The Mystery of Rutledge Hall

OR
"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER XVII.

"I mean just that," he said, coolly, looking up suddenly and glancing from Dolly's eager, puzzled, smiling face to Sidney's, so pale and startled.

"What fun?" cried Dolly, gaily.

"How did he serenade? Had he a guitar? Whose window did he look at? I should think it was Lord de la Poer serenading you, Sidney!"

Sidney forced a smile to her pale lips; the suspense and uncertainty were almost more than she could bear. What had he seen? What had he heard? What was he going to say next? She felt ill and giddy in her terror, but struggled desperately against the feeling of faintness which increased every moment, and to which she dared not yield. If she were to swoon now, they would have to suspect something, and this keen-eyed barrister's suspicions for her suspected her undoubtedly—would become certainties. Her long, sleepless night had made this more of an effort than her strength was quite equal to; but she gathered up all her courage, and, when she spoke, her voice was as quickly as usual, but very low.

"Serenading me! Is that likely, Dolly, when you are here?" she said.

"Besides, the Earl plays no instrument, I think. Mr. Milner is the only friend we have able to serenade us."

"The serenading was poetical license," the young barrister interposed, lightly. "My gay cavalier" did not serenade. He waited silently for his lady to appear."

"And did she come?"

"Yes, at last," he answered, smiling. "She was not very punctual; but he was patient, and his patience was rewarded."

"Did you see her?" asked Dolly eagerly.

"Oh, yes!" he answered. "Did I not tell you that the moon was shining? But, how charming her silver light may be for legitimate love-rambles, it is not equally desirable for stolen interviews."

"This is becoming interesting," said Miss Daunt, smiling. "Stephen, do you hear?"

Stephen glanced up from his letter abstractedly.

"I hear a great deal of chatter," he answered, smiling. "What is it all about?"

"Do you allow lovers' meetings in your grounds at midnight?" she asked, demurely. "Because Mr. Milner was the reluctant witness of one last night."

"What does this made-up mean?" Stephen inquired, turning to his friend. "Is she talking nonsense? Did you see anything unusual in the grounds last night?"

"Something very unusual," was the laughing reply. Then Milner's tone changed to one of swift alarm. "Mrs. Daunt, is anything the matter? Are you ill?"

Three pairs of startled inquiring eyes went swiftly to the head of the table. Sidney had risen, and was supporting herself by one hand upon the table and the other on the back of the chair from which she had risen. She was pale to ghastliness, her eyes were half closed, and she seemed on the point of fainting. In an instant Stephen was by her side, but with almost equal rapidity she rallied.

"It is nothing—nothing," she declared, forcing a smile. "It is so close this morning that the heat made me feel faint. I am sorry to have startled you, Stephen," she added, tremulously, her little fingers closing involuntarily over the strong hand which held hers; "but it is nothing. Indeed I am quite myself now."

She resumed her seat at the table, trying to ignore her husband's anxious eyes, and those other inquiring eyes which were so much more unpleasant to meet and so much more difficult to avoid, and waited tremulously for the conversation to continue; but her sudden illness had been effective in silencing it, and when her companions spoke again, they had changed the subject.

Breakfast was over at last; the two young men had left the table, and were glancing over separate sheets of the local newspapers; Dolly, in her dainty seal-brown gown, was looking out of the window with a wistful look in her pretty blue eyes. In Sidney's troubled brain the thought was how she was to get to Lymouth alone and unaided. She must be doubly cautious now. Ah; why had such a cruel fate brought Lloyd Milner to Easthorpe at this juncture?

"Don't you think a drive would do you good, Sidney?" her husband said presently, throwing aside the newspaper that he had been reading. "You look very pale this morning."

"My head aches too much to go out," she answered petulantly. "But" eagerly—"there is no need for Dolly to stay at home. I shall do very well alone."

Dolly made a feeble protest, her blue eyes denying her words.

"I shall be better alone," Sidney said eagerly, repenting of her eagerness the next moment when she discovered Lloyd Milner's eyes fixed upon her over his newspaper.

"But I am afraid Dolly is not to be trusted with your ponies, Sidney," said Stephen, glancing at his sister and smiling.

Sidney looked blank. She must have done herself, to drive to Lymouth.

"No," she said dubiously; "but Lady Gollightly will carry Dolly beautifully, and she would not be long changing her dress."

"Oh, that will be too delightful!" Dolly cried enthusiastically. "Don't say 'No,' Stephen. I promise I shall not want to follow. I will come home with the groom as soon as I have seen the meet."

"Of course, if Sidney likes to trust you with Lady Gollightly, I am quite willing," the young man answered lightly. "Milner may take the responsibility of your care upon his shoulders if he likes."

"Will you, Mr. Milner?" Dolly asked demurely. "I won't be a very great nuisance, I promise you."

"I think I can bear the infliction for once," was the grave answer, while the pleasant gray eyes frankly showed their delight at the proposal; and Dolly hastened away to put on her habit just as the horses were brought round.

Sidney breathed a sigh of relief; when once they were gone, she would be free for a few hours—and she had plenty of work before her. On looking into her purse that morning, she had found that her supply of money was very small, amounting to merely a few pounds; she must therefore go and cash a check before going to Lymouth. This would entail a drive into Ashford, which was the only difficulty—for Stephen's liberality had made his wife a rich woman, able to draw checks without much fear of overdrawing her banking account. Of course it would require time, and she had not much between this and twelve o'clock. She glanced at the timepiece it was nearly ten. The meet was at half-past ten; but Cotley was but three miles from Easthorpe.

"You are quite sure you will not be dull?" Dolly said, coming into the room, looking distractingly pretty in her dark blue habit and coquettish riding-hat. "It seems so selfish to leave you, Sidney."

"Not at all," Sidney answered, with almost feverish eagerness. "I shall enjoy being alone. And—Dolly, don't hurry back on my account. If you think you would like to go to Lambwold, pray do; I shall not be dull."

"You seem awfully anxious to get rid of me," pouted Dolly. "I believe you have some desperate design on hand, Madam Sidney."

"Ah, how cruel the hot blood was that it rose so redly in her pale cheeks at Dolly's laughing heedless words! Sidney glanced nervously at Mr. Milner; but he was settling Dolly's habit, and did not see the hot, vivid blush, or Sidney thought he did not, as she watched them ride away, the slender girlish figure between the two red-coated ones, leaving her free to keep her promise to Frank Greville—a promise which was to cost her very dear. Hardly had the horses disappeared down the avenue than she had rung the bell, ordered her pony-carriage to be brought round with as little delay as possible, and was donning her outdoor attire with nervous little fingers which almost defeated their own haste, uneasily haunted the while by the strangely questioning, meaningful look in Lloyd Milner's gray eyes. What had he seen? What did he suspect?

Sidney would have started on her mission with yet more trepidation if those questions had been truly answered, and if she could have known the result of that morning's ride.

"I'm awfully sorry I said anything about the nocturnal apparition," Lloyd Milner said confidentially to Dolly, as they rode side by side behind Stephen in a lane which was a short cut to Cotley, and which was too narrow to allow them to ride three abreast.

"Why?" asked the girl, looking up in some surprise from under the brim of her dainty riding-hat.

"I am afraid I alarmed Mrs. Daunt," he answered.

"Oh, dear, no! Sidney is not so absurdly nervous," remarked Dolly confidently, with a smile of superior knowledge. "You do not really mean that you think that made her ill this morning?"

"I fancied so."

"Oh, then you are quite mistaken," declared Miss Daunt, nodding her wise golden head. "She does not seem very well, I think," she added, in a minute.

"There has been so much visiting and going about lately that she is tired out. I dare say; and the winter always tries Sidney."

Some People Have Funny Ideas

What do you think Carnation Milk is like? Do you think it is "thick as molasses in January"? It isn't... Do you think it is syrupy sweet? It isn't. Do you think it has a funny taste? It hasn't. Do you think something is "put in" to make it keep? There isn't. Do you think some of the food value is taken out? It isn't.

Pure Milk in a modern package—that's all
Carnation Milk is just pure milk with part of the natural water content taken out by evaporation. All the food value of full-cream milk is left in. No artificial sweetening or other preservative is added.

Each can is hermetically sealed and sterilized to keep its contents pure, sweet, and utterly safe. Carnation Milk is a great aid to better baking because of its convenience, safety and richness. Always ready for use on your pantry shelf—none is wasted because it keeps sweet for several days when opened. Sold by grocers everywhere—order several tall (16 oz.) cans or by the case of 48 cans.

The Coupon Below Sent Today

will bring you free Mary Blake's Carnation Recipe Book, beautifully illustrated.

CARNATION BREAD
1 1/2 cups water, 2 cups Carnation Milk, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 cups flour, 1 cake compressed yeast, 2 teaspoons sugar. Measure the salt, sugar and cornstarch into a mixing bowl. Add the milk and water. When lukewarm add the yeast and mix thoroughly. Then add the flour gradually. When stiff enough to handle, turn the dough on a floured board and knead until smooth and elastic. Put into a bowl, cover and let rise in a warm place about one and one-half hours or until double its bulk. Then make two loaves and put in baking pans. Cover, and let stand in a warm place about one hour or until it has doubled its bulk. Then bake about forty-five minutes. This makes two loaves of bread.

SUNSHINE CAKE
5 egg yolks, 1 cup sugar, 7 egg whites, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup flour, 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar, 1/2 teaspoon orange or lemon extract. Beat the yolks and sugar thoroughly. Sift flour twice, sift sugar once, beat whites until foamy, add cream of tartar and beat until stiff. Fold sugar in lightly, add beaten yolks, then flour, and cut and fold in flour. Bake about fifty minutes in a moderately hot oven. This serves twelve to fifteen people.

This coupon entitles you to one copy of Mary Blake's Cook Book which contains over 100 carefully tested recipes. Cut out this coupon and send it to Carnation Milk Products Co. 525 N. Y. St., Aylmer, Ont.

By Ruth Cameron.

ILLNESS, A POST-GRADUATE COURSE.
Anyone who has never been ill at least once in his life has not yet completed his education. His mind may be educated but his sympathies have not been.

I know of no experience that more thoroughly educates the sympathies than a post-graduate course in serious illness.

