C., London, The chairman said this was not, as had been said, the first rally of the campaign, but the association had taken the opportunity presented by the presence in the district of the minister of justice, who had a legion of friends in this part of Canada, to ask him to speak to them on live public topics. Hon. Mr. Mills was a son of the district; they were proud to claim him as their own, and he was sure that when they heard his address they would agree with him that the conduct of the government is such that there can be no doubt that it will again be returned to power at the elections soon to take place.

MR. GEORGE E. CASEY, M. P. The chairman then introduced Mr. Casey, M. P., who was very warmly received. He disciaimed any intention of making a long speech, as he had come with them to listen to the distinguished minister of the crown there present. Mr. Casey referred to his long connection with Elgin as member, he having served the constituency to the best of his ability for 28 years. He pointed out that against their will the people of Ridgetown and neighboring municipalities had been forced out of Bothwell and into West Eligin by the late government, for the purpose of ac plishing the political ruin of Hon. David Mills. That ruin had not been accomplished, for Mr. Mills has remained and is today a powerful factor in the government of the Dominion. Hon. Mr. Mills had been re-elected each recurring contest till 1896, in spite of the gerrymander, and he believed that he was elected then, though the ballots were made to say differently. The opposition majority in the senate has thwarted the present government in carrying out their pledge to undo the gerrymander, but it will undoubtedly undone, and a fair redistribution made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his supporters immediately after the next general election. Mr. Casey proceeded in an admirable address to show by the record of the present administration that the Liberal party is well worthy of public confidence, and he expressed the belief that they would be sustained in the large majority of the constituencies in the general election soon to come off.

HON. DAVID MILLS. Hon. David Mills, who was loudly applauded, spoke as follows: When I accepted office in the present administration, you here presented me with an address in which you expressed for me your personal good-will and your confidence in me as a public man. Since then nearly three years have passed, and it has now become my duty to say something in respect to the am a member, and to show you that it has done nothing to lessen your confidence or diminish the political sympathy which you extended to us as a party when in opposition, or to lessen the political support which you extended to me when I joined the government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier

I do not claim that the present administration has attained to a standard of ideal perfectability. No administration ever does so. There are many things at which a ministry may aim which it finds itself unable to accomplish. New questions of an urgent character are constantly arising, which a ministry eannot postpone, and which other questions to which ministers, as leaders of a party, stand pledged. I think I may fairly claim for the present government that it has made an earnest and honest effort to carry on the affairs of the country in the public interest, and to pursue a policy both legislative and administrative in furtherance of the public welfare.

CHARGES AGAINST MINISTERS. There have been several charges made against ministers, imputing to them a departure from the policy diberately put forward while the Reform party were out of office between 1878 and 1896. I think that if these imputations are carefully investigated and candidly considered, they will be tound to be without any satisfactory foundation. The policy of a party cannot be called into existence at a public meeting. It is not to be learned from expression spoken in the heat of debate and put forward as an ab-

It is intended to obviate mistakes and to put an end to their continuance, and so to provide, as prompttical life. The minister of justice recognized evils which are called into existence by the incapacity or the want of scruple on the part of those whom the work of government at the time may have been intrusted. The policy of the Reform party is to put an end to evils in the state, by providing for them as opportunity occurs appropriate remedies; and so, in order to judge of the propriety of the reform proposed, it is necessary to bear in mind the mischief that such proposal was intended to redress.

EVILS MINIMISED BY TIME. It may well be, in the political life of a country, that, as time advances, the evils which spring mistaken or line of action will become proper less and less important, because in a state in which the vital forces are such The strong, the influence of mistakes for evil diminishes. mischief complained of becomes incorporated with the other institutions of the state so closely that the attempt to remove it may produce more serious evils than can be done by permitting it to remain. We made no mistake when we protested against the matter complained of. We were right in seeking to prevent its being we think so still; but we are ready to admit that the evil has been overshadowed and dwarfed by things useful and good; that it is growing in such close contact with things useful that it | gress was being made in the Australian cannot, it may be, be removed without colonies, in South Africa, and in some the outset, and which could have been readily corrected before they had taken root, may, by the force of circumstances and by the growth of new occupations and new institutions, have lost their original importance, so that their removal may have become wholly unnecessary.

EXPENDITURE. It must never be forgotten that the function of government is not to attempt to make radical changes in the constitution of society itself, but to govern the country as it is. Wise legislation and the vital forces which are ever operating to correct mistakes have also their influence in minimising their evil effects. A great deal has been said in respect to the economy formerly preached, and the extravagance more recently practised by the Reform party since their accession to office. In fact, so much has been said on this subject, and there being some apparent ground for criticism, it is only proper that I should give to these criticisms some consideration. Our opponents say that I suggested at one time that there might be a reduction of several millions a year in the public expenditure. Mr. Foster announced in the House of Commons, during the past session, that I said five millions a year. I never did. I did say on one occasion four millions. I thought at that time it was the proper thing to say under the circumstances, and had the condition of the country in respect to settlement and industrial progress conpolicy of the government of which I tinued as it then was, I should say so still. I was then of opinion that a careful revision of the cost of government and a simplification of its administrative machinery were needed. I thought that if the public business were conducted on business principles a marked reduction in expenditure could be effected. I was referring at the time to expenditure on capital account, as well as to the expenditure properly chargeable to revenue. I thought economic reform could be carried out without impairing the efficiency of the public service. It seemed to me that owing to the large emigration of our people, and the small accession to our numbers from abroad, such a line of public policy was called for in the public interest, and if the circumstances of the country had continued as they then were, I would still be of the same mind. What was then the proper thing to do is not the proper thing to do at this moment. PROSPERITY WORKS CHANGES.

Our commerce has grown more, by many millions, during the past three years, than during the whole eighteen years immediately preceding. Our revenue has risen in four years from $34,000,000 to upwards of $49,000,000, under the lower rate of taxation. Large enterprises have been projected, and what would in a period of stagnation have been an improvident course to take, during a period of activity becomes a policy of prudence and wise forethought. There has been no change of policy on our part, but there have been very great changes in the circumstances of the country, and those changes have made it the duty of

When the circumstances of the country showed that the addition to our population by immigration was less than the loss we sustained by the emigration of our own native population, it was clear to the mind of every thoughtful man that economy was ur-gently called for. What I had in my mind, when I spoke of diminishing the public burdens, was both to lessen the ordinary expenses of government and the expenditure upon large enterprises, for which there was at the time no

BAD FOR HARD TIMES.

