SITUATION IN QUEBEC CAUSES CONSIDERABLE CONCERN AT OTTAWA

MILITARY CHARGED WITH CAUSING RIOT IN CITY OF QUEBEC

CLAIM DISCRIMINATION

Says Officers Responsible for Act's Enforcement Are to Blame.

Ottawa, March 30.—The cabinet is holding a special session, called for 12 o'clock noon today, to consider the situation in the City of Quebec. Reports from there this morning indicate that the city is quiet, but another outbreak tonight is anticipated, as the government has learned Friday night's demonstrations were evidently organized. Sir Robert Borden and Hon. C. J. Doherty, who, as minister of justice, has charge of the administration of the Military Service Act, have had several conferences with the general officer commanding the Quebec district, and have received several reports by telephone from the special officers sent by the government to Quebec. While official announcement is lacking, there is reason to believe that the municipal authorities of Quebec City are rendering little or no assistance in repressing the disturbances.

This morning the government has been in communication with Colonel Machin, the special representative sent to Quebec yesterday, and it is believed that a confidential report has been received from him dealing with the situation as it has developed and is likely to develop.

The matter of proclaiming martial law has not, it is understood, yet been considered by the government. That it is likely to depend on whether or not there is a serious recurrence of the disturbances.

Mayor Makes Charges. The prime minister received from H. E. Lavigne, M.P., mayor of Quebec, the following telegram: "I am unaware of press accounts on which you base statement contained in your telegram of March 29 to the effect that the attitude of the municipal police authorities was passive, that no real effort was made by the civic authorities to prevent the assault on federal offices, and that a disturbance occurred. Such accounts, doubtless, were grossly exaggerated in the outside press. The disturbances of last night and tonight are sincerely deplored by myself and citizens of Quebec. The lack of discretion, tact and discrimination on the part of the officers responsible for the enforcement of the Military Service Act seems to a large extent, to account for the unfortunate occurrences. I sincerely hope that immediate instructions will be issued to the proper authorities here in order that further trouble be avoided."

Particulars Demanded. To this telegram the prime minister sent the following reply: "Your telegram has been received and transmitted to the militia service council for their consideration. They desire to have particulars of the alleged lack of discretion, tact and discrimination to which you allude. My telegram to you made no statement beyond a reference to the press reports which were fairly summarized therein. If these reports are inaccurate it would be greatly in the public interest that the truth should be known immediately. To that end I hope that you will let me know what steps were taken by the civic authorities to identify those who engaged in the assault upon the federal offices and whether any arrests have been made."

Colonel H. A. B. Machin, director of the military council, left the capital yesterday for Quebec City to investigate the situation and take charge of the military.

FLEECE "BOOKIES" OUT OF THOUSANDS

Flash Over the Wire Told Result of Race Hour in Advance.

POLICE ON THEIR TRAIL

Knowledge of All Parties to "Betting Syndicate" Now at Hand.

Members of the betting ring which have been receiving "inside" information on race results have fleeced certain local handbook makers to the extent of $25,000 within the past month. The work of the private detectives, engaged by the G.N.W. Telegraph Co. to discover those guilty of supplying racing information from the company's wires, demonstrates that many of the smaller "bookies" were sent to the wall, while the larger ones suffered such severe financial setbacks that suspicion was aroused.

It is learned that the police have knowledge of all parties to the betting syndicate. The details of how certain operators received "flash" messages from the race tracks giving the result of a race long before the bookies could receive it, and were able to phone the information to the wager layers on the outside, have been given the crown. Having found out by telephone the result of the race from the operator, who learned it in the "flash," the wager layers placed heavy bets on the winner, and an hour later, when the result appeared in the papers, the bookies found they had lost very heavy stakes.

CHILD SERIOUSLY HURT

William Clark in Hospital With Fractured Skull After Being Struck by Motor.

Little six-year-old William Clark of 417 Erie Terrace, while playing on East Gerrard street, near Erie Terrace, Saturday afternoon, about 3:15 p.m., was knocked down and seriously injured by a motor car. The owner of the car, it was stated, did not stop, and the police have so far been unable to find any clue as to his identity. Dr. H. O. McKeehan of 686 Broadview street ordered the child's removal to the Hospital for Sick Children. Latest enquiries at the hospital elicited the information that the child, it was thought, was suffering from a fractured skull and his condition was regarded as serious. The police have the matter in hand and are making an investigation.

CHURCH IN PARIS STRUCK BY SHELL

Edifice Reduced to Mass of Crumbled Stone by Long-Range Gun.

Paris, March 30.—Rescue parties at work in the church which was struck yesterday by a shell from a German long-range gun have found more bodies. It is now known that 57 women were killed. The shell struck the north side of the church, bringing down part of the roof and opening a breach twelve feet high and twenty feet wide. Nearly all the debris fell inward upon the heads of the worshippers sixty feet below. The edifice is now a heartrending sight. The enormous mass of stone crumbled into all kinds of shapes, lies in the middle of the nave and piled to the same height as the high altar, which was not damaged. The side aisles are littered with less cumbersome wreckage and the pavement is covered with grey dust. All stained glass windows, some of which were of historical interest, are shattered. The church, although begun in the middle ages, was entirely remodelled in the epoch of the renaissance. The beauty of its musical services, which were sung unaccompanied, attracted many music-lovers.

BRITISH ANNOUNCE IMPORTANT CAPTURES

Campaign in Mesopotamia Meets With Splendid Success Against Turks.

DEPOTS TAKEN

Large Quantities of Prisoners, Guns and Ammunition Fall to Troops.

London, March 30.—The British column which recently won a striking victory on the front along the Euphrates River, in Mesopotamia, putting out of action the entire Turkish forces in the Hit area, has advanced to a point 82 miles beyond Hit, the war office announces. The number of prisoners has been increased to 5000. The statement follows: "Full particulars of the captures have not yet been received, but they are of great importance. Large depots at Hadith and Anah have fallen into our hands, containing quantities of ammunition, mine-throwers, guns, etc. The number of prisoners has been increased to 5000."

LATE NEWS BULLETINS

London, March 30.—The Germans have captured the Villages of Aubillers (5 1/2 miles northwest of Montdidier), Grivesnes, Cantigny, Mesnil-St. Georges, Le Monchel and Ayencourt, the war office announced this evening. All the villages named are in the Montdidier region. Heavy fighting is progressing to the eastward of Ayencourt (2 miles south of Montdidier). The exact situation is unknown. A heavy rain is falling. Besides gaining ground south and southeast of Montdidier, the Germans made some progress west of the Aves (southeast of Amiens).

London, March 30.—The summary of the situation issued tonight by the war office reads: "North of the Somme, on the British front, there is no change in the situation. South of the Somme we maintained our positions."

"Further south, during the course of the day, heavy attacks on the French front have enabled the Germans to gain ground west of the Aves and south and southeast of Montdidier."

"The Germans have captured the Villages of Aubillers, Grivesnes, Cantigny, Mesnil-St. Georges, Le Monchel and Ayencourt."

"East of this latter place heavy fighting is going on, and the exact situation is not known."

"The weather has broken and a heavy rain is falling."

Amsterdam, March 30.—Trains carrying wounded Germans from the battle front in France are proceeding continuously along the frontier between Germany and Holland, according to a despatch to The Telegraaf from Kerkrade. It has been necessary to replace hospital cars by freight cars. The wounded lie on straw.

London, March 30.—On Thursday and Friday, our operations east of the Jordan continued successfully, in spite of the stubborn opposition of the enemy. Colonial mounted troops destroyed several miles of the track of the Hedjaz railway. Two hostile airplanes were destroyed. "On Thursday, we attacked westward of the Jordan and the left centre of our line was advanced two miles on a front of eight miles. We occupied Beir Siman, Khumm-El-Ikva, and Khumm-El-Buedi. The cutting of the Hedjaz railway line severs the communication of the Turks, with any of their forces that may be in the region southeast of the Dead Sea, and with those in western Arabia. The revolting Arabs in the Hedjaz district have been masters of the lower part of the railway for some time, but the destruction of the line at this far more northerly point, will, it seems, probably prove a far more serious blow to the Turks. The only railroad to Medina, just to the north of Mecca, the Mohammedan shrine, is also destroyed by this blow."

BRITISH ARE HOLDING ENEMY ALL ALONG THE BATTLEFRONT

CONTEMPLATING THE CRISIS WITH CALM, STEADFAST HEARTS

Sir Arthur Currie Replies to Premier's Message and Tells of Confidence Felt by Entire Canadian Army.

Ottawa, March 30.—The following reply has been received thru Sir Edward Kemp, from Lieut.-General Sir Arthur Currie, to the message recently sent by Sir Robert Borden, on behalf of the Canadian people to the Canadian expeditionary force:

"Please convey to Sir Robert Borden and to the people of Canada our heartfelt gratitude for their message of appreciation for the past and confidence and hope for the future. With an ever-increasing knowledge of the justice of our cause inspired and strengthened by the prayers of those at home, we contemplate the present crisis with calm and steadfast hearts. When the call comes I am confident that all ranks of the corps will continue to play their part and maintain and enhance their proud record."

ONE MAN KILLED, THREE HURT WHEN CAR SKIDS INTO POLE

Sam Green, Todmorden Blacksmith, is Dead and Others Are Severely Injured on Don Mills Road Saturday Afternoon.

In a motor accident at Patterson's Corners, on the Don Mills road, Todmorden, shortly after 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Samuel Green, aged about 54, blacksmith at Todmorden, was almost instantly killed, and Jerry Nelson, sanitary contractor, 115 Jarvis street, was so seriously injured that his recovery is very uncertain. George Dart and J. Bell of Todmorden were also injured, but were taken to their homes in motor cars.

Car Struck Post. The four men were riding at a good rate of speed in a motor car driven by Nelson. The car suddenly swerved and crashed into a post. Sam Green was thrown from the front seat of the car and died a few moments later. Nelson shot thru the windshield and was so severely out and bruised about the head that he has not yet regained consciousness. Dart and Bell, sitting in the back, escaped, but were thrown heavily from the car and landed on the ground. Dr. R. H. Fleming hurried to the scene and found Green expiring. Nelson and Green were both placed in Washington and Johnston's ambulance, which had rushed to the scene, but Green died before the ambulance had gone many feet. Nelson was taken to the General Hospital, and on Saturday night no much hope for his recovery was held out.

Lost Control of Wheel. There seems to be some doubt as to how the accident occurred. It is claimed that the driver lost control of the steering wheel when the car struck a rut, and before he could regain control the motor smashed into the post.

FIRE FROM CANADIANS PREVENTED FOE ATTACK

Creeping Barrage Held Enemy North of Oppy and Patrols Were Repulsed By Rifle and Machine-gun Fire.

By W. A. Willison. Canadian Army Headquarters, March 30.—From early last night until six this morning the noise of guns has been persistent upon the whole front from the south to Hill 70 in the north. Steadily for over ten hours our heaviest field guns, trench mortars and machine guns maintained their fire on thousands of yards of front against the enemy trenches, support and assembly areas, communications and strong points. At 11 o'clock and again at 5:30 our artillery fire increased to battle intensity, the enemy assembly and concentration areas and communication roads being raked with creeping barrages. The intensity and duration of the fire was such that no enemy attack developed north of Oppy.

Before the great battle began two enemy attempts were made to raid our lines. At one point an enemy party was sent over to see if our confidence for whatever may develop, having no fear of the ultimate issue. The morale of the Canadian forces were never better and whatever happens Canada in the field will not be unworthy of its glorious record.

The interest among Canadians is centred particularly on the gallant struggle of the Third Army under Canada's old leader, General Byng. As the once master-soldier of the Canadian forces he holds a warm place in Canadian hearts and Canadian admiration for his gallant army is intense and universal.

DEATH FOR SPIES.

Washington, March 30.—The death penalty for any acts of espionage will be proposed in legislation to be brought before congress. Senator Overman of North Carolina, active head of the senate judiciary committee, said today after hearing testimony of several government agents in charge of anti-spy work.

Germans Taking Second Breath to Prepare for Another Thrust and Recover From Tremendous Losses Inflicted During Brilliant Allied Retirement.

British Army Headquarters in France, March 30.—The situation today, from the entente viewpoint, is reported more satisfactory. Along the British section of the battlefront last night was comparatively quiet. The statement follows:

"North of the Somme only local actions have taken place. South of the Somme the enemy's attacks yesterday at Domum and Meseres succeeded in pressing back our troops from the latter village. We secured a number of prisoners in our counter-attacks. At Domum all the enemy's attempts to capture the village broke down after sharp fighting which lasted throughout the afternoon.

"During the past week our cavalry have fought with great gallantry, both mounted and dismounted, and repulsed the enemy, inflicting heavy losses on him in numerous engagements."

The British lines have been strengthened rapidly in every quarter along the front. There is a most heartening display of determination and optimism. In the vicinity of Albert the Germans today were reported to be digging themselves in along the line from Thiépval to La Boisselle. The Germans, attacking yesterday at Domum and Meseres, pressed back the British from Meseres, the war office announced. All the enemy's attempts to capture Domum broke down after sharp fighting, which lasted thru the afternoon.

Fighting Has Slackened. For a brief space the tides of conflict have slackened, but any moment they may see in again. When the Germans have brought forward their artillery and overhauled their fighting machine the struggle undoubtedly will be reactivated, perhaps with greater ferocity than before.

Yesterday afternoon the enemy had a small success south of the Luce River, on the British right flank. Strong German forces, attacking there, captured Mesieres and also Maison Blanche, north of that village. The British immediately organized a counter-attack and pushed forward determinedly against the invaders. At one point the attacking troops were held back by machine gun fire, but other forces pressed on doggedly. The Germans, however, opposed with too great strength and were too well protected, and the British were forced to abandon the effort after a hard struggle, during which 25 Germans were taken prisoner in hand-to-hand fighting.

The loss of these positions does not alter the situation materially, and the British hold on the Luce Valley is considered satisfactory.

The Germans are still rushing forward fighting and reorganizing their forces. Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters reports. The slowing down in the battle, he says, probably is only a lull before another storm, of still greater intensity.

Arras at Arms. German prisoners taken in yesterday's fighting declare that they were told before entering the battle that Arras must be taken at all costs. Already they have paid a great price in lives in the endeavor to occupy the city, for the slaughter among the storming troops was exceedingly heavy.

Along the rest of the battlefront the fighting was normal. The British defenses today were drawn closer about the eastern side of Arras, yesterday's fierce attacks having forced a readjustment of the line in some places. Four divisions were used by the Germans along a narrow front between Gavrelle and Boeselle, east of Arras, and at least two of these were special storming divisions.

After a strong bombardment, the enemy advanced in masses, carrying large numbers of machine guns. One report says there was one machine gun for every two infantrymen. An intense barrage by the British artillery did terrible execution.

A Splendid Retirement. "At one point only," says Reuter's correspondent, "where the Germans got across the river in force about Cerisy, and so taking the troops in the rear, did we fall back Friday; but that retirement was gallantly done. Our men were taken in the rear before they knew it. As there were guns to be got away both infantry and gunners faced round and for awhile some of our men were firing with open sights into the enemy. Then the infantry charged and succeeded in driving the superior force of the enemy back to the river bank, holding them there until the guns were got away. This section of the line then swung back to new positions running by Hamel and LaMotte.

During enemy patrols in the Arras sector the British outposts near Arras and forced the posts to withdraw after intense fighting.

A spectacular maneuver by the British command just after the capture of Roux became known today.

Below the Somme British artillery has been doing marvelous work in getting the heavy guns back during the withdrawal.

The Monk And The Widdibus Bird

BY BERTHA E. GREEN

"Simple Simon met a pie-man, Going to the Fair." It was a long, long way by the forest path. So thought the Monk anyway, as he trudged steadily thru the Forest of Fancy Free. The clear, bright sunlight of early afternoon, that slipped in between the restless leaves, dappled the woodland pathway, and gave the Monk new patterns on his clothes, for every step he moved.

But, as I said before, it was a long, long way at any time, and to the Monk, just now it seemed much longer than it usually was; and can you guess for why? He was just hungry, and his thoughts right now, were of that happy day, when Simple Simon met the pie-man going to the fair. Now, you must know, that on this day, the Monk had set off, too, to see the Honey Fair of all the Bumble-bees, and on his way had happened to be passing, when Simple Simon bargained for a pie, altho he had no money. But the Monk had a penny, and pretty soon had a pie; and it was this pie that filled every bit of his mind just now.

The Monk was a funny, little fellow, with a great curiosity, a great appetite, and a little hum. Now, a hum is an un-hatched song, and the Monk would have been a perfect, singing Dicky-Bird of a Monk, if it hadn't been for that great appetite of his. That kept him eating so much, that his mouth was nearly always full, and he could just hum, so, as he thought of that wonderful pie again, got hungrier than ever, and sat down.

He was a fat, little duffer, and his face was red—it was warm under the trees where the wind didn't blow—and the Monk puffed like a good one. As he took the last bite of a little runt of an apple, and then swallowed the core, he thought of that wonderful pie again, got hungrier than ever, and sat down.

The Monk's round, red face grew very serious. He stopped humming, and he said "O, gee!"—which was very bad of the Monk. Indeed, after that, there were three whole minutes of just a quiet silence as were heard in that part of the forest. Then the Monk had noticed it stretching, no matter how hard you looked. But you would have known why he stretched an ear, for, from away to one side of the forest path, came, in a high, clear voice: "The Queen of Hearts, she baked some tarts."

And lots of ginger cookies! The tarts were for the officers. The cakes were for the "rookies." "I'll bet you, it's the Widdibus Bird," and off raced the Monk, helter-skelter, thru the woods.

There was a little spot in the forest, where no trees grew, just four times as big as the dining-room table, and when the Monk reached this, he looked about for the Widdibus Bird, but couldn't see a feather. What he did see tho, was a little round house all nicely built of round tin cans all gayly painted. The bottom row was made of yellow coffee tin, the next row was a red one of moose-ear cans, and so on to the top. There was a big tin cup from which a bright white new clay pipe blew bubbles all by itself. There were bubbles as big as pumpkins and as many colored as the moons of all the forty Jorintops. "Thump, thump," came from inside of the canner.

SOCIETY CONDUCTED BY MRS. EDMUND PHILLIPS

At the proroguing of the legislature on Tuesday afternoon his honor the lieutenant-governor was attended by Col. Fraser and Mr. Percy Arnold, A.D.C., and Gen. Logie by Mr. Christie Clark. READY-MADE REPARTEE

The following dialogue shows what can be done in a way of unimpeachable butler's repartee if you will let Henry James alone and pay attention to Gruvieve Kleiser. Mr. Kleiser is depicting a new and long branch of the comedy, namely, the "baiting brow" or "beating brow" as it is called. His brow bent like a cliff over his thoughts (cf. "beating brow"). He spoke with a deadpan manner directed to the effect: "And in the end what are you going to make of it?" "Let me speak frankly!" "Let me speak frankly!" "The Talk Thickeners." "He-Then you merely want to ask my advice?" "She-Well, yes; in a way." "He-It's such a bore to have to talk about it!" "She-That ought to make you a little lenient." "He-What would you expect me to do?" "She-Remember me, if you can." "He-I am sorry to say it is impossible." "She-You can hardly be serious." "He-I assure you it is most painful to me." "She-It's a difficult and delicate matter to discuss." "He-That depends on one's point of view." "She-Pardon me, but I don't think so." "He-I fear I cannot help you." "She-Has it really come to that?" "He-I brazenly confess it." "She-That is incoherent." "He-It is nevertheless true." "She-Your heart is dry as a red." "He-Your tongue is like a scarlet snake." "She-Now you are flippant." "He-Quite so." "She-Their glances met like crossed swords. Then a faint sense of compunction moved her." "I am not vindictive!" she exclaimed. "He-Really, I should have thought otherwise." "She-And I am open to persuasion." "He-You will see me tomorrow night, then, if you are free." "She-What a tempting prospect. You are a very handsome man." "He-They slowly moved off and disappeared like shapes wreathed on a mirror and restored the natural color. It was the terrible past lay afar, like a dream left behind in the night.

BAILEY-EDWARDS. The marriage took place very quietly on Thursday afternoon, March 27, when Oliver Gertrude, daughter of Mr. George H. Bailey, was united in marriage to Mr. Van V. Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Allen, of Toronto. The bride was given away by her father, who wore a cream mackinaw coat, trimmed with seal, and hat to match, carried Queen roses and a bunch of white and pink flowers. The groom wore a suit of blue serge and a cream mackinaw coat, trimmed with seal, and hat to match, carried Queen roses and a bunch of white and pink flowers. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. C. Cavley, officiating, of Helen Gladys, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Ernest Edwards, of Toronto, and granddaughter of the late Mr. John O. Howard and Mrs. Howard, of Toronto. The bride was given away by her father, who wore a cream mackinaw coat, trimmed with seal, and hat to match, carried Queen roses and a bunch of white and pink flowers. The groom wore a suit of blue serge and a cream mackinaw coat, trimmed with seal, and hat to match, carried Queen roses and a bunch of white and pink flowers.

TECUMSEH BOYS' CONCERT. The concert held in Epworth Methodist Church on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Tecumseh Young Men's class, was of exceptional high merit. The Saving of Venice From Austrian Raiders Preservation of Famed Treasure City of the Adriatic Now a Religion With the Italian People Who Have Done All Possible To That End.

BY DAVIS EDWARDS

Will Venice finally escape the barbarian's hand? This is the question that not only Italy but the whole world is asking, and the answer may not yet be given. For three years all the arts of war have been used to save the ancient city from destruction, and all the same arts have been employed to crush it with the fate of Louvain and Rheims. The principal art works of the treasure-town have been removed, possibly damaged in the removal, its people and their minor treasures have been scattered, bombs without number already have damaged in part the famous churches of the city known to all the world as the Bride of the Sea. Now that which is left of this unique city has become a pawn in the larger plan of warfare being fought out in the mountains around Monte Tomba and Monte Grappa above the plains of Padua.

With the fate of Venice trembling in the balance, Pope Benedict has risks the neutrality of the Vatican by sending personal letters to the emperors of Austria and Germany imploring them to spare the city, should it fall into their hands.

The saving of Venice is a religion with Italians. There is no doubting that if ever the Germans or the Austrians get the chance they will pull down the palaces and churches and dump the whole into the sea. This the Italians know. So since the month of May, 1915, when Italy entered the war, it has been the chief aim of the Italians to protect from the destroying, jealous venom of the Hun the Queen of the Adriatic, this jeweled city whose very name is fragility, whose monuments, planted in sand and water, have for centuries kept their heads reared towards the brilliant skies because of miracles of constructive care.

The inside story of the defence of Venice has until now remained one of the untold tales of the war. The part the Italian navy has played for the past three years and is now playing to preserve the city will probably stand out as the biggest achievement of that arm of Italy's fighting forces, when considered in connection with the vast services her defending forces arrayed about Venice have been able to render. Every resource known to the navy is now being employed to the extent the Austrians may not tumble down the city like a pack of cards, the Austrians who are now laying subtle plans to carry out their threat this spring, when the snow no longer blocks operations, when the fog of winter has cleared and made Venice visible to bomb throwers of Austrian airplanes.

Vital Problems of Defence.

Just how vital is considered this defence may be gathered from the fact that Italy might never have declared war had not first a formal promise been given by the government that Venice should be protected. Indeed, it was for this reason, so it has been stated authoritatively, that the Isonzo River was made the first line of defence instead of the Tagliamento, which is nearer Venice. The old first line of defence for Italy against Austria was along the Tagliamento, whereas, with the army thrown along the Isonzo, the cannon of the enemy could not reach Venice.

Venice herself has been saved from total destruction by Austrian airmen, coming from Pola, sixty-six miles across the Adriatic, during the period of the war preceding last October, and more lately from enemy airmen coming not from Pola but from the Isonzo, by valourous squadrons of Italian airmen.

While the saving of Venice has all along played an important part in the strategic movements of the army, her actual, physical preservation to date must be attributed to the untiring vigilance of the navy's sailors and particularly of the navy's air squadrons. Further along I shall tell of their wonderful exploits in fighting off the diabolic enemy airmen seeking to turn to powder, to a mass of dead stone, the creations of architecture as yet untouched. For example, during the terrible days of panic and sorrow of November last when Italy seemed about to lose the fruit of thirty months of war, three enemy airmen flew from beyond Piave River and headed for Venice. Two Italian aviators in their turn arose from the marches, forced the enemy to drop into the marches and there themselves alighting took them all prisoners—all within the course of a few minutes. A few minutes later the prisoners, aboard the Italian machines, were delivered safely to navy headquarters. The Italian navy squadron worked so hard during this month that they were aloft on an average of three times a day—and always bringing down their prey. To understand how patiently these airmen have labored, it may suffice to give the cold figures of the navy department which states that on offensive raids they have flown to date 192,000 miles, or a distance nearly eight times around the earth, and this distance does not count practice flights.

Works of Art Removed.

To make clear the religious care exercised towards Venice requires the description of the long and hard work carried on during the past three years to preserve from dangerous bombs the architectural beauties of the city. When war was declared by Italy—indeed on the very day—Ugo Ojetti was hurried to Venice by Italy's director of fine arts, with directions immediately to ship to other places in Italy the hundreds of frescoes painted on canvas, to put protecting mattresses on the roofs of those buildings whose frescoes were worked on the walls themselves, and finally, to place protecting wood work and sand bags on the outside of monuments such as the Doge's Palace.

Overnight the work of wrapping up the city began. Venice, the city of silences, of birds, of flowers, of gonzolas and moonlight songs, rich in picturesque vistas beginning and ending in rare exterior marbles, was turned into a vast workshop. Not only the citizens lent a hand, but the hands of Venice's sailors, the last race of sailors of olden times adept in handling ropes and scaffolds, were engaged to help in one of the most novel and complete engineering feats of the war.

The destructive fire of the Austrians began in Venice on the morning of May 24, 1915, war having been declared by Italy the night previous. On that morning, at five o'clock to be precise, two Austrian seaplanes flew over from Pola and dropped four bombs on the city, the very first of which struck the church of San Ciriacio.

Thenceforth the work of salvation went at a feverish pace. Within a few brief weeks the most urgent work had been accomplished. No less than 500,000 sand sacks of two bushels each had been placed so as to shelter or bolster up countless architectural beauties.

As in war, one must always prepare for the worst, and as the Italian navy had not yet prepared its careful defence, just two days after Italy's declaration of war, many treasures had already left the island city for safer places on the mainland. Among these were the four famed golden bronze horses adorning the main portal of St. Mark's church, life-size horses that were taken by Constantine to Constantinople when he was deposing the ancient imperial city, that were removed to Venice in 1204, that were collared by Napoleon later, taken to the city of triumph in Paris in 1797, and yet later restored to Venice. Now, after some nineteen centuries of travel, these horses are once more in Rome.

In the same fashion was disposed of the Colleon statue, consisting of a figure of the famous Venetian soldier mounted on a bronze horse, which Ruskin has described as one of the noblest monuments ever set up on the face of the earth. Horse and rider were removed, with the base of the monument was housed in with the sand bags.

Sleeping Fairy City.

But after all it has been the city itself which has been considered to count for most, and on which has been lavished such great care to protect from enemy bombs. When I was there recently the place seemed like one of those sleeping cities of the fairy tales, silent, still, lifeless, waiting for the wave of the magic wand to bring back the movements of life to her deserted streets, to her boarded up palaces and churches.

Walking across the great square of St. Mark's, named after the apostle whose body so long ago as the year 827 was brought and buried there by the powerful men of the age, I was the sole person in sight. Thanks to the labor begun by Ojetti, thousands upon thousands of sacks of sand at present hide the architectural lines. I counted 5,000 such sacks protecting the Scala of the Giants in the Palazzo Ducale. I counted 2,000 sacks and 56 mattresses about the monument of Colleon. I counted 2,000 sacks protecting the single great portal of the Treasury building. Other thousands of sacks with mattresses on top had been placed to shield the famous Campanile of St. Mark's, the bell-tower that stood for 800 years and then fell in

WORLD-WIDE SUPREMACY

In our last fiscal year Good-year made and sold more pneumatic automobile tires than any other maker in the world.

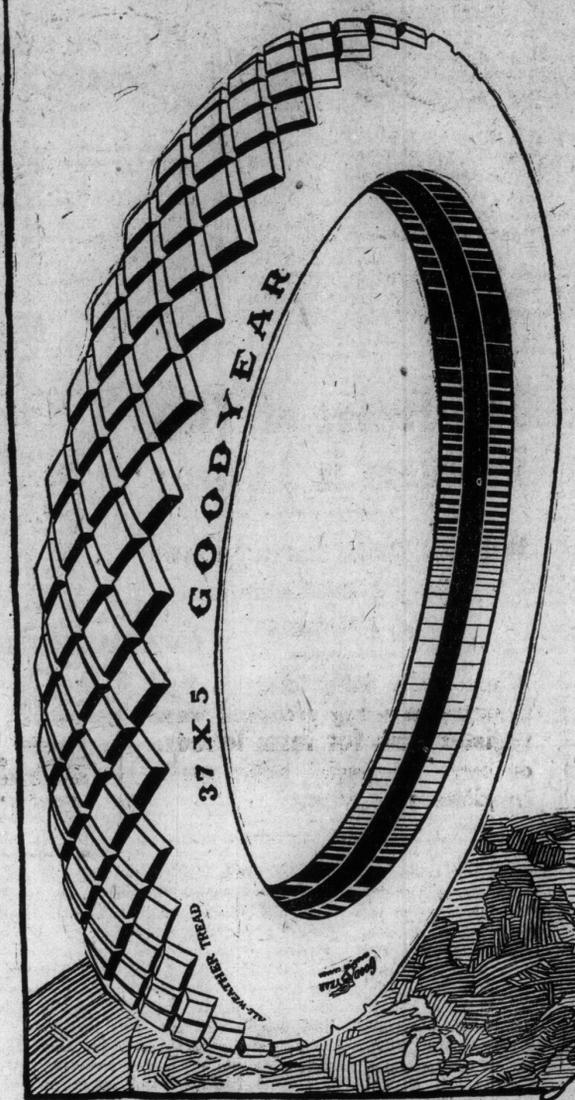

Nothing that we have ever said of Goodyear Tires compares with this endorsement by the motorists of the world.

Goodyear supremacy is not confined to any one section of the world. Goodyears dominate in Canada as in the United States—in the East as in the West.

The success of this company has been due to the goodness of a product which held old customers while gaining new. Coupled with this has been fair dealing with consumer, dealer and manufacturer.

Significant to every Canadian motorist is the fact that the majority of his fellow-Canadians have chosen Goodyears.

Far more significant is the fact that under many motoring conditions on this continent the majority of motorists have chosen Goodyears.

Goodyear Tires, Tubes and Tire-Saver Accessories can be obtained from Goodyear Service Stations everywhere. Watch for this emblem and enjoy the benefits of Goodyear Service wherever it is displayed.

GOOD YEAR

MADE IN CANADA

1902, to be re-built later on firmer foundations.

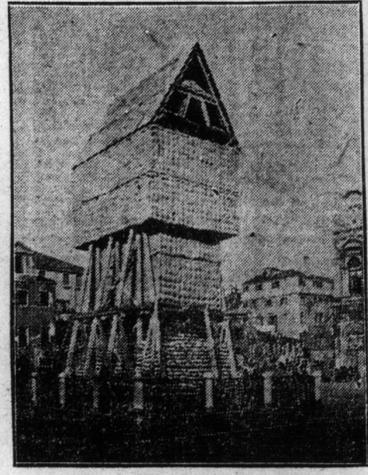

Right here in the fragile foundations of Venice lies one of the chief obstacles to making her entirely safe. Because of the peculiar construction on piles of all her buildings, there is the constant fear that a bomb striking a given building might cause the collapse of the entire structure. So in addition to piling light mattresses and heavy sand sacks, month by month and year by year stout wooden beams and solid masonry supports have been slowly placed not only above ground, but below the water to catch the shock of exploding shells. After all this work has been done, however, there remains the fact that in no way can this architecture, the chief treasure of Venice, be fully protected. Bronze horses, fine laces, wonders in gold plate, paintings by Titian, Tintoretto, the Veronese canvases, the masterpieces of the Bellinis may be removed. But the buildings and the painted walls and ceilings remain, always the mark of the aerial vandal. A casual glance at the wreck of the church of Santa Maria Formosa shows me how terribly effective became a bomb piercing a roof and exploding within an interior.

This spring, as soon as the fogs have cleared away, the daily attempts on Venice will be renewed, despite the fact that no military object can be accomplished, despite the fact that all the navy's arms within the city are of a purely defensive nature, that her offensive arms have been carefully located outside the city so as not to give an excuse to the Austrians in carrying out their hateful end, in gratifying their lust for useless destruction.

The Austrians announced a mass to be held in St. Mark's last November, but they failed, thanks to the hearty zeal of the defenders of Venice. Now they have announced the mass for Easter. It may be that they will again count without their host.

FAST-DAY SUPERSTITIONS.

In Armenia fasts, both of necessity and choice, are very general and strictly observed. The most common length of time for abstinence from food is seven days.

Throughout this long period the Armenians imbued with religious fervor, partake of no food. Only in the case of the young unmarried men is any concession allowed.

The young men on the seventh day of their fast are allowed, by old and sacred custom, to eat a little cake freshly mixed with salt.

By this means dreams of pure, sparkling, fresh water will be certain to visit the young man.

This strange superstition is connected with these visions. The dreamer will see a maiden approach the stream, and she will carry him a jug filled to the brim with sparkling water.

The dream maiden will be the girl whom fate has decreed he shall marry.

This strange superstition is found in Armenia wherever the habit of fasting is observed, and it is believed in with the utmost faith by the unmarried men.

Lack of Food—Threatens the Battle Line

"The food wanted by mankind does not exist. The word 'shortage' is not strong enough. The whole world is up against a nasty thing, familiar to the people of India, called 'famine.'" —Lord Rhondda, Britain's Food Controller.

One year ago, only the enemy was on rations.

To-day, Great Britain, France and Italy, are on rations.

To-day, Germany controls the wheat lands of Roumania, Russia, Poland and Ukraina.

To-day, the shadows of hunger, famine, disease and death hang over the Allies.

Upon the 1918 crop from Canada and the United States depends the fate of the democratic peoples of the world.

If that crop is sufficient the Allies can be fed.

If that crop is not sufficient the Allies may have to accept a German peace.

That Battle-Line in France and Flanders Must Not Want

Do you realize what a German Peace would mean to Canada?

Germany covets our natural resources—our agricultural and mineral wealth, our forests, our fisheries, everything that is Canada's.

Germany won't be satisfied with European territory, with teeming masses, wrangling factions and depleted natural resources. She wants colonies—big, thinly-populated countries in temperate zones for her sons and daughters to go to propagate their kind.

The Kaiser would sacrifice millions of Germans to-morrow if he thought that by so doing he could set foot on Canada's shores as Conqueror.

And what's more, the Germans would offer themselves for the sacrifice, so great is their subjection to the military ideal.

The only thing that balks German ambition is that battle line from the North Sea to Switzerland—and the British Navy.

The Only Thing That Sustains Our Men on Land and Sea—Is Food

What are we, each one of us, prepared to do to insure that Food supply?

Germany, by her submarine campaign, has seen that great Armada, the British Mercantile Marine, shrink in volume.

Germany has seen South America, Australia, New Zealand, India and far away outposts of the Empire practically cut off from supplying food to the Motherland because of the lack of ships.

Forty million Allied men and women having been put on war work, food production has dangerously decreased in Europe.

These forty million consume more food than when they were in ordinary occupations, and there are fewer men for farming. Hence an increased demand and decreased supplies.

The harvest of France was one-third less in 1917 than 1916, and this year must be smaller still, owing to lack of fertilizers, which cannot be supplied through shortage of shipping.

The world's decrease in live stock, as compared to 1913, is approximately 115,000,000 head.

Herbert Hoover Says:

"Our European Allies are dependent upon us for greater quantities of food than we have ever before exported. They are the first line of our defence. Our money, our ships, our life blood, and not least of all, OUR FOOD supply, must be of a common stock.

"In pre-war times, Britain, France, Italy and Belgium yearly imported more than 750,000,000 bushels of grain, plus vast quantities of meats and fats.

"The submarine destruction of shipping has made it necessary to abandon the hope of bringing food from South America, Australasia and India.

"Food must, therefore, be shipped from Canada and the United States—the nearest and safest route.

"Canadian and United States supplies are normally 350,000,000 bushels short of the Allied needs. By greater production and conservation Canada and the United States must combine to increase the export of grain by 150,000,000 bushels.

"The remaining shortage of 200,000,000 bushels must be overcome by greater reduction in consumption in the allied countries. And this is being done by Britain, France and Italy rationing their people.

"From two and a half years of contact with the German Army I have come out of the horror with the complete conviction that autocracy is a political faith and a system that directly endangers and jeopardizes the future of our race—that threatens our very independence. It has, however, been able to command a complete inspiration of devotion and self-sacrifice in its people to the interest of their nation. The German farmer, in the name of the Fatherland, supports a nation two-thirds as large as the United States and threatens to subject the world from an area one-half the size of Ontario.

"My vision of war is not of an academic problem to be solved by discussion. To me it is a vision of brave, dying men and suffering women and children, for service on whose behalf the greater exertion of the Allies' farmers comes as a direct necessity and a direct plea. The Canadian and the United States citizen who sees war as I see it, needs no inducement and no inspiration but the thought that every spade full of earth turned, and every animal reared is lessening human suffering and guaranteeing the liberty of the world."

Lloyd George's Warning

"I fear the disciplined people behind the German Army, the rationed family and the determination of wife and sister and daughter and mother to stand and starve—so that their fighting men may be fed—I fear it more than the Imperial German Army itself."

Britain is now on Food Rations.

France is now on Food Rations.

Italy is on the verge of starvation. Only continuous support from us can enable us to hold out.

Only with a disciplined people behind can we hope to win. The rationed British Nation, blood of our blood, bone of our bone, are proudly paying the price and sharing with France and Italy their limited stock of food. For in this there is mighty pride, a conscious measuring of their glory with the best traditions of ancient Sparta, and of Imperial Rome, for Britons know that upon them rests the burden of saving humanity. The story of their service shall ring and echo forever along the hill tops of history.

To Send More Food to Our Allies Is Not Charity

It is war. The Allies have a right to demand it. They have a right to resent the offer of only what is "left over." Those who are fighting the common battle for civilization and for our protection have a higher claim than had Lazarus, to only the "crumbs that fall from the rich man's table."

The Canadian people must recognize that Our Allies have the first claim on our food supplies.

As the shipping situation makes the Allies dependent upon the North American continent for food, it is vitally necessary that Canada should increase her production of food in order to take a larger part in providing for the Allies' requirements. This is especially urgent as the maintenance of a large United States army in the European field will cause a very heavy drain on that country's food resources.

There must be no peace without victory.

