MAY NOT LOOK AT THE EM-PEROR.

The German Emperor has one very singular peculiarity. He cannot bear to have anyone look at him when he is saying his prayers in church, and in order that the curiosity of his subjects shall not disturb his religious devotions he has issued the following unparalleled order: "As soon as I enter church, every one is on the qui vive to look at me a thing which annoys me extremely therefore desire that all shall abstain from this curiosity when I go on Sunday to hear divine service. Those who desire to have a good view of me can do so every day when I take my walk in the Thiergarten or drive terview with Dr. Michaux, the Belgian official who is said to have been the only European witness of the trial and execution by hanging of Stokes, the English trader, who was executed by order of Capt. Lothaire, the Belgian commander at Llagi, Congo Free State. Mr. Michaux is quoted as saying that on Jan. 15 of the present year young Stokes was brought before an alleged court martial, Capt. Lothaire composing the entire court, and he and the doctor being the only whites present. The only witnesses were a few Arabs, who stated that they had purchased rifles from Stokes. The trial lasted between one and two hours, after which Capt. Lothaire announced that Stokes was sentenced to death and that he would be executed on the following day. Continuing, Dr. Michaux says: "All my intercessions were futile. Capt. Lothaire refused to grant a few days' reprieve. At 5 o'clock the next morning a servant called me and informed me that Stokes was dead. I rose hurriedly, thinking that Stokes was stricken with apoplexy or that he had poisoned himself, and I was startled to find a gallows and a new made grave. Stokes had been executed and buried while I slept. As to the question of his guilt or otherwise I must be silent."

TO DIVIDE MADAGASCAR. London, Oct. 15.-The Pall Mall

Gazette says: A picturesque, and it would seem, important feature of the Madagascar expedition is Herr Eugen Wolff, the special correspondent of the Berlin Tagblatt. Herr Wolff came out with an elaborate campaigning kit, a canoe of his own, a milk-white jackass artistically picked out with henna. He was, much to the envy of his French confreres, attached to the staff of Gen. Duchesne, and, much to their disgust, the general got very much attached to him. So much so, indeed, that Herr Wolff is the only correspondent who has been allowed to accompany the flying column in the world.

the dash upon Antananarivo. Now, Gen. Duchesne, it is well known, has no great love for journalists, even when they are French. Why should he manifest this remarkable liking for a journalist who is a German? A French newspaper has just supplied the answer. The Tagblatt man has been sent over to do a deal with the general, and the deal is this: Germany is to get half the island, when France has got the whole of it. The half-island will suit Germany as an outlet for her emigrants, and France will like them better than English traders. Moreover, Herr Wolff is in a position to promise her the restora-tion of one of the lost provinces, as the quid pro quo. The general is shrewd enough to see the force of this, and this is what makes him so excep-

Warm Reception to the Liberal Leader in a Hitherto High-Tax Stronghold.

Brockville, Oct. 15.—The Liberal leader yesterday invaded what has hitherto been regarded as a Conservative stronghold, and met with an ovation such as it is seldom the good fortune of a public man to receive. For over twenty years Dr. Ferguson has sat in Parliament for North Leeds and Grenville, but if Monday's demonstration means anything at all, it is that the days of the jovial doctor, politically speaking, are numbered, and that with him will go the policy that has so completely failed to fulfill its promise. Hon. Mr. Laurier was first presented with a civic address by the reeve and council of Merrickville. A procession was formed, and was big enough to have need for the music of four bands—the Oddfellows, Citizens' of Smith's Falls, the Kemptville and Merrickville bands. Orillia Has a $35,000 Scorcher-Blaze at Minden.

Orillia, Ont., Oct. 15 .- The most disastrous fire here in years burned Mulcahy's block early yesterday morning. The occupants of the burned building were: Crawford, Lynch & Co., general merchants; E. C. Symmons, hatter and furrier; W. S. Frost & Co., jewelers; Grant & Grant, barristers; W. M. Harvey, dentist, and the halls of the A. O. U. W., I. O. F., A. O. F., Home Circle and Sons of England. Crawford, Lynch & Co. are the greatest losers. The fire started in the basement of E. E. Simpson's in which an automatic nozzle was inserted and a stream scattered throughout the whole area of the basement. The blaze was supposed to have been extinguished, when, without warning, flames appeared in Crawford, Lynch & Co.'s store, and in a few minutes the whole interior was a furnace of flames, which rapidly ascended to the second and third stories. The Guelph Han Walker Now Believed to Have Been Murdered.

His Widow Regains Consciousness, bu Has Lost Her Reason.

Chicago, Oct. 15 .- After having remained in a comatose condition for over 100 hours, Mrs. Annie Walker, of Guelph, Ont., whose case has attracted widespread attention, regained consciousness this morning. She showed every sign of having lost her reason. The mystery of her condition became all the deeper when it became known that the authorities at Detroit, where her husband is supposed to have committed suicide, are of the opinion that Walker was murdered. It is said that the Michigan officers held a postmortem examination of the body, and was dead when his body went into would have resulted from a wound inflicted by some blunt instrument. An-other mysterious incident is the fact that Walker's relatives evidently do not recognize Mrs. Walker, for the money which was sent to this city with her was payable to Mrs. McIntyre, which is said to have been her name before she met Walker. Mrs. Wilce, said to be Mrs. Walker's half-sister, has not returned from Canada, and the afflicted woman is still in the west side boarding house, where she was taken the day she arrived in the city.

The news spread rapidly and created & sensation in financial and business circles. Mr. Samuel Barfoot, who has been postmaster for ten years past, and was the head of the suspended institution, has been in business here for 25 years, and has been universally regarded as one the Maple City's shrewdest and most public spirited business men. To those best informed the affair came as a surprise. For months past Mr. Barfoot, it is said, was seriously encumbered with real estate, and first and second mortgages on the property. It was owing to the depression in these values that his credit suffered. This was followed by large withdrawals of deposits, and necessitated a more liberal use of his credit. About six months ago the Merchants' Bank demanded additional security, and Mr. Barfoot gave a mortgage for $30,000. This was registered last Saturday, and proved the fatal blow. When interviewed by a press representative, Mr. Barfoot said he would pay dollar for dollar if given time in which to realize upon his assets, "unless," he said to the reporter, "times get harder, in which case I pity the whole country."

The Aleutian Islands Ablaze With Volcanie Fires.

San Francisco, Oct. 15.—The revenue cutter Commodore Perry has returned from the Northern Sea, where she has been confronted each night for weeks by a gigantic line of fire. As Capt. Smith expresses it, "The devil's stokers have been stirring up the subterranean sea of flames that is supposed to lie thousands of feet under the Bering's bed, and as a consequence, fully 20 of the 40 volcanoes in the Aleutian chain are now active." As far as the eye can reach from any point in the Bering Sea, adjacent or even at a distance from the famous seal islands, the rising smoke and steam can be seen during the day, in both directions. As dusk comes the brighter columns show up in the cold Alaska night first and as it gets darker other vivid curls of smoke are to be seen at greater distances. Sometimes when the position of the observer is advantageous, a dozen or fifteen of these pillars of fire are in sight. The show of subterranean force is the most noteworthy ever observed on American As proof of the mighty power that is at work beneath the islands, a neck of land has been forced up out of the sea between Bogalov and old Bogalov, and the two islands are of the New Assistant Pen-Picture Pastor.

