Summons to the Conservatives.

LONDON, July 26.—The Conservative whip is urging upon the members of the party the necessity of a full attendance at the opening of Parliament on Aug. 4. The circulars usually issued by Lord Salisbury to the members of the House of Lords, and by Mr. Balfour to the members of the House of Commons prior to the opening of the session, have been dispensed with.

French Torpedo Boat Sunk.

BREST, July 26.—During the naval manœuvers which were held off this port yesterday evening, a torpedo boat, while steaming at full speed, ran directly upon the ram on one of the ironclads which was taking part in the manœuvers, and sank in ten fathoms of water. The accident was due to the temporary blinding of the lookouts on the torpedo boat by the glare of the electric searchlight which was being used on the ironclad. No lives were lost.

A Cabinet Crisis Ended.

CHRISTIANIA, July 25.—At a meeting of the members of the Left and Right in the Storthing to-day it was decided to present an address to Mr. Steen, the Prime Minister, and other members of the Cabinet who recently tendered their resignations owing to the refusal of the King to sanction the establishment of separate Norwegian consulates, requesting them to remain in office and to postpone indefinitely the settlement of the consulate question. As this solution of the difficulty has been accepted by the King, the crisis is considered to be at an end.

The Storthing unanimously adopted the address without debate.

Mr. Gladstone is All Right.

LONDON, July 26.—An oculist visited Mr. Gladstone to-day, and after an examination of his injured eye told him that it had regained so much of its strength that he might use it briefly for reading purposes. Mr. Gladstone's general health is admirable. He has now made arrangements to come to this city to-morrow, and has invited Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Mr. John Morley, Mr. Arnold Morley and five other leading members of the Liberal party to take dinner with him in the evening.

Emin a Used-Up Man.

BERLIN, July 26.—Dr. Stuhlmann, Emin Pasha's second in command, writes to Dr. Schweinfurth from East Africa, denying that Emin Pasha invaded British territory, or that he tried to recover the ivory he left at Wadelai, the rebels having seized and carried it off.

The fatigues of the marching, says Dr. Stuhlmann, sapped Emin's health, his eyesight became worse until he could not read or write or see the way, and he continued to suffer from insomnia and frequent hemorrhages from an old ear wound.

Dr. Stuhlmann, who parted with Emin some distance west of Victoria Nyanza, brings to the coast a rich scientific collection.

African Natives with Spiders.

BERLIN, July 26.—The Cologne Gazette alleges that the African natives who recently repulsed Baron Von Bulow's forces in the Moshi territory, near Kilima-Njaro had been supplied with a number of Sniter rifles by the British East Africa Company. In the fighting between German and native forces Baron Von Bulow, Lieut. Wolfram and twenty of the Soundanese soldiers attached to the expedition were killed.

Eugene Wolfle, the newspaper correspondent in German East Africa, telegraphs to the Tageblatt that Dr. Stuhlman, the second in command of Emin Pasha's expedition, is ill at Bagamoyo and that he is lying at the point of death.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Barns and Mills Destroyed by the Subtle Agency—Two Persons Stunned.

CASTLETON, Ont., July 26.—The saw and shingle mill owned by S. L. Purdy and leased by D. Ellis was struck by lightning last night and burned. Loss, $2,000; no insurance. Peter Bound a farmer living about three miles east of here had his barn and contents destroyed by lightning.

HICKSON, July 26.—Early on Sunday morning the barn and stables of Mrs. Henry Abell, 11th line, were struck by lightning and burned, with a quantity of hay, a binder and other implements. Insured in the East Zorra and South Easthope Farmers' Mutual for $500 on building and contents.

BRANTFORD, July 26.—The electrical storm on Sunday burned out every telephone instrument in town and set fire to the office, which, however, was quickly extinguished. The loss is altogether estimated at close upon $5,000. The electric light plant was damaged to the extent of about $1,000.

BURNED OUT.

New York's Biscuit House Blaze Costs Half a Million Dollars.

FREE FIGHT AT A WEDDING.

The Bride Shot in the Side and the Groom Stabbed in Many Places.

MAHONOY CITY, Pa., July 26.—John Lipski, a young Polander, was married on Monday to Miss Mary Kolzovitch. Among the guests were Michael Felinski and John and Peter Kolzovitch, brothers of the bride. All drank freely and soon a dispute arose between two of the men as to which of the wedding gifts were the most valuable. They came to blows and Lipski, who was just passing through the room with his bride by his side, stepped forward to part them. Then the row became general and knives and revolvers were used. One of the shots struck the bride in her side and she fell to the floor where she was trampled upon by the fighters. The neighbors had by this time summoned the police and surrounded the house and arrested all who had not in the meantime fled. Mrs. Lipski and her two brothers were found to be very seriously wounded. Lipski was stabbed in many places, but none of his wounds are considered serious. Many others were cut, but were carried home by their friends before the officers came to the scene. Twenty-seven of the participants were arrested, several of whom bore ugly cuts.

FRICK'S CONDITION.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 16.—Mr. Frick's condition throughout the night was fairly satisfactory. No dangerous symptoms have developed, and danger is believed to be over.

IN THE HOMESTEAD.

Mr. Lovejoy says: "There are almost 600 men now at work in the Homestead mill, and of these a good many are skilled workmen."

TWO SUSPECTS ARRESTED.

NEW YORK, July 26.—A journeyman baker named F. Mollick was arrested this morning at Long Branch. He is charged with being a party to the attempted murder of Mr. Frick and is supposed to be the person who sent a package of money to Bergman, the assassin, while he was at Allegheny City.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 26.—H. Bauer, another supposed accomplice of Bergman, was arrested in Allegheny at noon. He was locked up pending an investigation. Bauer is the head center of the Anarchists here.

CARNEGIE HEARD FROM.

LONDON, July 26.—Andrew Carnegie was interviewed in Scotland to-day by a representative of the Associated Press, and authorized the following statement: "I have not attended to business for the past three years, but I have implicit confidence in those who are managing the mills. Further than that I have nothing to say." It is known that Mr. Carnegie is greatly distressed by the murderous attack upon Mr. Frick, and that he daily receives many cable dispatches giving the fullest particulars. It is evident Mr. Carnegie has no intention of returning to America at present.

A DENIAL.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker, assistant to H. C. Frick, to-day at the New York office of the Carnegie Steel Company, denied that Andrew Carnegie had cabled instructions to his American agents to settle the Homestead strike. There is no truth, he said, in the report.

THE BRADDOCK MEN STAY IN.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 26.—The Homestead men have apparently abandoned all endeavors to bring the Braddock workers out on a strike. The intense heat has prostrated many of General Superintendent Potter's non-union men, it is is alleged by the amalgamated scouts. At all events there is not as much activity around the mill as was manifested yesterday and no plate was rolled this morning.

The St. Thomas Tailors' Union have voted $10 towards the support of the Homestead strikers.

KRUPP'S BIG GUN.

It is Eighty Feet Long and Shoots Fifteen Miles.

The biggest gun on earth will probably be exhibited at the World's Fair. When Lieut. Baker suggested to the Krupp representative that this gun be left on the trucks Herr Lauter said it would depend altogether on whether they had their own car or were compelled to use one manufactured in this country. A special track will have to be laid to the fair grounds and transportation building over which to haul the gun. A heavy foundation will also have to be prepared on which the gun can stand. In speaking of the matter yesterday Lieut. Baker said: ‡

"Our biggest guns are about 45 feet in length. The Krupp gun will be about 87 feet long. If it were fired on the lake front the concussion would be so great that it would shatter nearly all the window glasses in Chicago. It would carry a ball from the lake front up over the house tops of Evanston, a distance of 15 or 18 miles. Its initial velocity is 4,500 feet per second. The gun will be shipped to America by a special steamship and transferred to Chicago from the seaboard by cars made especially for it."

GREAT GAS EXPLOSION.

In One of the St. Louis Sewers—Three Lives Lost and Several Persons Injured.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 26.—The gas generated by the escaping stock from the recent fire in the Water Pier Oil building heated by the intense summer sun, exploded about 5 o'clock this afternoon, wrecking about one-half the great Mill Creek sewer, the largest of the city's drainage system, causing the loss of three lives, injuring three others, with possibly other fatalities. The first explosion occurred under the wholesale liquor house of Carl E. Fuchs, South Fourth street, and was followed an instant later by an upheaval 100 feet farther on, the latter explosion completely wrecking the Iron Mountain Railroad's bridge and southern yards.

At Fuch's liquor house the gas lifted up the basement and first floor of the building, leaving the second and third floors badly shaken, but still in position. The body of Albert Mueller, barkeeper, was recovered, but no trace of Fuch's remains have been found. Mrs. John Timpe, who was injured by flying debris, died at 11 o'clock to-night. He little son and Charles Hampe were injured.

At present practically 1,000 feet of the sewer is an open stream. The yards of Iron Mountain road are so thoroughly torn up as to interrupt traffic in that vicinity until the immense sewer can be rebuilt.

The following were also injured: Richard J. Tuenstall, will recover; an unknown man both legs broken; Firemen Guyen and Finnegan, overcome by gas, will recover.

Seven Years Suffering.

Gentlemen,—I have suffered very much from inflammatory rheumatism, which through wrong treatment left ugly running sores on my hands and feet. With these I suffered for seven years, during which time I had neither shoe no stocking on. I commenced using B. B. B. externally and internally, using the pills also, and I can say now that the sores are entirely cured and have been for some time. I believe the bitters were the means of saving my live. MRS. A BRAVE WOMAN.

How Heroic Mrs. Ruhling Rescued Her Child.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Mrs. Mary Ruhling, of this city, is said to be dying in her rooms at the Star Hotel, Long Branch. She received her injuries, a gash in the head and a dislocated hip, besides internal wounds, while rescuing her 3-year-old daughter Katie from death.

Mrs. Ruhling was rocking her baby Edna to sleep in the cool of the evening when the rumbling of a train on the tracks of the Southern New Jersey, just in front of the hotel, caused her to look up from the restless baby, Katie was standing between the rails and the big locomotive was thundering down upon her.

Clasping the baby to her breast, the mother dashed from the seat. She reached her child just in time to pluck Katie from the track, but she was too late to save herself. The little girl had been thrown far enough to escape with no further injury than one or two sand bruises. Miraculously enough Baby Edna had been protected by her mother's body and was subsequently picked up unhurt.

Heroic Mrs. Ruhling was struck by the cowcatcher and carried some yards. She was unconscious when she was carried into the hotel, the blood pouring from a deep gash in her right temple.

The injured woman is the wife of one of Harry Miner's local agents. She is only 25 years old, and during her residence at the Branch has been a general favorite.

DEATHS BY DROWNING.

First Fatality in the Cave of the Winds.

NIAGARA, July 26.—The first fatal accident that ever occurred inside the Cave of the Winds happened Saturday afternoon. Messrs. M. Mason, C. N. French, Pittsfield, Mass., and F. Courier, of Fitchburg, Mass., were returning from a business trip to Chicago. They started out for a drive, stopping at the Cave of the Winds on Goat Island. Mason put on a suit and went down the stairs with the guide, J. R. Barlow, to go through the cave, which is behind the Luna Island Fall. Instead of going the usual way they went in front of the falls first and started to come back behind the sheet of water. Leading to the top of the cave is a short flight of stone steps. The guide and Reed went down the steps, but Mason, as if to take a quicker route, jumped down and slipped from the flat rocks out into the water, going directly under the falls. He was thrown part way back, when Barlow jumped in, but before he could reach Mason he was again carried by the current under the fall and lost to sight.

SARNIA, July 26.—Some time during last night Peter Cosgriff, aged 42, was drowned off one of the docks here. He left his house late at night to go down to the docks, and this morning his body was found in the river.

Earnings of the Grand Trunk—Railway Employes to be Vaccinated.

Grand Trunk Railway earnings for the week ending July 23, were $398,401. Corresponding week in 1891, $297,364. Increase for 1892, $1,037.

The Grand Trunk and Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway companies have just issued the annual order to employes to be vaccinated. As the companies transport thousands of emigrants it is thought best to take this precaution.

STUDY OF SHAKESPEARE.

