CHAPTER XLVI.

"Life is nothing but broken dreams. Ah, Lady Clanronald, those are happiest who live neither in the past nor in the future, neither in dreams nor in hopes, but in the present!"

Lady Clanronald did not wear her heart on her sleeve for such as he, and was certainly not to be caught by any claptrap sentiment. He might try to test her as he would, he could never sound the depths of her character. He might as well have tried to fathom the depth of the ocean with a six-foot line. She seemed to know instinctively that he was watching her, that he was endeavoring to discover the secret of her life, and she closed more proudly and resolutely the door of her heart against him.

"Have you solved your problem, Captain Egerton?" asked Lady Shafto that evening.

"No; I am further from the solution than ever. You might as well ask me if I could catch the shadows that fall and shift by moonlight on the lake."

Lady Shafto smiled. She had a far clearer perception of what manner of woman Diana was than this man of the world had.

"I have a faint idea," she said, "that it will be useless for you to make any further study in that direction."

"It is always allowable to study one's friends, and to discuss them," replied Egerton, in his careless easy manner. "Ever since I have been here I have sought to find out why a woman like her should have married my old friend."

"And you cannot?" she said.

"I cannot," he confessed.

"I also have failed," said Lady Shafto; "but I am certain of one thing and that is, she did not marry him for love."

"She did not want money, either; and I should say that she had a choice of titles. There must have been some particular reason for her selecting Clanronald."

"I wonder," said Lady Shafto, "why you take such an interest in the matter?"

"For my old friend's sake, to begin with," answered the captain, "and, to end with, for my own."

The doubtful smile on Lady Shafto's face annoyed him.

"You think it is time wasted?" he said.

"I do," she replied, significantly. "Lady Clanronald is not a woman who will ever condescend to flirt; she is far too proud and too stately."

"You may also add too cold," said the captain.

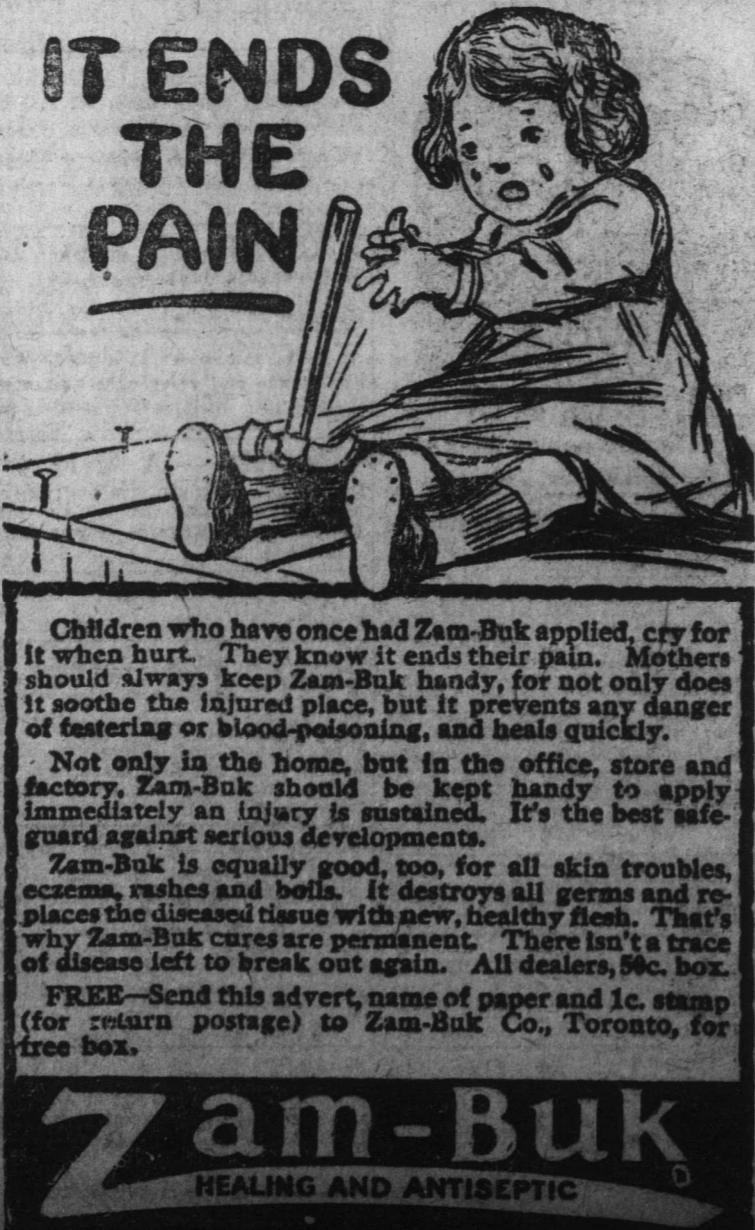

Lady Shafto smiled again.

"I like speaking in allegories," she said. "The sunflower opens its heart to the sun, not to the moon or the stars."

And Captain Basil Egerton had to unravel that riddle as best he could.

CHAPTER XLVII.

Who could tell the story of Diana's repentance and remorse? Who could describe her anguish, her shame, and her despair? Before the honeymoon had terminated, Diana, Lady Clanronald, admitted to herself that, so far as she knew the world of men, there was in it no character so despicable as that of the man she had married. She had made at the beginning some faint effort to check the display of his vices. If he said anything glaringly false, mean, or out of place in her presence, she rebuked him; but, as the rebuke led generally to a volley of bad language, she soon learned to pass by such things in perfect silence. When she came face to face with the deadly truth, and recognized the fact that she was to spend the remainder of her life with this man, that there was no escape, no reprieve, that her

IT ENDS THE PAIN

Children who have once had Zam-Buk applied, cry for it when hurt. They know it ends their pain. Mothers should always keep Zam-Buk handy, for not only does it soothe the injured place, but it prevents any danger of festering or blood-poisoning, and heals quickly.

Not only in the home, but in the office, store and factory, Zam-Buk should be kept handy to apply immediately an injury is sustained. It's the best safeguard against serious developments.

Zam-Buk is equally good, too, for all skin troubles, eczema, rashes and boils. It destroys all germs and replaces the diseased tissue with new, healthy flesh. That's why Zam-Buk cures are permanent. There isn't a trace of disease left to break out again. All dealers, 5c. box.

life, her interest, her duties must be one with his, she became reckless and was filled with despair; and the deepest pain was caused by the remembrance that the result had been brought about by herself, that the suffering she had intended for Lady Cameron had been visited with tenfold severity upon herself.

"I was at fault, and must bear it," she would say to herself, with despairing bitterness. "I have no one else to blame."

The passionate heart beat in futile rebellion; her whole nature jarred and was out of tune. There was nothing for it but submission. So the Diana of Furness died inch by inch, day by day—yet not without a struggle. Some women who find themselves unhappily married seek forgetfulness in restlessness, restlessness in restlessness, endeavor to win admiration, flattery, and distinction; while there are those who try to drown their misery in a course of dissipation, drawing down upon themselves shame and degradation beyond words, and by a wretched life preparing for a still more wretched death.

Diana tried various means of consolation, but found none. She was proud, defiant, and imperious; she refused openly to obey her husband's unreasonable demands. She showed unreservedly her contempt for his faults; she showed still more openly her want of love or even respect for him.

But Lord Clanronald overcame her opposition by mere brute force. He knew how she detested the idea of their disputes and quarrels being known to the household, and his method of retaliation was to shout at her loudly in the presence of her servants. Proud Diana could not endure that; anything rather than looks of sympathy and pity on faces that should wear nothing but respect! Her husband had been quick-witted enough to find out that, and it was one of what he called his "methods of managing her." Diana, who raised her head and looked at him defiantly when they were alone, proud Diana who would not have winced had he held a knife to her breast, shuddered and covered when a volley of bitter, horrible words was poured out in the presence of servants. It was a terrible humiliation.

So, day after day, the weariness of her life increased. It might have been so different, the days of "sunshine and roses" might still have been with her, and life made tenfold more joyous by the love of him she had banished forever. She had thrown away her happiness in order to be revenged on two women whom she disliked. Lady Cameron did not suffer much; Evadne had suffered more. But she herself had paid for her questionable triumph by the misery of her whole life.

When she reflected on the terrible mistake she had made, that she was bound to a man whom she could never esteem, like, or even respect, she felt stunned and helpless under the crushing weight of her own misery. She grew thin, pale, and languid; the robust health which had never failed her before could not withstand the constant and ever-increasing strain upon it.

