Gower St. Church

(I. C. M.)

Large congregations attended all the services at Gower Street Church yesterday, and both morning and evening sermons were closely listened to.

The Rev. H. Royle was the preacher at the former service, and it being his first sermon in this church since his city pastorate began, there was much interest among the congregation as to his ability and as to his influence upon a congregation. Of all the vantage grounds which men enjoy, none is greater than that of the man who stands upon a platform, or within a pulpit, and speaks to people of things Eternal.

Mr. Royle took his text from the first verse of Hebrews in which it is stated that "God who at sundry times and in divers manners had spoken by the prophets, but now spoken by His Son." The theme was "The Revelation of God," and the preacher clearly showed both from Divine teaching, and from Nature, that God had in the past revealed His will to the sons of man. His word and His prophets had declared His law; but there was yet a greater than these, and so in the fullness of time He spoke to the world by His Son.

The preacher made very timely and earnest application of the text to the present age, and especially to the European war now raging; and all his deductions and conclusions were patriotic and yet withal tolerant. Mr. Royle will find a warm welcome to our city work, and we feel assured that he will fulfill his duties with profit to all concerned.

At the evening service the pastor of the Church, Rev. D. Hemmen, was the preacher, and his text was taken from St. John's Gospel, chapter 17, and verse 24: "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am." The theme was that of "Companionship," and particularly "Christian Companionship."

The portion of Scripture from which the text was taken is one of the most sublime of Holy Writ. It composes that wonderful prayer in which the very soul and Divinity, and the very humanity of the Redeemer manifested themselves as He prayed to His Father in Heaven. He had been with His Apostles for some time, probably for over two years and a half, and now that the time was approaching when He should leave them, He prayed for them.

The Apostles had been the Master's companions, and He loved them, and they in return had loved Him. But He had to leave them for a while, but He told them that He would come again that "where He was they might be also." John 14: 3.

The rev. preacher spoke very touchingly on human friendship, and made many pathetic references to companionship. These relations of life were very dear to the heart. It was not the presence merely, nor the acquaintance of one person with another, which comprised companionship. Behind it, or embodied in it there was something greater and deeper. These traits were alright in themselves, and in so far as they went were very necessary. The underlying power of all true companionship was character. When this was the basis there would be no betrayal either in adversity or prosperity. The majority of men sought companionship, though some preferred the hermit's life. Yet the desire was the same—it was the heart seeking for that which can satisfy its cravings and give it peace.

There were many choice utterances in the discourse and many lessons which suit the toiler along the highway of life, but which time will not permit us to write of just now.

Love, Hatred, and Cold Revenge in "The Still Voice."

"The Still Voice" one of the best pictures ever presented in St. John's will be seen at the Nickel Theatre this evening. It is a grand social drama, interesting and powerful in plot, covering two full reels, and acted by the brightest stars of the Vitagraph Co. Sidney Malcolm Drew and Edith Storey are seen in attractive roles in this great play. Different to all other big social dramas the high class company of actors have staged the "Still Voice" has an attraction all its own. Every one should attend this show, as they will see one of the best entertainments for a long time.

"These Troublesome Trespassers" is a Vitagraph Comedy-drama, by John Bunny, Flora Finch, Lillian Walker and Cutie. "In The Sewing" is a fascinating melo-drama with a moral.

"A Healthy Neighbourhood" is a Keystone Comedy. There will also be a Pathé Weekly, Mr. DeWitt Cairns will sing "Ashore." "The Still Voice" is certain to attract large numbers as it is one of the deepest stories of love, hatred, and revenge ever shown on canvas. The Press of America and Canada devoted much space to this film and the artists responsible for it were highly praised. It will be seen only to-day and to-morrow.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office—its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this world known firm in Newfoundland. —apl7,14

Eddie Plank.

Red McGhee says: To paint the lily's wasted time. It's just as bad to try in rhyme to paint old Eddie's worth. The old heavy stand's alone—a star in muscle, joint, a n' b o u t e. You know his record—fourteen years—He's gone out there 'an' earned the cheers for good ol' Connie Mack. He's never pitched no other where, except in college. It was there that Connie hit his track.

Five pennants he's helped, Connie win, three world's flags he's helped gather in an' Eddie's winnin' yet. He stays right on, year after year, an' recognizes none as peer—there ain't no better bet. He's master of that little trick of pitchin' em' right past the stick the batter swings around. And cool—he's cool as Bering straits! The ol' boy never aviates, he keeps both feet on ground.

A guy could rattle on all day an' still he'd find a lot to say in praise of ol' boy Plank. An' when he'd spouted all he could 'would look as big as one cent would in Rockefeller's bank. If all those ol-time fightin' men had never fought, an' Lincoln then had had no speech to say, old Gettysburg would still hold rank—the birthplace of Great Eddie Plank—as famous as to-day.

The greatest Alpine flight on record with passenger has just been accomplished by the Italian aviator, Achille Landini. They left Novara, Italy, at 5 o'clock in the morning, and traversed the Monte Rosa range, 15,217 feet in height. They landed safely at Visp at 7.30 o'clock, taking nearly three hours to cover a straight one-hundred miles. But they lost their way in the clouds, and suffered greatly from the intense cold. The Swiss authorities gave an official reception in celebration of the event.

Prescription 'A.'

CURES: INDIGESTION and DYSPESIA in all its forms.

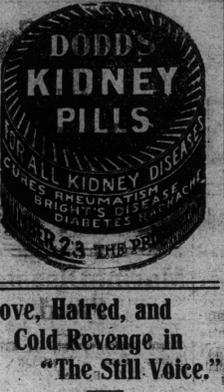

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headaches. I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself, and at times I care for nothing." "I often have a pain in the pit of the stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a feeling of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems not worth living."

Why suffer from all these symptoms when STAFFORD'S PRESCRIPTION 'A' will cure you? Try a bottle.

Price: Small size, 25 cents; postage 5 cents extra. Large size, 50 cents; postage 10 cents extra.

Mongolian Accidentally Shot in the Bows

FROM NEW BRIGHTON BATTERY.

On Thursday, August 6th, the R. M. S. Mongolian, was shot near Liverpool in mistake for a Norwegian barque, and in consequence was detained for thirty hours while repairs were being effected.

The Mongolian was on her way from Glasgow to Liverpool and was going up the River Mersey. About the same time a Norwegian vessel was sighted passing. Believing the latter a foreigner but not knowing her nationality, she was signalled from the New Brighton Fort to stop. The foreigner, not having any knowledge of the state of war, did not do as the signal ordered. A shot across her bows followed immediately and as she still failed to comply with the demand, other warning shots were fired. The barque continued on its way and one of the big guns was brought into action. Just then the Mongolian came along and was accidentally struck in the bows with a 6 inch shot which was intended for the foreigner. The captain of the latter then realized the danger and gave the order to stop. The vessel was then boarded and found to be a Norwegian.

