Such enthusiasm as was expresesd Saturday will long be remembered in the annals of Canadian history. The nartial strains of the numerous bands stirred the crowds to cheers. British Ship Fired, and Big Oil Circle Showed that German Was Hit

NEW YORK, March 20 .- Passenger: board the British steamer Lapland which reached here today from Liverpool, witnessed a battle in the Irish Channel between a British torpede boat, which escorted the Lapland, and German submarine. The Lapland crowding on all steam, fled in a zigzag line from the combatants.

The Lapland picked up her nava scort outside the enfrance to Liverpool harbor. Before the steamer sailed reports were current in Liver pool that submarines were in nearb; waters. Steamer and convoy were no far from Liverpool when the torped boat opened fire.

The raider fired a torpedo at anothe essel. Passengers aboard the Lap land watched the passage of the mis sile thru the water and saw that I went wide of its mark. No torped was discharged at the Lapland so fa

Meantime the torpedo boat's gun had quickened their fire to a fusilad of shots. The Lapland's captain or dered full speed ahead and the steam er shot forward. To dodge torpedoes an to afford the submarine a poor target the Lapland was steered at interval abruptly to port and to starboard, is zigzag course. Going at her highesspeed, the steamer left the combatant behind and made the safety of the oper sea. She then proceeded on her voy age without further molestation.

The submarine was sunk by the tor pedo boat, in the opinion of Capi Bradshaw of the Lapland. A widening circle of oil on the water where sh sank, the captain said, told of the sub marine's fate.

Henry Morganthau, jr., a passen ger, son of the American minister to Turkey, said that the first warning o the submarine came when the torped boat, which had been in the rear of the Lapland, overhauled the steamer a full speed and enquired if Capt. Brad shaw had seen a submarine. He have not, and the warship fell back. When she was 1000 yards behind the steame she started firing in the direction o the Lapland. Her guns spoke in quich succession and the shots fell so close to the Lapland's port side that the spray from jets of water they raised almost touched her. Then the water became oil-coated. The warship hurried up, racing thru the oil-covered water, near the Lapland again. Meantime the steamer sped ahead. The torpedo boat remained near the oil spot held in the history of Toronto, it was one of the most orderly as well.

The second contingent was never seen to better advantage than on Saturday. With weather conditions ideal in the early part of the afternoon, the immense crowd was very enthusiastic. The chilly breeze did not temper their anxiety to see the parade, nor did interest lag until the last unit had passed. Even then thousands of the civilians had not seen chousands of the civilians had not seen chousands of their soldiers. On every hand exclamations of admiration were heard, and unstinted praise was given the men in uniform. Sharp on Time.

Contrary to all precedent, the parade started promptly on time. The van of the parade left the armories exactly at 2.30 o'clock. The men stepped along briskly and were in fairly close order, but it was not until 3.35 that the last unit left University avenue, along Queen street, towards James street. Only a short time claused from that time until short time clapsed from that time until the head of the parade came in view again on its way down towards the origi-

There was not a detail that was not provided for. Everything passed off smoothly. Of course the inevitable minor accidents occurred, but they were expected and did not cause any inconvenience to speak of. Several horses fell, and their riders had to get mounted again as best they could. Slight delays were caused by those disturbances, but on every occasion the men rapidly adapted themselves to circumstances. To such a degree were even the smallest details perfected that anyone acquainted with the magnitude of arranging such a task could not help being greatly impressed at the splendid efficiency shown.

As for the actual appearance of the men, there could not be much foundation for criticism from any quarter. The men sathered from Ontario's factories and indeed from every rank and station of life, looked splendidly efficent. Hardened by the discipline which they have had to endure for the last four months at Exhibition eamp the men appeared to be capable of taking their piaces on the firing line with the best that the Britisn Empire has produced.

These two benefactors have enabled the student in Toronto to trace the development of the Chinese potters' art from the earliest period.

Immediately on entering the Chinese Porcelain room, the attention is drawn to a huge seated statue of a disciple of Buddha, a marvelous piece of workmanship. The expression of the face baffles, fascinates, haunts. It recalls the masterpiece of peonardo da Vinci and might be termed the Mona Lisa of Chinese art. The age of the statue is uncertain, but it apparently belongs to one of the very early peri-

Connoisseurs say the culminating epoch of the ceramic art in China is during the Kang-risi period (1643-1722). Our Greatest Growth During the War

Since last fall we have added another half dozen links to our chain of stores, and they are all flourishing. That sounds remarkable in the face of present economic conditions, but when one stops a moment to figure it out the reason is apparent. Men who were paying high prices for custom tailoring are now patronizing us, and they are here to stay. But the feature of this growth that interests every customer is that the increased size of our organization makes it possible to counteract the higher cost of production, and continue to

He got off from a King HAMILTON NAMES car at Cowan avenue, and said the limousines and runabouts were lined up from the Pavlowa nearly down to King street, and when he saw about two thousand people in the building, he said business in Toronto must necessarily be pretty good. He also said that he had attended several different dancing academies during his travels the United States, but sure none of them could claim as select a patronage as the academy on Cowan avenue. The ventilation, the perfect floor, and the manner in which such a large crowd was handled convinced him of the strict way in which Pavlowa is conducted. FIRE DEPARTMENT DEBATE CONTINUES

Nomination of Col. J. P. Langton Will Be Strongly Opposed

HOLD PRIVATE CAUCUS

Recommendation of Board May Be Withdrawn if Not Satisfactory

Another long debate on the reorganization of the fire department is promised for Monday's council meeting. Three or four meetings have already been carried long into the night by debates on this subject, and now that the board of control has recommended Controller O'Neili's nominee, Colonel Jos. P. Langton, for the position of fire commissioner, council will have another fling at the department. The colonel's chance of getting the position does not look any too good, the members of council being about equally divided on the question. Aldermen McBride and Cameron, the two surongest fighters around the board, are keenly opposed to the appointment. They do not think that because a man has a number of millitary titles it necessarily follows that he has any particular qualifications for fire commissioner. On the other hand it is pointed out that Colonel Langton is an organizer of ability, and that is the kind of man needed as head of the department, and not so much a fire fighter.

Mayor Church stated vesterday move.

Mayor Church stated yesterday morning that there would be a private caucus before council meets in regard to the nomination, and it may be that if a majority show themselves as against Controller O'Neill's nomination, the recommendation of the board will be withdrawn, which will prevent any discussion in council.

drawn, which will prevent any discussion in council.

There is a strong feeling in some quarters against the further investigation into the department, and it is likely that the action of council in regard to Colonel Langton's appointment will be the deciding factor as to whether the investigation goes on or not.

Other matters to be dealt with by council are an additional interim grant of $500 to the Women's Patriotic League Leave of absence to Corporation Counsel Geary, who has been called to go to the front, with full salary during the war. Adoption of the revision of the water rates as recommended by City Treasurer Patterson and Works Commissioner Harris, making the proportion charged to fire protection 32.01 per cent., and that 67.09 per cent. be charged against the balance of the service. That the recommendation of the works committee to have West Bloor street graded at a cost of over $93,000 be referred back for further consideration. The board do not concur in the recommendation of the works committee to go on with the duplicate waterworks system, and council is asked to send the recommendation back until the estimates for the year have been passed.

Buildings on Farm. been passed

The property committee recommend that the erection of new buildings at the Women's Industrial Farm be gone on with. That the reduction of $1 per lamp for street lighting be taken advantage of instead of changing the lamps to get more efficiency, with which change the rate would remain the same as last Buildings on Farm. year.

The board still refuses to report funds for the cleaning out of Catfish Pond and asks that the recommendation of the parks committee be sent back again for further consideration.

He enlisted in Kamloops, B.C., and had not lived in Hamilton for a number of years. According to the announcement from the war office he was only slightly wounded. The other Hamilton man to be mentioned was Percy Boyaird, whose parents reside at 258 York street. He was wounded in the left cheek in an engagement which took place last Saturday, and is now in the hospital at Rouen, France. He left here with the Army Medical Corps of the first contingent. When he reached Salisbury Plain he learned that his corps might not be sent to the front for some time, and he was successful in securing his transfer to the fourth battalion and afterward to the tenth, when he learned that the latter

American Embassy Already Approached to Save Constantinople

Canadian Press Despatch.
LONDON, March 20.—With the Russian Black Sea fleet reported knocking at the door of the Boand the six allied battleships ing the bombardment of the Turkish positions on the Dardanelles, the fate of the straits is today hanging in the balance according to epinions freely expressed in London. Nevertheless, reports from Turkish sources still profess supreme confidence in the impregnability of the defending forts, which, it is claimed, have successfully sustained a bombardment over 21 days.

which, it is claimed, have successfully sustained a bombardment over 21 days.

The report of the British admiralty giving news of the sinking of three battleships, two British and one French, is rather hazy as to the results achieved by this sacrifice, and it gives weight to the growing belief that the straits will not be won until the naval operations are supported by effective land forces. The bombardment of Friday was interrupted by bad weather, but it is anticipated that the operations now will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

Another Boat Damaged.

The French admiralty, while expressing the hope that some members of the crew of the battleship Bouvet have been saved, confirms reports from neutral sources that the French battleship Gaulois also suffered severely in the battle of March 18.

While Turkish official reports minimize the effect of the bombardment and declare that Constantinople is not afraid intelligence received from other near eastern points sets forth that negotiations already have been begun with the American embassy to act as an intermediary to save the Ottoman capital from the guarded statement of the German sea-raider Karlsruhe have received some confirmation by the guarded statement of the British Admiralty that there is every reason to believe that this crulser was sunk in the West Indies the beginning of November.

Say Russians Have Failed.

the battlefronts in Europe, which again seem to have relapsed into the condition of slege warfare which prevailed during the winter. Austrian reports by way of Berlin claim that the Russian offensive movement in the Carpathians thru the Lupkow Pass has resulted in failure, but direct reports from both Vienna and Petrograd agree that Austrians as well as Russians are making attacks and counter-attacks in the Carpathians without any decisive results.

CURRENT MINES ARE MOST DEADLY

Have All the Destructive Pow ers of Torpedo Fired by Submarine

These current mines have all the destructive powers of a torpedo fired by a submarine. They contain guncotton charged, the same as operative mines, the usual charge weighing 500 pounds. The mines float along with the current and are invisible, since they are weighted so as to keep submerged at a distance of about fifteen feet below the surface.

A drag attached to the up and down about fifteen feet below the surface. A drag attached to the up and down chain seems to give direction to the mine, keeps it in the current and prevents it from shooting off shoreward. Once the mines are launched fair with the current they may be depended upon to float true along with it, unseen and unheraided, and only need the shock of contact with a ship's bottom to cause the fulminate of mercury detonators to function, and in turn to detonate the whole tremendous mass of guncotton contained within the shell case. No warship afloat has been built that can withstand the effect of five hundred pounds of guncotton detonated alongside her underwater hull, and the effect is to blow asunder hull and bulkheads, and with even chances of exploding by sympathetic shock the magazines of the ship herself. This is just what in all probability happened to the Ocean and her helpless consorts. This destruction appears to have been as complete, as it was sudden, and the marks were indelibly those of the deadly current mine.

'Many thanks for your kind advice re mobilization of third contingent. Fully appreciate your desire to have money spent in a few localities, towns and villages, but please do not overlook the fact that these froops are untrained, and it is impossible to train them in these cities, towns and villages. The motive in calling out these troops is defence and honor of empire and they will be worse than useless if untrained. They would be a menace. Therefore, I shall move them as soon as spring opens up to camps where they can have manoeuvres and absolutely ample target practice. Altho the ship owners contended that under the contract the Olav was not called upon to appear in Glace Bay, N.S., until May, Judge Veeder deolded that the question of the vessel's carrying contraband was problematical, and that if such a demand were made the defendants could have refused. The coal company sued for 125,000, but the court did not rule on the amount of damages, holding that this would have to be decided by the expense incurred by the coal company in chartering another vessel.

The decision was in the form of an

Turkish Fort Seriously Damaged and Many of Its Defenders Killed

Canadian Press Despatch. PARIS, March 20 .- No attempt was made by the allied fleet to develop to the fullest extent its first general attack on the Dardanelles, which was launched Thursday, says an Athens despatch to the Havas Agency, which quotes a British officer as authority for the statement. Two thousand shells were fired in a six-hour bombardment designed to force a passage to Kilid Bahr and Chanak Kalessi.

Fire from the Turkish batteries was uninterrupted and violent, according to information obtained from other sources, the Havas Agency correspondent declares. The prow of the French battleship Gaulois was touched by a mine, but the damage done can be repaired in a few days, She left the straits and anchored at the Island of Navria.

One Turkish fort, the name of which is not given, is said to have been seriously damaged, while many of its defenders were killed or wounded.

The despatch says the allied warships re-entered the straits at 9.30 Friday morning and resumed the bombardment with great violence.

LONDON, March 20, 11.10 a.m.—Six battleships re-entered the Dardanelies Straits Friday according to a despatch received here by the Reuter Telegram Company from the Island of Tenedos. This resumption of the action after the loss Thursday of the French battleship Bouvet and the British battleships Irresistible and Ocean failed to accomplish anything for the reason that the unfavorable weather conditions made operations impossible.

WEEK'S WAR SUMMARY By W. H. STEWART

Tor the fourth week events in the Dardanelles have claimed the chief interest and attention of the world. This time that theatse was marked by a disaster which, the expected, and provided for in advance, brings home forcibly to the mind that the operations of the allied fleet are constantly beset by grave dangers. Two British and one French battleship of the third-class, were blown up by floating mines set adult by the Turks and Germans submarlines and the putting linte effect of a blockade of all Germany, Austria and Turkey. The United States will protest against the blockade, it is said at wasnington, but this protest will be made on hair-splitting technical grounds. WHO INVENTED THE NEWSPAPER SCOOP?

John Walter, Who Founded "The London Times" in 1785. Called Its Creator.

WATERLOO STORY A SCOOP.

Exclusive Report of Battle of Trafalgar and Other. Famous "Beats."

