HAVE PASSED MATRIC EXAMS.

List Was Announced Today--Some Have Been Starred in Certain Subjects.

The following list contains the names of the candidates who were successful in whole or in part on the pass junior matriculation examinations. Normal entrance for matriculation, have also been considered in the results.

GRANTED NEW TRIAL

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Neilson is in receipt of a communication from the Minister of Justice notifying him that Jesse Hammond, in the provincial jail, whose sentence was to take place on Thursday next, has been granted a new trial. Hammond was convicted at Saskatoon of child murder.

OTHER CANDIDATES

In group I, are given the names of those who have passed on at least nine of the papers required for complete matriculation, and have obtained the minimum required on the whole examination. They have therefore failed in not more than three papers. This fact will be shown on their certificates. In order to complete their matriculations they must pass in all the remaining papers at one examination, the standard for pass being 40 per cent. of the marks assigned to each paper.

HONOR JUNIOR MATRICULATION

Local News

THE PROBS

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—Pressure is low along the St. Lawrence Valley and in the southwest States and high in the western provinces. Thunderstorms attended by heavy rains have occurred almost generally from the peninsula of Ontario to western Quebec, while in the west the weather has been cool and showery.

Moderate to fresh variable winds, fair this afternoon and to-night. Sunday—Mostly fair, but some local showers or thunderstorms.

Temperature—Temperature for the last 24 hours. Highest 85, lowest 65. For the same date last year, highest 76, lowest 53.

Acknowledged—The treasurer of the Brant Sanatorium begs to acknowledge with thanks the sum of fifty dollars, being proceeds of literary recitals held by Misses McGaw, Jones and Jackson, pupils of Miss Squire.

Died in Hamilton—Mrs. James Jones, 48 years of age, died at the residence of her brother, Joseph Lahey, 85 Catherine Street north yesterday. Mr. William Lahey C. P. R. agent of this city is a brother of the deceased.

Early Closing—Recently the hardware clerks petitioned the hardware merchants to have the stores closed at 9.30. The merchants agreed, and the stores are now being closed at the hour requested.

Information Requested—The city clerk received a communication from V. R. Coon of Detroit, a contractor, requesting information re. railway construction in Brantford. He had the nerve to ask if there was a street railway in Brantford.

Rain Much Needed—The farmers of this community did not mind the lightning and thunder this morning because rain accompanied the electricity. The storm is not reported to have done any damage locally, but the rain is said to have been a blessing. From all over the county, reports came in last week that things were drying up very rapidly. To-day's downfall might dampen the excursion spirit somewhat but it came in time.

Inspector Returns—County School Inspector Standing returned last night from attending the conference of inspectors held at the O. A. C. Guelph, during last week. Topics pertaining to the special problems of the rural school were discussed by various speakers. Mr. W. C. Good, Paris Road, and Mr. Otto Herrold of the Bow Park Farm were the speakers from Brant County. Mr. Standing expressed himself this morning as being highly pleased with the conference.

Soft Ball—The first game of the new softball schedule was played between the G. S. & M. and Beaver teams last evening, resulting in a win for the G. S. & M. by a score of 7 to 1. The game was a pitchers' battle for seven innings, when Simmons weakened and the windmill boys showed two runs across followed by four in the 8th, which put the game on ice. Score by innings: G. S. & M. 000000010-1; Batteries—Simmons and Sears; McQuinn and Dowling.

The Noble Six Hundred—Six hundred souls took in the shops excursion this morning to Detroit over the T. H. & B. and M.C.R. The train pulled out of the Market street south station sharp at 7 o'clock, and onward sped the "bargain-hunting 600," who anticipated when they arrive in the City of the Straits that there will be knocked-down prices. To the left of them—$100 to 98c, to the left of them—and two for a quarter all around them. The proceeds of the excursion after all expenses have been paid will go to the Children's Aid Society.

Somewhat of a Miracle—Last evening about 5.30 a young man by the name of Williams, riding a motor cycle down Dalhousie St., at a fast rate had a narrow escape from being seriously injured and probably killed at the Clarence St. crossing of the Grand Trunk Railway. The passenger train for Tilsonburg was crossing or about to cross Dalhousie St. when it was noticed by Williams who attempted to turn his machine south on Clarence St. When the train was stopped the machine was lying under a coach, although not across the rail. Williams in some manner escaped without injury. The machine was not broken.

Heard at a Party—Hostess—Won't you sing something for us, Clara? Young woman (modestly)—Well, I'll try. Hostess—Yes, do try, at any rate.

Rumor Denied—PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man., Aug. 9.—Rumors emanating from Moosejaw to the effect that Hon. Arthur Meighen, the new Solicitor-General, would take up his residence in Moosejaw and practice law there, also contesting one of the nearby seats in the provincial House, were denied here by Mr. Meighen.

With the City Police

Nineteen foreigners, mostly Russians, claimed that the Grant Campbell Co., who are contractors on the L. E. & N. Ry., did not pay them their just wages. These men collectively took a contract to do a certain amount of work at so much per square yard. The contract runs to Oct. 15, and the men were afraid they would get no pay until that date. An amount was settled upon and the men will most likely go back to work.

The bachalian knights held the boards at the police court this morning, and Magistrate Livingston disposed of no less than twelve who were imbibing too freely in wines, and spirits, among the number being a billed man named John Stewart and John Burns, who was disorderly. There was also one vagrant, James Taylor, arraigned. Taylor was remanded in order to get a chance to go to work.

VENEZUELA SENDS ARMY OF 7,000 MEN AGAINST CASTRO.

VENEZUELAN ARTILLERY

General Cipriano Castro, in his revolutionary campaign to overthrow the Gomez administration and to reorganize the Presidency of Venezuela, has under his command, according to the latest advices received here, about 12,000 men.

General Castro is reported to have been received enthusiastically by the people when he landed at Coro, in the State of Falcon. He is now said to be marching against Barquisimeto, the capital of the State of Lara, at the head of a force estimated to total 4,000 men.

An army of seven thousand men, comprising three brigades, divided into seven regiments of infantry and one of artillery, left Caracas to operate against the rebel followers of General Cipriano Castro.

President Juan Vicente Gomez will leave the capital and lead the army to Maracay, on the railroad, fifty miles southwest of Caracas. In his absence Dr. Jose Gil Fortoul, President of the Federal Council, will act as President of the Republic.

CRYSTAL PALACE IS SAVED TO THE ENGLISH NATION

Million Raised to Keep Report Out of the Hands of Speculators.

THE LONDON TIMES SUCCEEDED

Great Newspaper Took Only a Fortnight to Complete Required Fund.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The historic pleasure resort known as the Crystal Palace, which was erected by the late Queen Victoria, is to be preserved in perpetuity to the English nation. This announcement, coming after repeated threatenings that the entire building, occupying 16 acres, with 100,000 square feet of exhibition grounds, together with a surrounding park of 200 acres, was to be sold to the highest bidder, has caused the greatest jubilation to thousands who visit the palace annually to witness the great football and cricket contests that take place on the best kept grounds in the kingdom.

Field for 100,000 Spectators

The Crystal Palace combines the characteristics of Madison Square Garden and Van Courtlandt park, being a sort of permanent exhibition center situated half an hour from Charing Cross at Sydenham. Ten thousand tons of iron and 600 tons of glass were used in its erection. Its football fields accommodate over 100,000 spectators. It was at the Crystal Palace that the American exhibition, which was held when some 3,000,000 people visited the park between May and September.

Two years ago a conference was held at the Mansion House under the chairmanship of the Lord Mayor of London, when means were discussed for preserving for the nation this magnificent playground. It was hoped to raise $1,150,000 to save the palace and grounds from being handed over to the building speculators. An appeal was made to the public for subscriptions, but only a disappointing response resulted.

But in spite of these gifts Sir David Burnett, the lord mayor, was still short of the necessary amount. Accordingly on June 30, this year, he made an appeal to the London Times, requesting that great newspaper, contrary to its established policy, to open a subscription and so raise the required balance.

Times Takes It Up.
June 30 the public appeal was made in the Times, and exactly 14 days later the newspaper was able to announce that the desired amount of $1,150,000 had been subscribed.

Among the chief helpers of the fund was Richard Burbridge, managing director of Harrod's stores, which claim to be the largest in the world, not excepting the great department stores in New York or Chicago. Mr. Burbridge telephoned the lord mayor to learn how the fund was progressing, and learning that a certain sum must be immediately forthcoming to secure the donation of the "private citizen," he at once sent his check for $12,500 in addition to the large amounts already collected in his store.