The Mongolian then went on dock for repairs. About 10.15 a.m. the water line she had a hole in her bows. The shot entered on the starboard side and went clean through.

Two More British Dreadnoughts.

ACQUISITION FROM TURKEY.

We are officially informed that the Government have taken over the two battleships, one completed and the other shortly due for completion, which had been ordered in this country by the Turkish Government, and the two destroyer leaders ordered by the Government of Chile.

The two battleships will receive the names Agincourt and Erin, and the destroyer leaders will be called Faulkner and Broke, after two famous naval officers.

The two Dreadnought battleships are—

1. The Sultan Osman I. Built by Messrs. Armstrong. She is the largest battleship yet completed, being of 27,500 tons displacement. She has seven turrets, each carrying two 12 inch guns. The vessel was laid down to the order of the Brazilian Government, but was taken over by Turkey for £2,725,000.
2. The Reshadieh. Built by Messrs. Vickers. Displacement 23,000 tons. She has ten 13.5 inch guns mounted on twin turrets on the centre line as in the King George class. —Daily Mail, Aug. 5th, 1914.

MONDAY, Aug. 17, 1914.

A United Front Absolutely Essential.

We were glad to read Mr. E. M. Jackman's suggestion that a speedy settlement of the dispute between the Longshoremen and their employers should be made. Now that the big British liners have been taken over for conversion into cruisers or transports, a larger portion of the freighting must be thrown upon the smaller class of steamers. For instance, we hear that the finest of the Allan liners have been taken over by the British Government and this will naturally throw more on their smaller steamers. This, of course applies while the Atlantic route is open for shipping, but the escape of a few large German cruisers from the Baltic or the North Sea into the Atlantic might seriously jeopardise the safety of the route. It becomes therefore a matter of vital importance to utilize every hour to the best advantage while the ocean routes are free. An unnecessary delay of a night is a step which tends to lessen the efficiency of the steamers in taking food and other supplies across the Atlantic. If we are to win and win we must, every patriotic man must do his utmost to help to win. There must be no unnecessary delays of steamers in St. John's. One of the essential tactics of winning is to insure food for the homeland, which depends mainly on outside, and where people do not lay in large supplies, but live from day to day and week to week. A working man in England does not lay in one barrel or two barrels or more of flour, one or more barrels of potatoes, a stock of sugar, dry fish, etc. He buys a stone or two of flour every week, a few pounds of sugar to last him a week, a score of lbs. of potatoes, practically never more than a week's supply. That is why a command of the sea is so essential. That is why the Government is taking war insurance risks in vessels and cargoes. That is why the British Government are backing bills to pay for food supplies, sent to consignees in the British Isles. That is why food cannot be exported from the United Kingdom to-day. Whatever food stuffs are in the British Isles, they are not in the homes of the people, they are in the shops and stores. Only about 10 per cent. of the wheat and flour supplies are raised in the United Kingdom, and according to the Royal Commission of 1913, the position of affairs then was as follows. It may be taken as approximately correct to-day:—

"Meat Supply.—One-third of our cattle, sheep, and pigs represents seven months' supply without imports.

"Potatoes.—Enough for ordinary consumption.

"Tea.—Six months.

"Coffee.—Six months.

"Rice.—Four months.

"Tinned Provisions.—Four or five months.

"Sugar.—Four to six weeks.

"Ham.—Twelve to fourteen days.

"Cheese.—Six to ten weeks.

"Eggs.—Seven to ten days.

"Butter.—Seven to ten days.

"Breadstuffs.—Seven to ten days.

"Oatmeal, etc.—Four or five weeks as substitute for bread."

Two Austrian Ironclads Sunk ---One Set on Fire---One Fled---French Naval Victory.

NAVAL BATTLE IN ADRIATIC.
Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.
A despatch from Nish, Serbia, under date of Sunday says a naval battle between French and Austrian warships began off Budua, Austria, in the Adriatic, at 1 o'clock this morning. The French squadron coming from the south attacked the Austrian warships. Two Austrian ironclads were sunk, one set on fire, and a fourth fled northwards towards Cattaro. The fight lasted over an hour.

Fight Between German and French on Saturday at Dinant---French Drive Off Germans.

FAMOUS STANDARD CAPTURED.
Special to Evening Telegram.
BRUSSELS, To-day.
The Standard of the famous German regiment Death's Head Hussars, formerly commanded by Crown Prince Frederick William, was captured by Belgians at battle of Haclon and is now at Townhall at Diest.

LONDON, To-day.
The Times' correspondent at Namur Belgium, who witnessed the fighting at Dinant on Saturday, says the battle occupied the whole day, but was made up of two actions. The first continued from morning until two o'clock in the afternoon. The second occupied the remainder of the afternoon. From early morning when the Germans took a part of Dinant on the left bank of the Meuse and a regiment of French infantry advanced at the same time from south to north and occupied the other side of the town, skirmishes between the two forces proceeded throughout the forenoon. In the afternoon fighting took the form of an artillery engagement. The French withdrew from the town into the woods at the side of the Meuse. The artillery took charge of the battle.

At the same moment a French infantry regiment advancing along the Meuse on the right bank from Huy at the south of Namur, flung itself on the Germans in the town and aided by artillery drove them off. Then from three o'clock until six the two armies were engaged in an artillery duel across the town. It was always the Germans who were retiring along the hills to the south of the town; always the French who moved forward their batteries little by little. Gradually the French drove the Germans southward, pursuing all the time with infantry and Chasseurs. To all appearances the French artillery made better practice than the Germans. The number of killed and wounded must have been heavy.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hessing Fuerste

Marian's Answer

"Why not?" repeated Meadows with grave, serious eagerness. "I tell you, you've made me love you, Marian. You've worked a sort of miracle in me—a miracle that I never thought possible."

Marian freed her hand, and laughed at the eager youth. Her tinkle of laughter represented her groping in decision as to what to answer.

"Don't laugh at me," protested Meadows. "Can't you see that I mean it? Can't you understand?"

"Why, you hardly know me," smiled Marian, letting him lay hold of her hand again. "Don't be silly. You're not in love with me at all. All that's the matter with you is that you resent the idea of getting married at all. And now, with due respect for your judgment, you make the preposterous proposition of jumping from the frying pan into the fire."

Meadows writhed. "You don't understand what I'm driving at," he argued.

"I understand only too well," said Marian. "Now, don't be melodramatic. You've disappointed me very much. I thought that at last I had found a man who wasn't going to prove sentimental. Besides, if you knew more about me, you would certainly not be talking to me along these lines. I'm a divorced woman."

