Months passed, and Tom became almost as one of the tribe. Then came a famine such as the oldest chiefs had never known before. Many were the envious glances cest at Tom's plump, sturdy little figure, and his foster mother became more watchful than ever.

One night as he lay asleep she touched him on the shoulder. "Come," she whis pered, and as Tom sprang lightly up she placed a finger to his lips. Then taking him by the hand she led the way through the bush.

Finally, when they were almost exhausted by hunger and fatigue, the slender wire of one of the telegraph lines that stretch across the Australian wilderness was seen on strong poles reaching high above the stunted trees. The woman gave a cry of delight. In an instinctive way she knew what the wire was. She had seen one once before and had been told by her superstitious chief that through it the white man talked with their God.

She determined to try to talk with the

(From the Kentville Advertiser.) to send after this little one whom she loved so well and for whose safety from her hungry tribe she had worked so hard.

She prostrated herself before the pole and prayed for the boy's deliverance all that day and most of the night. Then it occurred to her that if she placed her lips close to the wire itself the white man's God would surely hear and answer.

Before she began the climb up the pole, she fashioned a rude sling out of her skirt to hold her at the top while she talked to God.

With this in her teeth she started. Higher and higher up the bare pole she crawled, clutching it desperately with arms and legs, stopping every foot to resc, praying all the time. Great splinters tore her skin, and a little stream of blood from her wounds ran down the pole. She did not mind. Her The aunouncement that the Hotel Aber

The first of July comes in midwinter south of the equator, which explains why the passengers on the deck of the big ship Canada from Montreal to Melbourne, drew their wraps closely about them on the evening of the day they would have at home celebrated with firecrackers and feasting.

Among these passengers was the Thurston family, late of Toronto—father, mother and four children. A girl baby was the youngest of them; then came 7-year-old Tom and after him a sister and brother almost grown up. Mr. Thurston owned real estate at Melbourne, and he had decided to live there in the future.

How much more foolish and ill-advised does it appear when it i seen that ninety-nine out of every hundred men among the strikers have no grievance whatever against their own employers, but are striking out of sympathy with the em ployes of the Pullman Company. That is, they are punishing their employers, who have used them all right, because the employ ers of some other workmen have not. Tha is about as reasonable as a good many other strikes have been.

The Twelfth at Margaretville.

Sir,—I notice by advertisement in your last issue, that the people of Margaretville of Margaretville are intending this year to celebrate the glorious twelfth after the manner of year taken place between labor and capital among our neighbors to the south. The last few years have witnessed many of these over there, each succeeding one appearing to be more far reaching in the numbers affected by it, and more destructive to the life and property of those engaged in it. But the great railway strike sow going on surpasses anything of the kind ever witnessed before, and from present appearances it bids fair to bring about such a conflict between certain labor unions and the federal authorities as will come dangerously near to civil war.

The trouble began with the employes of the Pullman Car Company, at Pullman, asuburb of Chicago, who struck in consequence of a reduction of wages, which the company's officials declare was rendered necessary by the business depression. Then the American Railway Union took up the cause of their fellow-laborers and declared a boycottagainst all railway companies using Pullman cars, and ordered out all the employes of such companies. This action of the railway business of the central states is paralyzed. Now the various trades unions have come forward and threaten to call out their entire membership of over 150,000 men if the demands of the Pullman Company's employes be not granted.

In the meantime the railway companies, laiming that it is an injustice for them to suffer in consequence of a dispute between considered in summer, is especially so long, long ago. Reader, if you want to suffer in consequence of a dispute between considered the fight as in the bank and some of its can be a summer of the day and summer of the property in the summer is a summer of the property in the property in the summer of the p

Suicides are Insane.

That is the verdict of Professor Forbes does not think that any legal penalties, orld. The only measure he can recomso that they will cease to want to get out of and longer the third, than to turn them out pier for the people with the suicidal mania, it. How to do this, however, Dr. Winslow does not say, and there is the rub. How to make ourselves and others happier and more comfortable in this dreary world is the problem that concerns all of us, even those who have least desire to get rid of life.