For nearly four years Germany has been struggling against the powers of law and order. She has failed so far to make good her escape with her booty by superior strength and skill. And now she is attempting by intrigue, suggestion, device and propaganda to divert the attention of her antagonists from the struggle itself, and thus to gain her ends by relaxing the strength and skill of her antagonists.

What she can gain from these tactics is plain to all the world in the sorrowful experience of Russia.

Germany's most dangerous weapon is not her Zeppelin—that is obsolete. Not her submarine—that can be overcome. Not her machine-like army—that has been repeatedly hurled back by the living armies of freemen. Her most dangerous weapon is her propaganda of peace.

While with her hands she murders and despoils, with her voice she invites to parleys.

When Liberty is in Peril There is Threat of Lasting Disaster in the Very Word "Peace"

Lord Leverhulme, long known in Canada as Sir William Lever, who knows well the German mind, in a recent interview stated:

"You will never be able to dictate terms to Germany. She is beaten. The argument you mention is founded on the dangerous fallacy that because Germany is sick of this war she is sick of war in general. She isn't. I doubt if her Government is even sick of this war. You've read the speech of that old brigand, Hertling. Is there any sign of repentance in that speech? Is it a chastened speech? Is it the speech of a statesman who wants disarmament and a league of nations? No! Germany is back in her mood of 1914. She believes she is winning the war. She believes she has won now. And if we talk of peace she HAS won it. Why, it would be better a thousand times that every man in England should be dead than that Germany should issue from this war with the feeling of a conqueror. You hear people use the phrase, 'to the last man, and the last shilling,' and you think it is only a bit of rhetoric, but to my mind it's the most solemn and absolute truth. I mean when I say it that it would in very truth be a million times better for the people of these islands to be dead, every one of them, rather than live on as the serfs of a triumphant Prussia."

How can any lover of liberty remain insensible to this peril?

Food means Victory and the world made safe for democracy—

Lack of food means disaster and subjugation to Germany.

The Citizens of Ontario Must Lead This Mighty Crusade for Greater Food Production

They did it last year and will do it again.

As the greatest food-producing Province, Ontario must maintain her leadership in America. Great are our opportunities—our responsibility is tremendous.

Upon every man and woman, boy and girl, rests a personal obligation to serve. Every pound of food produced, in whatever form, is a contribution to the Cause of Freedom.

Ontario farmers should sow 500,000 acres of spring wheat.

Every Ontario farmer whose land is at all suitable should put an extra five acres into wheat, even at the expense of another crop.

What YOU Can Do to Help

At all costs production must be maintained.

That's why farmers and farmers' sons are being exempted from military service. Working on a farm is equivalent to service in the Second Line Trenches.

To enable the farmer to do the work two factors are essential. The first is Time. Whatever we are to do must be done at once. Nature waits for no man. The second is Labor. Many farmers cannot plant the acres they would because they cannot get the necessary help. Many are afraid to increase their acreage because they fear they would not be able to cultivate and harvest an unusual crop after they had raised it.

The burden is not one to be placed solely upon the farmer. Neither can it be placed upon the townsman. It is a personal obligation upon every man, woman, boy and girl, in every farm, town and city home in the Province of Ontario.

AWAY WITH CRITICISM—CO-OPERATE! Mr. City man, don't say that the farmer should do so-and-so, and thus allow criticism in this hour of our Nation's peril to cripple your effort.

Mr. Farmer, don't hastily under-estimate the value the city man can be to you.

Get Together in the Fight For Liberty

Let us not lament what MIGHT be, but earnestly face what MUST be.

Fifteen thousand boys between the ages of fifteen and nineteen must be organized as "Soldiers of the Soil" to work on Ontario farms this season.

Farmers can get one or more of these boys by applying to their District Representatives or to the Public Employment Bureaux at Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton or London.

Unmarried men, exempted from military service, are urged to take up farm work. Married men who have had previous experience on a farm are urged to resume farm work for a season. Employers of labor are asked to assist men to take up farm work.

We urge the farmers and the townsmen to get together for greater production in the interests of a free people and democracy.

Let the Organization of Resources Committee, your District Representatives or the Public Employment Bureaux act as your intermediaries.

When we have done our best, the cry for food cannot be wholly met.

For the rest—our Allies are tightening their belts.

Parliament Buildings, Toronto Ontario.

CHAIRMAN: His Honor Sir John S. Hendrie, K.C.M.G., C.V.O., Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. VICE-CHAIRMEN: Honorable Sir William H. Hearst, K.C.M.G., Prime Minister of Ontario; William Proudfoot, Esq., K.C., Leader of the Opposition. SECRETARY: Albert H. Abbott, Esq., Ph.D.

The only thing that balks German ambition is the battle line in France and--- the British Navy. The only thing that sustains our men on land and sea is Food.

SWIMMING MEET AT BROADVIEW "Y" THE HOLIDAY FEATURE

Chesworth Captures Forty-Yard Handicap From Big Field of Entries.

DIVING EVENT CLOSE

Only One and a Half Points Separate the Six Competitors.

Broadview Y. is evidently leading all city institutions engaged in boys' work in the development of good swimmers, judging by the number of boys who competed in the annual Good Friday swimming events. A good crowd of spectators enjoyed a varied program, which included a live rock hunt, fancy diving and swimming, a 40-yard and 100-yard speed event; also a spectacular relay race. The results:

- 40-Yard Speed Handicap.
There were twenty-eight entries in this event alone, and it required eight heats, three semi-finals and a final to decide the winner.
- First heat—1. George Sawyers; 2. Jack Dolg; Time 40 secs.
Second heat—1. Randall Jupp; 2. Robert Bain; 3. Fred Ferguson; Time 42 secs.
Third heat—1. Will Rankin; 2. Carl Patterson; 3. Lloyd Sloan; Time 39.5 secs.
Fourth heat—1. James Rice; 2. Jack Patterson; 3. Birrell Mercer; Time 37 secs.
Fifth heat—1. Kenneth Poole; 2. Bert Powell; 3. Ralph Beatty; Time 35.5-36 secs.
Sixth heat—1. Tom Chesworth; 2. Arthur Paddon; 3. A. Brock; Time 34.5-35 secs.
Seventh heat—1. Les Bartlett; 2. Norm Haywood; 3. Hec. Crighton; Time 32.5-33 secs.
Eighth heat—1. Jack Crighton; 2. R. Goldenburg; Time 32 secs.
Final—1. Tom Chesworth; 2. T. Chesworth; 3. Les Bartlett; 4. A. Paddon; 5. J. Rankin; 6. J. Rice; 7. J. Crighton.
- Second semi-final—1. K. Poole; 2. J. Rice; 3. J. Crighton.
Third semi-final—1. W. Rankin; 2. G. Sawyers; 3. R. Jupp.
Final—1. Chesworth; 2. K. Poole; 3. W. Rankin; Time 32.5-33.
- 100-Yard Speed Handicap.
Thirteen lucky swimmers took part in this event, which was decided by the best handicap times.
- First heat—1. Les Bartlett; 2. Taavi Tiert; 3. Doug. Graham.
Second heat—1. N. Haywood; 2. Bert Airth; 3. Bert Powell.
Third heat—1. Ralph Beatty; 2. Carl Loughhead; 3. A. J. Johnston.
Fourth heat—1. J. Crighton; 2. V. Wing.
Fifth heat—1. Norm Haywood; 2. Les Bartlett; 3. R. Beatty; 4. A. Johnston.

Junior Diving.

Fourteen boys made a spirited contest out of this event, which consisted of three compulsory and two voluntary dives. Birrell Mercer won by a narrow margin over Richard Herman, with Richard Glover a close third.

Senior Diving.

This was probably the hottest contested event of all, only one and a half points separating the six divers. After performing three compulsory and three voluntary dives, Hec. Crighton just missed ahead of Les Bartlett, who finished one-half point behind.

Live Duck Hunt.

About forty boys competed in this event, being split up into four groups, each group of ten being required to swim the length of the pool and then swim back after the ducks. In the first heat, the ducks proved to be full of pep, and the boys' frantic efforts to capture some caused plenty of amusement and excitement for the spectators. The lucky boys were Richard Glover, Richard Mercer, Frank Bowyer and James Miller.

Central Athletics.

The regular season of the Thursday night, at Central Y.M.C.A., was very well contested. The events were 60-yard potato race and 200-yard dash, and the absence of our old reliable Winfield, the handicap men ran wild and could do nothing but capture all events hands down. The 60-yard potato race brought out some new material as also did the 200-yard dash.

60-yard potato—1. E. Pelow; 2. Proulx; 3. Dawson. 200-yard race—1. A. Dand; 2. E. Pelow; 3. P. Stockwell.

World's Greatest Walker Gives a Few Pointers

By GEORGE GOULDING, Amateur Walking Champion of the World. Asst. Physical Director Central Y.M.C.A.

Is there any walker in sight to take my place to uphold Canada in the walking game? Is a question I am asked repeatedly. Before the war started the Toronto Central Walkers' Club had quite a few promising walkers, but as nine-tenths of the twenty active members went overseas during the first year of the war and are still there, almost mostly in hospitals, I don't look there for a successor. Most of the eligible material throughout the country is overseas, and it is left to the great athletic revival that is going on amongst the Canadian soldiers over there, to develop the walker among that class. It would not surprise a few of the old-timers of the track, if that athletic environment at present in England, doesn't bring us back a real topnotcher in some other athletic event. But so far I haven't heard of any aspirant for the walking honors.

With the young men overseas, and the married men at home, almost too late to start active walking (albeit I believe many could develop into Wheelmen After Prize Fiends —Elect Officers for the Year.

Vancouver Bicycle Club, of which "Con" Jones is captain, was granted affiliation with the Canadian Wheelmen's Association at the 39th annual meeting of the organization, held in the Queen's Hotel, on Saturday afternoon. Reports cycling in Canada during 1917 reached greater proportions than in any other year since the war began.

SACRIFICES FINGERS TO CONTINUE BOXING

New York, March 30.—"Young Terry" McGovern, the lightweight boxer, who has frequently been seen in action here and in Philadelphia, has much of the fighting spirit and aggressiveness for which he is noted. McGovern was a member of the Boston Braves, but was also a lead uniform. His left hand was broken and the fingers were the last to be secured. These men will go along way towards rounding out a team for the local club.

LAKE SHORE SENIOR BASEBALL LEAGUE.

A meeting of the Lake Shore Senior Baseball League has been called for Tuesday, April 2, 1918, at 8 p.m., in the offices of Brown's Copper & Brass Rolling Mills, corner Eighth and Lake Shore roads, New Toronto. Everything points to a very successful season. Any one who wishes to join the league is invited to attend.

SIGNING ARTICLES FOR WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT

The picture shows Jess Willard and Fred Fulton signing articles of agreement to fight July 4. The place where the big battle will be held has not been decided on, but probably will be held in Baltimore. Starting with Willard, reading left to right, seated at the table are: Jess Willard, Col. Joseph C. Miller, promoter; Fred Fulton, challenger. In back of Col. Miller is Ed. V. Smith, sporting editor of The American; and back of Fulton is Otto Fieto, of Kansas City.

BURNS BEST WALKER IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

Took Honor Away From Heine Groh Last Season by Good Margin.

The last batch of National League playing averages for the season of 1917, which ended some time last October, has just appeared. It deals with data on the number of times batters got bases on balls struck out and so on. It may seem odd to be printing such figures on a dead season, when the box scores are appearing from a dozen training camps for a season coming, but to complete the record they must be given space. Perhaps the statistical fan will find something in them to interest him.

TWENTY-THREE YEARS ON JOB IS A GOLF RECORD

Dave Foulis Finally Passes Up the Chicago Golf Club.

Chicago, March 30.—Twenty-three years is a long time in the life of a golf professional. That is the time that Dave Foulis has been with the Chicago Golf Club of Wheaton, Ill., and also it has many times been said that he would finish his days there, or move only when they move the links, he has actually decided to pull up stakes and peg out a new claim in the local district.

LONDON ATHLETE WINS THE INDIVIDUAL HONORS

Chicago, March 30.—First place in the Class A Division of the fourth international hexathlon competition, held during the first two weeks of February, was won by the Central Y.M.C.A., of Chicago. It was announced today. The team scored 4971 points in the six events. Individual honors in Class A were won by Walter Dutton, of London, Ont.

McInnis for Third Corner and Evers at the Keystone Sack.

FOUR PITCHERS' TASK

Put Down to Do Bulk of Hill Work During This Season.

Boston, Mass., March 30.—Manager P.M. Barrow comes early with the batting array of the Red Sox Athletics as they will face the Athletics-Red Sox of Fenway Park. It did not take Barrow long to decide on the makeup after looking them over at Hot Springs. This is the way it looks: Hooper, right field; Scott, shortstop; Strunk, center field; McInnis, third base; Hoblitzel, first base; Whitman or Smith, left field; Schang, catcher; Evers, second base and the pitcher, but he intimated that only Babe Ruth was running mighty strong for first choice.

Varsity Happenings

A Review of the Past Week's Events Around the University and News Items About Toronto Graduates the World Over.

By SHERRY GREENE

Word has been received that Lieut. Charles Herbert Wheelock of Orangeville, Ont., was drowned in a flying accident at Dartford, Eng., on March 19. He was an applied science student in the class of '16 and was completing his fourth year in civil engineering when he enlisted as a gunner with the 14th Battalion in April, 1915.

Lieut. Col. Thomas B. Welsh died at his home in Windsor, Ont., on March 24, following an operation. Col. Welsh was a graduate in pharmacy of 1892. He raised the 29th Battalion and went to England as officer commanding that unit, but as it was broken up and sent to France he returned to Canada. The late Col. Welsh was 52 years of age.

Lieut. R. C. Geddes, B.A. of U.C., 1911, is reported wounded in action. He went overseas in the ranks of the 5th University Company, was wounded in August, 1915, and since his return in England took out his commission and was sent back to France. Lieut. Geddes was for a time editor of Torontensis and was practicing law in Saskatoon at the time of his enlistment.

Capt. Kenneth B. McLaren, B.A. of Victoria College, 1912, is reported gassed. He is a son of Justice J. J. McLaren of this city and went to England with the 2nd Battalion, where he was transferred to the first division in France.

Had Headaches, Was Always Tired

Sleep or Rest Was Impossible, For Nervous System Was Greatly Exhausted and Irritated.

Jordan, Ont., March 28.—As the result of Mr. Thwaites' happy experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food many people in this district have put this great food cure to the test and proven its exceptional restorative powers.

Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "For about a year I was troubled with nervousness and took doctors' medicine, but it did not seem to relieve me. I could not sleep nor content myself to do anything. I had severe headaches, was tired all the time and afraid to stay alone. I also tried several nerve medicines until almost discouraged. At last I discovered Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found relief in this. I had only taken one box when I began to feel better. I continued using this treatment until my nerves were restored to perfect health. I think the Nerve Food splendid for nervous troubles of any kind, and cannot recommend it too highly."

Lieut. C. A. Vickery, who was a student at the faculty of education during the session of 1912-13, is also reported gassed. He went overseas as Lieutenant with the 192nd Battalion, which, on reaching England, was amalgamated with the 208th Battalion, and has since gone to France.

Sergt. A. C. Stothers, another faculty of education student of the year 1912-13, has been gassed and is in a hospital in France. He went overseas with the 170th Battalion, but was transferred in England to the 5th Canadian Reserve Battalion.

Gunner W. M. Mustard, a U. C. student in the class of 1918, has been awarded the D.C.M. His home is near Uxbridge, Ont., and he enlisted with the 25th Battery, in March, 1915, he was sent to the 41st Battery in France, was wounded in April, 1917, and after recuperating in England for some months returned to France.

Lieut.-Col. Alex. J. Mackenzie arrived in Canada on Monday last. He went overseas as medical officer of the 15th Battalion and has since been in command of the medical work at Moore Barracks, Ramsgate, and at the Canadian Specialists' Hospital at Folkestone, Eng., and since his return has been offered the command of the military hospitals in Toronto. Col. Mackenzie is the son of Peter Mackenzie, Esq., of Toronto, and was in partnership with the late Dr. Oldwright on Carlton street before going overseas.

Miss Edith Creighton, B.A. of U.C., 1900, and graduate of the Hart House School of Massage, has gone west, in charge of seven masseuses, who will have their headquarters at Regina.

Miss E. Blanche Steele, B.A. of U.C., 1912, and a graduate of Hart House School of Massage, has received an appointment at the College Street Convalescent Hospital. Miss Steele is a niece of Dr. Horace Eaton of Sherburne street, and previous to taking the course at Hart House was on the Toronto Public Library staff.

Mrs. Maud Whitmore of Edmonton, who has been sent to Ontario by the Alberta Government to try to secure teachers for that province, has spoken to large audiences of university students all week. The students are very much interested, and it is believed there will be a hearty response to the call.

The farmer-tent class in farming broke up into two groups on Saturday afternoon last, one going to Kilgour's farm to study dairying under Mr. McQueen's guidance, and the other to Eaton's stable, learning to groom, harness and drive.

AUSTRIA'S INTERNAL PROBLEMS.

New York, March 30.—Conditions in Austria which led to the cabinet crisis early in February were described as "chaotic" in copies of The Berlin Vorwaerts received here. The crisis culminated in the resignation of Dr. von Seydewitz, became acute when the Pole emperor refused to accept it. Commenting on the Austrian situation The Vorwaerts said that every postponement of the settlement of the internal Austrian problems tended only to increase the difficulty of these problems. The crisis, according to Vorwaerts, became acute when the Pole emperor refused to accept it. HORSE RACES

THE BREEDING PROBLEM IN ONTARIO.

During the past few months the columns of our daily papers have been alive with talk of increased production of live stock, but a careful review of the several discussions reveals the fact that not a single word of encouragement has been offered to the farmer that breeds the standard-bred. Now this may be due to an oversight, more probably the writers are not aware of the great and many tasks this most intelligent of all breeds can perform.

Some fifty years ago the light horse was used almost entirely as a means of transportation, and in those days the standard-bred gained a marked superiority as a road horse. His gait was pleasing, his transit rapid, and his endurance during long and tedious journeys over all sorts of road and weather made him a prime favorite with the traveling public.

During the past three years a noted change has again occurred when a more varied use of this most intelligent of all breeds has been apparent. The more sturdy are frequently found performing the duty of the Clyde, while the standard-bred has been purchased more readily than any other breed as cavalry remounts at which service they give excellent satisfaction, displaying remarkable endurance and undiminished courage on the battle-field, then as a pleasure horse they give a better patronage than any other breed at the present time.

However, despite all these numerous outlets, the market for this breed remains partially inactive, probably because few of the type exist, more so because his proper field of activity is not catered to by the more important exhibitions in this province which manifest a marked indifference to his natural development. Like the thoroughbred, his great characteristics are endurance and speed, the only proper test of which is revealed in actual contests, and robbed as he has been of an opportunity to display the qualities of his blood in races, his downfall has been imminent, and the same fate will befall his contemporary, the thoroughbred, if running races are not revived at the Canadian National Exhibition a few years hence, annually provided a lavish program of harness and road racing, the standard-bred, particularly the stallion trot, and the old-fashioned farmer's race, in a number of places, have seen fit to eliminate this important item from their official program much to the detriment of the breed. The standard-bred, however, has seen fit to hold this as their main attraction at the big fair.

Just why such a drastic measure should be enacted by one of the world's greatest agricultural expositions has never been properly explained. The entries were always sufficient to maintain the popularity, entertainment and foremost of all, these contests had a stimulating effect on the breeding of the standard-bred. Illustration of this latter let me cite a few prices that have been realized for trotters and pacers that have been bred on Ontario soil. The late Mr. J. B. Grover of Georgetown, Ont., was sold for $6,000 both geldings, and were bred in Kent County; Grand Opera 2:05 1/2, sold for $600; Latro 1:11.00 was refused; Roy Gratton 2:18 1/4, for whom $800 was refused in Toronto that winter, then in the contest of Frank Bogasat, Jr. 1:53 3/4, was sold for $10,000. These are only a few of the higher priced ones, and if one cared to recall those that have sold for $500 and upwards, it would require column after column to contain their names. Alone, but just display and ask yourself the question, what future would these horses, particularly the geldings, have commanded if they had been sold in public races as many of our best horses are today? The only answer is they would have been sold for prices ranging from $100 to possibly $200. Here then lies the real value of racing to the breeder, for let me inform you the bill-swagger owns rarely his horse, and it is on the profitable side of the ledger, and it is really not the one who is enriched by racing.

The only conclusion then that occurs to the average man who has the live-stock production at heart is that the revival of these contests of speed at our greater exhibitions is overdue, and the sooner this important matter is taken up by the different executives the better, for our nation at large. That our Canadian National should be the leader in this respect is the ardent wish of all breeders, as they then could include a number of show horses of all breeds with those that would be eligible to the speed contests, and certainly a greater activity would be manifest. In conclusion it may be said that Canada is now in a better position than at any previous time to conduct these speed contests, as we are now possessed of a government, purely Canadian, in the Canadian National Trotting and Pacing Harness Horse Association, which works in perfect harmony with our also late established Canadian Standard-Bred Horse Society.

The Blue Ribbon Speed Sale, to be held at the Repository on Thursday, April 11, has already secured an attractive list of entries, and various consignments from owners well known to the Canadian National Trotting and Pacing Harness Horse Association. As has been the case for several years, Miss K. L. Wilks, leads in numbers, with twenty heads from her famous Cruickshank Park stud, and she is followed by Mrs. Wm. Hammell of Toronto, who will be represented by a number of the most desirable breeding material, and those desiring foundation stock will do well to consult the space allotted to his offerings in the catalogue. horseman, Mr. Yeager, whose activity in the show ring is of national fame, is sending a number of high-class show horses, while the estate of the late Mr. Hendrie, has consigned a number of ponies.

The popular local trainer, Mr. Nat Ray, recently purchased the consistent trotting mare, Sanatel 2:18 1/4, from Controller Sam McBride, and has already entered her in a number of stakes in Ohio. Sanatel has been a member of the matinee brigade in this city for a number of years, and so outclassed others of her gait that she was usually forced to compete against an all pacing field where her racing was always commendable, acquiring many victories.

Further proof of the growing popularity of the Canadian National Trotting and Pacing Harness Horse Association, was evidenced in a letter received by Secretary W. A. McCullough, from Mr. W. J. Stark, manager of the Western Canada Fair' Association, containing the following resolution: "That we recommend to the individual members of the Western Canada Fair' Association, that they become associate members of the Canadian National Trotting and Pacing Harness Horse Association, for the year 1918, at a fee of $10 each." The foregoing resolution embodies the present sentiment in regard to the needfulness of our own racing legislation, and is an example that could well be copied by all fairs or race meets in the Dominion.

Military Events of the Past Week

A tank battalion from Canada was asked for by the British authorities during the week. The City of Toronto, it is announced, will be the headquarters for this new Dominion-wide unit, and also the mobilization point. The University of Toronto and the other universities of Canada are to be given special opportunities to contribute officers and men for the tank unit. For this reason the unit will be known as the Canadian Universities Tank Corps. A draft of men which was to have gone overseas from the Canadian Officers' Training Corps for imperial army commissions will be canceled and the draft incorporated in the tank corps. The establishment of the Canadian Tank Corps will be 87 officers and 700 men. Owing to the novelty of the unit and the possibilities of adventurous experience it offers, a rush of recruits to sign up with it is anticipated. It is expected that only about five per cent. of the members of the corps will need to have had previous technical training.

Ottawa has ruled that members of the Canadian expeditionary force in Canada who are experienced in farm work and unit for immediate overseas service, if they can be spared temporarily from their military duties, will be allowed absence, without pay, for April and May. Before this leave is granted the soldiers must prove to the district leave-of-absence board that they will be employed in work on farms well away. In special instances, where local conditions make it advisable, an order may be obtained extending the farm-leave until June 15.

Two large contingents of returned soldiers, totaling over 700 men in all, arrived in Toronto from overseas service in the week. Five hundred of the veterans reached Toronto on one day and received a rousing reception from a crowd of about 2,000 of their friends and relatives who had gathered at North Toronto Station to greet them. Mayor Church and a number of other civic officials were also at the station to welcome the war-heroes home.

INTEREST RATES LOWERED.

London, March 30.—With the lowering of interest rates on treasury bills to 3 1/2 per cent. for both three and six months' issues, banks have reduced their allowance on deposits to 3 per cent. for money on call and 3 1/4 for money at notice, thus making London the cheapest market in the world. This is the outcome of the government's policy for establishing a satisfactory basis for short borrowing operations and at the same time increasing the attractions of longer-term securities, which is indicated by the success of the national war bond sales. Of course this policy has been made successful and possible through the assistance given by the United States in the matter of loans and financing purchases in America.

While the Bank of England reduces its special deposit rate to 2 per cent. for short loans and 3 1/4 per cent. for those subject to a month's notice, the allowance on foreign deposits is retained at 4 1/2 per cent.

GREAT SPECTACLE "LEST WE FORGET"

Wonderful Production Coming to the Regent Theatre, Week of April Eighth.

SINKING OF LUSITANIA

Exact Reproduction of This Great Disaster Feature of Big Story.

Rarely is the opportunity given to witness such a wonderful piece of motion-picture art as that embodied in the wondrous spectacle which is to be presented at the Regent Theatre the week of April 8. No other production has come that so vividly portrays the sinking of the Lusitania with its attendant scenes as this mammoth production entitled "Lest We Forget." This particular scene is but one of the many thrilling scenes which go to make up the beautiful love story which is found interwoven throughout.

THE SCREEN REPRESENTATION OF THE GREAT DISASTER THAT STOOK THE WORLD IS MOST REALISTIC AND SOME IDEA OF THE ADVENTURE OF BEING TORPEDOED AT SEA CAN BE HAD. THE STORY IS NOT ONE OF THE MOST COMPREHENSIVE PIECES OF GRUESOME EVENTS, BUT IS IN ITSELF A MOST CHARMING ACCOUNT, WITH A THREAD OF LOVE INTEREST THAT TEMPERS THE PICTURE AND RELIEVES THE STRAIN WHICH might otherwise occur were this not the case. From beginning to end, it is a story of immense proportions, bringing home revelations which can not fail to stagger at least that portion of the world not touched by the war's havoc.

THE STEADINESS OF FRANCE

Results of Third Loan Not Yet Completed, But Much Has Already Come In.

M. Klotz has explained to the chamber of deputies that the results of the third loan are not yet completed. Already 10,278,829,952 francs have come in. This figure does not include subscriptions collected abroad. On the occasion of the last loan, savings brought in 9,615,497,662 francs and with the subscriptions abroad the total reached 10,023,000,000 francs, less, and then French thrift alone has furnished this time. M. Klotz expressed gratification over the proportion of cash amounting, as it did, to about half the money sent to the treasury.

It is reassuring he said, to see this battle gained by French thrift. This manifestation of self-confidence, even after more than 40 months of the terrible war, demonstrates the unanimity of the country.

Girl Guide Notes

Health of Mind and Body is All Important to The Guide.

To those who are growing up apparently fit in body, even the knowledge of health and an encouragement of physical fitness is an essential point in the education of today. The school curriculum allows a certain amount of time each week for physical drill and some minor instruction on the subject of health.

With the Guides it is understood that a girl is expected to keep herself clean, wholesome, and well, so that she may be a credit to the movement, to her patrol, and to her country, and she will endeavor to live up to such expectations at all costs, putting thus the responsibility on the girl herself.

If the girl has a fine mind and body, then the woman will be the same in the days to come, and she will in her turn see that the next generation after her will be the fine type of British citizen that is needed for our country's sake. That is why in this movement we teach the girls the necessity of health in mind and body, and that health can be gained by open air exercise and wholesome activity, just as the mind can be refreshed by wholesome and beautiful thoughts and ideas.

This is the motto that appears in the new handbook of "Girl Guiding." It stands for "Tuck in your back." It is a reminder which is so much needed when you are slouching and slouching instead of carrying themselves uprightly.

It is not merely the appearance which is improved by tucking in the small of the back, but if this is done continually the practice gradually forms the muscles until the body is carried perfectly upright, and it would be an effort to slouch. The object is to keep the chest expanded for the better working of the lungs and breathing apparatus, as well as to prevent the heart and other internal organs from becoming depressed and slackened.

Growing girls and those who spend one-third of their time sitting at desks are very apt to get into the slouching habit unless they constantly think and carry out their motto, "Tuck in your back." For this reason the initials "T. I. B." occur every here and there to catch the eye of anyone reading the handbook; and they should also be constantly quoted by captains and leaders when holding patrol meetings, practices, etc.

The following rhyme from the Brownies' handbook. If you learn it and carry out its teaching every day, you will likely never be ill. "Only set on wholesome fare; Thru your nostrils breathe fresh air; Clean yourself inside and out; Twist and bend and run about."

A novel "health chart" has been prepared by the officials of the Camp Fire Girls, an organization somewhat similar to the Girl Guides. The purpose of the chart is to impress upon girls their patriotic duty to lead healthful lives. In awarding a special badge to those who are diligent in requirements, officials only give recognition to the principle that a stimulus is so much required to translate good intentions into action. To win a badge a girl must sleep at least 83 hours a week if she is under 16, at least 85 if she is over 16.

Lectures on child nursing are being given to the guides at Friday evenings at Manning Avenue School. Captain Gladstone invites Guides from other companies to attend.

Weekly Review of Schools

High schools were under fire several times at board of education committee during the past week. Dr. John Noble advocated the reduction of the eight upper schools in the colleges to three. The trustees asserted that the upper forms in the high schools were slimly attended and that the reduction would save stacks of money. This did not appear to be convincing as the proposed reduction found no supporters.

The high schools were frankly discussed again when the projected addition to the Parkdale Collegiate was before the property committee. Dr. Noble expressed surprise at the claim that the collegiate was crowded. Dr. G. J. Steele, chairman of the board, and a majority of the committee, took the stand that the collegiate could wait for enlargements until after the close of the war.

The case of Miss Held was again prominent in public school circles. The advisory committee of the Teachers' Association presented a review of the legal points of the case which are likely to be raised at next Thursday's meeting of the board of education. This legal review was furnished by J. M. Godfrey, counsel for Miss Freda Held. He was asked today whether he thought the board at its next meeting, would pass Dr. Noble's resolution directing the chief inspector to make an investigation. Mr. Godfrey did not seem to have any doubt but that the resolution would carry. He said: "I have known, personally, for a number of years, most of the trustees who opposed the suspension of the rules at the meeting. These men have always been fair-minded, and it would be unthinkable that they would raise any further legal technicalities which would prevent full justice being done."

Mr. Godfrey was further asked as to whether Dr. Cowley, the chief inspector, could refuse to hold the investigation if the Noble resolution passed. Mr. Godfrey said: "The inspector could not do so, as under the Public Schools Act he was bound to obey the directions of the board." However, he added, these matters are all legal technicalities and quibbles, and what Miss Held wants, and what the public are entitled to, is a full and complete enquiry. If she is dissatisfied employed as a teacher, if the charges are unfounded, she should be restored to her proper position. No trustee or official can properly take any other position. If the trustees were connected with the former obstructive investigation still persist in obstructing, the public can very properly take the position that they are afraid of an enquiry."

WHEN HUBBY FOOLED HER. Mrs. Scatterbrain was constantly bemoaning her lot. Her husband, who was entitled to place half the letters of the alphabet after his name, had the most treacherous memory in the world. He could remember nothing that his wife told him, in spite of the fact that he had his finger and knots in his handkerchiefs. Only once did Mrs. Scatterbrain remember to do his wife's bidding. "I think you are getting as bad as yesterday dated a whole week ahead." "Heavens!" gasped Mrs. Scatterbrain, trembling with the shock. "My husband must have posted it the very day I gave it to him."

Because for some time back the street cars have been heated by soft coal, it has been suggested that the company ought to be prosecuted; that an automobile ought to pursue a given street car and note if it did emit feloniously soft coal smoke for a period of more than six minutes.

With no desire to deprive any officials of a joyride, it must be admitted that soft coal has been burned in the cars for exactly the same reason that it has been burned in the homes of thousands of citizens at one time or another this winter.

What was supposed would be an ample supply of hard coal was laid in for the street cars, but the sustained cold weather exhausted the stock before the Winter was over, and other coal had to be bought. It was impossible to buy hard coal; charcoal was not to be had. In order to keep the cars warm, soft coal had to be secured. It is better that the stove pipes in the cars emit soft coal smoke than that the passengers should be without heat.

SAILORS RESCUED GUESTS FROM FIRE

Bluejackets - From H.M.C.S. Niobe Help When Hotel Burns.

MAN IS BELIEVED LOST

King Edward Hotel, Halifax, Scene of Fatal Disaster Saturday.

Halifax, N.S., March 30.—One life is believed to have been lost in a conflagration at the King Edward Hotel here this morning. William Ward, of the relief reconstruction staff, which had a workshop in the basement of the hotel, has not been located, and it is feared he perished. Some of the guests at the hotel had narrow escapes, as the fire apparatus was delayed owing to a faulty alarm box. They were saved only by the timely intervention of a squad of bluejackets from H.M.C.S. Niobe, at the dockyard nearby.

The fire broke out in the reconstruction workshop in the hotel basement at 3 o'clock this morning, and the flames rapidly made their way to the roof, cutting off a number of the hotel guests in their rooms on the top floor. The firemen not arriving promptly, the sailors with ropes and ladders reached the upper windows and their employes and endeavor to adjust them. It was suggested that a uniform wage scale at all the eastern shipyards would tend to promote settled conditions in the yards. The shipbuilders, who are at present engaged on contract work taken before the demand for increased wages came from the men, argued that when signing on these contracts they took into account the scale of wages then prevailing. Therefore until the present contracts are filled they do not feel that they should be asked to increase wages.

The negotiations between the representatives of the shipbuilders and the employees forming the joint committee may, however, result in an adjustment of the wage difficulty. The spirit at the conference was a conciliatory and amicable one, and before leaving for home the delegates expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the results of the conference.

TO USE NO WHEAT.
United States Hotel Men Agree With Food Controller to Limitate That Grain From Menus.

New York, March 30.—Elimination of all wheat products from the hotel menus agreed upon at a meeting of 400 hotel proprietors from throughout the United States here today. The change is to be effective "as soon as possible, but not later than April 14." The action of the hotel men was the outcome of a conference between hotel men and Food Administrator Hoover in Washington yesterday.

MARCH CASUALTIES LIGHT.

Those Up to Opening of German Offensive Well Below February's Figures.

London, March 30.—British casualties reported in March reached a total of 14,390, divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds, officers 271, men 2873. Wounded or missing, officers 810, men 10,336. This is the smallest total in several months, and evidently the casualty lists from the new battle in France have not begun to appear. The total in February was 18,261.

DISLIKE ITS NAME.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 30.—A movement was begun today at Berlin, Ottawa County, to have the name of the town changed to Pershing. Petitions are to be prepared next week and presented to the board of supervisors. The town has about 450 residents, most of them being of Scotch or Irish descent.

SEEK TO PROMOTE BETTER AGREEMENT

Conference of Shipbuilders and Employes Held in Ottawa.

NEED UNITY OF EFFORT

Sir Robert Borden Explains Need for Determined Co-operation.

Ottawa, March 30.—The conference between representatives of Canadian shipbuilders east of Fort William and their employes, which concluded Thursday evening, is said to have resulted in a better understanding between the parties. The conference was called by the government, as a result of trouble which has occurred in some of the shipyards, and the delegates were received on the opening day by Sir Robert Borden, Hon. C. G. Ballantyne, minister of marine; Hon. T. W. Crothers, minister of labor, and Senator Robertson. Sir Robert Borden in addressing the delegates pointed out the great need for ships at present, and made a plea for unity of effort at this time of great national crisis.

Altho the conference was unable to arrive at any definite agreement with regard to the scale of wages, a joint committee was appointed which will consider the points at issue between the shipbuilders and their employes and endeavor to adjust them. It was suggested that a uniform wage scale at all the eastern shipyards would tend to promote settled conditions in the yards. The shipbuilders, who are at present engaged on contract work taken before the demand for increased wages came from the men, argued that when signing on these contracts they took into account the scale of wages then prevailing. Therefore until the present contracts are filled they do not feel that they should be asked to increase wages.

BALTIMORE VIEWS CANADIAN TROPHIES

Martin Burrell, Secretary of State of Canada, Opens Liberty Loan Sale.

Baltimore, March 30.—With a note of greeting from his countrymen to Americans who have joined issues against a common enemy, and with a promise of the most cordial co-operation in the ultimate success of the enterprise, Martin Burrell, secretary of state of Canada, officially opened today "Over There," a patriotic and historical spectacle arranged by the Liberty Loan committee of Maryland for the promotion of the sale of war bonds and Liberty Loan. There was an immense crowd at the opening exercises in the Fifth Maryland National Guard armory, in which the spectacle was given. There is an exhibition of 15,000 Canadian war trophies, including everything from bullets to a British tank. While the exercises were in progress at the armory there was another huge gathering at the Pimlico racetrack, where the Liberty Loan committee, thru the courtesy of the British Government, presented as the chief feature of an open air show a performance of the "Over There" which went thru numerous interesting manoeuvres for the entertainment of the spectators.

PROGRAM IS VARIED AT SURPRISE PARTY

The good fellowship existing among the employees of the T. Eaton Company was demonstrated on Wednesday evening last, when the surprise party was given by the department, under the leadership of Louis Spofford and Samuel Lilley, visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. M. McConnell at 277 Westmount road avenue with everything necessary to make the surprise party a success.

After progressive bridge whist, the prize-winners being Miss Knott and William McCarthy, a program of dancing and spectaculars was presented, the entertainers including Alex. Brown, Richard Wiggins, James Wilson, Samuel Lilley and Theodore Calder, with William Knott as master of ceremonies. The evening wound up with a heel and toe step dancing contest, with A. W. McConnell and Louis Spofford the winners, after which cheers for the King and Sir John C. Eaton were given.

LIBERATE POLITICAL PRISONERS

Portuguese Provisional Government Opens the Way for a General Election.

Lisbon, Portugal, March 29.—The provisional government, formed after the revolution last December which resulted in the overthrow of the Machado government, announced today the liberation of all political prisoners, restoration to all suspended newspapers and the publication and the reopening of all political clubs. At the same time announcement was made that the candidate under which will be elected a president of the republic, 77 senators and 155 deputies.

BRITAIN'S MEAT SHORTAGE.

Home-Grown Supply of Cattle Shows Heavy Decrease During Present Year.

Washington, March 30.—The extent of the meat shortage in England was disclosed in English market reports received today by the food administration which said that the amount of home-grown meat marketed here has decreased from 22,000,000 pounds weekly in 1916 to 55,000,000 pounds weekly since January of this year. The number of cattle reaching the market has decreased 65 per cent; sheep, 40 per cent, and hogs, 48 per cent.