In England the newspaper "beat," or "scoop," is sometimes called an anticipation. Whatever at name, it is one of the most important features of modern journalism and may be considered almost an invention of that greatest of European dailies, The Lon-greatest of European dallies, The LonGon Times.

John Walter founded The Times in 1785, and was the first to understand the popularity and overwhelming importance of early information. He was not satisfied by the treatment he received from the British postal authorities of his day and proceeded to organize an independent news service.
It is not hard to imagine the enormous cost of such an enterprise: but he ous cost of such an enterprise; but he was able in this way to beat the government again and again with import, ant political and military news. He brinted an account of the Capture of Flushing twenty-four hours before the government at London knew anything about it. He sent to "cover" the Peninsular Campaign the first of all war correspondents.

Amony the fourteen great editorial departments of The Times, the For-eign and Military departments have always been the most important, the always been the most important, the organization of the Foreign Department being exceedingly far-reaching. All these vast resources of The Times are being used to prepare "The London Times History of the War," now being distributed by The Toronto World on their popular coupon plan. The Battle of Trafalgar, where Nelson sound his great navel titlery with son scored his great naval victory over the French and the Spanish fleets in the French and the Spanish fleets in 1805. was first announced in The Times. From the fleid of Waterloo, June 18, 1815, Times despatches announced the downfall of Napoleon several hours before the regular military couriers reached the government officials in London.

At a time when the other and less enterprising Fauronean recognitions.

enterprising European papers were printing conventional reports of what was going on in the Crimean War, 1853-56, where Great Britain and her 1853-56, where Great Britain and her allies were pitted against Russia, The London Times printed the correspondence of William Howard Russell. His letters not only gave early and complete reports of the campaign, but were amazingly outspoken in their criticism of how the war was being waged, and ultimately lead to the fall of the British Ministry, then in power, and an entire revision of the plan of campaign.

One of the most celebrated of "scoops" was the announcement by The London Times (in the third of a series of long editorials—not in the news columns at all) of the exceedingly important fact that Disraeli had purchased on behalf of the British government a majority of the stock of the Suez Canal Company. This coup on the part of the astute Prime Minister was actually suggested to him by ister was actually suggested to him by one of the editors of The Times, and one of the editors of The Times, and was one of the most important political steps ever taken by Great Britain. An English provincial paper, inspired by the great "scoops" of The Times, once laid its plans for a big "beat" of its own. This was in the days when the Oxford-Cambridge boat race loomed up as the one great sporting event of the year. Before the race the paper printed two complete editions, one in dark-blue ink, announcing the victory of the dark-blue Oxfords; the other edition in a lighter shade, telling how the pale-blue Canterbritant.

Oxfords; the other edition in a lighter shade, telling how the pale-blue Cantabrigians had swept the river. The race resulted in a dead heat!

A "scoop," said to be unparalleled in the history of journalism, was accomplished by the celebrated London Times correspondent. M. De Riewitz Times correspondent, M. De Blowdtz. This journalist held the key to diplomatic secrets of the greatest importance thruout the continent. When the Congress of Berlin, which included delegates from Germany, Austria, Russia, Great Britain, France, Italy Russia, Great Britain, France, Italy and Turkey was in session under the presidency of Blamarck, De Blowitz was in the closest touch with a certain member of the diplomatic corps. He met this friend every day at a restaurant in Berlin, but no salutation or word of recognition passed between them. They daily took adjacent tables and hung their hats on the wall on adjacent hooks, At the conclusion of the meal the two men, who wore the same size hats, used to exchange hats, and meal the two men, who wore the same size hats, used to exchange hats, and in this way De Blowitz gathered the most accurate and complete informa-tion possible of the session of the Con-gress. Finally, on examining the hat on leaving the restaurant, De Blowitz, to his great satisfaction, discovered inside no less a prize than the complete text of the treaty that was about to be signed. He immediately sent this by telegraph to The Times, where it appeared several hours before the various diplomats attached their sig-various diplomats attached their signatures to the treaty.

This same De Blowitz, who possessed sources of information more complete than most of the rulers and diplomats with whom he came in contact, is also credited with having averted, in 1875, a second Franco-Prussian War. This was accomplished by an expose published in The Times of certain diplomatic conditions which in continental newspapers could not possibly have been put in print with possibly have been put in print with-possibly have been put in print without bringing on war.

During the year 1898 the foreign intelligence of The London Times cost about $250,000. A single cable message, on the subject of a revolution in Argentina, cost $6000. During the Boer War The Times supplied its readers with war despatches from some twenty-four correspondents.

If the censorship during the present war was not so extraordinarily rigid, The London Times would be looked to Interest Haif Yearly.

WHEN HAVE THE PUBLIC HAD A BETTER OPPORTUNITY TO BUY INTO A REALLY GOOD THING THAN THE PRESENT ISSUE OF STOCK IN EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, LIMITED, FORESEEN AND NEEDED FOR YEARS? THE EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, LIMITED, IS NOW AN ACCOM-PLISHED FACT, WE EXPECT THIS ISSUE TO BE OVER-SUBSCRIBED, SO DO NOT WAIT—BUT ACT NOW.

OBJECTS The object of the formation of the Company is to erect and establish Stockyards in the City of Edmonton in the Province of Alberta, for the purpose of handling live stock and the manufactured products thereof and farm products generally.

From the government statistics for the past year, under normal conditions the Province of Alberta has increased its production of live stock to an enormous extent. The production for the year 1913, in live hogs, showed an increase of three hundred and fifty per cent. more than the year 1912, and the shipments for the first four months of 1914 were practically as much as the full year of 1913. The total shipments of the year 1914 are not yet available. By creating an adequate market in the midst of the Province of Alberta, a great stimulus to the increased production of live stock in this province will be effected. The crops of the Province of Alberta tributary to Edmonton during the year 1914 were such that there are enormous quantities of feed available for live stock, and by the establishment of these stock yards, the farmers can be provided with stockers and feeders to make use of their surplus feed. The Province of Alberta (in the Edmonton district) is unique in this particular, that in no period of its history has it ever suffered from drought. THE PRESENT AN OPPORTUNE TIME. The present is an opportune time for the establishment of a live stock market for the following reasons:

The present is an opportune time for the establishment of a live stock market for the following reasons:

1. The war on the Continent of Europe is bound to result in the depletion of a great many herds of live stock there, and for years to come there will be an increased demand for live stock from the Dominion of Canada, with correspondingly profitable prices to the Canadian producer.

2. At the present time, the Dominion Government are outlining a plan for the development and marketing of the food products of Canada, which, if carried into effect, cannot fall to give a great impetus to the objects for which this Company is formed.

3. The Government of the Province of Alberta is endeavoring by every means in its power to extend the mixed farming in this province, with farm products generally.

the result that there will be a rapid increase in production of live stock in the Province of Alberta during the years to come. To encourage this the government has established several demonstration farms throughout the province. Government reports show that there were upwards of one million hogs for market in the Province of Alberta during the year 1914, of which the Edmonton packers handled practically 50 per cent. This will show that if a market were established in Edmonton, supplies equal to 100 per cent. This will show that if a market were established in Edmonton, supplies equal to 100 per cent. This will show that if a market were established in Edmonton, supplies equal to 100 per cent. This will show that if a market were established in Edmonton, supplies equal to 100 per cent. This will show that if a market were established in Edmonton, supplies equal to 100 per cent. This will show that if a market were established in Edmonton, supplies equal to 100 per cent. of the present output of the Edmonton packing plant would be available.

4. The present is the opportune time also for the erection of the stock yards that will be used in the erection of the yards can be secured at prices much below those ruling a few mouths ago. Labor can also be soured at much lower rates.

5. As the outcome of the present immentable war, never has there been such a demand on the part of Great Britain for the production of food stuffs as there is at the present time, and the object of this Company is to endeavor, as far as possible, to meet this demand.

6. It is estimated by the Provincial Statistician that the total number of cattle in Alberta in the year 1913 was slightly over the million, of which over forty per cent. were north of Red Deer, and the total number of swine for the same year was six hundred thousand. The total number of cattle in Alberta in the year 1913 was slightly over one million. Since August 1st, 1914, the Alberta Government has had enquiries from farmers in the district tribu

The following estimated revenue is based on the receipts of live stock shipped in to Edmonton during the year 1914, and a reasonable share of the anim

The property upon which the Company's Stock-THE SITE yards will be erected comprises about one hundred and nighty-five acres, partly within the City of Edmonton and partly adjoining, described as follows:

Thirty-five acres, more or less, in Kennedale and Industrial View, with one-haif mile of trackage, and 160 acres, being the southwest trackage, and 160 acres, being the southwest quarter of section 24. Township 53, Range 24, west of the 4th meridian. It is located between the Transcontinental lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Northern Railway, and includes about half-mile of trackage on the north side of the Main Line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This trackage is very valuable, both for the business of the Company and for packing plants and other industries that may be established there in the future. Near the centre packing plants and other industries that may be established there in the future. Near the centre of the property in and within the City limits is the Junction of the Main Line of the Grand Trunk Pacific with that of its City Line, and a station and shipping facilities are promised by the Railway Company upon the completion of the Company's plant.

The Company's property immediately adjoins the Swift Packing plant, the largest business of its kind in Edmonton. The Burns Packing plant is within a mile of the Cempany's property.

The policy of the Company is to encourage the establishment of other Packing Plants, and for this purpose ample land has been secured. This will enable the Company to offer a site on the Stockyards property at a reasonable price.

There are three Transcontinental lines of railway running from Edmonton to the Pacific Coast, affording easy facilities for reaching the Pacific Coast trade, as well as for trade with Great Britain and other European countries, via the Pahama Canal Route.

ADVANTAGE OF THIS OPPORTUNITY YOU MUST ACT QUICKLY

The above estimate is made on the prospective stock in sight for the first year of the operation of the stockyards.

Figuring on the rapid increase in the production of live stock the present plant will easily take care of 25 per cent. additional stock. The expense of handling 25 per cent. extra stock would only entail 25 per cent. increased charge on labor account, as all management, office expenses, disbursements, etc., would remain unchanged by the handling of the 25 per cent. additional stock, therefore the gross sevenue would increase 25 per cent. less extra expense charged for labor.

The above estimate only deals with the profits made by the operation of the Stock Yards proper, and makes no allowance for the profits made by the Stockyards Company in the disposing of certain lands to kindred industries, which always come with a growing stock yards. The Company have very wisely made provision for ample lands for this purpose, and it is their intention to deal with incoming industries on a liberal basis, giving them all encouragement possible to locate in the City of Edmonton.

I told her I would finish it next Friday and the said I need n't mind - said the does n't care if she never hears the last of it. PRODUCTION is PATRIOTISM

Back Yards and Vacant Lots

THE EMPIRE'S CALL TO FEED YOURSELVES

The farmers are responding in their thousands to the call of the Empire for greater production. They have realized that every bushel raised means a bushel more for export to Britain: that this is one way of displaying patriotism. With favorable weather, Canada's crops this year will be the greatest in her history; far greater than any of us thought possible a year ago.

Now, to round out the scheme requires equally patriotic action in the towns and cities. The people of every community, large and small, should make vacant lots and back yards productive by raising their own vegetables and garden stuff. Every pound raised, remember, is another pound furnished toward Britain's needs.

Send for the Government Bulletin

NE DROWSY spring afternoon a year ago, when the daily session of the Ontario Legislature had resolved into a faint vocal murmur, and sleepy rural members on the back benches were meditating on seeding-time, a stranger blundered into the chamber, and without sulutation of any kind started down the stretch of sacred carpet leading to the Speaker. Immediately, a talk, keeneyed old gentleman in semi-military regalia rose from a little desk, and proceeded slowly after the intruder, his long sword clanking gently at his the member speedily follows with an apology. This does not aver that this sentiments are any milder than this sentiments are any milder than those of his forefathers, but later of years have brought an increased you carry more blto and sting than even the crushing broadsides of the old patriots. In other words, the present-day encourages insirtuation rather than charge, and against these the speaker and his right-hand man, the sergeant-at-arms, are practically unable to raise a hand.

The dignity of the Ontario house is proceeded slowly after the intruder, his long sword clanking gently at his heels. A tap on the shoulder and the stranger was guided out thru a short aisle. His intrusion and disappearance occurred without fuss. A few eyes lazily turned in his direction, the voice of the lone debater droned on.

At the beginning of the war a Parisian flag merchant offered a prize of $1500 to the first French soldier who captured a German standard. The reward was claimed by a young infantryman who secured a German flag during the fighting at St. Blase, in Alsace.

The willy German who can capture Fight Commander Samson, alive or dead, will find himself the richer by five thousand dollars. This sum has head and the interruption ended before it had well begun.

Looking down from the galleries on formal occasions visitors are wont to ask. "Who is the benevolent-look-ing old gentleman in uniform?" Altho even frequenters of the gallery and those most conversant with doings of Ontarlo statesmen in the last fifteen years are not generally aware of it, there is a ceremony of the legislature that with one exception, has not been performed since the assembly chamber was moved to Queen's Park from the old Front street site many years ago. Some Early Anecdotes That Reveal Czar's Character

BY MICHAEL GOODWILL.

I T WAS in the fall of 1894 when Emperor Alexander III. died in Crimea that the present czar, then a young man of 26, anveyed the remains of his father to St. Petersburg. The imperial funeral train was to pass thru Harkov, a large commercial city of South Russia, and the authorities were told that of the two imperial trains the first would carry the hearse and the second train would carry the czar with his court and members of the royal family.

That is why, also, when the new czar took up his place in front of the officers in attendance, a railroad policeman came up to him and politely told him: "Your honer, will you please step back, as there will be people of higher rank in front of you?"

Nicholas II., without taking offence, and, realizing at once that he was not recognized by the policeman, answered quietly: "If there will be any one of higher rank let him come and stand in front of me, but meanwhile I will stand here."

dropped the matter.