There is a strange disproportion between the sexes with regard to suicide. Where 73 men kill themselves only 27 women do. This makes the popular doctrine that men are stronger minded than women look a little shaky. Dr. Winslow says the greater the anxiety lest they fail to support those brains are turned and they commit suicide oftener than women. But this conclusion is therefore have no families dependent on self murderers were well to do bachelors, with plenty of friends and apparently not a care in life. The insanity that prompts self murder is usually an infinite and overwhelm ing weariness and disgust of life. It often comes to those who have lived selfish lives, caring for none but themselves. No wonder they get tired of it.

Birds in the Choir.

CAGED CANARIES INTRODUCED IN CHURCH Pastor Bobbins, of the Lincoln Park Baptist Church, inaugurated a beautiful new feature of his services to-day. He had announced that he would preach two sermons in reference to spring, the growing season, and on song birds. Accordingly he asked that members of his congregation, as many as could, bring canary birds to church.

The results were that there were 40 cages of birds in the church this morning when the service opened. The cages were hung the sides of the organs, at one side of the noises in the church were soft or loud. The

When Sunflowers Do Good.

People who are unfortunate enough to live in damp houses, particularly near undrained land, are apt to think that there is no help for them save in removal. They are mistaken. Successful experiments have shown that it is quite possible to materially improve the atmosphere in such neighborhoods in a very simple manner-by the planting of the laurel and the sunflower. The laurel gives off an abundance of ozone, whilst the "soulful-eyed" sunflower is poent in destroying the malarial conditi These two, if planted on the most restricted cale in a garden close to the house, will be ound to speedily increase the dryness and salubrity of the atmosphere, and rheumatism, if it does not entirely become a memory of the past, will be largely alleviated.

For Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, Cramps, Colic, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, and Summer Complaint Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is a prompt, safe and sure oure that has been a popular favorite for over 40 years.

-A prominent English physician of long experience with drunkards says that he can recall hundreds of recoveries among men, but only five among women. Has it occurred to him that the number of cases in the two sexes might be in about the same pro portion, possibly?

—Alex. Stephen, Senr. Esq., of Halifax, says; I suffered some time with Asthma and Bronchitis, accompanied with nervous exhaustion; and after using three bottles of Puttner's Emulsion was completely revived, and am to-day perfectly free from either Asthma or Bronchitis, and my nervous system much invigorated.

Agricultural.

When he came out of his drunken sleep, he found himself in a small room alone. He was lying on a narrow cot, still dressed, and his head was throbbing wildly. Looking about the meagrely furnished room, with the old, despondent feeling tugging at his heart strings, he caught sight of a pistol lying on a chair. It seemed to fascinate him. Staggering to his feet, he reached it and looked it over fondly.

The click of the trig. The cow must be given much liberty to breathe perfect air winter and summer even at the cost of some present profit, and her water must be as pure as the dew-drop on a turnip. My father in heaven taught me most of these things, and his twelve living children bear witness of its truth. Mothers, insist on having pure milk. Proclaim that a cow standing months in her stall though fed with a golden spoon from a silver manger cannot give pure milk. Suc-culent food—succulent food preserved without mold, acid or must-must be provided. The cows that gave the milk that gave food and medicine to perhaps the largest, toughest and longest lived family of "milk cranks" on the face of the earth were fed liberally with roots every winter of their nights for a few weeks. Change the horse stock from hay to grass gradually. When grass is abundant it is better for the animals to run out only about a half hour the first day, an hour the second and let them get their fill of grass at once. A little tar with a few drops of carbolic acid added, rubbed beneath the under jaw and upon the breasts of colts that run in pastures bordered by swamps of woods, will prevent a great deal of annoyance from mosquitoes and small flies which sometimes bite the parts named until they are a solid blotch

The superficial observer sees apples on a tree two inches in diameter and on another four inches, and at once pro nounces the larger ones twice the size of the smaller, four being twice the number two; but he decides hastily, for the cube of the two is only eight while the cube of four is 64 or eight times the size of the smaller, an from the gas brackets, around the walls, on and it would require eight times as many pecimens of the smaller to fill a barrel.