The government, for many years. had expended large sums on capital account in the construction of railways. Large land grants were made and large bonuses in money were given to enterprises that had not behind them any pressure arising from the progress of settlement or the development of mines, or indeed public necessities of any kind. Charters were given for the construction of railways in parts of the Northwest Territories where scarcely anybody had gone, and where there were no prospects of settlements being formed at an early day. Charters were obtained seemingly for no other purpose than to allow those who received them-accompanied as they were with promised aid in land and money-to hawk them among capitalists in New York and London, with the sole object of securing a fortune out of the proposed enterprises. Let anyone consider the number of railway projects that were started by the friends of those who were politically opposed to us, apart from the Canadian-Pacific Railway. Let him say how much the country profited by these various projects. Occasionally a line of railway was projected in a direction at variance with the commercial requirements of the districts through which it passes, and which must be in into the interior. We have also had time superseded by other lines, to the a large immigration from Southeastern time superseded by other lines, to the loss of those who put their money in the first enterprise. It is clear to anywho will make himself familiar with the subject that there was no well considered plan of railway colonization prepared by the government to meet the requirements of the great prairies of the Northwest.

FAILURE OF LAST GOVERNMENT. It is only necessary to consider certain facts in order to see there was something very defective in the policy of those who preceded us in office, and who had the sole direction of affairs for nearly nineteen years. This was surely a sufficient time to afford a full and fair trial to the policy of those to whom the public interests were committed. What was the result? That in population and in wealth the growth of the country fell far below what was anticipated. Agricultural lands shrank in value. Every kind of farm product diminished in price, and at the end of this long period the leaders of the Conservative party retired from office with all their confident predictions unfulfilled; for the shrinkage of the value of real estate was in excess of all the sums spent by the government in public enterprise, supplemented by all the investments made by private parties planted in our soil. We said, it is a investments made by private parties tare; that an enemy hath done this; and public corporations, the paternity of which was due to the encouragement which the government had given. It is an important question to consider why it was that while great profor all these years well nigh at a colonization within which hundreds of miles of railway were built and millions of dollars expended, and where immigration was aided by grants from the public treasury, was there so little return for the efforts put forward. though the attention of our political opponents has again and again been called to these matters, they have never been able to give, from their own point of view, any satisfactory explanation for the tremendous failure that characterized their regime. They have spoken of the stagnation of commercial enterprise; of the little growth that took place during this period in the great industrial states of Christendom; but these excuses are all beside the question, as they declared that their policy would make the prosperity of Canada wholly independent of the prosperity of any other state, although the facts show that the prosperity of Great Britain herself, notwithstanding the very large emigration from the country from year to year, both in wealth and in population, was relatively greatthan in Canada during this period of time.

OUTSIDE INFLUENCES NOT RE-

SPONSIBLE. The stringency in the financial world and the depression of trade elsewhere. do not explain the facts. We had a stagnation of trade in this country and elsewhere from 1874 to 1879, far more severe than any that marked any subsequent period. The cities of the United States for the time ceased to grow: large manufacturing establishments were there closed, the laborers were supported by charity or migrated from the cities to the west, and abandoned the pursuits in which they had been before employed. So that our customers felt the stringency of the times no less than we did ourselves. Since then no such retrograde movement elsewhere has been shown, yet the commerce of Canada during the long period that I have mentioned was well nigh stationary. An attempt was made to make the census support the policy of restriction. Statistics were furnished that were altogether unreliable, but notwithstanding all that was done in this way, the policy of our predecessors was unvindicated. It was incapable of vindication. Neither in regard to the growth of commerce, nor in the colonization of the country, could anything be found to uphold the policy which had been pursued. PROFITABLE EXPENDITURES

WARRANTED. Between 1872 and 1878 a large number of Mennonites and Icelanders came to Canada and settled in Manitoba and the Territories; but since then, until the present government came into office there has been indeed but little to show that any considerable numbers from the continent of Europe found their way into the unoccupied possessions of this country, though efforts were made to secure them. Our opponents said, all that could be done was done in this way, and our reply was that there was nothing done to justify the expenditure that had been made from the public treasury with a view of securing the occupation of the waste lands of Canada. We did not say, we never said, that if adequate results could be shown form the moneys expended on railway enterprise, on public works, on improv ing the highways of commerce, and on securing immigration, that these expenditures ought not to be made. But we did say that, looking at the results. they ought not to have been made, and that the government could accomplish results equally satisfactory and conduct public affairs with much greater

THE RETURNING TIDE. There have been a very large number of Canadians who settled in the United States a few years ago who have returned, to become permanent settlers in Canada. There have been a large number of natives of the United States who have come with them, and who go to swell the aggregate of our population. We have had many thousands from Galicia, in Austria, who have come into our Northwest country, who have taken possession of the land, who are anxious to become Canadians, in language, in habit, and in their notions of government. They have come hither to better their condition. They are content with the country. They admire the freedom which our institutions secure to them, and they ardently desire to become better informed in all that relates to the public affairs of this country. They are, by habit and training, agriculturists; they are content with agricultural life. So far as there has yet been an opportunity of judging, in respect to them, they are proving a thrifty population. I believe large numbers of them can still be secured as settlers in this country, and, in my opinion, it is of great moment that the tens of thousands who are ready to come hither to better their condition, upon the favorable reports that have been made to them by their countrymen who have preceded them, ought to be encouraged to come. They will assist in maintaining the government; they will make it possible to lighten the burdens of taxation, and they will give additional security and strength to the country, by settling those portions extending from the border to a distance of hundreds of miles Russia-the Doukhobors, who, in their industrial habits, in their religious tendencies, and in their exemplary moral conduct, give promise of being, in every way, a beneficial factor added to our original population. The conduct of Russia towards portions of her population has given us the Mennonites, the Doukhobors, and promises to give us a large addition to our population from Finland. The Finns are a Teutonic race; they are lovers of constitutional government. They are hardy, industrious, courageous and enterprising; and, in my opinion, this country will be singularly fortunate if, in addition to the two great streams from the continent that are flowing in the direction of Canada, it can add this third one to the other two, and so contribute, at an early date, to make a great and substantial addition to the population of Canada.