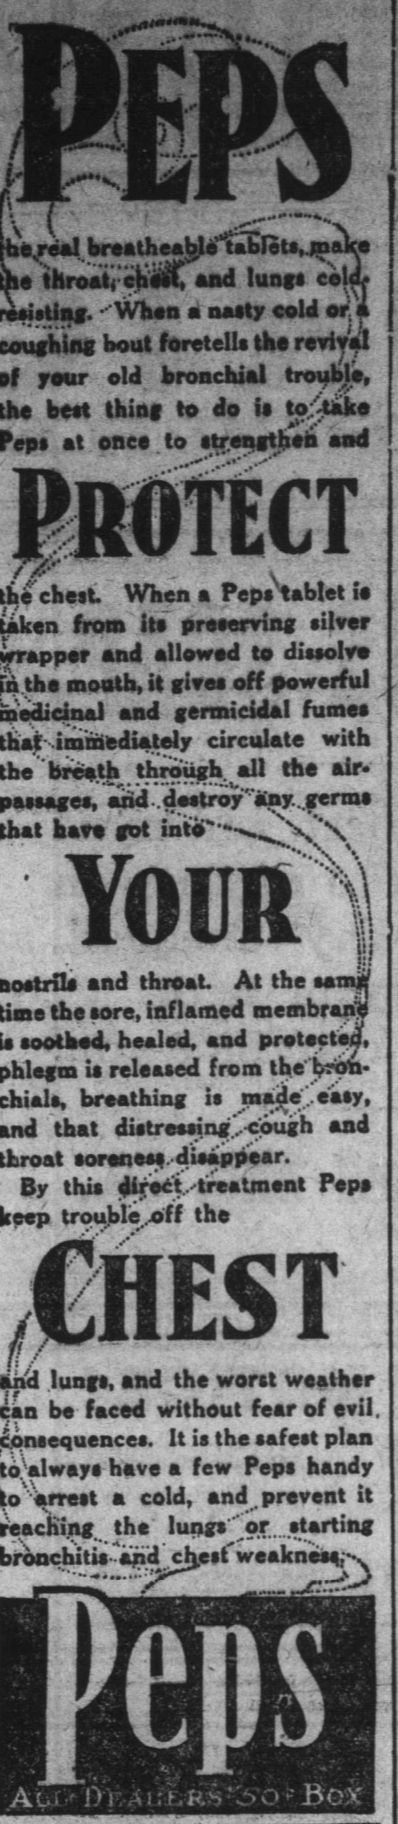

What could she do—on which side seek comfort or oblivion? She was too young to take life philosophically, too impetuous, too much in love with life, to be able to forego all happiness in it at once. She had not yet suffered enough to induce her to throw herself on the mercy and pity of Heaven.

When the honeymoon was ended and the visitors had dispersed, she longed for the forgetfulness that excitement brings. She thought that, if she could only occupy herself both night and day, she could deaden the pain that was wearing away her heart.

"I should like to go to Paris," she said to Lord Clanronald, when the end of June found them once more alone.

A terrible deadness had fallen over them, now that the last of the guests had departed. Summer sun and flowers, song of bird and rush of river, would never more gladden Diana. The eyes that looked over the landscape were wearied with weeping and dim with sorrow.

Lord Clanronald assented readily to his wife's proposition; and to Paris they went; and there the beautiful Lady Clanronald soon became the reigning beauty. Men were intoxicated with her loveliness; even women raved about it, and envied her. She was the most feted and popular woman in Paris. At first Lord Clanronald was proud of the admiration excited by his wife; he felt that the homage paid to her was in part paid to him; but after a time he became jealous of it.

"In a short time I shall have no name and no station of my own left," he said. "I shall be known only as Lady Clanronald's husband."

It had been arranged that they should remain in Paris until the London season began, and then they were to go to Lord Clanronald's town residence, Rinehill House, for the season.

The remainder of that year passed like a dream to Diana. Husband and wife were rarely together. His time was spent in drinking, in playing billiards, in any kind of amusement or dissipation that came in his way, hers in one round of gayety and pleasure. When they met, it was to disagree and exchange hard and bitter words.

"The fact is," Lord Clanronald would say, "you are so flattered by what these foolish Frenchmen say about your face that you want some one to speak a few rough truths to you."

"If that be the case, no one can speak such truth better than yourself," Diana would answer.

With his denser intelligence, he could not always follow Diana's scorn; but, with these angry feelings growing on either side, it was plain that the gulf between them widened day by day. As love brings love, so dislike creates dislike. A woman of inferior nature, of meaner soul, of a lower type of character, would have been much more suited to Lord Clanronald—would, in all probability, have made a better man of him.

ITALIAN ELECTION RESULTS.
ROME, Nov. 16. At a late hour to-night the different parties consider certain the election of 110 Ministerialists, 27 members of the Constitutional Opposition, 45 Socialists, 32 Catholics, 31 Nationalists, and 14 Republicans.

D'ANNUNZIO'S MISSION.
FIUME, Nov. 16. Gabrielle D'Annunzio has returned here this evening from his expedition to Zara, on the Dalmatian coast. D'Annunzio left the garrison at Zara commanded by an officer of his own staff with several hundred of his troops. It is announced that D'Annunzio will occupy all of Istria which is being considered by the Peace Conference, including sections Foreign Minister Tittoni proposed, shall comprise independent state.

SHANTUNG RESERVATIONS ADOPTED.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. The Shantung reservation was adopted by the Senate on Saturday without change by a vote of 63 to 41. After adopting all but two of the Committee's reservations to the Peace Treaty, the Senate adjourned until Monday. The remaining two reservations were unacted upon, but all throughout the day the committee's reservations had been accepted with substantial majorities.

AND GERMANY REJOICES.
LONDON, Nov. 17. It would be difficult to exaggerate the gravity of the international situation, said Lord Robert Cecil in the House of Commons to-day, while the Government's Russian policy was under debate. It was impossible to ignore either the serious news from the United States, he said, in referring to the actions of the Senate on the German peace treaty. He did not desire to express an opinion of the legitimacy of the Senate's action from the American point, he declared, but the reservations that had been provisionally accepted amounted almost to the repudiation of the Covenant, and the repudiation of the Covenant meant the repudiation of the Treaty. At the best, continued Lord Robert, nothing is to be expected but a long period of negotiations and the possibility of further rejection when the negotiations are concluded. We desire American co-operation; but if the United States decided not to share in this great international effort, we must go on, and the burden would be the greater upon us and the other nations.

UTTERLY IMPOSSIBLE.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. President Wilson will pocket the Peace Treaty if it contains the Lodge reservations, he told Senator Hitchcock at the White House to-day. "The President has read and considered the Lodge reservations," Senator Hitchcock said. "And he considers them a nullification of the Treaty and utterly impossible."

THE FRENCH ELECTION.
PARIS, Nov. 17. Complete returns from two hundred and six constituencies show that the Conservatives, Nationalists and Moderates received one hundred and ninety-one seats, and the Extremists fifteen seats, the Moderates gaining forty-six and the Extremists losing sixteen.

TROUBLE IN AUSTRIA.
BERNE, Nov. 17. A serious crisis appears imminent in Austria, according to advices received here. Political discontent and economic distress are arousing the people. The Vienna Government is reported unable to maintain its power, and the Republic is likely to fall to pieces, several groups declaring for union with Germany.

CAPTURE OF OMSK REASSERTED.
LONDON, Nov. 17. The capture of Omsk by Russian Soviet forces, unofficially denied in ad-through Scandinavia yesterday, is re-asserted in the Bolshevik communique received by wireless from Moscow to-day.

THE COAL CRISIS.
PARIS, Nov. 17. Because of the gravity of the coal crisis, the Municipal Government has issued a request to theatre and departmental stores that they reduce illumination for the purpose of conserving fuel. A free distribution of fuel to persons maimed during the war has been begun.

"Nothing Too Good For Our Men"

This cry of the leaders of great ventures into the frozen zones has sent our heroes into the white fastnesses with the confidence that wins, borne out of being well outfitted.

JAEGER wear has been chosen for over a quarter of a century as the only dependable protection for those exploiters of courage who race for honour to the Poles, when every life is valuable.

No time to risk experimenting with unknown brands. This is a TEST for the BEST.

It is certain that a great measure of the success of these expeditions must have been due to the reliability of the JAEGER products worn.

To-day the ordinary man may obtain in JAEGER everyday under and outer wear the same materials and scientific construction of garments that sustained the men in these historical expeditions.

RESULT OF ROWDYISM.
LONDON, Nov. 17. The injury to his eye, which William E. Johnson, American anti-sea-son organizer, received last week during a demonstration by students, in which he was the central figure, is proving more serious than at first thought. It is feared it may be necessary to extract the eye.

MONARCHIST PROTESTATIONS.
BERLIN, Nov. 17. Several meetings were held in Berlin and throughout greater Berlin to-day in protest against monarchist demonstrations and detention of German prisoners in Franco. There was no disorder.

A DEMAND ON THE GOVERNMENT.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. Operators in the soft coal industry to-day considered calling upon the Department of Justice to enforce a more vigorous Federal Court mandate against the striking miners and to force resumption of work in these districts where the men walked out on November 1st. The Government has not done its full duty in merely requiring the withdrawal of the strike order, several operators declared, pointing out that a general stoppage of production of coal exists in many mines employing union labor.

MINERS EXPECTED TO RESUME WORK.
PITTSBURGH, Nov. 17. The Union coal miners of Western and Central Pennsylvania were expected to resume operations to-day by employers who stated the belief that a large percentage of the miners would return to work some time to-day. No statement was issued by Union headquarters here during the early morning hours, and reports from mining districts failed to indicate just how many men went back to work.

THE WORK OF THE HUN.
LONDON, Nov. 17. A floating mine was responsible for the sinking last Wednesday of the American steamer Council Bluffs, off the coast of Holland, according to advices received here. All the members of the crew were saved.

The Jap Way to Matrimony.

The dainty little ladies of Japan sometimes find it difficult to obtain for themselves life-partners, and have to resort to advertisement columns of the newspapers. Here is such an announcement: "I am a handsome girl, with hair that is abundant and as wavy as the scudding cloud; my face has the brilliance and satin-like gloss of flowers, and my waist is as supple as a willow tree. I am endowed with sufficient wealth to saunter through life with some loved one, whose hand will be for ever clasped in mine. were I to meet a gracious lord, kindly, well educated, and of good taste and manners, I will unite myself to him for life, and later will share with him the pleasure of being laid to rest eternal in a tomb of rose-coloured marble."

The Final Verdict in Ladies' Coats.

