Abou Ben Adhem.

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace
And saw within the moonlight on his room,
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold,
Excusing those had made Ben Adhem hold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?"—The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made all of sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel—Alas spoke more low,
But cheerily still; and said, "I love thee best,
Write us as one who loves his fellow-men."
The angel wrote and vanished. The next night
It came again, with a great weakening light,
And showed the names whose love of God had Merged—
And, for Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

A Borrowed Watch.

"Borrowing" said the leather worker, "is a good thing not to do. It's bad enough to borrow money, but then you don't have to return the identical cash. When you become responsible, however, for some article that can't be duplicated, you're likely to find yourself in a bad box. I got my lesson at 16.

"I was clerking that fall for Jim Silbee, who sold about all the foot-wear used in my town. Jim was a Civil War veteran, and owned an old silver watch he thought of the world. Its value was just about what it would have brought for the melting pot, and every night at nine he had to push it forward to make up a minute or two that had forgotten somewhere during the day; but the back had a dent where it had stopped a bullet at Cold Harbor, and he would not have swapped it for the finest gold Swiss ever made.

"My principal amusement that December was patridge shooting. The birds were fairly plentiful in the woods along the bay two miles from town. One cold afternoon when business was slack, I asked my employer if I might go out between four and six after budbers. As every gunner knows, partridges bud in the winter between sundown and dark, flying into the poplars and yellow birches after the leader tips.

"Good hunting, Jim couldn't refuse. "Go ahead, Billy," he assented, "only be sure to get back by six, for I want to go out myself this evening."

"My watch was at the jeweller's for a new strap. Without a conscience of some sort I wouldn't know just when to start for town.

"I'll be sure to get your watch, Mr. Silbee," I asked.

"The minute the words slipped out I was sorry I'd spoken, for I remembered how much Jim thought of that old watch. He hesitated just long enough to make me feel uncomfortable. Then as if ashamed of his delay, he pulled it out quickly and pressed it into my hand. It had a rather job, with a regimental charm of oxidized silver on the end of it.

"Take good care of her won't you, Billy?" he enjoined me.

"Sure," I replied. "I'll bring you back a partridge for the loan of her."

"Away I hurried, at a half-run, Scamp, my brown spaniel, frisking ahead. I had my light, 12 gauge double-barrel shotgun, loaded with sixes. Half past four found me at a bend in the road, where I planned to strike into the woods. Jim's watch I put into the little outside pocket of my coat, with the tob hanging out, that would save unbuttoning my coat whenever I wanted to see what time it was.

"With Scamp beating the birches ahead, I picked my way very cautiously down toward the shore, looking and listening for birds. Perhaps I ought to say that there is a pair of partridges now in December, but that there was none at that time. Pretty soon I couldn't hear the surf at the foot of the steep bluff that lined the bay. It was slipping cold, not much more than ten above. The woods were full of ice.

"Suddenly Scamp began barking. Cocking my right barrel, I crept up. He was right under a yellow birch

Close to the Edge of the Bluff.

By exercising the greatest care, fighting for every inch and sticking to the surface like a fly, I managed to get half-way up; then I couldn't gain another millimeter. The rock before me was perfectly even, while its icy glare was smooth as window glass and ten times more slippery. Holding on by each hand in turn, I felt everywhere with the other to find some rough spot, but couldn't. And there were those marvellous spruce boughs only a yard above my head.

"For a long time I kept my precarious footing, leaning against the rigid old till it chilled me through and through. The spray from the rapidly rising tide froze on my clothing.

"That I could be so near death and yet not feel it, I didn't really think there'd be any great difficulty in finding it, but I saw I'd got to descend to the foot of the cliff, as if I had probably slid all the way down. Holding on to the boughs of the spruce, I looked over the edge, but couldn't see it.

"It was too steep to scramble down there. Laying Jim's partridge beside my gun, I looked about until, a heavy dead foot or so alongshore, I found a good place to descend. Soon I was at the edge of the water. I wasn't going home without that watch if I had to hunt all night.