See with whalt rapidity these people of almost every European nationality and tongue, have been transformed into American citizens. In most instances all those under thirty years of age at the time of their immigration become thoroughly Americanized during their lifetime. The influence of the American press, the American school, of American thought, the discharge of municipal and other local duties-all awaken new lines of thought, call into existence new activities, and transform them from being European foreigners practically into an indiscriminate portion of the American population. It is true that the adoption of a high pro- | BRIGHT OUTLOOK IN THE NORTHtective tariff-which has concentrated many of the foreign population into the cities who formerly went abroad into the rual districts-has, in some degree. there checked the process of transfor mation, because it has practically made each nationality in the large cities a distinct community, speaking their own language and perpetuating the forms of life and habits of thought they have brought across the Atlantic with them. I cannot conceive anything that would be more disastrous to this country than a successful attempt to check the immigration which is now proceeding. I have been in several of our newer districts of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, and although we have added to our population many thousands during the past and present years. I find that these settlements form but mere specks upon the immense area of territory which this country holds in trust, under Providence, for the benefit of men who may come hither to settle it, and to make it the home for millions of Canadians. I say Canadians, because the power of transforming the foreign population under free institutions into Canadians, is a power that is very great, and will make them not less certainly Canadians than we ourselves are. For the most part, the people come amongst us are not those carrying with them the institutions and the literature, well as the language, of the country of their birth. They are people who were discontented in their own country, and who have come hither to enjoy greater freedom, more material comforts, and to become possessed of greater privileges, which they highly value, and which were denied to them economy—that the money that was mother tongue, to learn that of Eng-

It must not be forgotten that these things have more to do with making the foreign population who settle in this country good citizens, genuine Canadians, than all other causes combined. We have abundance of room in Canada for a population quite as large as that which, at the present time, exists in the United States; and no man can be counted loyal to this country who puts impediments in the way of its settlement. even though vast numbers of these settlers come from the continent of Europe.

WEST.

At the present time we are receiving thirty to forty thousand settlers of a century, and still half of the lands available for agriculture in Canada would be unoccupied. Let anyone travel through Manitoba and the North-west Territories, and let him visit the districts into which the thousands of newcomers of the past two years have gone, and he will see that the settlements which they have made, including those which have been formed by those who have gone thither from the United Kingdom, and from other portions of Canada, and from the United States constitute but mere patches, upon a far more extensive area. We must also bear in mind that there are immense areas fit for settlein Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. The immense possibilities of Columbia, containing as it does 400,000 square riles, with an admirable cli-mate, unlimited mineral resources, as well as no inconsiderable expanse of territory suited to agriculture.

PROSPECTS IN ONTARIO AND QUEBEC.

Recent explorations in the Province of Quebec and in the Province of On- suited for agriculture. tario show that the territory lying beyond the Height of Land, which sep- tion and use of large sections of Lawrence and the Great Lakes from those flowing into the Hudson's Bay, is a country well adapted for agriculture. It is said by those officers who have explored the country that there are not less than 30,000 square miles in each province north of the Height of Land well suited for agricultural settlement. There is good soil, plenty of timber, and fine streams, which contain an abundant supply of fish. Then there is in the Province of Ontario itself the Height of Land which though often sterile and uninviting in appearance, nevertheless contains immense deposits of minerals-iron ore, copper, lead, silver, gold and nickelbesides other mineral products.

This country, which was pronounced at one time a mere ragged edge cut off from the territories of the United States, has an area of very great extent, capable of sustaining a population as large as that of Russia Europe. Instead of being a mere fringe along the American border it country extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and having a depth of several hundred miles, capable of sustaining a hardy and industrious population. It is true that we occupy a higher latitude than our neighbors. Our climate, it may be, is somewhat land, which we speak. They will have more severe, but this is an advantage, and not a disadvantage, from a na-tional point of view. The climate of the country is far less severe than the people of the Mother Country suppose. It is one well adapted to the production and support of a hardy and enterprising race—a people who will receive from the pursuits in which they engage ample reward for their toil; who will live in a country where the climate does not enervate, and if they love justice, and hate falsehood, love industry, and despise idleness, and are loyal to their great priviledges and great opportunities, there is no reason why Canada should not, as a portion of the British Empire, become as powerful, as influential, as any other country upon the American continent.

SELFISH OPPONENTS OF IMMI-GRATION

There are no doubt some people who will cry out against the settlements formed by the Galicians and Doukhobors, but they would equally object to settlements formed from the United Kingdom, from Germany, or Scandinavia. Vast possessions in Canyear, and this number might be in- ada, at one time, were under the jur-creased threefold for the next quarter isdiction of the Hudson's Bay Company. It was their interest to continue the monopoly, and to preserve it as long as they could, as a fur-producing territory. Next you have another class—the ranchers—win also occupy the country in their own interest, and who have practically had placed within their reach an empire for their own use well nigh without charge. It is natural that those who have used for years for ranching purposes immense stretches of prairie, who have had the use of luxuriant meadows, from which hundreds and thousands of tons of hay are obtained, for feeding their stock during the winter season, and which cost them but a mere trifie--it ment beside those unoccupied districts is natural. I say, that those ranchers should object to Galicians and Doukhobors Lecause they happen to be the this country, from an agricultural only people who are trespassers upon point of view, are not at all appreciated by our people, nor are they yet fully have long had the exclusive possesappreciated by the majority of our 1e- sion. All these settlers are producing cattle and grain for exportation. They are the consumers of goods, both domestic and foreign. Their necessities go to swell the revenues of the country, and to essen the burdens of taxation which fall upon each individual. LAWN TENNIS.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., Aug. 29 .-The final match played this morning in the men's handicap singles concluded the 16th annual international tennis tournament here. Today's game was between Sumner Hardy, of San Francisco, and F. B. Alexander, of Princeton. Hardy was picked for a sure winner, as he had beaten Alexander last week rather easily, but the latter was in good form and was right in the game. Score: Men's handicap singles— Final round-F. B. Alexander, Princeton (owe half 30), beat Sumner Hardy, California (owe 30), 6-2, 7-5.