I arrived purposely early, but half a dozen people were already before me. Presently the organist, Mr. George B. Sippi, seated himself at the electrically worked organ, the keyboard, connected by wires, being on the north side of the chancel, with the instrument on the side to the south. The organ at St. Paul's is a noble one. The meditative strains calm the mind. The people began to enter. The congregation on Sunday evening was large, completely filling the handsome, well lighted building. Strangers were courteously received; Mr. J. S. Pearce, one of the churchwardens, assisting. Mr. Pearce's associate warden is Mr. W. J. Reid. The oak seats are comfortable, with a slightly sloping back that gives the right sort of support.

The first premonition of the opening service comes distantly from the choir boys in the vestry repeating the Lord's Prayer. A door swings open, the choir enter in procession, boys in front, the minister last. The service is choral, the Psalms of the day being sung. The music includes Bridgewater's Cantate, the same author's Deus Miseratur, and Steggal's anthem, "Remember Now Thy Creator." Some of the simpler things were also effective; for example, the golden thread of organ tones intertwining the monotone of the Lord's Prayer and the Creed. The Psalms for the day were pretty long, and this, with other parts of the service, brought the time up to about 8:05 p.m. before the preacher ascended the pulpit stair. During a great portion of this time the audience were standing, even during the singing of the anthem. If this sketch were critical instead of descriptive, I would be inclined to consider it a mistake to so arrange a service as to compel women and children and others to endure the needless fatigue connected with so much continuous standing. As to congregational gregation is capable of in this line, as only one hymn was sung during the whole service, and that set to a hardly congregational arrangement from one of Mendelssohn's Songs Without

1. Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them.

2. While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain. 3. In the days when the keepers of the house shall tremble and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease, because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened. 4. And the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall be brought low; 5. Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way, and the almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshoppers shall be a burden, and desire shall fail; because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets:

6. Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. 7. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it. 8. Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher, all is vanity.

The preacher is the new curate, Rev. Canon Dann, late of Limerick, Ireland. As he ascends the pulpit one sees that he is a man of generous physical proportions; somewhat bald, clean shaven, fresh and ruddy face, and, excepting the nose, something of the Oliver Goldsmith type. Voice clear, resonant; utterance deliberate and outspoken; articulation distinct. Manuscript is adhered to, but not so closely as to kill vivacity. The text was not one calling for originality or special effect, being apparently selected to go with an appeal for missionary aid to Algoma-"All flesk our God shall stand for ever." In the course of his remarks, pointing out the contrast between the withering grass and the enduring Word, the evanescence of things temporal as compared with the permanence of things spiritual and eternal, he inci- Althea Hill Sharon, dentally disclosed that he did not regard the "higher criticism," so-called, as more than a passing fad. Among his sentences was this: "You may turn time into money, but one day you may find that you cannot again turn your money into time." The sermon occupied about half an hour, and was listened to attentively. A familiar quotation from Shakespeare occurred early in the discourse, and later on these lines from Robert

Browning: "One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward, Never doubted clouds would break: Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph, Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better, Sleep to wake." After the sermon, and during the offertory, a solo was pleasantly taken by Miss McLaren; the benediction was

Paine's Celery Compound Peculiarly Adapted to Regulate the System and Give Her Strength,

A Paragraph of Truth From a Medical Journal.

The following paragraph from a medical journal published on this continent demands our serious attention. It reads thus: "It is safe to say that more than one half the is derived from the treatment of females. Not once is the diagnosis corthe sufferings of women? them as much as it does the menmore delicate and sensitive. There is a cause for every evil, and in the school room we can usually find the starting point of these headaches, backaches, and womanly ills which are growing so alarmingly common. When the great change from childhead to womanhood is in progress, the girl is crowded, pushed, overworked, to keep up with her studies. Add prizes. to this the severe anxiety and worry which attend examinations, and when the school life is over her health is seriously deranged.

After school days what comes? Are not the duties of women as wearing as those of men? Even more. Social, household, often business cares, must be assumed, which all lend a hand in bringing those delicate nerves into an irritated, weakened, unstrung condition. Is it to be wondered at that the sensitive organs, covered by a network of nerves, are deranged, and that life becomes one long, dreary road of suffering, without an escape or turn.

Paine's Celery Compound, that great medical discovery, should be used. Soon your nerves will be strong and vigorous, and the nutrition, digestion and specially womanly func-tions will be natural and regular. Rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, a beautiful figure, all the freshness and beauty of youth will follow the healthgiving influence of Paine's Celery Compound. When you are nervous, weak, tired, cannot sleep, have headaches, or any of the nameless ills which so many women suffer in si-lence, use Paine's Celery Compound, and it will restore to you the greatest blessing of life—health.

The Scrap Bag.

"A man can offer a weman no greater homage than to choose her from all the world to be his companion, the sharer of his joys and sorrows, his helpmate until 'death do part!' To her he trusts his happiness, home comforts and all else that pertains to the prosperity and success men covet and strive for. Having plighted their troth, becomes to both a fond dream of the life that is to be mutual, the home they are to share, and for this end they plan and hope until on the happy day appointed."

There!-That is enough of that!-

And it is hardly necessary to state that it was clipped from one of those mawkish, ingustable, ladies magazines, which so arouse the Scrap Bag editor's ire. To begin with, that lie about "choosing her from all the world to be his companion." It's time somebody nailed that one on the head. He doesn't do anything of the sort. He chooses her from a very small assortment of young women, who happen to be in his dancing circle, his Sunday school or his Bible class; also from among his friends' sisters, and his sister's girl friends, together with an odd one now and then whom fate will throw up against him in his narrow walk of life, amounting in round numbers to, say, three hundred, which leaves several millions of women out in the world unaccounted for. And how many women are there who have been chosen even from among a world of three hundred women? Not many young men know that many women intimately. They have not time. They are too much occupied in mastering their trades and professions, and carving a name for themselves in the world. So in reality, many women succeed in securing husbands because they had few or no rivals. It is therefore not at all improbable that half the people who are married to one another today would have been married to someone else if before selection was made they had enjoyed intimacy with at least eight hundred marriageable members of the opposite sex. How many engaged girls are there in London, I wonder, at this precise moment, who would care to see their lovers stand the test of a series of friendship with eight hundred nice girls chosen from different parts of the Dominion! Ah! Who would marry, who, then, I wonder? And yet think what a small number eight hundred is out of a town or county or a province. Out of a whole world, in fact. The truth is, there is really nothing in our relations with men to grow conceited over, if we examine the matter closely, nothing in the world for that matter. Tender encomiums, such as "I chose you out millions of women in the world, but to me there is only one," are mere figures of speech, those pretty gilt sugar plums which are so delightful to look upon, and so eagerly welcome by pretty lips (and plain ones, too). Only in this case it is the foolish virgins who are wise, and the wise Who are foolish. For the first type swallows wholesale everything pretty and sugar-coated, with the wholesome avidity of an unthinking young pullet. While the wise virgin who has a sharper tooth than her foolish sister does not stop till she has reached the wery heart of that delicious bit of pink and white deception, and there she finds semething that makes her more wise than ever-and miserable. She learns that lover-like speeches to the effect "that she is the only woman in the world." etc., really means "You are the nicest girl I know who will marry The lit is not impossible that God! is there not some other this creat world contains women sacrifict that will do? Take my life yourself, and who I should not find at all difficult to marry. not here, and YOU are, so I take you." It was George Meredith who said "the woman in sight is the woman wanted." and it has at last, after careful and serious observation of the actions of men and women, come to be a settled conviction with the present writer thai nearly all marriages are purely a matter of juxtaposition and propinquity, though sometimes (as in the case of those bereaved while still young, but who go through the world alone for the rest of life) it would seem as if there were such a thing as only one woman for one man in this fickle world, but don't you see what that is? Fortune perpetrating one of her little jokes at our expense—the silver sixpence in the Christmas cake that spoils it for the rest of the children.