"What of it?" interrupted the other swiftly. "What difference would that make?"

"It makes a great deal of difference to the world in general. And we're both part of the world in general. I've been punished at nearly every turn for having secured my freedom from an unfortunate marriage through divorce. I never knew the world's point of view was so narrow. Although divorce has been made legal, it is not yet regarded as entirely proper."

"You're morbid" but in Meadows. "Oh no, I'm not," objected Marian. "I'm simply looking facts in the face. I've tried to experiment, and I know. I'm not expressing a mere opinion. It's a cold, hard fact."

"I want you to consider," pursued the man. "Don't give me your answer now. I know that you care for me—at least a little. I can make you care a great deal for me. You've become necessary to me. All of a sudden it has dawned upon me. I'm going to be honest with you. If you marry me, the chances are that I can expect nothing more from my people. But that's exactly what I want. It will make a man out of me. And think of the future! I shan't be penniless, of course. While I've been a spendthrift, I can easily negotiate a few thousand from useless personal effects. We could take a bit of a jaunt to Europe, and work, and live! Why not? Won't you do as I say?"

For fully a minute, Marian was silent. The temptation surged through her like a fire. But back of it gleamed the light of the beginning of her success in the profession of writing. The thought of independence battled with that of another fling at the hazard of matrimony. "No," she said finally. "It wouldn't be right."

To-morrow—Never Again.

Too Inquisitive.

At 11:30 a.m. on Saturday a man named Patrick Parrell drove hurriedly from the vicinity of Freshwater to the city and reported to the police authorities that near Timothy O'Brien's farm, on the Thorburn Road, about seven miles from town, he met four men whom he believed to be Germans. Continuing his story Parrell told that the strangers were well dressed, they spoke to him in broken English and asked him several questions about the lay of the land and hills, etc., in the direction they were bound.

Irritating Optimism.

"She is irritatingly optimistic." I overheard someone say of a woman the other day. The expression was a promptly picked up and criticized. "There cannot be too much optimism," the critic said. Do you agree? I don't. Optimism is a very beautiful thing, but like all good things there can be too much of it. "Too much of a good thing" is a by-word in our language. It is a popular reflection of the Greek motto which I am so fond of quoting, "Nothing in excess."

Someone, Stevenson, I think, has said, "The habit of looking on the bright side is worth a thousand pounds a year." And so it is, but he did not say, "The habit of looking only on the bright side."

Optimism is fashionable just now and like all fashionable things is frequently carried to excess. And to my way of thinking, at least, people who affect the persistent, unreasoning optimism are irritating and antagonizing rather than cheering and soothing.

"A pessimist is a person who has to live with optimists" is the contribution of a confirmed cynic, but I am not so sure that it is wide of the mark. Naturally I am strongly inclined to optimism, but when I run up against one of these ultra fashionable optimists I find myself inclining toward pessimism. For instance, in the presence of one of them, whose carefully preserved, flawless, cheerfulness somehow reminds me of a pink and white enameled complexion. I happened to remark one day (after a week of drizzle, fogs, cold winds and general gloom) that the people who had taken their vacation at that time must be disappointed with the miserable weather, and that I myself was much depressed by it.

"Why yesterday was a lovely day," she said (we had a few hours of equivocal sunshine, "and it hasn't rained hard but once or twice. You must look on the bright side."

I longed to say, "Don't be foolish, you know perfectly well it has been miserable weather." But denied this pleasure by the rules of polite society. I took refuge in being just as pessimistic as I liked, which was a good deal more so than I would otherwise have been.

Another variety of optimists which induce pessimism in those who have to live with them are those whose optimism runs wild and makes them confuse hopes with possibilities. It's all very well to hope that the thing you want won't cost more than you can afford, but when an optimist takes such a hope as a basis of action he needs a pessimist nearby to put the curb on.

An unreasoning optimism makes a good moral for a sermon, or a basis for a story, but in real life it ought to be mixed with enough common sense to keep its feet on the ground.

Paul Cannon

THE NAVY IS READY.

Confronted with a situation which was never more menacing, we can take to ourselves the consolation that we hold the winning cards, if we have the knowledge and courage to play them. The industries which contribute to the greater of our war material are supreme; the Admiralty has demonstrated by its increased demand, and the ready response made to them, that we have the men. Every development in the art of warfare which the minds of ingenious men devise seems to favor us.

The nation—and the Navy—was inclined at first to regard the automobile torpedo as a technical factor; it was argued that the submarine—cheap and of high potential value—would place nations, great and small, on an equality on the seas. The best brains in the sea service went forward undismayed; submarines were built to demonstrate in due time their value as a defensive weapon.

Later on it was foretold that the development of air craft would prove our undoing. The aeroplane and seaplane are in their infancy, but we are already assured that they serve as a further adjunct to our defensive armament. It is certain that the two new weapons of naval warfare acting in close co-operation—the patrol flotillas of destroyers and submarines on and under the water, and the aerial craft above it—are destined to provide us with a screen along our coasts so mobile and efficient that the fear of invasion, although it can never become negligible, may be appreciably lessened if we have the courage to press forward along the new path to safety which is opening before us.

Without losing the power of commanding the high seas and oceans which rests, and so far as can be predicted will continue to rest with the large ship with its powerful artillery, we can render ourselves as an island people more secure against invasion, at least on a large scale, than at any time in our history.

The future will be a time of testing our fibre, but need not herald our downfall. The vast assembly represents not the journey's end, but a milestone in the history of our naval development. The patent proof that the nation's money is being well spent, and that results are being obtained commensurate with the high scale of expenditure, may well provide the British people—and we trust the British peoples—with the necessary impetus to determine that, at whatever sacrifice, the life-line of the Empire will never be relinquished into other hands.—London Telegraph.

My Ships.

Some ships I had in the long ago. And beautiful ships were they; But over the wide and bounding deep My ships have sailed away. Never, no, never, will they return— My beautiful ships to me; For all are wrecked on a distant shore. Or sunk in the bounding sea.

The one called Youth, in its ardent pride, With its flags and pennants gay, As it sailed along so brave and strong, Has silently sped away. Fast o'er the deep like a bird it flew, My beautiful ship from me, Till lost from view and forever gone Far over the deep blue sea.

And one called Fame, a gilded barque, And prized by conquering Kings, As on it sailed like a blissful dream, As light as zephyr's wings, It left no wake as it sailed along, Nor lays of the hero for me; I saw it fade as it spread its sails Far out on the bounding sea.

And one called Wealth, a gorgeous craft, With its masts and spars of gold, And decks aglow with glittering gems, Whose value could ne'er be told; And then away o'er the waves it sailed, More treasures to bring for me, 'Tis buried now, in the rolling deep, It sank in the bounding sea.