YACHTING. London, Aug. 30.-The Leader prints an interview with Sir Thomas Lipton, in the course of which he said it was impossible that any fixture for an international race should be made as yet. He declared that he would name his new yacht Shamrock, and he denied the report that he intended to make the challenge under the auspices of the Cork club. "Nothing whatever," he asserted, "has yet been decided finally." He felt, however, that he would certainly retire if another challenger should appear in the field. In that event he would give the services of the first Shamrock for trials. FISTIC. THE McCOY-CORBETT FIGHT. New York, Aug. 30 .-- After ineffectual attempts for the past two years to get James J. Corbett and Charles (Kid) McCoy to meet in the ring on the part of different match-makers, Manager Kennedy, of the Twentieth Century A, C., has at last succeeded in bringing together two men who are conceded to be the cleverest and shiftiest artists in the prize-fighting business. Corbett and McCoy are to do bastle tonight at Madison Square Garden under the auspices of the Twentieth Centucy A. C. Corbett and McCoy finished their training for the battle yesterday. McCoy put on the finishing touches at Saratoga, and announced at the conclusion of day's work that he was fit to fight. He weighs ten pounds more than he ever did before, and is satisfied that if he is beaten it will not be due to lack of condition. Corbett, who has been conditioning at Bath Beach, put a few finishing touches to his training yesterday with a little light sparring and bagpunching. The betting on the contest does not appear to be at all lively. On the contrary, the admirers of the pugilists are holding off for a slight advantage in the way of odds. A few wagers have been placed and pugilistic judges are about evenly divided regarding the chances of the two men. At present it is even money. THE SULLIVAN BENEFIT. New York, Aug. 29 .- John L. Sullivan was given a rousing benefit at the 10th R. G., 337. Twentieth Century Club in Madison subscriptions will be a large one. It will be held in trust by a committee, who will invest the money and pay the interest to Sullivan. Among those who appeared in bouts were Peter Maher and Peter Burns, and Gus Ruhlin and Charile Goff. Bob Fitzsianmons and Jeff Thorne, of England, fought a three-round burlesque, and both were counted out by the referee. John L. Sullivan and James J. Jeffries came on for the windup. Sullivan thanked everybody for their kindness to him in a neat little speech. Jeffries did not tespond when called on to eay a few words, but through Joe Humphreys he said he would at all times be ready to defend his title of champion whenever called upon.

London Lacrosse Team Defeated by a Close Margin.

An Afternoon of Sport at Tecumseh Park-The Bicycle Races.

The spectators who visited Tecumseh Park yesterday afternoon to witness the programme of sports provided had no reason to complain of not getting their money's worth. They saw a fast and exciting lacrosse game and four interesting bicycle events, and were is addition entertained with songs and musical specialties by the Brantford coon band. In the lacrosse game, London put up a hard fight, but were defeated by the stick-handlers from the Hello City. The play of the London team was at times individually brilliant, but they showed a woeful deficiency in combination play, in which the visitors excelled. The shooting and catching of the London players were also weak points. Too much cannot be said in praise of Kelleher, who was a tower of strength to the London deafter shot. Had it not been for his brilliant work the score in Brantford's favor would have been much larger. As it was, London was defeated only the Brantford team is champion of its district, and has been playing constantly, while London was out of practice, the showing made by the latter team is very creditable. Both London's goals were scored by Vanderburg. The game was marred by several exhibitions of foul and rough play, and at times it appeared that a mix-up was imminent. Mr. Henry, of Brantford,

I. Finchamp, acted as referee. The line-up of the teams was as follows: Birantford. London. Cameron.....Goal A. Smith Brierly.....PointForrest Allen.....Cover point ... In the triper pursuit rate, both crews worked very hard on the two K. S. Ranjitsinhji's last eleven in- miles, the winners finishing well ahead in 4:41. The winers were F. F. Radway, A. J. Platt and George Weinig, their opopnents being W. Dean, O. Adair and J. Dreaney. O. Adair went half a mile for the track record, held by Harley Davidson. Adair was 3% seconds short of the mark. ROCKLIFFE RANGES

Continuation of the D. R. A. Shooting Matches.

Ottawa, Aug. 30 .- The third day's shooting in the Dominion Rifle Association matches opened with terrible heat, but conditions otherwise favorable to good shooting. The first hour was devoted to the extra series at 600 yards, and then the second range, 600 yards, of the Kirkpatrick was called in. Shortly after starting this range the wind became particularly tricky and scores fell back, several good shots going to pieces. The Western Ontario winners were as follows:

Kirkpatrick match, for teams of six officers, non-coms, and men of all corps; also individual prizes, open to all members of the association—$8, Pte. J. W. Smith, 21st, 60; $6 each, Lieut. J. The wind conditions remained such in the Walker match yesterday that many of the best shots were considerably puzzled, and some bad breaks were made. The winds blew very strong from right to left. Some promising scores of 600 came down at the 800 yards range, although they had an hour of practice on extra series tickets. During this time serge. 32rd, and 48th, Capt. J. E. Hutchinson, 43rd, and put in pos-Lieut. Ogg, 1st B. F. A., put in possibles. There were plenty of men who only fell one or two shots. When the match was called the winds continued right and left, and again some bad breaks were made. Pioneer Moodie, of the 43rd, put in a possible, followed up his 31 with a 34 and took first prize. No comparison of the relative merits of the series compared with last year can be made, as the conditions were changed. Last year ten shots were fired at both ranges; this year only seven. The western scores were:

Walker match, challenge cup, teams and smaller prizes to be won individually, ranges 600 and 800 yards, seven shots-$8, Lieut, J. Ogg, 1st B. F. A., 62; $6 each, Capt. J. Crowe, 30th, 59; Sergt. S. Moral Sentiment in Politics. In recent discussions on public af-airs, one note has been struck quite frequently, a note of warning against the introduction of what are called the sentimental considerations into political affairs. Mr. Gladstone's famous words, 'Are they not our own flesh and blood?" in reference to the masses life being bound up in devotion to his whom he wished to enfranchise, were regarded by many as altogether too sentimental. And the same statesman's treatment of the Boers has been described as a premature attempt to introduce sentiment into displomatic affairs. We do not regard with satisfaction this persistent railing against sentiment, and we do not think that it tends to raise the tone of political life. A bishop of the Church of Englandthe Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of land of plenty. The Chinese have coal Hereford-writing to one of the leading English reviews this month, said: "Even an excellent dignitary of the Church of England has been known to hold that our recent experiences in South Africa furnish a warning lesson to remind us that we should carefully avoid all sentiment in politics; and yet the Book of Common Prayer and the Gospel of Christ are that good Churchman's daily companions in his private life, and he would probably have agreed with Mr. Froude when he said that every generous and living relation between man and man, or men and their country, is sentiment and nothing else."