America's Great Preacher

Draws Some Touching Lessons From Issac's Rescue

And Abraham's Sacrifice - The Analogy Between Isaac and Christ.

New York, Oct. 14 .- In his sermon for Sunday Rev. Dr. Talmage chose for his subject Abraham's supreme trial of faith, and the angelic rescue of Isaac from being offered by his father as a sacrifice. The text was Genesis, xxii., 7—"Behold the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb?"

Here are Abraham and Isaac; the one a kind, old, gracious, affectionate father; the other a brave, obedient, religious son. From his bronzed appearance you can tell that his son has been much in the field, and from his shaggy dress you know that he has been watching the herds. The mountain air has painted his cheek rubicund. He is twenty or twenty-five, or, as some suppose, thirty-three years of age; nevertheless a boy, considering the length of life to which people lived in those times, and the fact that a son is never anything but a boy to a father. The father's heartstrings are all wrapped around that boy, and wrapped again, until nine-tenths of the old man's life is Isaac. I can just imagine how lovingly and proudly he looked at his only son. Well, the dear old man had borne a great deal of trouble, and it had left its mark upon him. But now his trouble seems all gone, and we are glad that he is soon to rest forever. If the old man shall get decrepit, Isaac is strong enough to wait on him. If the father get dim of eyesight, Isaac will lead him by the hand. If the father become destitute, Isaac will earn him bread. How glad we are that the ship that has been in such a stormy sea is coming at last into the harbor. Are you not rejoiced that glorious old Abraham is through with his troubles? No! No! A thunderbolt! From that clear eastern sky there drops into that father's tent a voice with an announcement enough to turn black hair white, and to stun the patriarch into instant annihila-God said: "Abraham!" The old man answered: "Here I am." God said to him: "Take thy son, thy only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah, and offer him there as a burnt-offering." other words, slay him; cut his body into fragments; put the fragments on the wood; set fire to the wood, and let Isaac's body be consumed to ashes. "Cannibalism! Murder!" says some one, "Not so," said Abraham. I hear him soliloquize: "Here is the boy on whom I have depended! Oh, how I loved him! He was given in answer to prayer, and now must I surrender him? O Isaac, my son! Isaac, how shall I part with you? But then it is always safer to do as God asks me to; I have been in dark places before, to; I have been in dark places before, and God got me out. I will implicitly and so a type of Christ, who willingly do as God has told me, although it is came to save the world. If all the armvery dark. I can't see my way, but les of heaven had resolved to force I know God makes no mistakes, and | Christ out from the gate they could not

The third morning has come, and it is the day of the tragedy. The two servants are left with the beast of burden, while Abraham and his son Isaac, as was the custom of good people in those times, went up on the hill to sacrifice to the Lord. The wood is taken off the beast's back, and put on Isaac's back. Abraham has in one hand a pan of coals or a lamp, and in the other a sharp, keen knife. Here are all the appliances for a sacrifice, you say. No, there is one thing wanting; there is no victimno pigeon, or heifer, or lamb. Isaac. not knowing that he is to be the victim, looks up into his father's face, and asks a question which must have cut the old man to the bone: "My father!" The father said: "My son, Isaac, here I am." The son said: "Behold the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb?" The father's lip quivered, and his heart fainted, and his knees knocked together, and his entire body, mind and soul, shivered in sickening anguish, as he struggled to gain equipoise; for he does and spare his! Pour out my blood, and save Isaac for his mother and the world!" But this was an inward struggle. The father controls his if they would look at me, but they are feelings, and looks into his son's face and says: "Isaac, must I tell you all?" His son said: "Yes, father, I thought you had something on your mind; tell it." The father said: son, Isaac, thou art the lamb!" "Oh." you say, "why didn't that young man, if he was twenty or thirty years of age, smite into the dust his infirm father? He could have done it." Isaac knew by this time that the scene was typical of a Messiah who was to come, and so he made no struggle. They fell on each other's necks, and wailed out the parting. Awful and matchless scene of the wilderness. The rocks echo back the breaking of their hearts. That cry. "My son! my son!" The answer: "My father! my father!"

There is the knife, sharp and keen. Abraham—struggling with his mortal feelings on one side, and the commands of God on the other—takes that knife, rubs the flat of it on the palm of his hand, cries to God for help, comes up to the side of the altar, puts a parting kiss on the brow of his boy, takes a message from him for mother and home, and then, lifting the glittering weapon for the plunge of the death-stroke-his muscles knitting for the work-the hand begins to It falls! Not on the heart descend. of Isaac, but on the arm of God, who arrests the stroke, making the wilderness quake with the cry: "Abraham! Abraham! lay not thy hand upon the lad, nor do him any harm!"

What is this sound back in the woods? It is a crackling as of tree branches, a bleating and a struggle. Go, Abraham, and see what it is. Oh, it was a ram, that, going through the woods, has its crooked horns fastened and entangled in the brushwood, and could not get loose; and Abraham seizes it gladly, and quickly unloosens Isaac from the altar, puts the ram on in his place, sets the lamp under the brushwod of the altar, and as the dense smoke of the sacrifice begins to rise, the blood rolls down the sides of the altar, and drops hissing into the fire, and I hear the words: "Behold the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world." Well, what are you going to get out of this. There is an aged minister of the Gospel. He says: "I should get out of it that when God tells you to do a thing, whether it seems reasonable to you or not, go ahead and do it. Here Abraham couldn't have been mistaken. God didn't speak so indistinctly that it was not certain whether he called Sarah, or Abime-lech, or somebody else; but with divine articulation, divine intonation, divine emphasis, he says: "Abra-ham!" Abraham rushed blindly ahead to do his duty, knowing that things make you one would come out right. Likewise do Call and see, so yourselves. There is a mystery of your life. There is some burden you have to carry. You don't know why God has put it on you. There is some persecution, some trial, and you don't know why God allows it. There is a work for you to do, and you have not enough grace, you think, to do it. Do as Abraham did. Advance, and do your whole duty. Be willing to give up Isaac, and perhaps you will not have to give up anything. "Jehovah-jireh"—the Lord will provide. A capital lesson this old minister gives. Isaac going up the hill makes me think of the great sacrifice. Isaac, the only son of Abraham. Jesus, the only Son of God. On those two "onlys" I build a tearful emphasis. O Isaac! O Jesus! But this last sacrifice was a more tremendous one. When the knife was lifted over Calvary, there was no voice that cried "Stop!" and no hand arrested it. Sharp, keen and tremendous, it cut down through nerve and artery until the blood sprayed the faces of the executioners, and the mid-day sun dropped a veil of cloud over its face, because it could not endure the spectacle. O Isaac, of Mount Moriah! O Jesus, of Mount Calvary! Better could God have thrown away into annihilation a thousand worlds, than to have sacrificed his only Son. It was not one of ten sons—it was his only Son. If he had not given up him, you and I would have perished. "God so loved the world that he gave his only -"I stop there, not because I have forgotten the quotation, but because I want to think. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have ever-lasting life." Great God! break my heart at the thought of that sacrifice, Isaac the Only, typical of Jesus the