[New York Sun.]

We observe that Shakespeare is to be the theme of discourse by as many as three of the distinguished lecturers in the Catholic Summer School, which is to be opened in the Connecticut town of New London. In the scheme of instruction there, provision is made for disquisitions upon many questions in Catholic theology, and there is also provision for Shakespeariology, which is thus indicated, "Three lectures on Shakespeare," by Professor Maurice Francis Egan, of Notre Dame University; "Five lectures on Shakespeare," by Dr. Richard Malcolm Johnston, of Maryland; "Two lectures on Shakespeare," by Professor Earnest Lagarde, of Mount St. Marys in Maryland.

Here truly is a feast, a superb intellectual feast, for the lover of the Bard of Avon. The three gentlemen who will deliver these lectures next month are among the most eminent Shakespearean scholars in the United States.

All the Shakespeareans in the country, those who are not Catholics as well as those who are, ought to hear the lectures upon Shakespeare by Egan, Johnston and Lagarde.

Shakespeare stands supreme in the realm of intellect. Shakespeare is immortal—the wonder of the ages. Shakespeare is a greater power among mankind in these times than he ever was in any other time. Honor forever to the name of Shakespeare!

Thirteen Fatal Cases of Sunstroke in Chicago.

The Heat in New York Almost Unbearable.

What to Do for Sunstroke—The Precautions and Treatment Recommended Are Simple but Imperative.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 26.—In all there were thirteen deaths from sunstroke in this city yesterday and from 25 to 30 prostrated by the heat. The weather to-day is very warm.

UNBEARABLE.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The heat is almost unbearable in this city to-day. Six cases of heat prostration were reported up to 11 o'clock a. m. At 1 o'clock this afternoon the mercury at 95°.

The thermometer to-day (Tuesday) ranged from 92° to 100° in the shade, according to the thermometer and the location Thermometers, like individuals, do not always tell the same story.—[St. Thomas Journal.

WHAT TO DO FOR SUNSTROKES.

The Philadelphia Board of Health has just issued, for the benefit of the public in this heated term, "Circular No. 14," with the title, "Sunstroke Precautions and Treatment," as follows:

Sunstroke is a condition caused by exposure to excessive heat. Two forms are recognized: Heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

Heat exhaustion—Prolonged exposure to high temperature, particularly when combined with physical exertion, is liable to be followed by great prostration, collapse, restlessness, and in severe cases by delirium. Unlike heatstroke, the surface of the body is usually cool, the pulse small and rapid, and the temperature below normal—as low as 95° or 96°. It is not necessary that the person shall have been exposed to the rays of the sun, as the condition may come on when working in close, confined rooms during midsummer, and when exposed to great artificial heat, as in laundries, foundries, bakeshops and engine-rooms.

Sunstroke or heatstroke—This is chiefly confined to persons working very hard while exposed to the rays of the sun. It is common in our large cities, but is not unknown in the country. Those habituated to the use of beer and whisky and the debilitated are especially predisposed to attacks.

The attack may be sudden and the patient be struck down and die within an hour with symptoms of heart failure, difficult breathing and loss of consciousness. The usual form comes on during exposure, with pain in the head, dizziness, a feeling of weakness and sometimes nausea and vomiting. The loss of consciousness may be only transient or it may be complete. The face is flushed, the skin pungent, the pulse rapid and full, and the temperature very high, from 107° to 110°. The breathing is labored and deep, sometimes loud. It is important to note that in heat exhaustion the skin is moist, pale and cool; the breathing easy, though hurried, the pulse small and soft and the senses entire; while in heat stroke there is usually insensibility and great heat of skin.

Dark, close-fitting and heavy clothing and such as compresses the chest and neck should not be worn during the heated term. For those who are obliged to labor in the sun light clothing and a straw or light felt hat, permitting free circulation of the air, are preferable.

On very hot days one should drink frequently of cool water in moderate quantity. It is injurious to drink a large quantity of ice water, cold beer, soda water or other mineral waters or iced drinks. Cool water, in which oatmeal has been stirred, is a safe and refreshing drink. Immediate death is sometimes caused by "ice-cold" drinks. The immoderate use of alcoholic beverages is also dangerous.

The sleeping-room should be freely ventilated. Constipation of the bowels should be avoided. When overheated, work slowly, frequently cooling the head, chest, back and wrists with cool water. Keep a wet sponge or cloth in the hat. When on a very hot day the skin becomes hot and dry, and a stinging, burning sensation is felt in the head, and the face is flushed and the eyes bloodshot, the person should immediately quit work, seek quiet and a cool place, and if not speedily relieved from the oppressive sensation of heat, take a cold bath, submerging or wetting the head.

Remove the patient to a cool and shady place where there is plenty of fresh, pure air. Strip the clothing to the waist and place the sufferer in a recumbent position. Pour cold water (ice water) upon the head and chest and wrists until consciousness returns. Apply ice to the head and rub the body with it, but if the skin is cold no ice should be applied. When practicable, the patient should be put in a bath at 70° to reduce the temperature.

In heat exhaustion stimulants should be given freely, and if the temperature is below normal, as shown by the skin being cold and clammy, the hot bath should be used. Ammonia and water may be given if necessary.

The subject of sunstroke is liable to a second attack, and should do no mental work for months, and keep from all excitement.

Motherly to Chickens.

Mr. James Forwood, of Darlington, Harford county, Md., has a cat which has developed an interesting trait. Being kittenless, she adopted as her own a brood of motherless young chickens, which come to her when she purrs and follow her around. When any of the brood stray into a neighbor's premises the cat follows, and picking each chick up carefully by its neck, deposits it safely on its own premises. Calling the chicks to her, the cat lies down and hovers them as tenderly and carefully as their feathered mother would have done. Being permitted to remain in a box with them one night, the cat accidentally smothered one by lying on it. Since then Mrs. Forwood has fastened up the chickens, excluding the foster-mother. The latter mews piteously in front of the box for her charges. The chicks appear to accept the situation and are thriving.

CAUSES OF EARTHQUAKES.

Are They Produced Through the Shrinkage of the Surface of the Globe?

Without doubt the consensus of judgment among physicists is that earthquakes result from the shrinkage of the surface of the earth from the ceaseless dissipation of its heat into the cold of space. As this loss of heat progresses strains are inaugurated throughout the surface of the earth, and on account of that surface being of unequal strength there arrives a moment when a breakage of a portion of the surface takes place along the weakest portion thereof. Every miner is familiar with the "faults" which he encounters in the line of his drifts, and rarely can he tell whether the continuation of his vein is above or below him when he comes to a bare wall at the abrupt end of his vein. It is well known to geologists that the faults are of extraordinary depths, as shown in the region cut through by the canyon of the Colorado.

The phenomena attending these great disruptions are weakly exhibited in the earthquakes of to-day, when small dislocalities occasion comparatively great results. In the great earthquakes in Japan, notably in that of 1854, and in the great earthquakes along the Andean coast of South America, there have been relatively small changes of surface that have exhibited little change of the surface of the earth. Nor has there been any exhibition of forces in these earthquakes that cannot be explained on the theory of the rupture of a relatively very small area of the earth's surface.

In the great earthquake of Krakatoa, a few years since, there was an unusual exhibition of explosive forces accompanying the disruption of the surface, when volcanic agencies blew up half of a high rocky islet and left a great depression below the surface of the water. There has been no such other exhibition in modern times, for the material of the islet and the submarine material was projected into the higher atmosphere in very minute particles, and give rise to the extraordinary exhibition of the beautiful red skies visible near sunset. This matter was carried around the whole earth in the higher atmosphere.

The mechanical theory of heat will readily explain how a great disruption of the earth's surface may produce all the phenomena of vocanic action when the conditions of the material, and the extent of the rupture are invariable. Imagine what must have been the intensity of heat developed when vaults of one mile deep were formed, and the terrible friction of two surfaces of such great extent were involved. We can only approach the subject by the mathematics of the theory of heat, and certainly not by any experience.

Along this coast the lines of rupture of the weak parts of the earth's crusts are shown in the depression of the plateau of the Pacific ocean bed and the parallelism of at least four lines of coast mountains and the great backbone of the Sierra Nevada and Cascade range. And these lines and the closely adjacent country must be the seat of seismic changes as the earth gradually loses its heat. We have the evidence clearly before us that along the line of rupture of these ranges there have been many overflows of lava forming the basaltic layers visible in the Sierra Nevada in certain localities, and especially in the many overflows along the northern part of the Cascade range.

The dynamical theory accounts for these resultant exhibitions, and it is easy to imagine that there must have been many other concomitant exhibitions of electrical and volcanic forces. In the great chain of the Alautian Islands where so many extinct and active volcanos exist, every earthquake along this weak line in the earth's surface is accompanied by renewed activity in the living volcanos, and it may be safely assumed that all the phenomena may be traced to the contraction and rupture of some part of the surface or crust from the ceaseless but slow cooling of our planet.—[Prof. George Davidson in San Francisco Examiner.

PATRIOTISM IN THE SCHOOLS.

[Toronto Globe.]

In the last issue of the Educational Journal, published in Toronto, there are some common-sense ideas in an article with reference to teaching patriotism in school, at the expense of history and literature. The writer refers to the tendency in some educational circles in the United States to seek to Americanize everything, even history and literature, under the guise and excuse of implanting patriotism. Great stress is being laid on the teaching of American history, which is pretty sure, in the hands of a majority of teachers and text-book writers to become one-sided, bigoted, and therefore unhistoric history. The same tendency extends to literature, and a deplorable desire to turn the pupils' minds in that wide subject into the American as distinguished from the world-wide English field of literature. The Journal truly says there is no surer means of producing purblind picayune patriotism than this of teaching the young to look at everything through the colored spectacles of national prejudice. It refers to the matter, it says, because there is a growing tendency in this direction in Canada, in support of which the practice in the United States is held up. The article concludes with an appeal to educationists to rather aim at training up a race of broad-minded Canadians, lovers first of all of truth, and admirers of the beautiful and the good wherever found, because these will make the truest Canadian patriots.

The Apiary.

—Jaunty plumes and nodding grasses,
Hum of bees and cannon boom,
Under dewy skies and starlit,
Booms that burst in fiery bloom.
Lilt of robin, blare of trumpet,
Brooklet's flow, and rocket's whiz,
You can guess without the telling
Just what merry month it is!

—Don't make a veritable curiosity shop of your apiary, by filling it with a jobelot of hives of all the different patterns you can hear of, just to see which is best.

Don't wait until there is a heavy honey-flow from clover or basswood before you order those new hives and sections.

Don't write a long, abusive letter to the suffering supply dealer asking him why those sections you ordered by telegraph yesterday noon had not arrived at the depot.

Don't sell your honey in any shape, and for any price your local grocer may see fit to pay you.

Don't go to dinner and leave that big swarm of Italian bees hanging in the hot sunshine.

Don't make that common mistake of crating the nice white sections next to the glass, and the dark ones in a family "group" in the center.

Don't put in too much time talking politics at the village store during swarming time.

Don't put off that little job of September feeding until the following spring, and then wonder how it comes that some people have such luck with bees!

Don't leave your bees out so late in the fall that you have to chop the ice off the hives before you can house them.

Don't———; but you will—some of you.

BRANT.

During a severe lightning storm which passed over Brantford a flash struck the Bell Telephone Company's office. The whole of the exchange was destroyed.

An exceptionally sad case of insanity has just transpired in Brantford. Mrs. A. Scott, a resident of West Brantford, who went there from Essex Center with her husband a few months ago, is the victim, and she has now been lodged in jail. She is about 30 years old, and has four children, the youngest ten months old. The unfortunate woman is very violent in some of her paroxysms, and the doctors has ordered her immediate removal to an asylum.

Near Brantford, on Sunday, a deaf mute named Stenabough, 25 years of age, was run over by a locomotive. The wheels missed him, but he was so badly bruised that it is thought he cannot recover. His home is in Berlin.

Geo. Kerr, merchant tailor of Brantford, died in Drumbo Sunday night of paralysis.

ELGIN.

Roy Holmes, of Aylmer, aged 6 years, fell on Saturday and broke his arm in two places. The fractures have been reduced, and the patient is now doing well.