This writer, to strengthen his protest against the idea that generous

cited by Mr. Lecky to show the com- intervening centuries are contemporparatively fow standards of conduct | aneous in China at present." Lord Salisbury is not given to sentiment, but it cannot be said that his cynical speeches, some of them very ill-timed, do any particular good, or make his own work easier. The fact is, flabby emotionalism is out of place anywhere, but the tone of political discussion can only be elevated by sentiments of justice and generosity and manifestations of courtesy. We shall not make much advance in the Christianizing of public life until we accept Mr. Gladstone's noble statement,"That which is morally wrong cannot be politically right." We must have sentiment of one kind or other. Of course, we may have such sentiments as the Emperor of Germany has been uttering; but those sentiments are not likely to make life sweeter and nobler. We believe that one of the real glories of English political life has been that there has been so much noble sentiment in it. As the bishop from whom we have just quoted well says. "The prophet is needed in every age, because, as a matter of fact, it is through inspiring and uplifting personalities of the prophetic type that every great forward movement in human history is set forward and sustained." Such men as Cobden, Bright and Gladstone had their limitations, and their precise form of policy may not be suited to the needs of today; but we know that with all those men and with many others who have done the noblest work of the Victorian era, their politics was a part of their religion, their speeches touched the heart of the common people and moved the masses of their countrymen, because without affectation or hypocrisy they made their appeal to universal principles of justice.

It is to be hoped that their spirit will not be altogether lost, for if the present reaction against sentiment is carried too far, we shall have trained a generation of cold cynics who will ridicule the spiritual forces, without which no great movement can be carried forward.

John Chinaman and His Forefathers.

The Chinese have no religion in the ordinary sense of the word. Their faith embraced in an ethical system. A future existence is something unknown to and undesired by them. They have no word in their language corresponding to our English, God. Their system of belief is the result of the teachings of their great prophet Confucius, who was born nearly 25 centuries ago. Confucius laid no claim to the supernatural; in his own words he was a "transmitter, not a maker." Regarding worship, his conclusion was that so far as the worship of heaven is concerned, it should be performed by the emperor alone, both for himself and as a representative of the people; but all persons from the emperor down to the meanest of his subjects, should observe the worship of their ancestors. Says one author: "You may preach to a crowd almost anywhere whatever doctrine you please, with little risk of interference or violent interruption; you may ridicule their idolatry or superstition, and if you do it with ability and wit, nothing but good-humored laughter and applause are likely to be evoked, even from those who may be considered most devout; but any attempt to challenge, still less to denounce, the worship of ancestors, will at once be followed by a tumult in which the preacher is not likely to escape scot free."

Filial piety has swallowed up every other form of piety. A man may believe what he likes, but he is not permitted to dishonor his parents when they are alive, still less after they are dead. He lives in the past. His whole

His so-called religion explains to a large extent his extreme conservatism and profound stagnation. It explains why a people who discovered the compass are without commerce; who discovered gunpowder, are without arms, and who discovered movable type are without a press. It also accounts for the fact that such a people suffer frequent and devastating famines in a fields in a single province sufficient to supply the world for centuries; but they have no mines, because the disturbance of the ground might disturb subterranean dragons. They may be said to occupy a middle ground between civilization and barbarism. China has been in a condition of arrested development for nearly twenty centuries, and is now awakening from her long sleep. This awakening process is a troublesome one to a nation of such heterogeneous thought and feeling as exists in China today. The range of thought extends from the sentiment of those too eager for immediate reform to the fanatic resistance by the passionate traditionist. As one writer has stated it: "The and kindly sentiments should be bannineteenth century, A.D., and the ished from politics, mentions two cases | twentieth century, B.C., and all the consequently their own degeneracy, an

Great Show.

Toronto, Aug. 30 .- There was a large attendance at the exhibition yesterday (Children's Day), and the conditions were favorable for the youngsters' outing. The management states that there are more American visitors this year than formerly in the first week. THE PREMIER'S SPEECH AT THE OPENING. The Hon, George W. Ross, in responding to the address of the directors, presented to him on the occasion of his opening the fair, after gracefully acknowledging the appreciative references to his public services, said:

"I am delighted with the pride you feel and the confidence you express is spirit of despondency and doubt as to the possibilities of the great heritage committed to our keeping and the committed the committe there visit this exhibition anyone who still harbors such a doubt I am satisfied that a few hours spent in examining the products here represented of our farms and factories will strengthen confidence in the native energy and skill of the people of Ontario. It would be well, however, to remember that notwithstanding what we have accomplished, we are but on the threshold of the actual achievements within our reach.

CANADA'S AGRICULTURAL WEALTH.

"No one questioss now the superior qualities of the produce of our dairies and our farms. They have obtained a standing in the markets of the world which command the highest price, thanks to the intelligence of those concerned in these industries, and to the stimulating influences of exhibitions such as this. There are still, however, thousands of acres of land yet untilled, and the demand for such articles of food as we are capable of producing is steadily on the increase. When we remember that out of the $620,000,000 worth of food products imported by Great Britain, Canada contributed only 7 per cent, you will see what scope there is for the development of the agricultural wealth

MANUFACTURING POSSIBILITIES "In manufactures, as in agriculture, we have made rapid progress during the last twenty years. No country can be prosperous without varied industries and without so applying its natural resources as to give employment to its own people. When we consider the vast range of mineral products which this country possesses, and the varied productions of our woods and forests, and when we add to this the enormous water power with which nature has provided us, the facilities for making Canada one of the greatest manufacturing countries of the world must be apparent to all. The time has come, in my opinion, when we should make a supreme effort to utilize those natural products in the factories of our own country, when we should endeavor to make our mines subsidiary to iron industries of our own, rather than to aim at the exportation of the ore, and similarly to work up the products of the forests at home. (Applause.) Every farmer, every laborer, and every artisan, to whom employment is thus afforded, becomes a national asset, whose intelligence and skill is made contributory to the wealth and power of Can-ada. You may rest assured that so far as I may be able to contribute to this end during the remainder of my public life, whatever energy I possess shall be, applied in that direction. While it is gratifying to see our export tables enlarged by the sale of natural products, it would be still more gratifying to see them enlarged by the values of such products enhanced by Canadian skill and labor. (Applause.)