Of course just as there are people whose minds cannot absorb a high degree of education, so there are people whose sympathies are difficult or impossible to educate.

"Her Case Is Different."
I knew a woman who went through a serious mental breakdown with all the unspeakable and incomprehensible suffering that involves, and when she had recovered from it and was asked to sympathize with another member of her family who had also broken down, she said coldly: "She hasn't been through what I had, her case is entirely different. I don't believe there is any need of her giving up the way she does. It's very hard on her husband I think. No, I don't think we ought to try and take the children for the summer. It will probably do her good to have some responsibilities."

Yet the first woman, when her illness was upon her, had been given every care and attention and luxury, and completely freed from responsibility.

"Now I Understand."
But the ordinary person, the person with sympathies capable of education, cannot go through a painful illness without thinking as each new phase of suffering reveals itself, to him: "Well, I don't wonder, people who have insomnia can't think of anything else." "No wonder Alice needed a lot of waiting on if she felt as uncomfortable as I do." "Well, I don't wonder now that it took Harry so long to get on his feet if he felt as weak as this."

It is the nature of illness to make people selfish, even normally unselfish people. The world narrows for them to the room in which they are imprisoned, and their condition becomes its axis. An anxious family fosters this impression—and then resents it when the danger is passed.

Pain is essentially an egocentricizer. We can forget ourselves and think of others when we are well, but when our bodies suddenly become assertive, our minds centre upon them.

Can You Remember Feeling This Way?
There is an excellent description of a sick man on one of Arnold Bennett's later books. The sick man is frightfully uncomfortable and this discomfort makes him regard everyone who comes near him only in the light of what they can do for him. "He wanted and wanted ravenously something from everybody he saw. The world existed solely to succor him."

Who that has once been ill cannot remember that state of mind on the sick bed has passed, and someone else in our family has been made egotistic and self-centered by the discomfort of sickness, we feel inclined to criticize. How can we dare? Why aren't we afraid that the Teacher will think our sympathies need more education and give us another post-graduate course?

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR SORE BACK.

She hated to acknowledge the Corn

So goes the old saying. And few indeed, like to confess a corn. It seems such an undainty thing—an admission of physical untidiness. One may conceal the presence of a corn, but not its ill-effect. It shows itself in the face—and the humor. That twinge in the toe means a frown on the forehead—and a thorn in the disposition. But how foolish to carry a secret sorrow in your shoe! You can end the pain in ten seconds—and the corn in two days—with a pleasant Blue-jay plaster.

Amundsen Fails in His Attempt to Drift Across the Pole

Stressmann's Illness at Conference Causes Alarm—Level Crossing Accidents Account for Several Lives.

ATTEMPT TO DRIFT TO POLE ABANDONED.
SEATTLE, Oct. 6. Captain Raold Amundsen's exploration schooner, Maud, which sailed from Seattle, June 3, 1922, with high hopes of drifting in the Arctic ice across the North Pole, returned last night. Amundsen left the vessel in Alaskan waters to lay plans for his airplane flight over the Pole. Although the Maud drifted and shouldered her way about 2500 miles west of Nome, Alaska, ocean currents carried her but little in a northerly direction. It was for this reason that Amundsen ordered the expedition abandoned.

MACMILLAN IN HALIFAX.
HALIFAX, Oct. 6. The MacMillan Arctic expedition docked at Halifax this morning.

ITALIAN DEBT MISSION THE NEXT U.S. VISITORS.
ROME, Oct. 6. Count Volpi, Finance Minister, and other members of the Italian debt funding mission to the United States have definitely decided to sail from Naples, October 22, aboard the steamer Dutillo.

SECURITY CONFERENCE PROCEEDS SMOOTHLY.
LOCARNO, Switz., Oct. 7. Germany and the Allies to-day took up their discussion in the second session of the security conference, the many thorny points of the Rhine pact of guarantees. Gustav Streessmann, German Foreign Minister, was present, looking pallid after his stroke of illness. The more difficult questions include the problem of satisfying France and her Allies, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

MARTIAL LAW IN GREECE.
LONDON, Oct. 6. Special despatches from Athens say the Greek Government has proclaimed martial law. A despatch in the Daily Telegraph quotes Premier Magalos as saying that the purpose was to establish a censorship so as to prevent political leaders from using newspapers to disturb public opinion.

Murphy's TALK ON TEA!

There's nothing so refreshing as a cup of tea. We mean GOOD TEA. It is still the favourite drink among the ladies as it was in the days of our grandmothers.

Tea fifty shillings a pound, now sells for Eighty, Seventy and Fifty cents a pound. Truth is stranger than fiction. We'll prove it if you don't believe it. "In 1669, in the reign of Charles II, the East India Company gave the first order for tea. It consisted of only two cannisters weighing 143 lbs. and was sold at fifty shillings a lb."

WE SELL TEA
for Eighty, Seventy and Fifty-five cents a lb. the latter is a good quality tea—10 lbs. for five dollars. We will sell you ten lbs. of sugar for 55 cents, providing you purchase a lb. of any of the following brands of tea: Easterbrook's Orange Pekoe, Blue Bird, Salada, Armada, Luxura and other brands of loose tea or groceries equivalent in value.

WE DON'T RECOMMEND GOLDEN PHEASANT TEA

as a cure for all ills, as Thomas Garway did for his tea which he sold in London in 1660, but we will guarantee it to be "Better than the Best" that we can offer you.

W. J. MURPHY
PHONE 587.

Store, Corner Military Road & Rawlins' Cross.

Slovakia, on the matter of French military support to those countries in event of aggression against them both. Dr. Stressmann and M. Briand emerged from the conference expressing contentment over the day's work.

LONDON'S FUTURE AIR DEFENCES.

LONDON, Oct. 6. Floating helicopter fortresses, some thousands of feet above ground, will protect London from enemy air raids in the next war, is the prediction made by a British airplane expert, following the report in the Evening News that a famous British helicopter, which had been built in greatest secrecy, had crashed and been partially wrecked when it took the air for the first time on Sunday.

TWO MORE DEATHS AT THE LEVEL CROSSING.

GUELPH, Ont., Oct. 7. P. R. Falls, of Scarboro Bluffs, and D. W. Stewart, Cooksville, were fatally injured to-day when a motor truck on which they were riding was struck by a train at Fushling Crossing, ten miles from here.

TWO KILLED IN PLANE CRASH.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Oct. 7. Watson Keerie and Harlod Chuck, were killed almost instantly to-day, at Daugherty Field, near here, when their airplane crashed. Both were said to be experienced pilots.

Britain Again Faces Prospect of Mine Tie-up

MINERS CLAIM BALDWIN'S APPROVAL OF WAGE CUT NOT PROPER.

LONDON, Sept. 25—(A.P.)—There is a new threat of trouble in the coal mine districts.

The miners are upset over a decision by Premier Baldwin, in which he accepted the contention of the mine owners, in their dispute with the Miners' Federation, of their right to reduce wages in certain regions. The miners contend that his decision is at variance with the agreement under which the Government granted a subsidy of £10,000,000 to mine owners, to enable them to maintain the current scale of wages, pending an enquiry by a Royal Commission into the entire coal situation. The immediate fear is that the present trouble, may lead to a cessation of activities in the coal industry, but much water will pass under the bridges before such a contingency materializes, as the miners will not make a final decision until Oct. 9th, when they have called a meeting to discuss the situation. Meanwhile every effort doubtless will be made to settle the trouble satisfactorily to both sides.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, and other leaders of the men, are in an angry mood. They accuse the Premier of having deliberately broken the terms of the truce, which prevented a strike. They charge him with following a mean, dishonest and perilously short sighted course, and they have withdrawn from participation in the work of the Royal Commission. They also have appealed to the entire Labor movement to support them in their insistence that the miners' wages be not reduced. The defenders of Premier Baldwin say his decision was absolutely correct.

Issue Complicated.
The matter of issue is complicated. It is largely one of principle and concerns the legitimacy of a variation of the wage basis rates at individual collieries. The miners' leaders are standing by the men in these few mines because they would, if the Government view prevails, be deprived of unemployment pay in case the owners close the pits.

Meantime a new organization, known as the organization for maintenance of supply, has been launched. Its purposes, in case a general strike occurs, to maintain supplies everywhere and keep open all services vital to the needs of the country. Its activities will embrace protection of public services, operating railways, the handling of foodstuffs, and keeping communications open through messengers should the telegraphic and telephonic services cease functioning.

The newspapers do not give the O.M.S., as it is known in abbreviated form, a reception such as augurs well for its success. It is contended that the protection of the community in circumstances such as is set forth by the O.M.S. is a function for the Government.

What the American Admiral Said to Australia

Most of us know the American Fleet has been paying a visit to Australia, and a reader from Brisbane sends us the Brisbane Courier containing the speech of the American admiral at the official reception. Admiral Coontz said:

"The world is not as large as it was 17 years ago. We have faster steamers, and we also have wireless. All through our voyage here we talked to wireless amateurs all the world over. We are now wondering whether some of the messages went round the South Pole as the shortest way to the British Isles.

"Commercial aviation is a great thing, and in time to come will be a great agency between Australia and the rest of the world. As far as steamers are concerned, I notice that most of the best steamers in the Atlantic are sent to the Pacific.

"The Pacific is the sea of the future. It is being studied and looked into. People are thinking about it more than they used to. We of the navy travel all over the world. There are 25,000 men here in Sydney, and most of them are young. Every one of these young men who goes back after the great trip is going to be a booster.

"In many respects the world is very young. European countries and some of the ancient Eastern Empires may be old, but the United States of America is young, Canada is young, and Alaska is young. Then we have Australia, New Zealand, and the islands of the North. All of them are very young, and the world grows apace. We have been very lucky in our country. We now have a population of 115,000,000.

"What has made our country so great is that in the early stages we took some of the best blood of the higher class European nations. That mixture certainly has done a wonderful thing for us. In many respects our country is like ours. As time goes by, and your great natural gifts are developed, and irrigation and other means of development are extended, the so-called Australian desert will probably come down to nothing, as our so-called desert has in America.