And Pleasure, one, and fairer ship, Ne'er sailed on the ocean blue; The shrouds and masts with flowers entwined, And garlands of brilliant hue; The tables with luscious fruits were set, And "Fishes" of sweets for me; But it sailed away, it left no trace; It sank in the rolling sea.

Now, far away on the Billows' crest, A light of the purest ray, Shines bright as the Star of Bethlehem. That shone on the Magi's way; 'Tis Hope, 'tis Hope, my beautiful ship, Returning once more to me, And bringing me balm and peace, and joy From over the raging sea.

Lifeboats.

By GEORGE FITCH,
 Author of "At Good Old Slwash."

A lifeboat is a small uncomfortable craft which is all that is left to travel in after the $10,000,000 floating hotel has demonstrated the fallibility of man.

Lifeboats are stoutly built and can float in the fiercest storm; but they are not popular as a means of transportation. After fifty people have been crowded into a 30-foot lifeboat it is no more comfortable than a street car in the rush hours. Skillful seamen can row a lifeboat several hundred miles to shore if necessary, living upon an occasional biscuit, but in the hands of a few dining-room stewards who do not know which end of the boat is to grasp while rowing, the lifeboat is at best a perilous and uncertain affair.

For many years steamships have carried lifeboats hung from their upper decks and these boats have added greatly to the peace of mind of nervous passengers who have put on life-preservers every time a wave hit their stateroom portholes. In fact the lifeboat was generally considered to be a very acceptable substitute for a steamship in case the latter sank—until about two years ago when it was suddenly demonstrated in a most distressing manner that the best lifeboat in the world is of no use whatever to the passengers who can't crowd into it.

Since that time ocean steamers have provided enough lifeboats to hold all of their passengers and crew. But as yet very few improvements have been made in the manner of launching a lifeboat in a heavy sea. Up to the present the bottom-side-up method has been used very extensively and has proven very satisfactory to those directors of navigation companies who have remained steadfastly at home focusing their well-trained intellects upon the matter of more speed and larger palm gardens.

The United States government has just ruled that during the summer season steamers on the American great lakes need only carry enough lifeboats for half their passengers. Whether the government considers summer excursions as superfluous population—or whether it figures that half the travelers would be able to swim across the lake in case of trouble is unknown. We will discover the reason for this decision just after the first big steamer goes down leaving half of its passengers safe and sound in the water only six miles from shore.

A Woman's Wish.

Would I were lying in a field of clover,
 Of clover cool and soft, and soft and sweet.
 With dusky clouds in deep skies hanging over,
 And scented silence at my head and feet.

Just for one hour to slip the lash of worry,
 In eager haste, from Thoughts impatient neck,
 And watch it coursing, in its needless hurry,
 Disdaining Wisdom's call or Duty's beck.

Ah! it were sweet, where clover
 clumps are meeting,
 And daisies hiding, so to hide and rest;
 No sound except my own heart's sturdy beating,
 Rocking itself to sleep within my breast—

Just to lie there, filled with the deeper breathing,
 That comes of listening to a wild
 bird's song;
 Our souls requit at times this full unheating—
 All swords will rust if scabbardkept too long.

And I am tired—so tired of rigid duty,
 So tired of all my tired hands finds to do!

I yearn, I faint, for some of life's free beauty,
 Its loose beads with no straight string running through!

Aye, laugh, if laugh you will, at my crude speech;
 But women sometimes die of such a greed—
 Die for the small joys held beyond their reach,
 And the assurance they have all they need.

Porterhouse.

Oh, luscious steak, you seem to make my mind's squirm with pleasure. Of all the meat that can't be beat, you are the pride and treasure. The cook has toiled with zest and broiled the steak
 just to my liking.
 Upon my plate I see it wait, magnificent and striking. The gods are kind, that we can find such meats in steaks and caws; all men with tanks should give them thanks for rich-thick porterhouses. The doctor views my steak and chews the rag about my diet; "you beat the Turks," he cries; "your works will soon be in a riot. You ought to eat the wholesome beet, the turnip and the carrot,
 the bean and squash, so help me
 Josh," he jabsbers, like a parrot.
 "That's grub's too rich, 'twill give you itch, and mups and yellow jaunders; it trouble makes, so cut out steaks, and chickens, ducks and ganderers." But man will buy his health too high if he feeds like the horses, and lives on hay day after day, and browses where the gore is. I'd rather eat the juicy meat, of which no man is fonder, and ere my time cash in, and climb to stary heights up yonder.

 land Garden Party, in aid of the Japan Sends Germany an Ultimatum.

JAPANESE ULTIMATUM.
Special to Evening Telegram.
 TOKIO, Aug. 16.
 Japan has sent an ultimatum to Germany, demanding that she withdraw her warships and evacuate Kiau Chau. Unless Germany unconditionally accepts by August 23rd, Japan will take action.

THE TERMS.

TOKIO, Aug. 16.
 The news that Japan has sent an ultimatum to Germany, is officially confirmed. The newspaper Jiji Shimpo, which is usually well-informed, in an extra, gives some additional details. The Japanese ultimatum presented to Germany, was forwarded on Saturday night, according to the Jiji. Besides demanding the turning over of Kiau Chau to Japan, pending its return to China, Japan asked that the German warships in Far Eastern waters be disarmed, also the forts of Kiau Chau. Germany is also required to withdraw all warships from the China sea.

WILL COMMUNICATE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.
 Owing to cable interruption, Japan has not been able to deliver her ultimatum to Germany, and the United States will undertake to communicate it to Berlin.

CHINA'S ATTITUDE.

PEKIN, Aug. 16.
 Copies of the Japanese ultimatum to Germany were handed to the Chinese Government and the Foreign Legations to-day. As it is not considered likely that Germany will comply with Japanese demands, preparations are proceeding for a campaign by force of arms. Three British regiments in China have received instructions to hold themselves in readiness for transportation. The statement in the Japanese ultimatum that Japan proposed to return Tsing Tau to China is regarded hopefully by the Chinese officials. The Chinese Foreign Board announced to-night that China realizes that she cannot forcibly prevent transmission of her territory. She is, however, strengthening her forces at Tsinau, with a view only to regulate Chinese affairs. A protest will be lodged if the allies land troops for manoeuvring. According to Japanese figures, the German troops at Tsing Tau number 3,500. There are several hundred reservists in various Treaty ports. It is not known where the German fleet has gone. It left port about ten days ago with coilers.

Had Stomach Rumbings Distress Before Meals

Was Seldom Free From That Weary, Droopy, Half-Dead Feeling.

Now Cured, and Gives Good Advice to Others With Dyspeptic Tendencies.