You see Isaac going up the hill and carrying the wood. O, Abraham, why not take the load off the boy? If he is going to die so soon, why not make his last hours easy? Abraham knew that in carrying that wood up Mount Moriah Isaac was to be a symbol of Christ carrying his own cross up Calvary. I do not know how heavy that cross was-whether it was made of oak, or acacia, or Lebanon cedar. I suppose it may have weighed, one, two or three hundred pounds. That was the lightest part of the burden. All the sins and sorrows of the world were around that cross. The heft of one, the heft of two, worlds; earth and hell were on his shoulders. O Isaac, carrying the wood of sacrifice up Mount Moriah. O Jesus, carrying the wood of sacrifice up Mount Calvary, the agonies of earth and hell wrapped around that cross. I shall never see the heavy load on Isaac's back, that I shall not think of the crushing load on Christ's back. For whom that load? For you. For you. For me For me. Would that all the tears that we have ever wept over our sorrows had been saved until this morning, and that we might now pour them out on the lacerated back and heart and feet of the Son of God. You say: "If that young man was 20 or 30 years of age, why did not he resist? No young man of 25 years of age would submit to have his father fasten him to a pile of wood with intention of to him I commit myself and my dar- have done it. Christ was equal with God. If all the battalions of glory had armed themselves, and resolved to put Christ forth, and make him come out and save this world, they could not have succeeded in it. With one stroke he would have toppled over angelic and archangelic domination.

But there was one thing that the Omnipotent Christ could not stand. Our sorrows mastered him. He could not bear to see the world die without an pardon and help, and if all heaven had armed itself to keep him back, if the gates of life had been bolted and double-barred. Christ would have flung the everlasting doors from their hinges, and would have sprung forth, scattering the hindering hosts of heaven like chaff before the whirlwind, as he cried: "Lo! I come to suffer. Lo! I come to die." Chnist—a willing sacrifice. Willing to take Bethlehem humiliation, and Sanhedrim outrage, and whipping post maltreatment, and Golgotha butchery. Willing to be bound. Willing to suffer. Willing to die. Will-

How does this affect you? Do not your very best impulses bound out towards this pain-struck Christ? Get down at his feet, O ye people. Put your lips against the wound on his right foot, and help kiss away the pang. Wipe the foam from his dying lip. Get under the cross until you feel the baptism of his rushing tears. Take him into your heart, with warmest love and undying enthusiasm. By your resistances you have abused him long enough. Christ is willing to save you. Are you willing to be saved? It seems to me as if this moment were throbbing with the invitations of an all-compas-I have been told that the cathedral of St. Mark's stands in a quarter in the center of the city of Venice, and that when the clock strikes 12 at noon all the birds from the city and regions round about the city fly to the squae and settle down. It came in this wise: A large-hearted woman passing one noonday across the square saw some birds shivering in the cold, and she scattered some crumbs of bread among them, and so on, from year to year, until the day of her death. In her will she bequeathed a certain amount of money to keep up the practice, and now, at the first stroke of the bell at noon the birds begin to come there, and when the clock has struck 12 the square is covered with them. beautifully suggestive. Christ comes out to feed thy soul today. The more hungry you feel yourselves to be, the it is. It is noon, and the gospel clock strikes 12. Come in flocks! Come as doves to the window! All the air filled with the liquid chime! Come!

Result of the Recent Experimental Shipment of Fruit From G imsby.

The Canadian Horticulturist contains a report from Liverpool on the result of the shipment of fruit to England last month. The report says the apples were the only part of the slfipment in fair condition on arriving in England. P. Byrne, agent, who had charge of the sales, and the brokers attribute the failure of the shipment to the fact that an insufficient supply of ice had been placed in the cold storage compartment. The fruit was quite warm to the touch. The tomatoes had literally dissolved; grapes were wet and separate from the stems; plums were in a state of decomposttion, and the peaches were simply a mass of black rottenness. Hardly a perfectly sound pear could be found. Very little of the stuff was saleable, and the prices obtained were small. Woodall & Co., brokers, report the vessel's refrigerators absolutely unsuitable for carrying fruit. They also strongly dissuade the shipment of Canadian grapes, as the flavor is not appreciated in England.

IN THE TREATY PORTS. Canadian Product Finds Favor in the Land of Confucius.

Vancouver (Special) Oct. 14.—A pasenger by the last vessel from China stated the other day that among other Canadian products which are fast coming into favor in the Chinese treaty ports, is the Canadian specific remedy for kidney diseases of all kinds known as Dodd's Kidney Pills. The medicine was first introduced by Canadians and the increase in its use both by Europeans and natives is attributed first to the accounts of its success in the Canadian and American newspapers many of which are received in Shanghai and other ports, and later to its established efficacy in curing all kinds of kidney diseases which are very prevalent in the country.

London, Tuesday, October 15. LONDON'S UNRIVALED ADVAN-TAGES.

The medical health officer of this city reports that only four cases of infectious disease have been reported in London since the beginning of March. We question if there is any city the size of London on this continent so uniformly healthy. A curious city medical man informs us that he recently studied up the list of doctors practicing in Ontario, and he found that this city had fewer members of the fraternity in proportion to population than any other city in the Province. And yet it is an acknowledged fact that some of our doctors find time hanging heavily on their hands-it is so conductive to health to have a habitation in this center of population. This condition of affairs does not arise from the fact that our citizens are scrupulously careful to obey the laws of health; many of them are not, and by their insanitary ways rather invite an outbreak of disease than ward It off. Rather it comes from the unexceptional situation of London: from the absolute lack of crowding of population, evidenced by our side streets, ornamented on either side by stately shade trees: from the carefulness with which the Board of Health and school authorities have worked to avoid the spread of contagion by children-the most prolific agency-and from our unrivaled supply of pure drinking water.

It was London which we had in our mind's eye the other day, when, being in a prophetic mood, we said that "It need surprise no one if the farmer of the twentieth century, upon which we enter in half a dozen years, decides to live in town and take the trolley to and from his fields daily." Our esteemed contemporary, the Montreal Star, holds that the mere suggestion of the possibility of a farmer making such a choice betokens a "topsy-turvey vision." Says our contemporary:

"That more of the bright things of Why does not some enterprising capthe cities and on the farms, in that day when invention and common sense have lightened the task of each, all are hoping; but we hardly expect to find men deserting the wholesome open country for that tangle of noise and smoke and bad air we call a city. A sane person would be as likely to prefer a night in a luxuriously upholstered Pullman car to a sweet sleep in an airy country bedroom. We do expect, of course, that the more leisured and wealthier farmer will bring many of the city advantages to his home, and that he will find access to the city and such pleasures as can only be obtained there, much handier and cheaper than now. But the electric cars and rapid transit generally will be much more likely to spread the city over the country side than to draw the ample country home into its vortex. The 'slum' is not a condition of life likely to last in a time when people may choose, if they will, to dwell in rural suburbs dotted all over the country surrounding the shop and office nucleus of a city."