"But, you know, 6,000,000 is not very many people. You would be surprised how you grow when you get started. I wonder whether you people realize what a great country and a wonderful future you have. Probably it takes an outsider to see what you are going to be 20, 30 and 40 years hence.

"We will watch your future, and we feel confident that it is going to be a glorious one. For your part you should watch the other countries that are going down the scale. Get the best of what other nations can offer. You have a wonderful heritage, and I firmly believe you will keep it for all time."—Public Opinion, Sept. 18.

Secret of Keeping Young

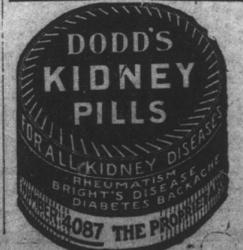

Why is it that some women look older or thirty-five than others do at fifty? Why is it that so many women are always run-down, weak, pale, nervous, irritable and unhappy? Health, vitality and freedom from pain and disease alone can prevent the signs of age from fastening themselves upon women. All over this country women are awakening to the fact that the ills, aches and pains of women may be relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the glow of health, in fact, the secret of keeping young is to ward off all internal ailments that cause premature old age, which is easily accomplished by this remarkable root and herb remedy.

Proposed New Great Lake for Canada

A novel way of overcoming the disadvantages of the diversion of water from the Great Lakes by Chicago is proposed by Mr. Lorne C. Campbell, railway builder, of Toronto.

He suggests that the Albany River, which he describes as another St. Lawrence in the north, and which flows into Hudson Bay, should be dammed so as to create a lake twice the size of Lake Ontario, and that a short cutting be made from this new lake to Lake Nipigon, when the water would flow into Lake Superior.

He has travelled all over the country traversed by the Albany River, and he declares that the physical features are such that the scheme could easily be carried out at a cost of from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000. Not only would this result in a flow of water at least twice the amount that is diverted by Chicago, and not only would it raise the level of the St. Lawrence and thus solve the water problem, but it would permit the creation of at least 500,000 million additional horse power at Niagara. The increase in water power and the lowering of the cost of navigation would amply repay the cost, he contends, and he thinks Chicago would be willing to pay well for what would mean a permanent solution of the water diversion problem. The scheme is a remarkable one, and it will certainly give a new orientation to our consideration of Canada's resources in the North, for apparently, in addition to the other benefits, it would afford a navigable highway from Lake Superior to Hudson Bay. The plan is "11 another illustration that in her

Skirts are decidedly fuller. Belted effects at the hips are interesting. The new hats fit down over the ears very snugly. Evening scarfs of sombre net are a delightful fancy. A novelty in jewelry are the rhinestone shoulder pins.

The narrow brim may roll at the sides, back or front. Hats have slightly higher crowns, sometimes rounded. Velvet grosgrain are often used on hats of velours. The French modistes insist upon long, close-fitting sleeves. Novelty hose comes in brilliant colors blended with white. Very smart and quite novel is the round neck with string tie.

Florida Estates Ramp in Britain

"GYPPERS" FROM U.S. WHO SOLD OIL LANDS TO SUCKERS.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Storily before last Christmas a disgruntled group of "fat-catchers," known in the United States as "gyppers," left England hurriedly. Their flight was hurried by an exposure which did not come before they had gathered a rich haul by selling to credulous victims supposed oil lands in the United States.

England proved such a happy hunting ground for these "gyppers" that, at the time it was predicted that their departure was only temporary, and that the shortsness of memory, of the British public and the leniency and imperfection of British laws would soon draw them back. Their return was quicker than was expected, for I now learn that several important "gyppers," with their squads of high pressure salesmen called "loaders," are again operating in London, and the New York correspondent to the Evening Daily Mail.

On their return to America the "gyppers" found that likely victims' dresses were no longer associated with Middle-West oil-fields. There had been a season of phenomenal rise in Florida property and every town and hamlet had at least one resident who had gone to Florida and made a fortune overnight through the booming land values.

Americans, thoroughly on their guard against fraudulent oil stock salesmen, were ready to bite at the bait of the Florida estates' salesmen. What might have been a period of idleness for these men was therefore turned into a profitable season.

They established estate companies in various parts of the country, and started selling, for a moderate price, lots in Florida which they glowingly promised would quickly increase in value many times over.

On guard, because of the recent oil funds, the Government Agents have given these "gyppers" only a short season here, but in less than six months some of them made large rains with which to resume operations in Britain.

The most recent of these "gyppers" to run foul of the law here before fleeing to Europe played a prominent part in the management of the Cambrian Trust, Limited, and The British Allied Estates, Limited, with offices in Kingsway.

When this man hurriedly left England last autumn he brought with him several of the "loaders" and opened offices in Chicago, under the name of the Florida Land Company. They had purchased a tract in Florida, a large portion of which is under water for the greater part of the year.

Only Half an Acre.

"Loaders" were scattered through Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Iowa to permit philanthropically each of the fortunate persons whom they selected to purchase half an acre.

Their land was pictured in a gorgeously illustrated prospectus as a suburb of the winter resort, the City of Orlando, on the Dixie Highway, high and dry and already selected as the site for a huge new hotel. It was declared that Government Agents approved their company and the glowing prospectus carried the names of prominent Chicagoans who had visited the land and praised its possibilities.

In the new company he had enlisted his brother, who had hitherto followed the more prosaic profession of a hardware store, and when Post Office inspectors, after a preliminary investigation, raided the Florida Land Company's offices, only he was caught.

His brother was already on the high seas with his other confederates, for whom Federal warrants were issued. One of those in the warrants has already been convicted of selling only "promises" in connection with a mysterious concern called the Wyoming Asbestos Syndicate.

The warrants were issued against them on a charge of using mails to promote fraud, although each "sucker" who parted with £20 got something for his money, if it was only half an acre of dismal swamp.

Several of these fugitives are already in London, although I am informed that the organizer of the gang is in the Continent directing operations from there until he is certain that it is safe for him to get nearer Scotland Yard again.

Unless the British public is on the watch, these "gyppers" stand an excellent chance of again mulling the unsuspecting to the tune of £1,000,000.

Tells of Danger to China Missions

Ottawa, Sept. 25. (C.P.)—That conditions in China were very bad for missionary work and that the anti-British feeling was still growing more intense was in part the report presented yesterday afternoon by Rev. E. Townsend, returned Chinese missionary to the Ottawa Conference of the Holiness Movement Church, in session here. Rev. Mr. Townsend, who is originally from Clinton, Ont., arrived in Ottawa yesterday morning. He came home from

Oppose Choosing Australians Only

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 25.—New South Wales is not in favor of the proposal that Australian State Governors should be chosen from Australians henceforth instead of being appointed by the British Government on the present system.

Sir George Fuller, former Premier of New South Wales, has just forwarded to the British Government a memorandum signed by 44 members of the Legislative Assembly and 36 members of the Legislative Council of New South Wales against the proposed change.

The memorandum states that there is no evidence that the public desire to alter the present system of appointment of Governors.

Higher Education as an Investment

The other day an engineer in charge of a $200,000 road construction job in Massachusetts, receiving a salary of $1,800 a year, resigned to wield a pick and shovel on the same job at 65 cents an hour, because, he said, he would be able to save money as a non-white-collar worker. Also the other day, one of a party of British newspaper men, now touring Canada, remarked, on being told the number of students at the University of Toronto and the amounts spent on education by governments and municipalities in Canada, "Don't you think you are over-educating here?"

The British Journalist's question is a pertinent one. Canada is probably spending much more per capita on education than any country in the world, and in view of the prevalence of incidents like that of the Massachusetts state engineer, it may well be asked if she is getting, or likely to get, a fair return on the investment.

Herbert Spencer defined education as "a preparation for complete living." This is a definition that could not be strictly applied to Canada's present educational system, with its over-emphasis on the scientific side. As everyone knows, Canada is not able to-day to make use of all the technical graduates turned out by her universities, colleges and hospitals, and a large proportion are forced to seek employment elsewhere, notably in the United States. Canada is thus spending millions each year to train men and women for the upbuilding of another country.

Shawinigan Stock On 8 Per Cent. Basis

ALSO ISSUES NEW STOCK AT PAR IN PROPORTION OF 1 TO 20.

MONTREAL — The long-heralded dividend increase by the Shawinigan Water and Power Company arrived this week, when the directors at a meeting placed the stock on an eight per cent. basis. The dividend is payable the beginning of October. In addition, the company will issue a new block of stock at par to its present shareholders in the proportion of one new share for each twenty shares now held.

Shawinigan is a large shareholder in the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Consolidated, and there seems little reason to doubt that the latter company also owns a considerable block of stock in the former; the present announcement, therefore, has its effect on the sister power company.

This is the first change in the dividend since 1916 and is the longest period since dividend inception that it has gone unchanged. In the eighteen years that dividends have been paid they have successively 4, 5, 6 and 7 per cent, and now the rate is on a basis just double the original amount.

The first payment was in 1907, the initial distribution in that year being 2 per cent, which was accepted as placing the rate on a 4 per cent. basis. This rate was maintained until 1911, when a 5 per cent. rate was started, although the full amount was not paid that year, becoming effective in full in 1912.

This rate remained in effect the shortest time of any of the different rates, making way for 6 per cent. in 1913 and holding until 1916, when 7 per cent. became effective.

The high point touched by the stock this year was 175 in August, which holds the record. The high point for 1924 was 137 1/2 and the low point touched since 1911 was 97 1/2 in 1920.

American Strike Helps Cape Breton

Mines Are Being Operated Double Shift — Strike Settlement May Be Political.

SYDNEY — No serious industrial trouble is anticipated from dissatisfaction of the miners over the recent strike settlement, but their resentment may take the form of making it hot for some of the politicians in the approaching Dominion elections. The principal complaints are about the abolition of "local contracts," which reduce a large number of men from remunerative "piece work" rates to a fixed daily wage.

Resolutions of protest have already been adopted, and the district officers will all meet opposition in the annual election which takes place soon, but the collieries are so prosperous at the present time that the men would not dream of suspending work for even a day.

For the first time in years the mines are working double shift every day of the week, except Sunday, and if the American strike lasts for any length of time, it is probable that steady employment may be available all winter

The Prince's Peril

NARROW ESCAPE FROM SNOW SLIDE—ROYAL BURIED IN FRONT OF LINE TRAIN.