If you have any stomach distress at all you will certainly be interested in the following experience which is told by Mr. Edward Dawkins:
 "When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fullness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."
 Refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butter-nut. 25c. per box or five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or post paid from the Catarhazone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The Case of Cherry Purcelle

A Three-reel Feature—Five Reels and a Classy Song at the Crescent To-day.

One of the strongest three-reel stories by the Eclair Co. that has ever been produced, is the feature at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day, when "The Case of Cherry Purcelle," written by Arthur Stringer, is the headliner. This 3,000 feet of film has already won much fame; the presentation was a masterpiece that created a sensation when shown in the high priced theatres in America. "Baldy Belmont" is another chance to see the famous man of fun; his efforts to land a society job are certainly humorous. "Hubby's New Coat," a lively reel of comedy with Pearl White and Chester Barnett is the curtain drop on a bill that is in a class by itself. The primo dona Miss Alice Clarke, is singing "Rebecca of Sunny Brook Farm," and is sure to please the patrons. The present week will see some very strong picture features and beginning to-day the programmes will exceed the expectations of those who will witness it.

March Continued.

LONDON, Aug. 16.
 A despatch from Paris announces that it is officially stated that the offensive movement which was begun last night in great force along a line from Sarrebourg on the Franco-German frontier to Lunville in the Department of Meurthe et Moselle, has been continued to-day.

Survivors of Amphion Tell Story.

London, August 10.—A Harwich despatch says the survivors of the cruiser Amphion assert that hardly had they left Harwich than they were ordered to clear the decks for action.

They sighted the Koening Luise and as she refused to stop, even when a shot was fired across her bow, they gave chase. The German ship fired and then the destroyers surrounded her and sank her, after a brief combined bombardment. The German captain was beside himself with fury, and with a revolver in his hand threatened his men as they prepared to surrender to the rescuing ship. He flatly refused to give himself up and was taken by force. He could not control himself, and as he was being taken away from her to the military prison, he flung his bundle into the picket boat with a gesture of angry defiance.

His men, on the contrary, appeared to be quite contented, and laughed and chatted and joked whenever they got a chance, and betrayed interest in all things English. When the smoke of a big ship was seen on the horizon the Amphion gave chase, firing a warning shot as she drew near the vessel, which at once made known her identity as the steamer St. Petersburg, carrying Prince Lichnowsky, the German Ambassador, to the Hook of Holland. While returning to port came the tragedy of the Amphion. As she struck the second mine she gave two plunging jerks, then came an explosion which ripped up her fore part, shot up her funnels like arrows from a bow, and lifted her heavy guns in the air. The falling material struck several of the boats of the flotilla and injured some of the men aboard them.

The Amphion's men are dreadfully burned and scalded and have marks on their faces and bodies which resemble splashes of acid. The scene here is like that which follows a colliery explosion. Of the British seamen in the hospital, thirteen are suffering from severe burns, two from the effects of hydric fumes, and one each from concussions, severe injuries, slight wounds, shock and slight burns. A few wounded German soldiers lie in the hospital.

Wedding Bells.

STANLEY—KING.
 On Thursday evening, August 13th, the Methodist Church, at Foster's Point, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Gertrude Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Stanley, was united in matrimony to Mr. Robert P. King, of this city, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. J. W. Parsons.

The bride was tastefully attired in cream serge, and carried a bouquet of roses, and was attended by Miss Stella Miller. Miss May Gulliford acted as flower girl, and the groom was supported by Mr. A. Smith.
 After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, a large number of guests being present.
 To the newly wedded couple the Telegram extends congratulations.

BRENAN—SEVIER.
 Miss Frances J. Brennan, daughter of the late James Brennan, of this city, was united in matrimony to Mr. Albert E. Sevier, Chief Petty Officer on the U. S. Battleship Florida, at Roxbury, Mass., on July 27th. The ceremony was performed at St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury, and a reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary Meagher. The bride wore white silk, trimmed with shadow lace, and looked charming.
 The Telegram joins in the felicitations extended.
 (Mrs. Sevier is the youngest daughter of the late James Brennan who, it will be remembered was drowned from the barque Camilla in 1891. Her grandfather worked as stevedore on Harvey's premises for 46 years.)

Drowning Accident.

TWO MEN LOSE THEIR LIVES.

On Saturday afternoon two young men named Thomas Tobin and Stephen Rogers were drowned in Fermeuse Harbour by the upsetting of their dory. The victims of the accident and another young man named James Rogers were sailing in their dory when a squall from Blow-Me-Down Hill struck the little craft causing her to upset. All three were thrown into the water and James Rogers succeeded in clinging to the bottom of the dory until help arrived, but the others after a struggle soon sank from view. Their bodies were recovered.
 Both young men were on the threshold of manhood, and the affair has cast a gloom over the settlement of Fermeuse.

In Memoriam.

Heaven now retains our treasure Earth the lonely casket keeps, Where the sunbeams long do linger There our darling mother sleeps; Yet again we hope to meet her When days of life have fled, In Heaven with joy to greet her Where no farewell tears are shed. From her loving daughter Collision in Port.

Just before berthing at the Allan Line pier yesterday at noon, the Mongolian, through no fault of any one in charge, swung in and collided with the Norwegian steamer Frances, at A. Harvey's wharf. For a while matters looked serious, but, due to the excellent management of Captain Hatherley and his pilot, the only damage done was the loosening of a couple of plates in the starboard side of the Norwegian.

More Ships Captured. Germans Lost Many Men at Battle of Haelin.

H.M.S. 'GLORY' AT HALIFAX.
Special to Evening Telegram.
HALIFAX, Aug. 16.
H.M.S. Glory arrived here to-day.

REPORTED RISING.
LONDON, Aug. 16.
A despatch from Rome says that fugitives arriving there from Berlin declare that the Socialists are rising in revolt throughout Germany.

THE BATTLE OF HAELIN.
BRUSSELS, Aug. 16.
According to latest advices from the Belgian capital, barely five hundred German soldiers escaped out of the four or five thousand which engaged in the battle of Haelin. Many of the field guns of the German artillery were lost in the swamps.

GERMAN STEAMERS CAPTURED.
LONDON, Aug. 16.
A despatch from Huelva, Spain, reports that the crew of the steamer 'Katherine' from Algiers, say they saw an English torpedo flotilla capture two German steamers—one a freighter and the other a passenger ship. The latter tried to escape and eight shots were fired before she came to. A prize crew was put on board the passenger steamer, the captain refusing to steer her to Gibraltar.