The identity of the "private citizen" is causing much speculation. It is announced that he is not a member of the houses of lords or of the house of commons, nor is he a newspaper proprietor.

It is hoped that further subscriptions will still be forthcoming which will go toward an endowment fund for the Crystal Palace, which has not been a paying concern except on rare and special occasions, although its weekly display of fireworks, its athletic events, and the world famous Handel festival are visited by thousands.

pedigree pigs and took many prizes. When he ascended the throne he came into possession of all of King Edward's farming stock, and since then as well as one of the largest breeders and exhibitors in the kingdom. In Windsor the King owns a cluster where the shorthorn herd is kept. It is an extremely profitable investment, the herd sometimes producing as much as $5000 a year in prizes, there are also farms at Windsor where the King breeds Herefords and Detsas, and there are pedigree Jerseys and dairy shorthorns at the royal dairy farm, as well as a flock of 300 hair-bred ewes for breeding fat lambs, and a small farm where cattle are reared especially for the fat stock exhibitions. The dairy farm contains 60 cows, which are milked every day to supply the households of Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace.

It is said that the King takes even a livelier interest in his Sandringham farms than in those at Windsor. King Edward spent much time and money upon his cattle there, and the shorthorn herd which he left to King George at Sandringham produced the famous yearling bull which took all the British prizes in 1896, and was then sold to a South American millionaire for $100,000 like $6000.

KING'S HEIFER WINS BIG PRIZE OF BRISTOL FAIR

George V. Celebrates His Victory With Royal Festivities.

WOULD LIKE TO BE FARMER

is Delighted When Villagers Call Him "The Squire of Norfolk."

LONDON, Aug. 9.—King George is the proudest and happiest farmer in all England, having won a number of prizes at the Royal Agricultural Show just held in Bristol. He infinitely prefers the role of farmer to that of king, and devotes all the time he can to his private estates, especially to the farms at Windsor and Sandringham.

In Bristol his roan shorthorn heifer Windsor Belle took the championship for a close contest. It was the king's busiest month of the year, with numerous important London engagements. In addition to the religious tour of eight days through the industrial centres of Lancashire, according to the program arranged by Lord Derby. Yet he took time to go to Bristol, and indeed insisted that any plans made for him should not interfere with this engagement. He confessed that he was not acting from any high sense of public duty, but he thought he was entitled to have the pleasure of a few hours with the farmers of the west country.

Windsor Belle belongs to the pedigree shorthorn herd which was established in 1853 by the prince consort on the Shaw farm close to Windsor Castle. It includes now about 70 head of cattle. Windsor Belle has taken several minor prizes before, but nothing so important as the Bristol prize. The king greedily devoured the telegram announcing it at the close of the show, and there was a great celebration in Windsor that night.

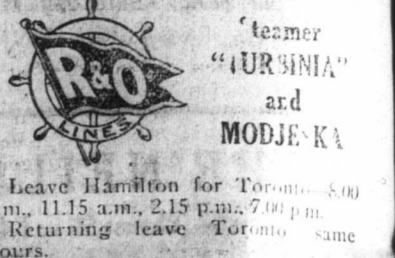

As Prince of Wales he devoted himself exclusively to the exhibition of

LORD NEWTON'S SCHEME TO KILL USURY IN ENGLAND

Would Compel All Money-Lenders to Trade Under Their Real Names.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—No one who has lived long in London at what is known here as a "good address," can fail to be impressed by the fact that the English aristocracy is the most philanthropic in the world. It is just fitting to lend you money, without security and at a ridiculously low rate of interest. Hardly a post arrives without a letter offering any sum from $25 to $25,000 on your note of hand alone, and if you happen to have a both or death or engagement or any other expensive emergency on your family, your letter-box is fairly choked with missives on thick cream paper begging you to accept a small loan.

If the Bill which has been introduced in the House of Lords by Lord Newton and which has passed its second reading, becomes law, there will be a great change in the significance of these attractive letters. Lord Newton has set himself to deal with the professional money-lending evil, one of the most difficult and persistent in England to-day; and the method which he had adopted is publicity.

His Bill would compel every money-lender to use his own name in all correspondence, and, furthermore, would forbid him to send circulars to anyone who had not asked for them. Newspaper advertising, under their own names, would be permitted to money-lenders.

The extent to which aristocratic names are used by these human parasites is astounding. An amusing reference to this state of affairs was made a few days ago by Lord Newton in the House of Lords.

"Moses and Aaron," he said, "trading as Crewe and Lansdowne, should be compelled to disclose their identity. A money-lender sent a circular to a daughter of mine, under twenty-one years of age, offering to lend her $20,000 in bank notes, unknown to me."

to me. He gave the name of 'Harnsworth, Limited,' and turned out to be named 'Levine.' Alleges One Peer in the Business.

That sometimes, however, a plebeian name is used to cover the identity of the aristocrat was admitted by Lord Newton in the same speech, when he said:

"One of the most insistent people sending out these circulars is the representative of a noble Lord, who is a member of this House. Therefore, if this Bill passes, it is possible that some interesting disclosures may be made. It may possibly be a consolation to some unfortunate young man when paying 150 per cent. to discover that instead of paying this exorbitant interest to some Semite plebeian, he is really in debt to some patrician of distinguished and ancient lineage."

No one has succeeded yet in identifying the Shylock peer. If he was present at Lord Newton's speech he had not the courage to vote against the Bill.

The evil with which Lord Newton has set himself to deal is one which has puzzled English law-makers for generations. It is hard to protect an adult fool from the consequences of his folly, and the minor fool is already protected.

It is admitted, too, that the money-lender has a certain legitimate sphere. There are plenty of people in good positions who are sometimes urgently in need of money and to whom the professional money-lender is a God-send. They have no gilt-edged securities on which they could raise money from their bankers and they do not care to borrow from their friends. They are willing to pay high rates for temporary accommodation, know perfectly well what they are doing and are usually able to drive a fair enough bargain.

It is not such customers, however, that the touting money-lender is keen on securing. The young man who needs money urgently to conceal an escapade from his father, the girl who has lost heavily at bridge and fears disgrace if she does not pay, the bank manager who has "borrowed" for a filer on the market that has gone wrong and is faced with prison if he cannot make good the deficiency—these are the customers in whom the money-lender delights and whom he makes pay "through the nose" for his services. Then the country clergyman and the widow or spinster in a small town who find themselves temporarily embarrassed, too often are caught by the alluring letters which are sent broadcast, and sometimes fail to extricate themselves before they have repaid three or four times the sum borrowed.

As a rule the victims seldom dare to resist Shylock's demands in the courts for that means the exposure of irregularities which was the reason for the loan. When they do the judges usually reduce the claim to repayment of the principal, and interest at 60 per cent. per annum, holding that 60 per cent. is fair remuneration for the risk undertaken.

Even this, however, is taken advantage of by the lenders while dealing with inexperienced people. How this is done was told to me the other day by a London County Judge who continually has suits against small borrowers in his court. He cited a typical example which came before him the other day in which a small shopkeeper was tempted by an alluring letter to apply for a loan.

The circular stated that fifteen monthly payments of £1 13s 4d—about $8.33—would pay off a bill or promissory note for £25—$125. This looked, of course, like a philanthropic transaction, in which no interest was charged.

When the time came for an interview, however, it was carefully explained to the borrower that he would only receive £17—$85—for his note for £25, but that this deduction only represented about 30 per cent. interest on the loan, while the courts allowed the tradesman believed what was told him and concluded the bargain.

"Now," said my friend, the Judge "let us see what happens. The bor-

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Belleville, N.S., Canada.—"I doctored for ten years for female troubles and did not get well. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I write now to tell you that I am cured. You can publish my letter as a testimonial."

Mrs. SUZANNE BABINE, Belleville, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Another Woman Recovers.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me, or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."

Mrs. WILLIAM H. GILL, No. 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ower has the use of £17 for one month only, at the end of which he pays £1 13s 4d. This loan is for one month, when a second instalment reduced it to £13 13s. 4d. and so on. When all these sums are added together, we find that he has had the use of £95 6s 8d for one month, which is equivalent to the use of £7 9s 0d for a year. But he has paid £8 for the accommodation which, of course, works out at more than 100 per cent."

Use Stage Girls as Their Decoys.