"SEE IT THROUGH" MONEY, FOOD, SOLDIERS' NEEDS AND IN THE HOME - MUSIC

The Need of the Hour

Just now people are taking a new interest in Music. It is the impetus of war. Shoulders back, head up, eyes front. Grit and spirit and enthusiasm must not be skimped or lacking. Music in the heart and daily life lends a lot to the way a person looks at things. It forms an attitude toward crises and ordeals, personal and national, that is indomitable in the real and final reckoning. Can Music mean any less to a home or to a single heart? Music is nature's gift to the soul—it is healthful, inspiring, educational. It sends the red blood of courage tingling through the veins; it fills our minds with the clear light of faith in the ultimate, and strengthens our arms for the stern battles of life. Just now we need Music more than ever. We need it to cheer and comfort and inspire, and hold the fragrance of home and home ties through days of anxious waiting. Let there be Music in your home every day. Have a piano—a good piano. And select it where the offering is so wide the prospect of disappointment is removed.

BRITISH DOWN SIXTEEN PLANES

Attacks Made on Concentrated Position of the Enemy South of Somme.

London, March 29.—Sixteen German airplanes were put out of action yesterday by the British, it was announced officially. The statement followed: "A majority of our attacks were made on enemy groups on the battle front Thursday south of the Somme, where large concentrations of the enemy were constantly reported. The work continued until dark, in spite of rainstorms and low clouds. Twenty-six tons of bombs were dropped and nearly a quarter of a million rounds were fired upon different targets. "There was not much fighting, considering the number of British machines in the air, but on the battle front the fire from the ground became very heavy. Nine German machines were brought down, five others were disabled, and two others were shot down by fire from the ground. Twelve of our machines are missing."

HEAVY BOMBARDMENT ON AMERICAN FRONT

Huns Shell Line Northwest of Toul for Five Hours—Smoke Clouds Used.

With the American Army in France, March 29.—One of the American positions in a town on the line northwest of Toul was heavily bombarded for five hours, ending at 3 o'clock this morning. The enemy used shrapnel, high explosive, gas and incendiary shells. At the same time the enemy started fires back of his line in No Man's Land, which gave off dense clouds of smoke. The fact that four troops of enemy cavalry were seen at sundown yesterday, and the development of the bombardment into a barrage, led to the conclusion that the enemy was using his smoke clouds to conceal advancing troops. One body of enemy troops was observed on one of the flanks. The barrage of the Americans swept across No Man's Land and another in the direction of the flank, the Americans standing by ready for the Germans. None of them appeared, however. The incendiary shells of the enemy set fire to the grass and camouflaged positions in the American lines. The flames burned briskly until the rain quenched them.

Make Pro-Germans Say, "To Hell With the Kaiser"

Coshocton, Ohio, March 30.—A mob of between 500 and 600 persons late last night and early this morning visited sixteen homes in this city and forced between 25 and 30 alleged pro-Germans to kiss the Stars and Stripes and say, "To hell with the Kaiser."

BRITISH CALM AND RESOLUTE.

Lloyd George Sends Heartening Message to Premier of France.

London, March 30.—Premier Lloyd George has sent a message to Premier Clemenceau of France declaring that Great Britain, calm and resolute, is relying on the justice of their common cause and upon the valor of the men who defend it. Confidence in the British premier added, as the English people watches the steady march of the gallant army of France to repel the invader.

PLAYING A DOUBLE GAME.

Petrograd, March 29.—M. Lunacharsky, minister of education, expresses the opinion that while an alliance with America is impossible, Russia is willing to accept American assistance in the form of loans and arms in view of the fact that Germany is the common enemy.

FIX RICE PRICES.

Manila, March 29.—Governor-General Harrison, acting in concert with Chinese importers, has assumed control of the insular rice trade, fixing prices which guarantee the Chinese a profit of not more than five per cent. This averts the serious consequence which would result from rising prices.

WILL ASK FOR RELIEF.

Halifax, N.S., March 30.—A meeting of manufacturers and wealthy citizens who lost in the explosion was held yesterday, and they will ask the relief commission to consider their claims immediately in order to put them on a level with the poorer applicants.

ROBINS PLAYERS ARRIVE.

Edward H. Robins and his company have arrived in Toronto for their summer stock engagement, which opens at the Royal Alexandra April 3 with "Seven Chances."

U. S. SHIPPING FIGURES.

Washington, March 30.—The United States Shipping Board exceeded its launching program in March by 12,000 tons, but fell behind in its schedule of completed ships owing to difficulty in obtaining steel plates. Figures given out at the board's office today showed that 36 ships of 273,786 tons were launched, and 20 of 162,200 tons were completed and delivered. At the beginning of the month it was announced that it was hoped to launch 35 ships of 220,591 tons during March, and to deliver 23 ships of 188,376 tons.

A Letter to Tommy On the Firing Line

Being a Chatty, Newsy Epistle, Primarily Intended for the Thousands of Sunday World Readers Now Across the Water

BY THE STENOGRAPHER.

Toronto, Ontario, March 26, 1918.

Dear Tom: Our hearts are with you these dreadful days, and with all the dear lads at the front. Every day since the beginning of the great offensive crowds of people have gathered in front of the bulletin boards of the various newspapers, and the names of our brave soldiers have been on every lip, for we know that they will hold fast to death. We always think of you as of "one who never turned his back, but marched breast forward," and we can only say "be strong and of a good courage."

The "original fitter" arrived home in a haze of glory, but it was inevitable. There was no tumult nor shouting, because the men just wanted to get home to their wives and kiddies. However, Tommy Church is planning "don't" for the returned men, which will take the form of a monster picnic in Exhibition Park on May 4. There will be athletic and aquatic sports, and lots of good "sals" for the soldiers and their families. Every time I meet one of the brave fellows I want to rush up to him and shake hands, and thank him from the bottom of my heart for all he has done for ME.

Miss Springtime caught a chill last week and had quite a release, but is steadily gaining strength and hopes to be quite herself in a little while. The slogan of "greater production" is sounding more clearly every day, and all but the slackers are hustling into line, for we are determined that the coming harvest shall be the best ever. We now have a war lecture bureau, and the speakers—who are all volunteers—include many prominent men. They generally go to theatres and picture houses, where audiences are ready-made, and give five-minute addresses on subjects connected with the war. Just now the subject on which all the speakers are concentrating is "greater production." I heard one man making a strong plea for help for on Paschendaele, "spare parts" and everything intact. He is the only married man in the gang and gives us lots of fatherly advice. "Ole Bill" of "Bainfather" fame has nothing on him for finding "better" ideas.

Last on the list and last to arrive on the scene, comes "Mike" Carmichael, of the "windy city of the west," Saskatoon. Quite naturally he is author of this line of halloo food. He is No. 6 on Bud's gun, and with luck should be due for promotion about 1924. Having fully introduced ourselves we will now try and get on with the dope.

The Morning Walk. Firstly, we highly approve of your morning walks as a preventive for consumption. During our rest from the line we roll out quite early and go for a little jaunt with our platoon officer in order to keep fit. However, I am afraid the said gentleman would be extremely lonesome these winter mornings were it a voluntary affair. In the line the alarm is the "rum up" along about 5 a.m. for those that are fortunate enough to have the time and place to go to sleep.

The Hun has the Hydro people cheated for a lighting system. One can turn any dark night into broad daylight by lobbing a few bombs into his outposts.

take his medicine like a good 'ol' boy, then the whole bunch will chuck him. Why they should hand him such strenuous stuff is as clear as mud to me, but I daresay a good old sport like you will understand.

I went to Loe's the other day to see the peerless Charlie Ray appearing in "The Hired Man," for I am quite a picture fan. I had to listen to some junk—good gracious! Tom, that show was punk! But when the vaudeville was done, I settled down to have some fun, for I could look at him all day that feature folks like Charlie Ray. The picture had but well commenced, when suddenly I plainly sensed a fact that always gets me riled—behind me sat "their only child," to whom the notes must all be read, who really should have been in bed. He sat between his paw and maw, who kept up an unceasing jaw. What the audience was annoyed—the darling child was overjoyed. Faw took him for equal power to that of any baseball fan, gave details of "The Hired Man." "Say, Pop, what is he doin' now?" "My chee-ild, he is off to blow." "And now, my bhoys, he's making his bow, because it is a pleasant day." "Utah!" "A pig." "N'at!" "A cow." "Well, sweetums, daddy's tired now, but educated you must be, so momma will take turns with me." Maw did not let the game get cold, but bravely, as the film unrolled, in childish language, full of charm, she told the story of the farm. "Maw, is she really sick?" "No chance! She wants to learn her bean to dance." And then, "Look, son, a great, big fitter!" Maw's voice got just a trifle higher. It was the straw that broke the back of one who had been on the rack. He called aloud in whisper-shout, "Hey, put that trouble-maker out." But momma made a fade-away, and many other words did say.

We have had very few worth-while plays this season, but last week's production of DuMaurier's novel of that name, was produced at the Royal Alexandra, starring John Barrymore and Constance Collier. Tom, it was wonderful. A dream-play, slightly like the "Blue Bird." It told the story of a young man who, in a white heat of passion, slew the traitor of his sainted mother's memory, and expiated his crime (?) by four years in prison. It was there that he learned to "look up, up, and dream true." "stone walls do not a prison make." Tour pal, The Stenog.

"Heroes of the ages past Dreamed their dreams from first to last, Dreamed of danger—do and dare! In their castles in the air." True, Tom! "Look up, up, and dream true!" Tour pal, The Stenog.

MISS JOLIVET COMING WHILE PICTURE IS ON

Star in "Lest We Forget" and Survivor of Lusitania Will Describe Disaster.

Our theatre program is not very extensive, but the divisions on rest are entertained by artists in every sense of the word. The female impersonators in our soldier concert parties are really wonderful and would make the High Park mashers sit up and take notice. On our last rest our company were the main performers in a "grand farce" for the benefit of the powers that be. We advanced over the peace-loving French farmers' growing crops for a distance of 2,000 yards and captured a strong enemy position in an old farmhouse. Altho this was a daily occurrence for two weeks, we suffered no casualties whatever. We often remarked on how well it would look in movies.

The "finale" came one cold March morning when we were allowed line stuff to fire and had a zero hour just like a regular do. The audience was largely made up of gentlemen with red hands on their hats. That battle is over, tho, and from now on we only take a farm house once.

We hope you will understand that this lengthy epistle is some considerable effort and overlook any faulty composition. Having enjoyed your letter so much we would hate to miss any subsequent issues, and sincerely hope you will forward us any copies.

The "Gimmie Gang" will get us, c/o Lance-Corporal G. M. Brown, 2 Company, P. P. C. L. I. France.

Wishing yourself and the old scout the best of luck.

Very sincerely,
Gimmie Gang,
Per J. V. Carmichael, Secty.

ENGLAND'S FLOATING DEBT

London, March 30.—The chancellor of the exchequer announced in the commons yesterday that since January the floating debt had been reduced by about £38,000,000, largely out of the proceeds of the national war bonds. Up to the end of last week the applications for these national war bonds totaled $52 millions. This system of continuous borrowing had been adopted by him as a substitute for a loan and he had every hope that it would be successful.

Lance-Corporal Gordon Brown is O. C. of a platoon's gun, and another Toronto boy. He is a handsome, dashing young soldier, and most likely more than one pair of girlish blue eyes roam the casualty lists hoping that Gordon has not had any bad luck. He has held his man-size job down for some time tho, and it is ill-fortune for any Heine wiring parties Brownie gets a bead on.

Lance-Corporal "Von Kluck" Sgt is anything but German, but gets his moniker from his good old Norwegian surname Carl. Carl hails from Fort William and has weathered many a gale on old Superior, to say nothing of some extremely heavy seas out here.

That concludes the "non-sufficient" officers. The remaining two are rear-rank buck private of the first water. "Bill" Lindsay has witnessed many gas attacks on Morley avenue, so naturally this little do, is right in his line. He really feels quite at home when Fritz sends over his poisonous gas. He is Brownie's second in command; and the nearest he has ever been to losing his job was when No. 5 crew fished him out of a shell-hole

MORE FISH FOR U. S. Bureau of Fisheries is Co-operating With Food Administration.

Washington, March 30.—Many million pounds of fish are being added to the nation's food supply by action of the bureau of fisheries in co-operation with the food administration and authorities in the Gulf States. Temporary relaxation of local fish laws, which will permit net fishing during the closed season for certain fish, other than game fish, has been agreed upon with the understanding that the federal government save and hatch eggs of fish taken and rescue young fish entrapped in overfished lands. To enable the bureau of fisheries to undertake this work $20,000 has been placed at its disposal from the national security and defense fund. Provision is being made for temporary fish hatcheries and rescue parties have been sent out to overfished lands. It is estimated that 20,000,000 lbs. of wholesome food fish which otherwise would be unavailable will be taken during the closed season under the relaxation of the laws. Rescue operations, Commissioner Smith of the bureau of fisheries says, will be of incalculable value inasmuch as the many millions of immature food fish that may be saved would otherwise inevitably be wasted. Results of the rescue operations will be manifest after one year. In the upper Mississippi Valley this year more than 25,000,000 food and game fish were saved from overfished lands.

TORONTO SYMPHONY AND MAUD POWELL

F. S. Welsman, Conductor, Chooses Great Program for Closing Concert.

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra will close its present season next Thursday evening, when an unusually fine program will be given, with Maud Powell, the celebrated violinist, as soloist. Mr. Welsman has chosen the following numbers: Overture, Coriolan, Beethoven; Pavane pour une infante défunte, Ravel; Minuet, from the Petite Suite, Debussy; Rakoczy March, Berlioz, and Overture, Masaniello. The principal number for violin and orchestra will be the Concerto in B minor, No. 3, by Saint-Saens, one of the most prolific of modern composers. His works are all finely constructed and this one especially so. The first movement is founded on two themes given out by the solo instrument; the second is genuinely French in spirit and is the most appealing portion of the concert, for the finale provides the most striking opportunities for the display of virtuosity in solo playing, there being four distinct themes, three carried by the soloist and the fourth by muted violins and violas. The purely solo pieces will be Love's Delight, Martini-Powell; Waltzine Doll, Földini-Hartmann, and Dance of Elves, Bazzini. The Maud Powell is ranked among the few greatest violinists of the world, this is her first visit to Toronto, and the management of the orchestra is to be congratulated upon its success in procuring so eminent an artist for the closing concert.

APPEAL FOR NURSES AND WAR PRISONERS

"A Fantasy of the Seasons" to Be Given at Massey Hall Under Direction of Mrs. A. J. Arthurs.

"The Fantasy of the Seasons," promises to eclipse anything yet presented in this city in the way of an extravaganza. Over three hundred people will take part, special scenes being painted by W. Drake and the electrical effects are being looked after by Mr. Jackson, both of the Royal Alexandra Theatre. Lillian Steinberg and Mrs. Arthur Semple will have charge of the ballets and dancing. Mrs. Varty-Roberts and Alfred Bruce will prepare the choruses, there will be an efficient orchestra, under the leadership of Alfred Bruce, and Stanley Adams will act as stage manager. The solo parts will be taken by the Misses Fleury, Ivey, Wilson, Whitling, Auger, Estline, Smith, Crooks, Williams, Tough, Hunsford, Mrs. Douglas Raymond, Mrs. John Macdonald and Douglas Stanbury. Farnum Barton, the well-known actor, has kindly consented to play a part in the "Summer" scene. April 11, 12 and 13 are the dates chosen and, judging by the tremendous amount of money the house will be sold out for every performance.

MUSIC NOTES

Audrie Rubani, the well-known soprano, is giving a recital at Forester's Hall on April 23rd. After singing in Buffalo recently at the Twentieth Century Club, one of the city's most enthusiastically about her as a concert artist and dwelt at length upon the brilliant, bell-like quality of her voice, the consumer, ease with which she executed difficult runs and trills and the musical intelligence her interpretation gave to her songs. She is particularly complimented for her singing of "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster," "Why," "Tschalkowsky," "Waltz Song," "Goin' on," and "One Fine Day," Puccini. These, with songs by Ware, Sanderson and Hardeston are included in her Toronto program.

Virginia Coyne, the young pianiste, who has often proved to be a favorite to the music lovers of Toronto, is making her debut in recital at Forester's Hall on Thursday evening, April 11, under the auspices of the Weisman Studio Club. Miss Coyne is one of the few whose playing shows a decided improvement every year—a sign of real talent—so that she is now classed with the finest pianistes in the city. Her tone is beautiful and clear; her playing is big and gives one the impression of temperament guided by discrimination.

The Toronto Conservatory Orchestra, Frank E. Blachford conductor, gave a very worthy program in the Conservatory Hall, Wednesday evening. The program comprised: Overture, The Magic Flute, Mozart; Unfinished Symphony, Schubert; Irish Tune and Mock Morris, Grainger; and Adagio, Bizet, for strings. Mr. Blachford has succeeded in bringing his players up to a standard of ensemble playing quite beyond the amateur; the tone is of fine quality, and there is present abundant evidence of an appreciation of musical values. Kate Menendez, pupil of Mr. Blachford, played the Adagio from Suite Op. 34, Ries, scoring a great success. Esther Cassels, pupil of Ethel Shepherd sang two French songs and three in English, one by Davies and two by Brahms.

An excellent musical program has been prepared for this Easter Sunday evening's service at Yonge St. Methodist Church. The choir will give Stainey's "Awake Thou That Sleepest," Gould's "In the Valley," "Fog," and other numbers. Mrs. John Macdonald will sing Handel's "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" and the other soloists will be Barnaby Nelson, tenor, and Albert Baggs, basso.

Pupils of Ernest St. Farmer gave an enjoyable recital at the Hamburg Conservatory on March 23, the quality of tone all thru being particularly noticeable. Two of the younger pupils, Arthur Kilgour, an Oakville lad, and Eleanor Griffith showed great promise. Colin C. McPhee was represented by four of his compositions, three songs sung by Miss Tholey, a pupil of Sikron Carboni, and his "Love Song" for piano, which Mr. Conrad played with the same poetic expressiveness as

ART NOTES

The Women's Art Association were fortunate last week in having Mr. Herbert Johnson of The Toronto Saturday Night as one of their weekly "Guild Night" speakers. His subject was on the "Origin and Development of the Cartoon," and it was made even more interesting with illustrations shown on canvas of the work of different artists of a period extending as far back as the time of the early Egyptians. Grotesque drawings of this nature were also shown, which have been unearthed in Pompeii. The cartoon was cultivated in Holland, and was matured in England, and in the time of Holden, the celebrated artist, types of the early cartoonist—most caricatures—were printed in Lubbeck.

Mr. Johnson spoke of the manner of engraving, and how difficult and slow was the work of the wood engraver of the early days, which was the style of the English cartoonists to try it. Cruickshanks, between 1814-1825, as well as being a cartoonist, illustrated for Charles Dickens' first book "Oliver Twist."

John Doyle brought "Punch" to the fore with his drawings, and was the originator of cartoons for that magazine. Then came Keene, a political satirist, followed by Samborn, with Sir John Tenniel, who was knighted in 1886. Haemakers, the clever Dutch artist of the present day, was given as an example of a combination of the cartoon and the higher art. Art connoisseurs consider the Haemakers drawings masterpieces and that they should be known and studied everywhere. His drawing is firm, and bold, and no other modern artist has so well portrayed the dramatic element.

Cesare is another clever artist, but is more of an illustrator and philosopher than a cartoonist. Partridge was a fine artist, but his drawings were so nicely done that they lost considerable vigor. Mr. Johnson gave some examples of our Canadian cartoonists, and among them were Bengough's "Farewell to Punccheon," and some of Julian's "Bytown Coons" looked very familiar.

NOT A PROMISING SUBJECT. "No," said Miss Clemensine Clatter in confidence over the back fence to Mrs. Judge Tubman. "While I am pretty sure Miz Stingley is kinda anxious to marry again, I don't much believe she'll have John Stook. You see, he is in perfect health and never has an ache nor pain, while her first husband was a chronic dyspeptic and took nearly every remedy that was ever invented. "And I guess she is sort of fidgetting on getting a second husband that is a dyspeptic, too, so's she'll be able to use up the medicines that her first one left."

TO UTILIZE RIVER BANKS. Instead of building a fourth national shipyard the British admiralty has decided to utilize the banks of the River Wye between the Chesapeake and Beachley yards, which means an unprecedented number of slipways reaching to the mouth of the river. There will be 23 slipways at Chesapeake and Beachley, and the remainder at Fortbury.

Are you Selling your Soul for the Lure of the City?

An Announcement Addressed Particularly to Single Men — and Their Employers

NOTE—
In listing the following classes of labour from which farm help may be reasonably drawn, we respectfully exclude all returned soldiers engaged in their occupations. They have already DONE THEIR NATIONAL SERVICE.

- Shoe Shiners
- Soda Fountain Dispensers
- Jewelry Salesmen
- Shoe Salesmen
- Men's Wear Salesmen
- Women's Wear Salesmen
- Florist's Salesmen
- And every other class that can be included under the heading of Store Clerks or Store Salesmen.
- Commercial Travellers
- Lunch Counter Waiters
- Hotel Waiters
- Bell Boys
- Restaurant Clerks
- Book-Keepers
- Typists
- General Office Assistants
- Theatre Ushers
- Grocers' Assistants
- Hardware Assistants
- Drug Store Assistants
- Messenger and Delivery Boys
- Shipping Clerks
- Warehousemen
- Music Store Salesmen
- Chauffeurs
- Carters
- Drivers of Delivery Wagons

Street Car Conductors
Elevator Operators
All General Labourers who can reasonably be spared.
House to House Canvassers of all Classes and Grades.

This list by no means includes all. There are many other non-essential occupations in war times, and those who are engaged in them would do well to consider their abandonment in favour of farm work.

Get away for a moment from the clamour of the street; go into your room, at once, or to-night if you are not now at home, and ask yourself this question:

"Have I actually done anything that could count as National Service for my country during the forty bloody months of her suffering?"

Put down in hours the actual time that you have worked. Then, if before your conscience you can say, fearlessly, that you have done a man's service to your country, well and good—we know that you will do even more. But if there is the thought drumming through your mind that all—everything—that you have done, is a mere nothing, just a sop to conscience, then as you are worthy of your manhood, make a speedy decision to devote the next few months of your life to National Service.

Outside of our armed forces, only one kind of civilian labour ranks as National Service for men. That is Service on a farm.

That is why the Government in all seriousness exempted the farmer and the farmer's helper from military service.

If you are not quite sure whether your work could be done by a woman consult the list of occupations. These do not include all occupations. There are many others.

Sheer necessity urges that many men in these occupations should give place immediately to women, while they, the men, take up farm work temporarily.

This applies particularly to single men who can move with little or no inconvenience. Positions can also be found for married men who wish to move their families to the country.

Organized Labour Endorses This Crusade—Remember That!

In a memorandum to members they specifically, as a matter of national necessity, agree to:

- (a) The exemption from compulsory military service of all farm help.
- (b) The substitution of female for male help in order that certain classes of male help may be released for essential National Labour Service, that is, Farm Labour.
- (c) The stipulation that women who temporarily replace men who go upon the farm shall receive the same pay for service equal to the man replaced, so that the rates of wages for men shall not be lowered.

Farm Wages are Good

At present farm wages with board are in many cases equal to, if not better, than city wages without board. So that the handicap of wages should not be magnified.

A day of reckoning is coming; a day when that irresistible force, Public Opinion, will judge a man by his work, and will judge employers by the work they are retaining men to do.

Men and women will look hard at the clerks in stores, offices, warehouses and factories. We are down to elements to-day, and our people will not tolerate the thought that while so many of our sons are perishing in the bloody struggle in France, so many men are doing work that can easily and efficiently be done by women without sacrifice to their womanhood or health.

Remember Your Effort is Voluntary

The production of food is the paramount work of Canada to-day.

In going to work upon a farm, the farm is actually your channel of National Service. That is the attitude you should take towards the matter.

We owe it to our nationhood and to our Allies, who stand with us through the Ordeal by Battle to see that no effort is spared to insure to them a sufficient food supply.

Don't dismiss this matter from your mind. Enroll for service quickly. Send your application to the District Representative of the Department of Agriculture in your County, or apply at the local public employment bureau or fill out the coupon below and mail it to the address given.

A Day of Reckoning is Coming—The Battle Line Must Not Lack Food

The City Hall Reviewed

On Thursday afternoon the board of works decided on a policy of "no encroachments." They instructed the city solicitor to prepare the necessary bylaw. Bylaws usually are made to be broken, but if this particular one is observed it will have a sweeping effect. Never a week passes but four or five permits are granted to firms throughout the city to encroach anywhere from two feet to ten feet on the street line, often without payment to the city for the privilege. In one case the committee last October granted permission to a contractor to erect buildings ten feet south of the north side of Bloor street near Runnymede road. And this in face of the fact that Bloor street in time to come is destined to be the main thoroughfare of the city. Fortunately the city architect has not followed the ruling of the committee, and states that he will not grant any permits for buildings that will encroach on Bloor street at this spot.

Toronto's "newsies" have defied the police once too often. For years there has been a battle royal between the street vendors of newspapers and the minions of the law on a dozen different points. The newsboys have persisted in littering up the streets, not only with their papers, but with rows of magazines, dime novels, etc. A by-law was passed prohibiting them from selling magazines from their boxes, and they got around the law by keeping their papers in the boxes and the magazines on the sidewalk. The result of the street selling of magazines has been to place a heavy handicap on the legitimate news sellers who pay taxes and keep up expensive shops. A deputation of them appeared at the city hall on Thursday and succeeded in having the works committee instruct the city solicitor to prepare a bylaw prohibiting the selling of any periodicals outside of newspapers on the public highways.

RITA JOLIVET in "LEST WE FORGET"

The magnificent spectacle coming to the Regent week commencing Monday, April 8. A scene showing the sinking of the Lusitania.

Church made another attempt, which was supported by Controller Maguire, to throw off on the shoulders of next year's taxpayers the burden of paying for the city's war expenditures. His resolution was cleverly worded: "To reduce the tax rate to 26.5 mills by issuing short term treasury notes." As before, the "pay-as-you-go" members of council "killed" his deferred payment policy.

The tax rate is not by any means definitely determined. There are still a number of items in dispute. The school board and the board of health will without doubt demand the re-instatement of the $200,000 more or less struck from their estimates. Controller McBride intends to move that no salary increases be granted to employees receiving over $1050 a year. These and a number of other questions will in all probability be dealt with by council at a special meeting on Thursday next.

The Municipal Intelligence Bureau, Hubert Groves, director, has issued a very valuable handbook on everything that pertains to Toronto: its municipal government, its industries, financial institutions, charities, war work, etc. The book has been issued with the complete co-operation of the city departments, and is a book of reference that should be in every library.

The city council on Monday held the shortest session of the year. They passed the bylaw increasing the water rates 2 per cent., refused the military authorities permission to use Don jail as a detention barracks and approved of the scheme for municipal hog raising.

PIANOFORTE RECITAL.

An interesting pianoforte recital was given by the pupils of Gladys L. McMaster at her home on Sherbourne street on Monday evening. The audience was delighted with the skillful manner in which each of the pupils performed. Those assisting were Mrs. Dr. Speer, Mrs. W. Hayward, Mrs. Walker, Mr. Simeon Joyce, Master Charlie Hayward and Master George Adams on the violin. A pleasing part of the program was the playing of Les Preludes, Liszt, for two pianos, and Bellario Goria, by Miss McMaster, the second piano being played by Miss E. M. Robinson of the Apollo School of Music.

SOLDIERS ENTERTAINED.

The Olympic Vaudeville Company consisting of ten big acts was the big attraction at Exhibition Camp under the auspices of the Military Y.M.C.A. last Wednesday night. Each number received hearty applause assuring those on the program of a very cordial welcome. The different items were: Miss Agnes Adie, soprano; E. L. Beaupre, Italian street musician; Bob Clark, ventriloquist; C. S. Fenwick, black face song and dance; George Molesworth (Thurston's brother) magician; Art Apled, comic songs; McBurney the juggler; Jones & Jones, comedy and dancing; Leon Pole, Lightning crayon sketches and the Mauna Loa Hawaiian Troop. Burton Till was the accompanist. The patients in the Camp Hospital were not forgotten, another concert being held there with the Airtel Mandolin Orchestra. Miss Blanchford, cello; Boddington Bros., in comedy and solos and Mr. Caplan, mandolin solos taking part.

CANADIAN LYCEUM ASSOCIATION

The members of the Canadian Lyceum Association (known as the professional entertainers of the city) have engaged Massey Hall for Saturday evening, April 27. The entertainment this year will be on a bigger and more elaborate scale than ever, yet each artist will be afforded ample time to show full ability, as only a limited number of individual turns will be allowed. There will be two or three different quartets, violinists, many funny men, clever entertainers of both sexes, a magic act, a ventriloquist with his novel figures, sprightly dancing by costume artists, sopranos, contraltos, tenors, basses, as well as humorous duets, etc. E. R. Bowles, the well-known organist, will furnish an offering on the big Massey Hall organ from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, while the audience are gathering. This year, as an added attraction, the Arts and Letters Club chorus will assist. This organization is hard at work, and promises to make good in concerted numbers. A big piano act will be given, with ten or twelve of the city's leading pianists appearing at the same time. Another novel feature will be a Hawaiian guitar selection. Toronto has many clever entertainers, and the Canadian Lyceum Association will see that her reputation is sustained.

UNACCOMMODATING WELLS.

In the desert of western Australia there are wells which yield water only at night. Before the water begins to flow weird hissing and the sound of rushing air may be heard. The phenomenon is believed to be due to a change in the form of the rocky channel through which the water flows, and to the extreme change in temperature between day and night which occurs in this region. The hissing is due to the escape of air before the advance of the water.

SPLENDID LOVE STORY TEMPER'S GREAT DRAMA

"Lest We Forget" is Beautiful, The Depicting Strony Scenes of German Frightfulness.

Marvelous in its construction, and presenting one of the most thrilling accounts of the inside workings of the German spy system, is "Lest We Forget"—the great motion picture drama which is to be shown at the Regent Theatre for the entire week commencing April 8. A great deal has been written about the inner circles of Germany, no picture has attempted to deal with that part of the German army which devotes itself to the gathering of information in other countries as this picture does. All this and much more is seen, while an exceptional love story is being unfolded. The star of the picture is none other than Rita Jolivet, who is a survivor of the Lusitania. It is from the account which she has brought to America that the details of the sinking of the vessel have been presented on the screen. It is said that the reproduction of the sinking is portrayed most vividly, and is as exact as it is humanly possible to make it.

SPEAKING OF FLATS.

We saw a lady meet another lady in the hall of a big, new apartment house the other day. The second lady was accompanied by her daughter, a sweet child of five. And the first lady said: "Oh, Mrs. Dash, is this your little girl? What a lovely child! But she is several years younger than I supposed—I thought she must be at least seven or eight. Why? Why, because I have heard her practicing on the piano, and she does so wonderfully well for a child of her age!" And she smiled brightly, and passed on. But the second lady frowned and said: "The cat! She knows perfectly well that my little girl doesn't touch the piano, and that I am the only one in the apartment who plays!"

On Parliament Hill

Parliament after sitting eight days adjourned on Wednesday of this week until Tuesday, April 2. This is the annual Easter recess and it gives the government time to complete its program for the session. Soon after the recess we should know whether Sir Thomas White is to deliver the budget speech or whether we are to have a new minister of finance. We should also have some announcement from the government upon the railway question, the banking question and the ever-growing demand for some policy respecting the industrial conscription of enemy aliens domiciled in the Dominion.

Quite apart from the undercurrent of political activity, there were some interesting phases of the daylight-saving debate. Generally speaking, the people have always understood that people in the country have to get up in the morning and that people in the city prefer to lie abed. The farmer is accustomed to song and story as yet, dressed and ready for work, waiting impatiently for the sun to rise.

There may be something in this, although the result may be far different from that which many anticipate. If there be, in the future, a realignment of the house on the tariff issue we are likely to see an alliance between Ontario and Quebec as an alliance between Quebec and the west. The spat between Dr. Clark of Red Deer and Mr. Cockshutt of Brandon Tuesday night, at which they spoke for the western Liberals, and Mr. Cockshutt did not profess to speak for the government. The west may insist upon some tariff concessions, but they will get secured thru quiet pressure from all the western members of their representatives in the cabinet.

It was, on the whole, a good debate. Indeed, it was the kind of debate we seldom have in parliament. The so-called "debates" of the old days were little more or less than a recitation of speeches learned by heart or read from manuscript. Each member delivered his speech without the slightest reference to what he had said by the preceding speaker on the other side of the question. Every- one knew in advance that the speaker would vote one way or the other. There was no effort of changing or convincing; no hope of changing the members' votes, but on Tuesday the members spoke from the heart out. No less than thirty of them said something to say, and the majority of them got up with a point to make and usually made it with a good deal of force.

Whenever there has been a change in the hours of labor for the artisans in the city or the workers on the farm, the same old question always came up. It arose when farm laborers were working from sunrise to sundown, and it came up again when the hours on the farm and in industries were changed from twelve to eleven, and again when the hours were changed to ten. Every effort to shorten the hours of labor, whether by shortening production, in this connection he said:

Mr. McCrae, of Sherbrooke, Que., is a manufacturer but in his way seemed to be a reactionary. Then the speaker, Frontenac, did not want his operatives to go home early and work in their gardens at night because if they did so they might be tired next morning and do less work for their employer.

Mr. Jacobs, a new member from Montreal, from whom the Laurier-Liberals are expecting great things, denied that Germany had been the first nation to accomplish daylight saving. He recalled that his own ancestor Joshua had effected daylight saving 3000 years ago when as a war measure he commanded the sun to stand still. Mr. Jacobs supported the bill in what was intended to be a jocular speech, but he lacks the delicate touch for that kind of persuasion. Indeed, he said that the nerves of some of the members when he said:

Men's clothes will be shorn of many of their frills this year, owing to the war needs for wool, it has been decided by the National Association of Clothing Designers at its 16th semi-annual convention in this city. The designers voted to eliminate "patch" suits, that is, suits with patches in order that thousands of yards of cloth might be taken from the civilian garb to be placed on the backs of soldiers.

English tendency evidenced by certain sections of the government in the daylight saving bill. He represented the growing feeling of the rural population in the backyards of citizens. Mr. Keefe of Port Arthur and Mr. Manion of Port William supported the bill and incidentally boomed the cities at the head of the parade. Mr. W. W. Mackenzie of Toronto, who is a member of the government, and pointed out that the situation was entirely different from what it was when the daylight-saving bill was presented at the last session of parliament. A year ago we were asked to set up a separate time from that kept by the rest of the continent; the year we were merely asked to join with our neighbors to the south in a continental experiment. If it worked serious justice to the farmer we need not go on.

On Monday there was a debate upon the action of the government in controlling the money market by prohibiting the issue of provincial and corporate bonds not approved by the minister of finance. Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux claimed such action as an economic measure, but the debate so involved the argument of Judge Jolivet, minister of justice, that the ministers fell asleep.

On Wednesday Sir Wilfrid attacked the food controller, always rather a popular figure. If the controller does nothing he is inefficient, and if he does too much he is tyrannical. The debate was bound to be hurt. The debate gave an opportunity to Hon. T. A. Crerar, the new minister of agriculture. Sir Wilfrid the start, but a little nervous at the beginning rather than a maiden speech. He was a man who can do anything, a business man who can do anything, a politician who can do anything, a man who has had a long experience, and who has launched his career in the most exceptional and unique circumstances.

Enough has been disclosed to show that Sir Wilfrid is not the Fabius Maximus he is sometimes held to be. He is not a man who is content to sit back and let things happen to him. He is a man who is full of energy and who is full of ideas. He is a man who is full of life and who is full of hope. He is a man who is full of courage and who is full of determination.

DOROTHY DALTON WILL STAR IN "LOVE ME"
Breezy and unconventional photoplay for Strand's Second Program.

A very breezy and unconventional photoplay is the splendid Lasky production, "Love Me," which will be presented at the Strand Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next. It is a charming story of a young girl who falls in love with a man who is a stranger to her. The story is full of interest and is full of life. It is a story that will appeal to all who love a good story.

FLAT TIRE SIGNS.
A soft or flat tire on a front wheel always makes itself noticeable to the driver because it becomes difficult to hold the car in a straight course, if you are on a level road and the car shows a marked tendency to turn to the right, you will probably find that the right front tire is soft. The pounding and bumping of a flat tire will attract the driver's attention to a flat tire on a rear wheel.

SHY OF FRILLS.
Men's clothes will be shorn of many of their frills this year, owing to the war needs for wool, it has been decided by the National Association of Clothing Designers at its 16th semi-annual convention in this city. The designers voted to eliminate "patch" suits, that is, suits with patches in order that thousands of yards of cloth might be taken from the civilian garb to be placed on the backs of soldiers.

VIENNA CONSUMPTION SCOURGE
The mortality statistics for Vienna afford terribly contradictory evidence of the increasing effect of the food shortage. Deaths from tuberculosis in 1917 were 6288, and in 1917 6509 out of a total mortality of 25,000; that is, one death in three was due to tuberculosis.

The Week's Financial Review

There has been little movement in either the New York or Canadian markets during the week, a circumstance somewhat peculiar in view of the significant progress on the western front.

It has been evident for some months that the "high peak load" of munition contracts has been passed, but nevertheless the annual output of the Canadian Westinghouse companies and other munition makers is already beginning to adapt themselves to the coming of peace.

Increasing attention is being given to the question of shipbuilding in Canada, and it is being recognized that activity along this line will help to absorb the surplus capacity of the shipbuilding industry.

New York, March 30.—War news completely obscured other events on the stock exchange. Every move in the territory struggle on the western front was watched with absorbing interest.

The remarkable showing of the United States Steel Corporation for 1917, the intention of the government to render necessary aid to railroads in financial straits, as indicated by the loan to the New Haven road, and the new schedule for steel and iron were among the distinctly favorable factors of the week.

Strength and activity in Newray caused this issue to overshadow others on the Standard Exchange on Saturday.

SLACKERS IN HOSPITALS.

Hospital Assistant Threatening to Cook Patient Alive Reduces Sick Call.

Stories of how to outwit impostors who report sick in order to loaf in hospitals are among the oldest traditions of the medical profession of all armies, says a writer in a medical journal. A fourteenth century collection of anecdotes shows that the milliner was known in those days, and Cardinal de Bari, who had a hospital at Verceil, found its resources were being exhausted by men of this type. He sent one of his attendants to investigate. This man, furnished by name, was something of a physician, dressed himself in the robes of a physician and assembled all the patients for an examination of their wounds. Then he gravely said: "There is clearly but one remedy needed for the cure of ulcers of this character, and that is an ointment made of human excreta. This very day I intend, in consequence, to draw by lot one from among you, who will be plunged into the boiling water and cooked for the salvation of all." Seized by fear, all the patients made haste to report themselves fully recovered from their ulcers, and consequently there was room in the hospital for those who really needed care.