THE BOND WITH BRITAIN. "I am glad to notice that with all your enthusiasm for Canada and its incalculable possibilities you do not forget the ties which bind us to the motherland—the only land to which we could or would be bound. Who would not be proud to have any share, be it ever so humble, in her history and traditions? (Applause.) What nation is there into whose institutions she has not breathed a larger measure of freedom? What people is there to whom her name has not been a bulwark of liberty? To be a subject of such a land, and to share in its glory and renown is a privilege in comparison with which Roman citizenship in its Au-gustan days was shadowy and unsub-stantial. Do not tell me that Britain is too aggressive. Had she not been aggressive her sun would have set generations ago. Do not tell me Canadians have no vital interest in the empire. The safety of the empire is our safety, to serve the empire is to serve ourselves.

THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA. "The war in South Africa was not a war for the aggrandizement of the empire, but for the defense of its subjects: a war from which if the nation shrank it would be discredited in the eyes of the whole world. Whatever may be the future of the South African Republic or its misguided leaders, this I do believe, no other event in the history of the empire has ever occurred that has done so much to consolidate its power and strengthen the bonds of colonial affection. Of the part which Canada has played in this struggle we may well be proud. While we deplore the loss of many of our sons, we rejoice that the compact between us and the empire now sealed with blood has an element of strength and durability which coming generations will not soon forget, and that the empire itself, se-cure in the loyalty and devotion of its olonies, will be better able than ever before to assert its influence in the councils of the nations, and to carry on is great mission of extending the bounds of freedom and civilization for the honor of the Anglo-Saxon race and the good of humanity."

I stated at the outset that the policy of a great party seeking to promote the well being of the nation is a matter of growth. It springs from the administration of public affairs, and it is intended to correct abuses which have arisen, and to provide for new circumstances which present themselves in the life of the state. Let me call your attention to the marked difference be tween this country and the United Kingdom. In the United Kingdom there have been abuses to correct, but they are not abuses that either great party in the state created. They are the remains of an ancient order things which the country had wholly outgrown. Take, for instance, the Reform Bill of 1832. It originated not in any wrong which had been done by a political party. It was not undertaken to repair any mischief that was the result of positive legislation. The sovereign, by her prerogative, could, prior to the union of England and hibited. After the union with Scotland this was a prerogative that the crown could not exercise because of the compact between the two nations. Towns and boroughs had fallen into decay and contined to possess the right to send representatives to parliament after the population had disappeared. In some instances the proprietor of a site where a town once stood was entitled to return a representative, and large cities that had grown up after the prerogative had fallen into disuse, were without representation. This was a condition of things that required to be remedied.

REFORMS ACCOMPLISHED. But the reforms which we pledged ourselves to make were reforms to correct abuses that those politically op-posed to us had created. The Dominion Franchise Act and the Gerrymander Act were not inheritance of a past They were recent creations. They owed their existence to the desire of

The reform promised must be accomplished, and when this is done we ied the abuses that we have been called into power to correct. The public cannot but discover that the government of the country, which, for these purposes, they committed to our hands, can be safely left there for the proper conduct of public affairs. Under us the tide of immigration, as I have already pointed out, is flowing towards this country. From many of the great centers of population the unrest produced by misgovernment is announcing to thousands the duty of separat ing themselves from their kindred and country and coming to a land that is still unoccupied. And we trust that those streams of immigration recently begun will increase in dimensions and that millions of acres still unoccupied will be tilled by an industrious and contented population, and will con-tinue to make Canada, under Reform rule, a great and populous country.

The outlook is most satisfactory-the most satisfactory prospect that has presented itself in the whole history of the country, and we trust not only that all Reformers, but that many of our political opponents, seeing the progress and the prosperity that has attended our administration, will not hesitate to subordinate their political prejudices to the supporters of the ministry their votes when an appeal to the country tion for the course taken. The abuses associated with the Franchise Act we Professional Burglars Create a Stamp Famine in St. Joe., Mich.

> St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 30 .- The burglary business here has come to a climax. After robbing everything else in sight, the gang Tuesday night tackled the Federal building. They entered a skylight and lowered themselves down through an elevator shaft to the second floor. They cut a hole two feet square through the floor, and, tearing off a large patch of the steel ceiling, lowered themselves down to the first floor. There they entered the vault, which had just been examined and approved by the government. This vault is said to be one of the finest in the state. The burglars bored a hole the size of a lead pencil and forced the combination. They cleaned the vault out, taking the postoffice money which Mr. Woodruff would have turned over to the government on next Saturday, and Mr. Woodruff's private funds. The amount will exceed $6,000. All of the stamps and postal cards were taken, and for several hours there were no stamps in the city. Postmasters in neighboring towns sent in all the stamps they could spare, and the Chicago postoffice expressed $5,000 worth of stamps to St. Joseph in the morning. It was the smoothest burglary of the year and the fifth in a month. Sheriff and detectives are in a quandary, for there are no clues.

Local Market.

London, Thursday, Aug. 30. Excepting in those places where fruit was being sold, there was an air of apathy about the market square today. The attendance of farmers was not small, bu the number of purchasers was limited. In the offerings nearly all the staples were fairly well represented, with the exception of dressed meats, which were quite scarce. There was also a marked scarcity of butter, and a corresponding upward tendency in prices. There was not a great deal of fruit sold from farmers' wagons, but the dealers offered it in great quantities. The prices were varied. Peaches were selling all the way from 50 to 75 cents. The largest quantities sold for 60 and 65 cents. Plums brought anything between 50 and 70 cents. Some excellent fruit sold for 55 and 65 cents. Pears were slow at 30 cents per basket. Melons were plentiful at 50 and 60 cents per dozen. Prices of vegetables, poultry and hides were unchanged.

PRETTY WEDDING

Was That of Mr. James R. Boyce and Miss Lydia F. Rossiter-It Was Celebrated Last Evening.