"The spot I wished to search lay in the slight bend of the shore, and to reach it, one must go out round a point. The tide was rising, and a strong, head-on wind drove the waves bravely against the rocks and yellow weeds. I couldn't stop long if I wanted to get back round that point. Soon I was right under the spruce where the timber had slid over. At the crest of the cliff sparse twigs and sprays of hardhack and ground juniper projected through the glare of ice, which fell sharply to the rock wall at about half-tide mark. Reasoning that the watch must have fallen into the sea, I began reaching like a cat. It was a queer time of day, and my feelings made it doubly so for me. I was the watch was the frozen cliff, while only a few yards in white crests, whipped into spray by the chill wind, were foaming over the ledges. East and north a darkening sky overhung the bay, set with tentacles like ink smudges, and relieved only by two or three distant, scattered lights.

"The minute I ran my hands down through the weed and found that kind of rock lay under it I felt discouraged. It was split into deep fissures, up some of which the waves were already running. There were a half dozen places where the watch might be.

"One crevice was especially deep. After vainly pawing everything else, I felt sure that the timepiece had dropped into it, but it was so narrow I couldn't reach the bottom. I worked with all my might, for the tide was rising, and the waves were cutting off my retreat round the point.

"Every minute I became more worried about that watch. It wasn't because of its value. It could probably have been replaced for five dollars. But the associations round it could never be replaced. Had it been my own, I wouldn't have cared a hundredth part so much.

"At last, after a long period of groping, prodding and poking, every instant to feel the round silver ring, I gave up the search. The watch must have struck some projection of rock or ice and bounced to one side or the other. I hated to confess myself beaten, but it was now quite dark, and the spray was drenching me. I resolved to come down early in the morning, and if need be, hunt at low tide.

"Up to this time I hadn't scanned it very carefully, taking it for granted that, if I had to, I could somehow find a way up. Now I felt a little apprehensive. How late and icy it was! I'd simply got to climb it. The tide would soon drive me off the rockweed. So I started.

"The lower slope was covered with nodules and bosses of salt ice to a height of about ten feet, and didn't give me much difficulty. After this, however, the climbing became much harder. The rocks rose almost sheer and were veried with a coating of fresh ice, where water had trickled down over the cliff. At the top, about twenty feet above, the spruce swung down the low branches. Once I got my hand on those, I should be all right.

Prof. Edwin B. Frost, director of the Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., says: "Halley's comet, on which all eyes in the astronomical world are now centered, is about 1,000,000 times as big as the earth. Yet, although the earth's gravity may change the orbit of the comet, the earth's path through the sky will be unaffected by the approaching proximity of the two bodies."

Halley's Comet.

"What are these possible large perturbations?" Prof. Frost was asked. "That merely means," was the reply, "that on those dates the comet will be near enough the planets mentioned to be affected by their attraction."

"Will that affect their orbits?" "It won't affect the orbit of Venus or of the earth, but it is likely to affect the comet's orbit. That is one reason why we want to get meridian observations, which will show almost exactly these orbital changes."

"There will be an interesting spectacle, by the way, on May 1, when the comet is near to Venus. The planet and the comet will be practically the same distance from the earth and every one will be able to see their relative size."

"The comet's bulk exceeds that of Venus about 1,000,000 times. It is gaseous and its mass is comparatively slight. Therefore, its attraction will not affect the planets, while the heavy planets are likely to affect it a good deal. The earth and Venus are about the same size, so that the earth, too, is about one millionth of the size of the comet."

"All meteors are bits of solid matter supposed to be debris of comets—which travel around the comet's wakes," continued Prof. Frost. "They are not visible unless they come within 100 miles of the earth—that is, unless they come within the earth's atmosphere."