Brisk as the snow-flecked winds from pond and hill are the keen, crisp lines of the clever coats whose correct styles we have carefully selected in exclusive types of garments particularly pleasing to the woman who appreciates attractiveness as well as comfort in her winter wear.

When you buy these garments, you buy more than materials and appearance. You buy the assurance of the best in style and in making—for we select only those models which our successful experience of years tells us will hold their pre-eminence in fashionable wear throughout the season.

Some are fur-trimmed, some self-trimmed, but they include the cream of the season's most liked styles, and at prices that will please the woman looking for something especially low in good wear.

Black Caracul Coats.

In spite of the immense increase in prices, we are offering this Coat at no increase in price. In fact we offer it at a price distinctly lower than they could now be bought and sold for.

BLACK CARACUL COATS—Quality in workmanship and material behind every one, trimmed most attractively with Black Bear Collar.

Reg. $38.00, Now $34.50

Black Pony Cloth Coats.

The woman who is seeking for a good warm Coat, a Coat that carries the stamp of fashion, and yet is being offered at a price lower than some of them could be bought at wholesale now, will find this an exceptional offering.

BLACK PONY-CLOTH COATS of perfect styling and of superior material in just the right size.

CARROLL—ROSSITER.

At the R. C. Cathedral, at 7 o'clock last evening, Rt. Rev. Mgr. McDermott, V.G., united in marriage Mrs. Catherine Rossiter, (nee Miss Murphy), and Mr. Thomas Carroll, formerly of King's Cove, N.B. The bride was attractively attired in a navy costume and was attended by Miss Anna Cooke, while the groomsmen were Mr. George Hammond. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's brother, Capt. William Carroll, 43 William St., where the guests were royally entertained by Capt. and Mrs. Carroll. There were present many old friends of both the contracting parties, and Mr. J. M. ### NOT THE THING, BUT

How often we feel that some little thing that annoys us, some small interruption of our plans has spoiled our happiness when it isn't really the thing itself half so much as our feeling about it. Here's an instance of what I mean.

A friend of mine boarded in a summer place last summer. He could not get rooms and board in same house; but her room was onally across the street from the Inn at which she had her meals. It took her perhaps a minute and half to get from one to the other. That minute and a half was a thorn in her flesh.

"Really Spoils My Whole Evening," she sat in the parlor of the Innings. "And it really spoils my evening having to go out at and that way," she declared.

Now you know, and I know, that stepping across the street but that she had to do it was spoiled her evening. If she didn't let herself think about it until before she went, it might spoiled these next two or three nights, but it couldn't have spoiled whole evening.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

NOT THE THING, BUT THE FRETTING.

How often we feel that some little thing that annoys us, some small interruption of our plans has spoiled our happiness when it isn't really the thing itself half so much as our feeling about it. Here's an instance of what I mean.

A friend of mine boarded in a very summer place last summer. She could not get rooms and board in the same house, but her room was again across the street from the sea in at which she had her meals. It took her perhaps a minute and half to get from one to the other. At that minute and a half was a thorn in her flesh.

"Really Spills My Whole Evening," she sat in the parlor of the Inn. "And it really spoils my evening having to go out at that way," she declared.

Now you know, and I know, that stepping across the street but thinking that she had to do it was as spoiled her evening. If she had not herself think about it until before she went, it might have spoiled these next two or three minutes, but it couldn't have spoiled a whole evening.

Resentment Tired Me Most.

On the sleeping porch in my summer cottage is a couch that has to be pushed back every night. It has castors and the man who does the job for the summer colony misled me in the spring that he would put some for me. I may then next summer—perhaps every day when I pushed that couch back I thought, "It's a shame I have to do this when it tires me. It takes a lot out of me."

One day I stopped and looked at the matter in the face and realized that it wasn't pushing the couch about castors so much as resentment to do it, that really took out of me.

Resentment uses up more energy in either mental or physical effort.

Japanese Theatres.

Japan must be a happy land for theatres-goers, because in that land seats are not paid for—in fact, there are no seats.

The Japanese much prefers to squat, feeling, no doubt, much at home in this comfortable attitude. Seats, however, are usually brought for the use of any foreigners who may be present.

There are no hard and fast laws of convention. The Japanese playgoer may do as he pleases; he may eat, drink, smoke, and criticize to his heart's content.

Conversations are carried on, and, if they merit it, the actors are met by a storm of criticism and chaff.

When a man enters the auditorium he removes his boots, and if the weather is hot any clothing that appears to him to be superfluous.

The naive frankness of the actors' prompter is rather delightful, for if an actor forgets his lines the prompter comes on the stage and, quite openly, points out to the actor where he is wrong.

A boy is kept for the express purpose of walking on the stage and wiping the perspiration off the actors' faces; this duty he carries out without disturbing the even tenor of the play.

No Free List.

Here is one of many good stories told by Irvin S. Cobb, the American humorist, whose book, "Eating in Two or Three Languages," has just been published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton.

A chap named Dave Lewis whom I used to know (says Mr. Cobb) went into the restaurant business. Dave had been "one of the boys," and his pals started to lick their chops in anticipation.

But he was beforehand with them. His first act was to publish a notice which read:

"Dave Lewis begs to notify that he has gone into business on his own hook and started a first-class restaurant, and hopes that his many friends will jolly well stop away and give him a chance."

His One Hope.

Turning over the leaves of a newly-published book of reminiscences, the other day, I came across the following anecdote illustrative of the Right Hon. Augustine Birrell's ready wit.

At the time when the Crown Jewels had been stolen from Dunbar Castle (says the author) the visit of King Edward to Ireland was nearly due, and it was part of Mr. Birrell's duty as Irish Secretary to walk backwards as the King advanced, and to carry the big sword of State.

Walking backwards is not one of Mr. Birrell's accomplishments, and he looked forward to the occasion with peculiar emotion. When, therefore, the horror-stricken officials announced the disappearance of the regalia, Mr. Birrell replied, "Good heavens! I hope they remembered the sword."

Just Folks by Doris A. Guest

APPRECIATION.

He was whistling at his work with a grin upon his face. Not a solitary shirk. Seemed to loiter in the place. But this youth who caught my eye Seemed to glory in his task. So I stooped to find out why. And this question paused to ask:

"Tell me this, my cheerful lad, As you whistle at your bench, Why it is you seem so glad To employ that heavy wrench? Why so earnestly to-day Do you labor at your task?" And he looked as though to say; "That's a foolish thing to ask."

Then he answered with a grin As he laid aside his wrench: "Just to-day the boss came in And he stood beside my bench And he spoke to me like you. Then took up this work of mine. Looked it over, looked it through. And then said, 'It's simply fine!'"

"You can talk about your pay And the pleasure of a raise, But I'm telling you to-day That a little word of praise From the man you're working for Does a fellow lots o' good. And it makes him, more and more, Want to keep on sawing wood."

Wise Men Say—

That easily acquired things—like habits—are usually found to be worthless.

That we blame heredity for our faults, but take all the credit for our virtues to ourselves.

That some people's idea of making life easy seems to lie in making it harder for the rest of us.

That enthusiasm is of little avail without concentration. Success is not gained by spasmodic bursts of brilliancy.

That ambition, confidence, and determination are the three qualities that lead infallibly to great success. Ambition that says, "I must!" Confidence that says, "I can!" Determination that says, "I will!" And the last is the rarest of these.

That the man who cannot see in his daily work anything beyond the bare details of routine, or hear any voice in it beyond the grinding of the wheels, is unfortunate indeed. Labour to him degenerates into a mere mechanical effort to provide enough money to buy sufficient food to eat.

WAR RELICS.

The officers, non-commissioned officers and private soldiers of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment doubtless brought back with them from France and Germany, numerous war relics and souvenirs of their four and a half years' active service against the enemy, and such souvenirs have found their way into the many homes sending their best and bravest, where for years to come they will be the cynosure of all eyes, and the centres around which revolve numbers of admirers, all taking great pleasure and delight in hearing and rehearsing the stories which tell of their capture or finding.

It might be suggested that all these relics and souvenirs be assembled in one place, in order that they become—not exactly the property of the Dominion—but an interesting exhibition of novelties and curios, at which the whole public might from time to time be permitted a view. To this end it would be necessary that all the captured and found German arms and accoutrements be gathered together at a central place, where day after day public ingress and examination would be permitted. For this purpose we think that the Museum offers the best advantage, for in the exhibition rooms thereof, all the submitted articles could be placed in a separate room, each piece bearing a tag with the name of the finder or captor written thereon, together with the date and place of recovery or surrender.

In this way the individual deeds of the men who made the finds or took the items from the enemy would be better made known, and consequently numerous deeds of valor would be discovered which now, unfortunately, are unknown to history or record. There need be no reluctance on the part of the holders of such trophies to loan them for this purpose. The great idea would be to form the collection for a period, at the end of which, each article would, if so desired, be returned to the original owner. By doing this many thousands of people would avail of the opportunity offered to view the different weapons and war implements used by the Germans. At present it is only the few favored relatives and friends of the returned soldiers in each place who are permitted to do this, whereas if it were possible thousands would gladly make a visit to the place of exhibit to view the war souvenirs and pause in contemplation before the shrine, which the presence of such an array would constitute.

Other countries are making arrangements for a similar exhibition of captured small arms and military odds and ends, the whole to be under the custody and guardianship of responsible persons. Collections of captures will be made from the thousands of soldiers who each brought one or more of enemy trophies from the front line trenches, and if the donor does not care to present his souvenir rifle or sword or helmet to the nation, as an absolute gift, the same is to be returned after a term of exhibition, the length of which is to be decided upon by the authorities in charge of the affair. Newfoundland can well afford to take up such an interesting and important matter, and the gathering together of all the war relics and souvenirs in the possession of the men of the Regiment, so that all might see them, would add another page, if not volume, to the glorious record of the men who did things in Europe, and for which they received the praise of their Divisional Commander in the immortal words, "Better than the Best."