The Prince of Wales has had some thrilling experiences during his last days in South America. For two days he was detained in Chile among the western foothills of the Andes, where snowdrifts, in places 12 feet deep, in the passes of the railway to Buenos Aires, blocked his way. After starting at last, his train had to turn back, owing to a report of a snow slide in front. This last obstruction might have proved calamitous, for it appears that the "slide" which blocked the mountain railway occurred only a few minutes before the Prince's train was

End Catarrh Germs In Three Minutes

Chronic catarrh, no matter how bad, and cases of bronchitis, asthma, now yield instantly to the amazing discovery of a new germicide. This germicide method called Laves eliminates the germs in three minutes, yet is positively harmless to the most delicate tissues. Your sufferer is relieved in a single night.

To prove it and to introduce Laves to ten thousand sufferers in one month, I offer to send a treatment free and postpaid, to any one who will write for it. Investigation is not. If it banishes your catarrh, you can repay the favor by telling your friends. If not, the law is mine. No matter what you have tried, just send me your name and address for this generous free trial, and I will send you a full and complete proof that you can be freed from catarrh.

Hale, Hearty, and 150

WORLD'S OLDEST INHABITANT AT WORK AGAIN.

The world's oldest inhabitant is Zaro Agha. He is 150, and has documents to prove it, but, despite the fact that he is well in the running for his second century, he has gleefully accepted an offer from the Constantinian authorities, to join the staff of guards at one of the imperial palaces. Zaro Agha would be still hale and hearty but for the fact that his great amount of travelling in recent years has proved too exhausting. On his return from Italy recently he had to call in a doctor, who ordered him rest and treatment in hospital for two months before he takes up his new post. Zaro was annoyed over the doctor's decision, declaring that there would be nothing the matter with him if he had not been obliged to eat so much macaroni while in Italy. Zaro Agha has been married 11 times, and is devoted to his present wife, who is only 27. The only member of the family who gives him any trouble is a son, aged 85, who

SUCCESS TO THE N.F.L.D. RUNNERS.

Dear Sir.—I saw by last night's Telegram that besides O'Toole, the N.A.A.A. are also going to send Bell, Stone and Ralph, to compete in the Halifax Herald 10-Mile Road Race.

Everybody knows how much I, with the rest of the city and country, was wrapped up in Jack Bell's success which, in 1921, he came second only to MacAulay.

I am very conservative in my likes. I am usually on with the new love before I am off with the old and then I keep on with both. On that account I sometimes get into trouble, but that is another story. Bell, in the racing world, was my old love and I must confess that even to-day my heart warms towards Jack Bell and, while wishing O'Toole and the other runners every success, I should be tickled to death if Jack Bell, a regular veteran in the racing game, should romp home first of not only his own men but of all the mighty men who will undoubtedly be competing in such a popular event.

I am asking you to put this note in your paper, because I should not like it to appear that writing of O'Toole, as I did in last night's Telegram, I do not wish Bell and the other boys every success. I do hope the best man will win. If the best man proves to be Jack Bell, I am sure that O'Toole, a steady-state sports, will be the first to congratulate him. I am certain the city and country and especially the girls will simply go wild over him. In fact the girls will go wild over him, for, after all, it is quite an honor to be one of the four men picked from the whole of Newfoundland to uphold its honor against the best men that Eastern Canada can produce and, believe me, they can produce some pretty hefty men when it comes to getting over the ground with The Halifax Herald Cup and Medals and the admiration of their compatriots as the reward of their prowess.

How About "Dominion" AS A NAME FOR THE HOTEL.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—From letters appearing in the Telegram lately there seems some difficulty in selecting a title for the new hotel. "Avhonia" would sound well but the term is not extensive or significant enough. I would suggest that it be called the "Dominion" Hotel, and for the following reasons: It is the first hotel of any pretensions built in this country. Up to date we have had only boarding houses. To it are invited patrons from the whole country and every land. It should be representative and commemorative. Was it not by Newfoundland's valiant sons at Vimy, Beaumont Hamel and elsewhere where they proved themselves equal to the best and won the distinguished title of "Dominion" for their country—that country and home which many of them should never see again.

I am sorry to bother you but I shall be greatly obliged if you would put this in your much looked for paper. Yours sincerely GEO. W. B. AYRE. October 4th, 1925.

CREDIT.

"Your credit's good on anything," our trading merchant said; "we want all men to dance and sing, and so we're giving credit. Just blow yourself by day and night, though empty be your pocket; buy anything that is in sight, and on the plate we'll chalk it." It is a noble thing to feel your stand-off has no limit; that you may buy with fiery zeal, and none will try to trim it. A large pipe organ that I bought, its tones were grand and thrilling, and when I left the store I thought I'd surely made a killing. But as I paced the village street to gain my humble shanty, I felt a coolness in my feet—how face the wife and auntie? "If there's a thing we do not need," they cried in doleful chorus, "it is that instrument—indeed, the thing will only bore us." Now every week for fourteen years you'll have to make a payment, and who will buy our kickless beers, our remedies and raiment? Next day, when to my work I went, remorse within me stronger, the boss exclaimed, "Oh, Mr. Grant, we'll need you here no longer." My eyes with scalding tears were dim, as I went forth, disgusted; I fell down stairs and broke a limb, which surgeons then adjusted. Misfortunes came, one after one, 'woe was a chronic dweller; and every week there came a man from that blamed organ seller, just now I'm having better luck. I work for Johnnie Morgan, and every week I take a buck to pay on that pipe organ. I'll never buy a thing again, though merchants plead and banter, unless I have the iron men to pay for it instantly.

By-words for the dressmaker are satchels, godets, plaits and released tucks.

Remember October 17th is the day of the Halifax Road Race. Winners in the Halifax-Marathon Sweep, which is based on this race, will share $6,450.00—will your name be amongst them? Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory

You remember in the last story, Little Reader, that dear Uncle Lucky was entertaining the Yellow Dog Tramp, Old Mr. Dog and Little Jack Rabbit. Of course you do, and you haven't forgotten the pretty song the two old bow wows sang.

Pretty soon Old Mr. Dog pulled from his pocket the Lettuce Leaf Dollar bill which he had received for his Cross Word Puzzle. "First money I ever earned with my brains," he said, with a smile and a wag of his thin tail. "I feel like a millionaire, so I do. But I must be going home to my little log hut in the Shady Forest. My friend, a tiny wren, who has built herself a nest near by, will be wondering where I am. I would hate to worry her. Many a time she has cheered me with a song." Then, picking up his cap, Old Mr. Dog said goodby and trotted off.

"Well, I must be going, too," said the Yellow Dog Tramp, after a few minutes.

"The Shady Wood is calling me. From every nest in leafy tree A little feathered friend peeps out To see if I am round about. They know when I'm beneath a tree They need not fear an enemy. They perch upon my old straw hat And talk to me of this and that," and with a wag of his tail and friendly goodby, he, too, trotted off for the Shady Forest, leaving the old gentleman rabbit and the bunny boy to eat the nice luncheon that Little Miss Mousie had set on the table.

Just as they were finishing the dessert of stewed lollypops, the Old Red Rooster locked in at the open window. "May I have the afternoon off?" he asked, with a flap of his wings.

"Going to the movies?" inquired the old gentleman rabbit, with a wink at Little Miss Mousie.

"No, siree," answered the old fowl. "Miss Plymouth Rock, my aunt, asked me to help her some day this week to move. She has rented a new bungalow, quite a neat little place."

Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory

You remember in the last story, "All right," laughed funny Uncle Lucky. "Be sure to be back early in the morning. Crow under my window as soon as you arrive. Want any money?"

"Can you spare a dollar of my week's wages," replied the Old Red Rooster.

"Don't spend it all in one place," advised kind Uncle Lucky, peeling off a Lettuce Leaf Dollar Bill from a big roll.

They perch upon my old straw hat And talk to me of this and that,"

"Earn a little every day. And put a little safe away. Then even when you're old you'll smile To find you've saved a tidy pile."

Tucking the Lettuce Leaf Dollar Bill in his feathered waistcoat pocket, the Old Red Rooster stood up on his legs and crowed three times and a half. Then strutting out to the street, he hurried down Lettuce Avenue to help his old hen-aunt move into her new bungalow. And in the next story I'll tell you what happened after that.

They're interesting

You'll find it worth a moment's study to see just what the 5 advantages are. Palmolive Shaving Cream does these 5 new things: 1-It multiplies itself in lather 10 times. 2-A tiny bit suffices for a shave. 3-It acts in one minute. Within that time the beard absorbs 15% of water. 4-The lather maintains its creamy fullness for ten minutes on the face. 5-A clean shave results, for the extra-strong bubbles hold the hairs ereg for cutting. 6-The palm and olive oil content brings fine after-effects.

WHEN we started out to produce the finest shaving cream ever offered to men, 1,000 men were asked what it should do. Nearly all of them said—"Speed up shaving." We did that—but didn't stop there. So today millions of men have adopted Palmolive Shaving Cream—and grow enthusiastic over it. It may be you'll join them—once you try it. Perhaps not. But at least try it. See just how much it does speed up shaving; just how it does contribute to ease of shaving. Accept a tube for this trial.

was perfect until after we'd made up and tested 130 separate formulas. And when you consider that we've been experts on soap for 60 years, you'll realize with what care we went at the task. In the end we won. And produced a shaving cream that has no less than 5 advantages that had never existed before.

But don't let it stop at that. Accept our offer—a tube free for you to test. Then pass judgment. We accept your verdict.

As a final touch to shaving luxury, we created Palmolive After Shaving Talc—especially for men. Doesn't show. Leaves skin smooth and fresh, and gives that well-groomed look.

Harbor Grace Notes

Conform with the Daylight Saving Act, all clocks were put back on Sunday. During the summer months this change of time has had its purpose, but now that the day has come, it is more beneficial than the hour of darkness in the winter than in the early morning.