THE GERMAN ADVANCE.
LONDON, Aug. 16.
Discussing the coming clash of millions of men in Belgium, the military expert of the London Times, Col. R. E. Pington, writes: "The huge bulk of the enormous German force is advancing steadily along a line that runs from Dieppe, forty miles east by north of Brussels and Luxembourg. The massing of such an enormous number of troops has never been attempted before, and doubtless it has taken longer than was expected. One of the reasons the Belgians have taken so many cavalry prisoners is that the German cavalry seems repeatedly to have got out of touch with their supplies."

LORD ROBERTS TO BE COLONEL IN CHIEF.

LONDON, Aug. 16.
King George has appointed Lord Roberts to be Colonel in Chief of such of the overseas forces as may come to England. Lord Roberts, who is 82 years of age, offered his services to the Government in any capacity as soon as it was certain war would come. He has been busy in various ways ever since.

RUSSIAN PHILANTHROPY.
ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 16.
The merchants of Moscow have raised one million two hundred and fifty thousand and fifteen roubles (about $650,000), for the benefit of families of wounded reservists.

JOFFRE IN COMMAND.
STOCKHOLM, Aug. 16.
General Joffre is reported to have been placed in command of the allies in Belgium.

A FRENCH SUMMARY.
LONDON, Aug. 16.
The Paris Temps, according to a Reuter despatch, thus summarizes the situation: German forces stretch from Liege district to Mulhausen district, with marked density north. Their front seems to follow the course of the river through the frontier, which is crossed at Longwy and Ciry. A large part of this front has been brilliantly carried by the French, and the German columns are now falling back. They left behind many dead and wounded, in addition to prisoners. In the Upper Voages the French troops also continue to make progress, and the Germans are retreating.

THE FRENCH ADVANCE.
LONDON, Aug. 16.
This morning came confirmation of the French advance in Alsace. This was a surprise even to military men as it was expected the French would hold off until the great battle impending in Belgium would be fought. General Joffre, however, is evidently ready to take the offensive, and his movements mean that the Germans, who are waging a campaign against Belgium, will be threatened in the rear, and their line of communication put in danger, says the French War Office. "The violation of the neutrality of Belgium has extended from the Belgian and French lines to Holland. The next battle will be from Dussle to Maastricht, with several millions of men on each side. The French War Office also claims that the Germans planned to make a double attack on the French forces—through Belgium, of course, and through Nancy. The first failed, and the second was never completed in its entirety.

Effect of the War

FELT KEENLY IN BOSTON.
A correspondent residing in Boston, U.S.A., writing to a friend in this city under date Aug. 10th, says that the European war is having a marked effect on the City of Boston, especially along the waterfront. He states that at the time of writing, practically all the ocean liners were hung up at the docks, and that employment along the piers was at a premium. About 25,000 longshoremen were idle, and as a result great distress prevailed amongst that class of laborers. To relieve the situation, the Corporation of Boston voted the sum of $300,000 to be expended in opening up new streets, thereby giving the unemployed an opportunity to tide over the crisis. He further states that a large number of mills have closed down, as the manufacturers are afraid to risk sending their goods to foreign countries. Provisions are steadily rising, and no one seems to know when the limit will be reached. This correspondent says that practically all business concerns throughout the United States are at a standstill.

Decoration Day.

Yesterday afternoon a large attendance of members of Dudley Lodge, S.O.E., met at the Salvation Army Cemetery and decorated with flowers the graves of deceased brothers Simpson and Rowe. The service was read by W.P. Bro. N. Andrews and Chaplain J. Hemmons. The Committee visited the C. of E. and General Protestant Cemeteries in the morning and at each cemetery placed over 34 and 8 graves, respectively, the white ensign containing the word Dudley, together with roses.

Last Night's Lecture.

The lecture given by Dr. Grenfell at the Seamen's Institute last night was largely attended, and was highly interesting. Mr. E. Bogue of the R.N.M., D.S.F., presided, and Mr. Stirling of Chicago was also on the platform. The discourse dealt chiefly with the lack of facilities for advancement among the people engaged in the Labrador fishery. During the course of his remarks the lecturer announced that he had received word on Saturday, that there was a decided improvement in the fishery. At the close the chairman briefly reviewed the work being done by the Deep Sea Mission in England. The meeting closed with a hymn followed by the National Anthem.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—At the present moment, perhaps, it would be judicious, if not popular, to keep out of newspaper headlines and newspaper poetry all references to the battles of Trafalgar and Waterloo. Naturally to Britons these names are synonymous with victories of magnitude and importance; perpetuate the glories of British arms, and thrill us as the note of the trumpet. Whilst, no doubt, these names are used as characteristic expressions only, politeness demands that it would be more courteous to our French Allies if we refrained from using them as comparisons. And while it is understood that in no sense is there any intent in using them to offend the susceptibilities of our Gallic friends and companions in arms, nevertheless anything calculated, however innocently, to wound and give offense should be rigidly and rigorously suppressed and discouraged by the press.
No reference has been made to Inkerman and Balaklava, similarly, then why Trafalgar and Waterloo?
Among the Allies, "esprit de corps" must prevail. Otherwise—the deluge.
Yours truly,
C. T. JAMES.
Channel, Aug. 14th, 1914.

DIPHTHERIA REPORTED.—Saturday afternoon, a 18-year-old boy, suffering from diphtheria, was conveyed to the fever hospital.

Important Cable

From Secretary of State for the Colonies to His Excellency the Governor.
The accompanying message is a reply to one sent by His Excellency the Governor at the request of the Prime Minister on behalf of the Board of Trade who were anxious to know if the arrangements made by the British Government in relation to War risk insurance, whereby the British Government guaranteed 80 per cent, applied to Colonial ships: "With reference to your telegram of the 14th of August Board of Trade states that a number of Colonial Registered vessels have been already entered in one or other of the three approved Associations and it is therefore possible that Newfoundland steamships referred to in your telegram have not applied to all three Associations. If owners failed to obtain admission to all three and particulars are furnished to the Board of Trade, the Board will institute enquiries to see if a solution can be found."

Portia Returns.

The S. S. Portia, Capt. J. Kean, arrived back from the westward at 4 a.m. yesterday, bringing a full freight and as passengers:—Rev. G. L. Mercer, Messrs. Bastow, Pittman, Harrington, Crossman, Misses Du Bourdieu, Tucker, Hallett, Renouf, Greene, Welsh, Kelly, Wright, Edwards, Fitzgerald (4), Bartlett, White (2), Warren and 40 second class.
The round trip was a quick one although the ship had to call at Sydney for coal.

Stoker Caught Looting.