Two of Elgin's former teachers, D. Grout and Miss Catharine Grout, Rodney, have been re-elected to positions in the Portland, Ore., public schools at salaries of $1,400 and $700 respectively.

Owing to the illness of Mr. McCaul, the junior member of the legal firm of Lougheed, McCarthy & McCaul, of Calgary, N. W. T., George S. McCarter, barrister, of St. Thomas, who for the past year has been in partnership with T. W. Crothers, has been offered and has accepted the place previously held in the firm named by Mr. McCaul.

ESSEX.

The Edison Company purchased the rest of the plant of the Citizens' Electric Light Company in Windsor Monday, and, together with the Reliance Company, they will operate the plant. It will be put in a first-class condition at once, and by the end of the week the lights will be in operation.

Alfred Riley, the colored man who was charged in Windsor with stealing clothes from Charles Thomas, was convicted in the Police Court Monday, and Magistrate Bartlet sent him down for four months.

A laborer employed on a sand scow at the foot of Upper Ferry street, Windsor, Monday fell into the river and was fished out just in time.

The Marshfield oil well, on the property of Hiram Walker & Sons, was shot Friday and the flow of oil has increased tenfold.

Windsor's electric road has passed into the hands of a receiver. Monday at 2 o'clock was the hour set apart for the sale of some of the cars under an execution of James Nelson & Bro. Prior to this Sheriff Iler was served with a notice by Patterson, Leggatt & Murphy, acting for the Bank of Montreal, that he had, by order of the court, been appointed receiver of the road, to take immediate effect. Fleming & Wigle, acting for the sheriff, immediately notified all employes of the road that all returns must be made to them. The claim of the Bank of Montreal is $3,000, but the largest creditor is the Third National Bank of Detroit, their claim amounting to nearly $50,000, part of which is secured. The road will be kept running just the same as if nothing had happened, and President Clark says that all will be amicably arranged in a few days. On the outside it was learned that C. E. Warner and Levi T. Griffin, of Detroit, who, with President Clark, own the road, are really the ones who had a receiver appointed. They claim that under Mr. Clark's management the road has not done near what it ought to, and took this method of finding out just how the road stands.

J. H. Wilkinson, a prominent and respected citizen of Windsor, who stood high as a Mason, died Monday evening.

HURON.

Alexander Bossenberry, of Zurich, who was arrested some time ago for being too intimate with Mrs. Clara Wilson, of the same place, pleaded guilty in Port Huron to the charge, and was sentenced to two years at hard labor in the State prison at Jackson, Mich. When sentence was pronounced he wept like a child.

While Mr. Garden, of Harburney, who works in Broadfoot & Box's furniture factory, Seaforth, was attempting to replace a belt on a pully by means of a stick, the pully threw the stick back violently upon him, barely missing his head and striking him on the left collar bone, breaking it and otherwise injuring him. He was taken to the office of a physician and had the fracture attended to. He is slowly recovering.

LAMBTON.

The Montreal Journal of Commerce says: "A short time since the drygoods stock of James S. Earl & Co., of Watford, Ont., was purchased by Dr. J. A. McLeay, who afterwards sold for about $4,500 to W. T. Bell and wife. It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Bell paid down but a small portion of the purchase price. McLeay has now taken posession on his own behalf under the chattel mortgage. The store is closed up and it is difficult to determine what the outcome will be."

The second engineer of the Monarch met with a painful accident a day or two ago while the boat was lying at Point Edward. By some means his arm became fast in the hoisting gear, and he was suspended for about twenty minutes, suffering the most excruciating torture, before he could be released. His wrist was fast between two pieces of iron not more than half an inch apart, and it was necessary to break the machinery in order to extricate him. A doctor was summoned, who found the wrist badly lacerated, the small bone being broken. It was necessary to remove a portion of the fractured bone. The injured man is doing well.

MIDDLESEX.

The barns of L. Hunt, Delaware township, were destroyed by fire on Sunday with all the contents, including 30 tons of hay and most of his farming implements. The loss will be heavy. There is an insurance of $1,200 on the house and barns together. A report says the fire which destroyed Mr. Hunt's barns is believed to have been due to spontaneous combustion of the hay.

After a long and trying illness patiently borne, Mrs. Alex. Smith, of Lieury, has passed away, aged 55 years. Her funeral to the Nairn Cemetery was very largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. J. S. Lochead. The deceased was highly esteemed for her many estimable qualities. A wide circle of friends in McGillivray and elsewhere and the community in general sympathize with the bereaved family.

NORFOLK.

The young man arrested at Simcoe by County Constable Clarke for horse stealing on Thursday last was examined before M. C. Brown, J.P., on Saturday and committed for trial. Subsequently, at his own request, he was brought before Judge Robb, when he pleaded guilty. Sentence was deferred for one week. He signed his name Robert Taylor when being examined, but refused any information about his friends or residence. Montague, the livery proprietor of Dunnville, claimed the rig and took it away. The young man has a respectable appearance and is evidently a novice in crime.

OXFORD.

H. W. Hill, Woodstock, picked from his garden the other day a most peculiar ear of corn. It was a distinct combination of corn, wheat and barley. While the ear was not full grown, the different varieties of grain could be easily distinguished. It was certainly an unusual occurrence.

Mrs. R. Scott, widow of the late Rev. R. Scott, of Brookdale, who now resides at Toronto, has received word that her son Walter is lying dangerously ill with typhoid fever in the Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago.

Farmers in the vicinity of Woodstock are jubilant over the promising outlook of the fall wheat crop. The harvest will be the best in years. Already the binders are at work, and the general report is that the yield will be enormous. A well-known farmer there stated on Saturday that fall wheat in many places would yield 40 bushels to the acre. Hay, too, is an enormous crop. One farmer offers a surplus quantity of hay at $4 a load—and he doesn't care how big the load.

The death took place Sunday of Angus Munro, formerly hotelkeeper at Embro. Deceased had been ailing for some time. He was 42 years of age.

James Gourley, 13th con. Fullarton, has sold his farm containing 100 acres to Wm. Hanson for $5,500, which is considered a good price. Mr. Gourlay purposes moving to Windsor to live.

THE AURORA BOREALIS.

Theories as to the Cause of this Beautiful Display.

Northern Lights Compared with the Sun's Corona, Comets' Tails and the Zodiacal Light.

Several times lately people have been favored with displays of one of the most mysterious and beautiful of nature's manifestations—the aurora borealis. There is something surpassingly beautiful in the appearance of the "auroral curtain." Fringed with colored streamers, it waves to and fro as though shaken by an unseen hand. Then from end to end there pass a succession of undulations, the folds of the curtain forming a series of graceful curves. Suddenly, and as if by magic, there succeeds a perfect stillness, as though the unseen power causing the display were resting for a moment. But even then the mysterious light is seen waxing and waning. Then, as one gazes, fresh waves of disturbances traverse the magic canopy. Startling coruscations of many different colors add splendor to the scene, while the noble span of the auroral arch from which the waving curtain seems to depend gives a grandeur to the spectacle which no words can properly describe. Gradually, however, the celestial fires seem to die out; the luminous zone breaks up, and the scene of the display becomes covered with scattered patches of ashen gray light, which hang like clouds over the northern heavens. Then these in turn disappear, and nothing remains but a dark smoke-like segment on the horizon.

Hitherto the nature of the aurora has been a mystery to men of science; nor, indeed, do recent discoveries throw much light on the character of the phenomenon. Of course, the supposition that it owes its origin to the reflection of the ice, is untenable, for it is now satisfactorily proved, at least, that it originates far above our atmosphere. Indeed, scientists have learned to associate it with relations that affect the whole planetary system.

M. Arago, the French astronomer, while watching the vibrations of the magnetic needle at the Paris Observatory, noticed that its vibration is variable in extent, and thus he had occasion to observe more closely than had yet been done the sudden irregularities which occasionally characterize the daily movements of the needle. In January, 1819, he announced that the sudden changes of the magnetic needle are often associated with the occurrence of an aurora. He says that auroras ought to be placed in the first rank among the causes which disturb the daily movements of the needle, which do not, even in summer, exceed a quarter of a degree, but when an aurora appears the needle is often seen to move in a few instants over several degrees. He found, from many observations, that there is an intimate connection between the causes of auroras and those of terrestrial magnetism. M. Arago's theories were opposed by many scientists, on the ground that magnetic disturbances had often occurred when no aurora was visible. But gradually it was found that the magnetic needle not only swayed responsive to auroras in the neighborhood, but to displays hundreds and even thousands of miles away; and that the needles in northern observatories were influenced by auroras in the southern polar regions. Magnetic needles in Europe respond to every movement of the colored streamers seen here in Canada.

At last the spectroscope, or "light-sifter," was turned on the aurora, and by means of this wonderful instrument a great discovery has been made. In passing, it may be interesting to note that Dr. Robinson, of Armagh, discovered that the light of the aurora possesses in a peculiar degree a property termed "fluorescence," which is a characteristic property of the light produced by electric discharges. Angstrom, the German physicist, in the winter of 1867-68 analyzed the spectrum of the colored streamers, with the result that a single bright line only was seen. Mr. Huggins says that this line shows a monochromatic light, and as the line falls near the margin of the yellow and green portions of the spectrum, the light is therefore greenish.

The general import of this observation teaches us that the light of the aurora is due to luminous vapor, and that its luminosity is due to the passage of electric discharges through it. But there is a difficulty, and it is this: There is no known terrestrial element whose spectrum has a bright line precisely in the position of the line in the auroral spectrum. Until we can find an element which has a bright line in the spectrum absolutely consistent with the bright line detected by Angstrom in the spectrum of the aurora, all speculation as to the real nature of the vapor in which the auroral electric discharge takes place, or of the substance between which the spark travels, is precluded. Since Angstrom's discovery, other green lines have been found, and occasionally a red one is seen.

Most of our readers have doubtless heard of the zodiacal light, and many of them have perhaps seen that mysterious radiance, pointing obliquely upward from the western horizon soon after sunset in the spring months, or in fall, shortly after sunrise, above the eastern horizon. Astronomers associated it with the planets, and looked upon it as formed by the light reflected from a multitude of minute bodies traveling around the sun in the orbit of our earth, but there are many difficulties in the way of this theory. For instance, its light has been observed to flicker or coruscate in a manner which it seemed difficult to ascribe to the motions of our own atmosphere. Baron Humboldt says that the zodiacal light seen in South America is often invisible when night first sets in, and then suddenly appears with full splendor—a phenomenon which is utterly inexplicable if the received theory be accepted.

Despite these and other observations, very little doubt had been felt by astronomers that the zodiacal light really indicated the presence of minute bodies traveling around the sun. Angstrom turned the spectroscope on the light, and the result was surprising. Instead of a solar spectrum (as was confidently expected, and which would have been shown if the foregoing theory were correct), the spectrum exhibits a bright line, and this bright line is the same that is seen in the spectrum of the aurora borealis.

The eminent mathematician, Euler, has said, "That there is a great affinity between the tails of comets, the zodiacal light, and the aurora borealis." This refers to the sudden changes of brilliancy, the flickerings or coruscations, and the instantaneous lengthening and shortening of these appendages. M. Chladni in 1811, said of the comet of that year that undulatory ebullitions rushed from the nucleus to the end of the tail, a distance of more than 10,000,000 of miles in two or three seconds. No comet has made its appearance since Kirckhoff's invention of spectroscopic analysis with a tail sufficiently brilliant for that mode of research.

The spectrum of the sun's corona, as seen during a recent total solar eclipse, exhibited the same bright lines as the aurora. Lastly, it has been found that the peculiar phosphorescent light sometimes visible over the sky at night gives the same spectrum as the aurora and zodiacal light.

The auroral displays in the Antarctic regions receives the name of "Aurora Australis."

Charms, Signs and Philters in Which People Put Credence.

(From the Kansas City Journal.)