Another characteristic is the attitude of the monarch when he was a young man of 26 towards his uncles. One of them was officially told by the emperor to meet at the rallway station one of the German ruling princes, who came to attend the funeral of the czar's father. The czar's uncle declined, owing to his age and delicate health. The emperor bid, on the spot, his minister of the court to issue an official order to his uncle to meet the German ruling prince at the station.

The czar's uncle, one of the grand dukes, who is now dead, protested and said: "But your majesty seems to forget that I am not able to go, seeing your majesty has said—" The emperor interrupted him: "I have forgotten" or, worse far, the pangs of keen re-

Nicholas II., when approached by the nunicipal government of Tver in 1885 with the petition of granting some rights to the representatives of each province elected by the people or with other words, to a state parliament, called that petition "unfounded dreams." office as the manager was in Winnipeg, and then there was a member of parliament here who wanted special work done, and this brought my salary up to $25 a week. Then I was told of another man who was writing a book on advertising, and who wanted his work typewritten. He had had a great deal of trouble over it, because no one could read his writing. I found I could read his notes quite easily, and in typing them became quite fascinated with advertising, and learned a great deal about it, and got a desire for that kind of work that I could not give up.

"I went into another office from there, and was in charge there also, but I couldn't get the idea of advertising out of my head, and in 1907 I got a chance to take the first real holiday and the manager was in wanted special manufacturing agent, and the manager of a rapidly growing mail order business, she has never lost a particle of her enthusiasm. When she started in with the work there were not even one thousand agents on the roll. Now between 15 and 25 thousand are working all over Canada for her. "The agents are the big feature in this business," Miss Staines says. "It's their enthusiasm which make the nevelties sell. I take all the new things, and advertise the goods and sell them thru my agents." Miss Staines pays her agents their percentage either by cash or by premiums. "Astonishing to tell you," she sald, "this year they are all asking for premiums instead of money. They say they could not buy them at the price, and that's true, too, because I can get them so much cheaper by a such large quantities."

Why Are There More Great Men Than There Are Great Women?

By ETHEL LEGINSKA

A FEW months ago a man said to me: "With the exception of bearing children, a man can do everything better than a woman, even to sweeping out a room." At the time I was very indignant, but since then I have given the matter lots of thought, and I realize that it is true. But why is it true? That is the matter I want to discuss with you.

Personally, I am enough the primitive woman to enjoy seeing an old-tashioned wife and mother with the right man, a well-kept home and many healthy children. That seems very beautiful to me, especially, perhaps, as it has not been my fate. But a happy marriage is only the lot of those born under a lucky star. We have to think of all the other women, those who have to earn their living and compete with men. In order to do this successfully, we women have to find out the secret of good work, and in many things we can learn from the man.

"In Many Things We Can Learn from the Man."

First of all, we must realize that what holds us back is not so much out ward circumstances as minor conditions in our own natures. There must be drastic changes in the feminine soul before it can compete with the masculine on its own ground. The thing for us to do is to recognize the need of those changes, and then set about making them as quickly as we can.

The chief drawbacks to woman's greatness are: custom, superficiality, clethes, family claims, intuition, lack of education, lack of creative ability, and the lower of lower.

clothes, family claims, intuition, lack of education, lack of creative ability, and the love of love.

I wish every woman in the world could realize these drawbacks, study them, and see if she cannot overcome them in her own nature. If every woman did we should soon have a different race of women.

Mrs. A. E. Jackson, of 29 English road, Southampton, says: "I have known Mrs. Hopkins for a long time. I knew her all through her illness. She was absolutely paralysed, could not move at all, and hospital treatment did her no good. Then she began taking Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and soon she was getting about on crutches. The next thing was that she was walking about without crutches. When I went to my door I found several others out to see the wonder. Now she is in splendid health."

Mrs. A. A. Lever, English road, Southampton, says: "I remember Mrs. Hopkins when she was quite paralysed. She was taken to hospital, and I certainly thought she would never come out alive. Now to see her so strong and healthy is quite astonishing. She is as active as ever."

PLANNING A WEEK'S MENUS IN ADVANCE

HERE isn't much of a choice to be had in fresh vegetables at this time of the year, so I had to pender long and ingeniously over our next week's menu. I really like to do it, tho. I find I have to select only the rather mple dishes which are not likely to meet with catastrophes under my—as yet—not altogether skilful hands.

I write the menus for each day on a separate sheet of paper, hang the even sheets for the week on a bill hook stuck in the kitchen wall, and each orning I consult the day's slip, and get as much of the day's cooking as posble done at the same time.

The Rich and the Poor---Really Who Are They? By WINIFRED BLACK

THE poer are so ungrateful," said a rich woman to me the other day. "You can do and do and do for them, and they never even thank you. They seem to think that's what you are in the world for, to look out for them, and the more you do the less they appreciate it."

You speak as if the fact that a man was poor made him of different flesh and blood from you. and blood from you.

Were you always rich? Was your father? Is wealth something that was born with you, like the shape of your nose and the color of your eyes? Or did somebody work hard to get the money you are spending now? Somebody who was poor once himself, and who was, perhaps, neither ungrateful

The poor? What on earth do you mean by that phrase, good friend of There are so many poor, and every one of them a different kind. There's my washerwoman, for instance, as black as a human being can be, ill and asthmatic, taking care of a good-for-nothing husband and three grand-

She didn't call them the unemployed, as if she were talking about some separate race of creatures. She spoke of them as if they were just plain human bings like herself, only they were in trouble and she was perfectly prosperous and happy, with six days work a week all day long, washing clothes and hanging them out in the cold and taking them in in the wind, and hadding handless the contains a second to the cold and taking them. holding herself in a certain position over her ironing board because she could breathe better that way.

Is that one of the poor you mean, Mrs. Millions?

Or it is some one like the man I know of who wasn't always poor? He was a clerk in a mercantile house, and he had a wife and a little girl, and his employer took his wife away from him, and the little girl died, and he his employer took his wife away from him, and the little girl died, and he signed a note for a friend, and the friend ran away and left him to pay the note, and it took all that he had to do it, and his heart broke, and he has never held up his head again. He can't keep accounts any more. Somehow he doesn't seem to be able to keep remembering. So he does little odd jobs that he can get in the neighborhood, and if you should see him building a furnace fire or sweeping out a basement you would never imagine what a neat little room he manages to keep somewhere in a poor neighborhood, and what a nice little store of books he has there, and how he reads to the children who live near him from his books and tells them stories, when his work is done, and is honest and kind. Is that the sort of poor that you mean. Mrs. Millions?

Is She Poor?

What sort of rich do you mean, Mrs. Pennies? There's my friend, Mrs. Welltodo, she's interested in the blind. She had a blind brother once, and he died, and she has never forgotten it. And so she established a little workshop for the blind, and she helps them every way she can. Is she the sort of woman you mean when you talk about the rich, little Mrs. Pennies?

How about that other women I know, who has three automobiles and a house full of servants and all the other things that money buys, and who has a besotted beast of a husband and a poor nothing of a son and a sweet daughter that she lives for? How about the hundreds of kind, generous, friendly things that woman does every day of her life for the people in her own circle? How about the brave fight she's making to get something of manhood into that poor boy's heart, something like courage into his depleted veins?

Is she the sort you mean when you talk about the rich? Who are we, and what are we, all of us, that we should be divided off into classes, like exhibits at a country fair? You are rich and good. I am poor and bad.

Our neighbor is rich and is half bad and half good.

And the man there in the street, the one with the faithful eyes like a dog, and the weak mouth, and the shambling walk, he's poor, and he's good and bad,

How are you going to draw the line? How are any of us going to dare to attempt to draw it?

Advice to Perplexed Girls

Annie Laurie's Answers to Letters From Sunday World Readers Who Seek Help in Settling Their Love Problems.

I am a young girl of eighteen, and am in love with a young man about twenty years old. He is a handsome man and I have often been called very handsome. He wants me to marry him Please tell me what I should do. Nancy Lee.

GOODNESS gracious, "Nancy Lee." what has his good looks or your "beauty" to do with your answer to his question? Isn't it your answer to his question? Isn't it just to see your letter in print that you have written to me? If you really and truly love the young man who has asked you to marry him, and if there are no reasons why you should not marry him, or why he should not marry you, why don't you marry him and 'e happy?

Annie Laurie.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have a very dear friend with whom I have been keeping company for two years. He is 22 years old and was making good money, but quit his job, and he wants to join the soldiers and go to England. We have been engaged for eight months, and he wants me to marry him before he goes. He used to drink, and he goes. He used to drink, and he says if I marry him he will give me back the money which I have saved and which he wants to borrow till he comes back. Do you think it is advisable to marry him or give him the money be-fore he goes. He is good to me and likes me Please tell me soon, as I have no parents to

NOT lend money to your sweetheart. It will only take all independence and manhood from him. Let him go to the war, and see how he behaves, and when he comes back, will be time enough for you to consider marriage. You must make the man feel that he is the one to take ears of you the one to take care of you

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am keeping company with a young man whom I dearly love, and who I am sure loves me as much as I love him.

At Christmas he wanted me to accept an engagement ring, but my father objected, and I, myself, was not sure what I should do. Much as I love him and want to say "Yes," I am a little afraid to do so, because there is a slight, a very slight trace of insanity in his family. One of his brothers has to be treated occasionally, and his father, altho a very kindhearted man, sometimes displays a very violent temper. His two other brothers and one sister, and he himself, have never acted in any other way than perfectly well any other way than perfectly well balanced people. Please tell me if I should do

"The rich are so hard," said a poor woman to me the other day. "They seem to think the whole earth belongs to them, and we, the rest us, have no right to live at all. I wish they all had to be poor just for a day or so. It would do them good."

The rich! The poor! How strange it is to hear human beings talked of so.

The poor are this, that and the other. Are they really, Mrs. Millons? What poor?

You speak as if the fact that a man. He never married because Mary was subject to insanity—and devoted his life to taking care of her.

Coldly, and without passion, I am inclined to advise you to do what your father thinks is best. He has only your welfare at heart, and wants only your welfare at fleart, and wants to do all in his power to see that his little girl is happy. Have a good long talk with him and settle this question once for all. And yet, you know there have been many men who have made wonderful husbands whose brothers or sisters have been troubled by this taint. So what after all, dear, can I advise you to do? Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of twenty and en-gaged to be married. I have been engaged nearly a year. When we are alone my friend is very affectionate, but when we are in company he makes it a habit to wink at girls and hold their hands, even while I am looking on. Do you think I do wrong in objecting to this? I feel sure that we both love each other, but I cannot understand this.

Radzanow.

D ADZANOW, if you are sure he is fond of you and you of him, just don't notice what is worrying you—he may only be trying to tease you, if it is otherwise time will prove it.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am 19 years old. I came to Toronto from a small town and was employed as stenographer in a down town office. I did not know my employer was _ married man, and as I am rather reserved and mingled little with the others empleyed in the office, no one told me. He has been very kind to me, taking me out to dinner occasionally and to the theatre—in fact, he has been kindness and courtesy personified. I found out quite by accident that he is married. ried. I have also heard that his wife is a very charming woman. Now I feel very badly about this and feel that I ought to write to his wife and apologize for my part in this terrible mistake. What would you advise make the last section of the control of the con would you advise me to do?

S you did not know that the ma A was married, it was no fault of yours. It would not be a good thing to write to the wife about it as she probably knows nothing about it at all, and it would only hurt her. The best thing is to stop going out with the man altogether, and it you can, get another position. You have done the very best thing and have nothing to blame yourself for.

I ought not to go as I may never come back to her again. Well, Dear Annie, do you think I should go or stay here with her? I might add that I am English and she is of Italian descent.

At the present time I am out of work, and am in a lodging house, and do not feel at home. Her par-Annie Laurie.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
Seeing that you take an interest in the affairs of the young ladies of this city, I thought that, perhaps, you could help me out of a very embarrassing situation. I am a young man of 21 years, employed as a stenographer in the city. For some time I have been calling on a young lady of my acquaintance at her rooming house, but on no occasion have I received any encouragement to return.

Now this young lady has expressed her approval of my attentions; to several friends of mine whom size has met. Had she voiced her opinion otherwise there would be, perhaps, some excuse for her actions and reserve in not ask would be, perhaps, some excuse for her actions and reserve in not asking me to call again.

This, Miss Laurie, is where I want you to help me out, knowing that you understand feminine wiles to a far greater extent than I do. What shall I do? Stay away until I am asked to return, or call as I have been doing? It is a very ruzzling question, as viewed from my standpoint, and I shall be very grateful to you, indeed, if you give me its solution. me its solution.

Trusting that you will be kind enough to oblige me in this instance, believe me. Reg. A. B.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

BEP on calling on the young lady, as she would not tell your friends that she liked you unless she did. Young ladies are apt to think that they must hide their feelings before men, and not seem too pleased to see them, and this is evidently what your friend thinks. If she did not want you to call you may be sure that she would show you in some way, and as she has not it is evident that she likes your company. as she has no. likes your company. Annie Laurie.

I am an only child, nineteen years old. My mother died last January, and a few months ago my father left with his regiment for the war. My aunt lives with me, but she dislikes young people, so I am very much alone. I have a boy friend whom I have known all my life. He has been doing everything in his power to help me forget, and be happy. Last week he came unexpectedly and found me crying, and before I knew it he had kissed me. Of course I was furlous and sent him home.

The next day he wrote and apologized. He said it was an impulse, sudden and unexpected, and that he had thought of nothing but that he had thought of nothing but that I was his old playmate in trouble. Should I forgive him? I want to very much.

To make matters worse, there has been a rumor lately that we are engaged. I deny it on every opportunity, but it is very embarassing. Do you think it would make matters better or worse if I went south for awhite?

Oh! Annie Laurie, please tell me what to do.

Gayle.

YES, you should forgive the young man, as he wrote and apologized, and as he said it was done on the impulse of the moment. It might be better for you if you went south

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am keeping company with a young lady, and her home is out of the city. Last summer she invited me to spend a week at her home, which I declined. (My home is here in the city): She has asked me to make arrangements so as I can spend a week at her home this summer. Do you think I should accept?