A mean and barefaced kind of theft was perpetrated on Saturday by a fireman, who was one of the foreigners discharged from the s.s. Florizel. He went on board in the noon day, and although watched by several men, brazenly rifled the pockets of some of the local firemen who are now engaged on the ship. He was told to make himself scarce, which he did, but only to return again a few hours after when the ship was ready to sail. He then went into the fore-castle and attempted to create a disturbance with the local seamen. The captain reported the matter to the police and two officers came aboard, placed the disgruntled foreigner under arrest and escorted him to the police station.

Typhoid Outbreak.

The Sagona met the Kyle at Battle Harbor on her recent trip north and took on board Dr. Smith who was ordered to enquire into the typhoid fever outbreak at Mackovic Bay. Two cases of the disease were found there. One of the patients died and the other recovered. There was no further outbreak of the disease reported on the coast and the physician returned on the Sagona to Wesleyville where he rejoined his ship.

Great Battle Expected in Belgium.

Russia Advancing on East Prussia and Galicia in Austria.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, To-day. From many sources have come clear indications that a general advance of the allies against Austro-German forces has begun. It is not only in the West but also in the East and South of the vast theatre of war that a collision is impending. Russians are already in East Prussia and Galicia, and a second Russian army already 800,000 strong is nearly ready to move forward against the Germans. These two Russian armies will steadily grow in numbers, week by week, and we shall soon know whether the Russians are making their chief effort in the North or the South. The flanks of the great Russian army in Poland are threatened from East Prussia on the right and from Galicia on the left. These threats have to be dealt with before an advance towards Berlin can be made. Large forces are necessary for this purpose. Russians are gradually making their presence felt. Before long their doings will become exceedingly important, but our chief interest now is concentrated upon the battle field which stretches practically from the North Sea to the Swiss frontier. Here great events are impending. When German concentration was unveiled, it was found to extend somewhat more to the North than had been expected. Had the Germans obtained a clear cut through Belgium, this fact might have gained for them an initial advantage. The priceless valour of Liege and the Belgian army discounted this expected success, and gave time to the French General Staff to amend their disposition. Every French corps practically has been moved one peg further to the Northward. The German navy and war allies were not able to impede in any way the transport of troops by sea in the Mediterranean or elsewhere. As a consequence the Franco-Belgian allies now are in a good military position.

Style With the Gloves.

Points and Tricks of Ring Champions Compared by An Expert.

Style in boxing is the finishing touch given by a particular man to a general principle in his own way. To give an instance, the principle of the straight lead-off at the head is the same the world over. But no two very good boxers do it in quite the same way. To take this simple blow—the straight left at the head—there is very little room for much variety. Yet champions have made this best of all blows effective in quite different ways. Jim Driscoll, to take a present-day example, has the quickest left I have ever seen. He does not just pop it into his opponent's face once and back away, but as a rule, with lightning swiftness, he hits again and again and yet again—sometimes four times in succession.

How different is the Frenchman, Georges Carpentier! With him there is just as much grace of movement, the same eagerness to follow up an advantage, but the style is totally different. Instead of carrying his right arm across his chest from chin to ribs in the regular English fashion, he is always moving it about, often holding it as far out in front of him as the typical British holds his left. He will crouch low for a moment, and then spring up straight. Sometimes he tucks away his left elbow, so that the fist is immediately below his shoulder. Then he advances on his man and shoots out the left to his head or body when he is least expecting it.

Bombadier Wells' arms are tremendously long, and he has always enjoyed a great pull over his opponents in the matter of reach; but he does not always make the most of it. Fitzsimmons' style would be considered old-fashioned by many of the more modern boxers. It is awkward, both for the spectator and for the opponent—very awkward indeed for the latter. He has a curious gait by which he covers the ground more quickly than you would think. His great left arm comes and goes like a piston-rod, and from the fixed, ferocious stare of his blue eyes it is quite impossible to guess whether the blow will come from the left or the menacing right, which twitches now and again in the evident desire to be loosed at its mark.

James J. Corbett was another champion of the same kind, though he was a good deal quicker than Fitzsimmons at his best. Equally hard-hitting, equally strong, he was perhaps a shade the more skilled boxer of the two; but there was never much to choose between them. Fitzsimmons beat Corbett in the fight for the Championship simply because he was a little the tougher. The man who beat both these—James J. Jeffries—was, curiously enough, nothing like so scientific a boxer as either, only he was abnormally strong, and he hit as few men can. Jeffries was a natural fighter, with a rushing style. He was perfectly willing to take any amount of punishment, provided he could land just one good blow. If he did land it—and it was generally a terrific swing—his antagonist was done for.

Tommy Burns, another boxer who seems to have retired definitely, had a style quite his own. His influence is seen very clearly in Carpentier. He would completely alter his method for each new opponent, learning their weak points with wonderful speed, and taking advantage of them. One of Burns' most successful strategies was to disconcert his men by glaring at them like an ogre, and talking to them, telling them exactly what he meant to do.

Mouth-fighting, as it is called, is a stratagem which often succeeds with young and inexperienced boxers, who seem quite paralyzed or fascinated by it, like a rabbit with a snake. But the old stager takes no notice. It is always a delight to see Johnny Summers getting close to his man, attacking him with half-arm blows. One, two, three, four, one after another, they go pelting in at the body and the head, but particularly body, with such swiftness that you can hardly see them. And all the weight of the compact and muscular little body is behind each punch. Summers, unlike many men who go in for much close fighting, does not make it simply an excuse for clinching, but keeps as free as possible all the time, hits clean, and when he thinks the rally has been long enough, darts away to rest for a moment, and to think of some new method of attack.

Gold!
There's lots of it—but generally too mixed with rock to be profitable.
Much the same with food value. The nourishment in many foods is in such form that it cannot be readily assimilated.
Grape-Nuts is scientifically prepared from wheat and barley to present their rich nourishment in easily digestible form.
Long baking (about 20 hours) breaks down the starch cells—making it partially pre-digested and readily assimilable by the most delicate stomach.

Discouraging Fishery News.

The S. S. Sagona, Capt. N. Kennedy returned from the Labrador service Saturday evening. The ship left here on July 30th and went as far north as Nain, making all the ports of call going and returning. Large quantities of ice were met from Square Islands north, and at Grosswater Bay the ship was delayed for over 36 hours by the floe. Capt. Kennedy reports very little fish from Pack's Hr. north and only a sign at Turnavick and Macovick. When the ship was returning cod was striking in from Cape Harrington to Grady, which was the first for the season. At Macovick, Turnavick and Iron Bound Islands the traps were averaging from 10 to 30 quintals for one haul. Dunn who operates from Macovick has 400 quintals ashore to date. From Battle Hr. to Grady the principal section of the coast there is no improvement and the catch is the smallest for many years. Several of the places traps have not been put in the water at all owing to the ice conditions. The bankers fishing along the coast have done practically nothing, and the floaters are all working north. From Twillingate south the outlook seems brighter, but on the whole the voyage will be one of the worst on record unless some wonderful change takes place within the short period of the fishing season that now remains.