In Michigan a double cedar knot is carried in the pocket to cure rheumatism, and in New Hampshire a man carried a gall from the stems of the goldenrod for the same disease. A small white grub is in the gall, and he thought as long as the grub remained alive no rheumatism could get hold of him. Hickory nuts, the buckeye, and its cousin, the horse chestnut, which brings good luck in New Jersey, are other foes to rheumatism in different localities. Some people wear a strange ring, made of a potato with a hole bored through it, for rheumatism, and others carry a plain potato in the pocket. The charm is more potent if the potato has been stolen. Almost anything seems to have rheumatism-fighting properties, for in southern Michigan a pebble in the pocket serves to ward it off.

A New Hampshire cure for sore throat is to wear about the neck a stocking, in the toe of which a potato has been tied. According to a Maine belief, a nutmeg pierced and hung on a string around the neck prevents boils, croup and neuralgia. The effect of a Connecticut wooden nutmeg is not known.

In the South there is a curious remedy for chills and fever. Take the skin from the inside of an eggshell, go to a young persimmon tree three days in succession, and tie a knot in the skin each day.

On the eastern shore of Maryland, biliousness is cured by boring three holes in a carefully selected tree and walking three times around it, saying: "Go away, bilious."

The primal duties shine aloft, like stars; the charities that soothe and heal and bless are scattered at the feet of man, like flowers.—[Wordsworth.

THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING PEOPLE OF NORTH AMERICA.

Extract from a speech by John Bright, delivered during the civil war.]

"I cannot believe that civilization, in its journey with the sun, will sink into endless night in order to gratify the ambition of the leaders of this revolt, who seek to

Wade through slaughter to a throne,
And shut the gates of mercy on mankind.

I have another and a far brighter vision before my gaze. It may be but a vision, but I will cherish it. I see one vast confederation, stretching from the frozen north in unbroken line to the glowing south, and from the wild billows of the Atlantic westward to the calmer water of the Pacific main—and I see one people and one language and one law and one faith, and over all that wide continent the home of freedom and a refuge for the opposed of every race and of every clime."

THERE is no truth in the statement recently sent out from Montreal to the effect that Hon. Wilfrid Laurier was about to resign the leadership of the Liberal party. Mr. Laurier is beloved by his Parliamentary following, and the Ontario members are especially well satisfied with his leadership.

GREAT changes were made by the electorate in the recent British elections. No fewer than 214 of the 670 members just elected will take their seats in the House of Commons for the first time. There is always much fun for old timers when the green ones begin to try to get their bearings.

MANITOBA has demonstrated that when the people get the chance they are ready to show that the expensive farce, the prohibition commission, was not what the country desires. Why should a plebiscite be refused for the whole Dominion when it has worked like a charm in the Prairie Province?

CONTRARY to general expectations, the plebiscite in Winnipeg city showed that there was an overwhelming majority in favor of prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors. The majority in favor of prohibition was 1,473. In Portage la Prairie, a progressive town, the vote stood 710 for to 188 against. The world moves, and prohibition is destined to come. When it is established people will wonder why the reform was delayed so long.

HOM. EDWARD BLAKE'S ADDRESS.

A good deal of curiosity has been entertained in Canada as to the exact line taken by Hon. Edward Blake when he contested South Longford in the Home Rule interest, and was elected by a majority of over 2,100. The best summary of the honorable gentleman's views are found in the address given below, which we copy from the Longford Independent:

TO THE ELECTORS OF SOUTH LONGFORD.

Gentlemen, — Having accepted the great honor of nomination for your division, I hope shortly to meet you face to face, and fully to express my views on the issue of the day.

Meantime let me say that I have long been an advocate of home rule for Ireland, and have done my best to enlist, in favor of the country of my origin, the sympathies of the country of my birth.

I wish for Ireland a Local Legislature, with efficient powers for the regulation of her local affairs, and for the United Kingdom a Supreme Parliament for the management of common and imperial concerns.

I think that in the Imperial Parliament Ireland should be duly represented, and that the great divisions of Britain should receive, as early as they will accept them, the same benefits which Ireland will derive from home rule by the remission of local concerns to local bodies, and the relief of the Imperial Parliament from its intolerble burden.

Pending the realization of these hopes, provision may be made which, though open to obvious objections, and failing to satisfy all the conditions of completeness and efficiency, shall yet improve the present position and assure without delay the thing imperatively needful—the Irish settlement.

Among the common concerns of the United Kingdom I place legislation on trade and commerce, including duties of customs and excise.

Among local affairs I place legislation on the land.

I think that in the general interest of the State, and to the benefit of owners and tenants alike, the bulk of the tenant occupiers of Irish farms should at the earliest day obtain the right to become their proprietors, on conditions which shall recognize their interest in their own improvements, and at prices and on terms which, with due exertion, they can meet out of their earnings. I think also that provision should be made for facilitating the transplantation to other parts of Ireland of the surplus population of the congested districts.

To these ends compulsory powers of purchase, and also the credit of the State should so far as needful, be employed; and satisfactory provision or power for the settlement of the land question should in some form be embodied in the legislation in connection with home rule.

I do not believe that full powers conceded to the Irish people would be abused by legislative oppression of the minority; or that those who have in past times suffered so severely from the violation of the principles of civil and religious liberty would, in this more enlightened age, inflict on others the wrongs which they themselves in darker days endured. But I recognize the prudence and see the feasibility of providing such checks and safeguards as ought, by prohibiting the suggested legislative wrongs, to remove the apprehensions of unreasonable men.

I do not believe that home rule means an increase or even a lasting continuance of the present unhappy divisions among Irishmen on lines of creed or class. On the contrary, I believe that it would diminish them, and that we should ere long see local Irish political parties, each containing men of the various creeds and classes, co-operating with and opposing one another on intelligible grounds of difference of opinion on the political questions of the day.

I do not believe that home rule means the separation of Ireland from Britain. On the contrary I believe it means union for the first time in the only true and real sense. The United Kingdom, as well as Ireland within herself, is now unnaturally divided and distracted. The United Kingdom, as well as Ireland within herself, would then be naturally reconciled and united.

I long for the early reunion of all Irish Nationalists in furtherance of the common cause; and for the preservation in its full efficiency of the Irish Parliamentary party, as an independent political organization, till home rule be won. It is not yet won.

In general politics I am a decided Liberal, ready to co-operate in all well-considered measures of reform. But, I believe, with the illustrious statesman who has crowned the last years of his long life by his devotion to our cause, that Ireland stops the way; and that she ought to stop the way; not because she is adverse to the advancement of reform elsewhere, but because Irish grievances are the oldest and most serious of all grievances, and Irish reforms, the most pressing and important of all reforms.

Having been engaged for the last 25 years in working a home rule system, I trust you will not think it presumptuous if I indulge the hope that the knowledge thus acquired may be of some little service in the development of the advantages of home rule, and in the settlement of the numerous and complicated details of such a constitution, and may, perhaps, even tend to compensate for my unfamiliarity with many local conditions which, however, if honored by your confidence, it will be my first duty to examine.

In conclusion, gentlemen, may I be allowed to suggest that the circumstances under which I come before you afford some assurance that, should you so far honor me, I will endeavor, God helping me, to approve myself. Your faithful servant,

EDWARD BLAKE.

Dublin, July 7, 1892.

WASH AND BE CLEAN.

A raid has been made upon young men who are in the habit of bathing in the south branch of the Thames, near Vauxhall bridge, and in all probability the daring fellows will be taken before a magistrate and punished. It may be that the young men did not behave themselves according to the strictest rules of etiquette, but their threatened punishment none the less emphasizes the need of Londoners for some open-air, cleanly bathing spot, where young and old might indulge in bathing to their heart's content, under such simple regulations as might be agreed upon. A wash in the river, a good swim as opportunity may offer, must be decidedly advantageous to the average toiler in these very hot days. Instead of discouraging the health-giving practice, the authorities should supply reasonable facilities for all who wish to indulge in it. Under reasonable restrictions, which should be drawn up and published for the information of participants, there should be no objection to bathing in the river at any point within convenient distance from the city.

WAITING FOR GLADSTONE'S BOOTS.

There seems to be great solicitude on the part of sympathizers with the opponents of Gladstone, at home and abroad, lest he should be able to hold his own in the parliamentary arena, despite the machinations of his enemies. They bank much upon the hope that the Salisbury Administration may be able to hang on to power for some time longer, in which case, they argue, Gladstone may die or possibly become incapacitated from old age.

Even the Queen is dragged into the discussion, and the Tory newspapers make no secret of the alleged antipathy which her Majesty entertains for the British Liberal leader and his democratic tendencies. It is threatened, on the one hand, that the irresponsible House of Lords will not pass a bill giving Ireland the same right to manage her local affairs as we in Ontario enjoy, and the Lords, generally yielders when they find they cannot help themselves, are incited to go ahead, as the Queen will back them up.

We are loathe to believe that her Majesty will indulge in any such foolish conduct. If she does, she may be told in a way that will not add to the stability of her regime that British sovereigns have no longer absolute power to do as they please, that they are kept on the throne to carry out the will of the people as expressed at the polls.

If the Queen were to intermeddle to help one of the political parties to combat the popular will it would be the beginning of the end of the monarchy, for the British people, educated as they are to democratic ideas, and having the example, as a prosperous republic, of the largest English-speaking nation in the world before them, would find nothing to alarm them in making a change that would replace the crowned head by the first statesman of the nation. Virtually, the Premier of the day rules now; under the new system, he would not have to change his programme to any very great extent.

Those who clamor for the postponement of the pressing reforms undertaken by Gladstone are not well advised. If they were successful, they might not gain very much, as the Liberal leader is a conserving as well as a reforming force, and his death or removal by ill health from the leadership of the masses might bring about much more radical changes in the management of public affairs than he has even contemplated.

TOPICS OF TO-DY.

S. F. Evans, who recently horrified the Lord Mayor of London and his guests by refusing to stand when the Queen's health was drunk, was returned to Parliament by a majority of 4,216 in a total vote of 7,666.

Rev. Dr. Wild, of Toronto, Ont., say the man who is a member of a fraternal beneficiary society will not be as sick a man when he is sick as he would have been had he neglected this duty to his wife and family.

Among the stories told in the current Fortnightly Review by Mr. Lionel Tollemache of his father, the sturdy old British Tory, is an anecdote concerning the Duke of Wellington's son, Lord Charles Wellesley. Lord Charles was often troubled by importunate acquaintances who begged for some of the Iron Duke's hair. On such occasions he would say to an old servant, whose hair was much like the Duke's, "Sit down, John; I must cut off another lock.'

The plague of mice which has been causing such widespread disaster in Scotland of late continues and increases, and a special commission of the Department of Agricultural is now at work taking evidence in the matter with a view to devising some effective remedy. Some interesting points have been brought out during the progress of the commission. Quite a number of farmers attributed the plague of mice to the killing of the birds of prey and weasels by the gentlemen owners shooting over the estates, and by the keepers who killed the weasels because the weasels destroyed the game. One man said the keepers had killed 100 weasels on his farm and the adjoining estate. The mice had increased and destroyed the pastures, and he had lost $5,000 on sheep in consequence. His family had lived on the farm for three centuries. Another man said that for the same reason his crop of lambs this year numbered but 333 against an average of 600 or 700. The situation is very serious, and nothing the farmers have been able to do so far has lessened the scourge.

LOT OF IRISH BEAUTIES.

They'll Have a Village at the World's Fair.

A Chicago telegram says: All visitors to the World's Fair will doubtless want to inspect the Irish village, which is being arranged under the auspices of the Countess of Aberdeen and Mrs. Earnest Hart. The latter gives the following outline of what it will contain:

"We shall have seven cottages in which peasant girls and lads from Donegal and elsewhere will be set at work, weaving, spinning, dyeing, sprigging, carving, etc. The girls will look very pretty in Connemara red petticoats, fishwife skirts and blouses, and scarlet cloaks. In the first cottage will be a precise model of a cottage in Donegal, with undressed walls of granite, with a hooded fireplace and dresser full of bright crockery. A girl will be seen dyeing and spinning our famous hand-and-hearth homespuns, the wool of which she gets from the lichens and heather of her native bog outside. There will be an imitation peat fire, and on this the dyer will from time to time place her iron potato pot, and proceed to dye the wool. This operation is certain to prove immensely attractive to sightseers, and, as well as the carding, spinning and bobbin-filling, which will be shown here, is an extremely interesting process.