Do you think it would be proper for me to ask her to my home for tea or to spend an evening, and to meet my parents. A Young Man.

YES, it would be perfectly proper for you to spend a week at your friend's home in the summer. As for you asking her to come to tea at your home, that would also be all right. It would be better, perhaps, if you would get your mother to ask her, but it would be all right to ask her yourself. From your letter you seem to be too bashful. Annie Laurie.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I have read your column in The Sunday World and think you may sunday world and think you may help me, as you have others. I am a young man, 21 years of age. I am very much in love with a young lady, of the same age. I want to go with the third contingent from Canada, but she says ents would like very much for us to be married right away. Do you think this advisable at this time? I have a small bank account.

D. H.—It is not very wise to marry when you have no work. You are old enough to decide what you ought to do and should not be influenced too much by what the girl says—of course, she does not want you to go away.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE;
I am 19 years old. I had a nice young man with whom I kept company for about a year and then we had a misunderstanding. Three months after I went back with him, but not steady. I know he cares for me and I think there is no one like him. But he has so many boy friends—I often think he would like to talk to me, but I think that they lead him astray, as it seems now as if he don't care for anything. It makes me feel bad, as he always used me so well and he certainly was a nice fellow. Helen DEAR ANNIE LAURIE

BLEN, try to be so happy and good natured that you will have a lot of young people around you all the time and then when he sees what a good time you are all having he will cease to care about going around with the boys alone, and want to get back into your company and then it will be easy for you to decide what course to pursue.

Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

A boy friend of mine is away from home for a few weeks. Is it proper for us to correspond? We are good friends—nothing more. If it is proper, which should start the correspondence? Is a girl of sixteen too young to go out to concerts, church, etc., with a boy of nineteen?

C IXTEEN, if he wants to write to S IXTEEN, if he wants to write to you he will, and you can answer his letter, surely.

If your parents like the boy I can see no reason why you should not go to church with him now and then.

On leaving he wanted to kiss me end say good-bye in private. I objected strongly to this, but as he was going a long way off, to enother country, in fact, and, in all probability we should not meet again, I allowed him. Now I often receive letters from him but he never speaks of love to me the I am greatly attracted to him. He wrote and asked me for my photo, which I sent to him, as he is going to the front.

Do you think I had better stop corresponding with him, as I cannot help thinking that I acted in a very foolish way and that he must think I am very silly, too? If you can advise me in this you will greatly oblige.

Reta.

Do not make too serious a matter of the good-bye kiss, Letter writing, and a long acquaintance may lead to friendship, and go no further. Never mind if you were "silly" once, you need not be so again.

A Simple Process

The actual process of bread making is simple enough, and it is the groundwork of most other culinary processes; cakes and pastry are mere decorative superstructures, and all other fine and complicated mixtures that result in puddings, biscuits, etc., are based on this understanding of the first principles of bread making.

THE recent talk about the price of bread has called attention to the fact that the art of home-bread making is rapidly disappearing. In homes where kitchen space is limited it is certainly better to buy bread from the bakery when it is made under proper sanitary conditions, but these reasons do not apply to dwellers in suburban and country houses, where fiour can be delivered and stored and where kitchen space is not limited, and where baking day may, if carefully managed, mean an economy, since the extra heat may be utilized for other special cooking at the same time. If bread making at home is to be a real economy it will depend more of management of time and of "waste" heat than upon the saving in the matter of the price of flour. The superior digestibility and greater nourishment of homemade bread when skilled hands have had the making of it is beyond question.

Consistency of Dough

As to the right consistency of the dough is to safe guide. It should be soft enough to work easily when you begin to knead by hand, but not so soft that it sticks to the bowl. If the dough is too soft the oread will be puffy and full of holes; if too dry it will be hard and will not rise much.

The Right Over

Before starting to shape loaves the oven must be made hot and the fire with care and sundent or the hour stirred in with it to form what is called the "sponge." The yeast may be several teaspoonfuls of brewer's yeast mixed with a little brown sugar and sufficient warm milk or water to make it like a cream. When the sponge is mixed it must be left to rise, the bowl being placed in a sheltered, warm nearly baked.

As to the shaping of loaves, pieces of dough are taken up and lightly cut off from the rest, rolled or flattened on a floured board, dropped into tins or left as round cakes, cut across with d knife to make any shape preferred. The loaf baked in a tin will have quite another flavor from that baked without one, but the advantage of making bread at home is that you may have a varied selection of shapes and flavors in bread, and you may also use a variety of flours and other meals.

For example, you can use part brown or wholemeal and part white flour, all wholemeal, Indian meal, barley flour, buckwheat and other cornmeal, or dry cooker rice and flour; in fact, any variation you may select. Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why Bedsores Happen; How They May Be Cured

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A.B., M.A., M.D. (Johns Hopkins). (Copyright, 1914, Newspaper Feature Service.)

LL betides any one who must cling long to his bed. Neither the meekness of Moses nor the patience of Job will aid in his recovery if other matters be neglected. There is one essential which every bedridden person demands. Whether a man be confined to bed from sheer laziness, a bunion, a broken leg or a feverish distemper, the flesh of his back needs must be looked to. In no other way may he escape bed sores.

may he escape bed sores.

Few persons realize the suffering or the dangers of an open sore in the flesh from lying long abed. These bed sores are in part due to exhaustion and debility of the tissues; in part they are traceable to friction and pressure; in part they arise from waste of the padding and cushions of fat normally present; in part they originate from bacteria; but their most important source is neglect upon the play a role in every bed sore.

Assiduous efforts upon the part of the nurse—alertness by day and by night—are the price of exemption from bed sores if there has been much loss of weight and inanition upon the part of the patient confined for a period to bed.

Some Helpful Live.

In institutions for the aged, in hospitals for the insane, in homes, asylums and sanatoriums for chronic ailments omission to examine the back, heels, legs, hips and other parts subject to pressure or immobility every two hours may give rise to a fatal bed sore. The origin of a bed sore may seem to be only a pimple or a red spot smaller than a three-cent piece.

Immediate change of the point of pressure by an altered position of the prone patient and an increase of rations in the form of more eggs and more milk must be begun. Excessive food is an aid to victory is such an exigency.

A small, inflated bicycle tire or pneumatic cushion, which resembles a ring lifebuoy, or a circular—often called a "nock"—rubber water bottle, three-quarters full should be used to suspend and protect the urritated epidermis. Especially important, according to the large experience of Dr. J. F. Lind, is to stretch the sheets of the bed tightly and pin them firmly to the mattress. The bedding should be sterilized and kept scrupulously clean.

Crumbs of bread and other food or any particles of a like nature must never be permitted to stay on the bedding even for a moment. Any nurse or attendant who allows this is not fitted to look after a bed-ridden sufferer. If the kidneys are beyond control a rubber receptacle must be worn constantly. Some neutral, non-acid and non-alkaline soap, such as castile, should always be employed to clean the parts of the flesh soiled.

Effecting a Cure

Zinc ointment massaged vigorously into all chafed or inflamed structures will go far toward preventing an extension of the redness into deeper structures. A pint of 50 per cent. alcohol into which 10 grains of alum have been added should be used every day and oftener if the skin becomes angry-looking or red. The zinc ointment massage should be repeated then with thoroughness

Once the bed sore is really inaugurated, that is to say, the instant the skin breaks open, the usual castile soap and hot water bath should be followed with hot boric acid water. Sterilized gauze should then be applied as a towel, and a powdery mixture of eight parts of lycopodium to one each of boric acid and aristol dusted into the spening. If this is repeated every two hours, good additional food administered, and pressure is relieved by means of the pneumatic ring, the sore should heal.

Bed sores which are old, sluggish and chronic should be cleaned with peroxide of hydrogen and urged to heal by alternate applications of ice and heat, silver caustic and phenol. Balsam of peru, 10 per cent., in zinc ointment, is a helpful stimulant.

The third of the series of "The Hope Morgan-Grace smith Causeries Musicales" took place at Clovelly, kindly lent by Mr. C. S. Gzowski on Tuesday last. The beautiful drawing-room with its lovely pictures was a fitting setting for these artistic gatherings. The subject, Russian Music, a particularly interesting one in itself, has perhaps now an added emotional interest for us. In the short time at her disposal, Miss Morgan touched only on the chief factors which have conspired to produce in a period of eighty years, ah art which, in the other great art-producing countries has taken centuries to accomplish. The wealth of national folk-song, the intense love of their country, and the fact that nearly all the great musicians of Russia have been men of high social standing and wide culture would of course, be expected to produce an universal art. It has done so. Russian music is spoken of by many as the music of the future. The llustrations chosen extended from the period when the Italian influence was paramount before the time of Glinka, whom Liszt called the "Prophets" The third of the series of "The Hope paramount before the time of Glinka. whom, Liszt called the 'Prophet-Patriarch' of Russia, thru the period of greatest activity owing to the influence of the band of men known as "The Five" to Tschallenwels Public "The Five," to Tschaikowsky, Rubinstein, Rachmaninoff and others of the present day. T. Harland Fudge, whose picture appears on this page, is the well-known soloist and vocal teacher. Trained as a baritone and appearing successfully in concert and church work, in Canada, he decided to study in New York. When the "Helen Noldi Grand Opera Company" was formed and performed in New York he was given the opportunity of appearing with them. Laterly he was offered the leading role in two Savage productions; at this time his voice was aboung unmistakable signs of tenor quality. After deliberation and advice he declined the Savage offers and studied to cultivate the tenor quality studied to cultivate the tenor quality and range. He later accepted and played one of the leading roles with Lina Farbanel, under the management of John Cort. He is having a very successful season teaching, having a very promising apply who have some very promising pupils who have appeared very successfully in concert. Several are filling soloists positions and will appear at a recital to be given later. Mr. Fudge is available for concert, church, oratorio or opera; stage managing or conducting theatrical performances, arranging programs and supplying talent for all classes

The Berlin Symphony Orchestra of forty-six players and the Berlin Conservatory Chorus of sixty-five voices gave a joint concert in the Grand Theatre last week. Many people from outside points went to Berlin for the event, the house being packed with a most enthusiastic audience. The vartet from the Jarvis Street Baptist Church went up to take part in Stern-fale Bennett's cantata, "The May Queen." The orchestral numbers were Schubert's Symphony in B Minor, and hree dances by Edward German, the poruses being Bantock's "On Hima," Nevin's "Wynken, Blynken and agler was the conductor.

The Academy String Quartet gave a very successful concert in Buffalo under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Club. The Buffalo News says: "The Dittersdorf quartet gave oppor-tunity for much charm of playing in some of the most pleasurable music written in this most delightful of all forms, and its cordial reception was proof of the able presentation, Brahm's

"A quartet by Wolf," says The Courier, was interesting and varied in tonal effects, while the Dittersdorf was notable for wrillty and excellent rhythm. The members of the quartet won greater success in the Brahms number, which was payed with distinctive color and

In this connection it is interesting staff of an army. It observes things a trial with its powerful glass, and when the situation is obtained both in detail and at the meeting of the local council paign which will work not for the individual good alone but for the general welfare of the community.

In this connection it is interesting to note with whom Miss MacMurchy is associated. The members of the commission, who are appointed by the government, are: Chairman, Sir John Willison; Treasurer, W. P. Gundy; Archbishop McNeil, D. D.; Ven. Archdeacon Cody, D. D.; Reverend Daniel Strachan, D. D.; W. K. McNaught, C. M. G.; Joseph Gibbons, G. Frank Beers. Professor A. T. De-McNaught, C. M. G.; Joseph Gibbons, G. Frank Beers, Professor A. T. De-Lury, W. L. The headquarters of the commission are in the sarvis building, Bay street, and the objects for which the body works are to find out the extent of unemployment, the causes which lead to it, and to suggest remedies for its amelioration.

Miss MacMurchy, in speaking about her work, says: "Of course you can-not separate the problem into part for men and part for women. I mean the same principles govern unemployment largely for both men and women. In order to understand the problem, as far as it affects women, one must

The articles dealt with wages, hours, and the equipment of the girl for her work, and were productive of a good deal of enquiry, rousing at the same time no small amount of interest. The problem of the house-worker was taken up in the same year, the writer advocating certificates for the houseworker and the raising of the standard in the same way as that of workers in the nurses' profession has been raised. The following year Miss MacMurchy turned her attention to the methods by which women had made a success in different avenues of employment and as a result was able o publish several true stories of successful Canadian women. Then came articles on the trade training of Canadian girls, in which the attitude was taken that as women are, to a large extent, the spenders of the family in-come, the science of buying and spendng should be taught in the schools. The foregoing were but a prepara-tion for a series which, thru the medium of short stories, dealt Canadian girl at school, and advocated an entire change in the present sys-tem. The claim was made that girls should be taught to care for children. to know how to cook and how to keep nouse; how to spend, and how to save money; the necessity for household accounts; how to keep themselves healthy and how to care for the health of others. The detailed manner in

Pleasant Proofs of LEADERSHIP

TXTE find success a cheerful thing, pleasant to contemplate. This is the hour and day and year of Paige Leadership. In contemplation of it we feel only gratitude for the courage, brains and good sportsmanship of these who have competed with the Paige, splendidly though unsuccessfully. In proof of our claim of Paige Supremacy we have, we believe, only to point to a single, amazing and conclusive fact: To the best of our knowledge and belief, the Paige in actual sales from December to March has led all competitors in each and every one of the Automobile Shows. Paige cars in the astounding aggregate of one million dollars worth were sold at the New York and Chicago Shows alone. The Philadelphia, Detroit, Kansas City, Minneapolis and Baltimore Shows added another million to the amazing Paige sales.

The reason is fundamental, though the record is unique. The Automobile Shows have exhibited all American cars-alongside the Paige. The Automobile Shows have offered an open forum of paralleling comparison and intelligent, unbiased judgment. And that inevitable, popular verdict has brought victory, nation-wide supremacy, along with gratitude and well won content to the Paige. So, we call these Pleasant Proofs of Leadership and herein and hereby voice our very proper and very genuine appreciation to those discriminating judges—our fellow Americans.