Physicians today, by the use of similar means, have discovered many "hospital slacker."

MUSIC

THE Toronto Conservatory of Music was crowded to the doors last Monday evening, the occasion being a recital by pupils of H. Ethel Shepherd, the popular singing teacher. Among those taking part were Betty Mariatt, Beatrice Hurry, Coste Woods, Gladys Westaway, Mrs. Edward Byrne, Esther Cassels, Mrs. Denison Dana, Mrs. Arthur Semple, Marion Gunn, Bessie Hutchinson and the Misses Montgomery, Thurston and Grayson. Outstanding among the numbers were: "The Black Bird," by Cyril Scott; "Chere Nuit," Bachelier; "The Cuckoo," Lehman, and "Depuis le Jour," Charpentier, sung by Mrs. Dana. Her voice is beautiful in quality, pure and clear, and sings with authority and attractive style. Mrs. Semple, also a high soprano, sang "Sweet Bird," Handel, and "Je suis Titania," Thomas, with fluency and delicacy, taking her high notes with surprising ease and effectiveness. Mrs. Byrne was most successful and pleasing in "U' Pleurs en Reves," Lieu, and "The Cry of Rain," Saller. Marion Gunn in two Mallinson songs revealed a voice of fine quality. Bessie Hutchinson in Verdi's "Ah, for a La!" greatly pleased her listeners, everyone appearing being but another tribute to the efficiency of Miss Shepherd in her chosen work, the unstinted applause after each number proving that the good quality of the singing had not been lost upon the audience.

TWO GREAT ARTISTS AT MASSEY HALL

Alma Gluck and Efreim Zimbalist to Appear Here Next Week.

Much has been written and said about the two great artists who are to appear in joint recital at Massey Hall Tuesday, April 9, but (that comes down to the fact that Alma Gluck is counted among the greatest of all lyric sopranos and Efreim Zimbalist one of the greatest living masters of the violin. Unknown nine years ago, Alma Gluck secured a hearing before the Metropolitan Opera directors and immediately won a place in the famous company of singers. Like a meteor she lighted up the musical heavens and almost overnight her fame spread across the country. The broad concert field opened untold possibilities for an artist of her versatility, and soon she forsook the opera stage for the recital platform, around which delighted audiences flock season after season, so with Zimbalist. He comes to Toronto with a remarkable career to his credit. At sixteen he won the first prize at the Royal Conservatory in Petrograd, and he immediately stepped forth lauded and lionized in every large city in Europe. Not in vain has such a genius been presented to the musical public. He has toured the country from coast to coast six times; was featured in 54 orchestras last season, and this year is appearing in nearly 100 cities.

ACADEMY QUARTET TO CLOSE SERIES

Rarely Heard Works Make Up Final Program This Season.

The fourth and last of the Academy String Quartet series of chamber concerts for this season will be given on Tuesday, April 2, in the Foresters' Hall. The instrumental compositions, which will be performed with Richard Tattersall, pianist, assisting, are Mozart's Trio for piano, violin and viola, and Beethoven's Piano Quartet No. 4. These beautiful works, seldom heard nowadays, are of abiding interest to musicians and music-lovers. The vocalist will be Lillian G. Wilson, the brilliant Toronto soprano, who in her recent appearances has consistently added to her artistic reputation. She will sing Queen of the Night, from the Magic Flute, Mozart; Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark, Bishop; and songs by Beethoven and Schubert.

THE FIGHTING HOPE.

Deep in the tide where fish folk glide, A striped water way, To await the close of day. Sharp was her sight thru sea foam which she grabbed the snare And felt the hook—too late. That dashed upon the shore; She was searching for the food That the flood tide always bore. With barb unseen, the fine point keen, A hook dangled at her side, Cleverly covered by a worm, And naturally turned by the tide. In eager thrill, with wide spread gill, She pushed the luring bait; With a rush she grabbed the snare And felt the hook—too late. Her frenzied leap drove the steel deep, With the sting of pain; Wildly she evaded the depths To free herself—in vain. From watery bed where she was bred She was pulled out on the shore, And the hook from her bleeding mouth The angler deftly tore.

THE KING'S TOBACCO.

The King has cut down his tobacco bill considerably in the past six months. His majesty's present consumption of tobacco is about three cigars a day, a couple of pipes in the evening, and a cigar after lunch. In pre-war days the King generally had sufficient cigars in his stock to last him for nearly a fortnight, but nowadays he buys cigars by the fifty.

NOT IN THE WHIRL.

What's the matter, old chap? I fear I am only on the edge of society. In that case why don't you join one of these community centres?

ART RAIDS IN ITALY.

The Rhenish Westphalian Gazette prints a Berlin telegram professing to deplore the alleged destruction by 'Italians of Italian works of art during the retreat. It significantly adds: "As many art treasures as was humanly possible have been stored and placed in safety by art experts accompanying the German army."

QUARRINGTON SOCIETY PLANS FOR NEXT SEASON

Splendid Success of This Year's Performance Guarantees Still More Ambitious Program in 1918.

So enthusiastic was the reception of the program given by the Quarrington Operatic Society this season, and so insistent was the demand for seats for their performance that the entire seating capacity of Massey Hall was sold out early for the first two performances, and an extra first had to be given to a crowded house. The director, Mr. Jas. Quarrington, is already arranging a more ambitious program for next season. One of the outstanding features of the performance of the operas given by the Quarrington is the entire absence of amateurism of its artists, who are all trained by Mr. Quarrington, vocally and historically. Arrangements are now being made to take this company of amateur artists, in a short tour, the entire chorus of 200 voices and large ballet and Symphony Orchestra accompanying them. Mr. Quarrington is now selecting his company for his next season's productions, and some very interesting performances are being looked forward to.

ISLE IMMORTALIZED BY POET. Loch Katrine and Ellen's Isle Most Visited Spots in Highlands Today.

If you are a lover of Scott you will include in your Scottish tour Loch Katrine and Ellen's Isle. The lovely silver lake and tiny island, immortalized in Scott's poem and novels, are the most visited spots in the Highlands. With your tartan covered copy of the poem clasped to your heart you stand at the foot of old Ben Venue waiting for the Lady of the Lake to appear and carry you over the lake to her fairy island. Instead, a sturdy little yacht puts up to the bank and a gloomy, bewhiskered son of the Highlands offers, for a consideration, to take you to Ellen's Isle or to the opposite bank of the lake. Disconcerted you try to connect this prosaic substitute for the maiden-driven barque of romance with the green-clad knight of Snowdon and fall miserably. You are convinced that the gallant, adventurous king, accosted by such a craft, would have remained on shore and the poem would never have been written.

But, however great a disappointment the yacht may be, the lake and island are all you had expected. Loch Katrine, hardly more than a mile wide, winds its narrow way through eight miles of Highland scenery. On one bank the grassy orange and broken contours of Ben Venue rise above the still deep waters of the lake. In the hoary side of old Ben is the golden cave, the scene of nightly series reveries. There is Giegliey, haunted by the ghosts of the unfortunate Macgregors; Ben A'an and the Trossachs with their thousands of deer. Then at the head of a narrow inlet is Ellen's Isle, where Scott's heroine lived with her father, protected by the outlaw chief, Roderick Dhu.

During the last century the clear, fresh waters of the lake have been piped to the City of Glasgow. Loch Katrine is a drinking cup for one of Scotland's largest and most modern cities. The water level has been raised and the silver stream of the poem and part of the isle have been submerged under the waters of the lake.

THIS WEEK'S PLAY BILLS

ALEXANDRA

MARY'S ANKLE, which will be shown in this city for the first time at the Royal Alexandra Theatre for the entire week commencing Monday evening, promises something new in the way of farce comedy. It is the work of May Tully, known to fame as a writer of vaudeville sketches, and has been staged by A. H. Woods. The plot is said to deal with the trials of three brilliant, but penniless, young men, who concoct an adroit and daring scheme to help them out of their financial difficulties. The resulting complications are said to provoke laughter, which shows no abatement throughout the entire play, and the ultimate unraveling of the knot reveals the master stage craft of Miss Tully.

PRINCESS

THE NEW PRINCESS this week Eugene Walter and H. Crownin Wilton's latest play, "Nancy Lee," will be presented. It shows an important side of the family question. Success is stamped all over the new play, which will be seen for the first time on any stage at the Princess Theatre, Monday evening, April 1. Toronto was selected by the estate of Henry B. Harris for the premiere of this important dramatic event, owing to its cosmopolitan and broad-minded public. The play is daring and uncompromising—it handles the problem of the eternal feminine from a fresh standpoint, and with honest frankness. The staging of "Nancy Lee" is complete, and worthy the great effort of the writers. The gowns promise to create a style sensation.

GRAND

THE many lovers of minstrelsy will be delighted to learn that Gus Hill's Big Minstrels will be the attraction at the Grand all this week, opening with a matinee Easter Monday. Seventy years ago Dan Emmett, author of "Dixie," sat cross-legged with three companions in a little hall on the Bowery in New York, and gave to the world the first melody and humor of the first part of minstrelsy. Since the introduction of the black-faced semi-circle four decades ago, it has appealed season after season to varied hosts of amusement lovers. In the first part of Gus Hill's Big Minstrels the comedy and melody of the old semi-circle still remain.

SHEA'S

LIZABETH BRICE, the favorite singing comedienne, who established herself as one of the most popular vaudeville stars to ever appear here, when she was a member of the team of Brice and King, will headline the bill at Shea's Theatre this week in exclusive songs. Charles King, Miss Brice's former partner, is now a lieutenant in the United States navy, which accounts for Miss Brice doing a "single." Miss Brice has been supplied with a repertoire of new songs, and her gowns, always an attractive feature of her act, are lovelier than ever. Nina Payne is one of the first exponents of descriptive dancing in America, and was responsible for the first Apache dance ever done in America. Each dance tells a story in a special setting. Ed. Flanagan and Neely Edwards have fashioned for their own use an amusing sketch called, "Off and On." Bert Fitzgibbon is a farcical and eccentric singing comedian. The Farrell-Taylor Trio, in "The African Duke," make fun and music in an acceptable way. Eddie Borden has a sketch called "The Law-Breakers," and his traveling companion is James Dwyer. Galletti's Simians are fine examples of this sort of entertainment. Ollie Young and April, dressed as Pierrot and Pierette, blow soap bubbles, big and little, and variegated. The British Gazette, with new features, is another attraction of the bill.

LOEW'S

HIGHLY dramatic, vividly emotional and intensely interesting, "The Tenth Case," the feature photodrama of this week's offerings at Loew's Yonge Street Theatre and Winter Garden, moves speedily to a smashing climax. In this elaborate production, June Elvidge, one of the most beautiful stars of the screen, appears in the role of Claudia Paynton, the defendant of divorce proceedings. "No Questions Asked," whirly, girly musical comedy in one act, will top the vaudeville attractions. Another outstanding feature will be the Misses Parker, in classy vocal specialties, assisted by Chas. D. Wagner, at the piano. Bennington and Scott, introducing vaudeville's greatest one-legged dancer; Lony Nase, a dashing comedienne, offering an artistic repertoire of new song successes; Walter Shannon and Marion Annis, in "A Shine Flirtation," an amusing playlet; Conroy and O'Donnell, the original "Parcel Postmen"; Betts and Chidlow, in a "Pair of Aces," and Loew's Comedy and Universal weekly pictures complete a sterling vaudeville program.

HIPPODROME

THE Hippodrome management presents a varied bill of particularly bright features for its patrons for Easter week, headed by the eminent character actor, Munro Salisbury, who, co-starred with Dainty Ruth Clifford, will be featured in the thrilling five-part western feature, "Hawks Down," a picture that will hold the interest and attention of an audience from opening to close. Violet MacMillan, a well-known "movie" favorite, has returned to vaudeville, and has prepared a high-class variety offering, which she calls, "The Cinderella Girl." "The Garden Belles in the Garden of Love" is the title of a miniature musical company that has a cast of eleven people. Smart boys and pretty talented girls help make this act a success with their songs and dances. Conrad and Goldwyn are two newcomers to the Hippodrome, who will present an assortment of nonsense and comedy. William Cahill, supported by a clever company, will present his newest comedy sketch, entitled, "In New York." Irene Irving is known as "The Comedienne of Personality." Equipped with a good voice, nimble feet and an assortment of stunning gowns, she will prove one of the best attractions of the bill. The Darling Deverells have an aerial act, and, with the Pathe News, completes a bright, well-balanced bill.

GAYETY

MONDAY afternoon at the Gayety "The New Bon Ton Girls" begin a week's engagement, coming to town with the hall mark of the Theatrical Operating Company to guarantee a snappy, handsome production. This is one of the newer shows of the wheel, and the advance reports for this season would indicate that the producers have something big and novel in its staging and costuming, as well as providing an excellent cast. At the head of the band of comedians is Lester Allen, the tramp comedian, who will be ably assisted by Joe Opp. Irene Chesleigh and Babe Clark head the women of the cast. There is a chorus of 30 youthful and talented girls for the dozen big song numbers and stage pictures. In the two-act musical burlesque, "At the Movies," there are seven scenes for the display of unique and novel scenic effects and handsome costumes.

STAR

NEW burlesque in two parts will be presented at the Star Theatre this week, starting with Monday's matinee, entitled, "Forty Thieves," one of Jean Bedini's popular organizations. While there is no claim made for a connected story, it is said that the performance is full of intensely amusing scenes and situations, enlivened by many vaudeville specialties and elaborately presented musical features. Some of the different novelties introduced are, "Our National Holidays and the Four Seasons," "The Models of the 20th Century," and a rip-roaring comedy on "Daniel in the Lion's Den," and last, but not least, the "Famous Pickpocket Chorus." The production is new throughout, and the costumes and scenery are upon a scale of more than usual beauty.

Elizabeth Brice, formerly of Brice and King, who will headline the bill at Shea's this week in a repertoire of exclusive songs. Her former partner, Charles King, is now a lieutenant in the United States navy.

STORM TO BLAME FOR STAGE CAREER

Charlotte Walker Would Never Otherwise Have Gone on the Stage.

HURRICANE DID IT

Star in "Nancy Lee" Had Novel Introduction to Fame.

The storm that razed the City of Galveston blew out into the world a young woman of marked beauty to earn her own living on the professional stage as an actress. Those who will pause to give heed to a parallel will encounter a striking similarity in the history of Galveston since the storm and of Charlotte Walker, one of its native daughters.

When the wind and waves played upon that island city the spirit of the new south gave heart and power to its people to hold the Gulf waters at bay for all time by one of the most stupendous undertakings known to engineers. The Galveston sea wall was built, and is the material result of that new southern spirit.

Among those who suffered and lost their homes and means of sustenance in the storm was a young southern girl, a descendant of that old cavalier element that had made the south the home of romance.

The role of "Nancy Lee" in the new play of the same name, by Eugene Walter and H. Crownin Wilton, possesses a powerful appeal to Charlotte Walker, apart from its dramatic possibilities, for with all of her new outlook on life, she is, after all, an old-fashioned woman, who looks upon love as the greatest thing in the world, and the home as the centre of the universe.

"Nancy Lee" will have its first performance on any stage at the Princess Theatre, Monday evening, April 1.

"MARY'S ANKLE" IS NEW FARCE COMEDY

Easter Week Will See Presentation of Clever Metropolitan Success.

AT THE ALEXANDRA

Strong Cast of Well-Known Actors in May Tully Play.

The management of the Royal Alexandra Theatre announces that its attraction for the week beginning April 1 will be "Mary's Ankle," a farce comedy in three acts, by May Tully. A. H. Woods produced it early this present season at the Bijou Theatre, New York, where it had a profitable engagement for four months.

"Mary's Ankle" has to do with three young collegians—a doctor, a lawyer and a mental scientist. They have no money, but the mental scientist is well endowed with ideas for getting some. He engineers the pawing of the landlady's parrot. Then when the ill-gotten gains of this venture are taken away from all three by the blarneyments of a charming young charity canvasser, the financier, as he calls himself, suggests that the doctor send out announcements to rich relatives in the west of his forthcoming marriage to an imaginary Mary Jane Smith of Elizabeth. Undoubtedly many presents, all of them payable, will result. The scheme works out well enough, only the presents all sent are clearly intended for the supposed bride.

At this point, rest! Mary Jane Smith arrives on the scene and she happens to be the young charity worker with whom the doctor has fallen in love. It takes the inventiveness of all three young pals to explain away the lingerie which has come to the doctor as wedding presents, and the arrival of the doctor's rich uncle to congratulate him and his bride adds some very amusing and intricate complications to his dilemma.

The original cast, which had the pleasure of presenting this farce for four months in New York, which will be seen in the different parts, which will include Walter Jones, Alma Belwin, Zaida Sears, James Spottswood, Leo Donnelly, Mae Melville, Adelaide Prince, Edward Martyn, J. F. Morrissey and others. The usual matinee will be on Wednesday and Saturday.

IRENE CHESLEIGH FOOLED BELASCO

Was, at One Time an Aspiring Author and Playwright.

NOW IN BURLESQUE

Her Manuscript Was Never Read, But Always Returned.

Miss Irene Chesleigh, who this season, is touring with the new Tom's Company, which will be seen this week at the Gayety, was at one time an aspiring author and playwright, but like many others, her genius never found a place before the footlights of a theatre.

When quite young some of her compositions received marked attention from critics, who declared that they contained real merit. This encouraged her to write a drama which was submitted to several prominent managers, but it was regularly returned to her with some monotonous reply of fault contained in the plot or detail. Determined to know whether her plays were really read by those to whom she sent them she hit upon the following plan:

She presented David Belasco, the famous producer, with a manuscript tied with red tape and begged him to give an impartial opinion as to its merits, which Mr. Belasco promised to do.

After waiting several weeks Miss Chesleigh called upon the producer and asked: "Is my play adapted for the stage?"

"Well," said Belasco, "your play is clever, I might say decidedly clever, but I fear it lacks technique. The plot, the situations would demand considerable revision to properly fit it for production."

Miss Chesleigh interrupted him by asking, "Will you be kind enough to point out one particular fault?"

The producer became confused, he toyed with the manuscript, still criticizing it when Miss Chesleigh seized it from him, untied the tape, unrolled the paper and with a laugh she displayed many pages of blank before the astonished eyes of David Belasco who had never really untied the package. And thus it is that Miss Chesleigh's name has never appeared in connection with a dramatic success as its authoress.

Harry Carey's Pals

Harry Carey, the western star, has surrounded himself with a bunch of his old cowboy "pals" for the minor and extra parts in his next picture, which is being made as "The Hell Hound of the Cactus." During the lunch hour every working day they get together and talk over old times, each racking his brain for some dare-devil stunt of his past that can be worked into the drama to give the fans added thrills.

JEAN BEDINI PRESENTS
"THE FORTY THIEVES"

New Burlesque Offering With Specialties at the Star.

With the usually galaxy of pretty girls, tuneful music and lively numbers, the Forty Thieves will open this week at the Star Theatre. Without a doubt Forty Thieves will present one of the most brilliant openings of the season and the show wins woe of presenting organization embraces many popular and talented players, and it includes specialties that have been added as extra features.

A new burlesque has been designed to furnish the comedy elements of the performance, and the specialties furnish the surprise. Elaborate and appropriate scenery has been provided for this production. One of the specialties announced and is described as being fully up to the minute in "Our National Holidays and the Four Seasons," which are interpreted by the various members of the company. The burlesque cast includes Charlie Mac, English comedian; Roy Sears, juvenile; Nat Brown, characters; Jerry Mandy, the wop pirate; Madden, the jazz juggler; Billy Cumby, the black spasm; Anna Isabella, prima donna; Mae Kearns, ingenue, and Kitty Madison the dainty subreter.

EUGENE WALTER

Eugene Walter, whose remarkable constructive skill and genius for photographic realism when presenting phases of life with which he is familiar, is well known, has, with H. Crownin Wilson, completed another dramatic gem, "Nancy Lee," which will be presented for the first time on any stage at the Princess Theatre, Monday evening, April 1. "Nancy Lee" promises to be the best of Eugene Walter's many plays, which include such successes as "Paid in Full," "The Hottest Way," "The Wolf," "Just a Woman," "The Knife," "Fine Feathers," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Just a Wife," "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" and others.

MINSTRELS ARE COMING TO GRAND

Gus Hill's Big Organization Will Be Here All This Week.

MAT. EASTER MONDAY

Company Includes Prominent Stars in Minstrelsy, and Clever Specialists.

Creations in the true acceptance of that term are rare. Gus Hill's big minstrel show is a creation, a creation of the rare class, with a touch of genius behind it, and a subtle taste, and a marked effort for effect, which is attained—a series of ensembles which stand out in relief, distinct and prominent like a medallion, yet so artistically constructed, so deftly dovetailed with such good judgment regarding unity, that the whole is carried in the mind as one grand masterpiece created by one master-stroke. There is an individuality lingering between the lines. It is not going too far to say that this season's production is the greatest and most elaborate ever offered in the history of minstrelsy. Mr. Hill has surpassed all previous efforts in the annals of burnt cork. There is a transition period identified with every line of art, metamorphosis, that point at which the lines of development assume a tangible form. There is a tendency in Mr. Hill's Minstrels to pull out of the old channel of minstrelsy. Originality is the keynote. Simply stated, this season's show is very operatic, and, having this element, it appeals to a broader sentiment and affords a wider field of entertainment. Taste is mirrored in the production. It rings true, and is significant of better things to come. Gus Hill's Big Minstrels will be seen at the Grand all this week, opening with a matinee Easter Monday. The entertainment opens with an operatic first part and closes with a side-splitting afterpiece. Attention through is given to detail and effect, with novel "business" to enliven the whole. There are new jokes, many new ones. But the comic element is not confined to the broad-faced, grinning joke-maker, the "straight" minstrel or "end man." The first part is a creation, done in burnt orange and lavender with brilliant electric rays in variegated colors with the general effect one of splendor. The mind is left to search and absorb the background before the introduction of the ensemble. Gradually, but in unity, the members of the company troop forward. The entire organization, in burnt orange and lavender, full evening dress, forms a brilliant picture. With George Wilson, Eddie Mazier and a host of comedians there are a number of vocal vocalists, including Jack McShane, "Sunshine" Jane, John Burke, "Somewhere in Ireland" James Corrigan, "Down Where the Watermelon Grows." There are several other well rendered hits and the comedians sing all brand new songs. The company numbers sixty, making it the largest minstrel organization in existence today. Besides the Easter Monday matinee the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

CARMEN OF THE KLONDYKE

"Carmen of the Klondyke," a sensational, true-to-life love story in the goldfields of Alaska, will be the feature attraction at the Allen Theatre week of April 8. This extraordinary picture from the pen of Monte M. Katterjohn carries you back to the days of the big gold rush back in the eighties when the lovers of adventure stampeded for the diggings up in the ice-cold regions of northern Canada. All previous efforts at realism have been outdone. The mining camps with their dance halls, saloons and gambling houses frame a most picturesque background for this production.

CHARLES RAY, SMOKER SCORNS THE CIGARET

In All His Nicotine Career Young Star Has Never Had a "Fag."

Charles Ray is an inveterate smoker, and yet he confesses that in all his nicotine career he has never puffed on a cigaret. Ray's favorite cheroot is a long, black affair, shaped pretty much like a modern submarine.

If the scenario of a Ray picture makes mention of a cigaret it is instantly changed to read "cigar," and the property man of the face organization has a standing order to procure for the popular young star only cigars of known worth.

Recently Thomas H. Ince questioned his luminary as to the why and wherefore of his antipathy for cigars, and Ray naively answered:

"I have always held to the belief that sometime, if I continue to smoke cigars in my photoplays, I may attract the attention of a cigar manufacturer who may become interested in my abilities as a smoker to the extent of naming one of his products after me. You know, all the important actors of the stage have had cigars named in their honor, and I believe that it is only a question of smoking long enough before I shall have the pleasure of seeing a 'Charles Ray Cigar' on the tobacco stands."

"And what," continued Ince, "is your favorite brand of stogie?" "The Lillian Russell," answered Ray, and there was just the slightest trace of humor in his voice as he pulled out a bunch of "smokies" and offered one to his chief.

"THE TENTH CASE" STARS JUNE ELVIDGE

Feature Photodrama at Loew's This Week, With Popular Screen Actress.

STARTLING SITUATIONS

Story is Timely, Gripping and Dramatic—Excellent Filmed.

Few film players have made such swift progress to the stellar regions of the screen world as June Elvidge, who is starred in "The Tenth Case," the feature photodrama this week at Loew's Yonge Street Theatre and Winter Garden. The story is unusually timely, grippingly dramatic and interesting.

Claudia Paynton (June Elvidge)

screamed frantically as she saw the glare of hate and distrust creep into her husband's eyes.

"I didn't know he was there—I swear it!" she screamed as she sought to catch her husband and hold him to her while she explained or tried to explain the distressing situation which had suddenly thrown a storm cloud over her life.

It was indeed a startling situation. Jerome Paynton coming to his wife's room had sensed a man's presence behind the screen in one corner of the room. On overturning the screen he had found his own son, Harry—his son by a former marriage—hiding there. Then remembering the interest which Claudia had manifested in Harry, her husband put the worst possible construction on the situation. What came of this remarkable situation and how the situation itself came about is interestingly told.

In the principal role Miss Elvidge, who is a devoted wife, is made the victim of a most unfortunate series of events, which place her in a bad

"THE BEAST OF BERLIN" WHOLE OF NEXT WEEK

Loew's Will Offer As Special Feature Smashing Photodrama.

The Kaiser, "The Beast of Berlin," the season's sensational photodrama triumph and greatest war film ever presented, will be shown at Loew's Yonge Street Theatre and Winter Garden the entire week of April 8 in conjunction with the regular vaudeville bill. The picture, which created a sensation for several weeks at the Broadway Theatre, New York, is a screen story of the life of the Kaiser and of the present war which is based upon historical fact, the result of more than a year's research into the private life of the Kaiser. The picture chronicles the inner life, mannerisms and habits of the German Emperor with all his offensive arrogance.

Among those present at the initial screening of the picture in New York were Lord and Lady Aberdeen, Baroness Brata of Italy and representatives of all the leading patriotic and military organizations in the United States.

light in the eyes of her friends. Her big-heartedness gets her into the trouble which envelops her a year after her marriage.

When the divorce proceedings are brought before the court the evidence is all against Claudia. The judge who hears the case concludes that the evidence points to her guilt. In a desperate effort to prove her innocence Claudia evolves a wild plan of convincing the judge that he cannot rely on circumstantial evidence. The plan and the way it is put into effect make some of the biggest and strongest situations ever seen in a picture.

"It is absolutely a new situation—a situation never before presented in the movies," declared an enthusiastic spectator during the trial filming of the big scene in "The Tenth Case."

And the spectator was right. It is a new situation.

MRS. FISKE PRESENTS NEW STAGE PIECE

Abandons "Madame Sand," and is Appearing in Lavedan's "Service."

Boston (Special)—Mrs. Fiske has abandoned "Madame Sand," in which she was seen earlier in the season at the Criterion Theatre, and has begun an engagement at the Tremont Theatre in "Service," a drama by Henry Lavedan, the French playwright. The play was presented briefly on tour last fall by Harrison Grey Fiske and Madison Corey, and it is Mr. Fiske who is making the presentation at this time.

As "Service" is a two-act play, and consequently too short for a full evening's entertainment Mr. and Mrs. Fiske are offering a double bill, the second part of which is Lord Dunsany's playlet, "A Night in an Inn." Following a brief tour in "Service," Mrs. Fiske will shortly begin a spring engagement in the new play in New York. Additions to her company for the new representation include Lee Baker, Ian Robertson, Roger Lytton, and Robert Vivian.

THE STRAND MUSIC

Patrons of the Strand Theatre are a unit in their praise of the high character of the musical portion of the entertainment which is given at the Strand Theatre. The manager of the Strand, Mr. C. M. Robson, ever since he took office, has been untiring in his efforts to attain and maintain the highest possible standard as regards this side of the theatre's attractions. As time goes on the verdict of the public is more and more decided to the effect that he has found the man of all others to carry out his purpose in this regard, in Mr. Ernest G. Kingsley, the Strand's musical director. It is no exaggeration to say of the eight-piece orchestra which the Strand has got together, and which is occasionally augmented for the purpose of rendering special music as an accompaniment to special pictures, that, for its size, no better aggregation of musical talent can be found in the city.

THEATRICAL CAMOUFLAGE

promoters no doubt, thought she would run merrily along until 1913, but alas, she barely lived to see 1913. The ostensible producers were managers whose names were supposed to be a guarantee that the show was the best of its kind that brains and money could devise and buy.

Sometimes, as a novelty, they rehash the classics. They even take dear old "Camille" from the dusty shelf and serve it with improvements on Dumas by Mr. Sheldon. Dryden and Cliber took the same liberties with Shakespeare, but Dryden is Dryden and Mr. Sheldon is Mr. Sheldon. Besides, Miss Barrymore, charming though she is, is hardly of the calibre to make us forget Bernhardt, Use, or Nethersole.

What manager today has the fashionable and choice following that Daly enjoyed? Nowadays people go to the theatre in quite a different mood. They are lured there by sensational methods of advertising. They don't expect to see good acting or fine plays. Mr. Cort says he is tired of doing nice things. Exhibition of lingerie, intimate and sou-brette's legs, he contends, pay better than serious plays. Wait and see. Mr. Cort may have reason to reverse his opinion later.

William Winter told the bare, ugly truth when he said, "the theatre has passed from the hands that ought to control it, the hands either of actors who love and honor their art, or of men endowed with the temperament of the actor, and accustomed with his art and its needs, and almost entirely it has fallen into the clutches of sordid tradesmen who have degraded it into an amusement business."

Theatre-goers know they are being fooled, they are weary of being charged exorbitant prices for indifferent shows, and a good many of them show their resentment by staying away from the playhouse altogether.

The truth is, the public has less money to spend on theatre tickets than it had, and the Shuberts and other managers, quick to see the trend, are ready to co-operate in making theatre-going a less expensive operation than it has been.

Speaking of the Shuberts, a new the-look to a picture theatre to see a vampire film." "Of course," he agreed. "But a man—a poor workingman—does not take his wife and three or four children to the theatre—he can't afford to. But he can take them once or twice a week to see a picture. The clerks, shop-girls, factory people don't go much to the theatres, but they do go to the pictures. It is of them I am speaking. There are always good plays on the stage. If people go to bad ones, it is, as you Americans say, 'up to them'—it is their choice. But generally speaking, the poorer people have not always the power and intelligence to discriminate. They simply go to a picture show. They see what is there. If it's bad, they can't help it; but the producers and the managers of the picture houses can help it. Just now it is hard to get the right perspective and see what kind of picture is coming out ahead."

The Shuberts are charged with breaking a booking agreement. In other words, when peace was signed at the close of the last theatrical war the former enemies agreed not to oppose each other with their strongest attractions.

Thus, of course, means nothing in New York where there are so many theatres, but it means a great deal in other cities where there are only a few first-class houses. It explains why out-of-town theatre-goers have come to distrust the label "300 nights on Broadway, Original New York Cast." They have learned by experience that such announcements are usually camouflage. They have often been so disgusted by the poor quality of the attraction offered that they have preferred to patronise their local stock company.

DOROTHY DALTON FILM ALL WEEK AT RIALTO

Breezy and Unconventional Photoplay for Strand's Second Program.

A very breezy and unconventional photoplay is the splendid Laasy production, "Love Me," which will be presented at the Strand Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next. This photoplay is a thrilling society drama, of special interest to all ladies. It is a straightforward and exceedingly interesting narrative of the struggle of a girl to win the love and respect of her husband's family, and incidentally to keep her affection against great odds. As all motion picture patrons are aware, Dorothy Dalton is always winsome, but in this picture she is more enticing than ever. She is a past mistress of "charm" and "Love Me" is the most thrilling of all her pictures. The gowns worn in the course of this photoplay will cause gasps of pleasure from the feminine contingent of the audience.

The story is a straightforward one and the struggle of Maids, Madison to get on with her husband's family, and also to retain his love. In the beginning they have met in an unconventional way during the construction of a bridge in North Dakota, to which he had been assigned. What was his surprise, on arriving, to find the work under the direction of your lady, who, like himself, was a recent graduate of an engineering school. The friendship formed during the stressful times of their work together ripened into a very enduring love, and when the young man returned to his wealthy and exclusive family in one of the wealthiest and most exclusive cities of the east, he brought with him the young woman engineer as his bride. Her acceptance by her husband's people was anything but cordial. But in her sincere, straightforward fashion, Maids tried not to notice. In particular, her husband's elder brother seemed bent on convincing him that he had made a sad mistake in his choice of a wife. At a certain evening party he noticed Maids's eyes fixed with watchful interest on a well-known name and a member of their married sister, whose husband was away from home. Mistaking Maids for the brother, he followed her when she left the party and found her in the rooms of this man. Then the fact that she had come there merely to save their sister's honor is very forcibly brought home to her husband and his brother, and Maids comes to take her rightful place in her husband's family.

Where ruddy maid and withered crone In homesteads sought to hide, Now only wastes of broken stone And trampled gardens bide. Yet, tho' the vandals wreathed their will, In fragrant beauty grows Amid these barren ruins still A Gloire de Dijon rose. —Charlotte Becker.

HUCK AND TOM AT THE ALLEN

MARK TWAIN STORY

Superbly Filmed Version of American Humorist's Book.

The very spirit of youth and fun and American boyhood are to be found throughout the entire five reels of Jack Pickford's latest Paramount picture, "Huck and Tom," which will be shown at the Allen Theatre all this week.

This is the second of the Tom Sawyer mortal books, altho each in itself is a complete release. Director William D. Taylor, a fervent admirer of the great American humorist, found that there was too much material to be contained in a mere five-reel photoplay and has divided the subject matter into two productions.

Beginning with the determination of Tom and his inseparable friend Huck to ward off all possibility of war—the story finds the two boys in a graveyard at midnight—according to the advice of an old dorky as to the best manner of curing warts.

How they overhear some grave-robbers planning their gruesome work, and how they are unwilling witnesses of a murder, is all thrillingly depicted. The next day Tom is ill in bed and his Aunt Polly, cleverly portrayed by Edythe Chapman, is administering the painkiller, which Tom, in turn, passes on to an unsuspecting cat—with dire results. Later the boys are present at the trial of the supposed murderer, and by telling an accurate story of their adventures succeed in freeing an innocent man and convicting the criminal. The notoriety they derive from this incident is very sweet to Tom, who fancies himself much in love with the judge's daughter, Little Becky Thatcher.

Edith Ellis resigns to resume play writing. In order to fulfill contracts for the writing of two plays for the dramatic stage next season, Edith Ellis has resigned her position as head of the literary department of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

She will also very shortly undertake a campaign for a national producing theatre, a project which she has been working on for some time.

"The destructive effect the photoplay has had upon the theatre attendance will prove a blessing to the theatre in the end," she says. "Second-rate melodrama and childish farce 'shows' that depend upon the 'punch' and the 'twist' will disappear and no one will be so poor as to do them honor. Wholesome screen drama at modest admissions will permanently take their places. Real and sincere drama in all its forms will arrive by means of a national producing theatre.

"Such an institution will be of the greatest service to the commercial theatre in creating a standard of taste and feeling and eliminating the waste of much futile experimentation."

Miss Ellis leaves Goldwyn with many feelings of regret. Her experience in the moving picture industry has been varied and interesting, she declares.

HUCK AND TOM AT THE ALLEN

MARK TWAIN STORY

Superbly Filmed Version of American Humorist's Book.

The very spirit of youth and fun and American boyhood are to be found throughout the entire five reels of Jack Pickford's latest Paramount picture, "Huck and Tom," which will be shown at the Allen Theatre all this week.

This is the second of the Tom Sawyer mortal books, altho each in itself is a complete release. Director William D. Taylor, a fervent admirer of the great American humorist, found that there was too much material to be contained in a mere five-reel photoplay and has divided the subject matter into two productions.

Beginning with the determination of Tom and his inseparable friend Huck to ward off all possibility of war—the story finds the two boys in a graveyard at midnight—according to the advice of an old dorky as to the best manner of curing warts.

How they overhear some grave-robbers planning their gruesome work, and how they are unwilling witnesses of a murder, is all thrillingly depicted. The next day Tom is ill in bed and his Aunt Polly, cleverly portrayed by Edythe Chapman, is administering the painkiller, which Tom, in turn, passes on to an unsuspecting cat—with dire results. Later the boys are present at the trial of the supposed murderer, and by telling an accurate story of their adventures succeed in freeing an innocent man and convicting the criminal. The notoriety they derive from this incident is very sweet to Tom, who fancies himself much in love with the judge's daughter, Little Becky Thatcher.

Edith Ellis resigns to resume play writing. In order to fulfill contracts for the writing of two plays for the dramatic stage next season, Edith Ellis has resigned her position as head of the literary department of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

She will also very shortly undertake a campaign for a national producing theatre, a project which she has been working on for some time.

"The destructive effect the photoplay has had upon the theatre attendance will prove a blessing to the theatre in the end," she says. "Second-rate melodrama and childish farce 'shows' that depend upon the 'punch' and the 'twist' will disappear and no one will be so poor as to do them honor. Wholesome screen drama at modest admissions will permanently take their places. Real and sincere drama in all its forms will arrive by means of a national producing theatre.

"Mother" is Title of Feature With Elizabeth Risdon Starred.

SPECIAL MUSIC PLAYED

Regent Chorus Will Be Introduced—Alan Turner to Sing.

Never before in the history of motion picture theatres in Canada has such a program been arranged as that which W. G. Mitchell, manager of the Regent Theatre, has arranged for his patrons for Easter week. Those who have found the Regent a lovely place in the past will be even more enamored of it after a visit this week. There are three reasons. The wonderfully human story entitled "Mother" starring Elizabeth Risdon, will be the feature picture. Alan Turner, of Victor records fame, will be the assisting artist. Easter music of the very finest will be rendered, not only by the Regent Symphony Orchestra, but by the new Regent chorus, which will be introduced for the first time.

The story is one of the sweetest ever produced. It tells how the love and influence of a good mother won a wayward son from the wild and careless life he had chosen. How he was finally brought to realize that he had a duty to perform, a life to live, that he had a work to do which called for manliness and determination. It tells with what fortitude mother bore the injuries innocently caused, and it is a story which can only result in bringing a closer fellowship between mother and son, whoever that mother may be and whoever the son. The name "Mother" will mean more than it has ever meant after you have seen the picture bearing that title.

It is a new thing to find a chorus in a motion picture theatre in Canada. This innovation is bound to prove one of the most popular ever introduced. After weeks of special training, the Regent Chorus will make its debut this week, and the patrons of the Regent will welcome the singing as but another splendid feature. Special Easter selections will be given and the stage setting for this part of the program will be in keeping with the season. Under the direction of John Arthur the orchestra will render special selections, and then there will be numbers by the chorus, accompanied by the orchestra and pipe organ and assisted by Mr. Turner.