"In the second cottage there will be linen weaving and embroidering of the famous Kells art embroidery; whilst linen damask weaving on a Jacquard handloom and fringe-knotting will go on in the third cottage. Between this and the next cottage there will be a model dairy, in which dairymaids will be at work churning and butter-making. I can assure our American cousins they will have a chance of some good butter, as we shall send over some of the world-famed Kerry cows, which will be stabled at the rear. There will also be a pleasant, cool spot here where visitors can rest and drink iced milk.

"In the fourth cottage, which is under the especial care of the Irish Industries Association, every description of Irish lace will be shown. There will be a Limerick lace worker at her frame, the Torchon lace worker at the pillow, the numerous varieties of point lace, and so forth.

"Sprigging and veining, which are employed in the production of the beautiful hemstitched handkerchiefs of Belfast, will be shown in the next cottage. The girls of Down are especially noted for their exquisite and delicate work. We have not quite definitely decided about the two remaining cottages, but we shall probably show in the seventh the wood-carving industry of Ireland, which has reached a really remarkable degree of development when one remembers the workers and teachers are peasant lads. You should see the set of owls carved by some of my own boys for Lady Aberdeen last year. The expression of the owls' faces, as well as the execution, was excellent. Other features of our Irish industrial villages will be a replica of Donegal Castle, an old well and other interesting Celtic memorials. I believe the Irish village will be successful; we shall certainly do our best to make it so."

OATMEAL AND ORANGES.

(From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.)

No sort of food is better for the complexion than oatmeal and oranges. The finest complexions in the world are those of the Italian and Spanish ladies, who live largely on coarse-grained food and fruit, like the orange or banana. It is said that the fact is becoming appreciated in the east and that some New York ladies, to acquire and preserve a good complexion, are living almost entirely on oranges. Half a dozen for breakfast, with a cup of coffee, a dozen for lunch, with a glass of milk and a saucer of oatmeal, and a dozen more for supper, with a crust of bread and a sip of tea, may not be high living in the proper sense of the word, but such a course of diet will bring a complexion of peach and ivory which will drive almost any belle out of her head with envy.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. Her husband spent hundreds of dollars without any benefit. She weighed but 78 pounds, and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I became perfectly cured by

Mrs. M. E. O'Fallon.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 pounds, eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

HOOD'S PILLS should be in every family medicine chest. Once used, always preferred.

The Doctors Wreak Vengeance on the Limbs of the Law

In a Thrilling Cricket Match Played on the Asylum Grounds—Other Festive Events.

CRICKET.

THE DOCTORS REVENGED.

The doctors got sweet revenge yesterday. A few weeks ago they were "licked" by the lawyers in a game of cricket and they have ever since vowed vengeance on the limbs of the law. The first opportunity presented itself yesterday on the asylum grounds, and the medicos administered a very effectual dose to their opponents. Eight wickets is a very fair margin to the good. The electric bowling of Williams and Beemer was a distinguishing feature. R. A. Bayly, E. U. Sayers, H. Blackburn and I. F. Hellmuth were the most brilliant batters for the lawyers and Dr. Ross, Dr. Beemer and Dr. Williams wielded the willow with fine effect. The score was:

THE MAROONS PROTEST.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER: Your issue of the 25th gave an account of the game on the Alert Park as being 6 to 1 in favor of the Maple Leafs. Please correct in your next issue to 15 to 14 in favor of the Maroons. It is the correct score, but through a costly decision of the umpire it resulted 16 to 15 in favor of the Maple Leafs with four men out, but as the Maroons only put three men out in one inning we claim the game 15 to 14. When the Maple Leafs put in a score 6 to 1 in favor of themselves it is time for us to protest, as we knocked Loughrey completely out of the box in the seventh inning, and next time he faces the Maroons he won't be in it. THE ENGINEER WAS KILLED.

Accident on the Ontario and Western Railway at Rockrift.

NORWOOD, July 26.—Freight train No. 25 on the Ontario and Western Railroad bound north ran on to a loose track at Rockrift this afternoon. Four cars were piled up on top of the engine and Engineer Crane was instantly killed. His body is still under the debris. A flag was out properly, but the train was not under control and ran off the track where it was being repaired before it could be stopped.

A DANGEROUS PERIOD FOR BABY!

Mothers Take Warning!

We cannot too strongly impress upon mothers the fact that teething time is a dangerous one for baby. The summer time, with its prostrating and weakening weather, is always the most critical time; and great care must be exercised in order that baby's life be saved.

The teething period is, at the present season, attended with considerable constitutional disturbances. In some cases the derangements are truly alarming. Diarrhea, dysentery and convulsions are to be dreaded, and every possible effort should be made to avoid these often fatal troubles.

During the process of teething the child's safety depends upon proper and sensible dieting. Improper foods cause intestinal irritation, and often result in cholera infantum and dysentery, and in many instances cause stubborn constipation. These improper foods cause fever; the infant becomes very restless; it is then that convulsions are to be feared. Common prepared artificial foods and a poor quality of cow's milk are conducive to these dangers.

To destroy a predisposition to convulsions, fevers and irritation of the intestinal parts at this particular season, pure and health-giving Lactated Food should be fed to the child, if the supply of mother's milk is not sufficient, pure and strengthening.

Experience has proved that Lactated Food is the safest and best diet for infants who are teething in the hot weather. Lactated Food has been the saving agent of thousands of little lives during the dentition period; and hundreds of thankful mothers have testified to this fact.

Lactated Food being a predigested food, and its constituents coming so near nature's food, renders it an invaluable article of diet for every baby that is teething during the oppressively hot weather.

Try Lactated Food, mothers, during the teething time; you will certainly be delighted with the results.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhœa, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

RESULTS OF RETALIATION.

Action of President Harrison—Propositions Presented to Congress—Public Opinion.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—The President has approved the act to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—In the Senate to-day a resolution authorizing the committee on relations with Canada to continue its investigations during the recess was offered by Mr. Allen and was referred to the committee on contingent expenses.

Mr. Chandler offered a long preamble and resolution on the subject of the Grand Trunk Railway and the operation of its lines in Canada and the United States and instructing the committee on interstate commerce to inquire whether unjust discriminations are made by that company against American commerce.

MONTREAL, July 26.—The retaliatory bill passed by the United States House of Representatives, and concurred in by the Senate, is still the subject of comment among business men. Opinions seem to be about equally divided as to the effects on the country should it be put in force. There is, however, a concurrence of belief that it must be more or less felt by the port of Montreal until the completion of the canal at Sault Ste. Marie.

"TO THE PURE," ETC.

Strange Adventures of Three Endeavor Delegates in One of Gotham's Roof Gardens.

[From the New York Times.]

The defenseless sometimes carry with them a shield they know not of. A few nights ago a party of men noticed on one of the roof gardens three persons, a clear-eyed lad of 20, perhaps, with a placid-faced, gray-haired matron and a chattering young girl, all three of them seeing for the first time the summer-night attractions of the big city. They were delighted with the music and the lights and with much of the entertainment. The young girl found the skirt-dancing very wonderful, and the mother tried hard to enlarge her views so as not to disappoint the enthusiasm of the two young people.

"I should think New York people would never want to go away in the summer and miss the roof gardens," rang out the girlish voice above the hum of festivity and the clink of glasses. "But, do you know, mother," and here she drew closer to the elderly lady, "I had no idea New York ladies rouged so much. Why, nearly every lady here has rouge on."

Perhaps it was this remark, perhaps it was the unusual sweetness and simplicity that shone like an aura about these three earthly saints that made the neighboring party of men carry away a distinct recollection of the three faces. At any rate they did, and an hour later, as they sat in a certain restaurant where there were loud voices and boisterous laughter, and where all the women had rouge on their faces, one of the men caught the elbow of the next one quickly and said: Heaven and earth! They are actually coming here!"

And there, at the door, stood the trio, the boy a little in advance, with a look of timidity on his face, the mother and girl waiting placidly to be shown to seats. That they should have strayed into this place rather than into any other was clearly a matter of coincidence and ignorance; but, at any rate, there they were, with a bowing waiter leading them down the center of the room and seating them deferentially at one of the most prominent tables.

At the sight of these faces, so unusual in this place and so quietly unconscious of the fact, a great hush fell for an instant upon the eating and drinking crowd. It was broken by one girl, a little bolder than the rest, who called out to another at an adjoining table, "Say, Jenny, where's your Christian Endeavor badge?"

Instantly a score of frowning eyes were leveled at the merrymaker, while the head waiter stepped quickly forward and said sharply: "Here, none of that while these people are here."

So the three sat there and ate their simple supper and looked about them with interested and approving eyes, while all the revelers sat in the most quiet and restrained manner. For all one could see then, the restaurant might have been the most exclusive establishment up town.

Not a loud voice nor a mocking laugh was heard, most of the men stopped smoking, nobody looked gay, and many of the men looked exceedingly uncomfortable. One or two women got up hastily and went out.

The young girl's laugh rang out once or twice, while the mother smiled and the boy was important and happy. And bye-and-by they went quietly away. Not a word had offended them, not a glance had perplexed them, not a hint had come to them that there was such a thing as wrong-doing in all the world.

The rapid action of the "great pain cure," Polson's Nerviline, in relieving the most intense pain, is a matter of wonder to all who have used it. There is nothing surprising in its results, for it is made of the strongest, purest and most efficient remedies known in medicine. Nerviline cures toothache instantly; cramps in five minutes; neuralgia after two applications; rheumatism is at once relieved by its use; and the same may be said of all kinds of pain. Sample bottles, costing only 10 cents, at any drug store. The large bottle only 25 cents. Polson's Nerviline sold by druggists and country dealers.

MR. LEITER HAD TO BE QUIET.

Capt. Carroll Threatened to Land the Millionaire at Sitka.

TACOMA, Wash., July 26.—L. Z. Leiter, of Chicago, his wife, three daughters and two maids, were passengers aboard the steamer Queen, which ran upon the rocks near Sitka, Alaska. The steamer was crowded, and the officers had their hands full to prevent a stampede. An ugly cross current had driven the steamer on a ledge of rocks, and Capt. Carroll, the oldest man in Alaska service, decided not to attempt to get free until the tide changed.

Mr. Leiter sharply criticised the manner in which the boat was being handled. Capt. Carroll thought such comment if continued would create needless alarm, and requested the millionaire to keep quiet. Mr. Leiter would not stop, and then in the hearing of all on deck Capt. Carroll said:

"I am navigating this ship, and if you do not like the manner in which it is being navigated it is not too late to go ashore."

The millionaire was indignant. He would go ashore, he said. His family and friends gathered about him, and an effort was made to quiet him and prevent him going ashore. Capt. Carroll said to the first officer:

"Lower a boat and take Mr. Leiter ashore and do not bring him back again."

The boat was quickly lowered and manned. Leiter was warned that he could secure no comforts of life at Sitka. He replied that he could buy the town. Some say he claimed the ability to buy all Alaska. When everything was ready for the millionaire to go ashore his daughters had prevailed on Capt. Carroll not to insist on his orders being carried out. He replied that he would maintain discipline at any cost, but would not force the millionaire ashore if discipline were maintained. So the unpleasantness ended without Mr. Leiter being put ashore.

TRACKED HIM FOR 40 YEARS.

A Story of Tireless Vengeance From the Far Northwest.

After a patient weary search extending over the western continent and covering a period of nearly 40 years, Charles Hartley, of Oswego, N. Y., a few days ago ended a period in his eventful life by arresting Allen Hartley, a cousin, charged with the murder of his wife two-score years ago, says an Ellenwood (British Columbia) correspondent.

The man arrested is an old resident of this city, having lived here nearly twelve years. He served two terms as mayor and has been successful in the accumulation of a comfortable fortune. Forty years ago he married a well-known lady of this place. Back of it is a story tinged with romance and sullied by a crime so remarkable in its details that it furnishes a chapter in criminal history.