Motorists Save Money on Operating Cost.

An item of material interest to all otorists is the considerable reduction in the price of gasoline this year as compared with last. Prices vary from 15c to 20c per gallon, which is a large saving.

The management of the Consumers Gasoline Supply Co. have opened down town filling station, conveniently located in the centre of the city, at the corner of Sheppard and Adelaide streets, and are selling gasoine of the best quality at 15c an imperial gallon, depending on the large patronage they are securing to offset the reduction in the profit per gallon.

The low prices established by the Consumers Gasoline Supply Co., mean big saving to manufacturers, and those who have commercial trucks in operation, as well as to pleasure cars, and if the volume of patronage conlinues to expand as rapidly as during the past week, a continuous supply of good gasoline at these prices will be assured. George Kleine Stands Out As King of the Movie Industry

Man Who Made a Million Dollars From One Picture, First Startled the World by His Daring Venture—He Experimented in the Use of Big Crowds and Won Out — He Started a New Era in the Moving Picture.

N every great industry there are always one or two men that stand out above all others as moulders, as revolutionizers, that have brought about some great change that has entirely changed the phase of the industry. The moving picture industry has not been without its heroes, as it were. But pernaps there has been no man that has such an enormous infiluence in developing and changing the industry as George Kleine, the man that has made himself famous as the producer of the moving picture classic. Kleine, of course, did not make his venture out of any particular desire to uplift the industry, but he saw in his following of the inner workings of pictures that the people were ready for something new, he gave it to them.

He conceived the idea of placing

"Quo Vadis" on the screen; he obtained the services of the Cines Company to stage his play in Italy, and when it was released some two years ago, it was so different from anything that had previously been released that it took the moving picture public by storm. For six months, without a break, it ran at one of the big Broadway theatres, and at the same time a quarter hundred prints were on tour thru the United States, while in Canada and thruout the European countries an almost equal number of prints were kept busy, and still today, after two years of solid service. Quo Vadis is the biggest money making film in existence. Kleine followed his first triumph up by another classic, "Anthony and Cleopatra," and since then has been releasing pictures, each one of which has been an improvement over its predecessor, every few weeks.
A remarkable tribute to the worth of Kleine's films is accorded the producer by The Woman's Home Companion in a list of forty films which. in the esti mation of a specially chosen board, should be seen by everybody; out of the first ten pictures placed in order

A Business All Its Own

RITING photoplays for the moving-picture public is a business all its own. It is different from writing plays for the public which frequents the speaking stage. Without the brilliant dialogue to aid him, tho writer for the pictures must use all his ingenuity to register the idea in a different manner. It is the author's duty to suggest what is necessary and then it rests with the actor to work hard so that that idea is properly portrayed on the screen.

Well-Known Authors Not Successful

Many well-known authors of famous dramatic successe Many well-known authors of famous dramatic successes have tried writing for the picture public. Some of them have achieved good results; others have failed in their earnest endeavor to compose alluring scenarios. They lack the something that is essential in this new field. The novice in writing is oftentimes more successful than the man or woman who might have spent years studying dramatic constructions. The reason for the recruit being successful where others more proficient in the writing for stage purpose fail, can be found, perhaps, in the fact that in most cases an idea is all that is necessary, and then again the new moving-picture writer frequents the moving-picture theatres and, therefore, is in close touch with what the screen public desires.

Dramatic Authors Few

Canada can boast of but few successful playwrights. On the fingers of one's hand can be counted the prominent writers for the stage. The brains and brilliance of the men and women of this great Dominion have not been used for purposes of stage enlightenment from a literary standpoint. The Motherland has contributed the finest, but few acknowledged play authors are The Canada of the Future

Canada can not always remain in the background. Already its people are awake; to take advantage of every emergency that will further the interests of the country. Just as the manufactories are improving and moving toward ultimate perfection, so in the intellectual production for the screen, is rapidly coming what will be the best in photo playwriting. The writer will watch with interest the speedy, substantial development in the next five years, of the resources of this land. Instances of this are apparent every day. It is shown in the wonderful new buildings springing like mushrooms from the mediocrity of the surroundings; the new industries are mute evidences of the spirit of the day; it can be seen in the set faces of the men and women as day by day they go hither and thither in the earnest pursuit of their work. The grim, silent men training at Exhibition Park, soon to face at the front the enemy of all mankind radiate the determined doggedness that leads to great things. When this cruel war shall have become but a memory or a thing to be forgotten as well it should, Canada will rise from the troubles of the present to great things for the future.

Photoplay Authors Worth While

And now motion-picture playwrighting in Canada reaches the pinnacle And now motion-picture playwrighting in Canada reaches the pinnacle that represents the best. Probably the first play for moving-picture purposes ever written by a Canadian and produced by a strictly made-in-Canada moving picture producing firm is now being shown in far-away London. The local film firm produced this excellent joint work of two Canadian-born men, both now residents of Sault Ste. Marie. These two men, both in the earl, twenties, have the distinction and the honor of contributing the first photoplay for English approval, and their cousins across the sea will view with pleasure the brain child of these Canadians. The names of the authors are, Eric A. Darling and Edgar J. Fulcher, and the photoplay. "The Motto on the Wall." This play was a worthy effort. The characters were well drawn and the atmosphere, gained by using the society of the east with the roughness of the west, was one of the really delightful points of the work. The new nandling of the was one of the really delightful points of the work. The new handling of the well-known triangle, the woman and the two men, was charmingly constructed and the authors never for a moment lost sight of the one essential for successful photo playwriting, the punch. Only men brainy, resourceful and imaginative could have possibly constructed a play of such universal merit. If I may be permitted I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate Messrs. Larling and Fulcher upon their clever story.

A Letter of Interest

mixed up with the moving picture industry from its inception. He was dustry from its inception. He was before me a letter from Mr. Darling, written to my secretary in answer to my request for a short biography. A few extracts will be of interporn in New York, where his father, absorbed by the General Film Company, including the exchange which he opened here in 1908, and it was not until the appearance of "Quo Yadis" that his name was heard of in his American and the States. Worked on several working in many large theatres in Canada and the States. Worked on several big American newspapers, and one or two in Canada. Have been writing for the magazines since the age of seventeen, at which time I wrote stories of rollicking adventure for Munsey Company, under the name of Seward W. Hopkins. Began to vary style and turned out occasional stories of sport. Have written for Smart Set, Young's. Railroad, Argosy and ropular Magazines. Have been engaged in photoplay work for two years, but studied it for a long time previous to that. Had practical, dramatic, newspaper and magazine experience to begin with and a fair knowledge of the mechanics of emotion. Read everything I could get hold of on the subject, asked questions of men who knew the answer and tried to find out all I could before I ventured."

The Keynote of Success

This letter reveals what is the keynote of all success. This coung man, in his twenty-second year, studied, conversed, listened and absorbed. He varied his style of writing, until he perfected the construction and composition Now he is in demand and writes for all the big picture companies, including Lubin, Vitagraph, Gaumant, Edison and Universal, the latter company pronouncing his first play technically perfect. Some of the readers of this article may have seen some of Mr. Darling's plays on the screen. If they have it may have seen some of Mr. Darling's plays on the screen. If they have it will interest them to know that he wrote, among other scenarios. "The Closed Door," "The Open Road," "Thru the Flames," "The Dreamer." "Levond the Veil," "The Siren of the Desert" and "The Taint in the Blood."

Edgar J. Fulcher, who collaborated with him in writing "The Motto on the Wad," is also of Canadian birth, and is the same type of intelligence as his colleague. Shall have something to write of Mr. Fulcher and other promising Canadian photoplay authors in my article next Sunday. (To Be Continued.)

At last Pat said: "Now! look here! see! Just lave me be, me boy; Go in the house, the cook is there; SHE'S aisy to annoy."

Then what was it young Johnny did?
He jumped behind Pat's back, Then with a stick, Oh Me! Oh My! He gave him ONE BIG-WHACK.

Fred got on a raft and started to go out into the middle of the pond, but the stick with which he was pushing the raft broke, and he fell into the pond. Fred could not swim, and the water was deep, and Fred would have drowned had it not been for Jack, who, as soon as Fred fell into the water, threw off his coat and jumped in after Fred and pulled him out.

Canadians at the Front

Among the best descriptive letters coming from the front are those from Lieut.-Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., commandant of the 48th Highlanders of Canada. His vivid narrative of the experiences of the regiment from the time it left the swamps of Salisbury Plain, until he reached the trenches, was a real romance of travel enlivened by quiet touches of humor. Of particular interest, was Colonel Currie's account of the review of the Canadian expeditionary force by Sir John French, the British Commander-in-chief and Lieutenant-General Sir Horace Lockwood Smith-Dorrien, commanding the second field army to which the Canadian contingent is attached. These distinguished officers needed no introduction to the men of the Dominion, and the fact that these exceeded their expectation is a tribute to the care taken in selecting the units of the force. Already our boys have won special commendation for their ardor, courage and discipline, and the casualty lists, now appearing, should bring home to the people of the Dominion, that this is an imperial war, waged in defence of British ideals of liberty and self-government.

Dr. Charles Sarolea, who has been speaking in Toronto on behalf of devastated Belgium, is emphatically "a man of parts," as they say in Scotland, now his second country. Still in early middle life

Distinguished Belgian

Dr. Sarolea was only twenty-four years of age when appointed first lecturer and head of the French and Romance Department in the University of Edinburgh, a position held now for more than twenty years. He has written extensively on literature, philosophy and European politics, in both the French and English languages, and possesses foreign library collected by himself extending to some 60,000 volumes. Dr. Sarolea is therefore well fitted to plead the cause of Belgium before Canadian audiences, if indeed, it needs pleading to evoke their sympathy. Not for the first time in history has Belgium been the "cockpit of Europe," but this latest experience has been at once the most dreadful and the most heroic. Belgium, with a tenth of the population of Germany, and but ill-prepared to resist invasion, flung herself in the path of the Huns and with her citizen soldiery, attempted to bar the way against the savage, but efficient Huns. As a sacrifice, the act was sublime, but it will not have been in vain. If there is one thing certain about the war, it is that it will not end till this crime of the ages has been

The Tragedy Heroism

Part of the tragedy and the bitterest part is that Belgium stood alone during these first terrible weeks looking for help that did not arrive until too late to save the greater part of the country from occupation. But the delay Belgian heroism secured at that fateful time, anticipated the turning point of the war, and indeed, made it possible. It enabled the French mobilization to reach a stage when effective resistance was possible, and it enabled the small, but highly efficient British expeditionary force, to arrive at a moment when its services were invaluable. The whole history of that first chapter of the war is enough of itself to disprove the German claim that war was forced on the Teutonic alliance. Germany was ready as she might be expected to be after forty. years of studied preparation. Up to the last moment, the German Government let it be understood that Belgian neutrality would be respected—the Imperial Chancellor's statement in The Reichstag, was only made after German troops had crossed the border. The Belgian Government must have known that it would have to stand alone—the glory of Belgium is that counting the cost she sacrificed all material prosperity, to save her honor and her soul.

Belgium is the one country that has scaped even the suspicion of censure from the neutral world-Germany's demand that Belgium should permit the free and unmolested passage of German troops thru her territory and adopt an attitude of "friendly neutrallty," has met with universal condemnation. As one American writer puts it-"There was here a double crime." Germany not only foreswore her own covenant, but undertook to penalize Belgium for observing that country's solemn obligation; for, of course, consent by Belgium to the free passage of the Kaiser's forces would have been a repudiation of the treaty by Belgium and tantamount to an act of war against France. The position into which Germany sought to thrust Belgium is typical of Prussian methods. According to the law of the Prussian might not only makes right, but is right. Belgium's appeal to German honor fell on deaf ears. France had to be crushed to earth in quick order—that was the program of the war lords, and Belgium had either to become a tacit ally, or be flung aside as a rebel against the appointed of God. The crime of Germany will be her un-

What The World

When this war is over, German will be a byword and reproach among civilized nations. She has forfeited their respect and will have to bring forth fruits meet for repentance before she can again take her place in international councils. As Dr. White says in his book: "America's Arraignment of Germany," her "promises" and "pledges" and "guarantees" will, so long as the present ruling class is in power, be regarded with contempt or derision by other nations. In the meantime, German writers seem utterly unable to understand the universal condemnation that has been meted out to German treatment of Belgium. One of them-a hyphenated American at that-goes so far as to say that the historian of the future will, in analysing the causes of this war, regard the neutrality of Belgium, "as a very mir factor, perhaps entirely negligible." This cynical appraisement of the sanctity of plighted troth is typical of the German spirit which seeks to replace international law by the old rule of the freebooter-"That he should take who has the power, and he should keep that can." There can be no real peace until right is protected against might by the common consent of the civilized world.

ANOTHER THING THE WAR SHOWED UP

The United States melting pot that wouldn't melt.

Britain and the Balkan States

According to Mr. George Otto Trevelyan, who has made a special study of the Balkan States, Rumania, was on the point of casting her lot with the allies and seizing Transylvania at the time when the Russian armies were threatening to invade Hungary. The situation was temporarily saved by the arrival of powerful German forces in Hungary. But the advent on the scene of the Balkan States is only delayed. The Dual Monarchy of Austria-Hungary has plenty of people waiting to share the spoil when its power is seen to be really on the wane and the last desperate attempt to drive the Russians out of Galicia and Bukowina, has already definitely failed. The once proud Austria-Hungary has now been reduced to a state of vassalage and is practically at the command of Germany whose own hope of success depends on making the most of such present allies as she

There is little doubt that the effort to force the Dardanelles was partly due to recognition of the moral effect it would have on the Balkan States and on Italy all of whom, with the exception of Bulgaria are known to be friendly to Britain. Mr. Trevelyan says that the European war is a single whole and any region where conquests can be rapidly made by either side may be decisive as to the fate of all other regions. Fortunately the reputation of Britain in the near east stands very high both for honesty of purpose and for strength in war, especially a long war. But Britain must show her military power at places where friends and doubtfuls can be most influenced by it. All these smaller nations believe in Britain as the champion of their liberties and they turn towards the British arms in the crisis of their fate.

