, while Betsy Tell was entirely overlooked. "The true fisherman, you know," continued Mr. Bastedo, "does not care a straw for a big string of fish. What he likes is the mere sport of catching them, and playing one good husky fellow will give him more enjoyment than another man would get in a day. Unfortunately there are others whose only object is to make a big haul, with the result that in every fishing district there is a great waste every season. Putting bass in trout waters like Muskoka is believed by some to disaster to the trout. Mr. Basteda carefully studied the subject before he the nine cars of bass to sent the Muskoka, and he came to the conclusion that the fish would thrive together and maintain the numerical proportions in which they started out.

SCORES OF THE CANADIANS HALT IN THE WHITE STAR DEAL

Bad Weather Conditions for Final Stage of the King's Prize-A Clergyman's Feat.

London, July 28.-Bisley can usually be depended upon to furnish something new in the shooting line, and this year has not proved an exception. A clergyman, who was entered in one of the mediumrange contests, astonished the competitors and threw the spectators into spasms of curiosity by lying hidden behind a fence and firing without exposing his head to look along his gunbarrel. He made a score of 34 points out of a possible 35. Everyone howled. The clergyman had attached to his gun an invention of his own, called a hyposcope, which enabled him to sight his weapon by an arrangement of little mirrors in a vertical tube. The possibilities of this invention, as will be recognized, are great. Equipped with this humane device, two forces, taking cover without artillery, would shoot at hyposcopes instead of each other's heads. The force first deprived of its apparatus might be considered hors de combat. There would be no bloodshed beyond an occasional cut finger. It is claimed that this improvement should add to the popularity of soldiering, and at the same time promote its true purpose— peace. Advocates of the hyposcope Health has appointed Mr. John Fairpoint out that it would make the cowgrieve, smoke inspector, the new office recently created there. Leonard, says: "Another subject discussed is the possible return to London from Toronto of the superintendent's headquarters, for the division between West Toronto Junction and Detroit. When Mr. Thos. Williams was superintendent of that gurt of one of the worst storms ever experienced in that part of the country, the crops in East Oxford and vicinity have been badly damaged. Hail fell to the depth of six inches in places. Roads and bridges were washed away, trees torn down and fences leveled. Thousands of dollars worth of property was destroyed.

JUST THINK

You Can Think When the Food Makes Your Brain Work.

The mind does not work properly unless the right kind of food is furnished. young man studying telegraphy said that his progress was very slow. It seemed impossible for him to pick up the art and understand it. He suffered continually with stomach trouble and could not digest his food properly, and he finally got so he could do but little work and was tempted to give up his studies altogether. About that time some one told him about the brain food Grape-Nuts and he went in for it. In a short time a very remarkable change took place. His stomach recovered and he became free from headaches. His hand was no longer nervous and trembling when he used the key, and the whole mystery of telegraphy untangled itself, for, as he says, "I had the mental power to master it, and the understanding came easy when the mind was in poise and strong." He is now holding a responsible position as an operator.

This is but one of the many illustrations of the advantage of using food purposely manufactured for rebuilding the broken down gray matter in the brain and nerve centers throughout the body. The facts are there and can be proven to anyone making the trial.

Don't overlook the recipe book in each package of Grape-Nuts.

struction started down the track at an awful rate. Down the 400 feet of clear track the hoist flew, gaining in speed at every foot until the end was reached. There a timber 12x12, arose to block its way, but it might as well have been a toothpick, for the hoist snapped it in a twinkling, and with a love of fully 20 foot it worked beavily. leap of fully 30 feet it crashed heavily to the deck of the transport. Any other boat would have been sunk immediately, but the immense car ferry stood under the strain, her upper works demolished, but her hull and machinery practically uninjured.

Had the accident happened any other time but Sunday more than a hundred men might have lost their lives. Fortunately only one man, the watchman employed by the Michigan Central, was on board, and his escape was an almost miraculous one. He was standing under the port smokestack when he saw the hoist running down the track. In an instant he picked up crossed the threshold before the hoist was hurled over him, and the next minute the crash came. BOAT BADLY INJURED. The entire port side of the transport is a mass of ruin. "The Twentieth Century Limited." A poem written on the occasion of the placing in service of the 20-hour train between New York and Chicago, by the new York Central and Lake Shore, June 15th 1909.

Ho! for the Twentieth Century Train, Ho! for the mind and the might and the That have made out of steel and steam To conquer all distance, and to render vain
The efforts of Time to set the pace
In the winged and winning, wonderful The whole wide world is making today,

The whole wide world is making today, As if all Progress were running away. Out of the East, like the rising sun, The T. C. T. sets forth on its run To the far-off West, as we measure space, But the near-by West, as it runs the race. And, rolling along on its velvet course, The flying emblem of moving force, It speeds by river and town and plain, Into the darkness and out again, In sight for a moment, then lost to the eye, Like the ghost of a going we may hear fitting by, Until with a scream of whistle, and shake

Of its fiery head it stops by the lake,
A thousand miles to the Westward, and then Impatient to fly to the Eastward again.
Triumphant and timeless, the T. C. T.
Brings the shores of the lake and the shores of the sea
In touch with each other, uniting as one
The lands of the rising and the setting sun.
Ho! for the Twentieth Century Train,
Ho! for the mind and the might and the main, Whose banner of steam and of steel is To lead in the race of the speeds of the world. world.
Here's to the wonderful T. C. T.
The finest and fleetest of the N. Y. C.!