Allen Hartley is now a man of nearly 70. When his locks were raven and his beard was young he married a charming young lady, the belle of a small interior town in New York, where they both resided. Charles Hartley, the cousin, who recently after such a lapse of years, caused the arrest of Allen, was an unsuccessful suitor. Though denied all hope by the marriage of his cousin with the girl, he still loved, and this flame, kept burning through the years, caused the tracking down and the arrest of the wife-murderer.

Thirth-nine years ago next May Hartley bade his friends a hasty farewell, and at the same time informed them that, with his wife, he was going west to seek his fortune. No one saw the couple leave the town, and finally murmurs of something wrong increased to open gossip. Charges of foul play were freely made, but there were none to prove them, and at length they died away.

When, later, the house in which the Harleys lived was being repaired, and there was found in a cemented vault beneath it the skeleton of Agnes Hartley, the town went mad. But the murderer was gone and there was no trace. Charles Hartley swore to hunt him down if it took a lifetime and his fortune. It required 40 years of one and nearly as many thousand dollars, but success has at last rewarded the long search.

Once a Floating Palace.

Description of the Alva, Vanderbilt's Sunken Yacht.

The Finest Pleasure Boat of Modern Times.

She Cost Over $1,000,000 and Her Expenses were $10,000 a Month—Narrow Escape of Her Millionaire Owner.

NANTUCKET, Mass., July 26.—The Alva, W. K. Vanderbilt's steam yacht, which was run down and sunk during a fog on Sunday morning by the freight steamer H. F. Dimock, lies in 30 feet of water, close to Pollock Rip, of Nantucket Shoals. No more gorgeous palace floated on the waters than the steam yacht of W. K. Vanderbilt, which, in addition to being equipped with every conceivable article of comfort and luxury, was a sea-going vessel, larger than many an ocean steamship. The Alva was 285 feet in length over all, and was launched Oct. 14, 1886. When the vessel was delivered complete to her owner she is said to have cost, with her equipment and furniture, $1,000,000, and the expense of keeping her in commission was never less than $10,000 a month. In addition to a large staff of servants, it required a crew of 55 men to run the ship, and her captain had formerly commanded an Atlantic liner, while there were many grades of under officers, with a big staff of engineers, an electrician, stewards and stewardesses, and a man to look after the wine cellar. Two Jersey cows formed an important part of the vessel's equipment. They had padded stalls like fine horses at Newmarket Heath, and they supplied cream and fresh milk throughout the voyage.

The smoking-room was on the upper deck. It was finished in mahogany and upholstered in embossed leather. In the center of this room was a large table fitted with ingenious lockers with silver mountings. In these were kept cigars, cigarettes and tobacco for the convenience of the guests. The cigars were all wrapped in silver-leaf to protect them from the saturating influence of the salt air and to preserve their flavor. Close to the right hand of every guest was an electric button, which on being pressed summoned a servant in livery.

The hospitality of the owner of the Alva was generous. The guests who accompanied him on any of his voyages had carte blanche to order any manner of solid or liquid refreshment at any hour of the day or night, whether champagne or water, pate de foie gras or a mutton chop. At almost every turn about the vessel the guest was confronted by electric buttons which would bring a servant with whatever might be desired.

Unlike an ocean steamer, the Alva was not fitted with berths in the guest-rooms, but each of them contained a roomy bed. The dining-room was the largest apartment aboard the vessel. It was elaborately finished in white and gold, with furniture of the same delicate tint. Rich carpets and rugs covered the floors, growing plants were half concealed in various recesses, and at night the room was illuminated by soft electric lamps. With the tables spread for dinner and glittering with the costly plate and cut-glass with which the yacht was furnished, this dining-room in mid-ocean rivaled in richness that of Mr. Vanderbilt's house in New York.

From the dining-room a long low passage led aft to the library, which also served as a music room. In this apartment were 6,000 books and a piano, harp, organ, violin, with other musical instruments, so that time should not hang heavily during the voyage. The vessel was fitted with two steam launches and five lifeboats.

As usual, the sailors had their quarters in the forecastle, but the officers' cabins were astern and the state rooms of the owner and his guests were between. The officers' mess room was forward on the main deck.

Beneath the smoking-room was the children's nursery, a well-lighted playroom; plenty of light, indeed, being a feature of every department on the yacht. The state rooms began here, too. They were ranged about the nursery and extended aft, with a break here and there, to the stern. There were sixteen state rooms in all, with accommodations for 25 people, though a good many more guests could be accommodated on a pinch. They were as far ahead of the average ocean steamship state rooms as a yacht is ahead of a canal boat. These were variously finished in cherry and walnut, and supplied with dressing-cases, wardrobes, Scotch marble basins with running water, and a number of ingenious contrivances in the line of conveniences. The rooms were fully equipped with rich carpets, curtains and tapestries. Among the interesting features of the state rooms were the bath tubs sunk into the floor and so neatly fitted with trap-doors that even without carpet their presence would not be noticed. Hot or cold, fresh or salt water baths could be had at will. The furnishing of the two children's bedrooms, just off the nursery, was also cleverly arranged. A small berth for a child was built against the side, about four feet from the floor. The nurse's couch fitted closely under this, and pulled out when the child was put to bed, so that should a lurch or roll of the yacht cause the child to fall out it would fall upon soft bedding.

The pantry and dining-room were next aft the nursery, but scattered here and there in the vicinity were linen closets, toilet rooms and a small, glass-faced section fitted up with a large assortment of rifles, shotguns, pistols and fishing tackle. Through a trapdoor in the pantry the "wine cellar" and general storeroom for provisions was reached. Artificial ice was made here. Over the pantry was the kitchen, and no smell of the cooking could come from it to the dining-room below. This room was beautifully finished in white and gold. It was the most spacious apartment in the yacht and would seat half a hundred people. A long, narrow passage led aft from the dining-room to the library. On the way the great engine was passed, and for the benefit of guests fond of watching the plunges of the big, brightly-polished steel rods a handsomely-upholstered settee was provided. The library was finished in French walnut and the adjoining state rooms matched it. A few steps to the outer deck and a sharp turn forward brought the visitor to the ladies' sitting-room and boudoir. This, in the way of comfort, elegance and general utility was a counterpart of the smoking-room forward, but even more luxuriously furnished. The "after deck house" was fitted up as an office and secretary's room.

The crew comprised 55 men. To maintain these, pay for coal, provisions and the endless expenses of a yacht, it was estimated that Mr. Vanderbilt would have to pay about $10,000 a month.

The Alva was made of steel, and was bark rigged. She registers 600 tons, length 285 feet over all, and 252 feet on the load-water line. Her beam 32 feet 3 inches, and her depth 26 feet, with a draft of 16 feet 8 inches. She was fitted with compound inverted engines, with three cylinders—two of 45 inches and one 32 by 42. Her two boilers were 17 feet by 10 feet 6 inches.

Since she was launched Mr. Vanderbilt, with his family, has made many cruises and voyages upon the Alva. The longest cruise she made was finished four years ago. Starting from New York, July 2, 1887, the Alva crossed to Queenstown in nine days, touched at Liverpool, went thence to Southampton for the naval review, thence to Havre, Rotterdam and across the North Sea to Leith. Here Mr. Vanderbilt left his yacht and with his party proceeded by land to Inverness. The Alva went from the Moray Frith to Trieste direct, and then the winter was spent on the Mediterranean. Early in 1838 the Alva steamed down the Dalmatian and Grecian coasts, around to Athens and Constantinople, thence to Alexandria, where the party again left her for a trip up the Nile to the first cataract, Sprucuse, Naples, Villefranche, Port Mahone, Malaga and Gibraltar were all visited. The yacht came home by way of Madeira, Teneriffe, Nassau and the Canaries, and reached New York in April, 1888.

Returning from another long cruise abroad in the spring of 1891 the Alva came into port with her owner and his guests crowded as far forward as they could get and the yellow flag flying at the mainmast. One of the sailors was sick with the most malignant form of smallpox.

Only six weeks ago the Alva, coming into port, ran down a rowboat on the North River and two people were drowned. May 30 of this year the yacht arrived from Europe at Newport with Mr. Vanderbilt aboard, and then he heard for the first time of the sudden death of young W. H. Vanderbilt, his nephew.

When the yacht was run into and sunk on Sunday Mr. Vanderbilt and his guests were in bed, and had no time to secure even a pair of trousers. They left all their valuables, watches, diamonds, etc., in their state rooms. Mr. Vanderbilt paid off his crew and gave them a large sum extra for the clothing they lost. Every man escaped from the Alva with the clothes he had on his back and nothing more.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

It has been admitted even by the adversaries of democratic government that the moral effect of the exercise of the initiative and referendum in the cantons of Switzerland has been salutary. The consciousness of individual influence as well as the national feeling is declared to have been strengthened; and the fact of a larger and, on several occasions, increased participation of the people in the vote, is quoted as tending to prove that their interest in political questions is growing keener.

The application of the referendum as worked in Switzerland, and the issues raised by it, are so easy to understand, and in most cases so independent of party maneuvers, that public opinion acquiesces at once in the result, and the general feeling entertained in the country with reference to a particular question, finds its accurate and, for the time being, final expression.

The initiative is essentially a powerful engine in a democratic direction. By means of it, legislative bodies, mostly composed of persons belonging to the well-to-do class, can be compelled by the people to take up and put to a vote, matters which without it would in all probability never be brought to the front.

The members of the Swiss Federal Council yield to no government in Europe in devotion to their country, in incessant hard work for a poor salary, and in thorough honesty and incorruptibility.

There is manifest an independence of party which impels the voter to support that which he believes to be in the interest of the community, irrespective of party alliances, and thus the real will of the people is ascertained. Its effect upon the political machinery is that it reduces the necessity of prominent political leaders to a minimum, and politics consequently ceases to be a trade; for the power of the politician is curtailed, and there is no money in the business. The referendum has struck a blow at party government, in the narrow partisan sense, whose business is to oppose, never to co-operate. The political field there has not been yielded to adventurers. Nowhere in the world are the government places filled by men so well fitted for the work to be performed. The referendum is fatal to anything like extravagance in the management of public funds.

This system disarms instantly and kills remorselessly all manner of jobs, and forbids favors lavished upon one district at the expense of others. Under the referendum class interests cannot be held paramount as is the case under other systems of government, and by it every measure is disposed of upon its merits and the will of the people becomes law.

The introduction of such a system in Canada would remove many existing evils, and reform the body politic as effectually as it has done in Switzerland.

The merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla is not accidental, but is the result of careful study and experiment by educated pharmacists.

Mr. James Highland and Miss Anna Fling were married in Marie county, Missouri, a few days ago.

Adam Graeme, of Mossgray.

By Mrs. Oliphant.

So the dining-room door swung open, wider than it needed to do, and Hope came in with a bound. She had hazel eyes and auburn hair, and an animated blithe face, whose claims to beauty, if it had any, no one ever thought of deciding. She was tolerably stout, and exceedingly firm, and active, and vigorous. The "Misses" in Edinburgh whispered among themselves that Hope had a predilection for masculine games, and was as strong as a boy; but Hope denied the slander stoutly, affirming that its solitary foundation was one unlucky slide, and two or three snowballs, in both of which the stupid and docile Adelaide Fendie, whom no one thought of blaming, was as much implicated as she.

Hope was rather talkative; she had a great deal to say about her Edinburgh experiences, and both the father and the mother were good listeners; the sterner parent, however, being by far the most incurgent now.

"And what did your friends say when you came away, Hope?" asked Mr. Oswald; "was there much lamentation?"

"They were all very sorry," said Hope, "and they all wished they were coming too; only big Miss Mansfield that's going to India, she did not care, for she thinks we are only girls and she's a woman, and she's always speaking about Calcutta!—and little Mary Wood would hardly let me go, mamma—she wanted to come too. Will you let her come at the vacation, mother?—for when all the rest go away, Mary has to stay with Miss Swinton, because she has no friends."

"But Miss Swinton is very kind, is she not?" said Mrs. Oswald.

"Miss Swinton is always good to everybody," said Hope promptly, "but when little Mary sees us all going away, and nobody coming for her, she greets—"

"She greets, Hope!" said Mr. Oswald, holding up his hand in reproof.