Political Rumours.

We do not vouch for the accuracy of the many political rumours now being circulated. The very latest going the rounds are that Mr. James MacDonnell, member elect for St. George's, has broken with the Government because of an unfulfilled promise regarding a seat in the Executive for that district, and Hon. J. A. Robinson has resigned his position as Postmaster General. Straws show how the wind blows and if any credence can be placed in the above reports, the indications are that the Liberal Reform Party will not endure for many seasons.

Marine Disasters.

The S. S. Toronto, bound to New York, rescued the master and four of the crew of the schooner General Knox, while that ship was in a sinking condition. One of the crew, the cook, Philip Fitzpatrick, was reported as washed overboard and drowned on the 14th inst. The same steamer also rescued the master and crew of the schooner Alice M. Moulton, also of St. John's. Both schooners were bound to the other side with fish cargoes and got badly beaten up in the storms that have swept the North Atlantic during the last couple of weeks.

Rumored Popular Appointment.

We learn that Mr. James Black, Lloyd's Surveyor in Nfld., has been transferred to England, and will leave for there shortly. Meanwhile it is rumored that Mr. D. McFarlane has been appointed to succeed him. Mr. McFarlane, though a young man, has had a great amount of experience, and if the rumor is correct, Lloyd's have made no mistake, and the people here will hail the appointment with the greatest satisfaction.

Rev. A. Clayton presided at last night's meeting of St. Thomas's Men's Bible Class in Canon Wood Hall, and delivered a most interesting address on the "Doctrines of the Church," and during the discourse related a number of personal experiences he had in the Old Country and with the army in France, showing the value men placed on the teachings of the church. Messrs. L. Lawrence and E. Morgan furnished appropriate music during the meeting.

The price of sugar has again advanced and no doubt consumers will soon be compelled to save their money, as this article will be too dear to buy. However, cheap "sweets" have been promised by the newly elected Government and meanwhile we will be optimistic.

The Nfld. Elections.

Some correspondents in Newfoundland are trying to cheer up down-hearted bigots in Toronto by assuring them of a great Protestant victory in Newfoundland. The true character of this victory will be understood when we inform our readers that the leader of the Opposition who has won the election, represents a Catholic district. The fact is that the Opposition consists of an alliance between two groups. The leader and some others represent a group of Capitalists and Corporations who hate Sir Michael Cashin because he taxed their war-profits, reformed the tariff so as to relieve the necessities of life and the materials of industry, and generally refuses to give away the resources of the country to the big interests. The other wing of the alliance consists of a Fishermen's Union in the Northern Districts, which corresponds to our Labour Party, and is radical and semi-Socialistic. The only way in which the dishonest leaders of this faction could camouflage their amalgamation with Tory Capitalists was by raising a sectarian cry against a Catholic Premier on the plea that there ought not to be a Catholic in succession to a Catholic. And as the Northern part of the Island is the most ignorant, bigoted, and gullible, they have easily succeeded in humbugging those poor, simple fishermen. However, the interests which this amalgamation aims at promoting, are not at all the interests of the Protestant religion, as their supporters will soon find out.

St. Michael's Cashin has held office for ten years, most of the time as Minister of Finance, and lately as Prime Minister. He leaves his country at the height of prosperity, ten times as prosperous as he found it. He has shown himself the most enlightened and efficient of financiers, and has the consolation that his name will be honored in the history of his country, and that his career has not yet closed. The people have waxed fat under his regime and have kicked. It remains to be seen whether it is the people who will prosper under his successor. The bigots in Newfoundland will find out, as the similar class in this country have found, that they are the dupes of designing politicians, who will soon be busy trying to prove to Catholics that they are not bigots or enemies.

One thing has surprised us very much. That is to find a Toronto newspaper which is Radical in politics and which professes to be religiously Liberal, proclaiming a Protestant victory in big headlines, when the victory is really a victory of Capitalists and Corporations. What makes the matter more remarkable is that this group of Capitalists in Newfoundland have always been the most determined Anti-Confederates and the most unscrupulous columnists of Canada. These gentlemen do not at all scruple to warn the Catholics of Newfoundland against a union with "the bigots of Toronto." Their party is a strange object for the admiration of a "Liberal" newspaper in Toronto.

It was reported in Newfoundland that the poorer wing of the Opposition had obtained a portion of their campaign funds from the "bigots of Toronto." This might be a mere election fiction or it might also be true. And if it was true, then it would explain why their agent has been so anxious to persuade "the bigots of Toronto" that their money was not wasted, but produced results. Yet wasted it was, if it was so invested.—Catholic Register, Toronto.

At the Majestic.

Possibly the biggest number of people since opening night was present at the Majestic Theatre last evening to witness the great and much-heralded picture, "The Cavell Case." The spacious hall was literally packed from wall to wall and in addition to those seated some hundreds had to stand at both shows. The hall emptied after the first show and as promptly filled again. This morning the picture was the talk of the town and it is safe to say that no previous one, not even the story "Joan the Woman," excepted, created such a stir, and the pity is that "The Cavell Case" can be shown but in one theatre in the city. The story of the martyrdom of England's heroic nurse, if it was but hastily understood to us now, will henceforward be part of the education of every man and woman. To say that it was wonderfully constructed were to damn it with faint praise. It was beyond mere words. The music of the orchestra, of which there is no equal in the country, added greatly to the realism of the pathetic story and there were times when a pin could be heard drop to the floor. The scenes portraying the indescribable brutality and licentiousness of the Prussian officers, who condemned Edith Cavell to death after a mock trial and travesty on justice are most amazing, and while shown the crowds present were simply thrilled. The actual shooting of the brave nurse was probably the most pathetic scene of all. It is hard to pick out any special feature for separate mention—the entire picture was perfect. Not one in St. John's should miss this stupendous production, which will be put on again to-night.

Not Going South.

In reference to the item in yesterday's issue of the Advocate we can state, on the authority of Sir Patrick himself, that the editor of the Evening Herald does not expect to go South on an extended trip. The truth is that he will proceed shortly to Montreal, where he is to consult with specialists for the past year or so, has been under normal efficiency. He will be gone five or six weeks. It is also possible that he will drop down as far as New York City before returning home.

Social Welfare Congress Meets.

VISITING GENTLEMEN SPEAK—LARGE AUDIENCES.—MAYOR GOSLING PRESIDES.

Illustrated Lecture at Night—Governor Occupies Chair.—Second session this Afternoon and Evening.

The first session of the Newfoundland Social Welfare Congress was held yesterday afternoon in the Canon Wood Hall, opening at two thirty. Mayor W. G. Gosling occupied the chair and the lectures delivered were:

"Conservation of Young Life," by Rev. Canon Vernon; "Training and Education," by Mr. R. Dunbar; "Delinquent, Defective and Dependent Children," by Rev. D. B. Hemmeon. Each lecturer was listened to with rapt attention by the large gathering present. The addresses given being of a very high order. Rev. Dr. Shearer also gave a most interesting and instructive address.

The evening session was held with the Governor in the chair. The speakers for the evening were Mr. Armitage, of Washington, D.C., and Dr. Clarence Hincks, of Toronto, that by the latter being illustrated. The music for this occasion was furnished by the Presbyterian Choir under the leadership of Mr. Mawer. The large crowd present joined in the singing heartily.

At one o'clock yesterday the local clergy met the visiting gentlemen at a luncheon in the Presbyterian Hall. The latter are Rev. J. G. Shearer, D. D., Rev. Canon Vernon, both of Toronto, and Dr. Clarence Hincks of Ottawa and Mr. Armitage of Washington, D.C.

CANADA'S VICTORY LOAN.

TORONTO, Nov. 17. The Dominion of Canada Victory Loan now reaches $672,000,000.

MAKING PROGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. There were evidences of real progress to-day in the wage scale negotiations between coal miners and operators of the Central Competitive Fields. Although no meeting of the Joint Wage Scale Committee's was held

The conference was postponed until to-morrow at the request of the operators, who spent the day preparing a report of the demands of the workers.

CONSISTORY APPOINTMENTS.

ROME, Nov. 17. The Vatican will officially call the next consistory in the middle of Dec. Besides the new Cardinals, it is already known, the Pope, will create Monsignor Soldevilla Romero, Archbishop of Saragossa, and Monsignor Dalbor, Archbishop of Posen, will be elected to the Cardinalate. Monsignor Bortram, Archbishop of Breslau, whose elevation to the Cardinalate was reserved in the consistory of 1916, will also be made a Cardinal.

RESOLUTION REJECTED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. The Blanket Resolution of the Foreign Relations Committee, to preclude from the jurisdiction of the League of Nations all questions affecting "honor on its vital interests," of the United States was defeated to-day in the Senate. The resolution, the last of the committee list, was rejected by the committee vote of administration democrats and the mild reservation Republicans by 56 to 36.

A KNOCK FOR BULLITT.

LONDON, Nov. 17. Premier Lloyd George, speaking in the House of Commons to-day, during the course of the debate on Russia, dwelt upon the complexity of the Russian problem. "Which ever direction we go," he said, "we are marching into a fog." The Premier was asked concerning the testimony given before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations by Wm. C. Bullitt, recently attached to the American Peace Commission, and replied, "I never heard of Bullitt until he returned from Russia. I never knew of his existence until one day President Wilson said to me, 'there is a young fellow returned from Russia who might be able to give you interesting views about Russia.' "But, he added, that I was not to attach too much importance to him." After declaring that Bullitt had "betrayed the confidence" of Mr. Lloyd George's Secy., Sir Philip Kerr, and states that his Secretary saw hundreds of people for him, including Bullitt, and had never referred to Bullitt, the Premier continued, "Bullitt got hold of documents in the office of the American Delegation in Paris, and published them. No public man in England would have soiled his fingers by using evidence of this kind."