German Day Dreams

When the Huns of the twentieth century started out on their world conquering expedition, they anticipated swift and decisive victory. No doubt they looked for some hard fighting-one or two pitched battles of the older type where their immense superiority in numbers and equipment would prevail at whatever cost of life. The stolid German imagination saw in advance an early and triumphal entry into Paris and their beloved soldiers performing the favorite goosestep thru the Arc de Triomphe and along the Champs Elysee, with the Kaiser installed in the Tuilleries and taking his morning walk in the palace gardens. A similar vision floated before the eyes of every wearer of the pickelaube when the armies burst into Belgium and began their career of terrorism and frightfulness.

There is much of the primitive about the character of the modern Hun. Both the soldier in the field and the elderly citizen at home in his beer garden, delight in the pomp and circumstance of victory. We are told that General von Busterberg, or whatever kind of a Von he was, who commanded at the siege of Antwerp, so deeply disappointed the German public at its surrender that he has practically dropped out of sight. Why? Because instead of a defeated garrison marching forth and casting its arms down at the feet of the conqueror in true histrionic style nobody came out but a quiet gentleman in a frock coat and silk hat, who politely informed the general that the garrison had departed by another way and invited him to enter. Hence the German disgust.

As the campaign now stands, German triumphal entries have been conspicuous by their absence. Instead of goose-stepping thru Paris, the German soldiers have been and are duckwaddling in swampy trenches and the Germans at home satisfying their souls with the husks of paper victories. The Huns are entitled to make the most of the fact that they are still in occupation of the greater part of Belgium and a small part of France. On the other hand their flag has disappeared from the seas and their fleet is sheltering beneath the guns of their coastal fortifications. The much heralded submarine blockade has accomplished nothing but the sinking of some comparatively small and slow tramp steamers-a trifling percentage of the merchant fleet of the British Isles. Slowly, but surely, the net is tightening round Germany and the day of reckoning will come-a different day from that

Britain's Handicap

In his speech at Bangor, Mr. Lloyd George, the British chancellor of the exchequer, made a powerful appeal to the patriotism of the British people. The supply of munitions of war must be maintained for it is vital if victory is to rest upon our arms. Yet quite a considerable proportion of the workmen in the factories do not fill in their full week but take days off to spend them in the public houses. Britain cannot, afford to have her hands weakneded at the crucial period of the war and Mr. Lloyd George made it plain that the government will take drastic measures to check the menace of idleness and liquor. "We have great powers," he said, "to deal with drink and we mean to use them. We shall use them in a spirit of moderation. We shall use them discreetly. We shall use them wisely. But we shall use them quite fearlessly."

DERHAPS there is a peculiar fitness in associating poor Robert strong drink to him that is ready to perish." As W. E. Henley says "drink and disappointment were pretty certainly responsible between them for the mingled squalor and gloom and pathos of the end." Robert Burns wrote of himself, "God have mercy on me, a poor damned, uncautious, duped, unfortunate fool! The sport, the mingraphle victim of rebellious pride. me, a poor damned, uncautious, duped, unfortunate fool! The sport, the miserable victim of rebeilious pride, hypochondriac imaginations, agonizing sensibility and bedlam passions." As Henley says, no one knew Burns better than he did himself. I suppose the parallel has often been drawn, tho I do not recall it anywhere, between Robert Burns and King David. Had David been given to whiskey it would have been more complete, but he had probably learned Lemuel's lesson that it is not good for kings to drink wine nor princes strong drink. The problems of rebirth or reincarnation are the most fascinating in the world, for they concern all of us intimately. Of course we must not unduly occupy ourselves with speculations on our past, but knowing that we are the product of our own actions and conduct, that our character now denotes our former living, and that essentially we former living, and that essentially we are self-made men, it is not out of place to consider what kind of be-haviour must inevitably result in the sort of people we meet, wno come out of previous conditions and circumstances as definitely as any other result from previously ordered causes. Given, a man like King David, as his story is recorded in the Old Testament, a man after God's own heart, let it be granted, yet an untamed savage in his passions and his revenges, how will the great law deal with such a one when he returns to earth in another life? Might he not. like Robert Burns, still continue to be a sweet singer in Israel, still maintain high national ideals and still harbor loose morals personally? I do not believe, of course, that King David returned as Robert Burns: David rose higher than that, and transcended the limitations of the lower nature that wrapped him round with many sor rows while he gave way to it. But there was much in common between the two, and Burns clung to the principle which, after all, is the general apology offered from the pulpits for

BETWEEN the achievement of a life's purpose and the first glimpse of the vision splendid there may be long and weary years—perhaps long and weary lives. But what matter, provided the alm be worthy, and the quest at last successful. The real danger is to set out on a false quest, to fall into the snares and delusions of the senses of which the greatest are the world, the fiesh and the devil. Very few recognize and the devil. Very few recognize any one of the three for they come well-disguised. The world usually ap-proaches in the guise of one's friends, frequently one's best friends, and we are lured away by the subtleties of a temptation we do not recognize until it is too late. The temptations of the flesh are perhaps more widely re-cognized. Both David and Burns suffered from inability to resist themsurfered from inability to resist them. The present pleasure of sins of the flesh bears no proportionate relation to the wretchedness and misery they afterwards entail. The devil, as modern thought has chosen to personify the destructive and opposing forces of the universe, is the last enemy to be accounted. enemy to be conquered. These negative, passive, disintegrating agencies constitute the greatest enemy humanity has to overcome in the march to perfection. There is a subtle medium comparable in the spiritual world to what we call ether in the physical, in which all obstructive, seductive and deceiving influences are centred. It is called the astral light by some students. It is called the psychic world by others, and the world of Maya or illusion by still others. Only a comparatively few are directly confitted for everlasting bliss. Burns was a drunkard, and had to overcome a weakness which David had already conquered. Bill to Steve

(Copyright, 1915: By Ring W. Lardner.)

HICAGO, March 10.—Steve. Well Steve we will be on are way to tampa when you get this letter and wear leaveing tonight and I will male you this letter from here and then the next letter you get from me you will get it from tampa and I will be down there where its nice & warm and you will be 1/2 froz up north here and I guess you wisht you was a big league ball player so as you could get some of these here trips its grate stuff.

But what do you think of a cheap guy like Gussys old man Steve & I guess I told him a thing or 2 that he wont for get in no hurry. I guess I all ready wrote you a bout Gussy going a long with Derby County Blank Birmingme on the trip and of coarse I that her old man would pay for the R. R. fare and her bord at the hotels where we stop at because I and her was only married a week ago and you might say she is still his dauther yet even if she is my wife & why shouldent he pay for her expences for a wile yet or even if he dident want to do that he should aught to give her the trip for a weding present because he dident come acrost with no other but says he will see a bout it latter LONDON, March 20.—The formula aught to give her the trip for a weding present because he london, March 20.—The formula aught to give her the trip for a weding present because he london, March 20.—The formula aught to give her the trip for a weding present because he on but the time for a man to give a weding present is when who ever games in as follows it is who hes giveing it to gets married and not no yr. afterwords. Well I & Gussy was out to her old mans house and talking a bout the trip and her old man says have you fixed it up with the ball club yet a bout Gussy going a long and I says no I was waiting for you to buy her ticket and he says well you got a long wile to wait and I mys what do you mean & he says if you wait for me to buy her ticket you will wait till they run st. cars from here to tampa & I says I under stood you was going to pay for her way back and 4th. and her bord at the hotels and logging & he says you got grate imajanation & I says well if I got to pay her way she wont go and then Gussy beggin to blubber & the old man says There see what you done now and I says you done it your self because if I hadent of thot you was going to send her a long I wouldent of never said nothing to her a bout the trip and I and her could of got married when I come home as well is before I left & he says you could poseponed the weding 100 yrs. & she would of been better off. So I says your a fine guy to give us this kind of treatment after all the work I done for you this winter & he says yes you been a hole lot of good to me & a man would think from the amt. of beer you sold that the hole country had went prohibition all ready. Then I says you dident even give your daughter no weding present & he says I give you $25.00 dollars a wk. all winter & thats enough present till I get ready to give you some more so I says your a fine stiff & he dident have no come back and I and Gussy beat it but she was blubbering so hard I was a frade she would flood the sts. so what could I do Steve but tell her I would pay for her fare & she could go a long with me any way & if I hadent of promussed her she would of drownded he self. So I & her went back to the hotel & then I went up to see pres. Thomas the pres. of the club & I says how would it be for me to take my wife a long on the trip & he says all right & I says may be you & Taff and Murphy was thinking of sending her a long for a weding present because we dident get no other present from none of you and he says

I says well if I got to pay her way she wont go and then Gussy

no and the reason we dident get no present was because the 3 of them got to gather & couldent make up there mind what to give me & I says well give me this here trip for my wife & we will call it sqare but he says nothing doing so I had to borry some addvance money off the club & buy a ticket for Gussy & the trip insted of not costing me nothing will cost me over $100.00 dollars & if Gussy was sensable she wouldent want to go on no trip clear off a way from her old main and her frends & may be the weather will be rotten all the wile wear down there & its been pretty good weather here. Im sorry now we dident wait till the season opend before we got married & I bet the dident wait till the season opend before we got married & I bet the

Well Steve I see where the papers says that Bresnahan will probably play Good & Schulte & this here Allison in the outfield this yr. & there all talking a bout how fast this here Allison is & may be he is fast but you cant steal 1st base Steve. May be he can beat the record from the plate back to the bench but that wont get him nothing. He will wisht he wasent so fast when he sees how quick he will go back to the southern league. Just let Bresnahan give me a fare show & I dont care if this here Allison can beat the 20 Cent. Limit it.

Well good by Steve & I will write you from tampa if Gussy dont eat so much that I cant buy no stamps.

FRANK MORAN IS TO TRY THE COME BACK

Frank Moran is going to try the "come back" stunt when he meets Bombardier Wells in London on March 29th Moran has had no fights of importance since his bout with Jack Johnson, and fight fans are waiting with interest to learn if Moran is still good enough to best Bombardier. Photos show him doing a little roa work and squaring off for his picture in his gym.

Gilmore and Gaffney Fight Over the Wires

DRESIDENT JAMES E. GAFF-NEY of the Boston Braves yesterday received a "call" from President Gilmore of the Federal League as an answer to the warning to keep hands off Pitcher Bill James. Gaffney sent the head of the Feds a long telegram explaining that James was under contract to the Boston club, and that the Feds had bet-ter let him alone. The message stated that James' contract with the Braves has still two more years to run. This seemed to rile Fighting Jim, who rushed this message back:

"Our policy is still unchanged regarding players under binding contract such as you say James has with you. It's about time your associates were respecting similar contracts which we possess."

AM HYATT'S poker playing (five-cent ante stuff) will be missed by the members of the Pirate brigade this season.

Ham was an inveterate dabbler in the great American pastime.

Winning very seldom he always came back for more and, despite the fact that he was one of the hardest losers the game has ever known, he was always welcome.

To beat a good hand held by the Hittite was—well if not hadn't held the successful mitt.

One night during a trip from St. Louis to Chicago, "Old Bones sat in and despite the fact that he

The other players wondered at this, and none could dope it out until Al. Mamoux came along

"How are you doing, Ham?"

Leverenz was a star performer in 1912 and the Browns didn't want to let him set away. So they raised the antering to earn his keep, He started the season with 10 straight defense from the season, but was beaten every time.

Joe Tinker Calls McGraw Greatest of All Managers

EW YORK, March 20.—Joseph Faversham Tinker is a Federal leaguer first, last and all the time. From a playing standpoint, Tinker made the outlaw league a reality. But Joe Tinker is first of all a man in every sense of the word, and in speaking of his former associates in organized ball, he never stoops to the petty knocking that a few of the men in the Federal League are at times guilty of. Joe recently got talking of the great managers of the game. Tinker, course, was Chance's lieutenant in the palmy days of Frank's Cub regime, and spoke glowingly of the former mentor. However, to everyone's surprise, the Chifed leader waxed the most enthusiastic over none other than John J. Mc-

"Of course there have been a number of great managers in baseball and their rank is purely a matter of opinion. Personally, I rank McGraw as the top. Others may think differently, but no one can dispute his greatness and value to the game.

"He has accomplished things. That, after all, is the only test of greatness.

Not what you might have done, could have done, or may do, but what you have done. McGraw's record is baseball history. In the face of his achievements, all arguments as to his ability must cease."

The team was a good one last year—not a pennant winner, but up there battling the pace setters and it has been strengthened quite a bit during the winter's raiding.

A great deal of the Buffeds' chances for the pennant rests on Russeil Ford, one-time Yankee and the best flinger in the third league last season. Ford's comeback was one of the features of the late lamented 1914. He bowled 'emover right and left, winning twenty-one and losing only six. Hugh Bedient was added to the staff during the winter. He's a good pitcher; no one can deny that, not even Belligerent Byron Bancroft Johnson, from whose backyard he hurdled. Canada Is a Most Generous Host to its Hostile

By DAVID K. BILLINGS ISSING"-What does it mean to be among the missing? There is hardly a casualty list issued by the war department that does not contain a list of brave soldiers listed as "missing." Even now there have been members of our own Canadian army that have been reported to headquarters as "missing." In some cases, of course, this classification merely means that the soldiers in question have become separated from their unit, but more often it has a more serious meaning - that the soldiers have been taken prisoners of war.

To be taken prisoner is an aspect of the war game that enters little into the mind of the British soldier; he scouts the idea. When he leaves for the front he has not the slightest intention of ever laying down his arms at the command of a German officer. He would rather die fighting. But there are times when sacrifice of life is not only useless, but harmful to the cause for which he is fighting. Yet, what could be more repugnant to free Canadian soldiers than to be locked up behind German barriers at the beck and call of German officers and driven to their daily task at the point of German bayonets? The dead and wounded achieve a certain visible success and have been accorded the honor that is their due, but the soldier that chafes under the yoke of his enemy, boxed up like a convict and treated like a dog, is just as surely a hero altho, perhaps, his name will never appear on the rolls of honor, even the he should fall an heroic victim to cruel treatment.