The death of Mrs. Ambrose Pike, at the old age of 84 years, occurred here on Sunday. She was the wife of Mr. Charles Pike, who died in 1910. Mrs. Pike was born in the U.S.A. and resided in Harbor Grace for many years. She was the mother of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Bristol's Hope, on Prince Edward Island, and also the mother of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Sheppard, who resided in St. John's. Mrs. Pike was a member of the Methodist Church and was very active in its work. Her funeral was held on Sunday at the Methodist Church, and was very well attended. Rev. Mr. Pickering officiated at the church and graveside, and all that was mortal was laid to rest in the Methodist cemetery.

Lordship Bishop March left by this morning's train for Grand Falls where he will hold a Confirmation Service.

W. S. Goodwin and his assistant, Mr. Wm. Stevenson, left today for a route to Twillingate and Vista, on a professional visit.

Lloyd Hyst who had been spending his holidays at home in St. John's, returned here on Wednesday afternoon.

S. L. Sheppard, who has been in Princeton, N.J., with the "Princeton" Co., returned home recently.

Munn & Co's. schooner, Capt. Silas Noseworthy, master, arrived from Shoal Bay, Labrador on Monday morning. Mr. R. S. Munn, who spent the summer at Shoal Bay attending to business, returned home by ship.

The Danish ship Rosning, Capt. J. P. J. J. J., which came here from Dyssart, and with coal to Messrs. McRae and Sons, sailed from here on Thursday with seal and col oil, loaded by Messrs. Baine Johnson and Co. of St. John's & Crawford, Glasgow.

Wedding Bells

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas's Church on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 3rd, when Daisy Barbara Parsons and Joseph Simey were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. J. B. Elliott. The bride, who looked charming in a beautiful gown of blue silk, trimmed with lace, and who wore a hat of the same shade, entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Reuben Parsons. She was attended by Miss Marie Wornell, gowned in pink silk with hat to match, and Miss Peggy Taitte and May Howell, the former of whom acted as flower girl. The groom was supported by Mr. Samuel Way, a cousin of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom, 76 Pennywell Road, where a very pleasant evening was spent by relatives and friends of the happy couple. Amidst showers of rice and confetti the newly weds departed by motor car for Maneau's.

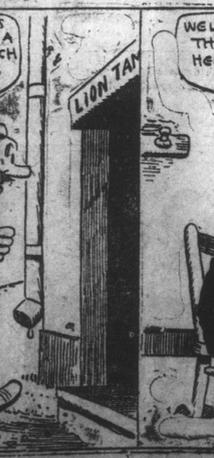

The sudden passing of Mr. Wesley Gosse, of Spaniard's Bay, which occurred on Saturday, was learned here with sincere regret by his many friends. Only a few days ago he had been in town, and it was a great surprise to find that the end had come quite suddenly shortly after dinner on Saturday, while he was about to attend to his business, and at the early age of 36 years. Truly it may be said, "In the midst of life we are in death." We understand he is survived by a wife and two children, to whom, and to all relatives and friends our deepest sympathy is extended. The funeral was held on Monday—OCT. 5th, at Harbour Grace, Oct. 6th, 1925.

Moulded Frocks.

Practically every frock in the new Paris collections shows the idea of moulding, to the extent of avoiding a breaking line in the middle of the figure, in place of the normal waist-line. In the matter of colour, black, which undoubtedly is most women's idea of elegance, is resuming its place, also navy blue, which is worn with perfect simplicity with beetroot red. Fuchsia shades have been much to the fore, now it seems as if it might change places with the so long undisputed reign of the beige family. A shade of pink, a little deeper than "Rose de Bois," will be counted very smart, since it is an excellent background for furs. Fantastical shades of green are the craze of select houses for evening wear.

"Velled" Hose.

Experts say that with an unrelieved black toilette it is smarter to wear fine black silk stockings than light ones. The stockings in question are so velled (or not velled) that the effect is like that of flesh-coloured stockings. It is not likely we shall go back to black hose yet awhile.

Bands for Shingled Heads.

Quite new is the idea of shingled heads with a wide, tight band of jewelled net, to which a very long scarf-end, bejewelled to match the band, is passed under the chin and allowed to fall down the back of the dress to the hem, almost as a train. This, threefold in its uses, and beautiful in all, should see quite a long life.

Demand for Beads.

Beads continue to be popular, the tiniest gold and silver bugles being new variations. A favourite idea is a gilette chiffon dress with narrow panels, completely covered with a silver bead design. These panels are narrow at the top and burst forth at the hem into a huge flower. Bewildering masses of bead-adorned bands swirl everywhere, the design always being fragile and small. Georgette or chiffon are the materials which look most charming so adorned.

Evening Dresses of Net.

Some beautiful evening dresses are now made from net, neutral shades being chosen for wear over luminous satins in tones of rose, violette and lettuce green. Huge leaves of gold or silver tissue are applied on to the net, which is the instant demand for more bead embroidery, allied with silver thread.

Are Potatoes Fattening?

Lovers of potatoes may derive some comfort from the expressed belief of Mr. Jack Auer, the American culture expert, that this vegetable is not fattening. It is, he says, the addition of butter that supplies the fat-forming ingredients. Butter is fatal to any desire on the part of the plump to become less plump, and next to it comes its twin sister, or other half, cream. Some women, however, go on getting fatter and fatter, though perhaps they never eat butter, cream, fat meat, pastry, sweets, nor white bread, while some, no matter how much they eat, remain thin. There must be something in certain constitutions that predisposes to fatness, just as there is something that keeps certain people lean as greyhounds.

Reducing the Weight.

On the whole, Mr. Auer, as an expert in weight reduction, compares the men and women of this country favourably with those of America. We do not hustle so much, and hustling is pernicious, especially at meal hours. In no case should one spend less than three-quarters of an hour over meals, and time should be allowed for digestion. As a rule, thin people eat more than fat, which seems a contradiction, seeing that it is over-indulgence in eating that keeps the expert in business. This particular expert sees no harm in moderate drinking, and holds that meats are all right if we eliminate fat, and that fowl and fish contain a small amount of nourishment. Just now American women are mad on weight reduction, and will go to any lengths to become shadows of their former selves.

Care of Silks.

White silk blouses and undies should be carefully washed to prevent them turning yellow. When slightly soiled, wash in a lather made of warm water and some good soap jelly by squeezing them up and down. No brush or board should be used. Tepid water should be used for rinsing to which a few drops of methylated spirit have been added. If there is no mangle, wringing should be light, and the material never twisted, but squeezed. If there is a mangle, the garment may be placed between a thick towel and wrung, provided there are no buttons to crush. Drying should only be partial, and the article rolled in a towel to be ironed at the earliest convenience. A piece of fine cotton or linen should be placed between the iron and the silk.

Lemons for Household Uses.

A lemon from which the rind has been thinly peeled, and the juice expressed, if dipped in salt or sifted ashes, will remove stains from saucapans and other kitchen utensils.

Lemon helps to whitens wood, such as kitchen tables and boards, and, dipped in powdered bathbrick, cleans Benares brass better than anything else.

Stains on clothes, stockings, and so on, can be removed by rubbing them with cut lemon or lemon dipped in salt, and immediately rinsing them.

Stains on the hands also disappear if rubbed with lemon, the shells of the used fruit being quite sufficient for this purpose.

Fried Sheep's Tongues.

Two or three cooked sheep's tongues or one tin of tongues, tomato or brown sauce, 1 egg, pepper, salt, breadcrumbs, frying fat. Skin the tongues, trim the roots, and cut them in halves lengthways. If tinned tongues be used, turn them out of the tin and remove any jelly, then wash as for fresh tongues. Brush over with beaten egg, dip in crumbs, and fry in hot fat until pale brown. Drain on soft paper, and serve piled on a hot dish. Provide brown or tomato sauce.

Fish and Potato Puree.

One to two pounds any kind of cooked white fish, milk, 2 oss. cheese, 2tbls. oza butter, salt, pepper, 1 1/2 oss. butter or margarine, and 2 hard-boiled eggs. Remove all skin and bones and flake the fish finely. Rub the potatoes through a sieve, peel and slice the hard-boiled eggs. Melt the butter in a pan, add the potatoes and enough milk to mix them to a rather moist paste. Season well and stir over the fire until hot. Grease a fireproof dish and put in a layer of potatoes, and then a layer of the fish, and then a few slices of hard-boiled egg, salt and pepper. Continue alternating layers of potato puree, fish and eggs until the ingredients are all used up, but the top layer must be of potatoes. Sprinkle this thickly with the grated cheese. Put a few pieces of margarine or butter on the top and bake in a fairly hot oven until nicely brown and quite hot.

"Tom" Did not Walk Circumspectly

A cat may look at a king, but not at high voltage power lines. A tom, belonging to an employee of the South Lorrain station, climbed a power pole, nonchalantly rested its tail on one wire and put its paw on the other. Result: nine lives snuffed out at one fell swoop, and a short which for five minutes closed down all the mines in Kirkland, Cobalt and South Lorrain.

This is reminiscent of an accident that closed down McKinley mine for a day several months ago. The watchman's dog had been accustomed to walk through a leather belt drive. Unnoticed by the dog, a chain drive was substituted. His daily short cut was cut very short one day, and the transmission equipment so doggedly disarranged that the whole works had to shut down.

BOVRIL
Broadcasts Vitality

The Druse Revolt Against France in Syria

His Majesty Attrash Pasha, Sultan of the Druses and leader of the spirited Anti-French outbreak in Syria, has been talking to a German correspondent, we are told, and declaring that the Druses must have complete independence, while the French will be permitted to act only as advisers.

"The French pressure upon the Druse people had become absolutely unbearable," General Sarrail never was ready to receive our representatives or to accept our complaints against Governor Carbillat. All the rights that the French granted to us in 1921 had been disregarded. Our leaders had been arrested, and every spying tale was heeded. I can assure you that, although the cause of the uprising was only the disregarding of the complaints of the Druse people, the movement is by no means purely local significance, and it is to be regarded as the beginning of a general revolt in Syria."

The Vossische Zeitung's correspondent's arrival was coincidental with that of the parliamentarians who had been sent to the French High Commissioner, and his report continues:

"They told me that the French peace terms called for the payment by the Druses of $5,000 as war indemnification, for full compensation by the Druses to merchants whose property had been plundered or otherwise damaged, and for the return by the Druses of the arms they had captured in action."