We agree with our contemporary that one result of the trolley extension ers to have their homes in the country; but it is not a stretch of imagination to believe that many farmers, with the aid of electricity on the farm, will find sufficient time and a strong inclination to make their homes in town and go by trolley to their labors. Some men now live in this city and conduct farms in the country. If the facilities for moving quickly in the rural region are increased, is it not reasonable to expect that the number of farmers living in cities hay be increased correspondingly? "The town" to which we had reference was London, which will doubtless be made a model place of residence before the twentieth century has far elapsed. We have now no "slums," no musty, dirty, crowded lanes, such as are to be found in Montreal and Torento, and if we can help it, no matter how much our population may increase, we never shall have those blots on civilized life. We have, as we have shown, a record for immunity from disease, such as we make bold to say no other 35,000 people in Canada, whether living in rural regions or in urban communities, can adduce. But there are yet some reforms that must be undertaken before we are an ideal city, which even a farmer, with all his love for the free, bracing air of the country, might have no hesitation in choosing for his residence. When we are able to provide sewerage for every citizen, and when we dispose of the city sewage as well as the street and household refuse promptly, and with profit to the taxpayers; when our street workmen are employed, not to take "the stitch in time that saves nine," then we will have a city where enjoyed more thoroughly than in any colossal aggregation of "slums, noise and smoke," or even in the much- and smoke," or even in the much- and considering the arrangements of the furniture trade. POINTS.

The burglars who endeavored to rob the postoffice at Nobleton, Norty York, also attempted to murder the postmaster, at whom they discharged several revolver shots. If these thieves or any other of the gang of burglars now reported to be operating throughout the Province are captured, it is to be hoped that they will be dealt with in an exemplary manner. These midnight marauders are evidently desperate men, intent on having their way at all hazards. They do not carry loaded revolvers or other murderous weapons for nothing. It is their intention to kill if they are brought into too close contact with owners of property or with the police. They have murder in their hearts, and if they do not kill, it is because they are uninterrupted or are bad shots. Such scoundrels are a menace to life and property. They should not be at large. If captured, they should be sent to the penitentiary for life. No honest man would complain of the sentence as se-

Sir Julian Pauncefote, British ambassador at Washington, and the Earl of Meath have been dining with Prof. Goldwin Smith at Toronto, and the Canadian jingoes are beside themselves with annoyance that these two statesmen should associate with a man whom they have condemned as disloyal. Then we observe that the management of the Grand Trunk Railway have now called upon an American of great experience to take control of their railway, as the Canadian Pacific Railway managers did before them. If this kind of thing continues the Yankeephobes will go

How the poor British farmer is being ground down by trade freedom is shown by the London Meat Trades Journal. At a sale of Border Leicester sheep at Kelso (Scotland) the other day four Mertoun rams brought respectively $755, $750, $650 and $550 each, the buyers being all tenant farmers. The first figure-$755, is the highthis season in Scotland. Thirty rams sold realized $208 each. Good stock pays yet. The British farmers would have plenty of money to pay their way if they owned their own farms, and were not compelled to pay heavy tributes to the landlords.

We have a splendid fruitgrowing district in Western Ontario. We have wholesale grocers who do business over a wide portion of the Dominion, who would act as distributors, and we have unrivalled shipping facilities. All that is needed is enterprise to take hold of the industry.

The Toronto Week thus refers to Hon. Mr. Laurier's tour:

"It is not only Liberals who will welcome the Hon. Mr. Laurier on his tour through the Province of Ontario; Conservatives will be quite as eager to attend his meetings and pay him respect as are his own followers. There are few indeed in the party, we imagine, who are not ready to ac-knowledge his splendid abilities, his personal charm, and the devotion with which he serves his country. Conservative journalists amuse themselves by saying smart and cynical things about him and his speeches, but they know as well as we do that his presence tends to raise the tone of the national Parliament, and that Canadian political life is the better and higher for his strong influence. His speech at Morisburg was wonderfully clever. It was too partizan, and sometimes too severe. But no one can deny its value to his party. He maintains that he has taken a clear, de-finite and consistent stand on the school question, and that he adheres to his position: An investigation should be made as to the facts of the case; he will support the Dominion Government if it should appoint a commis-sion. Beyond that he will not go. The Conservatives will not succeed drawing him from the lines of Torres

THE PROHIBITION CASE. "If the judges of the Judicial Committee," Sir Oliver Mowat said to a pressman, on his return this week from Great Britain, "were to take the same view as that expressed by the judges in the appeal in the Scott Act, I think it follows that the Provinces have no jurisdiction in the matter of prohibition, because they then practically held that the Dominion act was valid, on the ground that the Provinces had no jurisdiction to pass such a law." "If," Sir Oliver went on, "the Provinces have no jurisdiction to pass a law giving local prohibition, they would have no power to pass a law giving absolute prohibition." "How-ever," he continued, "the Judicial Committee is differently constituted from the committee which sat in the Scott Act case, and it seemed from the observations of some of the judges that their inclination was the other way." Sir Oliver pointed out that the Judicial Committee is a large body, and that some judges sat on each case who did not sit on the other, while lapse of time would also effect changes in the mend long-neglected breaks, but to personnel of the court. Possibly, he intimated, the committee might, without saying that the former judgment was wrong, find grounds for saying twentieth century civilization can be that the Provinces have jurisdiction enjoyed more thoroughly than in any colossal aggregation of "slums, noise days, Sir Oliver added, watching the Civilization has been shocked by the treatment of the Armenian Christians by the Turkish Mussulmen, and Great Britain even goes the length of threatening to go to war to compel the Sultan to reform the methods of his subordinates in Armenia. But what do civilized rulers say of the atrocities which the London Times correspondent says were committed, in the name of war, by the French armies in the land of Madagascar?

ATROCITIES IN WARFARE.

The cruelties inflicted upon the native population are alleged to have been so revolting as to defy description. Soldiers, supposed to belong to a Christian power, lost all control of themselves, and inflicted the most horrible of assaults upon unoffending women and children.

The war spirit, which such men as the Emperor of Germany seem, to regard as the prime necessity to national development, brutalizes men, and makes them lose all control of themselves. For years the island of Madagascar has been steadily improving in civilization. The Queen and leaders embraced the Christian religion, and endeavored to get the people to live it. But France coveted the land, and 'war was declared against it, with the assured result that it would fall into French hands.

To carry warfare into the homes of unoffending people was bad enough, without letting loose passion and rapine of the most atrocious nature. How can the nations hope to civilize the dark places of the earth, or to secure general recognition of the Gospel of Peace, which they profess to accept, when they introduce themselves to the heathen by means so utterly foreign to the teaching of the Great Exemplar?

War and the spirit of war are the chief hindrances to the promotion of the welfare of the race, that exist to-

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 15.—Sensational developments continue as the result of the investigation of the affairs of the city attorney's office. The auditors have already figured out a shortage of $100,000, and it is said that before the investigation is closed it will be shown that the city is loser of at least $500,000 or more. The investigating committee proposes criminal proceedings against the city attorney and his assistant, and at tonight's meeting the offices will probably be declared vacant. The accused officials have refused to give up the check and stub books, but in the event of arrest they will be seized.