It is said that the London money-lenders are not content with alluring irregulars to entrap their victims. There are said to be regular gangs working in the West End Clubs, who fasten on a young and foolish son of wealthy parents, introduce him to a stage girl, who is well-paid for her services, and who runs him heavily into debt for jewels, dresses, etc., which are supplied by other members of the gang.

If possible, he is persuaded to gamble, and when he is at his wit's end or money, he is introduced to the principal of the gang, a money-lender, who, of course, drives a hard bargain, catching the end of his tether, his family usually pays up to save its honor.

One of the most notorious of London money-lenders was the late Sam Lewis, who left an immense fortune when he died, much of which eventually came to London charities, on the death of the widow. Lewis made a specialty of breeding wealthy young scions of aristocracy, and he was referred to by Lord Newton, who declared that a young relative of his fell into Lewis' clutches, and only got out by paying more than three times what he had borrowed. Sam Lewis, however, was regarded as one of the straightest money-lenders of his day in London, and cases are on record in ordinary commercial rates of interest in cases of real hardship.

One of the most iniquitous phases of the money-lending evil is what may be termed the money-lenders' intelligence service. I know of a case in which a money-lender actually approached a bank manager and offered him a handsome commission if he would supply the names of customers of the bank which had overdrawn their accounts or were in difficulties. In this case the offer was indignantly refused, but there can be no doubt that in others it has been accepted. The "outing" letters too, which are the psychological instrument to be the result of mere coincidence.

KITCHENER TIRED OF EGYPTIAN POST

May Return to London After Two Years Hard Service for Great Britain.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Lord Kitchener, of Khartoum, is tired of playing the part of Pharaoh. For over two years the greatest soldier in Europe has been building roads and dams and ditches in Egypt and generally cleaning up the Egyptian. His customary thoroughness and masterliness have produced results that would take an ordinary man a lifetime to achieve. Now Lord Kitchener is tired of working more than keeping up his long career for war. And it is frequent the wit of the man and the ingenuity of the Government to bind him the right kind of a job.

The man who made the Sudan British and stamped out the Turco war back in London, his presence in the British capital is scarcely noticed by the public because, true to his early principles, he avoids the publicity which he genuinely hates. Yet he has a hold over public respect and public opinion possessed by no other soldier or sailor.

The average man implicitly believes in Kitchener. If the country were seriously threatened with war all eyes would be turned towards this man who rarely ever makes a speech and who carries favor neither with the Court nor with the mob.

Lord Roberts, the soldier idol of his country, has lost his hold by open speeches and incursions into politics. His agitation for universal service and his meetings and letters denouncing the Government's military policy have dimmed the laurels of Kabul and Kandahar.

The character and customs of the British capital have changed completely since the days of Waterloo, but the people still demand a soldier of the type of Wellington whose attitude towards his fellow countrymen was: "Damn the public!"

In sympathy with the public, in this sentiment Kitchener is certainly in the right. He has been made a Viscount and a Field-Marshal; he has received $400,000 in special grants from Parliament for his services, yet he has never been known to express any particular gratitude for these little tokens of esteem. He is a regularly supposed to regard all politicians as mountebanks selected by electors who deserve all they get.

The man who now holds what to some extent corresponds with the office of Commander-in-Chief of the British Army is the Field-Marshal Sir John French, who, since 1911, has been Chief of the Imperial General Staff. A brilliant cavalry officer, who started life by being a midshipman in the Navy he lacks the personality and experience which are required in popular trust.

Even in appearance he is handicapped. He is short, but not so short that, like Roberts, his diminutive stature becomes a national delight. He is inclined to be fat; he is genial, and, unlike his sister, a militant suffragist, he invariably observes the decorum of a normal life. He has never been in supreme command during war, although his various commands during the South African campaign showed that he possessed no little military genius. His opinion upon Army matters carries small weight on the Continent, but his selection to supreme command in the event of England being threatened would bring no sense of security to the timid taxpayer. Scarcely any other General now on the active list has any reputation worth mentioning.

Would Command the Country's Confidence.

Walking about London in a straw hat and very ordinary civilian clothes is the one man who would instantaneously command the confidence of the country. Lord Kitchener is fatter than he was and quite grey, but all, massive figure and stern, rugged face attract attention wherever he goes. Men and women with no idea

WITH BRANT AVE. BOY SCOUTS

The Brant Avenue boy scouts are having a great time on the shores of Lake Erie at the Elms near Dunnville, and the parents of the lads won't know they browned up progeny when they return home. The boys are doing everything in the swimming, fishing and boating line, besides becoming scoutmaster masters in camp life. A concert on Tuesday evening enlivened matters, the concert having been given by visitors, Commissioner A. A. McFarlane is an expected visitor on Sunday. Not a single accident or unpleasant mishap thus far marred the outing.

The following members of the troop are attending camp: D. T. Williamson, Scout Master; Douglas Jones, Assistant Scout Master; Eugene Force, Troop Leader; Hugh Middleton, Patrol Leader; Beaver; Valentine Force, patrol leader; Curlews; Nelles Silverthorn, patrol leader; Ravens; William Sloan, Corporal; Beavers; Alex Brown, Corporal; Curlews; Burton Schultz, Scout; Ralph Williamson, Drummer; Keith Middleton, Scout; B. Kitchen, Scout; Lloyd Booth, Scout; Herman Watson, Scout; George Brown, Scout; Earl Wittner, Scout; Frank Schmidlin, Scout; Norman Armstrong, Scout; Donald Williamson, Scout; Russell Sweet, Bugler.

Headquarters Patrol The Headquarters Patrol will parade at the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday and Wednesday nights at 7:30 sharp. Uniforms will not be worn, but flags and bicycles will be required.

Further notice re Scout rally at Hamilton on August 14th has been received at Headquarters, and contains the following information: Troops participating should plan to arrive in Hamilton by 9:30 a.m. Any troops or patrols will be welcome and given the use of Scout Headquarters in Hamilton during the day. No meals will be provided, the visiting Scouts having to supply their own rations and transportation. As several of Brantford's strongest troops will be in camp at this time, and a large number of Scouts are out of the city on their holidays, no effort will be made to send a large contingent, but a representative troop at least will be in attendance from Brantford.

Wellington St. Church troop leaves for camp at Port Colborne on Monday morning. The camp site will be the same as last year, and the Scouts anticipate a fine time while in camp.

Scout Commissioner Macfarlan has just received a letter from Scoutmaster D. T. Williamson, who is in camp at the Elms, Lake Erie. Mr. Williamson has 20 Scouts under canvas, and they are delighted with their surroundings and enjoying every minute of the time. The Commissioner leaves to-day to spend several days in camp with them. City troops are working hard at present in the various branches of Scouter; and Grace Church troop certainly leads the way. Just six weeks ago the senior patrol attached to this troop set out to gain the King's Scout Badge, and within the next week the entire nine Scouts will have qualified for the same. This feat is all the greater considering the fact that several of the Scouts have learned to swim the 50 yards necessary before this badge can be gained within the last six weeks. Scoutmaster J. E. Bentham is to be congratulated on the progress which his Scouts are making. Industrial Commissioner C. Emerson returned this morning from a city in the State of Michigan, where he spent a couple of days in company with the officials of two firms, who are considering the advisability of opening up branches in Canada. Mr. Emerson says that the prospects of the concerns opening up branches here are bright.

"Company" Coming?

Perhaps not just now, but Thanksgiving and Christmas are not far off, and you are sure to have visitors. And the children will be wanting to ask their friends "to stay to tea" quite often as the Fall draws on. Let them do it and be proud to have visitors at your table. Get one of our

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The members of the Tutela Women's Institute held their August meeting at the home of Mrs. Lawson Pawcett, River Road, Newport. A large number of ladies were present. Roll call was answered by recipes for nut and fruit salads, nearly all present answering by her favorite salad recipe.

A discussion on canning and pickling was led by Mrs. Fred Tomlinson and Mrs. L. Fitzgerald. All present took part by giving their most successful method of putting away the summer fruits, etc.

All present very much enjoyed the vocal numbers given by Miss Oughtred and the piano solo by Miss Burdill.

The meeting closed by all joining in singing God Save the King, after which all enjoyed the usual social chat over the tea.

The next meeting will be held the first Tuesday in September at the home of Mrs. R. R. Birkett. Miss Carrow will give a paper on The Laws of Canada regarding women. Roll call will be answered by which law would you change. All ladies very cordially invited.

Red Rowe is proving a good man on the bases. About all he needs now is really effective pitching. The holding of the club is quite to the standard.