NEW IRISH BILL.

LONDON, Nov. 17. A Bill, embodying the Cabinet Committee's report on Ireland, is nearly ready, and will be presented in the House of Commons in about a fortnight, says the Daily Mail. It adds that the Chief Secy. for Ireland, J. S. MacPherson, has told friends that the scheme for two Legislatures, with a Supreme Central Senate, has been unanimously approved by the Committee and accepted by the Cabinet, and that the recent statement that the Committee had presented majority and minority reports were untrue.

ENJOYING HIMSELF.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, West V.A., Nov. 17. After three days spent in golfing and tramping over the pine clad mountains of West Virginia, the Prince of Wales left this quiet little place to-night for New York. There he faces a strenuous programme of public receptions and entertainments, lasting until the moment he sails for England, next Saturday. The Prince spent practically the whole of the last day of his vacation on the golf links. In the evening he was entertained at a tea and dance and the Prince danced until the last moment before train time.

DENEKINE MAKES CAPTURE.

LONDON, Nov. 17. General Denekine, anti-Bolshevik leader in South Russia, according to a Moscow wireless message, has captured the staff of General Simon Petlura, the Ukrainian leader. General Petlura is missing the message adds.

AN APOLOGY.

LONDON, Nov. 17. James Ian Macpherson, Chief Secy. for Ireland, has apologized to Foreman, Macpherson, Nationalist member for South Down, Ireland, withdrawing the imputation that MacVeagh was a Sinn Fein sympathizer.

SURPRISE ELECTION.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 17. Although the definite results of the Parliamentary Elections of Sunday will probably not be known before Wednesday, Socialists claim a gain of twenty five seats, mostly from the Catholic party, which apparently is losing ground everywhere. The Liberals are losing less than was expected.

REGULAR DONATION TO CEASE.

LONDON, Nov. 17. Andrew Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons to-day that the Government had decided to discontinue the unemployment donation to civilians, beginning November 21. The donation will continue for former service men and women up to the end of March, at a rate of twenty shillings weekly to men and fifteen shillings to women, for a maximum period of nine weeks.

TURKEY MUST REMAIN.

LONDON, Nov. 17. A. J. Balfour, Lord President of the Council, pointed out in the House of Commons to-day that while there was much criticism of the Government for lack of a clear-cut policy on Russia, none of the critics had ever suggested a clear-cut policy of their own. Turning to other questions, he said it was a profound misfortune for the peoples of the Near East that the Peace Conference had failed to settle their future, but it was because of the fact that until America had given a clear lead as to her policy, it was quite impossible that the common policy of all the Associated Powers, of which America was the most important, could be submitted in a clear-cut line to her. Mr. Balfour declined to believe that Turkey could be wiped off the map.

STANDING OF DEPUTIES.

PARIS, Nov. 15. It is believed that the new Chamber of Deputies, in which no party will have an absolute majority, will consist of from eighty to eighty-five members of the Catholic party, sixty to sixty-five Socialists, thirty-five to forty Liberals, and five to ten members elected from smaller political groups.

LATEST RETURNS.

Complete returns from the French elections show that the Conservative, Moderate and Nationalist element hold 494 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, while the Extremists will have fifty-four members of the new chamber. Of this number 231 were former Deputies, while 327 are men who have not hitherto been members of chamber.

WILSON OUT OF DOORS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. For the first time since his return to Washington on Sept. 23 from his Western tour, which was cut short by a sudden attack of illness, President Wilson went outside of the White House. He was rolled into the grounds on a wheel chair, and for more than an hour enjoyed the fresh air and sunshine.

McMurdo's Store News.

Nfld. Schooner Sunk in Collision.

New York, November 14.—After a voyage of 1,500 miles, the 310 ton Newfoundland schooner Attainment was rammed and sunk by a Spanish steamer in the harbor of Cadiz last September on the eve of her return home. The yarn was spun here to-day by members of her crew who arrived on the Italian steamship Casorta. The last voyage of the Attainment began early in the present year when she sailed from St. John's, Newfoundland with a cargo of dried fish for Brazil. There she loaded with coffee and made an English port where a cargo of coal for Spain was offered and accepted. It was then September, and her skipper, Captain Mercer, contracted to load and deliver a cargo of salt for the fish packers of his native shores. The eve of the sailing day had arrived and with visions of Christmas at home on their minds, the crew of the schooner was looking forward to a last voyage across the Atlantic when along came disaster in the form of a Spanish ship. None of the crew were injured.

The Romance of a Peer's Daughter

(By Thornton Hall in Tit-Bits.)

One summer day in 1797 there was consternation in the Thames-side home of my Lord Kingsborough when it was discovered that his favourite and loveliest daughter had disappeared, leaving behind her a note to the effect that she intended to drown herself in the river.

Her family and friends were distracted with grief, for the Hon. Mary King was beloved by all who knew her. It seemed impossible that a girl so full of sunshine and the joy of life should destroy herself. And yet her bonnet and shawl, found on the riverbank were mute evidences of the fact that she had taken her own life.

The river was dragged; the district for miles around was scoured in search of the missing girl; but no trace of her could be found, and consternation and grief were followed by despair.

Her father alone refused to abandon hope. He persisted in his search and was at last rewarded by a clue which threw a different and more ominous light on her fate. He discovered that on the day of his daughter's disappearance a girl answering exactly to her description had been driven in a post-chaise, in the company of a handsome man, to London, where they had walked off arm-in-arm together. In London they had vanished, and advertisements and placards failed to discover a trace of the runaways.

Suspected!

Then it was that Lord Kingsborough's suspicions for the first time fixed themselves on Henry Fitzgerald, a handsome young kinsman who had spent his boyhood under his roof, as one of his own children.

Fitzgerald was many years Mary's senior; but he had been her favourite playfellow as a child. And when she grew to beautiful young womanhood he had been her constant companion on walks and rides, her partner at dances. He and no other, my lord concluded, must have been the scoundrel who had done this dastardly deed—a shameful return for all the kindness lavished on him.

When, however, his lordship sought Fitzgerald out and charged him with his infamy he was met with open surprise and honest indignation. Fitzgerald not only swore that he was innocent, but avowed the utmost disgust at the deed, and declared that he would know no rest until the girl had been restored to her home.

For weeks all efforts to trace the fugitive proved fruitless, until one day a girl called on Lady Kingsborough to tell the following strange tale. She was a servant at Kennington boarding-house, to which one day, some weeks earlier, a gentleman had brought a young lady who answered to the advertised description of the missing girl. The gentleman, she continued, often visited the girl. He was tall and handsome.

Bad Shots.

At this point the door opened and in walked Fitzgerald himself. "Why," exclaimed the servant, "that's the very gentleman!" At these words Fitzgerald, his coolness for once deserting him, turned and dashed out of the room, thus confirming the worst suspicions against him.

The rage and indignation of the injured family were boundless. Such an outrage could only be wiped out with blood; and within an hour Colonel King, the brother of the wronged girl, called on Fitzgerald, struck him on the cheek, and demanded a meeting on the following morning.

The duellists met at dawn the next day in Hyde Park. At ten yards' distance they exchanged shot after shot until their ammunition was exhausted, without either man being touched. They were leaving the ground, after making another appointment for the next day, when they were arrested and placed temporarily under lock and key to prevent a further breach of the peace.

Meanwhile the unhappy girl had been rescued from the Kennington lodging-house, and taken to the family seat of Mitchelstown, in Ireland. But her family had not reckoned on the resolute, vindictive nature of Fitzgerald, who was now more determined than ever to get Mary into his power.

The moment he was a free man he journeyed to Ireland, and, disguised as a groom, took up his quarters at the Mitchelstown inn to "develop his plans for a second abduction. He had, however, "bargained without his host," a shrewd old retainer of the King family, whose suspicions were aroused by his strange guest. He sensed mischief, and communicated his fears to Lord Kingsborough. His lordship, who was away from home, hurried back to Mitchelstown, convinced from the description, that the suspected man was none other than Fitzgerald himself, and arrived at the inn only to discover that his bird had flown. Fortunately it was a fairly easy matter to trace the fugitive in the wilds of County Cork; and it was soon discovered that he had "run to earth" at the Kilworth Hotel, whither his lordship and his fire-eating son, the Colonel, raced as fast as their horses could gallop.

When, however, they demanded to see the newly-arrived guest they were informed that his door was locked and that he refused to see anyone.

Bursting with rage and indignation, father and son rushed up the stairs and called on Fitzgerald to show himself. When he refused with oaths they broke in the door—and found themselves face to face with a brace of pistols.

Before they could be used, however, Colonel King, stooping suddenly, made a dash at Fitzgerald, closed with him, and was at once engaged in a life-and-death struggle. Backward and forward the combatants swayed, straining every muscle to bring their pistols into play for the fatal shot. By an almost superhuman effort Fitzgerald at last wrested his right arm free. His pistol was pointed at the Colonel's head. But before he could press the trigger a report rang out, and he fell back dead, shot through the heart. Lord Kingsborough had killed him to save his son's life.

Wedding Bells.