There is a special aggravation in being a captured fighter. The prisoner supposedly has committed no crime except to fight for his country, he has no feeling of repentance to help him countenance the indignities to which he is subjected and he is entirely at the mercy of his captors who, in the case of Germany, apparently consider themselves immune from the laws of warfare. He is always watching for a chance to escape and should that opportunity come he is obliged to take advantage of it, altho he knows he will be shot dead if caught on the wing. But if captured and brouht back to camp he cannot, at least he should not, be punished for his attempt.

Canada's Prisoners

We have prisoners of war right here in Toronto, but the largest concentration point for our prisoners is at Petawawa camp. where over 600 Austrian and Turks are under guard pending the German defeat. At Kapuskasing, in New Optario, 550 alien enemies are interned. At Kingston about 600, all Germans, are under close guard, and at some other places across Canada are kept numbers of prisoners. These are men who would be dangerous if free, and in the ranks if they could get to their own countries ..

It was not necessary to gc as far as Petáwawa for evidence that Canada's prisoners of war have no just complaints. Even the letter which Lieut. Col. MacPherson, who is

The prisoners are not convicts, explained the Colonel and must not be photographed against their will. And Major de la Ronde, the camp commandant, carried out his instructions.

It is a case of roll out of a train at 4 a.m. or walk ten miles from Pembroke, for the C.P.R. does not give Petawawa Camp a summer resort service. The former evil is the lesser of the two, so 4 a.m. found a lonely newspaperman shivering on the beard walk which skirted the great transcontinental highway for forty feet.

Taking no Chances

It was an eventless and lonely trudge from the station along the unlit road for almost two miles in the direction of the camp, until suddenly from out of the darkness with the sharpness of cold steel, came:

"Halt!-Who goes there?" the glittering nickel of the sentry's bayonet silhouetted against the blackness of the low building he was guarding.

"F-F-Friend," was the answer stutter-

"Advance, friend, and give the countersign," and four steps straight at the gleam ing point, held firmly and with decision by a great-coated guard, were sufficient. It certainly felt like real warfare.

Letters from headquarters do not save a trip to the guardhouse, and as the guard leads the way you look at that wicked Ross rifle and wonder if it really is loaded. It is. "Guards out!" cried the sentry as he challenged the escort and allowed us to pass. It is in the guardhouse that one gets the first glimpse of camp life. A long line of Canada," the officer proudly tells, as he lead the way across the flat drill ground to the prisoners' camps. "There are almost 600 prisoners here and we have them divided into five sleeping camps. The prisoners here are Austrians and Turks brought from all parts of Canada, but principally from Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. They are not a hard bunch to take care of, but we are thankful there are no Germans among them, or I am afraid we might not be able to take things quite so easy.

How Prisoners Are Treated

get such good attention that many of the guards are jealous of them. They get fatter every day; their food allowance is even more than that of our own soldiers, and it is cooked equally well. Every one has been supplied with warm clothing, sheepskin coats, rubber boots and warm mits and caps. Each man is given four woolen blankets, a pillow and a mattress, and the camps are while enjoying the sights.' Then they had drinks all round for the jall that held O'Grady. 'But,' he says, I have a proposal to make.' More drinks on account of the proposal. I have got hold of the idea of those Frisco cable cars. Some of the idea I got in Frisco. The rest I have invented,' says O'Grady. Then they drank all round for the invented.

Each afternoon the 600 prisoners of war at Petawawa, are marched onto the parade ground under guard for their daily exercise. Five or six footballs thrown among the men give them a chance to work off some of their space energy.

"T am coming to the point. O'Grady made a company—the drunkest I ever saw—to run a cable car on the Frisco model from Wake Up an' Git Salson' to Bow Flume. The bays put in about four thousand dollars, for Bow Flume was squrling gold them. Ther's nary shanty there now. O'Grady put in four thousand dollars of his own, and I was roped in for as much. O'Grady desired the concern to represent the resources of Bow Flume. We got a car built in Frisco for about two thousand dollars, with an elegant bar at one end—nickel plated fixings and ruby glass.

"The notion was to dispense liquor en route. A Bow Flume man could put himself outside two drinks in a minute and a half, the same not being pressed for urgent business. The boys graded the road for love and we run a rope in a little trough in the middle. That rope ran swift and any blame fool that had his foot cut off fooling in the middle of the road, might ha' found sarvation by using our Bow Flume palace car. The boys said that was square. O'Grady took the contract for building the engine to wind the rope. He called his show a mule—it was a crossbreed between a thrashing machine and an levator run. I don't think he had followed the isco patterns. He put all our dollars into that med barroom on the car, knowing what would asse the boys best. They didn't care much about machinery, so long as the car hummed "We charged the boys a dollar a head per trip."

"We charged the boys a dollar a head per tripone free drink included. That paid—paid like—Paradise. They liked the motion. O'Grady was engineer and another man sort of tended to the rope engine when he wasn't otherwise engaged. Those cable cars run by gripping on to the rope. You know that. When the grip's off the car is braked down and stands still. There ought to have been two cars by right—one to run up and the other down. But O'Grady had a blamed invention for reversing the engine, so the cable ran both ways—up to Bow Flume and down to the saloon—the terminus being in front of our door. A man could kick a friend slick from the bar into the car. The boys appreciated that. The Bow Flume Palace Car Company earned twenty on the hundred in three months besides the profits of the drinks. We might have lasted to this day if O'Grady hadn't tinkered his blamed engine up on top of Bow Flume Hill. The boys complained the show didn't hum sufficient. They required railroad speed, O'Grady ran'em up and down at fourteen miles an hour, and his latest improvement was to touch twenty-four. The strain on the brakes was terrible—quite terrible. But every time O'Grady raised the record the boys gave him a testimonial. "Twasn't in human nature not to crowd ahead after that. Testimonials demoralize the publickest of men.

"I rode on the car that memorial day. Just as we started with a double load of boys and a razzle dazzle assortment of drinks something went zip under the car bottom. We proceeded with velocity. All the prominent members of the company were aboard. The grip has got snubbed on the rope, says O'Grady quite quietly. Boys, this will be the biggest smash on record. Something's going to happen. We proceeded at the rate of twenty-four miles an hour till the end of our journey. I don't know what happened there. We could get clear of the rope anyways at the point where it turned round know what happened there. We could get clear of the rope anyways at the point where it turned round a pully to start up hill again. We struck—struck the stoop of the 'Wake Up an' Git Saloon'—my saloon—and the next thing I knew was feeling of my legs under an assortment of matchwood and broken glass, representing liquor and fixtures to the tune of eight thousand. The car had been flicked thru the saloon, bringing down the entire roof on the floor. It had then bucked out into the firmament, describing a parabola over the bluff at the back of the saloon, and was lying at the foot of that bluff, 300 feet below. Ike a busted kaleidoscope—all nickel, shavings and bits of red glass. O'Grady and most of the prominent members of the company were dead—very dead—and there wasn't enough left of the saloon to pay for a drink. I took in the situation lying on my stomach at the edge of the bluff, and I suspicioned that any lawsuits that might arise would be complicated by shooting. So I quit Bow Flume by the back trail. I guess the coroner judged that there were no summons—leastways I never heard any more

A Supplementary Chapter

Shall I not one day remember thy Bower— One day when all days are one day to me? Thinking I stirred not and yet had the power, Yearning—ah, God, if again it might be!
—The Song of the Bower.

THIS is a base betrayal of confidence, but the sin is Mrs. Hauksbee's, and not mine. If you remember a certain foolish tale called "The Education of Otis Yeere," you will not forget that Mrs. Mallowe laughed at the wrong time, which was a single, and at Mrs. Hauksbee, which was a double, offence. An experiment had gone wrong, and it seems that Mrs. Mallowe had said some quaint things about the experimentrix.

"I am not angry," said Mrs. Hauksbee, "and I admire Polly in spite of her evil counsels to me. But I shall wait—I shall wait like the frog feotman in 'Alice in Wonderland,' and Providence will deliver Polly into my hands. It always does if you wait." And she departed to vex the soul of the "Hawley boy," who says that she is singularly "uninstruite and childlike." He got that first word out of a Ouida novel. I do not know what it means, but am prepared to make an affidavit before the Collector that it does not mean Mrs. Hauksbee.

Mrs. Hauksbee's ideas of waiting are very liberal.

that it does not mean Mrs. Hauksbee.

Mrs. Hauksbee's ideas of waiting are very liberal. She told the "Hawley boy" that he dared not tell Mrs. Reiver that "she was an intellectual woman with a gift for attracting men," and she offered another man two waltzes if he would repeat the same thing in the same cars. But he said: "Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes," which means "Mistrust all waltzes except those you get for legitimate asking."

The "Hawley boy" did as he was told because he believed in Mrs. Hauksbee. He was the instrument in the hand of a higher power, and he wore jharun coats, like "the scoriae rivers that roll their sulphurous torrents down Tahek, in the realms of the Boreal Pole," that made your temples throb when seen early in the morning. I will introduce him to you some day if all goes well. He is worth knowing.

Unpleasant things have already been written about Mrs. Reiver in other places.

She was a person without invention. She use's the best here is the service of the same and the service of the

Mrs. Reiver in other places.

She was a person without invention. She used to get her ideas from the men she captured, and this led to some eccentric changes of character. For a month or two she would act a la Madonna, and try Theo for a change if she fancied Theo's ways suited her beauty. Then she would attempt the dark and fiery Lilith, and so on and so on, exactly as she had absorbed the new notion. But there was a she had absorbed the new notion. But there was a lawys Mrs. Reiver—hard, seifish, stupid Mrs. Reiver—at the back of each transformation. Mrs. Hauksbee christened her the Magic Lantern on account of this borrowed mutability. "It just depends upon the slide." said Mrs. Hauksbee. "The case is the only permanent thing in the exhibition. But that, thank heaven, is getting old."

There was a fancy ball at Government House and Mrs. Reiver came attired in some sort of '98 costume, with her hair pulled up to the top of her head, showing the clear outline on the back of the neck, like the Recamier engravings. Mrs. Hauksbee had chosen to be loud not to say vulgar, that evening, and went as The Black Death—a curious arrangement of barred velvet, black domino and flame colored satin puffery coming up to the neck and the wrists, with one of those shricking keel backed cicals in the hair. The scream of the creature made people jump. It sounded so unearthly in a ballroom, made people jump. It sounded so unearthly in a ballroom.

I heard her say to some one, "Let me introduce you to Mme. Recamler," and I saw a man dressed as Autolycus bowing to Mrs. Reiver, while The Black Death looked more than usually saintly. It was a very pleasant evening, and Autolycus and Mme. Recamier—I heard her ask Autolycus who Mme. Recamier was, by the way—danced together ever so much. Mrs. Hauksbee was in a meditative mood, but she laughed once or twice in the back of her throat, and that meant trouble.

Autolycus was Trewinnard, the man whom Mrs. Mallowe had told Mrs. Hauksbee about—the platonic paragon. as Mrs. Hauksbee called him. He was amiable, but his mustache hid his mouth, and so he did not explain himself all at once. If you stared at him he turned his eyes away and thru the rest of the dinner kept looking at you to see whether you were looking again. He took stares as a tribute to his merits, which were generally known and recognied. When he played billiards he apologized at length between each bad stroke, and explained what would have happened if the red had been somewhere cise or the bearer had trimmed the third lamp, or the wind hadn't made the door bang. Also he wriggled in his chair more than was becoming to one of his inches. Little men may wriggle and fidget without attracting notice. It doesn't suit big tramed men. He was the Main Girder Boom of the Kuitcha, Pulkka, Bundobust and Benaoti Department and corresponded direct with the Three Taped Bashaw. Every one knows what that means. The men in his own office said that where anything was to be gained, even temporarily, he would never hesitate for a moment over handing up a subordinate to be hanged and drawn and quartered, He didn't back up his underlings, and for that reason they dreaded taking responsibility on their shoulders, and the strength of the department was crippled.

responsibility on their shoulders, and the strength of the department was crippled.

A weak department can and often does, do a power of good work, simply because its chief sees if thru thick and thin. Mistakes may be born of economy, but it is safer and sounder than taking orders which may be read in two ways and reserving to yourself the right of interpretation according to subsequent failure or success. Offices prefer administrations to diplomacy. They are very like empires. Hatchett of the Almirah and Thannicutch—a vicious little three-cornered department that was always stamping on the toes of the elect—had the fairest estimate of Trewinnard when no said: 'I don't believe he is as good as he is." They always quoted that verdict as an instance of the blind jealousy of the uncovenanted, but Hatchett was quite right. Trewinnard was just as good and no better than Mrs. Mallowe could make him, and she had been engaged on the work for three years. Hatchett has a narrow minded partiality for the more than naked—the anatomized Truth—but he can gauge a man.

Trewinnard had been spoilt by overmuch petting, and the devil of vanity that rides nine hundred and ninety-nine men out of a thousand made him believe as he did. He had been too long one woman's property, and that belief will sometimes drive a man to throw the best things in the world behind him from rank perversity. Perhaps he only meant to stray temporarily and then return, but in arranging for this excursion he misunderstood both Mrs. Mallowo and Mrs. Reiver. The one made no sign, she would have died first; and the other—well, the highfalutin mindsome jay was her craze for the time being. She had never tried it before and several men had hinted that it would eminently become her. Trewinnard was in himself pleasant, with the great merit of belonging to somebody else. He was what they call "intellectual" and vain to the marrow. Mrs. Reiver returned his lead in the first and hopelessly outtrumped him in the second suit. Put down all that comes after this to Providence or The Black Death.