Amby Kane will not likely be in any pasturing in the league year again. When spoken to yesterday he said he had made his mind up. It is more than likely, however, that he will be back in the league next year.

There should be good crowd on Monday, when London plays. It would please a lot of Brant fans to have the Cockneys set a couple of games. At any rate hand will enliven things during afternoon performance.

There is no getting away from suspicion that Ottawa and Le are no respecters of the salary. This is absolutely the surest way to wreck the Canadian League an quickest way; and it seems reasonable that a solemn oath must be in each case that such and such the true salaries being paid.

The Red Sox are doing better say the despatches, but the have yet to be reversed to give genuine satisfaction to local. The club apparently is well off in every department except pitcher and on Monday there should change in this regard, with and Davis due to report on Mo.

Buffalo News—Tim Jordan is on folding, but away off on the Beck should be given a chance old position now and then now.

Use Charms on Sick Babies Follies of the Poor in London

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Remarkable revelations concerning the life of London's poor are contained in the annual report of Dr. Thomas, the medical officer of health for Finsbury. Their social customs, superstitions and ideas of baby's diet, make a strange chapter in the record of human ignorance, as the following extracts from the report serve to show.

In a family where the father was a casual laborer the mother had kept the home together for many months by pawning things. She owned her husband's shirts and trousers for 6s cents and spent the money as follows:

- Tea dust ..... 4
- Sugar ..... 4
- Condensed Milk ..... 4
- Oleomargarine ..... 4
- Cool ..... 9
- Gas ..... 9
- Potatoes ..... 2
- Sausages ..... 8
- Bread ..... 11
- Tobacco and cigarette papers ..... 3
- Borrowed money repaid ..... 4
- Dawn Ticket ..... 2
- Paid woman for pawning clothes ..... 1

The superstitions of the poor are many and curious. One father thought that next to good food there was nothing like a day in the cattle market to cure a suffering baby. He put this theory into practice, taking an infant once weekly to the market.

A woman had twins. One died and the other wasted and got rapidly worse until the mother on the suggestion of a neighbor put a large doll in bed with it. From this time the mother started, it immediately began to improve.

"Dolls often cure babies," said the woman, "especially when doctors have no hope and give them up."

The weighing centres where babies can be examined and weighed and their mothers advised, have to contend with the difficulty that in some instances mothers will not bring their babies because they were told that it is unlucky to have a ba-weighed until it is a year old. Dr. Thomas says: "In the slums it is not uncommon to find that fathers contribute little or nothing towards the support of their wives and children. An occasional father is found who has not given his wife a single penny since their marriage.

The babies' diet in Finsbury according to the report include current cake, bath buns, patent biscuits, boiled bread, boiled potatoes, chipped potatoes, dry oatmeal, gruel, fried fish, tomatoes, coffee and apples.

Dr. Thomas cites an instance of a baby seven months old, which placed in an empty Covent garden fruit basket by its mothers, stall in Market street, was eating chipped potatoes and sucking a piece of fried fish.

As an instance of what he politely calls the "stress of room accommodation in the borough," Dr. Thomas gives a tabular statement of the occupation on each floor of two houses in the same street. Both houses contained to rooms and 66 people lived in them.

ALFRED DOUGLAS SOON TO SPEAK OUT IN A BOOK

He Will Tell His Real Relations With Oscar Wilde

HEIR IS MUCH CODDLED BABE

Author Granville, English Tolstoy, Is Convicted of Bigamy and Swindling.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Alfred Douglas is going to speak out. The man, who as Oscar Wilde's most intimate friend knew him better than anybody else ever did and whose name since Wilde's downfall has been coupled with his in evil notoriety. He is going to tell the full story of their acquaintance in a book, which when published, is likely to provide one of the biggest literary sensations of recent years.

This book, which its author declares, will reveal Wilde in an entirely new light, will be asserted, the first biography of Wilde that has been written by one who had his confidence, or whom, by the remotest chance, would have been selected by him as his Boswell. Douglas makes some pretty severe comments on the administration of Oscar Wilde's literary estate by a writer, who, according to Douglas, constituted himself Wilde's executor without a shadow of authorization from Wilde, who left no will.

The Camoys Heir

According to present arrangements Lord and Lady Camoys' heir is to be christened by special license at the London house his parents took some time ago from the Russian woman who has since become the wife of the Czar's chamberlain and now resides in St. Petersburg.

Some of the most exquisite frocks ever made for a baby were ordered by Lady Camoys for the important infant, most of the lace having been made in convents where the workers are experts. One a mass of point de Venise, had the lawn especially woven for it. With it were supplied the most fascinating little lace "shoes" and miniature hand-knitted silk socks, into which are worked a coronet.

So far Lady Camoys is very little known in general British society as when she came here as a bride she had to go directly into mourning for her father. It is a succession of house parties at Stonor Park during the early autumn.

Queen Becoming Stylish

Queen Mary really is becoming more up-to-date in her attire. The other day when she was opening the new university buildings for women in Regent's Park she wore a skirt which was comparatively tight though she had vowed never in the world to give up pleats and fullness. The good looks of the queen are a matter of general comment. Always a fine woman, though her warmest admirers never regarded her as handsome, this season she has positively developed good looks. Some account for this in the fact that she is so happy. Every day she gives more and more the idea that she is at last in her element absolutely.

It was the Duchess of Portland, who was one of the best friends of the animal world, who put the queen against even wearing imitation osprey in her hats. Hitherto she hardly ever donned a hat that was not decorated with the imitation though, of course, principally she could never be induced to wear the real. The duchess pointed out to the queen that nobody among the ordinary public would believe that a woman so exalted a position would wear an imitation, so the queen promptly abandoned it.

Author Hosken in Trouble

It is rather an odd and not too highly a coincidence, that, just as we have been hearing from Russia that several of Tolstoy's favorite proteges have gone more or less to the dogs, a gift writer in this country who was known as "The English Tolstoy" should have been shown up in court as an out-and-out bad lot, and eventually sentenced to 15 months' hard labor.

The writer in question was known

Queen Mary Enjoys Flattery She's Just Like Other Women

LONDON, Aug. 9.—"The titular and cherished head of the womanhood of England," is the well-turned sentence in which Earl Rosebery referred to Queen Mary at a recent charitable affair. Queen Mary, who is not at all insensible to flattery—what woman is?—blushed at the compliment.

Before declaring formally open the new buildings of the Bedford College for Women in Regent's Park, the queen went over the college, through the laboratories, the library, the cozy bedrooms, studies, and the dining hall. An amusing surprise awaited her in the psychological section. Two white mice who are taking a course in memory training had just been put in a miniature Hampton court maze.

They are nicknamed by the students. Pyramus and Thisbe, because they are inseparable. The sooner they get through the maze the sooner they enjoy a meal.

The queen spent a happy five minutes watching their efforts to get out of the maze, tapping on the glass and exclaiming laughingly, "This way, this way." She did not go until the mice had threaded their way through the maze. Their record time is ten seconds, but this time they lingered on the way.

The queen then became very interested in some white rats whose intuitive faculties are being developed. When she arrived 'one had just learned how to secure a meal by nibbling through a piece of tape that secured a paper cover.

Woman Claims a Miracle Cure Recovers Health Lost Five Years

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Greatly to the astonishment of her friends, Mrs. Jordan, wife of a mechanic of Silverton (Devon) got up and walked after having lain in bed helpless for more than five years. She declared that a miracle had been wrought in her.

She received a message, she says, that "she would be cured." Mrs. Thomas, a visitor from Liverpool, interested in faith cure, prophesied that before she returned to the north Mrs. Jordan would walk again, and bought her a new pair of slippers and placed them at the bedside.

Mrs. Jordan says that a few mornings later her legs began to pulsate. She rose, put on the slippers, and walked into the cottage. Her aged father and sister who had cared for her for the last five years had not risen and she lit the fire and prepared breakfast for them. Her husband was sent for from work, and visitors have flocked to see her.

One in Seven Called by Consumption

A dreadful plague indeed when you comes to be Hosken—and under that name he wrote and published several clever novels. His generosity as a publisher earned him the title of the English Tolstoy, and he was looked on as a man of blameless character.

Yet Granville, or Hosken, was found guilty, on unmistakable evidence of having twice committed bigamy, and of having defrauded two persons of a sum amounting to nearly $20,000.

NO DRINKING MAN NEED DESPAIR

The Neal Cure—Greatest of All Modern Discoveries—Offers a Means of Escape from the Curse of Drink. A cure of the Drink Habit is Guaranteed in Three Days no Matter Whether the Patient is a Hard and Constant Drinker, Social Tippler or Goes on Occasional Sprees.