Otis Skinner and company appeared at the Grand last night before an audience that was small but warmly appreciative. Mr. Skinner is no stranger in London, and his admirers have noted with pleasure his growing powers, which have now made him one of the brightest of American stars in the legitimate. His new play, "Villon, the Vagabond," the work of his brother Charles, is a decidedly clever romantic drama, replete with the picturesque effects of the time of Charles VII. of France, which are admirably portrayed. The plot is ingenious and its action affords many striking scenes and sensational climaxes. The text, too, is the product of a scholarly mind. Mr. Skinner, as the vagrant poet, had ample scope for individuality, and gave a finished performance full of sustained strength and vitality. He was given perfect support by an unusually large comof the higher courts of the province

Plaids ---Popular

New and pretty plaids are much in evidence upon fashionable ladies this season. They are all the go. You would have thought so had you seen the large number of sales over our counters on Saturday. Every other customer asked for Plaid, it seemed, and they got it, as we have a grand asssortment. Those who admire them and want to be in style have ample scope for choice from our magnificent stock. Our plaids show much combination of green, with black and blue, or red, with black, the union of colors which fashion just now particularly effects. Our east window contains a number of specimen pieces. We invite particular attention to a line that is a rare bargain at 20c a yard. It's a beauty at that price, and no mistake. The lot contains a complete variety of patterns, including the famous Fortysecond Tartans. We have a finer make at 25c, and a still choicer lot at 35c. These are close prices, but we secured such a large quantity at such reasonable prices that we don't require to ask the usual price.

Everybody · Scotch

If all the ladies in London now wearing the colors of the different clans were really of Scotch descent London would be full of Celts. Everybody wants plaid. Everybody can get it from us. Perhaps we have sold more than any other dealer. And no wonder-we have the quality and patterns at the right price. An extra fine line with silk checks at 50c, a superb lot of mixed plaids at 6oc. Montreal, Oct. 15 .- A special cable from London says, regarding Grand Trunk changes: "The Grand Trunk Trunk changes: Board of Directors held a meeting yesterday, and I learn officially that Mr. Seargeant has retired from his position as general manager of the Grand Trunk. He is succeeded Chas. M. Hays, now vice-president and general manager of the Wabash Railway. Mr. Seargeant will, I learn, be proposed by the board for a seat on the Grand Trunk board in London. Mr. Seargeant will take his seat at the board as the directorate's Canadian adviser, at his present salary. and Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson will probably then outline his policy. The Tyler party is not yet wiped out, and a vigorous criticism of the new programme may be expected. Your correspondent learns on the best of authority that the statement is utterly untrue that the Duke of Marlborough, now in the United States, is about to join the Grand Trunk Railway The elaborate statements Board. published that the Vanderbilts will thereby get a grip on the Grand Trunk and throw off their Canadian Pacific alliance falls therefore to the ground. tend a funeral. The Chippewa Fair is over, and it was a comparative failure. The entries were few, the attendance small, and the band contest a failure. The Oneida Fair is also over. Unfortunately bad weather prevented a large attendance, though there were many entries, and the exhibits were first-class. Now the Muncey Fair is coming, on Oct. 16 and 17. Already the secretary, S. John, is crowded with entries, giving prospect of a larger number of exhibits this year than ever. The speed entries close Oct. 16, 10 a.m. No running horses, only trotting, and a special for white people for carriage teams.

PARKHILL "Advertiser" Business Agent, Thomas Grundy.)

Parkhill, Oct. 14.—The services in the Presbyterian Church yesterday were unusually interesting. In the morning the pulpit was occupied by the Rev. Alfred Fowler, B.A. In the evening the pastor discoursed to a large audience on the frailty of life. The church was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, which were freery used in illustrating the subject. Special collections were made yesterday in St. James' Episcopal Church by request of the Bishop of Huron on behalf of the Diocese of Algoma.

Parkhill rejoices in a paid fire brigade. Hence no fire hereabouts ever amounts to anything. A pumpkin that would have taken the prize at the recent fair, got left. After a fruitless effort on the part of two men to get it into a wagon, they decided to leave it at home.

Centralia, Oct. 15.-The anniversary

We are glad to inform our readers that the Citizens' Gas Control Company -whose saving gas regulators are so extensively and successfully used in Montreal, Toronto and Hamilton-has now located in London. Some prominent business men have organized a com-pany for London and Western Ontario, and are prepared to equip residences, churches, public buildings, hotels, stores, factories, etc., with their governors. The machine is attached to the meter and controls and regulates the entire building, preventing all waste of gas, and giving a clear, steady light. It is rented by gas consumers at a reasonable rate, and applied at the company's expense, so there is in reality no expense for the user, as the rent is only a part of the saving, and while the governor is in use the company take care of all burners connected with it free of charge. The company has placed an experimental plant in Mann & Co.'s bicycle store, 189 Dundas street, where Mr. J. C. Jorginson, who for a number of years has handled the machine in the United States and Canada, will be glad to show and explain the working of the governor to anyone. Many have seen and examined it, and from the perfect automatic way in which the gas pressure is regulated, have been convinced that the Citizens' Gas Control Company are fully justified in their claim of having the best automatic gas regulator in ex-

On 'Change. Special to C. E. Turner, broker, Masonic Temple, from Walker & Co. Chicago, Oct. 15.-Wheat showed more strength today than yesterday, news being in its favor; high cables, big clearances, not over big receipts at north. The trade has been confined somewhat to local parties, but seaboard has bought some. Former has favored short side; crowd are inclined to fight shy of any buying orders nowadays, as they run quickly on any signs. The market is in a peculiar l position; would not be surprised to see it break away before long. Corn very strong. Receipts show a decided falling off. Provisions strong early in face of big receipt of hogs. They are mostly pis and are rushed to market to avoid cholera. Later prices broke on pounding by scalpers.

CHOLERA. Washington, Oct. 15 .- Reports to the United States supervising surgeongeneral of the Marine Hospital service indicate that during the present epidemic of cholera in Japan there have been 42,706 case and 28,513 deaths. These reports agree in saying that the disease was unusually virulent this year, in certain districts almost all the cases proving fatal. It is be-lieved that the epidemic has reached its climax and is now declining.

Of the King Meet in Convention in Cronyn Hall.

The Fourth Annual Meeting of Ontario Workers.

The Delegates-Provincial Secretary's Report-Steady Growth of the Order

The fourth annual convention of the Kings Daughters and Sons for Ontario, was opened in Bishop Cronyn Hall at 9:30 o'clock this morning, with about 150 delegates present. They came from Port Arthur on the west, to Ottawa on the east, and represented a majority of the branches in the province.

The wearers of the little silver cross have been in existence only a few years, but the growth of the organization throughout the world, is almost without parallel in the history of simi'ar foundations. At the present time it has a membership of more than 400,000 women and has branches in South America, Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Greece, Switzerland, Denmark, Turkey, India, China, Japan, Australia, United States, Canada, New Zealand, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Bermudas and Bahamas.

Barely nine years ago, in January, 1886, a band of ten women in New York city first called themselves by the name which has since been translated into a hundred or more languages. The name of King's Daughter was suggested by the late Mas. Theodore Irving. That title, with the motto and watchword, "In His name," and the motto, "Look up and not down, Look forward and not back, Look out and not in, Lend a hand," together with a little Maltese cross for a badge, were adopted by the new sisterhood. Mrs. Margaret Bottome was chosen for the first president and has continued in that office. Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, now general secretary, was appointed at the same time. The order has done great service to humanity, but as one of its rules is "to perform all services as silently as possible; not to talk about them unless it is necessary in order to stimulate others to do likewise; to forget the good done as quickly as possible, and move forward to the next opportunity, it is by no means easy to enumerate its achievements.