As was inevitable, the Viscount and his son were arrested on a charge of murder; but, amid a chorus of universal rejoicing, each was acquitted. As for the Honourable Mary, the innocent cause of the tragedy, she was sent under an assumed name to spend a few months under the roof of a Welsh clergyman, until the scandal had subsided. And here, secluded from the world and in a happy environment, she soon recovered her old health and gaiety.

One evening, it is said, she told the story of her tragic experiences to her host and his family, disguising it only by giving fictitious names. And she told it with such power and pathos that, at his conclusion, her auditors were reduced to tears for the maiden and excretion for her betrayer. Carried away by the excitement of the moment and the effect she had produced, she exclaimed, "I myself am the person for whom you express so much sorrow." Then, terrified by her indiscretion, she added: "And now, I suppose, you will drive me from your home."

But such was not to be Mary King's fate. The clergyman, who was a widower, had already lost his heart to his lovely guest, and her sufferings made his conquest complete. A few weeks later the bells rang merrily out when Mary became the wife of her kindly host; and for many a long year there was no one more beloved and happy in all Wales than the parson's wife who had thus romantically come through the storm into a haven of peace.

OTHER TABLETS NOT ASPIRIN AT ALL

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Genuine Aspirin

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, you are not getting Aspirin—Remember this! Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" are now made in America by an American Company. No German interest whatever, all rights being purchased from the United States Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. "Bayer Cross" is your only way of knowing that you are getting genuine Aspirin, proved safe by millions for Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for pain generally.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger sized "Bayer" packages can be had at drug stores.

Why He Was There.

Murphy, looking very sad and down in his luck, walked up to the gates of the shipbuilding yard. There were several other men waiting about, but none looked so unhappy as Murphy.

One after another they interviewed the foreman, and at last it came to Murphy's turn to come forward. With the courage of despair, he approached the dispenser of work, and asked for a job.

"Before you go any further," said the foreman, cutting short poor Murphy's appeal, "you had better understand that I give work only to union men. Are you in the union?"

Murphy gulped. "No, sir, I am not, but my wife and two children are! That's why I'm trying after work."

And the foreman made an exception of Murphy.

Says His Wife Needed Help to Rise From Chair

Captain Berrigan Praises Tanlac For Relieving Her Trouble.

Another splendid endorsement for Tanlac that will be read with interest by the people of Nova Scotia was given by Captain John Berrigan, of Smith's Cove, Halifax County, recently.

Captain Berrigan called at Kinley's in Halifax and made the remarkable statement that two bottles of Tanlac has done his wife more good than all the other treatment and medicines she has taken in twenty years. As a sea captain, Mr. Berrigan is known and popular at every port along the East Coast of Nova Scotia. He has resided at Smith's Cove for the past forty-five years; is manager of the M. A. Berrigan general merchandise establishment there, and his standing and influence in his community are too well known to require further comment.

"My wife has been suffering from badly disordered kidneys for twenty years," explained Captain Berrigan, "and while she has taken all kinds of medicines it's a fact that two bottles of Tanlac has done her more good than everything else combined. Her kidneys have been in bad shape so long that her general health had become so impaired that she could not do her housework at all. She complained of severe pains in her sides and her back was so stiff and painful that for days at a time she could not get out of her chair without help.

"After Tanlac came to Halifax and so many people got to making statements about how it had benefited them my wife decided to get a bottle and see if it would help her. Well, the result in the short time she has been taking it are nothing less than wonderful. Her kidneys are in better condition than they have been in years. The pain is rapidly disappearing from her back and sides, and she has improved in every way until she can get around just fine. I haven't seen her looking so well in a long time, she says she is feeling better and well and is convinced that Tanlac is in a class by itself. I am not looking for publicity, but these are the facts in my wife's case and we feel that the public should have the benefit of them."

The stomach regulates the condition of the blood and is the fountain head of health or disease as the case may be. Tanlac is intended primarily for the regulation of the stomach and the correction of catarrhal inflammation, but it is no uncommon thing for persons who have used it to find that it has relieved the not only indigestion, but also of rheumatism, kidney complaints and many other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach trouble.

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative; in Harbour Buffett, by Thomas W. Wally Sons; in Placentia, by James Murphy & Son, and in Topsail, by J. K. Bursell.

The Cows They Stole.

(Daily Mail.)

Only German professors could have the effrontery to come to England—as a number of them intend to do next week—and squeal over the fact that Germany is now being required to give back the cows which she stole from France in the war. When the Germans in 1914 treacherously fell upon their neighbors they occupied most of Belgium and 10,000 square miles of France, destroying or carrying off everything they could, including tens of thousands of milk cows. By the Treaty of Versailles they are to restore 140,000 of the stolen cattle. It is against this clause that they now have the impudence to protest.

They declare that if the stolen cows are given back to their lawful owners German babies will starve; and we are asked to allow them to keep their ill-gotten goods by a number of people here who like to flatter themselves with the idea that they stand on a higher footing of morality than their countrymen. Not that these people are going to suffer or go short of milk themselves. It is the French or Belgian baby that will starve to feed the little Boche and gratify their peculiar sense of generosity.

The Germans for 40 years plotted and prepared the war; and when they fell upon Great Britain, France, and Belgium they did so with the full intention of destroying us. Had they won there would not have been many children left alive here or in France. But they lost the war after waging it in the most brutal fashion, and they are not to be "moralized" or prevented from making another war by treating them as though they had merely lost a game of cricket. In any case we know from the German Minister of Food that the shortage of milk cows in Germany is only 15 per cent, whereas Paris has to-day owing to the German thefts of cows to be content with just half the milk it had before the war.

The French and Belgian babies have the first call on the stolen cows and on British sympathy.

New Royal Arch Chapter Formed.

Sydney, N.S., Nov. 14—Grand officers of the Royal Arch Chapter (Freemasons) accompanied by some brethren from the Sydney lodges, last evening visited North Sydney and participated in the formal chartering and instituting of "Victory" Chapter, which has been meeting there since last May, under a dispensation of the Grand High Priest of Nova Scotia.

The party left Sydney at 6.20 by ferry, and the meeting convened in Masonic Hall at 8 o'clock.

The chapter was opened by High Priest Designate (Rev.) A. W. Nicholls, rector of St. John's Anglican church.

Then followed a visitation from the Grand Chapter of Nova Scotia, which was represented by the following grand officers: J. C. MacKay, Grand High Priest; Nelson E. Muggah, Grand King; Samuel Eastwood, New Glasgow, Grand Scribe; G. O. Forbes, Captain of the Host; John A. Mac Donald, Royal Arch Captain; H. S. Theakston, Grand Secretary, and several others.

The grand lodge officers were tendered an official welcome which was replied to by Grand High Priest MacKay.

The business of chartering and institution was then attended to, the officers of the new organization being:

Alfred W. Nicholls, M.E.H.P.
Ernest Gordon MacKay, E.K.
Theodore Porter Moffatt, E.S.
Thomas Fraser Cumming, Treas.
Stewart Ingraham, Secretary.
William John Campbell, C.H.
Fraser Colquhoun, P.S.
George Fred MacDonald, R.A.C.

Warren Charles Moffatt, Gm. 1st V.
Adam MacKay Ross, G.M. 2nd V.
Gerald Forhan Goodwin, G.M. 3rd V.
Urban Noel, Tyler.

The Banquet.

At the conclusion of the chapter meeting adjournment was made to the Albert Hotel dining room where a most excellent banquet was served to about seventy guests.

The High Priest, Rev. A. W. Nicholls, presided as toastmaster, and the following toasts were honored:

The King.
Masonic orchestra selection.
"Grand Chapter of Nova Scotia," proposed by Comp. Ernest G. MacKay, E. K., response by J. C. MacKay, G. H. P.

Vocal solo—Prof. T. T. Williamson.
"Visiting Brethren," proposed by Comp. Theo. Sodero, response by Comp. G. O. Forbes.

Violin solo—Mr. R. Smalley.
"Victory Chapter," proposed by Comp. H. S. Theakston, response by Comp. Dr. M. T. McLean.

Vocal solo—Mr. G. C. Baggett.
Orchestra selection.
"The Ladies," proposed by Comp. G. Fred MacDonald, response by Comp. W. H. Graham.

"O Canada."
God Save the King.
The Sydney brethren returned home on the tug Zaidee, which was specially chartered for the occasion. Among the local Masons who took a prominent part in the proceedings at North Sydney, was Magistrate A. G. MacLean, Past Grand High Priest of the grand chapter of Nova Scotia.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—Reading over the Telegram last night a clipping appeared in one of its columns where it is said that it is recorded that Thackeray was one of the neatest of writers and boasted that he could write the Lord's Prayer on a shilling. For the information of your many readers I wish to say that my friend the late W. H. Goodland of the firm of Gray & Goodland could write in a very clear and legible manner the Lord's Prayer on a three penny piece, which is now out five-cent piece and he executed many such souvenirs for his old-time friends.

Yours truly,

Golden Ghosts.

PHANTOMS THAT PROVED PROFITABLE.

Every Irishman can tell you about the Leprechaun, the little man who dresses in red with a peaked cap, and he lives in the ditches. Only one person can see him at a time, and if he does catch sight of him, must never take his eyes off him for a single moment. Watching him carefully, he must run and catch him, and if he succeeds in doing so the Leprechaun will ransom himself by leading his captor to a crock of buried gold. At least, so runs the legend.

Some years ago a French shepherd of Aveyron lost two sheep. The following evening a figure in a black robe and with tanned head appeared to him, and told him to look for the lost members of his flock in a cave near Altes, adding that he would there find "more than sheep."