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a splendid position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers, who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the wash tub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do today?

But this home which was made a hell on earth through strong drink as every drunkard's is—may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as a result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man, physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler, or goes on occasional spees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, through the curse of drink? Then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES, LIBERATORS or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man, physically and mentally, in THREE DAYS' treatment.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him, to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

When Is A Man Drunk Brantford Police Different M Figuring O

"When is a Man Drunk." By the question is somewhat of a consideration one to answer, because it is not only a matter of judgment. Even the policeman's rule Book does not of itself define what constitutes a drunk and improper. It is left entirely with him to decide whether the man is drunk or not. Some people think that it is an easy matter for a policeman to do this. It is not. Some men think that a man is drunk or not, by the amount when a local P.C. taps them on the shoulder and requests the presence of his company at the morning meeting of the Queen-St. Club.

A Drunk. However, notwithstanding that there is not a set rule as to whether a man is drunk or not, it is generally understood that a man is drunk, who under the influence of liquor to such an extent as to be incapable of taking care of himself, either owing to being physically or mentally intoxicated. Furthermore, he is unable to use of the drink if he gives vent to his feelings to such an extent as to be boisterous. Sometimes his indignity is directed towards pugilistic operations. Then again he may wish to be everybody's friend.

An Indian or a black man, even though he is not drunk from the amount at which being drunk is generally looked, is classed as being under the influence of liquor.

An Instance of the Difficulty. As an instance of the difficulty of determining a drunk an occurrence at Colborne St. near the Colborne station of the Grand Trunk Railway may be cited. Residents in the neighborhood seeing a man in what they believed to be a fit, called the balance and he was conveyed to the hospital. Ten minutes after arriving at the institution he got up and walked out—and he didn't pay three dollars, the usual price of a ride in the black maria, which is given by P. C. Blanchard.

When Is A Man Drunk? Brantford Police Have Different Methods In Figuring Out Problems

"When is a Man Drunk?" The question is somewhat of a matter of judgment. Even a man's rule book does not constitute a drunk and it is left entirely to him whether he thinks that it is a matter for a policeman to take notice of.

An Instance of the Difficulty. An instance of the difficulty of determining a drunk an occurrence of the kind near the Coburne station of the Grand Trunk Railway was cited.

Every policeman does not detect a drunk in the same manner. P. C. Smith—the gasoline cop—does not see the sense of smell at all when he is asked to do so.

Then I procured an additional supply and was much gratified at the wonderful good they did me.

Whether it was the fine, honest, straightforward face that inspired confidence or the simple language, which rang true as a silver bell, that made so many people think over this letter, is hard to say. But the fact remains that one hundred and eighty-seven persons have written Mr. Joubert to enquire more fully about 'Fruit-a-tives'.

The Lure of Smuggling Chase of the Counterfeit Diamonds

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

WHEN smugglers smuggle from smugglers the diplomatic art of bilking the customs racket is a distressing, discouraging and interesting over several steamship sailings. Decent rogues invariably trust a confederate who has made a handsome haul to stand loyal to another confederate who has helped to net the surreptitious profits. But the Desbrough counterfeit diamonds case, of which this chronicle treats, was an exception that emphasized the old legislative lobby axiom, "You can buy Senators, but, damn, you can't be sure they'll stay bought at voting time."

Smuggling, as the lexicographers make clear, is the importing or exporting of goods without paying the legal duty. In the Desbrough case an $18,000 diamond necklace was started on a trip from Paris to New York with the secret understanding that Uncle Sam was to be defrauded of his lawful toll on the gems. The smuggler in chief in France, after receiving his full fee in advance for arranging this big duty evasion, stole the necklace from the Desbroughs, his clients, and smuggled it into Germany. It was a deplorable breach of lawbreaking etiquette.

The United States government chased down an $18,000 necklace and fined a lady $5,000. This was the surface result of many weeks' hunting through Europe, Canada and America. It was clever and diligent detective work, as the official memoranda will show. But there was a pretty little inside drama not carried in the Castor Home annals. It was not departmental, so it had no right on the record. Much of it had to do with the arch smuggler of Paris, whom the government's secret service men did not get. Let's start this inside drama fiction fashion, although you may be assured the percentage of narrated fact far outweighs the figment of romance.

The Desbrough Case.
Even a very suspicious person would have found nothing noteworthy in the puffing and circling of the little motor boat Constant in the wake of the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II, as the big vessel entered the Narrows on May 25, 1909, and proceeded in stately slowness toward Quarantine. Nor would the hauling up and down of a green and scarlet pennant that have caused undue notice or comment by the most observant. And, lastly, when Mrs. E. B. Desbrough, the wife of the beautiful woman aboard, uttered a little shriek of not-to-be-dismayed as she leaned over the upper deck rail and pointed to her big Gainsborough hat whirling overhead in the wind, the Kaiser Wilhelm II, docked a tall, keen-eyed, quick-stepping man, passed through the corridor of the Knickerbocker and went into the café. He had the seat and green in his buttonhole. The man of the Constant rose from his seat and advanced.

"Oh, how stupid; there goes my hat overboard," cried Mrs. Desbrough, apparently half alarmed and half amused. "What a shame the big beauty you got in Paris—! I'll get all my hats in a pathetic ladies of her deck group, as if they feared the wetting fact would escape attention."

"Oh, well, it can't be helped. I'll order another by cable. It will be hard to duplicate, but I'll get it. But, dear me, it's so odd the way it blew off; so unexpected. Doesn't seem to be blowing so hard, either. My hatpins must have loosened." And Mrs. Desbrough took but a few minutes to get her hat replaced. "There," cried one excitedly, "there—that man in the little motor boat has picked it up. See, he has it on the seat, shaking the water from it."

Smuggling by Motor Boat.
Sure enough, the solitary man in the boat Constant had picked up the Gainsborough. He puffed closer to the Kaiser Wilhelm. Making a megaphone of his hands he called up the steep side of the big liner—"Shall I leave the hat at the dock for you, madam? Give me your name and you'll find it there when your ship lies."

"Oh, never mind, thank you," answered Mrs. Desbrough, with a nervous little laugh and catch in her voice. "Never mind. It is of no consequence. I'm afraid it's spoiled, anyway."

"It will be no trouble," said the man, gazing with peculiar steadiness at Mrs. Desbrough.

"No, never mind," answered the lady, rather faintly it seemed to her friends. The man in the Constant bowed, raised his hat and turned his boat so as to head for the Staten Island shore. Possibly an overcurious person might have wondered why he had circled in the wake of the Kaiser Wilhelm II until Mrs. Desbrough's hat had blown overboard and had then steered away. Passengers aimlessly watching his departure noted that he picked up the Gainsborough once or twice, turned it over as though idly inspecting it and then laid it on the seat at his side.

Necklace Concealed in Hat.
The Constant made the vicinity of St. George, within an hour. The man tied at a boat house and hurried away without bothering about the big hat. Why should he? It held nothing interesting for him—now. From the lining he had deftly taken a small rubber pouch inlaid so that it would have borne the hat on the surface of the water many hours. The pouch had been taken even while the passengers were watching the dripping Gainsborough heist in his hand. He had taken no chances of a request for the hat's return by the ship officers. He was quite sure the lady would not demand it back. But the ship's company might have thrown him a small line and he would tie the hat to it. So the rubber pouch came from the lining very quickly and was thrown under the seat.

She patted the gems and kissed the largest in a very ecstasy of admiration. Beautiful they were—almost beyond rivalry. Shortly before the Kaiser Wilhelm II entered the lower bay she gave the necklace a parting pat of appreciation, and, placing it in the rubber pouch with the card of instruction, blew up the

it was very creditable sleight of hand. When the man arrived at his room in Manhattan, near Madison square, he uncovered the metal stopper of the pouch. The air rushed out and so did a gaudy necklace. Glittering were the stones and bright and shining was the chain that held them.

An Ingenious Scheme.
"Whew!" said the man of the Constant in admiration. "It is no wonder she paid $18,000 for it. It certainly is a beaut. I ought to be put under bonds for handling it. Now for the instructions."

Attached to the chain was half a visiting card. On it these words were written:—"Bring the necklace to the café of the Knickerbocker Hotel four hours after the ship docks; morning, noon or evening. Look for the man with the little piece of scarlet and green ribbon in his lapel. He will give you the name of the Paris agent. Then deliver him the necklace. Almost to the minute four hours after the Kaiser Wilhelm II docked a tall, keen-eyed, quick-stepping man, passed through the corridor of the Knickerbocker and went into the café. He had the seat and green in his buttonhole. The man of the Constant rose from his seat and advanced.