Among the poor, the sick, those who languish in hospitals and prisons, those invalids who are also prisoners even in their own homes, little children, and the aged, the silver cross is recognized as an emblem of sweetness and light, of help and comfort, and loving kindness.

THE CONVENTION OPENED. The convention this morning was opened by the Bishop of Huron, with a very thoughtful Bible reading on "The Work of the Holy Spirit," from the words found in II. Corinthians, i, 20. gomery, Brantford.

It was followed by the address of Wiss Margaret Brown, city, is actwelcome by Mrs. Tilley, of this city, ing as recording secretary in the abwho expressed the greatest pleasure in extending to the delegates the warmest wishes of the local workers. Mrs. Lucy M. Coad, president of the Toronto city union, replied, on behalf of the visitors, and stated that those who had attended the last convention in London could never forget the kindness and unbounded hospitality of the

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY'S RE-

PORT.
Owing to the Dominion convention owing to the Dominion convention having been held last year, no report on the Ontario work had been presented for two years. The provincial secretary reported that during that time the progress of the work had been steady. A form of the work have deepend out but he work have deepend out but he work had been steady. few circles have dropped out, but the number of new circles formed was 57, and the new members 1,200. The total membership on books was nearly 4,000 and the circles numbered 167. It was impossible to state the exact member. ship; some circles do not report at all some do not give their increase in members, and others forget to state when members leave the order. New circles were formed in Princeton, Cataraqui, Port Arthur (2), Pont Dalhousie, Bervie, St. Catharines, Goderich, Thamesford, Wallaceburg, Welland (2),

Several had dropped out, but the steady advance of the work had necessitated the appointment of secretaries in many counties. For the county of Middlesex, Miss

Styles, of London West, reported 14 circles, 12 of which were in the city, with a membership of 406. The other two circles were at Glencoe and Strathroy, the former with a membership of 69, and the latter with a membership of 10. Every circle had a prosperous year and had plenty of opportunities to do good

SPADES. Warren caught his adversary's spade about midway of the handle with the blade of his own, and holding the edge of his blade against the shank of the other, with a deft and powerful movement tried to wrench it from Golding's hands, somewhat as a swordsman might try to disarm his antagonist. Golding hung on like grim death, and carried along partly by the force of his own attack and more by the added impetus of Warren's parry, he hopped around in a semi-circle, the spades remaining interlocked, before he recovered his balance and drew away his crude weapon. Each man had dropped his rake as a fragile and useless encumbrance. It did not occur to either of them in the heat of the moment that they were fighting a most singular battle. To them the peaceful implements of agriculture were as broadswords, and each saw in the other a foe as hateful and determined as ever he had faced in genuine war. Golding had attacked on the impulse of his terrible pas-sion, and Warren was stirred by it, not only to self-defense, but to all the fury of aggressive combat.

Golding made a feint with his spade as if he would catch his enemy in the abdomen, and as he saw from Warren's eyes that such a blow would be parried, he instantly changed his maneuver and thrust straight for Warren's face. The Granite farmer, however, was as keen in reading his adversary's intentions in his eyes, and up he brought his spade, catching and raising it so that Golding's blade fanned his face but did not touch it. At the same instant, Golding being momentarily unguarded, Warren thrust forward with both hand upon the handle of his spade and landed it with great force upon Golding's chest. Golding gasped violently and stag-gered back. Warren, had he been followed his ad nger, might vantage and laid out his enemy with a single swinging blow, but although he was not an old man, years of farm work had stiffened his muscles, and before he could accomplish this movement Golding had recovered and was at him again.

The vigor with which he had begun the combat and the skill and strength with which Warren had resisted, made both men wary, and for a moment they faced each other, feinting and watching. The edges of their spade clicked and ting-tanged as they sparred for openings, and when Goldig thought he saw one he bore hard down upon Warren's spade and tried again to thrust toward his face.

Again Warren parried the thrust, and again the spades hung together for a second while each tried to disarm the other. Then they broke away and each retreated a pace, for each had come to have a high respect for the other's power, and the exertion had so far cooled their passions that were inclined to combine caution unintended truce each man saw the blind folly of their fight.

With his eyes still on Warren and every nerve prepared for further conif necessary, Golding slowly lowered his spade. He leaned upon it, breathing heavily, while Warren remained standing with his spade half raised, his attitude one of defense. "Haven't we had about enough of this?" asked Golding.

"Speak for yourself," retorted War-"You haven't made me holler." For an instant it seemed as if Golding would be provoked by this taunt into renewing hostilities. His fingers clutched his spade handle convulsively and his brows contracted ominous-Better sense prevailed, however, and he responded:

"I'm not hollering myself. If you want more fight you can have it."
"I didn't begin it," said Warren, by way of acknowledging that he didn't care to continue. "You fight like a soldier," remarked Golding.

'I am a soldier," returned Warren, "I fought all through the proudly.

"I might have known it by the way you handled your spade. 'Tisn't quite like bayonet exercise, though, is it?" and Golding grinned, as if he saw something ludierous in the scrimmage that had just taken place. "You're a soldier, too," said Warren, lowering his spade at last. Yes: I fought through the warthat is, the most of it. I got knocked out early in the Wilderness."

"I was in the Wilderness from start to finish." 'You were! Wonder if 'twas your shot that did for me?" Warren looked a little puzzled.

"I was in the Union army," he said, "and for a long time my closest comrade was Freeman Dutton."
"Great Scott!" exclaimed Golding, slowly, and he gazed at his adversary with new interest. "I was on the other side, and it was my bayonet had the hand-to-hand tussle with, in which he got the worst of it?"

"I was that same."

There was a moment of silence. "We drove you back after that," said Warren presently, "and in the lull that followed I hunted up my comrade. He appeared to be dying. Before he could be removed you fellows were at us again, and we left Dutton in your lines that night. I supposed he was dead. He was so reported, and-"What else?" interposed Golding, eagerly, as Warren paused. "I never saw or heard of him again until last night."

"I felt proud of my success with him," said Golding, after another pause, "and when we had recovered the ground you had taken from us I hunted for him." "You wanted to make sure and finish him, I suppose?" "No, sir; I'm not that kind of a sol-No, I did go to see if I had finished him, and when I found him still alive I did everything that one soldier could do to help him. I gave him the last drop from my canteen, I got the surgeon, who was a personal friend of mine, to attend to him early. He got just as good care as any one of our men, and when next day I got a shot in the leg, I was taken to the cot next to his in the hospital. The war was over when we recovered. We became friends and partners till-It was Golding's turn to pause and Warren's to ask eagerly: "What else?" "Till some little time ago in Africa, I was going to say, but he and I are partners still, Mr. Warren, partners now, and I intend to keep an eye to his interest, and revenge his death if he dies here."

Had it not been for circumstances but partially understood by either of these men, the deadly feud upon which they had entered might have come to an end right there and then in this interchange of experiences. The old-time enmities of war had nothing whatever to do with their present feelings-on the contrary, the memories of former conflicts had tended promptly to cool their passions and bring them closely together. The soldier of the South, partner of the soldier of the North might easily have become the friend of this other northerner, respecting his courage, admiring his strength, and finding everything pleasing in his character; but there were the diamonds, and there were other things of mysterious import that kept them apart.