"Well, father," said the brave Hope, "it is a far better word than cries—cries! as if folk had only cut their finger! and Miss Swinton says our tongue is as good a tongue as the English, and we need not think shame of it."

Mr. Oswald submitted to be defeated, well-pleased and smiling—

"And what does Miss Swinton do at the vacations, Hope?" asked her mother.

"I don't know, mother; sometimes she stays at home, sometimes she goes away to some of those places that the Glasgow girls are always talking about—Rothesay, or somewhere about the Clyde. She was there with Miss Buckanan last year; and oh, mamma, I had almost forgotten—how is our Helen Buchanan? I must go to see her today."

The banker's brow contracted suddenly. His wife was wary, and a good politician; she took no notice of Hope's unsuitable inquiry.

"Miss Swinton went to stay with one of the young ladies, did she? does she do that often, Hope?"

"Sometimes, mother; they are all so fond of her—and I don't think she has ever been in the south country. Perhaps she would come to Fendie, if you were to ask her, mother, and bring little Mary Wood."

"Well, we shall see," said Mrs. Oswald; "and what about Adelaide Fendie, Hope?"

"Oh, Adelaide Fendie is coming home; the school is not good enough for her; and they're going to have a governess at Mount Fendie, for her, and Victoria, and little Fred— Poor Governess! I am very sorry for her, I am sure, whoever she is. I would far rather keep a school like—"

Mrs. Oswald interposed hastily, "Is it some one from Edinburgh, Hope?"

"No, indeed, mamma. Only somebody from England that Mrs. Heavielegh knows; and I almost hope she will be as stupid as they are, for if she is not, they will kill her. I would not live at Mount Fendie for all the world; and no one can teach Adelaide anything, except to do Berlin work, and thump, thump upon the piano."

"Come, Hope, this is too bad," said her smiling father. "I hope you can thump upon the piano to some purpose ourself. We must hear you to-night, you know."

"I don't care about it, father," said Hope; "it is very dreary, except folk will just let me play my own tunes; but then there's these awful waltzes and things, that were never made for anything but people's fingers. Adelaide could play them for days, father; but they make me dizzy; for there's nothing but noise in them."

"I am afraid you are quite giddy enough already, Hope," said Mr. Oswald.

"Miss Swinton says I am sensible," said Hope, with offended dignity. "Miss Swinton says she can trust me with the little ones better than Miss Manfield—and Miss Mansfield's seventeen!"

The father and mother laughed; but Miss Swinton's testimony to Hope's good sense pleased them nevertheless.

"Adelaide is coming home in a week," said Hope, "and she said the governess would be at the Mount before her. I am to go up every day, Adelaide says, if you will let me, mother; and I would like to go sometimes, but not so often; and I want to go to Mossgray, to see old Mrs. Mense, and the laird; and up to Friarsford to Maggie Irving, and down to the Waterford to see the Flower of Fendie; but first of all—"

"That will do, Hope," said her mother, fearful that the interdicted name might fall from Hope's gay lips again; "but I think you might show us those drawings of yours that you used to write so much about; you can arrange your visits to-morrow."

"But I want to go into Fendie to-night, mother, urged Hope, "to see—"

"We cannot part with you to-night, Hope," said Mrs. Oswald; "and now go and bring your drawings and let your father see them."

Hope obeyed. Mr. Oswald began to walk about the room, almost inclined to be angry with his daughter; this pertinacious attachment to the one person in Fendie whom he tabooed, and the constant recurrence of her name, annoyed him greatly; and the banker had a consciousness that his wife and his son William were much more likely to submit, so far as external action went, to his stern will, than was the much privileged girl-daughter, who appeared fully as much inclined to sway him, and did it as effectually. The grave and painful constraint with which William curbed a will as strong as his father's, raised in the banker's mind an angry feeling of antagonism; but the frank resistance of Hope was much less easily managed. Mr. Oswald began to feel an involuntary "drither" as to his success in this part of the contest—a dubious consciousness that Hope might be too many for him.

The exhibition of drawings did not succeed. Hope perceived that there was something wrong, and with eager girlish curiosity could not rest until she had fathomed it. William was strangely grave and taciturn, she thought; she seized the earliest opportunity of questioning him.

By the dining-room fireside, the brother and sister sat in the twilight alone. Hope took advantage of the propitious moment.

"William, is there anything the matter?" sighed. The light threw a gleam upon his face, and made it look very gray and grim, as his sister thought. Hope was not inclined to wait for his tardy answer; she plunged into the middle of the questio vexata.

"William, I want to know about Helen Buchanan."

William started.

"Hush, Hope—do not speak of her, I beg."

"Why!" said Hope. "I like her better than anybody else in Fendie; why should I not speak of her?"

There was no point on which Hope and her taciturn brother agreed so perfectly. He smiled a momentary smile, and then answered gravely—

"Because you do like her better than any one else in Fendie, you must not speak of her, Hope—and especially recollect that her name must not be mentioned before my father unless you wish to hear her spoken of with anger and disrepect, which I am sure you do not."

CHAPTER IX.

If I may not speak, I pray,
All the words I have to say,
Where shall I go hide them?
Naught say I 'gainst words of thine,
Do not listen, father mine—
So you need not chide them. —Song.

Hope Oswald was very much puzzled. She could by no means understand why this perfectly unreasonable interdict should be put upon her free and unfettered speech, and was not in any degree inclined to submit to it. She resolved to be at the bottom of the mystery.

Mr. Oswald and William were no sooner fairly lodged in the office the next morning than Hope began her investigation. Mrs. Oswald sat sewing again; she had an old-fashioned horror of idleness.

"Mother," said Hope, "I want you to tell me what ails Helen Buckanan!"

"Hush my, dear!" said her mother.

"But why should I hush, mamma? and why am I never to speak about Helen? William told me the very same; and it's too bad—as if you could not trust me!"

FUN, FACTS AND FICTION

He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause.—[Beecher.

Mothers and Nurses.

All who have the care of children should know that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry may be confidently depended on to cure all summer complaints, diarrhea, dysentery, cramps, colic, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, canker, etc., in children or adults.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity.—[Daniel Webster.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

There is no commandment in the Bible that tells anybody to love a hypocrite.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil, is ear ache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, in which the young are specially subject.

The only kind of religion worth having is the kind that costs something.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they will make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so, too.

You can't take one step with the devil without having to take another.

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confounded with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills as they are extremely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority.

It takes trouble and affliction to get some people wide awake.

No one need fear cholera or any summer complaint if they have a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial ready for use. It corrects all looseness of the bowels promptly and causes a healthy and natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor, and is rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc., in the market.

A good habit is a sword, a bad habit a chain.

Rapid Relief.

Dear Sirs,—I had for years been troubled with dyspepsia and sick headache, and found but little relief until I tried your Burdock Blood Bitters, which made a perfect cure. It is the best medicine I ever had in my life, and I will never be without it. HATTIE DAVIS, Clinton, Ont.

While a man is learning mathematics a woman is learning manners.

Mr. Job Scales, of Toronto, writes: "A short time ago I was suffering from Kidney Complaint and Dyspepsia, sour stomach and lame back; in fact, I was completely prostrated and suffering intense pain. While in this state a friend recommended me to try a bottle of Northrup and Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. I used one bottle, and the permanent manner in which it has cured and made a new man of me is such that I cannot withhold from the proprietors this expression of my gratitude."

PRESS AND PEOPLE.

IN THE SWEET BY-AND-BYE.

When will our politicians come to be as much afraid of the mighty host of farmers as they are of a comparatively few business men at our great centers? It will be when the farmers are educated, wideawake, resolute men, who know what they want and cannot be fooled out of it by talk.—[Vermont Watchman.

WEALTH MUST CONTROL LABOR.

The militia is in possession at Homestead, a congressional committee has made an investigation, the Carnegie company is hunting for non-union men to take the place of its old employes whom it refuses to receive back except as individuals and upon terms imposed by itself, and the old employes are holding out for a trial of endurance. If this condition continues, it is almost needless to say that the Carnegies will triumph. So many men are suffering for want of opportunity to work that a law-and-order contest, such as that at Homestead has become, cannot terminate otherwise than favorably for the side that controls the sinews of law and order.—[New York Standard.

BALLOTS, NOT BULLETS.

The American idea of righting wrongs is by ballots, not bullets. Mr. Frick's decree that the workingmen of the Carnegie mills shall not organize for mutual benefit is the attempt of an arbitrary and tyrannical man to impose his will upon men as free as himself. The effectual way to resist such an attempt is to vote down the system which creates Fricks and gives them their opportunity for injustice. The workingmen are at a disadvantage solely because of the system which creates great aggregations of wealth by giving favored men the privilege of taxing all other men under cover of law. That system tends directly to produce those conditions which give to the managers of great industries the chance to exercise arbitrary power in oppressive ways. It tends to the massing of wealth in the hands of a few who have only to combine in order that they might do what they will. It tends to the monopoly of opportunities, to the creation of classes, to the exclusion of competition in every market except that of labor.—[New York World.

RESTRICTING THEIR OPPORTUNITIES.

When taxes are put upon landed improvements and personal property, things that workingmen make, and demand is diminished by the consequent increase of price, freedom of employment is restricted, and in some degree men are deprived of opportunities to work; when protection duties are laid upon foreign products, so as to increase the price of similar domestic products, freedom of employment is restricted further, and men both here and abroad are deprived of opportunities to work; when the holding of land out of use is made possible and promoted by favoring the owners with low taxes, freedom of employment is in a very high degree restricted, and men in vast numbers are deprived of opportunities to work. It is in these ways that the army of the unemployed is created, and it is by drawing upon that army that the Carnegies are able to cut down the wages of their men and to shoot down the men themselves when they undertake to meet subtle economic force with physical force.—[New York Standard.

COMMERCE AND CHRISTIANITY.

Commerce has always been the forerunner and must forever continue to be the handmaid of Christianity. Commerce will penetrate and dispel the darkness of heathen lands, and diffuse in its stead the exhilarating sunshine of peace, progress and prosperity. Commerce will distribute the surplus, the superabundance of our country among the needy, the destitute of other lands, thus avoiding want and preventing famine. Commerce will pick up the waste materials, the refuse products of sections that are highly favored, transform these into articles of value and wealth by transporting them to other sections which are less favored. Between men of distant climes and widely-separated regions commerce equalizes the bounties and blessings of nature, tears down man's prejudice, builds up his manhood, teaches him that every other man is his brother, thus emphasizing that eternal truth that God hath made of one blood all the nations. Is there a man among you all who would cast a vote or raise his voice against a beneficence so nearly universal?—[Hon. Fred E. White, Ohio.

Those hands are most beautiful which do the most good.

TO BUYERS OF

It is an acknowledged fact that the Genuine Guyot Suspenders are not only the very best, most durable and healthful Suspenders made, but are by long odds the most popular all over the world. Numerous imitations of the Genuine Guyots are being offered to the public, and we beg to caution all buyers against these imitations, as they are barefaced attempts to defraud the consumers, and it is the intention of the maker of the Genuine Guyots to prosecute, to the fullest extent of the law, all fraudulent imitations. The Circular Saw 22 years ago was as much a novelty and as difficult to run as the Band Saw is to-day. With the experience gained in handling the Circular, knowledge of the Band Saw is much more readily acquired. Special improved tools also facilitate the work. We furnish an expert with each mill to instruct in the use of tools and work on saw.

The adjoining cut illustrates our NO. 1 BAND SAW MILL, capacity 10,000 to 20,000 feet in 10 hours. Our No. 2 mill is much heavier—capacity 20,000 to 40,000 feet per day.

Encore—Aunt (to little girl, who has just returned from hearing her mother sing for the first time in public)—Well, darling, how did mamma sing this afternoon? Little girl (dejectedly)—Not very well, they made her come back and do it all over again.

Cannot Refrain.

"I cannot refrain," writes Mr. Robert George Watts, M.A., M.D., M. R. C. S., Albion House, Quadrant road, Canonbury, N. London, Eng., "from testifying to the efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil in cases of chronic rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia."