One of this summer's prettiest weddings was solemnized at 8 o'clock last evening at the residence of Mr. Frederick Rossiter, of Frances street, the bride being his daughter, Miss Lydia Faircloth, and the groom, Mr. James R. Boyce, bookkeeper at Ald. Gerry's planing mills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Harrison, pastor of the Empress Avenue Methodist Church. The bride was charmingly gowned in white French organdy, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, and carried a bouquet of Bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Love Rossiter, and her cousin, Miss Ella Robinson, who also were attired in white organdy, and carried white asters. The groom was attended by Mr. J. B. Aikenhead, and his cousin, Mr. Murray Gibson, of Brucefield. During the ceremony Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Rose Friend. The house was daintily decorated with wild flowers and evergreens. The wedding luncheon was served upon the lawn in a large marquee that was adorned very beautifully. The bride's table was set for 60 covers. The number and beauty of the presents that were received by the young couple testified to their popularity, and to the esteem in which their many friends hold them. Those that the groom received from his employer and fellow-workmen were particularly handsome. The groom's presents to the bridesmaids were beautiful rings, one set with sapphires and diamonds, the other opals and emeralds. This morning Mr. and Mrs. Boyce left for a trip to eastern cities, and when they return they will make their home at No. 158 Wharncliffe road, South London.

Day's Daring Deed

An Errand of Mercy Shows a London

Writing to the Woodstock Sentinel. Pte. Victor Odlum, of that town, one of the returned warriors, has this to say of one of the London boys: "On the same train on which we arrived came a fourth member of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Joe Day, of B company. Describing him, we might say that he is fair-haired, is a soldier, a moralist, a hero and an Englishman the last but not by any means the least.

"To prove that he is a hero the following story will go a long way. On the mbrning of the 18th of February, at Paardeberg, the Canadians were in the firing line. Capt. Arnold, of A company, was amongst the first wound-Four stretcher-bearers picked him up to carry him to the rear, but about a mile away at the hospital tents. Johnson, of B company, first volunteered, but Day sprang up and was off like a shot.
"Through the storm of bullets, past line after line of soldiers stretched out in extended order, he tore; reached Dr. Fiset, delivered his message, received word in reply that the doctor could not leave his post, and then calmly turned round to walk back through that grim fire to the company which he had left.

"A walk of a mile through whizzing bullets cannot be a pleasant thing. Many a British soldier shouted at Joe to lie down but he sang back, 'A close shave, my bonnie boy,' and walked on. Before he reached the firing line he passed Lieut. Ross, who also told him to get under cover. Three rows ahead lay the firing line, and Day doubled up, found himself amongst the Seaforth Highlanders, picked up a dead soldier's rifle and commenced firing. Shortly after he was shot through the right lung-a very dangerous wound.

"Day is now back in Canada, and is hoping to find a home here. Not a word seems to have been said of his brave action—not a mention made, much less any reward given. Is the V. C. or D. S. M. too much for what

Chicago, Aug. 30 .- Major Leo Rassieur, of St. Louis, was unanimously elected today as commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. School histories used in the public schools of the Southern States were denounced today by the Grand Army as having been written with the purpose of perpetuating in the minds of southern children the sectional preju-dice of the days of "61." Resolutions were adopted calling on the public, in the name of the Grand Army, to banish the books from the schools of the country, and a committee was appointed to carry out the protest. The aid of publishers and historical writers will be solicited. Following is an abstract of Inspector-General M. J. Cummings' report, G. A. BASEBALL.

M. A. C.'S WON.

A splendid five-innings game of baseball was played on the military heights Wednesday evening, when the Memorial Athletic B. B. C. easily defeated the South London Juniors for the second time this season by a score of 6 to 1. The features of the game was Watts' good pitching, striking out eight men and allowing no hits; also the home runs made by Corcoran, the fast center fielder, and Wm. Arthurs, the clever third baseman for the M. A. C. team. Score:

FLYS. The Detroit News of vesterday says: Siever pitched his first game at the park, and his work was high-class throughout. But one run should have been made off him. Siever is crude as a fielder, and will have to have several of the edges worn off to be a success in the company, but there are no doubts about him for 1901. Rvan and Casey afforded him excellent support, and his outfield worked well.

GERMANY'S POSITION. New York, Aug. 30 .- A cablegram to the Tribune from its London correspondent says a good deal of interest has been created by the announcement of an official organ in Berlin that no aggressive or expansionist policy in China would be regarded favorably by the German government. This is taken in some quarters as a sign that the kaiser has abandoned his militant de signs in the far east, outlined in his recent speeches, but the explanation is to be found in the attitude of almost all influential German newspapers outside the official ring. A parliamentary crisis and a refusal of supplies are openly threatened if the administration persists in ambitious projects opposed to the sobriety, common sense business interests of the German peo-

ALL-DAY SESSION

Of U. S. Cabinet Officers-The Chinese Problem Under Discussion.

Washington, Aug. 30. - A special meeting of the cabinet lasting all day yesterday, and broken only by a short recess for luncheon, marked the intense interest the administration feels in the Chinese problem. It was the longest cabinet session of the present life that marked the development of Middlesex county. After the death of her husband Mrs. Stilson came to restatements recently. It is understood that the cabinet has completed preparations of a plan for clearing away much of the uncertainty that now exists as to the future of China and outlined its views in writing. Most of the objects had in view by the president when he made answer to the Chinese Government's appeal, and began the campaign upon Pekin, have also been achieved.

Two others remain to be secured namely, the safeguarding of American interests for the future, and some proper guarantee for indemnification for the expenses of recent operations and losses of American citizens. Some plan by which these objects can be attained by the United States in common with similar objects by the other powers engaged in China is thought feas-

LADY CHO ON ETIQUETTE

China's Polite Code Was Written 2,700 Years Ago.

The standard book of etiquette in China was written by Lady Cho, 2,700 years ago. Lady Cho was the widow of a distinguished literary man of north China, and after his death was faithful to his memory. Her husband's brother was historian of that dynasty, but when his work was half completed he lost his sight. The emperor sent a message to him asking him who could finish his book and the reply was reing 980 men out of employment. It is stated that the closure will be permacapable of doing it. The emperor sent for Lady Cho and she was conducted in the greatest of state to the emperor's palace. There she completed her brother-in-law's work so satisfactorily that it is impossible to tell where the man left off and the woman began. Lady Cho afterward wrote "Instruction for Women and Girls," which has act provision for keeping out Chinese even yet no rival. In the book she immigrants. death. There are chapters on "Instruction of Children by Mothers," "Duty of Daughters to Parents," Duty of Duty of Children to Teachers," "Filial Piety," "Hospitality and How to Receive Women Guests," and directions for caring for clothing, how to put it away at various seasons, how to prepare their husband's food, reverencing their husbands and reverencing their mother-

++++++++++++++++++++ CHAPTER XXX.