"No Questions Asked," an act new to vaudeville, will top this week's offerings at Loew's Yongs Street Theatre and Winter Garden. As film feature June Elvidge, the popular screen star, will be seen in "The Tenth Case," the action of which is quick and unusually snappy, there have been girls acts galore since this form of entertainment was first devised and many have been seen in Toronto, but none can compare with "No Questions Asked," which was specially selected to open Loew's new million dollar theatre in Montreal two weeks ago. Bobby Gordon and "Spike" Moriarity are the funmakers with the miniature production, having in their possession a wealth of good, wholesome humor. In addition to offering all that is new in the song market at the present time, the girls appear in a splendid gown revue, sure to prove attractive to the female section of the audience. There is also a wealth of beautiful scenery, stage and electric effects.

The supporting bill will be equally entertaining, with the Misses Parker, assisted by Charles D. Wagner at the piano, as the added attraction. Walter Shannon and Marie Annis, musical comedy favorites, will be seen in an original skit, entitled "A Shine Flirtation." Other acts will embrace Conroy and O'Donnell, "The Parade of the Men," in original patter and nonsense; Bets and Chidlow, English music hall favorites, introducing a sprinkling splatter of character and song; Lony Nase, in an artistic repertoire of new song successes, and Bennington and Scott, dancers, featuring Mr. Bennington's one-legged dancing, the only dancer of this kind in the world. Completing the show will be a new instalment of Loew's comedy and universal topic pictures. The performance in the Winter Garden is the same as in Loew's Theatre.

ON KNOWING THEATRE FACE

Do you remember the audience at the Little Theatre during the run of "A Pair of Silk Stockings"? Every line in the piece was a hit at the foibles of society. And society, amused beyond words, filled the theatre for months to laugh at itself. Do you remember the audiences that packed Ames Theatre again last year when "Pierrot the Prodigal" was being given there? "Pierrot" appealed to the intellectually fastidious, to the cosmopolitan, the dreamer, the poet, the dilettante and the critic. It was strange, poignant, tragically beautiful. But there was nothing in it of the Broadway punch, the "pep," the so-called American drama. It was universal. And again the theatre was filled night after night, and again there were ripples of applause from distinguished and aptly audiences.

There is rarely any enthusiasm about such audiences. They go to the theatre for the theatre's sake; they are capable of humor, they are often witty and mellow observers of life they are occasionally ironical and invariably cosmopolitan.

Americans are mild critics; it is a national peculiarity. We are a polite people, and because we believe in giving the devil his due we are not at all formidable. When a play fails in New York it dies of stagnation. We have not yet tasted of the satisfaction which comes from a hearty boo or a long-drawn hiss whistled thru the teeth at some offensive fool on the stage. So it is natural that, as audiences, we seldom indulge in riots.

Our half-crazy idealists and intellectual demi-monde, our professional and semi-professional lotus-eaters, our poets, pedants, socialists, dogmatists and reformers are seldom unruly in the theatre. They appear in our audiences as isolated exclamation points, dark supernovas and superwomen of the intellectual world.

Concert hall audiences are always passive, drugged, hypnotized by music and by their own overwhelming struggle not to cough or to sneeze during a pianissimo passage. The brightness of the lights is irritating; the hushness of the stage creates a rare ennui, and not until the concert is over and the restive audience is able to rush toward the platform to implore encores is there ever any enthusiasm.

Occasionally a musical personality of the theatrical type—a Bauer, a Kreisler, a McCormack or a Padewski—is able to shake a concert audience out of its stupor. But for the most part music lovers gather together with an air of martyrdom and infect each other with restlessness, melancholy and influenza. They are pathetically eager for some diversion—they would shoot with glee if the pianist or the director should happen to fall over a potter's palm and go headlong. And when the concert is over they rush out into the fresh air again, like prisoners released.

Here is another phenomenon: if you are interested in the psychology of audiences, Night after night you may watch the gathering together of hundreds of people who really like the music of the big bass drum, who really believe that the "Gwan kid" school is the salvation of the American

NEW ENGLAND GIRL

This Captivating Story of Romance-Loving Maiden is Well Filmed.

Scenario writers of late have been getting too far from the soil. They seem to think that motion picture audiences will never get satiated with the portrayal of moral wreckage. Herein they grievously err. Constance Talmadge's pictures, such as "The Studio Girl," which will be presented at the Strand Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, show the genuine drama, the "high romance," that is in the lives of the sort of people everyone knows. The notable success of her pictures proves the public demand for such stories. The public are getting tired of being constantly told the story of the vampire and the woman with a past. It is Constance Talmadge's distinction to portray the sort of girl she herself is—to hold the mirror up to nature, as it were. She has made it her part to delineate typical American girls, at once captivating and precocious. And in "The Studio Girl" she has added another to her list of portraits of "regular" American girls.

Her role in "The Studio Girl," which is her third Select Star series release, is that of Celia Laird, another heroine of the lovable type that she has made her own in so pre-eminent a degree. Celia is engaged to the village leet, who, for all his loudness, has plenty of money. She has made it her own to hold the mirror up to nature, as it were. She has made it her part to delineate typical American girls, at once captivating and precocious. And in "The Studio Girl" she has added another to her list of portraits of "regular" American girls.

A VETERAN'S WATCH AND THE JOURNEY

To New Zealand and Back to Canada After Being Stolen.

ARRIVES TOO LATE

Owner Falls on Flanders Field
Before Timepiece Is Returned.

TELLING THE FIRST: Down in the land of Evangeline there nestles a little Nova Scotian town, by name, Thornbury. Just how long it has been nestling there has nothing to do with this telling. But it was there at the close of and long before the South African War, and when that trouble broke out Thornbury's sons were as loyal as were thousands of other Canadian sons. Among those who volunteered from there for active service in that campaign was a young man named McDonald. He was accepted and went with the Canadian contingent, and after fighting all thru the war was fortunate in being able to return to his native town and province.

Thornbury was justly proud of her war veteran son. So proud that she wished to show her appreciation of his services, and arranged a public reception in his honor and presented him with an address and a gold watch. The back of the watch bore an engraved inscription, part of which was: "To J. A. McDonald, Thornbury, Canada."

The Second Journey.
Telling the Second: Going to the South African war rather stimulated the natural wanderlust that was born in the breast of this young lad, McDonald. It could hardly be expected that he should return to his little Scottish home and not chafe under its quietness after the hustle and bustle and excitement of two or three years in the war against the Boers.

So he decided to put another ocean between him and his home town. This time he set out for New Zealand. For some reason he did not take his watch, but later, when he had become settled in his new home, sent for it, and it was immediately forwarded to him. For some unknown reason the watch never reached him. His disappointment was great. Diligent tracings and efforts on the part of the forwarding company failed to obtain the slightest clue to it. The matter had gone into history so far as the family at home and Mr. McDonald in New Zealand were concerned. They all were much grieved that so valuable a watch with all its associations should have been lost.

Years went past. Then came the present war. Mr. McDonald, still with his fighting instinct and love of travel, enlisted and went to France when the war was first declared.

Telling the Third: Some time during the month of December, 1917, a Toronto business man was in New Zealand, and while in Auckland visited a lodge of a fraternal society of which he is a member. Of course he was introduced as a brother from Toronto, Canada. After the evening's proceedings and he was coming out of the lodge room, a gentleman approached him saying: "So you are from Canada? Do you know, sir, I have a watch in my pocket that I feel sure is a stolen watch and that it belongs to some one in Canada. If in your return home you can locate the owner or any of his relatives I assure you I shall be only too glad to send the watch to him or them without any charge whatever. The reason I feel so sure it is stolen property is that the man from whom I purchased it came into my auction rooms one day and was in a very great hurry. He offered me the watch saying he was very hard up and needed the money and would take anything I'd give him for it. He claimed to be the owner. You will notice on the back of it is engraved a man's name, J. A. McDonald, Thornbury, Canada, and that it was given him when he returned from the South African war."

A pretty restored farm, such as will be built in Picardy after the war.

Finding the Owner.
Naturally the Toronto man was interested and promised that when he returned he would make inquiries. Among the first things he did after landing in Toronto was to turn up a commercial directory and discover that the town of Thornbury was in Nova Scotia. Then he noticed the name of a Dr. McDonald there. To him he wrote explaining the circumstances of the man showing him the watch in Auckland, and his offer to return it to its rightful owner, and asked if the doctor could throw any light on the matter.

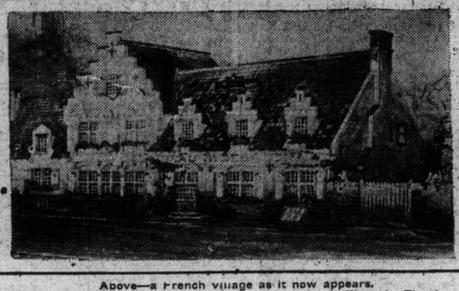

In quick order a letter came from the doctor, in which he related the circumstances as told in the first part of this story, and that they would be more than pleased to have the watch after so many years, as it had belonged to his brother. The Toronto man has written the New Zealand friend telling him of his success in locating the rightful owners of the watch and that their delight at the possibility of having it restored to them was beyond description. The watch is now on its way to Toronto, and will be forwarded to Thornbury to Dr. McDonald immediately it arrives.

The doctor in his letter to the Toronto gentleman said that the time piece's return to the family would be more than interesting because of the fact that a recent cable had conveyed the news to them that his brother who owned the watch had been killed in action in France on March 1 of this year.

PARIS.—Do you remember Mouquet Farm? Do you still recollect your bewilderment about the "Ferryman's House"? Have you forgotten the brickyard at Givenchy, or the sugar factory at Arras? In the terribly distant days of the war wasn't there a Fosse 8, which means Pit No. 8? In the special stories written by the correspondents how many "Mountains" were mentioned?

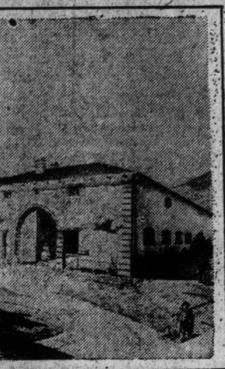

War at a distance is so mysterious that people hardly realize some of its simplest terms. Certainly one of the easiest things to understand is that Mouquet Farm is simply a farm. In the house and around it was waged one of the most dreadful battles of the war. But what happened to the farm? What will M. Mouquet find when he gets home and is ready to start his simple French farming again? And the Ferryman at Dixmude? His flat boat was destroyed long ago—then his house, that worthless Ferryman's House which meant so much in the communiques. What will he find when he returns? Some one will have to make bricks again at Givenchy and sugar at Arras. What will they find to go on with? Where will they live?

The efforts of French artists to answer these questions must have a great interest. The French, who are an intensely rural people, have meanwhile devoted themselves to the problems of the very small village, the isolated farm house, the village forge, the mills and estaminets, the rural inns, which make a journey thru the French countryside so attractive.

The Red Scare of Battle.
A great writer, Mr. John Masfield, has written a book about "The Old Front Line," which millions of soldiers and a few hundred newspaper correspondents will appreciate more than any other book of the war. It is the book of the desolate country thru which the real war of battle runs. Somewhere Mr. Masfield says that in time the flowers, torn earth and people will forget. Before they forget, before the flowers grow, the peasant and the shepherd must be restored to his land; his house must be rebuilt, his stables made ready, and a little inn must be set up in the village for him and his wife to visit.

This is the work for which a prize competition was held under the auspices of the French ministry of agriculture. In this competition there were 1498 contestants, the greater part of whom were men and officers, home on 20 days leave, who left the trenches to do another bit of France.

Preserving Traditions.
The French artists set out to save the spirit of the country while restoring its buildings. Several million Americans will know in a few months that France is not one lump of customs and known to everyone who has ever passed by a French village—have been shifted far from the roads and dwellings, altho they still may remain close to the heart and pride of the peasants. But in all, the changes are acceptable to both the artists and the inhabitants.

If the Americans have been careful in retaining the native art in architecture, the Frenchmen have been passionate for the same ideal. What was done at Vitrimont, in Lorraine, they mean to do in all the villages and farms in Alsace. The task here is a great one. For many years the Germans, in their determined attempts to enforce kultur and Germanize the people of Alsace, have been effacing everything French, and everything native, both being equally under suspicion.

Now the day is coming when France will have to efface everything German in the two provinces, and in this work she is certain to have the approval of the best part of the world, artistic and sentimental. Moreover, it will be work of double restoration. The plans for farm houses, inns and artists' shops and dwellings in Alsace and Lorraine are especially picturesque, and in many instances are the work of soldiers born on that soil, and loving it more than the adopted cities of their grown-up years. One of these architects has even provided nesting places in the chimneys for the storks of Alsace, the ancient birds of good fortune.

Nothing for the Tourists.
Nothing in all these plans has been put in for the tourists from foreign lands, and this is especially true for the two provinces, for the reconstruction work here is to be in mountainous and inaccessible regions, far from the smooth worn track of the sightseer or student. Nevertheless the best talent has given itself to beautifying this region.

For the other districts the tourist and traveler have been taken into consideration in the designs for the auberges, or inns. Many persons have remarked that the large number of plans for such institutions seem to put rather to the spread of what the French call "Alcoolism," but the truth is that the inns of France are strange always to a drunkard and disorderly, and a peasant's forum, and it was

Finding Suitable Jobs For Men Who Fall Down

Do We Pay Too Dearly For Some New Ideals?

This Writer Thinks Toronto's System of Dealing With Prisoners is More of a Sentimental Fad
Than a Method of Moral Reformation.

BY F. MAY SIMPSON

AVISIT to the Toronto jail, not to gather statistics and then to wax eloquent on their bearing, but simply to get another view of womankind, was the object of a recent call. Strange thoughts surge within you as you stand behind the large iron gates, waiting to be admitted, and the question which rises uppermost in your mind is, how are criminals produced?

We have read of "born criminals," they have walked across the pages of a hundred novels; they have been the subject of many learned treatises, with the result that prisons are yet a necessary part of our civilization. These moral hospitals are, after all, full of human nature. What is a criminal? Is he not a person who, from some disability is unable to conform to that rule of action which man makes to protect man—and failing to find proper expression in life becomes an anti-social person—a criminal. And some criminals are women. Doesn't the very thought of it make you shiver? Certain teachers have frequently told us that women were the most moral and unselfish half of the human family. But, we will do well not to believe too strongly in this deduction. Woman's virtues are not all positive. No, the pity of it!

During our conversation with Mrs. K. L. Sinclair, superintendent of the women's department of the jail, we learned that this jail was used for the prisoners who were remanded, and also those waiting deportation, the time for such cases being from one to nine weeks.

"What offences have women committed to put them in jail?" "Their name is legion," replied Mrs. Sinclair, "and difficult to classify. They come from all ranks. They are brought here for vagrancy, breaking the Temperance Act, manslaughter, etc., young women from seventeen to thirty come in on charges of vagrancy, and women from forty to fifty-five very frequently are put in jail because of drink."

"When you ask me why women go to jail, you ask me a big question," continued Mrs. Sinclair, with evident emotion, "it covers a broad field. So much of it is due to dissolute, idle lives. Sin is a disease like any other disease, and its up to society to find its cure."

"Are women ashamed to be in jail," we further asked. "Yes, they are ashamed," answered Mrs. Sinclair, "but they are not so ashamed of what they have done as they are of the fact that they have been found out and that they have been found out and that their liberty has been taken from them. Some of them are terribly ashamed to have their letters addressed here."

The Prison Cell.
Toronto Jail is an old-fashioned building. Floors and benches are scrubbed till they look as white as milk. The whole prison is pervaded with a sense of recently used soap and water. The prison cell, modeled on the monastic system, differs very much from it; the monk is a voluntary resident, his crime against conscience drove him there and he seeks expiation by rigid self-denial and self-renunciation. The prison policy is to crucify the flesh. The raison d'être of the prison system is altogether different. Its intention is punitive. All prisoners are supposed to be offenders against the laws of the land; no account is taken of offences against conscience. The old prison regime was based on the old prison assumption that penal discipline had to deal with an abstraction called crime, not with human beings, this idea reduced prison life to the dead level of feeling and expression that balked all efforts at reformation. It had the same effect upon the character that covering the pores of the skin with paint has upon the body. It killed aspiration and hope by restricting the normal activities of the human mind.

The Industrial Farm.

With the vision of the Toronto jail still bright in our minds, we took the Metropolitan Railway as far as Thornhill, a distance of fifteen miles from the city, and from this point drove three and a half miles across the country to the Women's Industrial Farm. This farm is the new home for women prisoners. To compare this home with the one in the city is to tell the difference between darkness and light, puritan simplicity and up-to-date hotel accommodation.

The Industrial Farm is a dream as far as the building itself is concerned. Its equipment is perfect in every detail, with its spacious halls and corridors, its bath and wash rooms, and its shower baths. There are four dormitories, which at present have ten beds in each, in addition to these are sixteen separate rooms, all equipped with plumbing facilities; one would imagine that instead of a prison, this was a first-class hotel. There are hardwood floors thruout the building, and it is lighted with electric light.

A visit to the kitchen brought to notice everything that was the very "latest" in kitchen supplies and equipment. The beautiful store-rooms and well filled pantry and gigantic refrigerators made you believe, for the moment, that there was no war, and that there was plenty of food for all.

There were twenty-eight prisoners at the farm that day. They enjoyed full liberty, and seemed very much at home. There are two knitting machines in the home and the women knit the sock for the men prisoners who are at the men's farm. (Concluded on Page Two, Col. Four.)

Bunny Must Do His Bit In Winning The War

Rabbit Breeding for the Production of Food to Be an Important Factor in the Task of Averting a Meat Famine.

BY JACK LIVINGSTONE

FOOD and more food was the request in a cable received just the other day by the Canadian food board at Ottawa from the British ministry of food. It was an urgent appeal, and beneath the surface was of great significance, but to the public it was nothing out of the ordinary. During the past year the fact has been driven home by press despatches from the front, home propaganda and government advertising, that we are all facing a crisis in the matter of food.

With such a condition of affairs facing the world steps to alleviate the shortage of food, particularly of meats, must be taken immediately. A propaganda for a greater production should go thru the land to every city, town and village. In order to bring this about our thoughts naturally turn to backyard and plot-gardening, chicken raising and pig-growing with such facilities as one is afforded around a city home and in the country.

But none of these activities will supply the mainstay of the world, which is meat. Meat is what the allies are short of at the present time, and every pound sent overseas is as good as a rifle bullet in the end.

Ranching and stock-raising is being pushed to the limit in order that the present shortage of meat may be augmented. Everywhere, such drains have been made upon the herds of cattle and sheep and pens of swine that some new source of meat must be found immediately to permit the stockmen of the world to recover from the inroads which have been made upon their available supplies.

During the past year all governments engaged in the present war have studied the situation for the purpose of averting a meat famine.

At first considerable attention was paid to the advisability of raising goats, but after carefully weighing the matter, governments were amazed when their commissions and experts announced that the new supply of cheap meat could be attained by extensive breeding of rabbits.

Last year Australia sold $15,000,000 worth of rabbit meat to the allies. This (Concluded on Page Two, Col. Two.)

Contentment and Happiness of Its Employees.

BY E. G. RAMSEY

DURING a recent trip to Chicago and Detroit in the interests of the co-operative ideal among employers, in order to get the most representative view of the various ways in which employment problems might be met that was possible within the scope of a few days, visits were paid to several firms who enjoy a reputation for humane ideals, for there is a pitfall to be avoided by all who set out to study their employees who the cry of efficiency upon their lips, which has been cited by the president of the Salesmanship Club of St. Louis, "So-called efficiency," he says, "while it may have done much to build up business, has also done more to tear it down than anything I know of."

"It has killed individuality; made automatons of men. But we have come to realize at last that you can't take 150 pounds of flesh and blood and cram it into a three by six card index box."

It is such methods one would like to avoid in Toronto; in fact, one does not wish to use the word "efficiency" too often. Somehow the German system has made the term odious.

"Cheaper to Fit Than Fire."
It was therefore with an open mind that I entered the much-advertised factory of Henry Ford at Highland Park, Detroit.

"What are the exact methods by which you seek to keep in close touch with your employees, and how are the ideals working out which one has heard so much of?" I asked Dr. Marquis, who is head of the welfare department. And his reply was: "First of all, we think it is cheaper to fit men to fit men, to create a happy environment right thru."

The Ford plan in general is, as everyone knows, one of profit-sharing, but behind this plan lies a sane, well-balanced scheme for the development of the individual, and thru him the whole communal structure, a plan so wonderful in its vision and working as to appear almost too Utopian for any business.

Here is the story of its development in brief, as given by Dr. Marquis:

In the beginning of the Ford business a great deal of attention was paid to the selection of machinery and materials, but little or none to the employees. With the result that there was, as in most large firms, a constant coming and going among the workers and more or less dissatisfaction.

In 1912 the company began to take stock of the relative value of mechanism, material and men, and made the discovery that if success was to be achieved it would be necessary to consider the human material in a humane sense. An investigation into the home conditions and environment of many of the employees showed that the average daily income paid to most workmen was insufficient to meet the needs of his family and allow him to have the kind of meals necessary to fit him for his work, and to remove all mental anxiety which leads to indifference regarding his work and tenure of service.

LAWS AFFECTING MOTORING REVISED

It Is Now Unlawful to Pass Street Car on Left Side—Wheel Tax Thrown Out—City's Application Re Garages, Radically Revised and Granted in Innocuous Form—League Officials Had Their Hands Full.

During the recent session of the provincial legislature a number of important amendments were made to the Motor Vehicles Act and the Highways Act. Some of these have already been published in the columns of the newspapers of the province, but as no complete statement of these amendments has appeared as yet, and as they are now law to which all motorists are amenable, considerable interest attaches to the following review. However, before launching into this review it might be pointed out that not in years has so much motor legislation been introduced in the local house, and to say that the vigilant legislation committee of the Ontario Motor League has had to work overtime in its efforts to further salutary motor legislation and prevent the passage of adverse motor legislation is a very modest statement of fact.

Probably the most important amendment, at least from the standpoint of public safety, was that making it an offence for vehicles to pass a street car (in motion or standing) on the left when the tracks are on or near the centre of the highway. Another "safety first" amendment was that prohibiting anyone on a bicycle from taking hold of another vehicle. The petition of the City of Toronto for a law permitting municipalities to impose a wheel tax of from two to twenty dollars was refused by a vote of about ten to one after the proposal had been stigmatised by the premier and other members of the government as manifestly unfair.

The City of Toronto's application for the right to prevent the owner of a private garage from renting it to a neighbor met with such opposition from the champions of the motorists that the municipal committee referred it to a sub-committee formed of Mark Irish, representing the legislature; a member of the Toronto City Council, and a member of the motor league. What appears to be an equitable compromise was agreed upon and ratified. This empowers the city to regard and control as a public garage any garage in which space is rented for three or more cars not the property of the owner or occupant of the land on which the garage is located. Before the committee the city solicitor requested power to regulate a garage in which any space was rented.

Another important amendment is that requiring the owner of a car to immediately notify the department of highways of a change of address either in person or by registered letter, in default of which a fine of ten dollars will be imposed.

A penalty not exceeding fifty dollars will be imposed hereafter on those making false statements in taking out motor car, truck or cycle licenses.

The proposal that all drivers be licensed was dropped without discussion. Another amendment declares that license markers remain the property of the government, and on demand by the minister must be returned. This is a rather effective cancellation. Still another amendment makes drivers in common with owners of motor vehicles responsible for violations of the law—a much-needed amendment.

The legislature saw the wisdom of making it unlawful for anyone to throw, deposit or knowingly leave on the highway glass, nails, tacks, tin wire or other substances injurious to rubber tires. It is to be hoped this new law will be vigorously enforced, but too well their selfish whim for ruthless speeding.

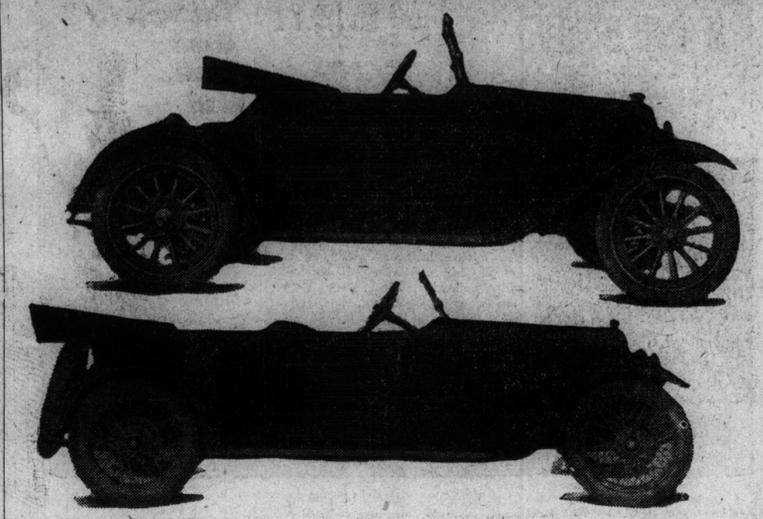

Another step in the right direction is the amendment granting motorists the right of swearing an alibi when summoned to appear at a distant court for an offence imputed to them as a result of an error made by the constable in securing the license number of the car.

The committee showed its good sense in throwing out a clause which would have permitted multiple convictions on the same appearance as a result of a number of charges being preferred as the consequence of a single offence. Had this clause been interpolated in the act it would have been possible to bankrupt a man and keep him insolvent for life if he had the temerity to drive, say, to Hamilton at a speed of a fraction of a mile in excess of that prescribed by law.

A clause was also thrown out that would have prohibited the renting of cars to be driven by anyone not a qualified registered driver. Another clause struck out was that which made it an offence to have a cut-out or any similar device on a car where the exhaust is passed into the open air without first passing thru the muffler.

An important motorcycle amendment requires motorcycles to carry a rear as well as a front lamp. While the committee expressed itself in favor of increasing the speed limit in cities, towns and villages to a rate of 20 miles per hour, and in the country to 25 miles per hour, unfortunately it did not report until the closing hours of the session. To expedite matters the premier requested that all contentious clauses be held over till the next session—and so, alas, the desired increase will be withheld until after the close of the open season for touring.

The "four" comes also with a speedster body, and the "six" can be had with the following superstructures: Sport phaetons, four, five or seven-passenger models, and sport touring sedan. All body work is exclusive customs built. R. C. Todd & Co., Yonge and Alexander streets, have been appointed Maibohm distributors for Canada.

MOTOR TRUCK LINES TO TAKE OVER SHORT HAUL RAILROAD FREIGHT WORK

BY C. T. SILVER.

New York, March 30.—Within the very near future, probably during 1918, a system of motor truck lines will connect the most important transportation centres of the States with fleets of trucks running on regular schedules and making connection at important intersecting points with branch lines extending out into tributary territory.

While everyone knows that the transportation problem is one of the most serious of the many for which this country must find the solution, everybody does not realize the important part which the motor truck will play in solving it. Viewed in one way, the utilization of the motor truck has increased with remarkable rapidity, and yet when you look at it from another viewpoint it is surprising how slow business has been to take full advantage of the enormous saving of time and labor which the motor truck makes possible.

Possibilities Not Yet Reached.

The motor truck may fairly be said to have supplanted the team for hauling and delivery purposes. But we do not as yet realize the extent to which it is going to relieve the railroads from handling a large tonnage of small and troublesome freight, and to improve transportation service throughout the country.

Some beginnings have been made, and the results have proved most successful. Motor trucks are now running on regular schedule between some adjacent cities.

League Will Issue License Plates Monday

The provincial parliament buildings were closed Saturday, and will be closed Monday. During the holidays, as on all Saturday afternoons, the offices of the Ontario Motor League are to be kept open for the convenience of motorists who wish to secure license markers. Declarations are taken by officers of the league.

others, the war has taught us more than we would otherwise have learned in many years. Where would the French and British armies be without their enormous fleets of motor trucks and lorries? What the motor truck is doing today behind the lines in France it can do for us in this country.

Advantage to Manufacturers.

Motor truck trunk line systems, with tributary lines serving tributary districts, would be of immeasurable advantage to manufacturers in many lines, to wholesalers, retailers, and to the consumer, to say nothing of relieving the railroad congestion. The manufacturer would be enabled to make quicker and more frequent deliveries to wholesalers or to retailers. The retailer's trading radius would be greatly enlarged—he would be able to give good service to a much greater number of customers. The consumer would be benefited, because he would be brought nearer to the manufacturer, the wholesaler and the retailer.

It would work just as well the other way. The farmer would be brought nearer to his market. The products of his

ONTARIO AUTOMOBILE DEALERS TO ORGANIZE

Ontario Provincial Board of Retail Merchants' Association of Canada Calls Meeting of All Motor Car and Accessory Dealers of Province.

The automobile and accessory dealers of Ontario have been urged to attend a convention to be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in the Assembly Hall of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, No. 2 College Street, Toronto, with a view to forming an Ontario Association of Automobile and Accessory Dealers.

The following letter that has been sent to the trade throughout Ontario is self-explanatory:

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, Automobile and Accessory Dealers' Section.

Toronto, Can.

tion that will have a bearing on subjects of trade improvement. Unfair trade conditions, if allowed to continue, will only become worse, and the longer they exist, the harder it is to have them removed.

We want to make this the most important and interesting meeting that has ever been held in Canada of automobile and accessory dealers. Its success depends upon your attendance, and we look forward to having the pleasure of meeting you. If you know of any retail dealer who has not received an invitation to be present, we would be pleased to have you invite him. This will be a business meeting for business men, combining both pleasure and profit.

Our slogan, 1000 Retail Dealers at the Convention, must be accomplished. Will you help by your presence to attain this objective?

At this convention the manufacturers and wholesale jobbers of automobile accessories have been invited to attend, and a part of the time of the convention will be set aside for a conference with them. This is the first convention of automobile and accessory dealers in Ontario, and the success of the meeting depends upon your presence. If you leave this important meeting to your fellow dealer and he leaves it to you, the meeting will be a failure and your absence will announce to the manufacturers and wholesalers that the retail trade are not sufficiently interested in their own business to attend; the fault will be yours. We therefore appeal to you, and we hope we are not appealing too strongly, and not in vain, when we ask you to put off all other appointments and come, but by all means come. The matters to be adjusted must be done by the retail trade, as they will not be done by any other class. We must stand united, we must stand for fair principles in trade, and we must stand for a square deal, otherwise we must become "sawyers of wood and drawers of water." Application has been made for reduced railway rates, fuller particulars of which will be communicated to you later.

Enclosed you will find return addressed postcard, which we will be pleased to have you return at your earliest convenience, so that proper arrangements might be made for your reception and entertainment.

Trusting you will realize the importance of your presence, and assuring you of a hearty welcome.

Sincerely yours,

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. W. C. Miller, Secretary, Ontario Provincial Board. Remember the dates: April 1, 2, and 3, 1918.

Now Hudson Owners Have This Added Advantage

CONSIDER this year's automobile question this way: The best mechanics from all repair and service stations are now needed for government service.

It is vital that any car that is to be depended upon for constant service must be one that calls for the minimum of expert attention.

Think what the records of 50,000 Super-Sixes now in service mean to new Hudson buyers. Every known test that would reveal the endurance limit of the Super-Six has been used to show Hudson owners how to build so that a minimum of service would be necessary.

Records of the performance of thousands of Hudson Super-Sixes as their owners have found them have been kept. This, too, was done so that Hudson engineers could make subsequent models more reliable and lasting. All that has been learned in the building of 50,000 Super-Sixes now in the hands of satisfied owners has served well in the building of the new series of Hudsons.

Hudson owners use their cars with the same confidence in their reliability that they do their watches. One is not conscious of the mechanism of a fine watch. Reliability and dependability are demanded. And so it is with the mechanical superiority of the Hudson.

This year the Hudson series has ten different body types: open models, inside owner-driven cars, chauffeur-driven cars, smart town car models and formal limousines.

More than twenty makers have copied the Hudson Super-Six Speedster of last year. This new model is a marked development of the car which has served as such inspiration to other makers. The name applied to the model last season seemed to limit it to those who wanted a fast car. The new model meets every requirement of those who desire a car of that type and still fills the want of those who wish a cozy, chummy car as richly finished in its detail as any model in the Hudson line. It is known as the Four Passenger Phaeton.

Well, "Doug," the popular screen star, has just succeeded in roping and throwing a full-grown and ugly steer from the saddle of this Indian motorcycle outfit, piloted by Sgt. I. W. Wender of the United States Marine Corps, and he is registering pleasure and satisfaction over the unusual performance in a manner that would warm any director's stony heart. Fairbanks pulled off this novel stunt during the two-day rodeo which he staged on Ewing Field, San Francisco, Cal., for the benefit of the war campaign community service fund. He was assisted by cowgirls and cowboys as well as by the Marine Corps, including the Mare Island Marine Corps band, and the affair netted the fund more than $35,000. For all the wild and woolly riding, the new sport introduced by "Doug" was the novelty feature of the rodeo and made a tremendous impression on the cow outfits there.

Motorcycles and Bicycles

Attention of motorcyclists is drawn to the amendment in the Motor Vehicle Act, which calls for rear red lights on motorcycles, in addition to front lights. Heretofore the act called for one front light on motorcycles and one on sidecars when used. In future one rear light will be required on either the motorcycle or sidecar.

TORONTO DEALERS THRILLED.
One of the finest addresses yet heard by the Toronto Bicycle Dealers' Association was the speech of Mr. W. C. Miller, secretary of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, at the regular meeting of the organization in the St. Charles Hotel on Tuesday evening last. Mr. Miller told of many results obtained by retail merchants of Canada thru co-operative efforts. Business conditions had been improved, intemperate laws had been killed, stores had been brightened, and the interests of the public had been protected. He pointed out that the retail merchants are the greatest taxpayers in the Dominion, and that their wealth is greater than all the banks and railways combined. Pictorial advertising had been banned by legislation, and it had been proven that the present channels of distribution were the most economical possible. "It is a day of organization, and all dealers must be alive, active and alert," declared Mr. Miller, and in conclusion he pointed out that it was the right and proper thing for the bicycle dealers to support the National organization, the Canadian Bicycle Dealers' Association, because, then, they could negotiate for proper legislation and other general improvements. Merchants had organized to see that consumers get a square deal and that their own life interests could be protected. Business methods were being brought to a higher plane.

Plans for Bicycle Week, May 4 to 11, were discussed briefly, and members of the local association will be advised fully regarding arrangements for the big event. The members are receiving a news bulletin regularly, and they only one of many advantages obtained thru affiliation with the association.

The next big meeting will be held at the St. Charles Hotel on Wednesday, April 17. It was decided to hold this meeting at noon, and it will take the form of a luncheon. Mr. J. W. Gibson will be the special speaker for the next meeting.

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION NEWS.
The Canadian jobbers are completing the preparation of advertising and publicity material for the Third Annual Bicycle Week, which will be held throughout the country, May 4 to 11, inclusive. Full details will be sent to members of the association in a few days, when they can make immediate arrangements for their supplies.

TO THE TOP OF MT. WILSON.

Members of the old T.M.C. will be interested in the following letter to ex-President Jones. It tells of meeting with many of the well-known riders of Toronto, and gives some idea of what they are doing in England and at the front—Ed.

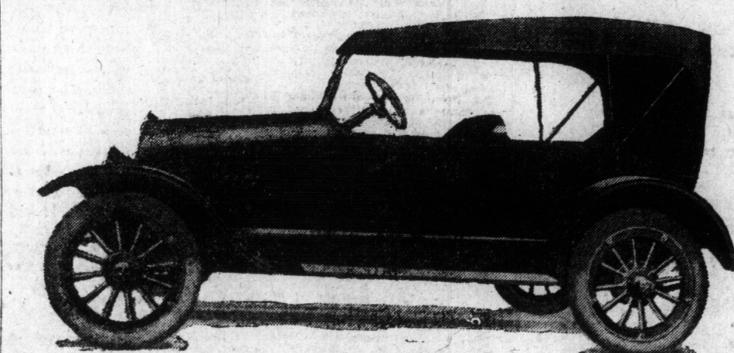

AN INTERESTING LETTER.
Reading, Berks, Feb. 5, 1918.
Dear Mr. Jones: Once more residing in England, but under slightly different circumstances, I came back in latter part of last year for my R.N.A.S. commission. While in London I met Wilfred Dallimore; he is a sergeant driving at headquarters, in Whitley, Steve Woods is driving for Senior Chaplain in London. Hughie McCrossen and Joe Golden are despatch riders for Signal Company. Jack Harding is now a full lieutenant in Canadian army, attached to R.F.C. Roy Thompson met in Reading, and he has just put up his stars. He is doing well and is looking fit.

WORD FROM OSTERITTER.
Secretary W. M. Gladish of the Toronto Bicycle Dealers' Association, has received a card from Charles Osteritter, the well known Newark amateur bicycle racer, who made many friends in Toronto at the recent fall fall. Osteritter is now a member of Company No. 10 of the Aviation Regiment, United States Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Virginia. Taylor, another of the good Newark amateurs, is also with the United States Army. Hans Ohrt, the San Francisco bicycle star, who won the time prize of the Dunlop Trophy Race in 1915 here, has also enlisted in the American Expeditionary Force.

MOTOR NOTES.
Frank A. Hayes, formerly engineer with the Willys-Overland Company at Toledo, is now chief engineer with Willys-Overland Limited, of West Toronto.

A contract has been closed by the Rolls-Royce Company, of England, and the P. B. Stearns Company, of Cleveland, whereby the latter concern will build more than $1,000,000 worth of Rolls-Royce airplane engines.

HOW TO CHEAPLY MODERNIZE AN OLD CHASSIS

Old Car May Be Improved by Fitting it With a Speedster Body.

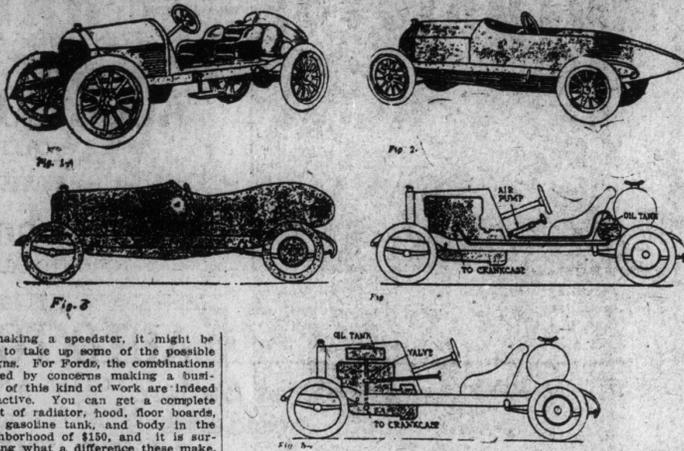

A great many motorists are interested in ways and means of making the old car over into a racy runabout which looks like a speedster even if sometimes it is incapable of great and enduring speed. There is something in the car with bucket seats and rakish appearance that has an appeal to almost every type of driver, and when the old machine begins to get a little wheezy and lame the owner's thoughts at once turn to methods of rejuvenating the vehicle by putting on a new dress and making certain alterations mechanically that will be conducive of greater liveliness and possibly greater speed.