"The name of the agent in Paris?" he queried in a low voice. The tall man drew closer, as though to pass by. Instead he halted with his lips but six inches from the other's ear and whispered a word. The man of the Constant nodded. "They left the hotel together. The necklace was passed as they mingled in the 'White Way' crowd. Each went his separate way. The way of the tall man led to the Grand Central station. He bought a ticket for Toronto. Five minutes later he was speeding toward the Canadian city."

Arch Smuggler in Plot.
Now, so far as this end of the customs dodging episode is concerned you've got to acknowledge that the man of the Constant performed his task in every respect worthily. But fate had scrollsawed out a Chinese puzzle piece of hard luck for the whole affair. When fate starts a thing and you irritably rebel fate adds a pound or two to the general weight of calamity so as to punish you for your refusal to submit. It happened that Henri Blanchard, the arch smuggler and great friend of Gareier, of sleeping trunk fame, had grown tired of the game. He had not grown tired that he had grown rich, but that just happened so. He had determined upon retirement after one more profitable season, when—

Mrs. Desbrough walked right into one of the largest Parisian shops one morning, and selecting a magnificent diamond necklace, paid out $18,000 for it. Of course, she did not know Blanchard, who happened to be standing very near to her and who heard her say to the shop manager in tones of semi-petulance that might have been real or affected—

"It's a shame when one buys and pays once for a thing one should have to pay the horrid old customs charges. It increases the cost so enormously that at times one is tempted not to purchase."

How It Is "Worked."
That night at the Hotel Continental Mrs. Desbrough received a note by messenger begging a call from either her or her husband with reference to the necklace purchase of the morning. Mr. Desbrough called. Blanchard's talk was brief and to the point, as was his own. Said he:—"I make it a business to pass valuable articles to the United States free of their unjust and burdensome duty. Here are credentials from the very store where you purchased your necklace vouching for my reliability. So many distressing instances have come to light of late where busybody customs officials have embarrassed and humiliated travellers that it is no longer safe or safe to carry dutiable goods on the person or in the luggage. Ugly searches are constantly being made. My agent meets in New York City every steamship on which I have a client. I furnish my patrons with especially prepared rubber pouches. These enclose the valuables and they are thrown overboard in hats, hand boxes, park glass bottles and in a hundred different other receptacles. Signals agreed upon mark the time for throwing the pouches overboard. They are picked up by my agent and delivered to the client in New York later on. My fee is reasonable. Let us return them to you with complete instructions immediately."

Mrs. Desbrough's diamond necklace was delivered to Blanchard. It was returned to her hotel enclosed in the pouch, with minute directions as to inflating the receptacle, and how to distinguish the motor boat named Constant, which on sighting the vessel bearing the Desbroughs would be sure to run up and down the flag staff three times a secret and green pennant.

This is the proper place to say that there was not a costly piece of jewelry in a Paris shop that Blanchard had not copied for the varied exigencies of his calling. The copies, of course, were counterfeit. Sometimes there were several for my reliability. So many distressing instances have come to light of late where busybody customs officials have embarrassed and humiliated travellers that it is no longer safe or safe to carry dutiable goods on the person or in the luggage. Ugly searches are constantly

Woman's Vice—Smuggling.
Many times during the voyage Mrs. Desbrough looked fondly at her necklace pouch, fastened the stopper and placed it within the lining of her hat. How the wayward wind blew the Gainsborough overboard we know.

Ordinarily when a woman arranges to smuggle a diamond necklace worth $18,000 she should be satisfied with her accomplishment. "Put in making out her number of size little things that she thought it would be a shame to reveal to the prying old customs officials. So she didn't declare them. What's more, she hid them away in crevices and corners of her luggage. For as they tell you in the Custom House, a woman has ninety-nine virtues and one vice—smuggling."

Fake Declaration.
Fate got in its second chapter work by picking an over-particular customs inspector to examine Mrs. Desbrough's declaration and luggage. He noted two or three little discrepancies in the rather ragged declaration. Those who inspectors note everything odd. He dug up the little hidden-away. He noted out of the corner of his eye that Mrs. Desbrough was getting angrily nervous. He noted that on looking into her handbag for her handkerchief she had suddenly started, picked out a piece of paper and had tried to destroy it. He pounced on that paper. He made Mrs. Desbrough give it up, declaring all the while it was an outrage. What was the paper? Why, the bill of sale for the $18,000 diamond necklace, given Mrs. Desbrough by the Paris jeweler where she made the purchase.

Other came all kinds of inquiries and investigations. Because the Desbroughs had tried to smuggle a few things through they were suspected of smuggling more. Their luggage was held. A demand was made for the necklace mentioned in the bill of sale. Mr. Desbrough declared the necklace was in a safe deposit vault attached to a Toronto bank, where he had sent it shortly after purchase. Being in Canada, of course the United States had no right to collect duty. But the Custom House officials came back again and again with laconic persistency. "We want the necklace. Bring it to us." Mrs. Desbrough was held for trial on a charge of smuggling, the case coming up in the United States Court for the District of New Jersey. Custom House detectives were rushed to Paris and to Toronto. The date of purchase of the necklace was verified. But in Canada it was found that Mr. Desbrough had rented a safe deposit box at one of the banks after a demand had been made for the necklace. As a matter of fact, the box had been secured the day following the receipt of the gems from the man of the Constant. It was hired in a desperate attempt to bolster up the story told the customs officials.

The persistent "We want that necklace" finally broke down the fictitious defence of the Desbroughs. After consultation with many lawyers, who begged the government to exercise leniency, it was decided to give up the necklace. Another journey to Toronto was taken. The packet was taken from the safe deposit vault.

Counterfeit Diamonds.
Mr. and Mrs. Desbrough stood under the electric lamp that night in the parlor of their hotel suite. The packet was opened. With a sigh Mrs. Desbrough thought of all the trouble it had already cost and that it would have to be yielded up to the government.

There were the stones and there was the chain. But the stones were plainly lustreless glass and the chain was veridigri-covered.

Blanchard had done his work quite effectively. He basks away the latter half of a formerly busy life in his castle on the Rhine. It was his last transaction of magnitude, that necklace affair. He often pats himself on the back, even now, when he thinks how smoothly he put it through. Every now and then letters from the man of the Constant reach him, threatening, coaxing, dunning and pleading letters, demanding pay for the Desbrough job. But Henri only flicks his cigarette listlessly and orders another stein.

As for the Desbroughs, there was only one thing to do. The pouch end of the smuggling episode had a nasty look. To dicker with smugglers was even worse than smuggling one's own things through. If the necklace were not produced the plunge on their movements and inspection of their jewelry at unexpected moments. Better get rid of the lawyers and the scandal altogether. So they bought a replica of the necklace in a New York jewelry store and surrendered it to the customs. It cost them nearly a third more than the necklace Blanchard stole from them, and in addition Mrs. Desbrough was convicted of smuggling and had to pay a $5,000 fine. The Desbroughs planned to bring diamonds out of a country without paying—and did. Since this celebrated case, where a smuggler smuggled from smugglers, became known in detail to Paris, American duty dodgers have looked in vain at the French capital for accommodating agents of the old kind. The Desbrough affair was such a distressing discouragement.

Patrician and Plebeian Boys Unite to Sail Tiny Craft.

New York, Saturday.
BENEATH the shadows of the state's finest mansions in Fifth avenue and within a stone's throw of the most squallid tenements of the upper east side there is one little spot, not more than three acres square, where the little children of the proud and wealthiest families of Manhattan meet on common footing the little urchins who swarm from their hive-like dwelling places. Caste has no place here. The offspring of parents who count their wealth in millions are no better and receive no more consideration than the little chap whose father in all likelihood drives a street cleaning cart for a livelihood. One common bond binds them and that is their interest in and knowledge of boats, no matter what type of craft they are. If a boat be sail propelled or driven by high priced motors, the boy or girl who manifests the liveliest interest in her best features and can, at a glance, pick out her defects is the one who immediately becomes the centre of interest and commands the highest respect from the others.

Central Park boasts of many pretty little lakes, but none is more popular than the little shimmering body of water which lies beneath the knoll that forms the park's eastern boundary from about Seventieth street to a point several blocks north. Sheltered by a cluster of trees on its eastern bank it presents a picture as one gazes into its limited depths to white loquacious on the waist high wall that skirts the park on the Fifth avenue side.