"Sultan Attrash told me that his reply would be that these demands were unacceptable to the Druses. The Druses felt that they, not the French, were the ones attacked and that, consequently, the latter ought to pay a war indemnity. He did not demand compensation for the Druse tribes. The Druse people would look after collecting compensation itself. The captured arms would never be returned to the French voluntarily. The Druses had won them with their blood and would keep them."

"When I told the Sultan that the French had apparently accepted the Druse Parliamentarians' demands regarding amnesty and autonomy, so that the Jebel Druse district would have a Druse Governor and could be administered by a Druse Council of State, the Sultan replied that he could not be content with mere autonomy of the Druse district, as he and his entire people demanded the complete independence of all Syria."

"When the correspondent asked what His Majesty meant by 'all Syria,' he was told that the term 'covered the Mantal country, without Lebanon, but with Alautien,' and—

"In answer to more detailed questions about the kind of independence demanded by him, Attrash said: 'We want our own free parliament, our national army, our national government, and our King or President as head of the State. The French must be satisfied, like the English in Iraq, to function only as advisers.'"

"When I went on to say that France could not grant these demands, the Sultan said that the French had 6,000 men in Syria, altogether, that they had their hands full in Morocco, and were not able to send reinforcements. On the other hand, he had plenty of friends and allies."

"Telegraph to your newspaper," he added, "that if France dares to attack the Druse people, revolt will break out in all Syria. We have but one conviction—it is better to die fighting than to live as we have until now."

After this interview with Attrash Pasha, the correspondent visited the battle-field of Mearra, where the French had been the victims of a surprise attack three weeks before." He tells us:

"There I saw many unburied French soldiers, strip of their uniforms, three wrecked tanks, which had been captured by a Druse rush and turned over by sheer muscle power, and also two cannons, and other war material left on the field."

"In Soueida, which I also visited, I saw the barracks in which the French garrison is besieged by the insurgents. The city is entirely in the hands of the Druses."

"My general impression is that the political situation is very serious, because the Sultan is being encouraged to further resistance by numerous Syrian delegations, and because the Sultan evidently counts upon a revolt in Damascus and therefore, despite his dispatching of negotiators, is in reality not inclined to begin serious peace discussions."

According to German editors, the anti-French uprising in Syria has so far caused no great losses to the French. The rebellious district, which forms a self-governing unit among the States of Syria, under the French mandate, has some 60,000 inhabitants, with a fighting force of 15,000 to 18,000 men. It is true, we are told further, that it is extremely difficult for the French to fight in this rocky and mountainous country and to send reinforcements across deserts and wilderness, and the French forces do not exceed about 6,000 men. As we are told, fighting began on August 5, when bands of Druse raiders attacked a French detachment of 170 men and massacred about 100 of them. Soon afterward the Druses attacked a large detachment of 3,000 men that was moving to the capital of the country, Soueida, inflicting losses and took considerable booty. Most of the cities of the country, protected by French garrisons, including Soueida, have been besieged or even taken by the rebels. Yet, some German editors assert, all this is but a local affair which probably will soon be ended. But there is also, they say, a wider aspect to the problem. The uprising of the Druses is only one symptom of the general dissatisfaction prevailing in Syria. The Frankfurter Zeitung says:

"Syria had always been the most cultured part of the Ottoman Empire. It was not the main bulwark of the Arab intelligentsia. The large and flourishing commercial city of Aleppo, lying at the crossing of railroads and of caravan trails, Damascus, which has been the main centre of the Mohammedan caravans ever since the days of the Caliphate, Beyruth, with its port and its Jesuit and American colleges, have always played the role of cultural centres whose influence was felt far beyond the boundaries of Syria proper. It was only with great difficulty that Djemal Pasha succeeded during the Great War in keeping Syria from separating from Turkey. When the debacle of the Turkish forces in Palestine allowed the Syrians and the Cilicians to break away from the Ottoman Empire, they were sure that the hour of freedom which had been promised to them by the Entente had come. They were, however, bitterly disappointed: like a mere African colony, proud Cyria was forced to become the mandatory territory of the European Power."

It was the French who obtained the mandate. The administrative organization of Syria was carried out by General Gouraud, High Commissioner. He acted cleverly in obeying the old formula: Divide et impera. The population of the country is homogeneous in language, but it is divided into a number of religious and confessional groups.

"There are orthodox Mohammedans, Sunnits, Druses, Ismailites, and Sheeths, and among the Christian population there are Greek Catholics, Maronites, Chaldeans, etc. The French have profited by these divisions in order to split the country into a number of States—that is to say, self-governing units. Each of these States has a constitution and a representative body, whose rights are, however, strictly limited."

One of such States, we are told further, is the country of the Druses, which became self-governing in 1921. Like the rest of the States, it is under the strict control of the French, the French Commissioner keeping his residence in its capital, the French garrisons occupying its cities. We read further in the same paper that—

"In spite of the rudeness of the military administration, and in spite of mistakes made by the French officials, for the most part men taken from the French colonies in Africa, General Gouraud was on the whole a good pacificator, especially as he respected the religious susceptibilities and prejudices of the population."

"The same, however, cannot be said of General Sarrail, who replaced him in the spring of this year, and who has already provoked the dissatisfaction not only of the Arab Nationalists, but also of the hitherto French elements of Lebanon. General Sarrail is an anti-clerical and a Radical. He is of the opinion that one should put an end to the old prejudices in Syria. He began his reformatory activities by proclaiming a lay programme for the schools of the country from which all religious education was henceforth to be excluded. This raised a storm of indignation."

A SIXTEENTH CENTURY GENEOLOGY.

Adam died of gout.

At least that is the information vouchsafed in a queer 16th century document kept in the library at the Herald's College, Queen Victoria-street, E.C., which is sometimes shown to visitors as a curiosity.

This document, the history of which is unknown, professes to trace the pedigree of the early Saxon Kings right back to Adam and Eve, among the names of those appearing in the genealogy being Our Lord, Alexander and Nebuchadnezzar.

It contains some beautifully executed and well-preserved pen and ink drawings of subjects which include the Fall, the building of the Tower of Babel, and the Ark.

Adam is stated to have died of "gout" and to have been buried at Hebron.

The document has been in the possession of the Herald's College for 250 years.

City Pigeons

MISDEEDS MAKING THEM UNPOPULAR.

Public disfavour is growing in the city against the flocks of well fed pigeons which swoop and flutter in grey clouds in front of St. Paul's Cathedral and the Royal Exchange.

Visitors to London regard them as being one of the most interesting features of the city, and delight to feed them with grain or bread. Many city workers regard them as being a great nuisance. They disfigure buildings, soil the hats and clothing of passers by, injure walls by picking lime and mortar from them, and in their search for water upset the vases of flowers at the base of the war memorial to city troops outside the Royal Exchange.

This last transgression is especially annoying to the women workers of the Bank of England, who have undertaken to keep the memorial as tidy as possible.

Although the Royal Exchange pigeons look a cleaner company than the rather disreputable birds of St. Paul's, it was stated that many of them are diseased.

Officials of the City Corporation are considering whether they shall take any action regarding the birds, the misdeeds of which were brought before the Court of Common Council in July.

Mother and Babe Prey of Flames

POURING COAL OIL ON SLOW FIRE CAUSES EXPLOSION AND FIRE.

Coal oil poured on a slow burning stove fire cost Mrs. Vilda Legault, aged 28, of 104 Market Street, Valley field, and her daughter Laurette, aged two and a half years, their lives, recently.

The baby was found burned to a cinder on the floor of the kitchen by firemen when they broke open the door, while the woman, who rushed flaming out of the house to summon aid, imploring neighbors to save her child, died of her burns in the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Valleyfield, shortly after being admitted there.

Dr. Bessner, coroner of the District of Valleyfield, opened and adjourned the inquest.

During the course of the fire, which followed an explosion as coal oil, poured into a stove to excite the smouldering coals came in contact with the flames of the stove, Vilda Legault was summoned from his work at the Montreal Cotton Mills, and was about to dash into the house to save his wife when he learned that she had already left the building. He knew nothing then of the fate of the child. Doctors and nurses fought all night to save the woman's life, but she died from multiple burns about the head, face and arms.

An Old Age Recipe

Methuselah ate what he found on his plate.

And never, as people do now, did he note the amount of the calorie count—

He ate it because it was chow. He wasn't disturbed, as at dinner he sat.

Destroying a roast or a pie. To think it was lacking in granular fat.

Or a couple of vitamins shy. He cheerfully chewed every species of food.

Untouched by worries or fears. Lest his health might be hurt by some fancy desert.

And he lived over nine hundred years!

At a certain meeting the speaker said, fervently:—

"He drove straight to his goal. He looked neither to the right nor to the left, but pressed forward, moved by a definite purpose. Neither friend nor foe could delay him or turn him from his course. All who crossed his path did so at their peril. What would you call such a man?"

"A lorry driver," shouted a voice from the audience.

The Eastern CAP
Canada's National Headpiece

Mr. Saklatvala
Mr. Saklatvala, M.P., has been on Mr. Kellogg's Secretary of State, made it clear that that country is a place for such a man.

MR. SAKLATVALA FOISTED HIMSELF
The British delegation to the Inter-Parliamentary Union's Conference which is to be held in Washington next month and is to be continued in Canada. Since it was undoubtedly his intention to spread his anti-British propaganda before this assembly of the world's Parliaments his projected address aroused the national resentment which has been reflected in the columns of The Daily Mail.

Within two hours of the announcement of the American ban, the two berths which the Parsee had booked for himself and his wife in the Cunard ship Caronia, which sails for New York to-morrow, were taken by Col. C. Woodcock, M.P., and Sir Robert Bird, M.P., who had withdrawn from the delegation so long as the Parsee was included in it.

Mr. Saklatvala now declares that, although he does not intend to go direct to the United States, "entering by Canada or going to Canada to join the conference there is another matter."

The resignation of Mr. Saklatvala from his post as a departmental member in the Oriental firm of Tata, limited, the iron and steel corporation, which has a capital of £4,000,000, was announced recently. The Parsee, who is related to the Tata family, explained that his recent ac-

Legends of the Air
EARLY STRUGGLES TO DEVISE WAYS OF TRAVEL BY AIR

In these days of circumnavigation, super-Zeppelins and luxurious air express, one recalls with a smile the earliest struggles of the human mind to devise ways of travel by air.