At that fearful sound the candle that Margaret carried dropped a second time from her nerveless fingers, and was extinguished as it fell. She staggered weakly against the wall, and stared blankly before her with failing senses. When she had swung that door wide open, the whole of the room was re-vealed to her, and she saw that one corner was inclosed by a sort of iron fence like a cage, perhaps to protect the safe before mentioned.

But standing within this inclosure, his white face pressed close against the iron bars, there was a man!

His dark eyes had a wild, anxious look in them, and he scarcely seemed to breathe, so eagerly had he been watching for the person whom he had heard without. His hair was long and disheveled, his face haggard and worn, his linen soiled and rumpled, and his whole appearance denoting neglect.

As that door had been slowly openhe had stood breathless, immovable; then, as Margaret's face and form came into sight he had thrown up his hands and uttered the startled cry that had so unnerved the young

Standing there and looking before her, it seemed for a while as if she were dying. There was a roaring in her ears, her sight failed her, and she felt as if all life and sense were slipping away from her.

Then she suddenly heard, as if in a dream, yet strangely real and life-like, an earnest, thrilling voice, crying: Margaret, Margaret! you must not faint! Do you hear me? Rouse yourself, my darling; listen-listen!' She raised her falling eyes with a helpless look. She saw that figure in the dim light, with its arms outoutstretched, his manner so eager, almost frenzied, and recognized it, while a wan smile flitted over the colorless lips; still she could not move from the spot where she stood. It was her lover-she knew him. It was Louis Dunbar in the flesh. Still she could only see him dimlythere seemed a veil between him and her. She only heard his voice faintly sound seemed far away. Then all at once her limbs failed her she sank upon her knees to the floor and her head dropped upon a chair that stood near. She knew that she was faint and almost unconscious, yet she tried with all the force of her will to rally her failing energies in obedience to his eager call. "Margie, my white lily, rouse your-lf," he pleaded. "Do you not see that I am a prisoner-that I am locked in behind these cruel bars? If you cannot get to you to do anything for you. For heaven's sake, and the love you bear me, call back your strength and come to me."

Ah, yes, she would, she must; she would not faint, for so much depended upon her! If she should lie there unconscious, the hour she had allowed herself would go by. Annette would come for her, and not finding her, she would doubtless create a terrible excitement in looking for her.

But—oh, it seemed almost beyond her power to do anything to break the power to do anything to break the spell that was upon her-she was so benumbed, so utterly strengthless.

She exerted herself, and wearily raised her head from the chair. She remembered to have heard that rub-bing was good for restoring the circulation, and she began feebly to chafe her hands and arms.

Even the effort helped her; she began to breathe more freely, that terrible sound in her ears grew less, and she could see more distinctly. That loved voice did not sound so far away, for Louis kept talking to her, encouraging her to persist in her ef-forts, though bemoaning the cruel fate that kept him from her. Every moment she was improving; now she could see him quite plainly, and she lifted up her face to him and smiled upon him.

The sight of that sweet, fond smile unnerved him, and, strong man though iron bars and a great/sob escpaed him. That did more for her than all else. Her heart gave a bound that set all her pulses beating once more, and sent the blood coursing naturally in its

"Louis-Louis!" she murmured. "Yes, my darling, it is I. Oh, this dreadful cage!" he cried, almost frantically, and, grasping the bars with his hands, he shook it desperately. It was useless, however; he could barely stir it. "Did you think some terrible thing had happened to me?" he went on. "Did you believe that I was dead? Ah, I can hardy credit the evidence of my senses-I can hardly realize that it is relly you whom I see, and not a delusion of my own brain. How did you get here, Margaret? What providence directed your footsteps hither, and how dared you come alone at such an hour? Oh, dearest, have you not strength to come to me? Come and sit in this chair close beside me, and let me put by hands between these bars and take yours. I will warm them; will chafe them for you, and that will impart new strength to you."

Margaret helped herself to her feet by the aid of the chair beside her, and tottered to the one he had indicated, says: With regard to the czar's rum-and sank wearily into it. Louis threw himself upon his knees, thrust his hands forth from his cage, and, grasping hers, began to rub them as vigorously as circumstances would permit

"These dear hands! how icy cold they are!" he said, tenderly, "and how I have longed for a touch of them during these endless weeks Ah, I cannot understand at all, how you, of all people, should come to me in this extremity: Are you better, dear? But wait! -how stupid of me!-I have some water here.'

Who? Arthur Aspinwall?" "Yes. How came you to suspect You shall know by and by-but the time, please?"

"Twenty minutes past eight." "Ah! I have only a half-hour, then, for it must have been nearly eight when I reached here: but the first thing to consider is how to get you out of this place," Margaret returned, while she viewed the strong bars between them, with dismay. "If you have a key to fit that padlock on the corner, I can be free in less than two minutes," Louis answered. directing her attention to the fasten-

She went to get them, having left them in the door, but he knew instantly that they would be of no use. 'No, neither of them will fit," he gloomily.

"What shall we do, then," she asked, growing pale and looking deeply distressed, for she could well see there was no other way of getting out, except that of unlocking the gate. Each of those massive bars extended from floor to ceiling, into which they were embedded, while a strong band of braced them about midway. Louis thought a few moments, then "We can do nothing tonight, dear, that is very evident; I must remain here at least another day, or until you can bring me the means of release. But I can go and tell papa, he will notify the police, and you can thus be liberated immediately," Margaret said, eagerly.

Again her lover was silent for several moments.

To Be Literally Buried Alive for the First Year of His Life Imprisonment.

New York, Aug. 30. - A cablegram from Milan says the sentence passed upon Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert, means one year of solitary confinement in a secret cell, six feet long by three wide, dark, with a plank for a bed and bread and water once every 24 hours as a diet. Absolute silence is enforced rigorously. If he breaks the rule he is placed in a straight-jacket, in irons, or in the "straight bed." The year must be spent also without work, books, writing materials or tobacco. Few prisoners complete the year of solitude; they either go mad or die.