The plank walk that encircles it is broken into at frequent intervals by little runways or a pair of steps which lead down into the water. On the eastern bank, well set back from the water and sheltered by a clump of overhanging trees and a dense growth of shrubs, one spies a little house, and in it can be found several hundred of those tiny boats which for Morris Fay, who guards with his very life upward of four hundred miniature yachts, racers and craft of every description, each possessing some peculiar virtue, which he points out with pride, and not a "mistake or a failure in the whole damned fleet" to quote this Celtic old salt.

From dawn until the shadows of evening have settled over the lake, and when the whir of crickets and croakings of frogs dominate the shrill, ecstatic cries of the youthful mariners, the plank walk surrounding the little body of water is alive with men, half grown boys and girls and little folk in bloomers or pinafores. In this vacation time the smaller folk predominate, and each is there either to sail or to navigate his own boat, or else about for his favorite, which some more fortunate little comrade may own.

The lake and boat house are municipal institutions and both are under the supervision of the Park Commissioner.

If man, woman, boy or girl owns a boat and cares to sail it on this lake, he or she is at liberty to do so. But should any one desire to house a craft in the boat house, then a visit to the Park Commissioner's office is necessary. The youthful mariner fills out a blank stating his name, residence and number of boats he desires to store at the boat house. This done he is given a permit signed by Commissioner Storey, which he presents in Morris Fay, at the same time turning over to his custody the treasured boat. Morris, in turn, gives him a receipt for his boat, and then all formalities cease, for he is at liberty to leave his craft in the park boat house until November 1, when he must remove it so that the little houses can be made ready for the army of skaters that will invade it when the red ball goes up, thus announcing that the ice is strong enough to bear its human burden.

What daily transpires on the shores of the little lake is best described in Morris Fay's words:—"Sure, sir, and what some wonderful boat races, and the Shamrock and the Reliance themselves would have to look to their laurels, could they but shrink to the proportions of some of our racers and meet them on even terms. The Reliance is a favorite name hereabouts, for we have about forty odd Reliances racing. An the other end of the boat house, Young Master Vanderbilt owns a Reliance, and so does the little Whitney clan, but then, too, little Dagny Fagin, from over in avenue A, has a Reliance which he built himself, and she can make the Whitney and Vanderbilt boats look like they were tied when she gets under way, with a fair wind behind her, and one thing in his favor, he never wears shoes and stockings, and there is no nurse constantly at his heels to wrap him against getting his feet wet. Should Dagny's boat get in trouble when beyond his reach, the little devil just dives in, clothes and all, adjusts her rigging and swims back grinning from ear to ear, the little devil he is!"

Queen Mary and Her Hostesses

Wife of the King of England Said To Be Very Considerate When She Is a Guest.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 8. THE most considerate lady who ever stayed under the roof of another, is the description which when some time ago, the Queen wished to have a settee removed in the sitting room allotted to her in a mansion where she was stopping she sent for the house-keeper and asked in the most gracious way if she might take such a liberty. The mere trifling in her rooms she would not move without express permission. This consideration she is said to inherit from her mother, the late Duchess of Teck, who was noted for the same feeling.

It is with the utmost hesitancy that the Queen's attendant will approach the still-room making the housekeeper for the simplest requirement of her royal mistress, such as a little barley water or home made lemonade, two favorite beverages of the Queen.

A guest who was present at Lady Salisbury's ball, in Arlington street, the other night, says that the three most simply dressed ladies were the Princess Royal and her two daughters. Like Queen Alexandra, the Princess retains perfectly her slender figure, and in her quiet black dress, lightly trimmed with jet, in which her waist was well defined, she might have been her daughter's eldest sister. It was not until after the death of the Duke of Fife that it was realized how wealthy he was, for he never boasted. The extraordinary simplicity of the attire of the Duchess of Fife, who is now the wealthiest unmarried woman in the Kingdom, and that of her sister, whose dresses were of ordinary white silk, were a subject of much comment. Both girls are beautiful dancers. They know all the new steps and tripped them with considerable zest.

Rude in England to Thank Any One

Intricacies of Good Manners Are Puzzling to the Traveller in the Kingdom.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 9. THAT English etiquette is a sore trouble to foreigners is a very old story. That a foreigner may not be acquainted with all the niceties of English etiquette in the ballroom, dining room or theatre is held as no excuse by the British matron as she contemptuously forgives them.

It says much, therefore, for the Continental traveller that he or she is willing to learn. There are now 350 young men and women of seventeen different nationalities attending a holiday course of lectures at the University of London for instruction in English conversation and etiquette.

One German girl, according to Miss Violet Parkinson, one of the instructresses of these classes, was greatly surprised when told that she must make the first sign of recognition when meeting a male acquaintance in the street. She did not think much of English manners to start with. "I think that most immodest," she said. "I mean always how first in our country."

Nor can these students understand why the English take soup from the middle of the spoon instead of from the end, which is shaped for the purpose. And why should a man take his hat and cane into the drawing room when making a daily call, they ask. They may think it unbecomingly, but the only answer is that it is English etiquette.

After dinner do you thank your hostess? Is another question asked. And the answer is, no; it would be considered very rude in England to thank anybody.

Among the students none is more polite than the Japanese. One man who on leaving a house was accompanied down the stairs by a daughter of the hostess on reaching his hotel wrote the daughter a letter of thanks.

EAST LONDON HAS THE MOSQUITO

(Special Dispatch.)

BRANTFORD, AUG. 9. JERSEY commuters, whose life in summer is said to be a life of ease, have been slain at mosquitoes, will have a yellow fever for East London, which is plagued by a visitation from that insect. Although mosquitoes are not unknown in England, they are comparatively rare and seldom troublesome, owing to the fact that they are largely vegetarians. The climate for a most diet is said to be due to the presence of an abundant amount of green stuff which better suits their palates, or bills, but which also makes them enemic and prevents their multiplication. Absence of stagnant water in England also interferes with their breeding.

But the present East London visitation, believed to have been brought in by shipping, consists of hardy man eaters and is proving a sad trial to the inhabitants, who are quite unused to such a pest. Indeed, the Chingford Urban District Council is so impressed by the aridity of the plague that it has called a conference of all the local authorities in the Epping Forest district. It has been decided to cultivate fish in the ponds to destroy the larvae, while the medical officer to the Chingford Council hopefully recommends that breeding on a large scale as a means of attacking measure mosquitoes.

LONDON SEASON, IN THEORY ENDED, SHOWS STRONG SIGNS OF VITALITY

As Usual, It Is the Americans Who Are Making the City Lively.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 9. PREPARATIONS ON WAY FOR ROYAL WEDDING

The Duchess of Fife and Prince Arthur of Connaught to Have Simple Ceremony.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 9. THE London season should, by all rules of tradition, have come to a close last week, but with Queen Mary in town so late the season died hard.

A stroll in Piccadilly and Bond street in the last few days gave convincing proof that London is by no means empty, in the conventional sense, as American and Continental travellers have been keeping the shopkeepers busy.

Opinion is very much divided on the subject of the season now ended. There are many who declare they never knew a worse one. On the other hand, there are those who say they have enjoyed it enormously, and are satisfied with it in every way.

If the season has had its defects from a social standpoint, it certainly has been most successful so far as concerns the number of travellers in London and the business done by the hotels and tradesmen. Americans, as usual, have constituted the most important element among tourists and will continue to haunt the city for some weeks yet, despite the fact that the season's social events are over. Claridge's reports twenty per cent more tourists this summer than last, including a great number of Americans, while the Ritz, the Piccadilly and the Hyde Park pronounce it the best season since coronation year.

Details of the ceremony to be observed upon the occasion of the marriage in the Chapel Royal, St. James', of the Duchess of Fife to Prince Arthur of Connaught are now being settled. These will follow very closely upon the precedent of the wedding of the present King and Queen in the same chapel. The service will be comparatively simple. One hymn will be selected by the bride elect and sung by members of the choir of the Chapel Royal, strengthened for the occasion by the chorists from Westminster Abbey. The Princess Royal purposes to give her own away in person.

There will be an imposing procession from the town residence of the Princess Royal, in Portman square, where the bride will be escorted by the regiments and an escort of the Royal Scots Greys, Prince Arthur's regiment.

There is a prospect that the German Emperor and Empress will decide to be present at the wedding, but no formal notification to this effect has so far been received. The King and Queen of Norway, however, are coming, as are the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden.