From the moment when Warren had mentioned Dutton's name, Golding had studied his face and racked his brain for some memory that eluded him. He had suspected almost from the time when he discovered that Dutton had suffered foul play, that Warren was the guilty man, led thereto in the first instance by the remark Warren had let fall when his carried the unconscious man wife from the burning cabin. The cloud upon his suspicions had been the extreme improbability that Warren knew about Dutton's diamonds. All attempts to extort from Warren an admission that he knew of them had and another motive for hostility between the two he could not even guess.

Suddenly there flashed upon his memory the scene that had eluded him, and then, though there were still points of doubt, details that he could | recognize a diamond where others not understand as yet, he was positive av, he knew -that Nic holas Warren had attempted the life of Freeman As much seems to be accomplished in a dream of a second's duration, so the memory sets forth in a single impression what it may have taken hours of action and conversation to effect in the first in-

Golding saw a lonely camp in the wilds of Mashonaland, wherein a Union and a Confederate soldier lay battling with the silent enemy, fever. It was a case of sick caring for the sick. There was no other white man, for aught they knew, within hundreds of miles. These two who had fought one another upon the field of battle, each summoning death as his ally, now faced the grim destroyer with fortunes and hopes bound together. He had no terrors for them but in his presence with his damp breath upon their hot brows, words were spoken that might have remained unuttered had further life seemed possible. Nature prevailed, and in due time death withdrew, relinquishing for a with attack. And in that instant of period the claim he held upon these two soldiers. The confidences of that solemn hour when dissolution seemed imminent, were never referred to by either. They had been life secrets, and while life endured so should the secrets.

It was in this spirit that Golding had dismissed the story told to him in half delirium by his partner, Freeman Dutton. In his own fever the details had not made an over clear impression, and now after a lapse of years he strove almost in vain to recall them. In spite, however, of the haze through which he saw again that scene in the African wilderness; in spit of the confusion in which Dutton's words came back to him, he felt that he had retained the salient features of the narration. There was enough of it, provided he could establish certain identities and recall names, to account for any hostility, however violent, that Nicholas Warren might manifest toward Freeman Dutton. It had occurred to Golding, while the heat of his combat with Warren was passing, that he might make an ally of this brave and stubborn adversary, for he had not then seen that other motives than greed might account for the attempt to put Dutton out of the way. Now it was clear that they must remain enemies, for Warren was not to be trusted. This was Golding's reasoning, and though he spoke emphatically of his purpose to revenge Dutton's death, should it occur here, that was by no means his ultimate purpose or his chief incentive. In truth, revenge, if that really eninto Golding's calculations, would be directed rather against Dutton himself than against his wouldbe slayer. For the present Golding was debating how best to take advantage of the situation with a view of getting possession of Dutton's diamonds.

Warren had made no response Golding's last speech. He had picked up his rake, and was wondering who could have searched the ashes. was certain that Golding had not.

That Is the Position in Which the Combines Have the Adminstration at Ottawa_

The Ottawa correspondent of Hardware and Metal (a non-party monthly) has this to say on the appointment of an interested valuator for scythes, a case which attracted considerable attention a short time ago: "When the trouble arose on the over valuation of scythes, and the question was being agitated in Hardware and Metal the department insisted that Mr. Douglass should swear that he believed the prices, as prepared by Merchant Tailor,
Over Priddis Bros., upstairs. Entrance hrough store.

Mr. Hawthorne, of the Welland Vale Manufacturing Company, were correct. Mr. Douglass refused, and said that the inquiries he made satisfied him that the valuations in the list sent out by the department were very much higher than the actual values. The department, therefore, after a long fight, and after using every effort to induce him to swear to their valuations, had to back down. It is said that had Mr. Douglass become a party to these over valuations the department would have allowed the case to go into court. * * * I am not aware that your readers ever understood the real pull Mr. Hawthorne had with the Customs Department. Per. sonally he semes to be a friend and chum of Mr. Wallace. The real power was Mr. Chaplin himself. I was told by a man in the inner circle that Mr. Chaplin told the Government that unless they placed his valuations on imperted scythes he would make all his employes—and they numbered 300 or 400—distributed among five factories vote against the Government. They knew he meant it, and Mr. Wallace was told he must fix up things to suit him. Having failed in this, I am told he has been promised a higher tariff when Parliament meets."

He fell among jovial companions and lent one $75 to pay a bill a few doors away. The borrower never came back and Wilson informed the police.

WORKMEN ENTERTAINED. The other evening the trustees of the Dundas Center Methodist Church entertained the contractors and their employes to an oyster supper at Bradford's. Mr. Bowman, chairman of the building committee, occupied the chair. After supper, the chairman called the meeting to order by speech, eulogizing the contractors for their work, and encouraging the workmen for their faithfulness at the work, and good behavior, showing that workmen can exalt their calling by being gentlemen, as they had shown themselves to be ever since the work commenced. Examples of successful mechanics whose names will continue to live in history were cited, as an en-couragement. Mr. Bowman closed his remarks by a splendid peroration on our Queen and country. The following contractors spoke briefly of good feeling existing between the building committee and contractors: Mr. Robertson, jr., on behalf of the mason and stone work; Mr. Coxhead, jr., on behalf of the carpenters; Mr. Whittaker, jr., for the roofers; Mr. Morgan, on behalf of the painters; Mr. Goold, on behalf of the plasterers. Mr. Thos. Darwent, foreman of the masons, spoke in behalf of the employes. Messrs. Nelson, Whittaker and Jessie Cook sang in splendid style various songs suited to the occasion. Mr. C. J. Beal, secretary of the trustee board, spoke on behalf of the trustees, and a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the esteemed pastor (Mr. Lancely), announcing that he was not a mason or carpenter, but a joiner and was ready to join any person needing his services. After singing "God Save the Queen," the meeting was brought to a close by the pronouncing of the benediction. ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LON-DON HUNT.

COLDS, AND WHAT TO DO WITH THEM.

It would be well if we could begin by changing the name. There are truths that die, and lies that live, just on the strength of an undeserved name. The fact is that colds, socalled, are all poisonings, but are brought on in quite different ways. The nerves of the skin are shocked, and its excretory functions are arcauses the inflammation or "cold."
Very commonly, the skin has been put into an over-sensitive and inactive condition already by overheated rooms, over-dressing, neglect of bathing, or bad air and then an exposure too slight to be recognized as such at the time, does the rest. With many persons a "cold" comes on when they get digestion out or order, in certain ways. Here the acrid fluids, produced tion, are themselves the poison which throws the mucous membrane of nose or throat into inflammation. Finally, many colds, and especially that form accompanied by fever sores on the lips, are due to infection. Cold air, if pure, does the most of anything to limit the inflammation and check the growth of germs on the inflamed tis-sues. A Turkish bath, or other sweat bath, often helps immensely, by re-storing skin action. The diet should be simple; any indigestible or heating food rapidly makes matters worse. Some do better on a limited allowance of food, even on fasting; others need a generous diet—though plain. Doses of oil, cod-liver oil, skunk's oil, goose-grease, and many other sorts, have been found to help certain per-sons when suffering from colds, but not all. It is probably a question of digesting them or not. But whatever further medication one may elect, do not let it divert attention from the one greatest remedy, could pure air.