Sick-room Hints.

For nausea scorch some rice, pour boiling rater over it, and drink as hot as possible. Instead of keeping ice in a dish where it will quickly melt, tie flannel loosely on the dish so that it drops into the bowl, and keep the ice in this flannel bag.

A cooling wash for the sick-room is made in the following way: Take of rosemary, wormwood, rue, sage, lavender and milt, each a large handful. Place in a stone jar, and pour into it one gallon of strong cider vinegar. Cover closely and keep near the fire for four days. Then strain and add one ounce of powdered camphor gum. Bottle and keep tightly corked. It is very aromatic and refreshing in the sick-room, and another method of using it is to wash the face and hands with it before exposing one's self to any infection.

In dropping medicine into a spoon, place
the handle between the leaves of a closed book lying on the table, and then both hands may be used in dropping the mixture.

HE MOVING TALE OF HIS SHOPPIN "John," said the practical wife to her netaphysical husband, "I wish you would go down street and get me three yards of thing less abstruse than Kant's philosophy, started off on his errand, repeating his wife's command over and over on his way, lest he should forget it.

"Three yards of white lace and two pounds of sirloin steak. Three yards of white lace and two pounds of sirloin steak,' he kept repeating over and over all the way to the store. But before he arrived the steak and the lace were badly mixed in his mind. When he reached the dry-good store he was repeating rapidly to himself:
"Three pounds sirloin lace and two yards of white steak. Two yards of white sirloi and three pounds of steak lace." He was conscious that he was somewhat mixed, but he knew he wanted lace of some and bone, mash smooth, spread a slice of kind. So he marched up to the young sales. "I want some lace."

"Yes, sir," she replied. "What kind,

"Sirloin lace, I believe." "Why really," replied the saleswoman, that must be a new variety which we have not yet secured. Are you sure that is the

"No," said John, "I only know I want three pounds of lace of some sort." "But we do not sell it by the pound,"

"Well, then," said John, "I'll take three "We do not sell it by the gallon, either," she said, holding in the earthquake snicker that was bursting within her; "we sell it by the yard." "Well, then, give me three yards," said John, "but be sure it is not stale. I always insist upon having fresh food upon my table. "But lace isn't food," said the saleswo

"Well, give me three pounds-er-yards of it, whatever it is and let me get off. "But what kind do you want sir?" asked the saleswoman. "Point lace, applique, beaded, Brussels, Chenille, Cluny, Mechlin, Honiton, Dresden, Valenciennes, Damaras cene, antique or Saxony?"

better turn them all in the can together, stir 'em 'round and mix 'em up, and then I shall be sure of getting some of the kind my wife wanted me to get. The irrepressible giggle here burst forth and the saleswoman's life was saved.

After she had recovered from her spasm of laughter, she said: "Perhaps you can assist me in selecting the lace if you will tell me for what pur "Well, she is putting up canned peaches,

PLAIN PROOF OF AN ALABI IN THE MATTER The prosecuting attorney in the breach of promise case thought he would make life a burden to the unfortunate young man who was the unwilling defendant. "Do you mean to say," he asked after a lot of embarrassing questions, "that after you had been absent for an entire month, you did not kiss the plaintiff to whom you were engaged to be married when you first saw her on your return?"

"I do," responded the defendant, firmly. "Will you make that statement to the "Certainly, if necessary. "Do you think they would believe you?" "One of them would, I know."

"Ah, indeed. And why should he, her. He was at the gate when I rode up, and she stuck her head out of the second story window, and I told her 'how d'ye,' and said I'd be back to supper in half an hour. I'm no giraffe," and everybody in the courtroom smiled except the attorney.
