JANUARY.

The weather during the first week of this month, will be uncertain and changeable; at mid-day soft and wet under foot—at night clear and frosty. On the 8th the weather will become more settled, and on the 10th a heavy fall of snow will take place, with a subsequent continuance of clear, frosty weather until the 18th, when it will become more soft with cloudy weather and occasional falls of snow. On the 22d it will clear up into a severe frost, which will continue to the end of the month with little or no intermission.
 "Have a care?" said Caution when he entered public life.

FEBRUARY.

The commencement of this month will be marked with unusually cold weather. On the 3d at midnight the glass will fall to 31 degrees below zero. On the 5th the weather will moderate, and a heavy fall of snow will take place. Until the 10th the weather will be soft, cloudy and calm, with occasional falls of snow; after which it will again clear up into a severe frost, which will last with only slight intermissions of moderate weather, until the 21st, when two days of very soft weather will occur, with a slight shower of rain. On the 23d the frost will again set in, and last as before with short intermissions, to the end of the month. The weather during the entire of this month, with the exceptions mentioned, will be unprecedentedly cold.

APRIL.

The same weather which distinguished the latter days of last month will continue until the 2d, when cold winds, accompanied by rain will set in, and continue, with frequent cessations, until the 16th, when the weather will become steady and temperate, and will continue so until the 18th, when changeable weather will again set in—sometimes wind and rain—sometimes fair, with soft temperate weather, and again clear and cold with frosts at night. On the 25th a heavy fall of snow will take place. These alternate changes will distinguish all the latter part of April. On the morning of the 1st, at 5 minutes after 4, will fall a most awful shower of meteors.

MAY.

The month will begin with settled weather—clear skies, but cold and inclined to frost at nights. On the 5th it will become warmer, and until the 10th frequent showers of rain, with temperate weather. From the 11th to the 19th warmer weather, with occasional showers of rain; after which it will become colder, with some heavy gales of wind and sleety rain. On the 25th the weather will again become warmer and steady, and continue so until the end of the month, with occasional soft warm showers of rain.

“Cæsar,” (seize her) cried the man to his dog, when a woman was stealing the shirt off his loin (line.)

JUNE.

The first part of this month will be temperately warm and settled. On the 7th rain will fall heavily; from that period to the 10th, changeable weather, with frequent showers of rain; after which, the weather will again become settled and warm, which will last, with almost no intermission, until the 21st, when the heat will considerably increase, with heavy cloudy weather. On the 23d a severe thunder storm will occur, attended with tremendous squalls of wind. On the 24th the weather will again clear up & remain so to the end of the month, beginning with temperate heats, but gradually increasing in strength every day.

JULY.

Until the 13th of this month no material change of weather will be perceptible,—continuing uniformly warm and fine until the above mentioned period; after which cloudy and sultry weather will set in, with little variation until the 17th, when it will break up with a heavy thunder storm, and again warm steady weather will set in, although with a considerable increase of heat, and occasional heavy showers of rain. On the 21st the weather will become more temperate, but, as was the case in June, the heat will gradually increase as the month closes.

AUGUST.

The first six days of this month will be unusually sultry. On the 7th, rain with thunder squalls, after which the weather for a day or two will be more temperate. On the 10th, heavy rain with thunder. On the 11th, temperate again. The same changeable weather will continue until the 17th,—occasional heavy falls of rain accompanied with thunder, followed by cool breezes, being the distinguishing feature of this last mentioned period; after which to the end of the month the weather will be settled—warm and clear over head, with only an occasional shower of rain.

SEPTEMBER.

The same fine weather which marked the latter end of August will continue until the 4th of this month, after which changeable weather will set in—sometimes warm—sunny rain—sometimes clear with cool breezes, and at other times heavy cloudy days, with no air stirring. On the 12th the weather will become more steady and warm during the day, but cold at nights, and misty. On the 17th, heavy rains, with boisterous weather which will continue more or less until the 24th. After which, to the end of the month, the weather will be warm and settled, intercepted only by one or two heavy gales of wind.

OCTOBER.

The commencement of this month until the 4th will be unusually warm and steady. On the 5th, North East winds will set in, accompanied by cold sleety rain, with heavy showers of hail, with interruptions of bright, cold, blowing days, continuing to the 12th; after which the weather will become fine, with cold frosty nights, the days being warm and temperate. On the 18th the weather will again change, with cold rain and blustering weather, with occasional cold clear frosty nights, changing at sun-rise to soft rainy weather with frequent squalls. On the 23d frost will set in with steady clear weather. On the 26th it will become more temperate. A heavy fall of snow on the 30th.

NOVEMBER.

To the 9th of this month the weather will be changeable and disagreeable, frequently changing from rain to snow, followed by bright sun-shine. On the 10th the weather will become more settled, a steady frost setting in which will continue, with little intermission, to the 15th, when a heavy snow storm will occur, followed immediately by soft weather with storms of wind and rain. On the 19th frost will again set in, but suddenly changing at intervals to soft weather, with wind and rain, will render travelling unusually disagreeable. On the 24th a steady frost will again set in, which will last to the end of the month, with frequent slight showers of snow.

DECEMBER.

The same weather which distinguished the latter days of November will continue to the 4th of this month, when a few days of soft cloudy weather will ensue, with several heavy falls of snow, but which will melt almost immediately after falling. On the 8th frost will again set in, with bright skies and bracing weather. On the 12th cloudy heavy weather. On the 16th it will suddenly brighten up, and a long tract of fine clear frosty weather will ensue. On the 25th it will soften until rain, which will be followed by unusually temperate weather. On the 29th cold weather will re-commence which will last to the end of the month.