Even more interest, however, is likely to attach to the presence of Prince and Princess Ernest of Brunswick and Lunenburg, themselves recently married.

When the King and Queen of Spain will swell the list is another point that is not yet settled, but there is every probability that this will be the case.

The King has put his place at Frogmore at the disposal of the royal bride and bridegroom, and it is probable they will be here for at least a portion of their early married life.

GoSSIP is busy regarding the Prince of Wales' future residence, and East Sheen Lodge has been selected for the bachelor home of the heir apparent. The King decides to take this famous place for the Prince the house will revert to its original status as a royal residence. When the late Duke of Fife and the Princess Royal lived there in the eighties it was the centre of royal social life. King Edward was especially fond of paying calls on the Duke and East Sheen was the scene at many family rejoicings in the House of Fife, notably when the present Duchess, Prince Arthur of Connaught's fiancée, was born at the lodge, in 1881.

THE People of the Girded Loins is the most fashionable charm this autumn. He is to be seen at the Jewellers and Silversmiths' Exhibition at the Agricultural Hall, where only a privileged few may enter, and where the cases of precious exhibits are guarded night and day.

The Buddha originated with the Japanese. Small iron plates engraved with his likeness are thrust between the shell and the oyster. Later, when the fish is taken away, the plate is found overlaid with the pearly substance; the plate is removed and a backing of mother of pearl and wax is applied. Then the little placid looking figure is ready to be mounted.

Pearls are in high favor just now, and perfect specimens being hard to find, prices are high. A dealer pointed out a cluster of Panama pearls, remarking that, "there would be little left out of a ten thousand dollar bill for the man who bought them."

Close to them were arranged a collection of "freak" pearls, coral pink and black and golden specimens, hailing principally from Ceylon, and a monster from the South Sea Islands, weighing 89 grains, shaped rather like a Wellington boot, with pink and blue and green and red tints, more like a dark opal than anything else.

The eccentricities of this, however, were easily outclassed by what the dealer described as "probably the biggest freak pearl in the world," the weight of which is 1,200 grains. If it be true that the coloring of pearls depends on the health of the oyster this particular freak must have given the fish responsible for its production a good deal of trouble. It measures about two inches in length and is not unlike a large small in appearance. Vivid touches of pink appear here and there among dark shades of green and black and blue, and the oyster from whose shell it was taken was found off the coast of Ceylon.

Tunnel Under the Channel Should Show Good Profit

Promoters of All Rail Route Between England and France Say Investment Looks Good for at Least Seven Per Cent on Capital.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 9. SOME years ago, when an attempt was made by a number of enthusiasts to revive the Channel tunnel project, Baron Emile d'Eranger, who became chairman of the Channel Tunnel Company in succession to his father, one of the originators of the scheme, told your correspondent that the time was not ripe. Since the abortive attempt to pass a bill through Parliament for its construction the company had been lying low, waiting for an opportune time.

"Now," he said to your correspondent yesterday, "there is no reason why the tunnel should not be proceeded with. The attempt to invade England by means of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, at Goodwood. She is now the prospective Duchess of Northumberland and the mother of an heir presumptive."

London Full of Poor Statuary

Mr. Somers Clarke Says Albert Memorial Is Only Complete Monument in Metropolis.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 9. POOR old London! Somebody is always finding something the matter with it, yet, in spite of its age and its ailments, it still plods along. The latest object of attack is its architecture and statuary.

Mr. Somers Clarke, a former architect to St. Paul's Cathedral, talking before the London Society the other night, described the statue of Lord Byron, in Hyde Park, as "lugged in behind rattings," while the poet himself seemed to be perched alone and forgotten on a damp stone.

The famous Hyde Park Corner, the lecturer said, was a flash of odd corners and chaos evolved out of order. The Wellington Arch on Constitution Hill was six feet lower than it ought to be and had stood unfinished for three-quarters of a century.

"The equestrian statue of Wellington presented another example of the cheap and indifferent way in which we do things. Boehm, the sculptor," Mr. Clarke continued, "told me himself that he had never been his intention that the four figures at the corners of the pedestal should stand detached like mantel ornaments. He had designed wreaths of bronze foliage on the sides of the pedestal, linking the whole thing together, but these were cut out and the monument was defaced for a lifetime."

Mr. Clarke declared that the Kensington workhouse was a more imposing building than that part of St. James' Palace where the Lord Chamberlain's office was located. The palace was "a feverish brown brick wall, with square holes in it," while York House could hardly be found in London.

The speaker cited many cases of unfinished monuments, mentioning the memorial to Queen Victoria in Green Park, the Admiralty Arch, the portion of the British Museum, the top of the Home and Colonial Office, the Marble Arch and the arch at Hyde Park Corner.

"The Albert Memorial," said Mr. Clarke, "is the only monument in London on a grand scale that is complete."

Says Woman Is 'Undressing' That She May Prove Her Femininity

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 9. While a third has taunted men with regretting the passing of the petticoat because there is for the male no pliancy and mystery about the tight skirt, many professes she implies the flirting provocative skirt.

The most novel explanation, however, is advanced by Mr. Godfrey Dean in the Dally Dispatch, which no other has yet offered.

"The explanation is," he writes, "that the woman-feminine, as I may so call her, finds it necessary—owing to the changed attitude of men toward women brought about by militant suffragism—to distinguish herself by a definite display and assertion of her essential femininity from the woman suffragist, or at least, the suffragist of advanced or militant opinions."

In her natural repugnance to being mistaken for what she is not—a suffragist—the woman feminine is displaying her charms.

"The more the woman suffragist asserts herself the more necessary it is for the woman-feminine to assert herself. It is woman-feminine to assert herself. It is respectively to "the return of the prodigal" and "the triumph of common sense."

Last of Great Bear Hounds

Caesar, which belongs to Y. P. Priklowski, is of the famous breed of bear hounds which was well known in Russia as far back as the sixteenth century, at which period they were used for pulling down bears. The race is now, unfortunately, almost extinct; only a very few specimens remaining—some in the Imperial kennels at Gatchina, near St. Peterburg, and others in private kennels belonging to amateur fanciers.

MR. W. F. COCKS A REAL GO

Brantford Member and Entire and Fight a Fire Near Summit Timely Work Was Done.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, AUG. 9. THE Huntsville Forester has the following: The danger of spreading fire throughout the lake districts during the past few weeks has been very great, and several narrow escapes have been reported. Mr. W. F. Cocks, M.P., and his entire family were forced to turn out the other day and fight fire in the vicinity of his summer home, and it was only through persistent effort that his property was saved from total destruction. A similar danger is reported from Fox Point. Service in the little church there was abruptly interrupted on Sunday by the conflagration hurriedly turning out to extinguish a blaze which had broken out in the proximity of the church building. Among the active flame-fighters were Messrs W. F. Cocks, M.P., and C. J. C. Crump, B.

ENGLAND'S SONS HOLD A PICNIC

Victoria Park, Galt, Scene of Great Outing by Brantford S.O.E. Members

The best laid plans of mice and men oft gang a-gley. It was a beautiful day and the Grand Valley Railway started three special cars on their way to Galt between the hour of 7.50 and 8 a.m. Two were blessed and the other, the fatal third was not. In a dreary dismal place about one mile past the Blue Lake which the blooming thing jumped the track.

A steep bank on the right of them, a sign bank on the left of them, water underneath them to about two hours before they were patiently two hours before they were patiently. The soft ball that happened to be with two boys rendered a little diversity. The people who left Brantford at 8 a.m. arrived in Galt at 11.45 a.m. Fortunately upon the same day. The programme stated that the sports would start at 9.45 or as soon after as the cars arrived.

The sports were the main feature of the day and many interesting races were run off. A first class list prizes added greatly to the competition in the various events.

Scotch, married ladies vs. single ladies. The married ladies won the event owing to the star pitching of Mrs. Thomas. Score 7 to 5.

AUTOIST'S BACK BROKEN WHEN CAR OVERTURNED

Little Hope Held Out for Recovery of John Haas of Caledonia.

GALT, Aug. 12.—John Haas, Caledonia, lies in the hospital with a broken back, as the result of overturning of the auto he was driving to Berlin yesterday.

Near Freerport the car struck part of the road which had been in with gravel, and swerving it is course, tore through a protection and down a six foot embankment. Four other occupants of the car escaped with slight scratches and slight bruises.

Very little recovery is held out for the recovery of Haas. He has a and three young children.