"The theory that a comet's tail is longer when it is nearest the sun is somewhat awry. Theoretically, it would be so, because it is the reaction from the sun's light which causes the emanations of streaming vapors that form the tail. But actual observation shows that when a comet is near the sun there are other changes in its composition which offset the greater force of this reaction of light. A comet's head, for instance, shrinks when near the sun instead of expanding."

Crushed Coffee—what is it?

By a new process of crushing between steel rollers, instead of grinding, the skin, which remains in the eye of the bean after roasting, is separated from the kernel and removed by air suction, while the kernel is broken into small even grains. These grains when steeped, being free of the skin or chaff, settle quickly, leaving the liquid clear and bright, and give the true coffee flavor.

Estabrooks' Red Rose Crushed Coffee is as easy to make as Red Rose Tea. Directions are in each tin.

It is strictly pure, not a particle of chicory or any other adulterant being used, and is packed in air-tight tins the same day it is roasted so to retain its full flavor, fragrance and strength.

A good combination is Estabrooks' Coffee for breakfast and Red Rose Tea for other meals.

Serious Kitchen Accident.

WHAT ZAM-BUK SAVED A LADY.

Mrs. Fredk. Bryant, of 169 Railway Ave., Stratford, spent dollars trying to get well, but failed until she tried Zam-Buk. It was this way: "I was in my kitchen preparing supper," she says, "when I upset some boiling water. It fell upon my foot, scalding it badly. Next day the skin came off the foot, and it was so painful I could not walk. I treated it, but instead of getting better it got worse, and finally I had to take to my bed. I was laid up for nine weeks, and in that time I tried all manner of so-called remedies. I had embrocations, dozens of salves, blisters, and lotions, but the scald developed into a running sore. I was about beaten by it, when a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk, and I did so. A few applications had the effect of soothing the pain and giving me what I had not had for weeks—a little ease. I persevered with Zam-Buk, and day by day the running sore seemed to get less inflamed and less painful, and reduced the inflammation. In a very short time healing commenced, and rapidly continued until the sore was completely healed. I would hardly have believed that any preparation could have done for me what Zam-Buk did, and I shall never be without a supply in the house." When you have a scald, a burn, a skin sore, an ulcer, or any skin trouble—a little try Zam-Buk. Made from the purest of herbal essences, it may be regarded as nature's own healer. Eczema, eczema, cracked and chapped hands, children's rashes, chilblains, all yield to its soothing, healing influence. It also cures the agony of piles. All druggists and stores, or cents box, or post free from Zam Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Useful Hints.

Before turning on a pugging, let it stand for three minutes to allow the steam to escape.

Castor oil becomes tasteless if beaten and thoroughly mixed with the white of an egg.

The best grade of bonax makes a good dentifrice and also purifies the mouth. It should be mixed with chalk.

If the oven does not brown, sprinkle a good handful of sugar on the bottom of the oven. It will then brown anything.

To keep tins bright, wash well with strong soda and water; then dry polish with a cloth and a little powdered whiting.

To destroy crickets or beetles, put some cucumber peel on the floor near the spots they frequent. This will soon destroy them.

Children's Colds Must be Cured

There will then be less weak lungs and consumption in later life.

Do you ever think of it in this way? It is the neglected cough and cold that leads to the dreadful lung diseases sooner or later. From repeated attacks the lungs are weakened and there comes pneumonia or consumption with their dreadfully fatal results.

Because it is prepared from linseed, turpentine and other simple but wonderfully effective ingredients, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is particularly suitable as a treatment for children's coughs and colds. Croup, bronchitis and even whooping cough yields to its influence in the earliest stages.

Mr. John Chesney, Lanark, Ont., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine cured my little girl of whooping cough when the doctor had given her up and more than we always keep it in the house as a treatment for coughs and colds. It is the best medicine I ever saw."

There is no getting round statements such as this. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cts. a bottle, at all dealers, or Edinboro, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Does Not Color Hair

Ayer's Hair Vigor, as now made from our new improved formula, does not stain or color the hair even to the slightest degree. Gray hair, white hair, blonde hair is not made a shade darker. But it certainly does stop falling hair. No question about that.

