An Ancient Grudge

"The Austrians," said Mr. Kinsale to The Record, "have suffered too long from the intrigues of their Servian neighbors. The trouble began tained heavy losses. with the assassination of King Alexander in 1903. Peter, who was the instigator of the crime, was then called to the throne, but no European nation would at first recognize him, and he called himself 'Kralj Jugoslavanski, (King of the Southern Slavs), meaning thereby that he was not only King of the Servia Slavs but sovereign of those who were settled in Southern Austria. Austro-Hungary protested against this title and the new king explained that was merely figurative.

A Conspiracy

"In conspiracy formed among the students, lawyers, and other prominent residents of Servia, King Peter aimed to detach from the Austro-Hungarian empire the whole of the southern region, including Croatia, Slavonica, Dalmatia, Istria, Kraine Cornithia, Southern Styria, and last but not least, Bosina, Herzegovina and Montenegro. A conspiracy was discovered in 1906 by Austrian customs on the Montenegrin frontier, wherein the Servian king intended to gunboats dismantled at Hankow yesblow up the Prince of Montenegro terday are to be taken on board the and extirpate the whole reigning battleship Triumph, which hitherto family and then proclaim himself has been manned by only one nucleus Prince of Montenegro and thus take crew. another step to complete his title of ed through diplomatic influences.

Fooled Them. Flynn, a quiet and engaging man outwardly, had thrown the asylum authorities off their guard by his docile demeanor, and, with other patients, was employed in an outhouse cutting stencils. Without warning Flynn rushed on a warder, and wrenched a cutting knife from his grasp. With this he stabbed the warder in th neck, and severely wounded a fellowpatient who intervened. Other attendants came running up, but Flynn burst through them, dashed through the grounds and headed for the city. Striking a line parallel with the river, he got on to the quays, and, with a crowd now in hot pursuit ran the whole length of the wharfage. Then ne rushed for the underway of Carlisle bridge, which connects Derry City and Waterside. to her the risk she ran in marrying much surprised and disheartened to a man she knew so little about, who learn that it would be difficult to had no family connections and whose prove that he was not the man he childhood he had failed to account was supposed to be. True, if he were for. She dreaded lest they would now the criminal, MacKnight must be acrefuse to permit the wedding to come counted for. But might not Mac-Knight be both himself and the crim-

Leona had an interview with her distressed to talk about the future, interview feeling that no matter what but she surely would not go back on verdict a jury might give with respect father would believe him guilty.

Such was the situation of this ding day that had been set, with all the attendant expected happiness. But three days intervened before the intended nuptials. A compromise had been effected between Leona and her parents that the invitations should be recalled the next day. The lovers went for a final conference with the lawyer. He advised his client to jump his bail, go to a foreign country under an assumed name and begin life

MacKnight, heartsick over the affair, dreading a trial and his inability to account for his past child hood, decided to act on this advice. It therefore remained with Leona whether she would share his fate or endure a lifelong separation from the man she loved. It was a question which suffered the more, MacKnight or the girl, whose life would be wrecked if she stood by him and would be blighted if she gave him up. A few hours of deliberation were sufficient for a decision. She agreed to marry her lover secretly and to go into oblivion with him.

MacKnight was leaving her home after receiving this decision when he met a man coming up the steps. The comer said he was looking for one Arthur MacKnight. "I am Arthur MacKnight." "I desire to confer with you." The two went back into the house, and the man said:

"I am John Eldredge, of Barker, Smith & Eldridge, attorneys, of your city. A few years ago a matter concerning you was left with us, you not to be informed of it till you came to be twenty-five years old. But this charge against you which we have seen printed in the newspapers has seemed to warrant our communicating with you earlier. You were born in wedlock, but your father and mother are dead. Circumstances stood in the way of your mother a: knowledging you. Shortly before she gied she left a will in our care leaving you her property, you to be paid a part on reaching the age of twentyfive and the rest at thirty. If you need money for your defence of this charge against you I think we can enable you to borrow on your prospects."

Leona, who had heard her lover return to the house, at this juncture entered the room, curious to know what brought him back. MacKnight sprang toward her, folded her in his arms and covered her with kisses. "The tide has turned." he cried. "All will come out as we wish. This gentleman has solved the mystery of my childhood." It appeared that MacKnight was the son of persons of refinement and that he was heir to an estate of some $50,000. The mystery of his birth having been solved, Mr. Denton's suspicions were allayed, and he sympathized sincerely with the young couple. Considerable mony was spent, on detectives for the purpose of hunting down the real criminal, and he was found before the date fixed for

After his marriage MacKnight took pains to hunt up more minute information of his parents and the reasons why he had been abandoned. All he could learn was that there was a secret marriage, with circumstances that prevented his acknowledgement till those nearest of kin to him were dead. His inheritance came from his mother, who lived under her maiden

OUR POINT OF VIEW

WAIT AND SEE.

THE Editor of the Twillingate Sun seems to be much exercised these days about current yarns! In the last issue of his paper he gives 'rumors' of 'combinations,' 'amalgamations,' 'confederation,' and other things too numerous to mention for 'what they are worth.'

Our advice to the editor of the Sun is to apply to the nearest Union members when in doubt as to the correct ness of current rumors concerning political matters. The President keeps all the Councils posted and they can hand on this information to our northern journalist--if, by any improbabili ty, they will. Meanwhile, to console the editor of the Sun during his period of anxious waiting and troubled conjecture about Coaker's doing let us advise to "live and learn."

KING GEORGE GREAT BRITAIN IS MEDIATING ON THE ALERT

Gets in Touch With Russia War Minister and His Coland Germany in an Effort to Avoid Involvement of All Europe in Hostilities

London, Aug. 1.-King George today gave his full support to the cause of peace. He sent an urgent message to the Czar of Russia and it is reported in diplomatic circles that the message was an appeal to stay his hand and avert the war catastrophe that threatens. As a member of the Triple Entente England may be able to wield an influence that will curb Russia, and at the eleventh hour prevent the terrific clash to which all the nations have been rushing for a week. Hastened Action

The news that Germany had sent an ultimatum to Russia and had de manded from France a statement of her position is believed to have been

he cause of King George's action. Premier Asquith dashed from his home to Buckingham Palace in an automobile at two o'clck this morn ng after receiving the latest reports from the Foreign Office. The King had not gone to bed and the Premier was immediately received in conference with the King.