If you have an opportunity to do a generous action, do it. It is a very pleasant reflection to go to sleep with.

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy and general corrective, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of any other than salutary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, earache, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.

Fritz Snitzler, a well-known citizen of Wichita, Kan., described in a local newspaper as "famous," claims to be Emin Pasha's cousin. He says he and Emin went through the university together in the old country.

LONDON AND ENVIRONS.

—Water Commissioner Wm. Jones is ill.

—The McClary works shut down yesterday owing to the intense heat.

—Port Stanley had a heavy rainfall yesterday, and the picnickers were forced indoors for a while.

—People who complained the other day that the rain was ruining everything wouldn't object to a little of it just now.

—Many people are struck by the strange association of ideas in seeing the letter boxes of the town painted red and clinging to the lamp-posts.

—"The Harvest Moon" is the name of a superior drama which will be presented at the Grand Opera House on Aug. 6. Harry Booker, the well-known comedian, is the manager.

—The three months' extension granted those whose liquor licenses were cut off expires on Sunday, and as a result nine of them will put up their shutters for good Saturday night.

—The annual picnic of the St. James' Presbyterian Sunday school was held at Wonderland yesterday. A boat load of happy children, their friends and parents enjoyed themselves at the pretty river resort.

—"Masters Harold Southam, Tom Reid and Jack McDonald, or London, and John Ferguson, of this city, the four boys who left London last Wednesday in two canoes for a trip down the Thames, arrived here on Saturday at 5 o'clock, after a most enjoyable sail."—[Chatham Planet.

—"Mr. William Patterson, sen., for over 50 years a citizen of Montreal, died yesterday afternoon at his residence, No. 29 Anderson street. Mr. Patterson was particularly well known, not only among the breeders of horses in Canada, but to the whole business community of the city. In 1840 Mr. Patterson opened a boarding stable on Cote street, afterwards changing to Bleury street, where he was at the time of his death. Seventeen months ago Mr. Patterson was seized with a parlytic stroke, from which he never recovered. The deceased was born in Trenat, Scotland, coming to Canada and settling in Montreal when 24 years old. The deceased leaves a widow, three sons—Dr. Wm. Patterson, C. A. Patterson and John Patterson, of the Canadian Pacific Railway—and two daughters, Mrs. Duncan Macdougall and Mrs. John Bland, of London, Ont."—[Montreal Gazette.

Sure Weather Signs.

When flies sting sharply and ants may be seen making haste with their tiny burdens; when the donkeys bray unusually, and the cows cluster in corners of the fields before milking time; when the pigs pick up straws and carry them about with lively interest, as if they had some business with them, or wished to learn if straws really do show the way the wind blows; when the dog is heavy with sleep, and the cat seems possessed to wash her face, then look for rain.—[Detroit Free Press.

"C" Company's First Dinner.

A jolly company of red coats, to the number of about 40, took possession of the dining-room of the Thompson House last night. It was the first annual dinner of the officers, non-coms. and men of "C" Company, Seventh Fusiliers. The occasion was graced with the presence of Colonel Payne. Captain John Moore presided and Sergeant Brown was vice-chairman. The menu was excellent, and songs, speeches and sentimentalities combined to make an enjoyable evening. The toast list was of the orthodox style, and brought responses from members of sister companies in the Seventh, and representatives of "D" Company, R. C. I. The dinner ended shortly after midnight.

The Water Commissioners.

Chairman Davis and Mayor Spencer transacted the business of the Board of Water Commissioners last evening. A communication from No. 3 committee asking that certain hydrants be moved, raised, lowered and repaired, was referred to the engineer. The chairman remarked that the street watering should be under the supervision of the water commissioners, as the present waste of water through careless use of hydrants was enormous. Mr. J. R. Peel said he lent the board the big fountain in the Western Fair palace three years ago, and it had never been returned. He put in a bill of $140 as the price of the same. The board will consider it. The engineer recommended that Paterson & Joly's bill be reduced to $20. He had found a leak near the meter. W. D. Buckle asked that the main be extended on St. James street, from Colborne to Adelaide. Referred to the engineer. Geo. C. Robb, boiler inspector, reported that he had examined the waterworks boiler and found it in good order. H. C. Merritt, secretary of committee, invited the board to the corporation employes' picnic on Monday. Accepted with thanks.

Successful Social.

St. Mary's Church in the southern part of the city is becoming too small to accommodate its steadily-increasing congregations, and at some time in the near future the trustees intend erecting a handsome new structure. Last evening a band concert and lawn social was held on the church grounds with the object of raising funds for this purpose, and it was a most successful affair. The attendance was very large, the total receipts amounting to nearly $300. Several refreshment booths were very liberally patronized, as were also a shooting gallery and dancing hall, where Chadwick's orchestra furnished the necessary music. The band of No. 1 Company, C. R. I., by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Smith and officers, rendered a number of popular selections, which were highly appreciated. Tickets were sold which entitled each holder to a chance of winning a gold watch, a lemonade service or a life-size picture of Rev. Father Kennedy. Those who held the lucky numbers did not present themselves to claim the prizes, so it is not yet known who were the winners. Ticket No. 5 won the watch, No. 204 the lemonade service and No. 170 the picture. The committee who had charge of the social have every reason to feel gratified at its successful issue. They were Messrs. Connor, J. Lachlan, W. P. Regan, John McGregor, Hurley, Bradley, James Smith, Flynn, Morris and Angus McGinnis.

GRAND ENCAMPMENT, I. O. O. F.

Annual Gathering of the Brotherhood at Brantford—Yearly Reports—Officers-Elect.

The 23rd grand encampment, Patriarchs Militant, I. O. O. F., which met yesterday in Brantford, elected the following officers:

Grand Patriarch—Fred Doggett, St. Thomas.

Grand High Priest—F. I. Daniels, Ottawa.

Grand Scribe—M. D. Dawson, London.

Grand Treasurer—E. Beltz, London.

Grand Senior Warden—A. H. Blackaby, Galt.

Grand Representatives to the Sovereign Grand Lodge—P. G. P. John A. McDonald, of Arnprior, and P. G. P. D. H. Moore, of Peterboro.

The annual report of the grand patriarch, D. H. Moore, referred to the steady growth of the order, which has now 69 encampments and at least 3,300 members. He then went on to say that new encampments had been opened at Blenheim, Mount Brydges and Chapleau, while an encampment at Manilla had been re-established. A new encampment at Campbellford was being projected. He also referred to the steps taken to comply with the Ontario Act, which calls for registration of all societies which involve the insurance principle.

Mr. M. D. Dawson, of London, the grand scribe, presented his annual report, which says: The order is flourishing in every jurisdiction where Oddfellowship is known on this continent. In many places it is booming. The following summary from the returns give the membership and standing Dec. 31, 1891:

HOT COMFORT.

There Are Countries in the World That Are Worse Than This.

Which is the very hottest region of the globe is disputed warmly sometimes by travelers. The thermometer will not decide, in the sense we refer to, because local conditions have such great influence on our feeling of misery. Those who have been quartered at Aden would not allow that any spot on this upper earth can be more awful than that. But unfortunates who have dwelt in Scinde mock the terrors of Aden. Visitors to Bushire, in the Persian Gulf, talk lightly of Scinde; and Russians assert that there are districts in Central Asia more terrible than all three. One would incline to believe them also, if only it were proved possible to live through a summer in heat more cruel than that of Scinde, for instance. Americans also put in a claim for their Great Desert. One thing is assured—that the famous Sahara does not approach any of those mentioned. In some parts of Scinde necessity taught the inhabitants ages ago to invent an apparatus for cooling their rooms, which we were glad to adopt under the name "windsail."

As for the actual heat in the severest climates, persons otherwise trustworthy will give astounding reports. We have heard responsible officers of the old Indian flotilla avouch that they have seen the glass register 200° in the sun at Bushire. It was a long time ago, however, and there lies their excuse. Perhaps 180° has been recorded, for a brief space, under peculiar circumstances. But when 160° is passed every fraction become horribly perceptible. Ten degrees above this is not uncommon. The coolest place to be found at Shikarpur sometimes has been 140°. But 120° in the shade may be regarded as the temperature of the very hottest climates in the world—when no wind blows. Fancy that, as the minimum, for 48 hours at a stretch. At Sukkur—the year round, mark—residents endure a minimum of 97°; happily there are very few whites among them. But this is in a time when no wind blows, and winds are the rule from March to July. There is the Suk, which rises, as scientific persons allege, in the Kachi Desert, but ordinary mortals will not be persuaded that it has its origin in the upper world. All life withers before it. But there is worse. The Bad-i-simoon kills outright everything it encounters; not only that—it burns up tissue and cartilege, so that the limbs can be pulled asunder when the storm has passed by. Of course it is rare and brief and very narrow in its track. From the roof of his house in Jacobabad, an officer watched it sweep by, destroying actually everything it met; but he 50 yards from the edge, felt only a warmer glow than usual.—[London Standard.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

A person invents a machine, leaves a drawing of it at a patent office, and, with the object of ultimately taking out a patent, makes a formal declaration before a magistrate. Is this declaration sufficient protection for one year against any other person who may want to steal the invention? An answer will oblige.

Scintillations.

—Factory children in New England and shop girls in New York are paid as low a sum as $1 25 per week.

—The Michigan State Labor Bureau reports that Detroit's millionaires own one-third of her real estate and very nearly one-half of all her property.

—American reapers and mowers, equal to the English, are sold in Europe for less prices than English makers demand. The tariff enables the American manufacturer of those machines to charge American farmers a greater price than is charged foreign farmers for the same machines. Still many American farmers will continue to vote blindly for protection.

—Miss Ella Knowles, the only woman lawyer of Montana, has been nominated by the People's party of that State for Attorney General. Miss Knowles is a native of New Hampshire. She graduated from Bates College, Maine, in 1884 and began the study of law in 1885 in Manchester, N. H. Forced by ill health into the mountains of Montana, she taught for a year in the Helena Central School and then resumed her legal studies. Professional prejudice prevented her for a time from practicing at the bar, but in December, 1890, she personally secured the passage by the Territorial Legislature of a law that provides for the admission of women, and she then became a full-fledged lawyer. She will make a personal canvass of the State.

The Garbage Excitement.

WINDSOR, Ont., July 26.—The garbage excitement has broken out afresh at Amherstburg. On Saturday and Sunday nights dumping was continued at the mouth of the river. The stuff came ashore before the residences on the river front, and the people are up in arms over the matter. They have decided to notify the Sanitary Company to quit making that point a dumping-ground, and will report the facts to the Ontario Government at Toronto and the Dominion officials at Ottawa. The United States consul at Amherstburg has also been notified that the barge and tug towing the garbage will be seized.

Little Johnny had heard the minister exhorting his hearers to strive to enter in at the straight gate. A few moments later when the contribution box was passed around, he whispered: "Ma, are they after the gate money.

GREATEST SKIN CURES

Cuticura Cures All Skin Eruptions, Gives a Clear Complexion Free From Pimples.

Too much praise cannot be said of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, as I have used them for the last year and a half or so, and find them to be the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers and humor remedies of the age. I have used a great many so-called toilet soaps, and I find CUTICURA SOAP is the best I have ever used. I find it far superior to all other toilet or medicinal soaps. It cures all Skin eruptions, and gives a clear complexion. As for shampooing I would use no other, and for the face either, as it is a cure for all pimples, blackheads, eczema and all irritations and roughness of the face. For after using the CUTICURA SOAP awhile, it makes the face smooth and cool, and does not give that burning sensation which so many other toilet soaps do. Try the CUTICURA REMEDIES and you will not regret it that you have ever done so.

Liver Complaint, Kidney, Debility and Female Weakness All Cured.

LONDON, June 29 1880.

For some time I was a sufferer of liver complaint, affections of the kidneys, debility and female weakness; also with pain in the side, between the shoulders and underneath the shoulder blades, and much weakness in the back and distress across my body, and much sinking down of the system. Through persuasion I tried Williams' Royal Crown Remedy, and have derived great benefit from its use; in fact I am feeling better at present than I have for a number of years. I can with pleasure recommend it, and I would induce any one who is afflicted to get it without delay