Ayer's

Indeed, we believe it will stop every case of falling hair unless there is some very unusual complication, something greatly affecting the general health. Then you should consult your physician. Also ask him about the new Ayer's Hair Vigor.

Quite a goodly number gathered and the pies sold readily for good prices. The sum realized was fourteen dollars and sixty-five cents, which is to be expended for a teacher's desk and some other furnishings for the school room.

PIANO AND ORGAN TUNING. Upon notice by post card or otherwise I will be pleased to go at any time to any address, to do work as above.

GEO. D. COMSTOCK, Hantsport.

Last Sunday being Temperance Sunday it was observed by the holding of a mass meeting of the different Sunday-schools in town in the Baptist church, under the direction of the W. C. T. U. Priscilla Ford, superintendent of the Baptist schools, presided, and an excellent program contributed to by members of the several schools was given. Rev. Mr. Webber gave a short but very earnest and practical address on the evils of the cigarette habit.

The annual banquet of the Junior Class of the College was held on Tuesday evening at the Royal Hotel, and was a successful and brilliant function. Through the efforts of the new proprietor of the Royal and his staff of assistants nothing was left undone to advance the interest and enjoyment of the occasion. The dining-room was most artistically decorated and presented a beautiful appearance, and the menu presented was most complete in all its details.

Horse Notes.

The sleighing being very fine just now, our best steppers are out whenever time permits.

Rosemont, 2.19 1/2, the great pacing beauty owned by Mr. George Wood, is probably the fastest sleigh horse in eastern Canada. He can step a half in one minute quite handy, and is a perfect actor.

Mr. "Ted" Bowles drives a two-year old chestnut pacer, by Border, 2.11 1/2, that is said to be promising by those who ought to know.

Mr. Harvey Collins and Avery Bowser have two bay pacing flyers upon the snow path these fine afternoons, evidently looking for someone with a chip on their shoulder.

A very wild stepper comes into town now and then of an evening. He is black as coal, 16 hands high, high headed, and a beauty. He is driven by some stranger, who has a lady with a big hat in evidence. The gentleman is evidently looking for Rosemont or his brave owner.

Mr. Arthur Forrest was in town on Wednesday last week with a beautiful Hackney hitched to a sporty sleigh. No one ever saw Arthur drive other than a high stepper of quality.

King's County Temperance Alliance.

It was the writer's privilege for the first time to attend a meeting of the above, held at Berwick, the 18th inst. With permission of THE ACADIAN he would like to give some impressions received on that occasion respecting the Alliance and its work.

ITS PERSONNEL. From this gathering the impression was given that all the professions are represented in the Alliance—physicians, teachers, publishers, merchants, clergymen and farmers, the latter being in the majority. It was not a company of weaklings but of strong men whose appearance suggested virility and a lofty purpose. It evidently was an organization to be reckoned with. They seemed to be men calculated to bring things to pass.

ITS OBJECT. Its name indicates its object. Its purpose, however, is not along lines adopted by the ordinary temperance society. It has rather a political complexion. This was apparent during the discussion of a communication from the Conservative Association of the county, asking what would be the position of the Alliance in case their party should place men in the field pledged to prohibition. Perhaps I do not have it just right, but the inquiry was somewhat after that fashion. The reply given was to this effect: The Alliance has already chosen its candidates and they have accepted. Of course this was to be couched in respectful language. This incident went to show that the organization is seeking to promote the temperance reform by selecting men to Parliament who will cast their votes for prohibition.