The first airman was the mythical Daedalus, who, according to an ancient fable, lived three centuries before the Trojan war. He built in Crete the famous labyrinth. Being imprisoned with his son, Icarus, by King Minos, he invented instruments of flying, the wings being fastened on with wax. The old records say that this caused the death of Icarus, who flew so high that the heat of the sun melted the wax and the wings dropped off. Daedalus himself got to Sicily. King Minos must have been surprised when his prisoner escaped by air!

There is an old Indian legend, which runs thus: Rama, King of Ayodhya, in the north of India, had been exiled, along with his lovely wife, Sita, to the jungles of the Deccan. The demon monarch of Ceylon, Ravana, abducted Sita while she was wandering in the forest, and carried her off to his island home. Rama, with the assistance of the monkey king, marched south to avenge the outrage.

The monkey king built a series of stepping stones over which the swimmers marched on to the island. There, Rama slew Ravana and rescued his lady alive and unhurt. The problem then was how to get back to Ayodhya.

A great air machine was fitted out, according to the story, and so capacious was it that it contained splendid rooms, furnished with seats and cushions. Rama was able to invite the monkeys and bears which had helped him in the expedition to accompany him and his wife as fellow-passengers.

To the Hindu, aviation is not a new departure. In view of this ancient legend, it is rather a rediscovery. The idea has been working in men's minds from remote antiquity. Aladdin's palace, flying from one country to another, wondrously anticipated the modern air vessel, even as the conceptions of Jules Verne foreshadowed other scientific discoveries.

In a letter to Dr. Samuel Johnson, dated 1784, he says: "We have a flying machine, resembling the help of fumes and vapours, it making better than Daedalian wings, with which he will master the balloon, as an eagle masters a goose. Eight hundred pounds has been raised for the workmanship of iron wings."

"The whole is said to weight two hundred pounds—no specious preparation for flying, but there are those who expect to see him in the sky." In Samuel Johnson's novel, "Rasselas," occurs this passage: "The maker appeared on a little promontory, furnished for flight. He waved his pinions awhile to gather the air, then leapt from his stand and in an instant dropped into the lake."

Enter by Canada.
I certainly do not intend now to proceed direct to the United States, but entering by Canada or going to Canada to join the conference there is another matter.

American public opinion has yet to be consulted, and if my political advisers (the Communist Party) think that the raising of the issue is advisable, I intend to go to Canada.

I place myself at their disposal, and if they think I should not be excluded, I will go to the frontier, knock at the American door and wait to be called within.

He has a little chance, however, of reaching Ottawa as he has of entering New York Harbour. As a British subject, he can go to Canada without a passport, but at Quebec he would have to undergo a verbal examination by the immigration authorities as to whether or not he seeks the overthrow of constitutional administration by revolution. He could not, of course, honestly give a negative answer to such questions, and would be interned in the Detention Building until the Canadian Court of Inquiry ordered his return to Britain.

Diabolical!
Mr. Saklatvala's indignation at the embargo placed on him was revealed to a party of London newspaper representatives he invited to meet him at his house in Hampstead. He said: "The decision is diabolical and dastardly. I do not object to criticism however pungent, and would never consult the police or a magistrate regarding the threats I receive. But Mr. Kellogg's verdict is the limit. The belief that he was tutored and inspired by British political influence to take the step he has done is more than mere speculation. It is a positive fact revealed by evidence in my possession."

Colour on the Road
"Safety on the roads depends, to a large extent, on the eyesight of drivers. This, however, does not mean merely their power to see an object; it means also their power to direct their attention to it." says "A Student of Medicine" in the Liverpool Post.

"A recent experience, extending over some 2,500 miles, has convinced me that the distinction is of much greater importance than is generally realised.

"I found, for example, that I was aware of the approach of dark-coloured cars sooner than cars coloured grey or light blue. In one instance I failed to see a grey car until the time left for getting out of its way was reduced almost to vanishing point. My sight is unusually acute, and I am not colour blind. That failure was due to the fact that the grey car was accompanied on the road by a vehicle painted bright red.

"It is a well-known fact of optics that a conspicuous colour, obscures one which is inconspicuous, just as a bright light outshines a dim one.

"It is also a well-known fact that light browns and greys are 'protective' in the sense that they blend indistinguishably with their surroundings. Neither do these protective colours show the dust nearly as much as colours which are conspicuous.

"The result is that the power of detection possessed by other drivers is strained, and the time in which action can be taken when passing, or avoiding, these inconspicuous vehicles rendered shorter than the time at disposal when encountering vehicles painted in more definite colours."

Segregation of Germs is Often Very Difficult

MILLIONS OF THEM CAN PLAY TAG ON HEAD OF PIN.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 25.—"Bacteriologists tell us that there are germs so small that a million of them could play tag on the head of a pin and still have plenty of room to grow and raise families," declared Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general United States Public Health Bureau, recently.

A germ is a rather large germ when it would require a mere four or five thousand bunched together to be barely visible to the naked eye, he continued.

The germ of bubonic plague is of fairly large organism. It takes only about forty thousand of them laid side by side to make an inch. It requires about sixty-five million typhoid bacilli a drop of anti-typhoid vaccine.

A porcelain filter will strain out such germs as these, but there are disease germs so infinitely small that under a little pressure they pass through the closely grained porcelain filters with the same ease that gnats flies through an open window.

Germs are known by a wide variety of names such as bacteria, bacilli, cocci, vibrios and so on.

Each group of germs has its special traits and habits, friends and enemies, but all of them are connected in some way with the great mystery called life. So far as we know, germs are the lowest form of life.

They are so far down in creation that it is often impossible to tell whether a particular kind is of an animal or vegetable nature and they are so much alike that it is hard to tell them apart.

Many Germs Identified.

By the use of powerful microscopes and by other means scientists have identified many hundreds of different kinds of germs and have become so well acquainted with them that they know just where they like best to live, what they feed upon, how fast they multiply and the conditions under which they thrive or die.

When an unknown disease crops out somewhere, whether a disease of human beings, or animals, or of plants, the first act of the scientist is to become acquainted with the germ that may cause the disease.

He must learn all about it, where it lives, how it grows, what it eats, and what food chemicals disagree with it. Once he becomes familiar with its habits, he is ready to wage war against it.

In order to become familiar with any particular kind of germ it must be captured and held in captivity under favorable conditions for growth and development.

The florist takes out his plants and transplants them to his greenhouses where he may study and develop them.

In the same way the bacteriologist takes disease germs embedded in specimens from sick patients and transfers them to his laboratory where they are kept in the proper kind of containers, nurtured and studied.

When the bacteriologist sets out to study a germ he finds that he has quite a bit of work ahead of him. Before he can hope to accomplish anything he must separate the particular germ he is after from the multitude of other germs it is associated with.

A Difficult Task.

As bacteria are very sociable, he finds anywhere from two to three to a dozen different kinds of organisms in the specimen he wishes to examine, and how to get rid of the foreign bacteria and still leave a nice colony of the particular kind of germ is often an exceedingly difficult thing to do.

Germs are so small that the individuals are as clear as crystal and you might examine a drop of water teeming with thousands of germs and not be able to see them with a powerful microscope unless they were given special treatment. In order to make the invisible the bacteriologist puts his germs through a process of staining.

For example, let us say he is examining a specimen of sputum for tuberculosis. He smears a piece of glass with the sputum and drops on several kinds of chemical stains. When these stains are dry the tuberculosis germs stand out under the microscope as beautiful red rods in a blue background.

Different kinds of germs take different kinds of stains, blue, red, green, violet or brown. By this fortunate discovery, the bacteriologist is often able to look through his microscope and tell at a glance what kind of germs he is dealing with, but staining alone is not sufficient to identify many germs.

There are certain germs for which identification methods have not yet been worked out, such as for instance, the germs of smallpox, scarlet fever and measles. No one has as yet seen these germs, not even with the most powerful microscopes.

One of the aims of those at work in the germ laboratory is to find out what kind of drugs or anti-toxins harmless to human beings will kill the germs so that when a person comes down sick with a germ disease he may be given a medicine that will not harm him but one which will kill the disease germs in his body. It is even possible to administer remedies that will prevent the disease for years or during life in some cases.

Some germs like to live in the cold, but most of them prefer a warm temperature. The bacteriologist accommodates his dangerous pets by bottling them up and giving them the right kind of food and temperature.

These bottled germs are known as cultures.

The study of germs in the laboratory is a most fascinating pursuit, but it is not an occupation at all suitable for nervous people. It is too dangerous.

Some of our best laboratory workers are women.

They appear to possess plenty of nerve, they are very persistent in their research and are careful. All of these qualifications are necessary in a good germ detective.

The laboratory worker is daily surrounded by deadly enemies and one little accident in the handling of disease germs may mean the end of all things for him.

Ocean Cables

New loaded cables are to be laid next year in the Pacific Ocean which will work at more than twice the speed of the Atlantic Cable over twice the distance. To gain the full benefit of this development in the service, the Atlantic system, it is being urged in Australia, must be made more efficient, for otherwise the traffic will be delayed in the Atlantic bottle neck.

The view is taken in Australia, and it was supported yesterday by a high authority in London, that the Pacific Cable Board should make the necessary arrangements with the existing companies. From the strategic point of view, this authority pointed out, the British Government already own two of the old style of cables across the Atlantic, and they can always be held in reserve for strategic purposes.

"There is no question," it was stated, "that the loaded cable is the cable of the future. By means of a special wire wound round a copper conductor, the carrying capacity and speed of the loaded type of cable have been greatly increased. At the present time, indeed, there is greater capacity to be got out of the loaded cables than out of the instruments that work them. There is no doubt that this and other problems with which we are at the moment confronted, will be solved, and no one would think of laying a long cable to-day other than a loaded cable. The Eastern Extension Company have contracted for a cable about 1,700 knots from Cocos to Australia, part of their through route from Europe to Australia, which will give them, they hope, a very greatly increased carrying capacity."