The cause of the very general desire to convert old cars into speedsters is not hard to find, says Motor Age. Several years ago it was the rule of the road to load the chassis with a body that was much heavier than is thought good practice now, and these old bodies are not very attractive. Their homely appearance is in direct contrast to the smooth, trim outlines of the present day car and by putting on light speedster bodies not only the looks are greatly improved but the motor and chassis have more of a chance. It makes possible better hill climbing ability due to the lighter body load, to say nothing of the increased speed this weight reduction in itself makes possible.

Generally speaking, the replacing of the old body with a racyabout type is the most important consideration in rejuvenating an old one, but usually the steering column has to be lowered and sometimes a leaf removed from each of the springs to make up for the lighter body, altho this latter is not essential by any means. All too often, old cars have springs that are too weak for the heavy bodies with which they were originally burdened, and these prove just about right for the lighter bodies.

Changes in the valve timing are often made to assist in the speed possibilities, and sometimes different size gears are used so as to raise the ratio between engine and wheels. It must be borne in mind, however, that many chassis and engine changes of this kind will work to the disadvantage of the car for slow running. They will serve to make the machine faster, but they hamper the motor's ability at low throttle running. In other words, it will not have the flexibility on high gear.

Body being the first consideration

In making a speedster, it might be well to take up some of the possible designs. For Ford's, the combinations offered by concerns making a business of this kind of work are indeed attractive. You can get a complete outfit of radiator, hood, floor boards, rear gasoline tank, and body in the neighborhood of $150, and it is surprising what a difference these make. Other concerns make a specialty of the body proper, exclusive of radiators, hoods, tanks, etc., and it is also possible to get bucket seats alone so that, with a little ingenuity quite a presentable racy roadster can result from combinations with old chassis.

Dressing the Chassis.
The illustrations reproduced here, with are suggestions as to how to dress up the chassis in several ways. Many of the most attractive of the types have been made by enthusiasts with the assistance of a tinner or other tradesman of similar experience. The usual form of racing roadster is shown in figure 1.

This has bucket seats that are attached directly to the floor, with gasoline and oil tanks and tires carried at the rear in a way that adds to the appearance. The dash is sloped slightly and the steering wheel brought down so as to make steering easy, with the seats in this low position. Sometimes running boards and mudguards are entirely eliminated as shown, with steps at the side to assist in getting into the car, while often the owner prefers to have the mudguards as a matter of protection. They retard the speed a little where fast driving is the thing most sought, but it is a question if they do not also add to the appearance. Usually the hood is sloped somewhat as an added feature. Undoubtedly a high, narrow radiator also does its part in improving the looks, but this is carrying the alterations to quite an extent.

Streamline Bodies.
Wind resistance is quite a factor in hampering the speed of a car, far more of a factor, in fact, than most motorists realize. To attain greatest speed the head resistance, which is the wind striking the surface against which the wind strikes, must be made as small as possible, and the body must be so smooth along its length that there are no obstructions against which the wind can strike and thus form eddies. In other words, the air should be allowed to slide along the body without having to come in contact with lamps or other obstructions.

This is the streamline idea, and in order to carry it out the radiator should be so narrow as possible consistent with proper cooling. The hood should slope, and the rear should taper. If a taper tail is fitted, this is the most perfect form of body so far as wind resistance is concerned, providing the rest of the body conforms with it. Tires and gasoline tanks obstruct the air, and wherever possible they should be placed within the tail, if one is fitted. It is not always easy to keep some parts from obstructing wind resistance, for generally the spare tires have to be carried outside. Two body designs that carry out the wind reduction theory very well are shown in figures 2 and 3.

Reduce Wind Resistance.
Thus, even if the motor and gear ratio are not altered at all, more speed is obtainable by cutting down the wind resistance of the lighter body. Usually from ten to fifteen miles an hour is added to the possibilities of the vehicle by these changes alone, and sometimes, with motor specially tuned for speed work, the timing and valves are not altered. It is possible to get even more. The reduction in wind resistance, however, permits of raising the rear axle ratio, and this, in turn, will be practically no disadvantage. Often if a car is fitted with a standard ratio of 4 to 1, this may be raised to 3 to 1, if the other factors have first been changed.

Some of the mechanical points that can be changed are the carburetor setting, adjusting it so that while it may not allow the engine to throttle down so well it works better at the higher speeds. Usually this is the result of making the mixture leaner, and it ordinarily has the added advantage of preventing the engine from getting so hot. The magneto or other ignition apparatus can also be altered to conform to the higher speeds, this usually being a matter of setting the timing ahead a slight amount, the exact extent of which depends entirely upon the engine.

Good Balance Essential.
More power and consequently more speed, is often obtainable by reducing the vibration thru accurately balancing the pistons. In other words, a set of pistons of exactly the same weight should be used if possible. Often speed bugs have gone so far as to drill the connecting rods in order to lighten these reciprocating parts as much as possible, but this ordinarily is not advisable, for the rods are undoubtedly weakened thereby, and being designed for such treatment, they often will not stand the strain.

Extra lubrication is often advisable where the owner wishes to maintain excessively high speeds for any length of time. This can very simply be attained by rigging up an auxiliary supply that will feed directly into the crank case. An easy scheme to employ is shown in figure 4. A hand pump is pivoted to the floor of the car, as indicated, and the oil tank to the delivery pipe from the oil tank to the side of the tank, and thus the air pressure due to the hand pump forces the excess oil to the engine and into the hood if there is room. There is a pipe connecting from the bottom of this to the crank case and a valve is placed in the pipe to allow of controlling the oil from the seat by means of a rod.

Extra lubrication is also used in the altering of the camshaft and valves and extremes to which the average man can go, altho they obtain surprising results where intelligently carried out.

SELECT MAXWELL FOR ARCTIC USE

Wealthy Miner of Northern Alaska Purchases Staunch, Light Car.

Far in the north of Alaska, above the Arctic circle is the home of two dyed in the wool motor enthusiasts. They are Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Burgh, of near Bettles—a mining district.

During the long winters, Mrs. Burgh found herself wishing for some of the comforts of the more civilized countries to the south. Papers old with age occasionally came in the mails to the little mining town. In them she frequently read of remarkable records of reliability made by a certain make of car.

She decided that she wanted a motor car. Her husband desired to grant her wish.

One night when he came home from his mines she surprised him by suggesting that they make a visit to California, many thousand miles away. The next day they started.

Fifteen hundred miles over ice and nearest railroads where they embarked for the nearest Pacific port and there took ship to the Golden Gate. What had caused Mrs. Burgh to arrive at the decision to make the trip so suddenly was a paper announcing the automobile show at San Francisco.

It was the first trip out of Alaska in 20 years. It was the need of an automobile that brought them temporarily back to civilization.

Going to the auto show the Alaska miner and his wife found their favorite at the main entrance. It was the Maxwell car, which had so appealed to Mrs. Burgh while she busied herself about her cold northern home. Before the couple departed from the building on their first visit, Burgh had given his cheque to the local dealer for the Maxwell, with which they expect to startle the natives back in Bettles when they return.

The Burghs is a wealthy miner he was completely to seriously consider the question of gasoline economy. At home gasoline not only is expensive but it is extremely scarce, so he and his wife selected a car known to possess a record for economy in fuel consumption.

Burgh related some interesting facts concerning conditions in Alaska. He said foodstuffs there are worth more than gold. Most of the mines have closed owing to the local cost of materials. In his opinion there will be very little gold mined until after the war.

ONE ADVANTAGE.

"This house suits me in many ways," said the prospective buyer, "but it doesn't seem to be protected from the winds."
"That's the beauty of it," replied the agent. "Whenever there is a blizzard all the snow drifts over to your neighbors."

CHEAPER TO FIT THAN FIRE MEN

This company discovered that wrong home conditions, domestic relations and neighborhood environment had a great tendency to lessen a man's efficiency in the factory and make him an unreliable factor in the organization.

Foremen Have no Power to Discharge.
Worry and the fear of losing their positions thru the crankiness of any one foreman was removed by the removal from all heads of departments of the power to discharge, and an eight-hour day was decided upon as an incentive to better service. This was the beginning of the reform within the works. The next step was to give the workers an interest in the company beyond mere wages in order that they might feel a desire to stay with the concern.

This interest was to take the form of a share in the company's profits. A minimum rate of 45 per cent was decided upon, but the profit-sharing plan is made a conditional one. A man must live right in order to participate in the benefits. Each employee in the Ford Company has two sources of income—wages and profits. In order to qualify for the profit sharing each worker must demonstrate the fact that he spends his money in a constructive way. Any man whose habits are found to be destructive to his family, his own health, or the life of the community is called into conference and informed that his share of the profits will be withheld until such habits are overcome. If he makes good within 30 days, all profits are restored. If it requires 60 days for him to straighten up, he receives 75 per cent of the withheld profits and 25 per cent is applied to charity. No profits so withheld are taken by the company. If it takes him 90 days, he gets 60 per cent of the profits withheld, 40 per cent at the end of 4 months and 25 at the end of 6 months, but in the sixth month if he has not straightened up, his discharge is automatic.

Teaching Money Values.
The Ford plan is to teach every man how to spend his money to the best advantage. Not with the object of dictating to the men the manner in which they shall spend their money, but rather to point out the investments which will get the best results. For this purpose a department of education is run, and thru it every endeavor is made to help the employe to see the value of sound investments, a right environment for his family, and good living. The definite end which the Ford education tends to is to encourage a man who is square towards his employer, his family and the community.

A man is required above everything else to provide generously in proportion to his means for his wife and children, should he fail to do so his profits may be turned over to the wife until he sees the error of his ways.

The Educative Ideal.
In many instances, in order to get the home environment right the company has rented a house and sent away for the family of workmen who have come in from outside points.

A special English school is maintained for the teaching of foreigners, with 128 instructors. The big ideal of this school is to create good citizens. To this end the men are encouraged to buy bonds, as the possession of property will lead to interest in civic affairs, and they are taught that it is the duty of every man who takes the privileges of a free country to assume the full share of the duties of citizenship.

No Discharges.
One rule of the company, said Dr. Marquis is never to discharge a man. In certain cases of grave misdemeanor an employe automatically discharges himself, but once a man is put upon the pay roll, it is found to be unwise for the work for which he was engaged, a position is made elsewhere in the factory for him, and the following instance was given:

Under stress of poverty and desperate need a man will often apply at the employment department for a situation, claiming to have the skill necessary for a certain job. A very short time upon the work reveals the fact that the man has great difficulty in doing the job, but once he is in we have taken the responsibility and the man must be placed, after a little while, in a position where he is best fitted for. He may not be a mechanic at all but a tailor, for instance, and such a case, he would be sent up to work upon the sewing of Ford tops.

"We have proved that it is far cheaper to fit a man in than to fire him," is the final word of Dr. Marquis upon the matter.

Welfare Work.
Free legal and medical advice, help in the choosing of a home and location are some of the incidental provisions Ford makes for his workers, but it would take several articles to enumerate and explain all the workings of these and other splendid plans with the wonderful results.

In addition to the welfare department, which is open to appeals from wives and relatives of the men, a wonderfully up-to-date hospital is maintained within the building with a staff of nurses and doctors. No expense is spared in this department to secure the latest and best appliances or cure for the relief of sick employes.

Physical Defects.
No man applying for work at Highland Park is disqualified on account of any physical defect or disability. Out of the 25,000 employes several thousand have some defect, either a lost eye or limb, or some physical condition which requires special care. Henry Ford believes that it is only just for every large employer of labor to take his fair share of such cases. Every individual is carefully studied and placed at work which will be the least fatiguing for his particular disability. If naturally weak he is given a position where he may sit all day. Every effort is made to improve the condition of such employes, but I think sufficient has been said to show the objects of the Ford system.

Once having started upon a reform for the sake of keeping his employes contented and in unity with the firm, Henry Ford's ideas have grown bigger and bigger and as his methods have improved, his business output has increased accordingly.

"How it has paid him is best told by the following extract from 'The Ford Idea in Education.' 'Henry Ford's greatest idea in life is to make others happy. He incidentally has proved to the world that the business of making others happy pays.'"

But the fact that it pays is not his first consideration. A great deal of his life is taken up in the sort of by-product of the business of helping the other fellow."

Gulls, says an ornithologist, are the best submarine detectors in the world. It's perfectly simple. The divers watch out for the gulls that are following the submarine for tit-bits, and then they catch the submarines that have been gulled.

A GREAT deal could be said about Hupmobile comfort, because it actually does mean more than the word has ever meant in motoring. But we prefer to have you feel this uncommon comfort; and then draw your own conclusions.

The Superb "Muscles" of a Hand Built Tire

THINK of a Marathon Tire in the same terms as you would of a Marathon runner or other trained athlete—built for speed and endurance, with superb muscles and no superfluous bulk—the "muscles" in the case of a Marathon tire being the layer on layer of tested fabric and pure rubber, built up by skillful hands.

For the motorist who prefers service to adjustments—to whom economy is not solely a matter of first cost—who has yet failed to find a favorite among tires, we unreservedly recommend Marathons. Try one, and reserve judgment!

HUDSON SUPER-SIX WINS AGAIN

Captures Honors in Crossing Sierra Mountain Range After Snowstorm.

Honors for the first automobile to cross famous Tioga Pass in the Sierra mountain range went to a Hudson Super-Six. A. H. Patterson, the famous racing driver and Hudson dealer at Stockton, California, made the trip in his Super-Six.

Patterson and his party traveled in the wake of one of the severest storms—a cloudburst that had taken out bridges and cut state highways to ribbons. Part of the way they found the route blocked by washouts. It was necessary to roll huge boulders out of

On the arrival at Yosemite Park, at an altitude of 9841 feet, they found the park ranger attempting to shove out the pass. Blistering their hands with the shovels the Super-Six tourists assisted in opening the pass, and their journey was resumed.

At the completion of the trip the Super-Six had covered 461 miles over all kinds of roads in two days, three hours and 51 minutes elapsed time.

MOTOR INSURANCE CHEAP AT PRICE

Hazard of Accident or Having Car Stolen Is Surprisingly Great.

During 1917 there were some 5000 motor car accidents in Toronto, which is tantamount to every fourth motorist of the city having been in an accident during the past year.

While it is probable that the fault was not the motorist's in the majority of cases, still under an inequitable provincial law the onus is placed on the motorist of disproving guilt. However guiltless the motorist may be it is not infrequently impossible for him to establish legally his innocence. Litigation in any event is a costly matter, both in money and time. As the cost of automobile insurance seldom exceeds the cost of retaining a solicitor, motorists generally would be well advised to take out automobile insurance. Consider: Last year alone more than one car in every twenty in Toronto was stolen. Your car may be next.

With a hazard of one chance in four of having one's car in an accident and more than one in twenty of having it stolen during the year automobile insurance at double the cost would seem cheap. Few motorists can afford to have a judgment of several thousand dollars imposed on them as a result of an accident, yet the only way to eliminate such a possibility is to insure against it. The Dominion of Canada Guarantee and Accident Company have specialized on automobile insurance.

OVERLANDS HAVE AUTO-LITE SYSTEM

Free Service Given on This System by Official Service Station.

"Mr. Overland Owner: Your car is equipped with the Auto-Lite Electric Starting and Lighting System—the standard two-unit, six-volt system, originated by Auto-Lite today accepted as standard by a majority of motor car builders.

"The Auto-Lite Co. makes over 1,800 complete starting and lighting systems every day, yet not one-half of one per cent. have ever needed service attention—a truly marvelous performance," says Geo. J. Beattie.

"And yet, to provide against inconvenience to that less than half of one per cent., Auto-Lite has dotted Canada and the United States with official service stations, authorized to render absolutely free service to the motor car owner during the guarantee period.

"Auto-Lite is guaranteed to you direct, not thru the motor car manufacturer or dealer. Every Auto-Lite service station is authorized to repair or replace, free of all charge to you, any material or workmanship proving defective within one year. So if you have any trouble with your Auto-Lite system go direct to the official service station. If other than an authorized service station does any work on this system, it invalidates the guarantee.

"The official Auto-Lite service station in Toronto is at 8-10 Elm street."

WOULD REGULATE PEDESTRIANS, TOO

"While reckless driving does and will cause many accidents that could be avoided, there is no question but that pedestrians are also to blame for much of the trouble," says Mr. W. S. Smith of the Automobile and Supply Co., Pease distributors.

"Down in Atlanta, Ga., the city officials have recognized this fact by passing an ordinance that requires the pedestrian to exercise a certain amount of care and to comply with traffic regulations the same as vehicles.

"Under this ordinance pedestrians must not attempt to cross a street when the traffic officer signals that vehicles must stop. A man may not proceed when the officer's arm is in the same direction he is going, but must wait for the flag to give him the signal to proceed. When a street is opened to traffic one way, pedestrians may not dodge among the stream of cars and cross at right angles.

"No motor car can back into a curb, except to discharge or pick up passengers, and then can remain in this position only long enough to discharge or pick up same. All cars must park parallel to the curb. No taxicab may park on any street in the city except in front of railway stations, and private cars doing service for hotels, and in the latter instance only by consent of the stores which may be on the same floor with the hotels.

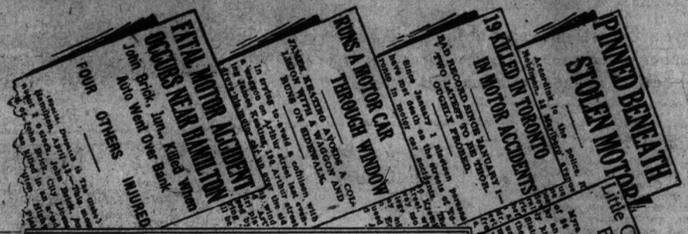

"This Atlanta ordinance seems to have worked well in this populous southern city and I see no reason why with certain modifications it could not be adopted here."

CITY BYLAW ULTRA VIRES

An important ruling regarding city traffic regulations was that of Judge Morson last Monday in declaring city by-law No. 7905 ultra vires in that it contravenes the Ontario Highway Travel Act. The ruling was made in the test case of F. H. Gooch, who, it was charged, in December last drove over the centre line of Terauley street. It is interesting here to note, however, that under an amendment to the act, passed during the closing hours of the last session of the provincial legislature, it is now contrary to law to pass a street car on the wrong (left) side.

U.S. BEING MOTORIZED FOR GREATER WAR EFFICIENCY

Alfred Reeves, General Manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, Gives Survey of the War and Civil Service of the Motor Car and Truck.

Washington, March 30.—That the nation is fast becoming motorized and therefore more efficient for war needs is evident from the reports of Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a 4000-mile trip thru the midwest, where cities, farms and our military forces are showing broad appreciation of the advantages of the internal combustion engine in the present "oil age," which is now beginning in America.

In cities the use of passenger cars, trucks and buses is increasing for time-saving errands and transportation; on the farms gasoline engines are used in automobiles, tractors, threshing machines, for churning and a score of other power-driven appliances, while in the army camps more than 21,000 motor cars and trucks are in use. In addition to the various types of motor vehicles there are also aeroplanes, tractors and similar equipment.

The American nation leads the world in utilizing the efficient transportation services furnished by its wonderful modern internal combustion motor, which conserves coal and rail transportation and besides increases agricultural and manufacturing production.

Gasoline is so plentiful that officials at Washington have recommended its free use so there would be no difficulty about the government obtaining its fuel oil supply, which comes only after gasoline is taken from the crude. In making his survey of the motor industry in the States of New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska, Mr. Reeves addressed special meetings of automobile dealers and manufacturers on a plan for supplying mechanics for the motor divisions of the army and navy and on general war needs and support of the government's money requirements and those of the Red Cross and Y.M.C.A. He outlined ideas for greater efficiency in marketing motor cars and for greater production on farms by the use of tractors and motor trucks.

While the motor industry has made some gigantic strides, real appreciation of it has developed since the war began. The motor car has really just become recognized as a utility vehicle and in view of the statements of Mr. A. C. Bedford, chairman of the Petroleum War Service Committee, and others, that there is ample gasoline for all needs, it is desirable to operate motor cars for useful purposes as much as possible instead of railroads.

"All the western cities show a tremendous growth in the use of motor vehicles," said Mr. Reeves, in an interview. "The farms are being motorized to the exclusion of the horse, and in the various cantonments, particularly the one at Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa, motors do 80 per cent of the hauling and power work. "I find automobile dealers are no less patriotic than the manufacturers. They respond willingly to the demand for mechanics from their garages and service stations for government service, thus joining with the manufacturers who have encouraged the enlistment of thousands of men in that work. This, coupled with the war work that the manufacturers are doing, will bring a curtailment in the number of passenger automobiles to be made this year. With particular reference to war in the air, the automobile industry promises to be even more important than any other except the steel industry.

"Reports indicate that the 27,000 dealers thruout the country are anxious about their supply of cars, now in such demand, particularly in western cities, where distances are so great. There is plenty of the two essentials for motor vehicles—gasoline and rubber—the latter, selling much lower than before the war.

"People in the midwest are supporting the Liberty Loans and all the needs of the government and military requirements to the fullest extent. Farmers are working for increased production by the use of tractors and other machinery. Farm labor is scarce, and every horse they can replace on the farm means five acres of additional tillable land for the production of human foodstuffs instead of horse feed. There are now twenty-eight different devices used on farms that are operated by gasoline motors.

"In army encampments there is an increasing use of motor vehicles, and when our forces go abroad they will have more and better equipment than the armies of all the other nations combined. As Secretary Baker announced a few days ago, Liberty motors are now being shipped abroad, and reports from the air training camps show this motor to be one of the best.

"How much better off we are than Europe, where the use of motors is limited largely by the supply of gasoline that can be imported? There are only 290,000 motor vehicles in Great Britain, whereas there were more than 5,000,000 registered in this country on Jan. 1. The bureau of mines reports our gasoline production at 6,849,000 gallons per day, while our war needs are only 959,000 gallons, and shipments of that amount are limited somewhat by the available tonnage.

"The American nation is fast going

Truck Freighting Yields Good Profit

Obstacles which arise in the freight-carrying situation by motor trucks, and in the quotations of rates at which the truck-freighting companies can carry the business at a good profit, are being removed thru the agreement of the truck freighters to assume all risks of damage and breakage. In taking this position, the truckmen place themselves on the same basis as the railroads, and are able to secure a higher rate for freight hauling.

on a motor basis, for greater efficiency in the present crisis, and the gasoline engine is rapidly taking the place of men and horses in supplying great production, better or more convenient service, and more certain transportation of materials and men."

DODGE IN HERO ROLE AT FIRE

Realism in the window display of a Dodge Brothers sedan at Skaneateles, N.Y., was instrumental in getting badly needed fire fighting apparatus thru deep-drifted snow and saving a burning home.

When the alarm sounded, just after a heavy fall of snow, about 30 men began to drag one of the town's Dodge wagons towards the scene of the fire. A little of this was sufficient to convince them all that man-power would not do the trick. Appeal was made to the Dodge Brothers dealer; it so happened that he had a sedan on display in the window, all ready to run.

In a moment the sedan was started. Ten minutes later the firemen had a stream of water on the fire, the motor car having pulled the hose cart thru the snow without any difficulty. Then it was driven back to the hose house, where it hooked up to the hook-and-ladder truck and trundled it down to the fire.

The situation was more or less ironical because the town had decided, during the previous summer, not to add a 75-horsepower motor truck to its fire equipment, many believing such a truck would be helpless in the winter snows.

A passenger truck termed unofficially the "Officer Car," and intended for the use of high-ranking officers in France, has been completed by the motor truck division of the army. There will be two types of this car, one for the rapid transportation of parties of officers along the front, and the other designed to offset the discomforts of longer journeys.

At such critical stages which the nation has now encountered in solving its transportation problems, the automobile industry has become one of the most important factors in furnishing the life blood of our nation. Without this industrial activity, which has proved invaluable both directly and indirectly by keeping the wheels of progress in action, and assisting in moving thousands of tons of coal, ammunition, foodstuffs, etc., we would be facing a most disagreeable situation. Hundreds of the working class, which will be an important consideration in helping to defeat autocracy, would be without employment, many kinds of products which are absolutely necessary and of vital importance, would cease to be manufactured in sufficient quantities, and this, of course, would be a drawback, and something we must not permit to come about. Speed and economy has been made the watchword. Therefore it is only fair to assume that the automobile is and will be a vital necessity with which these elements can be accomplished most readily. It is an established fact that at the present time thousands of trucks and passenger cars are engaged thruout the country in transporting innumerable quantities of produce, coal and other materials, saving countless dollars and hours of time. It is needless to state that the railroads are the very backbone of the country but how few people realize the value and importance of the automobile as a part of our wonderful transportation system? The tremendous gain in speed we have achieved in moving men and materials can be credited to the automobile.

TRUCK BEATS TRAIN IN FREIGHT DELIVERY

In making the recent 533-mile trip, overland from New York to Akron, in 50 hours, total time, and in 49 hours actual running time, a loaded 3 1/2-ton truck beat the fastest Pennsylvania railroad freight delivery in 48 hours.

This remarkable feat of overland truck transportation was at the instance of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, which maintains a thru truck service between Akron and Boston. The rubber company now has eight trucks running on regular schedule, and what is more important, these trucks have been operated thru the deep snows of the present winter.

"These overland trips serve a dual purpose," says Commercial Vehicle, "alho the principal reason is to test out the giant pneumatic tires being produced by the Goodyear Company. The carrying of freight serves the practical purpose of relieving railroad congestion, and gives test to the tires and trucks under the same conditions to be met in actual service. At first the truck manufacturers were skeptical, as to the possibility of the project, but the Goodyear Company insisted, and finally started a truck on the first leg of the journey from Akron early in April of last year. The trip took 17 days. Today the same truck and others of the fleet make the identical run in four days, and in several instances a complete round trip of 1480 miles has been made in six and one-half days."

Therefore it is only fair to assume that the automobile is and will be a vital necessity with which these elements can be accomplished most readily. It is an established fact that at the present time thousands of trucks and passenger cars are engaged thruout the country in transporting innumerable quantities of produce, coal and other materials, saving countless dollars and hours of time. High Value—Low Cost

As people demand more of themselves, their time and their money, the value of this Model 90 looms larger and larger.

It gives all the five essentials for complete satisfaction.

Its never-give-up performance makes it as efficient as it is convenient.

The powerful sweet-running motor squeezes every bit of power from every drop of gasoline.

Its appearance and comfort leave nothing to be desired. It has buoyant cantilever rear springs, easy-riding 106-inch wheel base, spacious interior and wide seats.

The upholstery is deep, and the tires are large, non-skid rear.

No matter where you drive, expert Overland service is always available and is a vitally important advantage in owning a Model 90.

Its price is remarkably low in proportion to the value you get; the value of quality materials, the value of room, beauty, and modern improvements, including Auto-Lite starting and lighting and vacuum fuel system!

Busy men and women crowd more work into a day with less fatigue with this efficient, time-saving and health-building car.

Double Your Business by Using a Ford

YOUR business is limited by the area you are able to handle. Why not widen your field of activity by using a Ford car? Many of the most ambitious and successful travelers in almost every line of business are doing this.

They have found that a Ford car enables them to cover much more territory—see their prospects oftener—save time—increase sales—reduce traveling expenses, and meet "their man" with added dignity and in a better mood.

Surely this is worth while, and especially so when we consider how easy it is to own a Ford—its enduring qualities—its power—its simplicity, and its low cost of upkeep.

A Ford car in your business will soon pay for itself. Think it over.

Stars of the April Heavens

BY M. A. PEASE

In our study of the stars it is essential to remember that the face of the heavens changes with the seasons. At the end of a year the apparent revolution of the stars is completed, and they all come back to start the year at the same place again. It is easier to think that the stars are doing the travelling than to realize that it is our old earth train that is carrying us along past them. The one star in the sky which never seems to change its place is Polaris, the Pole Star around which all the constellations appear to revolve. This Pole Star is the bright star in the handle of the Little Dipper more correctly called Ursa Minor, the Lesser Bear. This lovely Northern Light is the most practically useful star in the heavens. In the infancy of navigation it was the only guide, the mariners in those days knowing "no north but where the Pole Star shone." During the Civil War, escaping slaves and Northern prisoners looked upon Polaris as the friendly light of God leading them to safety.

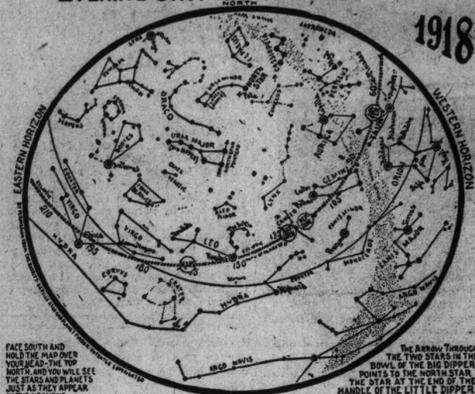

We are all familiar with that group of stars which is, as will be seen by our map, in excellent position for observation in April—Ursa Major, the Greater Bear, more commonly known as the Big Dipper. Although it is by no means the most conspicuous constellation in the heavens, the fact that its shape is easily remembered, and that it is visible in our latitudes all the year, makes it probably the best known constellation in the sky. In fact it is a sort of "family group" and represents to many people their one bit of knowledge of celestial figures. The ceaseless revolution of the Dipper around the Pole is an index of the changing seasons. At present—the springtime—it appears almost directly overhead; in the warm summer evenings it is in the northwest; in the autumn it is low in the north, and in the winter it lies in the northeast.

The Bear's Awakening.
The idea of the habits of a bear is carried out by the position of the constellation during the winter season. The bear lies on his back apparently sleeping through the cold weather, but when the icicles begin to weep in mourning for the departure of winter, he awakens and begins his foraging habits.

The Indians have a charming legend concerning this star group which children usually find particularly attractive. In this story, the bear is represented by the four stars in the bowl of the dipper and he is pursued by seven birds which are the stars in the handle and some of the neighboring stars. When the bear awakens in the spring, he is pursued by the birds, but he is fleet of foot after his long rest and evades them. When autumn arrives, the birds all lose interest save three, one of which is the robin. As the bear lags in the race, these birds overtake their prey who rears in self defence, but is killed by an arrow shot by the robin, and falls over on his back. In his greedy haste to feed upon the Bear, the Robin gets badly splattered with blood and flies to a celestial tree near at hand to shake off the evidence of his guilt. The one tenacious spot is upon his breast which he will carry as long as his name is robin. Each autumn the blood-red tints on our foliage are the reminders of the spots which robin splattered far and wide. Thru the winter the bear sleeps his long sleep, but the life spirit comes back with the birth of spring and again the bear comes forth to be relentlessly pursued and so year after year the eternal drama goes on.

A Time-Keeping Star.

Ursa Major has also been known as the Wain or Waggon, sometimes called Charles' Wain for Charles I. of England. Shakespeare mentions the constellation by this name in King Henry IV where he refers to its position in the sky as telling the hour: "Helio: 'An't be not four by the day I'll be hanged Charles' Wain is over the new chimney." This group was evidently used in those days as a sort of celestial time keeper. The line drawn thru these four stars in our map marked "North Star Pointers," passes almost directly thru the pole of the heavens and revolves with the constellation every twenty-four hours. The northern sky may therefore be used as a great clock dial over which the starry hands trace their path unceasingly.

The Swastika Cross which is considered to be the oldest symbol in the world, is said to have been familiar to primitive man as a part of the constellation Ursa Major. You will notice that the figure of a dipper is suggested which ever way the cross is turned.

Reasons For Names.

As the stars outlining this constellation do not in the least resemble a bear or any other kind of animal, many reasons have been given why the group should have been accorded this name in all countries. One of the most acceptable reasons given is that the bear was thought to be the only animal which would venture forth into the frozen regions of the north. The handle of the dipper is supposed to resemble the bear's tail and its very un-bear-like length has always been a subject of pleasure. In the seventeenth century, it was popularly supposed that a Princess of Arcadia had offended the gods, was turned into a bear and translated to the sky. A writer of this period very quaintly endeavors to give a reason for the long tail of the bear, as follows: "Imagine that Jupiter, fearing to come too nigh unto her teeth layde holde on her tayle and thereby drew her up into the heaven, so that shee of herself being very weightie and the distance from the heavens to the earth very great, there was great likelihood that her tail must stretch. Other reason know I none."

Dancing has always been connected with the two bears by the ancients. Some people seem to think that the circular dances of the Greeks and even our present day May pole dances were suggested by the reeling about the Pole Star of these two constellations. Some poet has described this circumpolar dance as follows: "Onward the kindred bears, with footstep rudo, Dance round the pole, pursuing and pursued."

There is a famous naked eye double star in the middle of the handle of the dipper named Mizar while little companion is named Alcor. It is considered a test of excellent sight to be able to separate these two stars which are sometimes called the horse and rider.

It is usually supposed that the only stars in this constellation are those seven bright ones which outline the dipper, but there are more than fifty, some of which are visible only thru a telescope. This group of stars with its two eyes, the pointers, always fixed on the Pole Star, naturally appealed to the popular imagination, and the mythology of this group with that of Ursa Minor have furnished more poetic suggestions to the writers of many nations than any half dozen of the other constellations.

THE BRAIN BOX

Conducted by E. G. R.

The aim of this department is to give help, advice and encouragement to any who feel they are "misfits," and especially to those starting out in life.

How are you equipped? Are you so confident that you have learnt all the possibilities of your own trade that you are content to settle down into a rut?

A rut is no aid to sure progress. If you are in one, get out of it now!

Are you prepared to act for co-operation? What is your motive?

Are you just out entirely for number one, or have you a conscience towards the other fellow? What are you giving back?

For the work you are doing you receive a wage, but what are you really giving in return?

You have written an account of all the difficulties which confront you in your everyday work, of the apparent indifference of your employers to your interests, but let me ask you: How far have you endeavored to co-operate with the head of the firm? What tangible attempt have you made to connect up his thought with your daily routine, or your ideals with his interests; the work you are being paid for?

How often do you take stock of yourself? Get the habit, it will pay you.

Study your motives week by week, day by day. Size yourself up ever and often. Find out why, the real honest why! of your every action, both in business and out. Be square with yourself. It will pay.

Be square with yourself before you ask others to deal squarely with you.

Co-operative Planning.
"Employers and Men to Form Committees," runs the headline in a local paper as this page goes to press, and the article in question tells of the proposal made by an English trades union leader to appoint a committee of three workmen and three employers who shall plan together for the greater production of ships. This is co-operative planning for efficiency and larger results.

How many workers in Toronto, how many in any town or city are ready to co-operate?

If the choice fell upon you today to be singled out from your particular branch of industry, for the purpose of conferring with and advising a group of employers, would you be ready?

Have You the Goodwill of Your Employers?
Henry Ford himself attributes the phenomenal success of his business, not to the fact that he makes and sells a cheap car, but that he has set out to co-operate with and for the good of his employees. Read on another page how Ford's idea of co-operation is worked.

Henry Ford says: "The secret of all Ford efficiency is the goodwill of his employees. The men are happy, made happy by the wage and profit sharing that put anxiety out of life. In return for what they receive the men not only work with a will, but with a 'good will,' and no efficiency method ever devised can take the place of the good will of employees towards employer. Will plus scientific efficiency methods will do great things, but 'good will' plus ordinary intelligence will do a lot more. And when you get the two together—good will and efficiency—competition ceases."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.
H. C.—Your letter is very welcome, as are any from returned men. The lettering will be of most service to you, and it should be possible for you to get a position, with the training you have and yet so shortly.

You do not state your age. If you will kindly give me this, also a few particulars regarding yourself, whether married or single, I may be able to give you definite direction.

W. T. P.—Your application was taken up with a prominent local business man who is sufficiently interested to grant you an interview. Letter has been sent out this week. I trust this will result in your obtaining the kind of position you desire, and send good wishes for success.

W. G.—I hope this will catch your eye, as two weeks ago I asked you to watch the column for follow-up. I have taken up your idea with Mr. Duncan of the department of agriculture, Parliament Buildings. If you will call upon him he will put you in touch with the kind of mechanical work you desire.

DISSATISFIED.—At the salary mentioned you are not doing as badly as some we know of, but your knowledge of machinery should prove valuable at the present time. Have you tried any members of the Manufacturers' Association? You should apply in person to all the firms who handle machinery, such as the A. R. Williams Co., Canadian Fairbanks, Dodge Co. and the manufacturers' agents. I would suggest that you see the heads of some of these firms or agencies; there may be new avenues opening up in the near future where your knowledge could be utilized.

A. M.—The work you mention is pleasant and congenial if you have an aptitude for it, but is inclined also to be strenuous. The qualifications necessary are accuracy, rapid thinking, a keen sense of news values and discrimination; also, of course, the power to express yourself intelligently upon paper.

The commencing salary varies in accordance with the concern and the qualifications of applicant. If you care to ring me up at noon between 12 and 12.30 p.m. upon the Tuesday after this appears, April 2, I will arrange an interview for you.

J. E. B.—In time I hope to save you from utter despair. You will have received a letter relating to the offer of a position. I hope all details will be satisfactory to you, and wish you every success.

RE-EDUCATING INJURED MUSCLES AND LIMBS TO TAKE UP WORK AGAIN

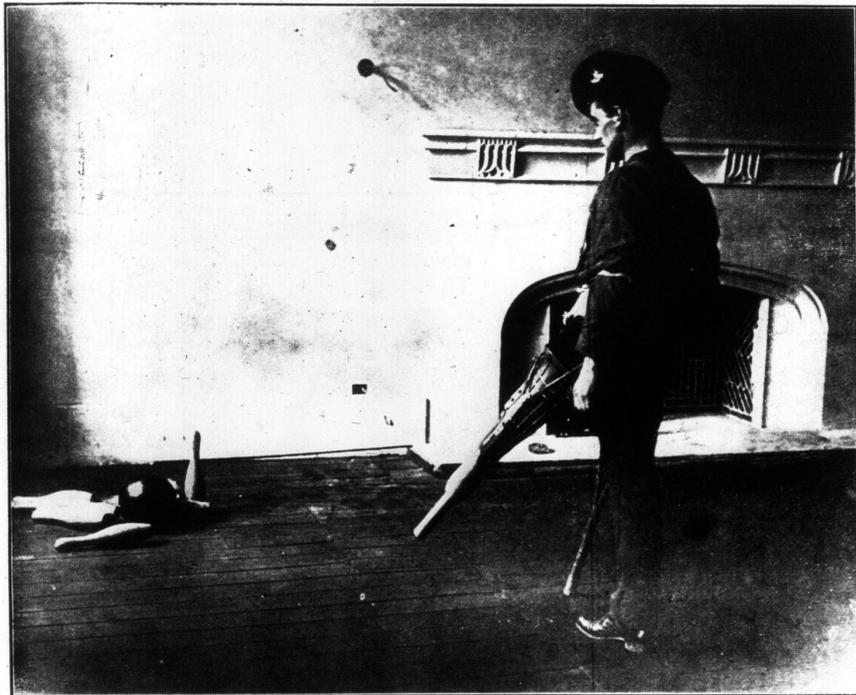

Whitley exerciser training the stump ready for artificial arm. Man on the right is exercising for co-ordination of arm movement. One arm having been wounded, has lost the power of direction. These exercises are taken gradually, increasing in duration every day.