ITS INDEPENDENCY OF PARTY. Politics has come to have a bad name. There is an evil odor associated with it. It has been degraded through the conduct of unworthy men. The true politician is not a partisan. In this respect the Alliance holds the place of honor. Every man of them must place principle before self interest; temperance before party. We have all been treated with statements to the contrary of this. The writer was a careful listener during the discussions at the meeting to which reference has been made, and is prepared to give the most unqualified denial to certain statements which he has both seen and heard respecting the work proposed by the Alliance. It is as much Liberal as it is Tory. In fact it is neither. He draws his conclusion from what he heard. Before him one rises and speaks of his long devotion to the Liberal party; immediately another in the rear of the audience, tells of the earnest support he has given the Conservatives, and each declares that he has no confidence in either party in respect to its attitude towards prohibitive legislation, and to these sentiments others cheerfully responded. Indeed this is the attitude of all.

ITS OPTIMISM. The spirit of hopefulness was apparent. The instrument has no minor chords. These men believe that the cause for which they are enlisted cannot suffer defeat; that even reverse means final victory. This would be an incident in the course of the stream, that notwithstanding its eddies is always flowing onward towards its home in the sea; it would be only the opposing breeze that fills the sails, or feeds the fires to hasten the good ship towards its desired haven.

ITS CONVICTIONS. An observer could not but be impressed with the belief that the members of this organization have strong convictions respecting the righteousness of the cause they have espoused. Of course there may be differences of opinion on some things but in respect to the main thing they are a unit. Each man like the old Spartan is a 'brick,' but all are from the same mould. There is in the thought of each one object to achieve. Without reference to persons or parties, they are seeking the overthrow of the rum traffic by such legislation as shall remove from the State the complicity with what is blighting our social life, and ruining the bodies and souls of men. When this shall have been accomplished, the work of the Alliance, as such, may be no longer needed. The old parties may resume their proper spheres, but on a higher plane than is possible under present conditions.

PIANOFORTE RECITAL. The pianoforte recital by the advanced pupils of Acadia Seminary, under the direction of Prof. Kingwald, which took place in College Hall on Tuesday evening, was a very successful affair, in spite of the fact that the audience was considerably diminished by numerous other attractions in town. The following program was rendered in a manner which exhibited commendable ability on the part of March op. 40, No. 3.....F. Left Foot Amputated.

T. L. FITCH, AGED 79 YEARS, UNDERWENT A SERIOUS OPERATION.

Mr. T. L. Fitch, of Niagara Falls South, formerly of King's county, Nova Scotia, had his left foot amputated on Friday, Feb. 4, at the General Hospital, the operation being performed by Dr. Starr. Mr. Fitch, though 79 years of age, sat up in bed for several days and shaved himself.

Several relatives, several friends to his relatives and friends. About 25 years ago Mr. Fitch had the misfortune to cut his heel off with a mowing machine and the injured foot has given him more or less trouble since that time. At the time of the accident Mr. Fitch's eldest son Wilber and a hired man were working some distance away, and seeing something was the matter, ran to his assistance. When they reached him he was walking around looking for the heel which had been cut off. He was assisted on the stumpy rake and drawn to his home, a distance of three quarters of a mile. By the time the doctor arrived to dress the wound he had made all arrangements for the balance of the haying season. Mr. Fitch is getting along remarkably well, having left the hospital on Wednesday afternoon, and will leave for his home, Niagara Falls South, on Saturday, accompanied by his grandson, Harry M. Fitch, at present residing in Toronto. [The above is taken from THE NEWS, of Toronto. It refers to T. Harding Fitch, well known in this county, formerly of Lower Canada. He is uncle to C. S. Fitch, Esq., of this town.]

NEURINE. Mrs. Martin's condition as described in her letter below gives some idea of the extraordinary reconstructive power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Such cures as this have placed Dr. Chase's Nerve Food where it stands today as the best of all nerve and muscle restoratives.

Mrs. Edna Martin, Ayer's Cure, Que., writes: "Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor in a faint. I could not even sweep the floor without fainting and my nervous system seemed to be entirely exhausted."

"The use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has built up my system wonderfully so that I can do my household work without any trouble, and I want others to know about it." Insist on getting the genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cts. a box, 4 boxes for $2.00, at all dealers, or Ed. Manson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