The next day the shepherd found the cave mouth exactly as described. Inside were his two sheep. Beyond, he came upon a chapel carved in the rock and containing chalices, censers, and candle-sticks all made of solid silver, and of very considerable value. A letter found in a missal showed that the place had been used as a place of worship during the Reign of Terror in 1793. The shepherd took the ornaments to his parish priest and was well rewarded for his find.

Duried Treasure.

A similar story comes from New Brunswick. Two men were out camping and shooting in wild country. One night one of them awoke and saw, sitting over the glowing embers of the dying fire, a figure dressed in an eighteenth-century costume.

"Who are you?" asked the sportsman, startled. The ghost bade him search in the cliff above which the camp lay, and told him that he would find his (the speaker's) bones there. He ordered him to bury them decently, and take as his reward what he found in the cave.

The figure then vanished. At dawn the two comrades set to work. They found the entrance to a cave which had been almost blocked by a landslide. Inside was a skeleton with a massive gold ring on its bony figure, and around the skeleton lay various books of dates varying from 1659 to 1655. There was also a manuscript giving the locality and description of a treasure buried near by, which the lucky finders dug up and appropriated.

Pierre Gastron, a tradesman of Montmartre, which is a part of old Paris, had for a neighbor an old miser, who died suddenly. Gastron had been kind to the old man. On the night after his death the ghost of the miser appeared to Gastron, and said: "I left you my money. Go and look under the third board from the wall in my bedroom, and you will find my will with a bag of coins." Gastron hurried off at once, and in the place mentioned discovered the will mentioned by the ghost and 750 francs in silver.

The Otter Rock gold mine, on the coast of Lincoln County, Oregon, was found through a ghost. An apparition, supposed to be that of a member of the long-forgotten race that preceded the Indians, showed the spot to an old pioneer named McMinville. The ghost is said still to haunt the locality.

Lessons of Jutland.

(From the London Times.)

The 30 feet naval rangefinders now being constructed have an uncertainty of observation under good conditions, of less than 80 yards at 20,000. Professor Barr, in a lecture at the exhibition, referred to Lord Jellicoe's statement in his book, "The Grand Fleet," that in "pre-war days battle practice had been carried out at a maximum range of about 9,500 yards, and only on one occasion, when the Colossus fired at a target at 14,000 yards off Portsmouth in 1912, had this range been exceeded." At the beginning of the war no British battleship carried a rangefinder of greater base than nine feet. This base had been decided upon in 1904, when the maximum effective range for the opening of fire would generally not be assumed to be greater than about 6,000 yards. In the Battle of Jutland fire was carried out at ranges up to 24,000. The nine feet rangefinders used at the Battle of Jutland were therefore called upon to perform a duty greatly in excess of that for which they were originally designed. Only one squadron was provided with 15 feet rangefinders. Many statements had been made which, Professor Barr believed, were due to an entire misapprehension, if not misrepresentation, regarding the results of the battle. Lord Jellicoe had quoted from the Tagelblat, November, 1913: "Our fleet's losses were severe. On June 1, 1916, it was clear to every thinking person that the battle must and would be the last one. Authorities said so openly." Professor Barr considered that it was vastly to the credit of our gunners that in that battle they had once and for all settled the fate of the German High Seas Fleet.

Two Royal Visits.

(From the Boston Herald.)

We shall not see much of the Prince of Wales in the United States, his Canadian tour having been arranged before the President's invitation was sent. He will only enjoy the hospitality of our government for a few days at Washington and thence proceed for a few visits to New York before embarking at that port on his homeward journey. But wherever he appears he will be greeted with the unaffected cordiality which marked both the invitation and its acceptance. The words of King George were that it gave him "the greatest pleasure to accept this invitation for the Prince of Wales, both on personal grounds and as a mark of the intimate relations that so happily exist between the American and British peoples, drawn even more closely together by the imperishable memories of comradeship in the recent war." Those memories of which the father spoke can influence none more strongly than the son, who served in the war from beginning to end, and liked the American soldiers, with whom he was extremely popular. He is the first Prince of Wales to come as such to the United States. His grandfather, using one of his minor titles here as Lord Renfrew. That was in 1860, on the invitation of President Buchanan. The then heir-apparent, afterward King Edward VII, visited a number of our cities, including Washington, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and New York. It was on the occasion of his visit to Boston that Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote his fine international ode, "Our Fathers' Land." Of the most impressive incident of that tour the London Times correspondent wrote: "There is something greatly suggestive of historical retribution in the reverential awe of the Prince of Wales, the great grandson of George III., standing bareheaded at the foot of the coffin of Washington." The Prince planted a chestnut by the side of the tomb, and "it seemed," said the correspondent, "when the royal youth closed in the earth round the little germ, that he was burying the last faint trace of discord between us 'and our great brethren in the West.' The present Prince of Wales knows nothing of the mounded discord. In his sensible, frank and genial presence its ghost will not walk. He never met it when he met and marched with American troops in France, nor will he hear any hint of such a phantom in his intercourse with Americans in their own country. Our boys who were 'over there' in the fields of war with him brought back a description that made him seem one of themselves, and he will find that the spirit of comradeship, between man and man, and between nation and nation, is the spirit that animates us all. We trust that when the Renown hoists his flag and steams away he will carry with him many pleasant recollections, and feel that he has received the characteristically American invitation, "Come Again."

First Printing in England.
On November 18, 1477, William Caxton printed at Westminster a book called "The Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers," dictes being a word of Latin origin, and meaning the same as sayings, an Anglo-Saxon one. It had been translated from the French by Anthony Woodville, second Earl Rivers. This was, as far as any evidence goes, the first book printed in England. Born in Kent, Caxton was in 1435 apprenticed to a London mercer, or merchant, of silks and woollen cloths, but, after his master's death he went to Bruges, in Belgium and set up in business for himself, becoming practically governor of the English merchants in that country, and in Holland; but he learned printing, perhaps at Cologne, in Prussia, and printed translations on the Continent. In 1476 he returned to England in the reign of Edward the Fourth, and by 1478 the first printing-press in this country was erected in the Almonry, or place for giving alms or merciful gifts to the poor, outside the west end of Westminster Abbey, in which he was encouraged by Thomas Miling, the abbot, or father, of what was then as abbey or monastic church. From this press Caxton, before his death in 1491, issued nearly eighty separate books, and there was great variety in their subjects. The title of one of the first was "The Game and Playe of the Chess," for chess was an ancient game of eastern origin, probably introduced from Asia into Europe by the Arabs. Others were, "The Chronicles of England," and "The Descrip-

To Show You What Clean Teeth Mean

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Look Now

See how the teeth' whiteness is dimmed by film. Perhaps tartar has formed in some places.

Look Later

See how the teeth have whitened—how the film has disappeared.

This is to offer you a 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent—the peppin tooth paste which combats the film.

Able authorities have proved the product by clinical and laboratory tests. The results are beyond any question. Leading dentists everywhere are now urging its adoption.

We ask you to prove it by a 10-day test. Do this for your sake and your children's sake. See for yourself how it will help you to cleaner and whiter teeth.

Film Wrecks the Teeth

That slimy film which you feel on your teeth causes most tooth troubles. Every modern dentist knows that. And for years dental science has sought a way to combat it.

Film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Now science knows a way to combat it. The way is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. It is now used daily on millions of teeth, largely by dental advice. To those who don't know it we supply a free tube, so they may find it out.

Old Ways Don't End It

This film is clinging. It enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush doesn't end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. That's why millions find that well-brushed teeth discolor and decay.

Pepsodent is based on peppin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

But peppin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. So this method long seemed barred. Now science has found a harmless activating method, and teeth can now be daily cleaned as they never were before.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

This means more than pretty teeth. Compare your teeth now with your teeth in ten days and decide what is right for yourself. Cut out the coupon now.

Why Prize Fights?

By "BERKLEY,"
(in London Daily Mail.)

Why do people go to boxing matches? What is the strange, magnetic attraction that lies in the spectacle of two men pummeling one another with padded fists?

These questions are always being asked of the experts in pugilism, but I have yet to hear of a satisfactory answer being given. The reply is usually to the effect that the human race loves fighting, and that boxing satisfies the instinctive craving for fighting in a comfortable, legal way.

To such a student of human nature as I believe I am, that theory is simply "tooth." There are fighting humans and there are bloodthirsty humans, but these compose but small parts of the big crowds that attend the modern boxing match.

One of my best friends is a man who spends at least two evenings in the week by the ringside, and yet if you were to ask him to put on the gloves "just for a little spar," he would collapse with fear and trembling. Another is a man who would not, with his own hands, kill an animal for food if his life were in the balance, and yet I have seen him float over the incidents of a "gory" scrap with as much zest as would a diamond dealer over a really precious stone.

The fundamental truth about boxing is that it appeals to human nature's most insatiable appetite—the appetite for emotional excitement.

The modern boxing crowd knows little, or nothing, about the skill and science of the game and cares a great deal less. The craving of the majority of the people who make up these congregations is for excitement—the excitement that arises from the spectacle of a fellow-being being brought low and rendered helpless by the superior audacity and strength of an opponent. Such people are not looking for the points and the skill but for the smash and the bang that will tauten their loosened nerves and set them thrumming again.

There is nothing in modern boxing that can possibly interest any properly constituted female of the human species. She can learn absolutely nothing from it; it jars, or ought to jar, all the finest and tenderest chords of her nature. I have met but one woman whom I could describe as a genuine boxing enthusiast, and she was the descendant of a long line of prizefighters.

In spite of its parasitical adherents, a knowledge of boxing is a most valuable accomplishment. I am afraid, however, that the average of expertness is very low. If all the spectators had, first of all, to prove themselves the possessors of a certain standard of ability to use their fists, I wonder how many of them would show a real capacity for understanding what takes place in the ring. Many of them are out for shouts and thrills, cries and disasters—not boxing—and regard a match as a tame fight if either man merely wins on points by superior skill, judgment, and staying power.