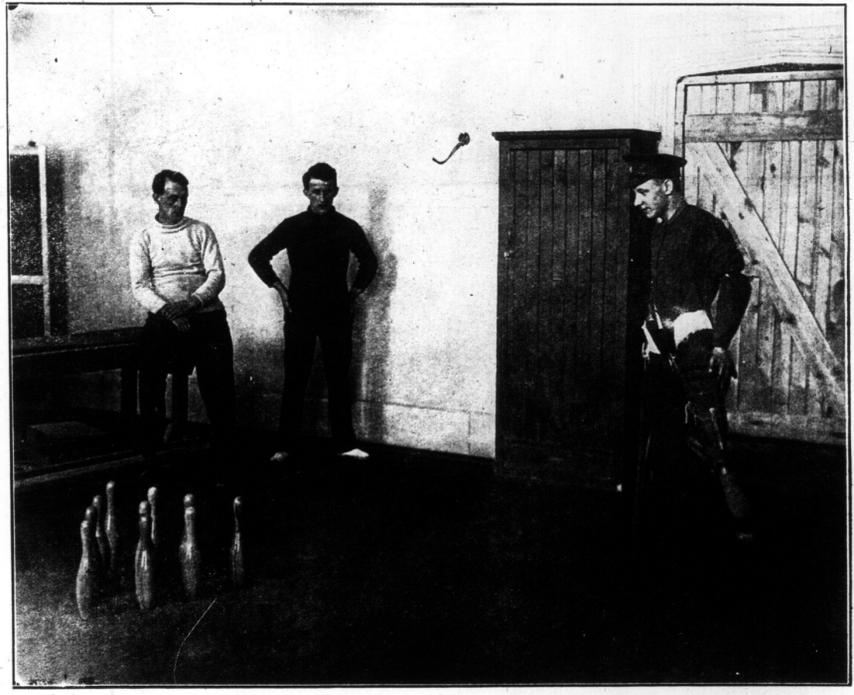

Another clever attachment for exercising the arm stump. These are short-arm appliances, strapped on to the stump, which hinge on to a billiard cue, enabling the man to play from the shoulder. Keen billiard enthusiasts, who have been deprived of their right arm, are delighted with these inventions, which, while giving them the opportunity of an enjoyable game, are helping the disused muscles to recover their normal strength.

As sometimes months elapse between an amputation and the fitting of an artificial limb, the stump frequently loses muscular power, and in such a condition, the new limb would be useless. Thru this movement the natural movement is restored unconsciously on the part of patient.

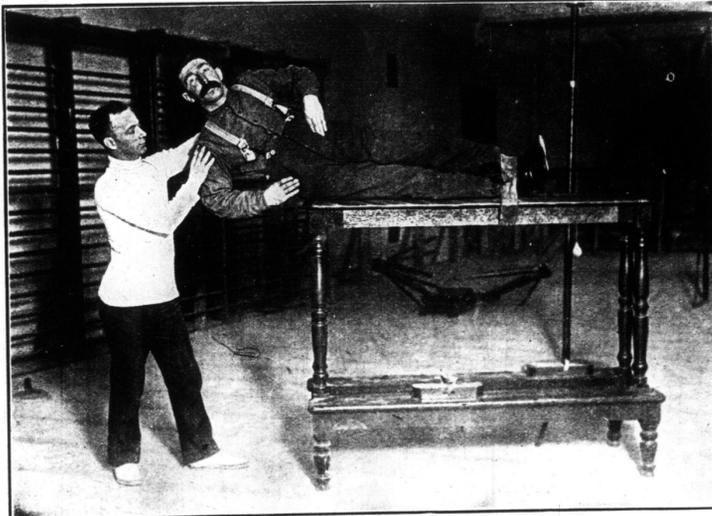

A good shot. Not a clumsy artificial limb, tho by a reminder of what was once the best, it shows the remarkable progress made in manufacture. This is a special practise leg, which helps to prepare the amputation for the use of the artificial limb. The next picture explains how it is used. Many men have for so long been in hospital that the stump has lost muscular power, and much exercise is needed before a new limb is fitted.

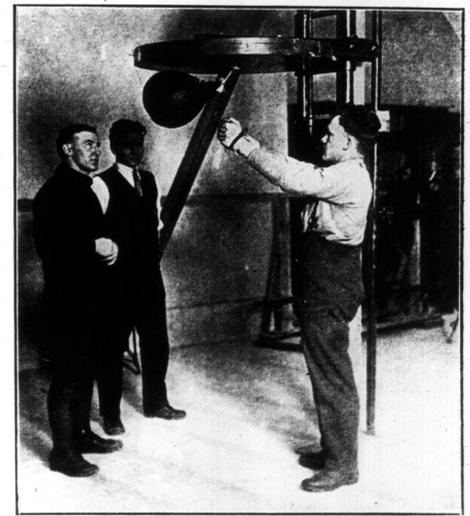

An exercise to educate the stump to carry the weight of the lower limb again. There are various artificial exercisers upon which the men spend some time each day, but this device has been invented to make the movement as spontaneous as possible, rather than purely mechanical. The wooden ball seen in picture fits on to the leg stump. When several men get together at a game in the keen competition, almost unconsciously the stump regains normal action.

This rowing machine is an exerciser for all muscles, and is used for shoulder spinal trouble or strengthening the muscles of legs. By adjustment of weights on either side, one weak side may get more play. It is a good all-round finishing-off exerciser.

Exercise for strengthening muscles of spinal column. This man suffers from paralysis, following an attack of spinal meningitis, and could not straighten up. Under Hart House treatment, he is gradually recovering. Trained instructors assist to prevent overstrain, and patients are assisted to make all new movements gradually. Taught to make difficult movements under unusual circumstances such as in the picture, the men gradually regain confidence to repeat them under normal conditions.

Double punch-ball. A movement for restoring loss of wrist movement. The good arm is strapped to the weak, and by punching this, the weak gradually picks up its natural swing. This exerciser is also used to restore co-ordination or power of direction in movement.

WAR WORK BOOMS IN NEW ONTARIO

Cobalt's Red Cross And Its Fine Work

New Ontario's Mining Town Makes Splendid Contributions to the Comforts of the Soldiers In Hospitals and on the Firing Line.

COBALT is a town of 5500 population, but in the matter of patriotic and Red Cross work we, in Toronto, must take off our hats to the little "silver city" for the excellent manner of its working and splendid results.

There is no tardiness or room for the "slacker" in the ranks of Cobalt's workers for the Canadian Red Cross. Organized upon military lines, under the command of Mrs. Major R. P. Rogers, the Cobalt Needle Battalion of over 800 women and girls is shipping a continual supply of Red Cross articles to the front every month. All church societies and working clubs are organized under the Needle Battalion into companies, and so successful has the military ruling been that a similar plan for organizing Red Cross workers has been adopted in many American cities, and some Canadian districts are also following suit.

The Special Badge.
Members of this useful women's battalion wear an arm band of khaki with the Red Cross and C. N. B. worked in black silk. Previous to the organization of this battalion, which was formed in November, 1916, the ladies of Cobalt worked for the Red Cross in the ordinary way, thru their various church societies, etc. for the Cobalt branch of the Canadian Red Cross was formed in January, 1915, under the guidance of A. N. Davis, chairman; R. S. Taylor, secretary, and F. J. Hart, treasurer.

Members upon joining the battalion sign the following attestation paper: We, the undersigned, realizing the necessity of the work of the Canadian Red Cross Society, affiliated with the British Red Cross Society, and desirous of aiding in this work, do hereby enroll ourselves as members of the Cobalt Needle Battalion, and do promise that we will devote such time as we can to such work as will be from time to time required for the proper care of the allies wounded.

Others That Help.
Coniagas Mines, Red Cross, and Penn. Canadian Mines, Red Cross Societies, send in their contributions to Cobalt.

Funds for the Cobalt Red Cross work are raised by the $5000 Club, which during its first year raised $53,858.25.

Employees of nearly every mine in and around Cobalt subscribe to the funds of this club, and the bulk of the money so collected is paid over to the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Red Cross, but a general fund is also kept for worthy patriotic purposes. Cobalt has no tag days, concerts, or appeals for patriotic purposes outside of those issued by the $5000 club.

Up to date the sum of $33,210.95 has been spent in Red Cross work by this branch.

The Patriotic Fund.
A patriotic fund called Cobalt Branch of Canadian Patriotic Fund, was opened in the first month of the war, which up to June, 1917, totalled in savings $21,634.61.

In this month the branch was re-organized under the direction of Chairman F. D. Reid, Secretary F. S. Flowers, Treasurer N. Campbell.

Seventy-three cheques per month were being issued at this time to the wives and dependents of fighting men. In the matter of disbursement of these funds the committee have issued the following notice:

UNSUNG HEROINES OF BATTLE AREA

Women Live and Work in Reach of German Guns.

REFUSE TO LEAVE

A Shattered Pile of Bricks Is Still Home to Many.

BY HENRI FERRER.

THERE are many unsung heroines that tell of heroism in the battle zones of Europe, especially in France and Flanders, where women of this section are still living with their children in their little cottages and diligently cultivating their little plots of ground "under German eyes and German guns."

One old woman, being asked why she stayed in the danger-zone, replied, "It's my home."

In many another home in rural France and Flanders women have insisted on remaining in the environment which they have known all their lives. Young and aged, these unsung heroines have shown the courage of the most enthusiastic fighter, refusing to retreat while their confidence in their defenders remains unshaken.

In country districts where the invader still holds sway there is not the slightest inward recognition on the part of these remaining peasants of the loathsome German yoke.

This fact is well illustrated by a touching incident which occurs regularly at one little village in the war zone. An old and enfeebled Belgian, tho the home of her childhood is now but a pile of bricks, refuses to leave the spot dear to her with associations of a lifetime. Daily she returns, hobbling along on two sticks, to gaze on her shattered home, unmindful of the jeers of the German guards stationed nearby.

A Lonely Worshipper.
Then, again, every day almost to the church of Thann where the hallows shrine is partly wrecked and the high altar is but a heap of debris, goes a lonely worshipper, an old Alsatian woman, to repeat her prayers.

One day, while under a heavy shell fire, just behind the allies' trenches, Gen. Sir Herbert Plumer was astonished to find a tiny girl about four years of age, playing on the battlefield. He carried her to his motor car and had her taken to headquarters. Later it was found that the little one had strayed from a ruined farmstead situated only about three hundred yards behind the allies' lines.

"Just outside this village," writes a soldier, "there lives all alone an old lady of seventy. She has lived there in her seventeenth-century shell-wrecked farm all her life. She did not budge for the Germans in 1870, nor yet in 1914. She described to me with much vivacity how, when the Germans were barricaded in the village, a few yards away, and were being driven out in fierce street-fighting by the allied troops, she got under the kitchen table to escape the machine-gun bullets that came in thru the window."

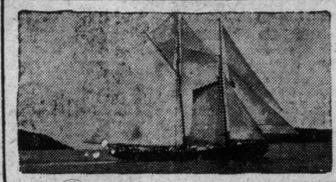

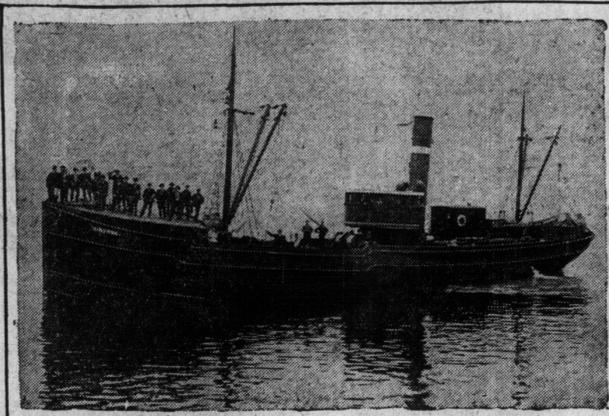

Babies at Play.
An officer writes me: "This morning I saw two small girls and a boy driving three cows past the haystack in which I nest at the business-end of a telephone wire. They were making for a farm which has been half sheared away by a high-explosive shell, leaving four rooms open to public gaze like a scene on the stage. In the garden, ignoring the awful crash and shrieks of war, were playing a dozen tots, mere babes, playing marbles with shrapnel bullets."

Driver William Craven, 7th English Battery, R.F.A., describes how, during an artillery duel in pitch darkness, a shell from a German howitzer wrecked a lonely French farmhouse and killed all the family except a little girl of about seven years, whom he found just conscious.

"The rain was coming down into the wreckage, and I took off my great coat and wrapped the poor moaning child in it. She just opened her eyes and gave me a grateful look. Then she moved one sound arm, and the next thing I found she had lifted something to my head, and it slipped over my shoulders. Her arm dropped. She was dead. She had given me her rosary. I thought I had a heart of stone, but I cried like a child that night; and I wasn't the only one."

The Lonely Woman.
In the Grande Place of Arras, that once prosperous city which is now nothing but a conglomeration of ruins that echo to the terrifying shriek of the shells, there sits an old market-woman, who does with her dog by her side. Not a house remains intact. Yet she sits there, refusing to leave the place in which she was born, now a city of the dead. What matter if the shelter she loves is but a heap of crumbling bricks—her home is still among the ashes of Arras.

A French soldier, passing by a farmhouse that had been set on fire by a German shell, heard the shrill screams of a baby coming from the blazing ruins. He slipped out of the ranks and ran into the house. Across the threshold lay the body of a young woman. The inner room was on fire, and the flames had already set alight the wicker cradle in which the tiny mite lay screaming. This baby, being brought to Paris, was afterwards adopted by two rich American women, and is now comfortably homed in the United States.

Encouraging The Use Of Canada's Sea Food

Canadian Food Board Seeks to Popularize Many Varieties of Edible Fish Used in Other Parts of the World But Wasted in This Country

TO INSURE an increased supply of beef and pork for the armies overseas, the fish division of the Canada Food Board is engaged at present in a Dominion-wide campaign for the consumption of one pound of fish a week per person, which means a 50 per cent increase by Canadians to attain the goal. The campaign for increased consumption will act as a spur to increased production by the fishermen, for, in order to prevent a falling off in Canada's export, in fish, there must be a corresponding increase in production.

Canadian fish production for 1915-16 season was enough to provide 112 1/2 lbs. per person of which 52 1/2 lbs. were exported, 29 lbs. being consumed at home. At the same time the people of Great Britain were consuming 59 lbs. of fish per head per year, so that it is not unreasonable to ask Canadians to eat 52 lbs. each during the coming year. To attain this goal, fish must be supplied to the consumer at a lower price than is now being paid for certain "luxury fish," such as salmon and halibut. For this reason the committee has taken up the work of providing more of the plentiful, and in some instances less used varieties of sea-food.

Western Operations.
In the western provinces, which prior to this effort used only salmon, halibut and a portion of the local lake fish, arrangements have been made to supply fresh frozen fish at 10 cents per lb. in all cities of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba on direct lines of communication. This will put western Canada on the same footing as the eastern provinces, where the people have enjoyed fresh frozen cod and haddock at a similar price. The fresh fish referred to above include flounder, brills, plaice, soles, witches and skate, all of which have been used overseas for centuries and are considered in Great Britain to be among the best food fish produced in the North Sea.

In connection with the campaign for increased fish consumption, the Canada Food Board is sending out educational data showing why fish is the best substitute for beef and pork, the reason being that it is the only animal food that does not, in the course of its growth, consume and destroy food fit for human consumption, or food necessitating the use of man power in its production. Consumers are encouraged to place orders with retail dealers in advance for regular supplies of fish on Wednesdays and Fridays or other days so that the dealer may purchase an adequate supply without danger of loss.

Encouraging the Use of Cod.
In co-operation with the Canada Food Board, Atlantic producers are encouraging the increased use of cod. One of the large dealers points out that 200,000,000 lbs. of cod fish were caught by Canadian fishermen last year, but that only five per cent of the catch was consumed locally, and he declares that Canadians should increase their consumption of this variety of fish to at least 25 per cent of the catch.

The result of this campaign has already been felt in many sections and wholesale dealers report that for the first time in years, or, in fact, the very first time in the history of the business in the Dominion, there is an increasing and staple demand for fish products.

Few Canadians realize the immense advantage which the people of the Dominion now hold over those in the British Isles, in regard to fish supply. So scarce has cod become during the past few months, overseas, that Lord Rhonda recently issued a regulation fixing the price of cod and haddock at 38 cents per pound, while the people of Toronto are offered an almost unlimited supply at 10 cents.

The Canada Food Board has not attempted to regulate the price of all varieties of fish in Canada, but has only issued orders covering western lake fresh frozen fish, where the supply is limited, and Pacific fresh frozen fish in order to assure supplies at a low cost to the consumer. No attempt has been made by the Canada Food Board to go into the fish business, but the industry is being encouraged thru co-operation with the fishermen and distributors.

Present Fish Prices.
The consumer has had a good deal to do with the fixing of the price of fish. The present high price of halibut is due to a great extent to the public demand for this particular variety and the rejection of other equally favorable species. Great organizations have been built up, starting with the steam trawlers in the Pacific, and including cold storage warehouses, special cars, and fast trains just to supply the halibut steak. Consider the hazard of fishing, bait, fuel, gear, vessels, boxes, ice, fishermen's wages, food supplies, short labor, storms, fog, delay, loss by deterioration and uncertainty of demand on one day a week (Friday) that goes into making that halibut steak available. The same equipment could land many times the amount of all varieties of fish, that it now handles in halibut—if the consumer would help by eating the other varieties, and the cost would be about one-third the present price of halibut.

Families who have not been consumers of fish and are not experienced in preparing sea food, can secure from the Canada Food Board cook books and directions by which the various varieties can be prepared in the most appetizing and delicious manner. It is suggested by the fish division that those who are not well informed should take advantage of this offer, for many varieties of fish require special preparation, and the fish which if properly prepared is a much sought viand, may be spoiled by being prepared in the wrong manner.

Ending Wastage.

One of the most important aims of the Canada Food Board is to end for all time the waste of valuable food fish which has been going on in Pacific waters because of the popular demand for halibut, which led to discrimination against other food fish by the fishermen. Without a market it was useless to bring in other varieties, so when the long line and hook fish were found red cod on his hook he threw them overboard. To the uninitiated this might seem lucky for the fish, but, unfortunately, it was already dead. These fish are caught at a considerable depth, and the decreased pressure near the surface is fatal. It has been estimated by experienced fishermen that for every 70,000 pounds of halibut landed, 30,000 pounds of cod has been wasted.

Until the last few years black cod went the same way, but by changing the name to "sable" fish and exploitation, a market has been created for that variety. The present purpose is to make the other Pacific cods, scudder, sole, plaice, witches, and brill, just as popular.

The Gates of Gold ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

It's forth across the roaring foap, and on toward the West,
It's many a lonely league from home, o'er many a mountain crest.
From where the dogs of Scotland call the sheep around the fold,
To where the flags are flying beside the Gates of Gold.

Where all the deep-sea galleons ride that come to bring the corn,
Where falls the fog at eventide and blows the breeze at morn;
It's there that I was sick and sad, alone and poor and cold,
In yon distressful city beside the Gates of Gold.

I slept as one that nothing knows; but far along my way
Before the Morning God arose and planned the coming day;
Afar before me forth he went, as tho the sands of old,
And chose the friends to help me beside the Gates of Gold.

I have been near, I have been far, my back's been at the wall,
Yet eye and ever shone the star to guide me thru it all;
The love of God, the help of man, they both shall make me bold
Against the gates of darkness as beside the Gates of Gold.

PAT AND THE BARBER.

An Irishman occupied a barber's chair and he was drowsy. His eyes could not be kept open and his head rolled about upon his chest in a way that made shaving a difficulty for the knight of the leather and a dangerous one for the patient.

At last the barber said gently, but firmly: "Look-a-here, sir, I can't possibly shave you unless you hold up your head. To which the response was made with drowsy indifference: "Well, thin, cut my hair."

Photography as Women's Work

A Profession Well Suited to Those Possessing Average Intelligence, Tact and Some Artistic Taste.

BY DULCIE M. ARMSTRONG.

The fourth of a series of articles dealing with modern occupations for women. Another will follow shortly.

PHOTOGRAPHY is an ideal profession for women, and in it is boundless scope for success. At a recent convention an eminent photographer was heard to remark that in fifteen years' time the proportion of successful men to women photographers would be as one to ten. No woman, anxious to decide upon a life work, could make a mistake in choosing photography. Age is no limit. Any woman under fifty years of age who is possessed of average intelligence can, within nine months, be qualified to accept a good position or, better still, open a studio for herself. In this period of time she would learn not merely the ordinary practical work but also all artistic methods through which the marvellously beautiful results are obtained by the leading successful photographers of the day.

The short period of training is, in itself, an inducement to take up this work. Few professions are there with like remunerative possibilities for which one may qualify so rapidly.

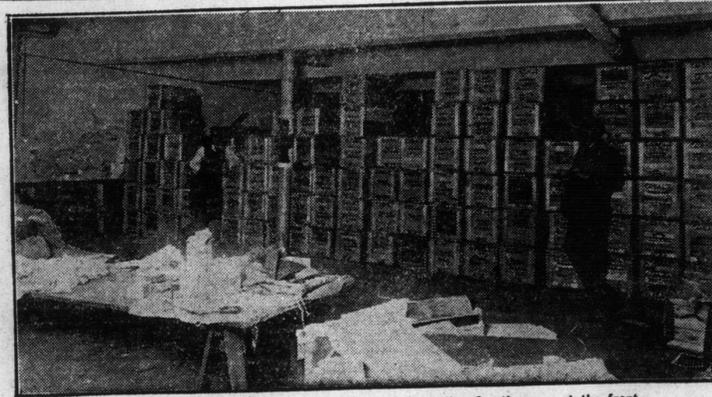

I have said that any woman of average intelligence may succeed in this profession, but only she who possesses certain natural characteristics will prosper financially. Chief of these is personality, and it is not over-stepping the mark to say that the possession of personality in a marked degree is the keynote of success in this work. Other essentials are cheerfulness, tact and patience, the exercising of which will strongly influence success.

The work, in itself, to the artistic and energetic woman, is an unceasing joy, but trying and even unpleasant contretemps will not infrequently occur, strive she never so bravely to avoid them. Therefore is cheerfulness an important characteristic to be acquired. The position and relation to be assumed by the photographer to the client must be assiduously studied. When it is remembered that some people find particular pleasure in posing whereas others are almost hopelessly gauche and self-conscious, and that some regard a visit to the photographer as a most pleasurable event and others would as lief visit the dentist, it will be readily understood that the study of the individual and a quick perception of character must be diligently cultivated.

Finesse is as much to be avoided (Concluded on Page Six, Col. Five.)

COLORED BEADS AND GAY EMBROIDERY MAKE BRIGHT THE SEASON'S NEW MODES

Japanese Art is Strongly Sponsored by the Famous French Designers While All Manner of Oriental Decorative Motifs Are in Demand for Spring Costumes.

BY FLORENCE ROSE

TAN TRICO COAT BORDER DEVELOPED IN DARKER MADE OF EMBROIDERY

These beads are usually larger than the glass beads. Another leaning towards the adaptation of Japanese art is shown in a strong inclination to adopt a modified kimono sleeve; not only do the sleeves exhibit this tendency, but the neck line and the straight lines of the garment accentuate the influence of the Orient in costuming. It is some time since the dropped armhole or the kimono sleeve have been really popular; therefore it is different from the general run and should find many admirers. All the designers seem to be in ac-

the back and sides. The crown is decorated with uncurled ostrich feathers. Silk gloves this year are the dictum, but as these mean comfort, women should be content. These gloves vary this season from the regulation silk gloves, as is shown in the illustration. Here the wrists of the gloves are made the feature. The collar is of organdy in triple layers. The coat of tan trico, embodies the vogue for embroidery. On this coat the embroidery is done in chain stitch in a dark shade of brown. The sailor is of black laquered straw.

The best shops really try to rival each other in an endeavor to use as little decoration as possible. Georgette uses a few var-colored roses, the peonies pressed flat and scattered about. Reboux likes tiny anemones, Lewis suggests ragged chrysanthemums, while Lucy et Gaby like flowers made of tulle. For the house-made hats—and the large majority of hats are of this variety—no trimming is used; or, if anything, it is a wisp of a plume of a quill that stands out all alone.

Georgette shows a preference for gray this season. She uses the color in faille, taffeta, and straw, both in plain and glazed varieties. She has several models in rough, shiny straw, but those hats are for the provinces and will not be seen in Paris. Georgette's preference for rose trimming is not for the big blooming and usual sort she likes the ragged, faded ones, and sometimes she uses them for a border around the edge of a half high crown. Her gray hats are finished in flowers of a dull pink or Chinese rose.

Lewis likes Chinese and Japanese adaptations in hats for young girls. Some of his creations are known as "Touquins" and in their shape and general effect they resemble the Chinese. He places colored ribbons on these hats. Indeed, this house shows a fondness for ribbon in all widths. Bands of gilt or silver are also used to help brighten a black hat or one of dark color. The colors here are apt to be Nattier blue, beige or gray. For the Riviera resorts he is making hats of white embroidered satin trimmed with flowers of tulle illusion. Ostrich plumes are a favorite trimming with Lewis—not the kind so fashionable in years past, but a plume uncurled and thin enough to have been sawed in two. This plume he often curls around the crown, allowing it to fall over the ear or to trail down the back of the head.

FASHION FANCIES

There must be a note of contrast in the dress. We are to wear little tight-sleeve short coats.

Straight one-piece dresses are made of linen. Swaggar sleeveless sport coats are being worn at all the smart midseason resorts, and this means these new garments are here to stay thru the summer.

The Eaton jacket introduced for spring suits has appeared in bathing suits for summer use.

Brilliant green, appears in some way in suits. It has a wonderful vogue, shown today in Paris, which should indicate the acceptance here of green.

Rich, dark colors are popular in strictly tailored models of silk sweaters, and many of the smartest silk sweaters are made with box plaits and tuxedo fronts of contrasting color.

Waistcoats, the season's feature in suits, are made in many materials, not excepting chambray.

Basket-weave cotton gabardine is a pleasing novelty in wash fabrics that has recently been used for sport blouses.

Very smart are sleeveless slipover silk sweaters that fasten over each shoulder with silk eyelets and buttons. The skirt sections of these sweaters are knitted in a fancy jacquard stitch in contrast with the plain ribs of the upper part.

It is only natural for every one to have special likes and dislikes. Especially is this noticeable regarding the output of the French couturiers. At times the situation seems to be almost political, the women adhering with such ardent tenacity to the work of their favorite designer. This apparent sanction or approval of a creator's ability is no doubt due to some particular chord which this designer strikes that corresponds to a similar vibration on the part of the individual woman. It is, however, a peculiar thing that the characteristics of the creator's ability cling to his production from year to year, so that it is a comparatively easy matter for even the amateur to designate each year the garments and pigeonhole them quite systematically to their originators. It is not unusual to hear a woman say, "I know that it is a Paquin," or "I could tell that was from Worth a mile away," when looking over a collection of models from the other side. The admiration, of course, is most apparent when the costumes are from her pet couturier.

In this respect I will have to admit that I am no different from the rest of the women, inasmuch as I pay homage to a select few, and I have placed Cheruit in the very first place, and this position in my esteem has been retained by the same house for a number of years.

It always seems to me that the costumes created by Cheruit are most wearable, yet most feminine. The latter may possibly be the key to the strong prestige which I feel belongs to the house of Cheruit.

After going over the notes and viewing some of the latest efforts from this house my admiration is just as sincere this year as ever, and while there are many new things offered, all keep to the modified lines, the same as are noticeable from the other houses.

However, Cheruit seems to have found more opportunities to use decoration on his models than some of the houses, for here we find designs carried out on the materials in colored beads and bright lined embroideries, similar to the Japanese embroideries. Not only are the glass beads used for the making of the motifs but wooden beads as well. These, of course, make a more conspicuous ornamentation, as cord regarding the skirt of the tailor-made, which is narrow, even where plaits are used, they are held down either to a foundation or to a tacking. I saw an excellent example of one of these new skirts last week which added in my understanding as to just what the plaits at the sides meant. This suit was of mahogany red woolen material, and the skirt did have a very straight look until one scanned it quite closely, and then the plaits were noticeable, but they were more like accordion plaiting stretched open than the regulation plaits used for woollen material. The jacket was half fitting and reached to the finger tips. One plain but very smart suit recently seen was of navy blue serge having the plain straight skirt with the jacket a little below the finger tips and opened at the front to display a wide vest of fine white broadcloth bound on the edges with a half inch piping of black velvet and buttoned from the chin to the lower edge with large, round pearl buttons. This vest came well below the hip line.

The only real variation in the tailor made appears to be in the length of the jackets, as they are shown all the way from the Eton to the three-quarter lengths, and each seems to be equally good. However, the three-quarter length appears to be more appropriate for fall than for spring, so doubtless a happy medium will be struck for spring and the jacket reaching a little below the hip line will be the favorite.

The tailor-made exacts at all times a smart hat to set it off, and one might just as well go without a new suit unless the hat is taken into consideration. The hat in the illustration is an example of the hat which always is necessary. This is of brown "nigger head" straw, with brim turned up at Hats at all of the leading shops are small, very small, writes one correspondent. The few large ones exploited appear dowdy and demode, and they lack altogether the charm displayed by those of smaller size. All of the small shapes are round, some suggesting the turban and some the Moyaen Age, with its narrow, upturned brim and its low, domed crown. The hats are mignon, natty, jaunty, comely, pretty. Poked ever so slightly to the right, worn with a little veil, its ends tucked neatly away, the modish hat gives one the unmistakable air of being well groomed.

The newest among the new hats show an infinitesimal quantity of trimming. Perhaps the war is responsible for this dearth, but war or no war, the toque is finished and complete in its very bareness, and it shows an elegance and simplicity of which an over-garished chapeau could never be accused.

The best shops really try to rival each other in an endeavor to use as little decoration as possible. Georgette uses a few var-colored roses, the peonies pressed flat and scattered about. Reboux likes tiny anemones, Lewis suggests ragged chrysanthemums, while Lucy et Gaby like flowers made of tulle. This plume he often curls around the crown, allowing it to fall over the ear or to trail down the back of the head.

Caroline Reboux has achieved lovely things in grays and blacks. Her color is apt to be pearl or silver or taupe. Sometimes, to relieve the deadness, she puts a narrow piping of pink or blue or violet or orange about the edge of the brim, which is almost sure to be tiny. Reboux loves orange this season.

Lucy et Gaby feature the use of straw—the plain variety, but of the plicated, wobby, shiny sort. And, as these hats are tailor-made, they are touched only with a band of faille in the brilliancy of color. The sailor hat is only suggested in this straw. It has a Lilliputian brim and a half high crown, and is called "Breton," bidding fair to be popular at the seaside. At this shop ribbons of faille, taffeta, grosgrain, and satin are used, and for color there are beige, Chinese rose, old rose and blue. The ribbon is fringed and placed over the brim, looking like a definite plume.

It is not to be wondered at that these, according to size and placement, can intensify or reduce color values.

CHOOSING THE VEIL FOR THE SPRING CHAPEAU

Selected With Care From the Standpoint of Mesh, Color and Motif, the Veil Attracts and Holds Interest in Best Features of the Countenance.

BY EDITH M. BURTON.

Some women think that a veil is a luxury of dress, a pleasing and effective but unnecessary accessory that can be dispensed with and no great loss of appearance suffered, but other women look upon a veil as a useful article of attire under some particular circumstances of need, but at no time do they realize the intrinsic value of a veil for other than commonly practical purposes.

There are other women who have grasped the fact that a veil is the final and finishing touch of a perfect toilet, but they fail to profit by this exquisite detail of dress because of a poor selection or the incorrect wearing of the veil or more often of both of these shortcomings.

I figure, therefore, that only a very small percentage of women get the real value out of veils, and this knowledge makes me anxious to present to my readers at this psychological season, when March winds are here, my theory of the value of veils. There is always allurements in mystery, and features heavily veiled produce a desire for better acquaintance. We are inclined to look a second time at an artistically veiled face to analyze the picture and decide for ourselves whether it is natural beauty or acquired skill that makes something so lovely to behold. The veil well chosen and properly adjusted attracts and holds interest in the best features of the countenance, and skillfully conceals, or at least does not unpleasantly accentuate unlovely features.

Choose the right veil from the standpoint of color, mesh and motif; arrange it carefully, artistically, and a woman of really plain features and questionable complexion may appear a beauty. Let the opposite procedure take place and the most attractive woman can be made to look ugly and uninteresting.

Time spent in the purchasing of a veil is never wasted, and if the veil desired is of a certain color I advise taking it to the daylight and testing its color value to the complexion, just as you would any other article of dress that must stand the test of daylight and the brilliancy of sunshine. Just the right color of purple, blue or brown is wonderful for certain natural colorings, but any of these colors only a fraction of tone will absolutely mar an otherwise pleasing effect.

Swarthy and colorless complexions are intensified by black and white veils. Certain soft grays and browns and tans are best, and just the right color of blue or purple can be worn, but these should not be brilliant in value. Colorless complexions can wear black in certain meshes, and this brings me to another detail of veils that really should not be separated from color when the becomingness of veils of different character for different types of femininity is under discussion.

The mesh and motif have a decided effect upon the color, but you can readily understand that these, according to size and placement, can intensify or reduce color values.

A vast number of fashionables intend using satin with their new hats. The leading milliners are suggesting faille and taffeta, to be sure, but it is probable that later we will see just as many hats of satin as of silk.

For this reason when the mesh is one color and the motif another a very different and frequently more pleasing effect is obtained than when one chooses a veil in one color; but color combination selections are best in the hands of those women who have already learned how to select and wear veils, and just now they are not a prevailing mode. The woman who is a novice in veil lore should move cautiously in the selection of highly decorative or colorful veils.

Octagon meshes are said by experts in veil designing and manufacturing to be a more kindly shield, a more pleasing form of concealment, a more definite beautifier than veils of flat mesh. It is said that the plain woman of uncertain complexion is better served with an octagon mesh of small or medium proportion than by those of large size.

Scroll motifs are very striking and smart in effect when adjusted properly, but not every woman realizes that time spent on this adjustment is an essential.

The protective value to the skin and hair of even a sheer, open mesh veil is still another item of value to be considered, and then there is the final thought that a veil is the finishing touch to a perfect toilet, the little accessory that gives a woman the desirable appearance of completeness of attire.

A veil gives the impression that a woman is dressed for an occasion; without a veil she frequently suggests the thought that she is just clothed.

There is real economy in buying a good veil that has a name, for as in anything else in which the store or the manufacturer gives his guarantee of honest dealing you have the result of something of which the maker is proud. You get the benefit of careful designing and good manufacturing, which means better artistic effects and better wearing qualities. And just another thought: Buy yardage enough to drape the hat perfectly and to permit of that slight adjustment of the motifs which means success instead of failure in your desire for a smart appearance.

ON BEHALF OF UPPER BERTH. Because of the general disinclination on the part of the public to take upper berths in sleeping cars, these cars often travel without a full complement of passengers. Because in these times, with especially locomotives, it is essential to have passenger trains utilized to full capacity, as well as freight cars, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has issued a circular entitled "Advantages of the Upper Berth" in which the following points in its favor not generally known are given:

The upper berth has a number of advantages over the lower. In the first place, a saving of 20 per cent. in the cost is the temperature more even, and the noise arising from the motion of the cars is less noticeable. The spring mattresses used in the upper berth are more pliable, and are in one's stead instead of two, as in the lower berth. The occupants of upper berths are less likely to be disturbed by people passing thru the aisles. Clothes hangers, mirrors and electric light facilities are provided in upper berths, as well as lower berths. Improved haddens are now being used, and all of the new cars have individual curtains for both upper and lower berths, instead of the long ones.

IT IS only natural for every one to have special likes and dislikes. Especially is this noticeable regarding the output of the French couturiers. At times the situation seems to be almost political, the women adhering with such ardent tenacity to the work of their favorite designer. This apparent sanction or approval of a creator's ability is no doubt due to some particular chord which this designer strikes that corresponds to a similar vibration on the part of the individual woman. It is not unusual to hear a woman say, "I know that it is a Paquin," or "I could tell that was from Worth a mile away," when looking over a collection of models from the other side. The admiration, of course, is most apparent when the costumes are from her pet couturier.

Girls! Make Beauty Cream!

Lemon Juice Whitens Skin

Prepare a quarter pint for few cents and massage face, neck, arms and hands. Try it and see!

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See his tongue is coated; this is a sure sign his little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours the foul waste, the sour bile and grumbling food passes out of the bowels and you have a well-played child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little "California Syrup of Figs" will do the trick, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." It is the only reliable remedy for babies, children of all ages, and for adults. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look for the name on the wrapper. "California Syrup of Figs" is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

Look at tongue! If feverish, bilious, constipated, take no chances.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

The Solution Seems Easy

Accounts of the debate in connection with the consideration of the bill to give the electoral franchise to women made interesting reading. From the point of view of the mere lay mind, the great thinkers of the country seemed to be making such difficult work of a very simple problem. It started off all right when Sir Robert Borden, in speaking on the second reading, said that the measure had been introduced because the government felt that the women were entitled to the franchise on their merits. Then the difficulties began to arise.

One member expressed a doubt as to whether the bill in its present form would give the franchise to the mothers of men who are fighting at the front, and thought that it should be put in such a form as to ensure that these women should get the vote. Another member claimed that under the act, a Canadian woman married to a resident of the United States could not vote, and thought that a woman should not have the right to vote when her husband could not do so. Exception was taken to the clause of the bill requiring a married woman who had lost her status as a British subject by marriage to secure from a judge a certificate that she possessed the right to vote.

"In Quebec," stated another speaker, "you are giving universal suffrage to women, while there is not in Quebec universal manhood suffrage. A man must possess certain qualifications as to property, incomes, etc." And so the discussion went on, opinions being thrown about like the proverbial shuttlecock.

To the lay mind, which is virtually the same in many instances as the primitive mind, the whole thing seems so simple. Why not go along the same old line, treating the population as individuals, and without distinction of men and women. The roll representing those individuals would represent the voters' list—and presto! the work is done.