As to the effect on the future cost of cables of this development, it was remarked that if a loaded cable will carry two hundred or three hundred per cent more than the best known cables in the past at an increased cost of only about thirty per cent, it stands to reason that in the course of time, when these cables are laid, it will be possible to reduce the rates. In the new loaded cable which has been laid between the Azores and America the speed of transmission has been raised from 300 letters a minute for the old type of cable to 1,800 letters a minute. In the construction of this cable new alloys were used.

The Prince's Compassion

There is a moving story of the Prince of Wales told by Sir Almeric Fitzroy in his recently published book of Memoirs, which, although not new, is worth reproducing in Sir Almeric's own words. On May 1, 1923, the diarist notes:

A very remarkable story is told me of an act of mercy performed at his own inspiration by the Prince of Wales while in Belgium this week. One of his tasks was to visit a hospital for the special treatment of English soldiers suffering from facial disfigurement, the greatest difficulty of which is the extreme sensitiveness of the victims of any suspicion of curiosity or recoil on the part of a visitor.

The Prince had seen all the cases produced, and, noticing that there were only twenty-seven cases present out of twenty-eight known to be in the institution asked for the twenty-eighth.

The officer-in-charge proceeded to explain that his was a case of such a frightful, not to say repulsive, character, that it was not thought well to include him with the rest, whereupon the Prince said he had undertaken the job and refused to have anyone deprived of his sympathy who had, it seemed, the highest claim to it.

He was at once taken to the patient's room, went straight up to the man, and kissed him.

"Surely (adds Sir Almeric) an act of compassion entitled to live in history with Philip Sidney's cup of water on the field of Zutphen. He who can so bear himself in the dread presence of extreme misery must have a genius for pity."

Gun as Present for Young Lady

London, Sept. 25.—Gifts made to Miss Elizabeth Murray Ballie, only child of the late Colonel F. D. Murray Ballie, of Cally, near Gatehouse, on her coming of age, seem to reflect the spirit of the time. It is no longer fashionable for young women to be feminine.

The gifts which Miss Ballie has had give the impression of celebrating fittingly her entry into man's estate. She has been presented with a sporting gun by the tenants, with a gun case by the employees, and a gold cigarette case by the townspeople of Gatehouse.

It is not so long since a string of pearls, or at least some pretty piece of jewellery, was held to be the harmonious tribute to a young woman's attainment of official discretion. It may not be long before she frankly prefers a cabinet of cigars or a case of pipes.

Scottish Crop Best in Years

London, Sept. 28. (Canadian Press Cable).—The in-gathering of the Scottish harvest was completed last week. The crops this year are the heaviest and best in quality of the crops in recent years. Experts say that the yards in which the grain has been stacked have not been so full within the memory of any person in Scotland and in some cases there is almost double the average yield of grain stored away.

In consequence of the unusual yield the threshing mills are at a premium.

Some of the Scottish farmers held thanksgiving services in the open fields on Sunday in gratitude to the Almighty for the bountiful harvest.

Screw in Lung

"CAUSE OF A COLD" REMOVED AFTER 40 YEARS.

In a Massachusetts hospital a woman is now recovering from a most remarkable operation. Surgeons have just removed from her lung a screw which had lodged there for more than 40 years. Mrs. Ida Ferguson of Canton, Mass., accidentally swallowed the screw when a child, but, fearing parental chastisement, failed to tell her mother. For the past several years she suffered regularly from cough, the lungs, but doctors were unable to discover the cause. The hospital authorities declare that Mrs. Ferguson's operation has broken all records for the length of time foreign objects remained in undisturbed "captivity," till now the record was held by a man whose lung a tack was embedded for 35 years.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

COULD LIFE BE LIVED OVER?

Without complaint, my life I'd live
And take what fortune has to give,
For whether slow or swift my pace
With friendliness my path I'd grace
And no man here should be my foe
Unless he willed to have it so.

Neither to riches, wisdom, fame,
Nor any art which man can name
Would I be slave to that extent
Peace could not follow where I went.
I would, whatever post I fill,
Remain a kindly neighbor still.

I'd play the man with men, and yet
My childhood I would not forget
Some memory of earlier days
I'd keep for every boy who plays,
And who had once been friend to me
My friend forever here should be.

As to the soul, men rush to save
From perils just beyond the grave,
With that I would be much concerned,
Before the last bleak mile I'd turned,
And try to have, for Him who gave
A soul that He would wish to save.

Presentation to Mr. Charles White

Mr. Chas. White of LeMarchant Road was tendered a surprise party last night by several of his friends, the occasion being the anniversary of his birthday. He was also presented with a very handsome pipe on behalf of these present by Mr. A. Sutton, who in making the presentation made a very neat speech. He spoke of Mr. White's good fellowship, his splendid character, his hospitality and his readiness to those he met day by day.

Mr. White, although taken by surprise, made a very sincere reply, thanking the donors for their beautiful gift as well as for the kind wishes expressed in the presentation, both of which would long be cherished by him. Refreshments were then served. Games and songs helped to pass the time pleasantly and the gathering terminated at midnight with the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and the National Anthem. It is the earnest wish of all friends that Mr. and Mrs. White will be spared to enjoy many happy years to come. C. H.

Popular Lady Given Farewell

Saturday afternoon during lunch hour the employees of G. Knowling, Ltd., met for the purpose of saying farewell to Miss E. Hammond, who is leaving by the S.S. Sackem on an extended visit to Canada. Miss Hammond has been in the employ of the above firm for a number of years occupying a position of responsibility. Miss Hynes, on behalf of the employees, in a few well chosen words, presented her with a purse of gold expressing their hearty good wishes and her voyage to which Miss Hammond (though taken by surprise) very suitably replied thanking the donors for the very handsome gift.

A Great-Grand Son Tells the Story

"As one of the few living descendants of the author of the hymn Abide with Me," Mr. W. Maxwell Lyte writes to the Times, saying that: "It is only those who know the tragic circumstances under which this beautiful hymn was written who can explain the inner meaning of the words, 'Fast falls the eventide.'"

"My great-grandfather, the Rev. Henry Francis Lyte, the author of the hymn, was vicar of Lower Brighthelm, in those days a picturesque little fishing village on the shores of Torbay. He was the author of numerous poems and hymns, some of which are in Hymns Ancient and Modern.

"During the latter part of his life he devoted himself to the service of the humble fisher folk of Brighthelm, among whom were many of his best friends. His labours undermined his health, but he persisted in his noble work until his health broke down completely under the strain and his doctor told him he must go abroad at once. He was then dying of consumption.

"He preached his farewell sermon the following Sunday evening in Lower Brighthelm Church, and, after the service, walked slowly home to his house at Berry Head. It happened that on that night there was one of those glorious sunsets which are sometimes to be seen at Torbay.

"The sun was setting in a blaze of glory and the purple hills of distant Dartmoor stood out darkly against a flaming sky. In the foreground was Brighthelm Harbour, like a pool of molten gold. Several times on the way home the poet stopped to rest and to gaze on this wonderful manifestation of nature.

"We can well imagine his feelings. He had just said 'Good-bye' for the last time to his parishioners, and he knew that he had only a few weeks at most to live. The setting day reminded him insistently of his life, which was drawing to its close.

"It was during this walk that he prayed that before he died he might be allowed to write one message of consolation to humanity which would endure for ever. On arriving home he went to his study, and there and then wrote the immortal hymn which has enriched our language and brought comfort and consolation to millions.

"His prayer was, indeed, answered. No one who knows the circumstances under which the hymn was written can sing it without feeling some of the emotion which inspired the poet. He wrote about the eventide of his own life."

Trade Unionists Oppressed—Big Strikes Kept Secret.

From the International Labour Office at Geneva there has been issued this week a document sent there for registration which exposes the tyranny and maladministration under which trade unionists suffer in Soviet Russia.

"The document also proves conclusively that deception was practised on the British trade-union delegates who visited Russia, and afterwards presented a glowing account of the condition of the workers' organisations in that country.

It further gives the lie direct to the statements on this subject made a few days ago to the Trades Union Congress at Scarborough by M. Tomsky, present on the All-Russia, Trade Unions' Federation. It was largely on the strength of M. Tomsky's statements that the congress was induced to empower its general council to take steps to link up the movements in the two countries.

The disclosures are set out by M. Andreiev, chairman of the Russian railwaymen's union and secretary of the Central Trade Union Council—a body over which M. Tomsky presides. In a circular to the affiliated organisations throughout Soviet territory, demanding, on behalf of the council, immediate reconstruction and reform of the amazing abuses that were concealed from the British delegation.

A Bland Admission. At the outset of his communication M. Andreiev blandly confessed to past deceptions, with the remark: "There is no intention this time of talking merely to impress foreigners."

In a covering explanation of the reason for the issue of the document the International Labour Office states: "The underlying motive of the campaign is the fear that the lack of contact between the trade unions and the working classes may be yet further emphasised in the future. This lack of contact has been caused by certain very serious irregularities and defects in trade union organisation which have sprung up, due to a large extent to the irresponsibility of trade union officials."

The interests of the workers were lost sight of, to an alarming extent, and this in certain districts led to keen discontent among them and almost to a rupture between them and the unions.

M. Andreiev states that trade union officials in Russia have lost all contact with the working masses and have ceased to feel any responsibility towards them.

Stolen Funds. To prove this, he quotes the serious labour disputes, followed by strikes, which have taken place in the large-scale State industries this year. No news of such events was allowed to reach the outside world.

In his view, as also in the view of the Central Council, the main reason for this state of affairs is the bureaucratic spirit, inertia and irresponsibility of the trade union officials, as well as their lack of comprehension of the workers.

Another question which has become increasingly serious in recent months, M. Andreiev says, is that of trade union finance. At all recent meetings of trade unions in Russia, he declares, it has been stated that embezzlement, corruption, legal advances, and the like, have been alarmingly frequent. The embezzlement of trade union funds has increased considerably and is still increasing.

Parcel Election. The situation, continues M. Andreiev, has been aggravated by the fact that, in the great majority of cases, the elections to trade union organisations, and especially to work councils, are confined to the mere formality of accepting the official list.

The outgoing committee does not always submit a report on its administration to the general meeting, and