Dried Fish.

Locally the chief interest of the moment centers in the Lunenburg Bank catch, says the "Maritime Merchant," of Halifax, N.S. Several lots of new cure ready for shipment have been bought by the trade at $12.00; but there is an indisposition on the part of buyers to believe that this price will be permanent. They have had to buy to fill contracts made for November shipments (they could not afford to wait any longer as they wished to be sure of making good their promised delivery dates), but they are looking for lower prices; in fact, they believe that the market must be lower before they can expect to do any business worth while. The fishermen may say that this attitude is being forced; that what they are really trying to do is to bear the market. Time therefore will tell whose opinion is right. For the present we think that most exporters have a conviction that there are lots of fish to go around and that while a few cargoes have been taken over at $12.00 later on there must be a decline. In Newfoundland much the same situation prevails as here. Merchants there do not think the situation warrants more than $10.00.

GIRLS! A MASS OF WAVY, GLEAMY BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Let "Danderine" save and glorify your hair

In a few moments you can transform your plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the Danderine and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass, so soft, lustrous, fluffy and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed.

Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair, and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

Fish Affected by Warfare.

Wilfred Busley, who is on his way to his tea plantation in Assam, India, says that the frequent explosions of mines off the British coast has caused a great scarcity of fish. This was especially the case along the east coast of England and Scotland, and had also affected the coast of Holland. Herring, which formerly were plentiful at this season of the year off the coast of Scotland, selling at a cent apiece retail, now bring 18 cents, he said, and were scarce. Plounders and cod, formerly eight to ten cents a pound, are now worth 50 cents at retail. It was only at rare intervals, Mr. Busley said, that the poor were able to purchase fish. "The only fish in British waters that appeared to defy the mines and torpedoes," Mr. Busley continued, "is the hardy halibut. Just before I sailed from England one of the steam trawlers off the coast was about to haul in its lines when the captain noticed a giant halibut following close behind a cod that was impaled on one of the hooks." The halibut made several attempts to swallow the cod and was eventually hauled up onto the deck of the trawler. The skipper told me that

Fortune From a Convict's Boast.

The Romance of a Big Business.

My name is Chubb, that makes the patent locks; I'm a burglar, and I'm a locksmith.

A certain Bill Sikes, however, treated the rhymester's words with contempt. He asserted that he had picked with ease some of the best locks in the land, and that he could pick Chubb's locks with equal facility.

It was a vain boast, in spite of the fact that he was a locksmith by trade, given every facility, and offered a reward if he could accomplish the feat.

It happened in this way. Just over 100 years ago a serious robbery, accomplished by the aid of false keys, took place in the Portsmouth Dockyard. A reward of £100 was offered by the Government for a lock which could not be opened by any other than its own key. Charles Chubb, a Portsmouth hardware dealer, decided to make an attempt to win the prize with a lock patented by his brother, Jeremiah, and which he had improved upon.

Hearing of the boast of Bill Sikes, who was then a convict on board a Portsmouth prison ship, the Government decided that he should test the lock. Not only did Mr. Chubb offer him a reward of £100 if he succeeded, but a promise of a free pardon was made by the authorities.

Baffled!
Armed with all the files, tools, and blank keys he required, the convict set to work, but after trying for two or three months he was obliged to give up the job in despair. Charles Chubb thus gained the Government reward, and so laid the foundation of a business which has acquired a world-wide reputation.

Perhaps one of the most interesting facts regarding the house of Chubb is that their famous locks to-day are, in principle, the same as the one which beat the convict and won the Government prize. Jeremiah Chubb's first patent was the introduction of a detecting mechanism, the detector consisting of a lever moving on a fixed centre-pin, and so placed as to be operated on by the tumblers or levers of the lock.

When the levers are raised to their correct height by the use of the proper key supplied with the lock, the bolt is duly thrown and the lock secured. But if any attempt is made, either carelessly or by design, to open the lock by means of any but its correct key, the levers are lifted above or below their assigned height; the detector then comes into action and effectually stops the motion of the bolt, detecting the lock and rendering it temporarily useless.

It was Jeremiah's brother Charles who so improved the lock that the adjusting key became superfluous. He introduced a certain device which allowed of the key by which the lock was actuated being also capable of counteracting the detection.

Mighty Strong-Rooms.
The first Chubb locks were made in a small workshop at Portsea, Hampshire, but the winning of the £100 prize revolutionized the business.

Orders for the lock which beat Bill Sikes poured in from all parts of the country. The hardware shop was given up and a small factory taken in the great dockmaking centre of Wolverhampton, with which locality the house of Chubb has since been so prominently associated. That small factory grew to such huge proportions that to-day Chubb's Lock Works are among the biggest in the Midlands.

Some interesting details of the development of lock, safe, and strong-room construction are given in the story of "The House of Chubb," (Jenkins), written by Sir George Hayter Chubb and W. G. Churcher. Perhaps one of the most remarkable improvements made by Chubb's was the diagonal bolt system, introduced over seventy years ago, which proved to be one of the most effective arrangements ever devised for binding a safe or strong-room door to its body or frame.

The bolts, instead of shooting straight from the door into their sockets or flange, emerge diagonally and enter angular apertures provided in the body of the safe or frame door, knitting the frame and door together with extreme tenacity. Another improvement was the substitution of round bent corners for the rectangular safe corners formerly constructed, thus preventing the insertion of wedges into the angle joints and the wrenching off of the back of the safe, a favorite method of the burglar in dealing with the commoner types of safes.

A quarter of a century ago a sensation was created by the production of a steel strong-room of such dimensions that its completion was celebrated by an extensive luncheon-party being accommodated in its capacious interior. Rooms of far greater dimensions are now regularly produced. Some idea of their strength may be gathered from the fact that certain recently-constructed treasury doors alone have weighed, with frame, nearly ten tons, yet so accurately are they poised on their massive crane hinges that they can be moved by one hand.

"In such doors, keyholes, which might afford an opportunity for the insertion of explosives are absent," to quote the authors of the book referred to, "the bolt-work being controlled by keyless combination locks and time locks fitted behind the massive plates of the door, and only allowing of the door being opened after a certain prearranged hour; and then only on the simultaneous attendance of three officials.

"All these arrangements are designed to baffle the modern crooked man, who presses into his criminal service a number of weapons unknown to the burglar of a century ago. Armed with modern explosives and with the oxy-acetylene blowpipe, few indeed are the safes of a past era that would provide any defence against these tremendous potent modes of attack.—T.H.Bix.

Do You Chew?

One taste the war added to many thousands of Englishmen, is the habit of chewing gum, a habit very few indulged in before 1914, and one which was supposed to be an American one. Now it is reckoned that close on a hundred million people throughout the world are inveterate chewers, according to the latest figures of the sales of the world's favourite sweet.

The greater part of chewing gums chewed either in America or here comes from one of our own colonies, Honduras. It comes from a tree called the mastic tree, and the actual gum is really the sap of this tree. The tree is "tapped" by making cuts through the bark, and the sap collected in bags.

It is afterwards boiled till it becomes a sticky pasty mass very similar to dough, but rather more solid. This is allowed to set, cut into blocks and shipped to America, where practically all the chewing gum as we know it is made.

The solid blocks of gum are refined and flavoured and coloured to suit various people's taste, and put up in the little packets which have now become so familiar over here. Altogether over four thousand tons of chewing gum are collected and chewed every year.

PROPHECY.

The prophets afflicting are always predicting that evils are coming to pass; the oil we are pumping is billed for a slumping, and soon we won't have any gas. The prophets are warning that coal mines are falling and soon we'll have nothing to burn; we'll sit up and shiver from wishbone to liver, and wish that old times might return. Our lands are exhausted and husbandry's frosted, and soon we'll have nothing to eat; there's not enough leather to make a good tether, and there'll be no shoes for our feet. The sheep are not bearing the wool for our wearing, and we'll have no rags for our backs; it's a no world for boosters; our hens are all roosters, our milk cows won't get down to tacks. The gods are against us, they've herded and fenced us preparing to hand us a jolt; the future's alarming, so let us be arming for anarchy, riot, revolt. And yet we're so silly we heed not the chilly and ominous words of the seers; we're joking and playing while doing our haying, and ripping and wagging our ears. The talk of disaster, it seems, cannot master the natural pop of the soul; we ought to be drooping, but gaily we're whooping while laying in cordwood and coal.

Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!

A lady in the States while residing at home nine years ago, then being of the vintage of sweet sixteen, had two dollars and gave same to a tramp. The other day a man walked into the store where she is now working and asked her if she was she. On receiving assurance that she was, he notified her of a legacy of $65,000 left to her by said tramp, he now being dead and gone and otherwise having no further use for the money. The lady was considerably surprised.

She said she had not expected that return for her two dollars. She explained at considerable length that when she handed that two dollars over to the tramp she had not had any jealous eye upon his prospective $65,000 at all. Yet in view of the fact that he was passed away, she felt it only fair to his memory to do

FISHERMEN!

This is the great Fishkiller with which the Norwegians catch such large quantities of fish. Place a sinker with a swivel on each end, about one fathom above the hook, which spins like a minnow, and the fish bite ravenously.

Opportunities in Long-Term Bonds

Bonds maturing in 1919 or 1920 may now be sold advantageously, and the funds reinvested in longer term securities. The benefits of present high interest yield rates may thereby be secured for a period of ten years and longer.

We shall be glad to offer suggestions.