High Boots and High Prices Unpatriotic

It is from far-off Saskatchewan that we learn that Sir George E. Foster addressed the women's conference at Ottawa on the matter of unnecessary expenditure in dress. Women, returning to Toronto, must have forgotten the admonitions of the veteran adviser, for very little, if anything, of what he said with reference to clothes, found its way into the newspapers of Toronto.

If the Saskatchewan press reports correctly, Sir George was courageous enough to criticize the use of expensive fashion in women's apparel, emphasizing the fact that every unnecessary article was adding to the country's burden. All must agree with our western contemporary, that if our statesman desires to regulate fashion in accordance with reason, he must not go to the women who follow the fashion, but to those people in New York, London and Paris, who set the fashion, and they are usually men. It is easy to concur still further with the view which says, "We can imagine how Sir George E. Foster or any other sensible man would caustically criticize the expensive boots, running up almost to the elbows, as the fashion now is, with silly young women, but the bootmakers would probably say that the boots have to go up to meet the short skirts. What the women who have gone to the conference can do when they return is to express their disapproval of the wasteful and foolish way in which the women are now dressing, and women with self-respect can eschew such fashions."

Regarding footwear, it was foretold two years ago that there was to be a famine in leather, which would make the price of leather boots prohibitive, and for the most part boots of leather would be almost unobtainable. The dearth in leather does not seem to have materialized in any special degree, high boots being the mode, with prices in proportion. High boots are by no means necessary, especially with corresponding prices. Boots, however, are an essential, and may be reckoned among the things included in the high cost of living. Was the leather shortage scare a ruse planned between the leather manufacturers and the makers of fashion? If so, it would seem there ought to be a food controller as well as a food controller in the department that settles prices.

Good Work of Humane Society.

Humane ideas vary in individuals in just exactly the same proportion as one human differs from another. The recent annual meeting of the Toronto Humane Society brings to mind the splendid work that has been going on thru this channel for a number of years, one of its latest developments being the Rest Home for old, worn-out horses and other quadrupeds.

This is real humanity. No one who has ever seen an unfortunate raw-boned skeleton trying to draw a load along slippery city streets but will value the idea that there is a place where the four-footed veteran of labor may receive a pension, to the amount of at least food and comfortable lodging for the years that are still to be his. The hundreds of dogs, cats and rarer animals which, in addition to horses, receive surgical and medical attention during the year, owe the society large thanks, and the law which threatens fine or other punishment for cruelty to "God's Little Beesties," is doubtless largely due to the presence of the Humane Society in the city.

That its influence has not reached out to all, however, is proved in many instances one of which is the statement made by a veterinary, that there are men who, when they bring an animal upon which it is necessary to perform an operation, ask to have it done without the anaesthetic, because they are too miserable to pay the extra charge. It goes without saying that the veterinary is too humane to follow such a course, and is himself at the loss.

The interests of the horse and dog, important as they are, do not make up the primary good resulting from the dissemination of humane teachings. Their most lasting good is to the community and especially to the children who live in the beneficence of a humane atmosphere. In a school in the United States the work of kindness to animals has been going on systematically for thirty years. The teachings and practice of kindness to animals were inculcated as regularly and probably far more frequently than any science or art on the curriculum, and as a result it is reported that from the records which have been kept it is proved that not one pupil from that school has ever been arrested for a criminal offence.

From all of which it would seem that it is good business for the state, as well as on the part of private enterprise, to give every encouragement to institutions, the business of which is to protect the dumb beast that cannot help themselves, and which have proved themselves on so many occasions to be the best friend of man.

Make the water from the faucet in your own home do the work. I have built a new "1900" water power washing machine. I consider this machine the most wonderful washer ever put on the market. Built of the highest quality selected material, it is as sturdy and durable as a machine can be made. Can be sold at a price within reach of all. I will guarantee that this machine will not tear clothes, break buttons or fray lace, without damage to the goods. It will wash everything from heavy blankets to the finest of the most delicate fabric. It will wash everything with any water faucet in your home, and is started and stopped by simply turning the water on and off. Even although you have a meter, it will do your washing for a trifling expense. It will save 50 per cent. time, money and labor every week. The outfit consists of washer and water motor, and I guarantee the perfect working of each. I also make a full line of hand and electric washers. I will send my machine on 30 days' free trial. You do not need to pay a cent until you are satisfied this washer will do what I say it will. Write to-day for illustrated catalogue. Address me personally.

Speranza Club Works For Patriotic Cause

Organization Gives Entertainments to Men in Military Hospitals and Raises Funds Thru Its Recitals.

"Speranza," the pretty name given to one of the musical combinations of the city known as the "Speranza Club," originated in the inspiration and help given the early members by Miss Hope Morgan, one of Toronto's leading musicians, the word "Speranza" as interpreted meaning "Hope for us."

The club originated with four young girls who, on leaving school, found keeping up their practice to be dull work, so they agreed to meet at their respective homes once a fortnight and play what they had been practicing in the interval. Four additional friends were invited to share in the project next year and so the work continued for six years until in 1905 there were fifteen in the group of friends who met regularly to discuss over a cup of tea the music of the afternoon. There were no officers—except the hostess—during this fairly long interval, this fact being a point in favor as the delays and discussions that sometimes grow out of too strong adherence to constitution. However, this is an aside. To get back to our "mountain."

At the end of the sixth year it was decided to ask Miss Morgan who had just returned from Europe, after giving concert engagements in Paris and London, to assist in drawing up a "code of laws" and to help in launching out into a larger field of action. The development proved a success inspired by the high ideals of Miss Morgan, and before the war came shattering membership to a great extent, many of the musicians attained a degree of proficiency that placed them in the ranks of recognized professionals.

Daughters of the Empire Arranging Notable Loan Exhibit.

GREAT WAR SCENES

Two Striking Canvasses by Arthur Merton Hazard Arranged for.

The Toronto Daughters of the Empire are devoting somewhat from the beaten path in arranging an "art exhibit" in April at the Roberts' Art Gallery on Yonge street. The John G. Howard Chapter will have the loan of Arthur Merton Hazard's celebrated masterpiece "Conscience," which he recently returned from a very successful tour in England and the loan of his new picture: "Not Unto Death, But Life Everlasting."

These are the first American war pictures, the former—"Conscience"—was painted when the United States was "of a neutral state of mind" but even so, the artist has told the story of the real feelings of the nation in a very subtle manner, but gave only offense to a certain American class, whose voice has since been silenced, with the nation joining hands with the allies, that a world Democracy might live.

The departure of the picture was kept secret for a long while, some even deeming it destroyed, but after the president's message to the world, it's whereabouts was made known. It is a wonderful picture to look at, its lesson driven home, not only to the individual, terrible in its force, but, pre-eminently, a troubled conscience, which in generations to come this picture will live, teaching its lesson, "Honor above all."

The question was asked, "Why the withered arm of the culprit is not shown?" but the artist says, "Art has a license and in painting the withered arm it would detract from the spiritual lesson and place the picture on the material plane."

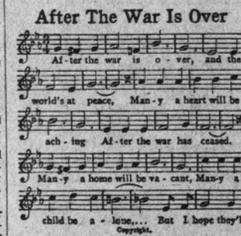

Tribute to Canadians. The second picture is a beautiful tribute, from the brush of an American artist, to our Canadian heroes. The picture is simplicity itself of the busy dawn of No Man's Land, a Canadian signaller and "The Christ." So ethereal are the faces that one wonders if the artist was inspired "Peace" with its attributes comes to one in viewing this picture. Mr. Hazard's name will live thru the coming generations by the perfect symbolism in art he has given as in these two pictures: "The Lowest Depths," "The Highest Heights."

NEW SONG HIT

Quaint Waltz Ballad Called "After the War is Over."

A new song is ringing through the States, written by a Canadian, called "After the War is Over," which is being brought back into the Dominion and becoming universally popular. It is rather different from the ordinary popular song, insofar that it is no fiery battle song, although possessing a true loyal and patriotic sentiment. Following is a part of the chorus, clipped from a copy just received:

Probably the reason of the song's popularity is because its entire compass is only one octave in range, without high notes, but possessing a very effective climax.

and war lords and his thoughts, hazily depicted in the atmosphere—on the one side—and on the other our fine Canadian manhood, having paid the supreme sacrifice, that truth and honor and democracy might live, with the bending, blessing Christ hazily depicted in the atmosphere over him. The first thought in giving the exhibition was a money-making scheme for the war relief funds of the L.O.D.E., but so impressed the minds of the chapter that only a "free-will offering" will be asked, as it is the wish of all that everyone may feel free to see the exhibit. Artist, students and critics will be on hand, but the chapter wishes to go farther and see that all, high and low, whose hearts have been wrung in sorrow in this war, may find the comfort these pictures bring.

About the Painter. Mr. Hazard is an aristocratic Bostonian of the old school, exclusive to a degree, but since war has been declared he and his beautiful wife have entered heart and soul into war work; their large income and the proceeds of his brush are freely used for patriotic purposes. Mrs. Hazard, whom Bostonians say has the voice of a Jenny Lind, sings now often in public for patriotic purposes, and is always greeted with crowded houses.

Mr. Hazard is principal of the Boston School of Art, a pupil of Rene Prinet, Albert Besnard and Henri Blanc of Paris; won the M. C. M. A. medal in 1892.

He is the foremost portrait painter of the United States, and his portraits of governors are seen in the state house, Boston; the court house, Baltimore, and many other notable places and private collections.

CLUB NOTES

The National Council of Women meets in Bradford early in June.

At the recent meeting of the executive of the National Council of Women it was decided to ask the federal government to allow all vacant lands within town and city boundaries to be available in order to help production.

The executive of the Ontario Women's Citizens' Association have decided to ask for a change in the Homestead Act in order that a greater number of women might qualify as homesteaders.

The sum of $187 was cleared from the presentation of the play, "La Comedie de la Femme Muette," given at Forester's Hall by the Franco-British Aid Society. The blinded soldiers in the hospital of Fergagoire, Brittany, will be the beneficiaries.

Nursing Sister Helen Sibbald, who returned from overseas with the late contingents of troops, is home on a short furlough, with her parents at the Maplemount apartments, Church street. Miss Sibbald, who is a graduate of St. Michael's Hospital, went overseas with the Toronto University hospital unit and has seen service in France, Salonica and England. She is the only nurse who returned to Toronto with the first arrivals of men.

Mrs. John B. Murphy, who was in Europe when the war broke out, gave an interesting address on "The Hohenzollerns" in the Margaret Eaton Hall in aid of the Givens street military hospital.

A distinctive medal has been struck for the women's auxiliaries of the G.W.V.A. The medallion is hung from a bar in blue with the inscription "Women's Auxiliary" inset. It is of sterling silver, and about the size in blue type are the letters "G.W.V.A."

The American Women's Club celebrated their first year of existence by a luncheon, at which Mrs. Martin, wife of the American ambassador, out the birthday cake and Mrs. John Garvin recited to the accompaniment of Miss Trotter. An interesting history of the founding and work of the club was given.

Four organizations of women from western Canada applied for affiliation at the recent meeting of the executive of the national council, the names of the applicants being: The United Farm Women of Alberta, the House of Economics Society of Manitoba, the Alberta Women's Institute and the Women Grain Growers of Manitoba.

Under the auspices of the University United Alumnae Association, a movement has been started in Toronto to assist in the memorial to Dr. Garrett Anderson at the New Hospital for Women, London, Eng.

Miss Gladys Wallis, daughter of Mrs. M. E. Wallis of Inglewood, who drows the Toronto Red Cross waste no so efficiently for three years, has gone overseas at the call for ambulance drivers. Miss Wallis was a particularly charming and capable girl, whose devotion to work here speaks for the good she will do in her new field of action.

THE ECONOMICAL AND EASY WAY To keep Your Floors and Furniture Gleaming Like New

O-Cedar Polish makes light of housework. It's fun to clean with it—fun to see things shine like new. Ever try it?

A polish to clean properly must be used in the "wet and dry" method. It must clean—then, it must dry quickly and thoroughly. No sticky, greasy surfaces must be left to gather more dust.

And the "wet and dry" method is the way you must use O-Cedar Polish to get the best results.

Take a wet cloth, sprinkle a few drops of O-Cedar Polish on it—see the velvety lather the water and the Polish make. This lather cleans away the dust and grime, brings out the original grain of the wood; and the clean hard surface is then ready to be polished. Take a dry cloth and rub the surface lightly—see how it catches every sunbeam.

When economy dictates the postponing of new furniture purchases,

THE CARE AND FEEDING OF CHILDREN

By ELINOR MURRAY

COLDS in adults are annoying enough, but what may be "only a little cold" for them may prove a very big cold for the baby. An infection of the nose or throat in a child may extend to the bronchial tubes, or even to the lungs, and result in bronchitis or pneumonia.

Children who are kept indoors, unless the weather is what their mothers deem fine, acquire a great sensitiveness of the mucous membranes. Children need to get out every day, properly protected from sun, wind, rain and snow. They need such an abundance of fresh air that except in the severest storms they may safely play outdoors.

Outdoor children are usually free from colds and other diseases of the respiratory tract. If children must stay indoors they need plenty of fresh air in the house, especially in the bedrooms. The greatest enemy to the outdoor game is wet feet. No matter how careful one is, in the early spring, the water will splash over the rubbers, either accidentally or otherwise, and the feet soon get damp, and a croupy cough results.

It is just means constant attention on mother's part. It never hurts to get wet, the harm comes in allowing the wet things to dry on the body. It is a good plan to change shoes and stockings as soon as they come in from play. It takes time, perhaps, but not nearly so much time or energy as fixing up a cold later.

While it is necessary at all times to keep children dressed sufficiently warm for comfort, overdressing is about as bad for them as not enough clothing.

A child is much more active than an adult, and his heart action is more rapid. So the clothing never should be so heavy as to interfere with his freest movements, nor to cause him to perspire profusely when at play.

When a mother tells Jimmy that he may wear his sweater coat to school instead of an overcoat, I wonder if she knows that a sweater coat to Jimmy is just a coat, not an extra wrap; and so his sweater coat is a shirtwaist or wool jersey, a suit coat AND a sweater coat all in one!

To take off his sweater coat and hang it with his cap is a waste of time and a quite unnecessary procedure. Mothers don't know half the queer and things the seemingly sensible children do in school.

Very, very fortunate is it for children and mothers when the teacher is more than merely an instructor and has an eye to such things as too many clothes, wet feet and flushed faces.

Children who have adenoids and enlarged tonsils suffer from frequent colds, particularly when sleeping, or he suffers from repeated attacks of sore throat or earache, some obstruction in the nose or throat is likely to be present.

The little baby will take cold very, very easily. Some one brings the infection into the house; a cough epidemic is different to control and the cold-sufferer may spread the infection all thru the room where the little one is.

If the mother must share her time with another member of the family who is suffering from grippe, she should never touch the baby until she has scrubbed her hands thoroughly, and put on a big, clean, allover apron.

If the nursing mother herself has a cold, she can tie a handkerchief or napkin over her nose and mouth to protect baby from breathing the fine spray of infectious material, should she sneeze or cough while holding him.

It is very anxious to know what my readers think of the little knitted binder. Such a lot of you got the directions that I would like to know how the work progressed.

THE SPRING TONIC FOR PALE, THIN PEOPLE

If You Want to Gain in Weight and Recover Your Appetite, Energy and Ambition, Try This Well-Known Remedy.

With the passing of winter many people feel weak, depressed and easily tired. The body lacks that vital force and energy which pure blood alone can give. In a word, while not exactly sick, the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon them, and a blood-building, nerve-restoring tonic is needed to give renewed health and energy.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an all-year round blood builder and nerve tonic, but they are especially useful in the spring. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood, and with this new blood returning strength, cheerfulness and good health quickly follows.

If you are pale and sallow, easily tired, or breathless at the least exertion; if your complexion is poor, or if you are troubled with pimples or eruptions, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just what you need to put you right. If you have twinges of rheumatism, are subject to headaches or backaches, if you are irritable or nervous, if your sleep does not refresh you, or your appetite is poor, you need the treatment which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills alone can give—you need the new blood, new health and new energy this medicine always brings.

A COMPLETE WRECK. GAINED IN WEIGHT.
Mrs. C. Forsythe, R. R. No. 2, Fisherville, Ont. says: "At the age of fourteen my daughter Viola was feeling very much run down in the spring. Then she was attacked with whooping cough which left her a complete wreck. She had no appetite, could not sleep well nights and was subject to chills which sometimes kept her in bed for the day. After doctoring steadily, but not apparently getting the least benefit, and I naturally grew very anxious. One of my neighbors suggested giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a box. When she began using the pills she weighed only 87 pounds. Before the box was all gone I sent and got six more boxes, and under their use she constantly grew stronger. Her appetite improved, the color came back to her cheeks, she could sleep well, and feels and looks like a different person, and with this while using the pills she gained 20 pounds in weight."

A SALLOW COMPLEXION.
Miss Gladys Marshall, Chatham, Ont., says: "I suffered from nervousness and my blood was in a very poor condition. My face broke out in pimples and my complexion was very sallow. I took doctors' medicine, but without beneficial results. I was feeling much discouraged when a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I used in all six boxes, and was overjoyed to find that my complexion had become quite clear, pimples had disappeared, my nerves were strengthened and my old-time health and ambition returned. I shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Notwithstanding the increased cost of all drugs, there has been no change in the price of our Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They can be had through any medicine dealer at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, or will be sent on receipt of price by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Isolating Children as Punishment

By MRS. LAURA MILLARD LAURENCE.

When you are yourself again, John. Can we have you back now? Many of the misdeeds, such as teasing, mimicking, showing, snatching and stamping, are easily managed in this simple way.

Careful in Choice of Words. Just before the day, we mothers must be careful in our choice of words for wrong actions. Let us not call all children as misdeeds, or unkind when he is tired. Save that worst word for real wrongs, like snatching, mimicking, showing, snatching and stamping, are easily managed in this simple way.

Does this plan work as well in the home as in the kindergarten? It certainly does, but it must be different managed. Since there is not so much definite work or play going on in the home as in the kindergarten, exclusion has to be more complete to be noticed by the child. That is to say, something more will be necessary than simply having him draw his chair to one side of the room. It must be noticed by yourself, John, until you are ready to be a pleasant companion again.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ROSALIND.

DEAR ROSALIND: I am a young girl. I am in love with a young fellow. He is respectable and I love him very much. He has been with him for about a year and a half. He says he loves me, but I don't know whether he does or not. I have gone with him a lot and he always treated me decent, but I don't know whether he really loves me or not. I have never quarrelled until lately, when one day he was very angry at what I said to him. I said I was sorry, but he didn't heed. I don't know whether he really loves me or not. I have never quarrelled until lately, when one day he was very angry at what I said to him. I said I was sorry, but he didn't heed. I don't know whether he really loves me or not.

EFFECTS OF CLOTHING UPON THE HEALTH

BY THE DOCTOR

Enquiries upon all matters of health addressed to this department will be answered in this column by the author, a regular practising physician.

THERE is scarcely anything that can be said on this subject with which almost everyone of ordinary intelligence is not in some respects conversant. The main objects to be sought in clothing the body are (1) To maintain the temperature and, by preventing the loss of animal heat, to diminish to some extent the demands for food; (2) To allow the chief heat-regulating mechanism, i.e., the evaporation from the skin—so procured with as little hindrance as possible; (3) To allow all muscular action the greatest possible freedom, and to avoid the compression of the body in so far as may be possible; (4) To protect the body from heat and cold, wind and rain.

Probably the most valuable of clothing materials to us, since we live in a variable climate, where there are sudden changes of temperature, is wool. It is an open insulator, and its fibres are held together by a very great protection without impairing ventilation. Proper care of the feet means lessening of chances of lowered vitality, which is an open invitation for colds, nose and throat infections, and general impaired conditions.

Answers to Correspondents. Mrs. F. D. P.—A year ago last January I had chilblains for the first time. These passed until spring, and the trouble has again broken out. Can you suggest a measure of relief. Might add that last winter I bathed my feet in hot alum water every night, and tried all kinds of ointments, but with no success.

Miserable Corns—How to end them

Touchy corns make thousands suffer—on pleasure trips—in business—at home—everywhere.

Until they once try Blue-jay. Then they are corn-free forever.

Painful corns are utterly needless. Science has brought relief. The medicated spot of wax on a Blue-jay Plaster stops pain instantly. Then in 48 hours the corn painlessly comes out.

Harsh liquids are dangerous and messy. Paring may bring infection.

No corn can resist Blue-jay. Yet this way is most gentle.

The chemist of a concern known the world over for its surgical dressings discovered Blue-jay. He studied corns for 25 years.

So with Science's way at your command, no touchy corn need ever bother you again.

Blue-jay Plasters are sold everywhere at drug stores for 25 cents per package. Buy a package now.

End your corn at once and never let one pain again.

I pledge myself in the service of my King and Country to DO MY BEST IN MY DAILY WORK wherever it may be, and to endeavor in every way to make myself A GOOD CITIZEN.

Question—Three-sevenths of a chicken, two-thirds of a cat and go?
Answer—I got you Steve.
Question—If Steve fell in the lake, what would Buster say?
Answer—He'd jump up and down on his knees, and say, 'Buster, Buster, Buster!'

Bunnies and Buttontots greatly enjoyed their Easter game.

The Bunny and The Buttontots

BY BERTHA E. GREEN
often came to see their rabbit friends at Bunnynburg. They were all dancing wildly round him on their short fat legs, and this is what he heard:
A button for your squeal and grunt—Get up upon your legs.
And join us in our merry hunt To see if eggs is eggs.
They popped the bunny, and so glad was he to see his friends, no one of all the Buttontots laughed harder than did Snuffles, at the joke they had played on him.

The Adventures of a Little Canadian Boy

THE DEMON OF THE MARSH
walked quickly along the shore until he came quite near. He was astounded at the size of the birds, in his excitement he stepped on a twig which cracked loudly, and immediately the queer creatures all rushed together in alarm. He beat up in the air and their heads going round and round in a very ludicrous manner. It was not long before they detected the presence of the little Canadian Boy, and two of them swam in his direction. Now, Eric did not like the look of these creatures at all. Their dour faces were grimed, and their beak-like feet twinkled in the air and they were gone. The quickness with which they disappeared under the water was astonishing. In a few moments they reappeared several yards away. And then there broke thro' the evening "H-ha-ha" the weirdest sound— "H-ha-ha" and again, "H-ha-ha-ha!" seemed to echo from every corner of the marsh.

Dear Aunt June: I would like to be a member of your club, so please send me a scrap-book and a badge, I don't know children from any place in Canada could join. I always look for the boys' and girls' page. I remain, yours truly, Maudie Newton. Age 12.

A GOOD EXAMPLE

Dolly's little mother is sometimes rather cross. I've seen her give her curly head a very scornful toss. Now, it isn't well for Dolly such ways and looks to see; Who knows but she will copy them, and then, where should we be?

HORNS

A lad of seven, who had always lived in the city, was visiting his uncle on a farm, as a contributor to The Chicago Tribune. He was much interested in the stock raising and the horns were upon being told, he seemed satisfied. Some one of the cows uttered a long, low "moo." Turned to his uncle for the boy's asked, "Which horn did she blow, Uncle Billy?"

WHY THE MOON LOOKS BAD.

I saw Moon Mother, big and bright, Bring out her baby stars one night To play about the field of sky; She watched them with a careful eye. And then, as plainly as could be, One star looked down and winked at me! It was a naughty star, I think, Because it gave a wicked wink.

much to become a member of the boys' and girls' column. I am sending the drawing to you, and also a badge and a stamp for a badge and scrap-book. I have knitted about 15 pairs of socks for the soldiers. Your loving niece, Elsie Cox.

Dear Aunt June: I have read the boys' and girls' column, and would like to be a member of your club. My father is a soldier, and in this letter you will find a 2c stamp for a badge and scrap-book. I am a little boy, eight years old. Yours sincerely, George Whitehurst, 8 Churchill Ave. (Concluded on Page Seven.)

THOUGHTFUL OF HORSE

The son of a leading manufacturer of Brussels tells the following anecdote of which dates from the first summer of the war: "It had been a hot day and King Albert asked for something to drink. Back of the trenches a man saw a horse drinking and went over and started to pull the bucket down. 'Let the poor animal drink; perhaps it needs it more than I do.' 'It was not until the horse had finished that the king's horse had finished and drank the few drops that remained.

IT DEPENDS.

THE CLASS WANTED.

After her third day at school, says Everybody's Magazine, Pauline was very bright and happy. But then there was the other kind, Marion was careless and untidy. Edward and Alton were disobedient and Pauline was quite the opposite of what you think when you hear her name, and Jamie's eyes were bigger than his stomach. These boys and girls were cross and disagreeable and did naughty things, and when we meet them in a little book again they will be no Sulky side, for all will have learned to shine from Sunny Japas.

THE SUNNY-SULKY BOOK.

Quite enough some little boys and girls are not at all like their little boys and girls. They seem to be of two quite different kinds. The Sunny and the Sulky. There was Johnnie; he was brave and obedient and didn't mind when the boys made fun of him. Gretchen and Susie were kind and thoughtful. Faith was a little Fairy with Hands and Busy-Foot that the Nappyland Fairies loved, and David was a brave Sir True Blue unafraid of the dark. All these dear children were bright and happy. But then there was the other kind, Marion was careless and untidy. Edward and Alton were disobedient and Pauline was quite the opposite of what you think when you hear her name, and Jamie's eyes were bigger than his stomach. These boys and girls were cross and disagreeable and did naughty things, and when we meet them in a little book again they will be no Sulky side, for all will have learned to shine from Sunny Japas.

COOKERY FOR EVERY KITCHEN

In this Department The Sunday World aims to give culinary help particularly useful to housewives under present market conditions. It is conducted by a practical food expert, and all recipes given are tried out in the kitchen suggestions and queries.

BY JEAN BRODIE

The miscellaneous pamphlets, articles, etc., issued by the food controller's office have already made the average housewife so familiar (in theory, anyway), with the value of dried beans as a substitute for meat that I will not bore her with similar details, but, as beans really are a most economical and nourishing article of food, I should like, if it is possible, to undo some of the prejudice which has been caused this winter by there being on the market a large quantity of dried beans of a very inferior grade. I have spoken to a number of housewives who, although they had not in the past made use of either dried peas or beans as a food, yet endeavored to comply with the instructions of the food controller by using both these foods as substitutes for meat, only to find, after an expenditure of time, fuel and money, that the resulting dishes made from dried beans would be so bitter that it could not be eaten. We have used beans in a great variety of dishes for many years and, until the past winter, I cannot remember a dish that was not a palatable success, but since last fall I have purchased at least half a dozen separate lots of these imported from Rangoon. I think the last cause is the most likely one, for there is quite a difference to be found when the inferior article is compared with the "real Canadian." The Canadian beans are very small, round and quite white; when cooked, they become tender, and, although they are while the imported beans are a yellowish-brown color, they are larger and flatter, and even after hours of cooking they retain a tough, indigestible skin and have a strong, distinctly bitter flavor. The imported beans sell at two pounds for twenty-five cents, and fifteen cents per pound, but at this price they are economical as compared with meat. (See table of comparisons.)

Some time ago I read an article in one of the pamphlets issued by the government to the effect that a number of Canadian farmers had appealed to the government for aid in drying their bean crop, as it was spoiling on their hands. I do not know whether the difficulty was attributed to a lack of labor or to a lack of the proper appliances, but whatever it was, it seems a pity that good Canadian grown food should be allowed to spoil while imported food is being used, and it can only be with difficulty that they will ever be persuaded to experiment on "bean" dishes again.

Ask for Canadian.
If you are one of the housewives who wish to use beans extensively in your family, insist on the "real Canadian" article, and on your grocer refunding your money if they cannot be found. For the money expended and the labor entailed, the housewife will find no other dish so delicious and so economical as well as so palatable. The imported dried beans, each good housewife has her own way of baking or boiling the beans, but too frequently she stops at that point and does not utilize the dried legumes several times a week, as might so easily be done. Good seasoning, savory ingredients or a meat flavor added to such a dish makes it tasty, and the food is so substantial that a lack of meat at the same meal is not noticed. Supplemented with a green salad or a fruit dessert, these dishes of beans and peas could be used to great advantage physically and also economically in these days of high prices. Attractive ways of serving foods go far in making them appeal to the family's taste, and time well spent in adding dainty garnishing touches if in so doing the family's preference may be overcome.

Home-Grown Best.
To make sure of a supply of this good, nourishing food, which even in ancient times formed a staple article of diet, the housewife should be encouraged to plant a quantity in her summer garden. I have been told that beans may be grown quite easily, and the small back garden is capable of producing a surprising amount of vegetables. I think, by offering rewards, the younger school children (those too young to work on gardens away from home) might be induced to look after the little garden. Every pound of food grown and consumed represents a pound of food released for overseas.

Speaking of gardens and legumes, have you even eaten scarlet runner beans? There is no more delicious dish to be imagined. Pick the long beans when they are green and tender; slice them on the diagonal; boil them in salted water until tender, and then serve them with a good white sauce. You will regret every vine that was allowed to serve only as a decoration in the past.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS.

Cookery Department, Toronto Sunday World. You ask if I have any other wholesome and economical dishes. I trust I shall not shock your readers if I say sheep's head, but if any reader will try it I think the dish will recommend itself. The most important thing is to have the head split open and thoroughly cleaned.

Celery tops and stalks.
1 small turnip.
1 small onion.
1/2 cup pearl barley.

Method: Soak the head in cold water with a handful of salt thrown in. Take out the brains and tie in a piece of cheesecloth. Clean all the vegetables. Put all in a large pan and cover with cold water. Bring to the boil quickly, take off scum, then boil very gently for two hours or longer. Make a good white sauce; add the brains, celery, turnip and 1 1/2 tablespoons of vinegar, which makes a tasty, piquant sauce.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Anne June: I want to enroll myself as a member of your club. I have joined the Old Mother Nature Club. I would like if you would send me a pin and scrap-book, an enclosure a pin stamp. Yours sincerely, Mildred Clegg.

A Story by Dollie Armstrong.
Long ago there lived a king who had so much money he did not know what to do with it.

He had a daughter who was very wise and beautiful. She loved animals, birds, insects, and especially flowers.

One day the king called his daughter to him and said, "I have a great deal of money, but I do not know what to do with it. I have a great deal of money, but I do not know what to do with it. I have a great deal of money, but I do not know what to do with it."

East and West Come to an Agreement

United Testimony in Favor of Old Time, Tried and Tested Remedy

Quick Action and Certain Results Wherever Gin Pills are Used

In a country so broad as Canada, it is but natural that there should be great diversity of opinion. The interests of one section coming into collision with those of another, give rise to disagreement on occasion. But backache and kidney or bladder trouble are the same in the east as in the west; and the sufferer from lumbago, rheumatism, stone, gravel, or other urinary derangement, who lives on the prairie can sympathize with the man or woman in the Metropolis who is in similar trouble.

And that is why we receive letters from all sections of the Dominion, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico, expressing the wish that all who suffer from similar ailments may learn the remedy.

Perhaps it will be well, first, to state how Gin Pills do their work, and in what cases benefit may be expected from their use.

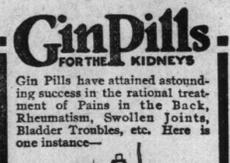

There is a large class of ailments which can be traced to defective kidney action. It is also known that the blood stream from the blood stream all the waste products gathered from the various organs, muscles and tissues in the circulation of the blood through the body.

"I returned home suffering greatly, and did not know what to do. I treated myself with a friend to try Gin Pills. After which I went back to the doctor. He said that the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush, and that they could not take it out without a knife. I returned home and continued to take Gin Pills, as they reduced the pain very much. I did not expect they would reduce the stone, but they did. I passed the stone on October 3rd, and am now a well man and very happy."

"I am sending the stone to you so you can see for yourself what a great work Gin Pills do. I had a second stone, and I have now a well man and very happy."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Gin Pills have attained astounding success in the rational treatment of Pains in the Back, Rheumatism, Swollen Joints, Bladder Troubles, etc. Here is one instance.

Testimony from New York.
"I bought some of your Gin Pills at Victoria, B.C. last September. Your remedy cured me of a kidney ailment which had been with me for two years. I am now a well man and very happy."

Urinary Derangements.
A Pullman Conductor of Buffalo, N.Y., writes:
"I have been a Pullman Conductor on the O.P.R. and Michigan Central during the last three years. I was laid up with intense pains in the groin, a very sore back, and suffered most severely when I tried to urinate. I treated myself with family physician for two months for gravel in the bladder, but it did not do me any benefit. About that time, I met another railroad man who had been similarly afflicted and who had been cured by Gin Pills. I had a box of Gin Pills sent me, and I have now a well man and very happy."

Bladder and Kidney Trouble.
"For twenty years I have been troubled with kidney and bladder trouble, and have been treated by many doctors but found no relief. I bought a box of Gin Pills, and I can say with a happy heart that I am now a well man and very happy."

Bladder and Kidney Trouble.
"I have suffered from lumbago in the whole of my body. I took Gin Pills and they cured me. I took Gin Pills and they cured me. I took Gin Pills and they cured me."

Rheumatism.
"From a Montreal Newspaper Man. I have suffered from rheumatism for five or six years. I also had lumbago in all my limbs. I bought a box of Gin Pills, and I can say with a happy heart that I am now a well man and very happy."

Imitation Puff Paste.
1/2 cup extra finely shredded.
6 oz. shortening.
Baking powder.

Sal.
Four two ounces of shortening, salt, baking powder, and salt flour, to a stiff paste with water. Roll out and spread a thin layer of the pudding both sides and roll out; repeat twice with remaining shortening. Then roll out in a cool oven for an hour, or until wanted. This pastry is good made the day before it is needed, and just as good for fruit pies as for meat.

On Rice Pudding.
I would like to say a little more re Yorkshire pudding. Do you know how thick? Because, if so, you will need the two eggs. The pudding should not be more than a quarter-inch thick. It must be baked on one side and then deftly turned over and under and browned on the top at the same time. In baking the pudding both sides as in the former method. When I had my first gas cooker, I thought it was fine to be able to cook the pudding both sides at once, but I soon found that my pudding was not so good. New beginners will be discouraged, too, with the pudding sticking at first. In Yorkshire a tin is kept specially for that purpose. A new tin is used for the first time, as you might say, until it gets into condition. I bake those in one of those buttered metal layer cakes, about 1 1/2 inches deep, and if you could see the pudding when it is cooking, you would think it was a fireless cooker! You would think it was full—it is puffed up so much. Hoping I have not bored you, I remain, Yours truly, Ella Craig.

Dear Aunt June: I am a little boy and my name is Forbes Thomson. I am ten years old. I like to join your club every week. I like to join your club every week. I like to join your club every week.

Dear Aunt June: I have been an interested reader of your story and Girl Column for some time and would like to join your club. I have signed the pledge and will try my best to keep it. We do not take The Toronto Sunday World ourselves, but a friend sends it to me for me. I do not get it until a week later, and I cannot send any drawings. I am enclosing a three-cent stamp for your little nephew, Forbes Thomson.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily made, cheaply made.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes, and in breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in the throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for coughs, colds, whooping cough, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma or winter cough.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have 16 ounces—a family supply of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated medicinal extract of pine needles and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with directions and do not accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

HEART OF BRITISH EMPIRE

Trafalgar Square Has Been Called the Most English Spot in All London.

Trafalgar square has been called the heart of the British empire, the most truly English spot in London. It is not of Leicester square or of Piccadilly that London Tommy dreams, but of Trafalgar square with the statue of Nelson in the centre. The statue on the slender column is England's best-loved hero. The figure is reared 145 feet in the air with handseer's four lions of bronze at the base.

Many of the most important buildings of the city are grouped around the square. The national gallery, with its art collection, faces the Nelson column. The collection was begun in 1824 and to one of the finest in the world. In the upper part of the square is the Church of Saint Martin-in-the-Field where Queen Elizabeth died. This last bit of information is a bit interesting to the visitor more than the fact that Bacon was christened at the church's altar.

The column stands at the crossing of some of the most famous streets in London. Charles I. marched down Whitehall to his execution. The second branching from the square is the main artery of the city as well as the favorite meeting place.

People, British and foreign, are fondly believed by Londoners to be broad, it is the busiest street in the empire. All of the principal shops and many of the hotels are on this street.

Before the war Trafalgar square was the favorite meeting place of the suffragettes. The lions at the column's foot were frequently the platform from which Mrs. Fankhurst and her daughters addressed the London crowd. The shops along the Strand were frequently given the attention of militant workers, with the result that for a long while most of their windows were boarded and barred.

The Kewpies & Bedtime - ROSE O'NEILL

YOUNG Susie was a plump and dimply dear
Who got up in the morning bloomily;
And all day long her ways were simply dear,
But bedtime overcame her—gloomily.

She teased to sit up, till "half-past," at least—
Said their old clock was two hours fast, at least—
Till presently her mother, tuckered out,
Told her to smooth the brow she'd puckered, out
(And go to bed without any more words!)

At this, she'd drag herself up stairs, my dears,
And now and then she'd skip her prayers, my dears.

At night-time she would grow quite weepy, pets,
And say she wasn't one bit sleepy, pets,
And knew she couldn't sleep a wink all night
But would just lie awake and think all night!

She further said, Why in the dickens she Must go to bed with the old chickens, she Didn't know! (Spoke thus of hens unkindly, Who had for years in breakfast eggs done kindly.)

"People say I went to bed"—Boo-hoo!
"Guess they'd be sad when I'm dead"—Boo-hoo!
(Dear me, such words were best unsaid)
—Boohoo!

Now in a place all still and treezy, dears,
Close by, yet very cool and breezy, dears,
The Kewpies were all snuggling cosily
And drifting into dreamland, rosily.

And Ducky Daddles, too, was huddled there,
Was sweetly, by the Kewpies, cuddled there,
With his fond smile, and yet bow-wow-sily,
The Kewpidoodle kept watch, drop-sily.

The clothes that she'd flung here and there,
you know,
They folded neatly on a chair, you know,
And with their big, bright eyes a twinkle now
Said, "Sue, let's all play Rip Van Winkle now.
We'll close our eyes and do no peeping here
But whistle, when we get to sleeping here.
Then they all went to sleep together, dears—
And in the morning, 'twas fair weather, dears!

And since her eyes were streaming tearfully,
The prudent Merkewps brought their pails with them.

"Drops make the ocean," said they cheerfully,
(Good thing to have when all else fails with them).
Meantime the other Kewps were busy there
And things were growing gay and fizzy there.

The Kewpdee was also bobbing there
Upon a twig, when he heard sobbing there.
And as small Sue moaned on unhelpfully
He stretched his wings, as birds do, happily.
And, bless his heart, sang like a linnet then,
Waking the Kewpies in a minute then.
They'd work to do! Time to begin it, then.
The Cuddlekewps found Susie pouting there
But very soon they had her shouting there.