Allan Liner Mongolian

MAKES ANOTHER RECORD RUN. The R. M. S. Mongolian, Capt. Hathorley, reached port yesterday from Liverpool, after a passage of 6 days, 18 hours. When she left here last the ship made the run to Glasgow in 6 days, 6 hours. She sailed from Liverpool on Sunday, the 9th at 5 p.m. and had rough weather the first couple of days at sea. After that fine weather prevailed. She brought 510 tons of cargo and 30 packages of mail. The following passengers landed here, in saloon:—Rev. and Mrs. H. Asboe, R. H. Ayre, Miss F. Bailey, Miss Balrd, Mrs. Dodd, and infant, Miss A. Dodd, C. C. Duley, Miss M. Duley, W. and Mrs. Hitchcock, E. M. Jackman, Rt. Rev. Bishop Martin, Mrs. Martin, Hon. S. Milroy, R. C. Patterson, Rev. W. and Mrs. Perrett, G. H. and Mrs. Ridge, W. J. White, A. C. Fitzpatrick, 10 in second cabin and 2 in steerage. There also came on the ship in transit for Philadelphia and points in Canada 48 first class, 62 second and 36 third, including some wealthy Americans and Canadians, who had been touring the continent. These people had an anxious time of it in England, owing to the present war situation and by reason of some of the big liners having discontinued running they were practically stranded because of their inability to cash credit notes. Hundreds of wealthy tourists are still in the Old Country awaiting to get a passage home.

During the run from Liverpool Capt. Hathorley passed the "Empress of Britain" and saw several steamers to the northward of his ship but could not distinguish them.

For one day's run the Mongolian covered 307 knots.

Household Notes

Strong ammonia water will remove the stains of iodine.
To remove fruit stains, soak them in milk, or use oxalic acid.
When peeling a pineapple always leave the top on to hold it by.
Rub a little lemon juice on tarnished faucets to brighten them.
When steaming strawberries use the new little strawberry hullers.
A little turpentine in warm water is the best thing to clean windows.
If you wish to store silver so that it will not tarnish, pack it in dry flour.
Save the fir needles of the Christmas tree for sweet smelling pillows.
There are pointed scissors which cut out each separate eye of the pineapple.
Lemon and orange rinds may be dried, grated and bottled to be ready for use.
Do not throw beet tops away; they are an excellent substitute for spinach.
Rub the butter paddles with salt if you have any trouble making butter balls.
Put cream and bread crumbs into hamburger steak and it will be delightfully juicy.
Heat the knife or dip it into hot water and dry it before cutting fresh bread or cake.
Windows are most easily washed with a cloth first and then rubbed with a chamois.
To wash light-colored silk gloves successfully, put them on the hands; fasten at the wrist.
Pour boiling starch over ink or iodine spots and they will come out in two or three hours.
To prevent chapped hands in cold weather always dry them very carefully after washing.
Use old catalogues for pads for the kitchen table or cupboard or to try the fatrons on.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Sponge black silk with clear coffee to freshen it, and iron on the wrong side when partly dry.
Before peeling onions, let them stand in water, then peel, and the eyes will not smart so badly.
Mend the boys' trousers on the sewing machine and the patch will not pull out as if done by hand.
To take castor oil easily, put orange juice in a glass first, then the oil, then more orange juice.

The Grey Friar of Oxford

And How He Forestalled the Twentieth Century.

The statue of Roger Bacon by Mr. Hope Pinker, which has been erected to commemorate the seventh centenary of his birth, was unveiled at Oxford recently. "Roger Bacon was undoubtedly one of the most original minds of the Middle Ages," says the Inquirer. "As a theologian and a distinguished ornament of the Franciscan Order he was known as 'Doctor Admirabilis.' But an enthusiastic pupil gave him a higher title of honor when he called him 'the Master of Experiments.' Endowed with boundless curiosity and the power of penetrating the secrets of the future, he maintained that it was possible to make instruments of navigation without men to row in them."

"He also believed in the conquest of the present by flying machines, if one sat in the midst of the instrument, and do not turn an engine, by which the wings, being artificially composed, may beat the air after the manner of a flying bird." But still more remarkable was the range of his intellectual activities and his clear perception of the unity of knowledge. "All the sciences," he maintained, "are connected, and foster one another with mutual aid."

"Roger Bacon also held that no substance is so dense as altogether to prevent rays from passing through it, and that rays really do pass through without our being aware of it. Rontgen's discoveries," says Dr. J. H. Bridges, in his "Life and Work of Roger Bacon" (Williams and Norgate), "have given significance to this remarkable passage, which, not merely to his contemporaries, but to succeeding generations, must have seemed in the highest degree fantastical."

"The science of one generation becomes the superstition of the next, and the superstition of one the next of the next. This fact is strikingly illustrated in the life of Roger Bacon," says the Liverpool Post, in review of Dr. Bridge's book.

"Roger Bacon believed in astrology and alchemy, the influence of the stars on human destiny, the transmutation of metals and the elixir of life; and yet unmistakably he had visions of the telescope, the steam engine and the flying machine. No doubt he would have converted his visions into actual achievement, for his science was ever directed to practical ends, had the means not been wanting."

"Had a scientific dreamer fifty years ago imagined an aeroplane, the idea must have remained a dream for at least thirty years, until the French invented an engine capable of driving one. So with Roger Bacon, with his mind's eye he perceived the wonders of the telescope, but he could not make one because the whole world could not supply him with a perfectly ground lens. He foresaw what the steam engine might accomplish and how it could be driven, and locomotives ran along the railway of his mind, but steam engines had to wait for another 600 years until the working of metallurgy and metal progress had made their construction possible. Yet Roger Bacon believed that life might be greatly if not indefinitely prolonged by various grotesque concoctions which he gravely discussed. In a very few years men began to laugh at Roger and his credulity, and they continued laughing for centuries."

"Bacon, amid what we regard as mists of mediæval superstition, came very near lighting upon some of the very latest inductions of radiology and of the properties of the ether."

"It is little wonder," says the Inquirer, "that in the thirteenth century he was reputed to be a magician, and suffered penalties of horrible severity at the hands of his ecclesiastical superiors. The crime of which he was guilty, to quote the eloquent words of Sir J. E. Sandys, was 'an unflinching devotion to the cause of liberty, progress, and reform. He was punished by persons in authority for the unpardonable offence of holding opinions in advance of those of his own time; but the present generation will assuredly rejoice in the honor that is being paid to the memory of one who was a votary of learning and science, as well as a martyr in the sacred cause of Liberty.'"