Trewinnard never realized how far he had failen from his allegiance till Mrs. Reiver reterred to some official matter that he had been telling her about as "ours." He remembered then how that word had been sacred to Mrs. Mallowe and how she had asked his permission to use it. Opium is intoxicating and so is whiskey, but more intoxicating than either to usertain build of mind is the first occasion on which a woman—especially if she have asked leave for the "honor"—identifies herself with a man's work. The second time is not so pleasant. The answer has been given before and the treachery comes to the top and tastes coppery in the mouth.

Trewinnard swallowed the shame—he felt dimly that he was not doing Mrs. Reiver any great wrong by untruth—and told and told and continued to tell, for the snare of this form of openheartedness is that no man, unless he be a consummate liar, knows where to stop. The office door of all others must be either open wide or shut tight with a shaprassi to keep off callers.

Mrs. Mallowe made so sign to show that she feit Trewinnard's desertion till a piece of information that could only have come from one quarter ran about Simla like quicksilver. She met Trewinnard at. a dinner. "Choose your confidantes better, Harold," she whispered as she passed him in the drawing-room. He turned salmon color and swore very hard to himself that Babu Durga Charan Laha must go—nust go—must go. He almost believed in that gray-headed old oyster's guilt.

And fools gave feasts and wise men ate them, and they were bidden to the wedding and sat down to bake, and those who had nuts had no teeth and they staked the substance for the shadow and carried coals to Newcastie, and in the dark all cats were gray, as it was in the days of the great Cure of Meudon.

cats were gray, as it was in the days of the great cure of Meudon.

Late in the year there developed itself a battle royal between the K. P. B. and B. department and the Almirah and Thannicutch. Three columns of this paper would be needed to supply you with the outlines of the difficulty; and then you would not be grateful. Hatchett sauffed the fray from afar and went into it with his teeth bared to the gums, while his department stood behind him solid to a man. They believed in him, and their answer to the fury of men who detested him was: "Ah! But you'll admit he's d—d right in what he says."

"The head of Trewinnard in a Government resolution." said Hatchett, and he told the daftri to put a new pad on his blotter and smiled a bleak smile as he spread out his notes. Hatchett is a thug in his systematic way of butchering a man's reputation.

"What are you going to do?" asked Trewinnard's department. "Sit tight," said Trewinnard, which was tantamount to saying "Lord knows." The department groaned and said: "Which of us poor beggars is to be jonnhed this time?" They knew Trewinnard's vice.

The dispute was essentially not one for the K. P. B. and B. under its then direction to fight out. It should have been compromised or at the worst sent up to the supreme government with a private and the TORONTO SUNDAY WORLD

She had interrupted him in the middle of what he was pleased to call his reply; for Hatchett's first shell had already fallen in the camp. He stood back and offered her the seat at the duftar table. Her chow left a great wet stain on the halze, for she was soaked thru and thru.

"Say exactly how the matter stands," she said, and laughed a weak little laugh, which emboldened frewinnard to say loftly: "Parden me, Mrs. Mallowe, but I hardly recognize your—"

"Idiot! Will you show me the papers, will you speak, and will you be quick?"

Her most reverent admirers would hardly have recognized the soft spoken, slow gestured quiet eyed Mrs. Mallowe in the indignant woman who was drumming on Trewinnard's desk. He submitted to the voice of authority, as he had submitted in the old time, and explained as quickly as might be the cause of the war between the two departments. In conclusion he handed over the rough sheets of his reply as she read he watched her with the expectant sickly half smile of the unaccustomed writer who is doubtful of the success of his work. And another smile followed but died away as he saw Mrs. Mallowe read his production. All the old phrases out of which she had so carefully drilled him had returned; the unpruned fluency of diction was there, the more luxuriant for being so long cut back; the reckless riotousness of assertion that sacrificed all—even the vital truth that Hatchett would be so sure to take advantage of—for the sake of scoring a point, was there, and thru and between every line ran the weak, wilful vanity of the man. Mrs. Mallowe's mouth hardened.

"And you wrote this!" she said. Then to herself,

"And you wrote this!" she said. Then to herself, "He wrote this!" Trewinnard stepped forward with a gesture habital to him when he wished to explain. Mrs. Relver and never asked for explanations. She had told him that all his ways were perfect. Therefore he loved have.

Mrs. Mallowe tore up the papers one by one, saying as she did so, "You were going to cross swords with Hatchett. Do you know your own strength" Oh, Harold, Harold, it is to pitiable. I thought—I thought—" Then the great anger that had been growing in her broke out and she cried: "Oh, you fool. You blind, blind, trumpery fool! Why do I help you? Why do I have anything to do witn, you? You miserable man! Sit down and write as I dictate. Quickly! And I had chosen you out of a hundred other men! Write!" It is a terrible thing to be found out by a more unsecing male—Thackeray has said it. It is worse, far worse, to be found out by a woman, and in that hour after long years to discover her worth. For ten minutes Trewinnard's pen scratched across the paper, and Mrs. Mallowe spoke. "And that is all," she said bitterly. "As you value yourself—your noble, honorable, modest self—keep within that."

modest self—keep within that."

But that was not all—by any means. At least as far as Trewinnard was concerned.

He rose from his chair and delivered his soul of many mad and futile thoughts—such things as a man babbles when he is deserted of the gods, has missed his hold upon the latch door of Opportunity—and cannot see that the ways are shut. Mrs. Mallowe bore with him to the end, and he stod before hermo enviable creature to look upon.

"A cur as well as a fool!" she said, "Will you be good enough to tell them to bring my horse? I do not trust to your honor—you have none—but I believe that your sense of shame will keep you from speaking of my visit."

So he was left in the verandah crying, "Come back" like a distracted guinea fowl.

"He's done us in the eye." grunted Hatchett, as he pursued the K. P. B. and B. reply. "Look at the cunning of the brute in shifting the issue on to India in that carneying, biarneying way! Only wait until I can get my knife into him again. I'll stop every bolt hole before the hunt begins."

Oh. I believe I have forgotten to mention the success of Mrs. Hauksbee's revence.

Oh I believe I have forgotten to mention the success of Mrs. Hauksbee's revenge. It was so brilliant and overwhelming that she had to ery in Mrs. Mallowe's arms for the better part of haif an hour; and Mrs. Mallowe was just as bad, tho she thanked Mrs. Hauksbee several times in the course of the interview, and Mrs. Hauksbee said that she would respent and reform, and Mrs. Mallowe said: "Hush, dear, hush! I don't think either of us had anything to be proud of." And Mrs. Hauksbee said: "Oh, but I didn't mean it, Polly, I didn't mean it!" And I stood with my hat in my hand trying to make two very indignant ladles understand that the bearer really had given me "salaam boita."

That was an evil quarter minute.

Lord Ashleigh muttered something a little vague The theft of a skeleton scarcely appeared to his unscientific mind to be a realizable thing. The professor turned back to the telephone.

The taxicab man drove off, glad enough to have a return fare. In about half an hour's time the professor strode up the steps of the museum and harried into the office. There was a little crowd of officials there, whom the curator at once dismissed. He rose slowly to his feet. His manner was grave and bewildered.

"Professor," he said, "we will waste no time in words. Look here!"

he threw open the door of an antercom behind his office. The apartment was unfurnished except for one or two chairs. In the middle of the un-carpeted floor was a long wooden box from which the lid had just been pried.

CHAPTER VII. THE windows of Mrs. Rheinholdt's town house were ablaze with light. A crimson drugget stretched down the steps to the curastone. A stretched down the steps to the curastone. A long row of automobiles stood waiting. Thru the wide-flung doors was visible a pleasant impression of flowers and light and luxury. In the nearer of the two large reception-rooms Mrs. Rheinholdt her-self, a woman dark, handsome and in the prime of life, was standing receiving her guests. By her side was her son, whose twenty-first birthday was

The professor gazed blankly at the empty box. "Nothing left except the smell," a voice from the open doorway remarked. They glanced around. Quest was standing there, and behind him . Lenora. The professor welcomed

"This is Mr. Quest, the great criminologist," he explained to the curator. Quest strolled thoughtfully around the room, giancing out of each of the windows 'n turn. He cept close to the wall, and when he had finished he drew out a magnifying glass from his pocket and made a brief examination of the box. Then he asked a few questions of the curator, pointed out one of the windows to Lenora and whispered a few directions to her. She at once produced what seemed to be a foot rule from the bag which she was carrying, and hurried into the garden. "A little invention of my own for measuring footprints," Quest explained. "Not much uso here, I

Quest stood over the box for a moment or two and looked once more out of the window. Presently Lenora returned. She carried in her hand a small object, which she brought silently to Quest. He glanced at it in perplexity. The professor peered over his shoulder. "It is the little finger!" he cried-"the little finger of my ape!" Quest held it away from him critically. "From which hand?" he asked.

"The right hand." Quest examined the fastenings of the window before which he had paused during his previous examinations. He turned away with a shrug of the shoulders.

"See you later, Mr. Ashleigh," he concluded laconically. A newsboy thrust a paper at them. Quest glanced at the headlines, Lenora clutched his arm Together and condescending smile as she held out both hands to the professor. "It is perfectly sweet of you. professor," Mrs. Rheinholdt declared.

Mrs. Rheinholdt breathed a sigh of relief as she greeted her new arrivals.

The professor made himself universally agreeable in a mild way, and his presence created even more than the sensation which Mrs. Rheinholdt had hoped for. In her desire to show him ample honor she seldom left his side.

"I am going to take you into my husband's study," she suggested, later on in the evening. "Ha

"We shall have to go quite to the back of the house," she explained, as she led him along the darkened passage.

The professor smiled acquiescently. His eyes rested for a moment upon her necklace.

"You must really permit me. Mrs. Rhejnholdt," he xclaimed. "to admire your wonderful stones! I am a judge of diamonds, and those three or four in the centre are, I should judge, unique."

She held them out to him. The professor laid the end of the necklace gently in the palm of his hand and examined them thru a horn-rimmed eye-"They are wonderful," he murmured, "wonderful!

He turned away a little abruptly. They had reached the back of the house and a door from outside had just been opened. A man had crossed the threshold with a coat over his arm and was standing now looking at them.

"How extraordinary!" the professor remarked. "Is that you, Craig?" "Yes, sir!" he replied. "There is a rain storm

"We don't walk balf enough." Mrs. Rheinholdt sighed, glancing down at her somewhat partly figure. "Dixon." she added, turning to the footman who had admitted Craig. "take Professor Ashleigh's servant into the kitchen and see that he has something before he leaves for home. New, professor, if you will come this way."

They reached the little room in the far corner of the house. Mrs. Reinholdt apologized as she switched on the electric lights.

"It is a queer little place to bring you to." she said, "but my husband used to spend many hours here, and he would never allow anything to be moved. You see, the specimens are in these cases."

moved. You see, the spectmens are in these cases."

The professor nodded. His general attitude toward the forthcoming exhibition was merely one of politeness. As the first case opened, however, his manner completely changed. Without taking the slightest further notice of his hostess, he adjusted a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles and commenced to mumble eagerly to himself. Mrs. Rheinholdt, who did not understand a word, strolled around the apartment, yawned and finally interrupted a little stream of eulogies, not a word of which she understood, concerning a green bettle with yellow spots, "I am so glad you are interested professor," she said. "If you don't mind. I will rejoin my guests. You will find a shorter way back if you keep along the passage straight ahead and come thru the conservatory."

"Certainly! With pleasure!" the professor agreed, without glancing up.

Mrs. Rheinholdt's reception, notwithstanding the temporary absence of its presiding spirit, was without doths an unqualified success. In one of the distant rooms the younger people were dancing. Philip Rheinholdt, with a pretty young debutante upon his arm, came out from the dancing-room and looked around amongst the little knots of people.

"I wonder where mother is?" he remarked. "She told me—"

The young man broke off in the middle of his

Twonaer where mother is? he remarked. "She told me—"

The young man broke off in the middle of his sentence. He too like many others in the room, felt a sudden thrill almost of horror at the sound which rang without warning upon their ears — a woman's cry, 3 cry of fear and herror. Mrs. Rheinhold, her hands clasping her neck, her splendid composure a thing of the past, a panic-stricken, terrified woman, stumbled into the room. She seemed on the point of collapse. Somehow or other, they got her into an easy chair.

"My fewels!" she cried. "My diamonds!"

"What do you mean, mother?" Philip Rheinholdt taked quickly. "Have you lost them?"

"Stolen!" Mrs. Rheinholdt shricked. "Stolen there in the conservatory!"

the senuineness of her terror:

"I saw a pair of hands—just hands—no arms—nothing but hands—come out of the darkness! They gripped me by the throat, I suppose it was just for a second. I think—I lost consciousness for a moment, altho I was still standing up. The next thing I remember is that I found myself shrieking and running here—and the jewels are gone!"

"You saw no one?" her son asked incredulously, "You heard nothing?"

"I heard no footsteps. I saw no one." Mrs. Rheinhold repeated. The professor turned away.

"If you will allow me," he begged, "I am going to telephone to my friend, Mr. Sanford Quest, the criminologist. An affair so unusual as this might attract him. You will excuse me."

The professor met the great criminologist and his assistant in the hall upon their arrival. He took the former at once by the arm.

"Mr. Quest," he began, "in a sense I must apologize for my peremptory message. I am well aware that an ordinary jewel robbery does not interest you, but in this case the circumstances are extraordinary. I ventured, therefore, to summon your aid."

ordinary. I ventured, therefore, to summon your aid."

Sanford Quest nodded shortly.

"As a rule." he said, "I do not care to take up one affair until I have a clean slate. There's your skeleton still bothering me, professor. However, where's the lady who was robbed?"

"I will take you to her," the professor replied.

Mrs. Rheinholdt's story, by frequent repetition, had become a little more coherent, a irifle more circumstantial, the perfection of simplicity and utterly incomprehensible. Quest listened to it without remark and finally made his way to the conservatory. He requested Mrs. Rheinholdt to walk with him thru the door by which she had entered and stop at the precise spot where the assault had been made upon her. There were one or two plants knocked down from the tiers on the right-hand side, and some disturbance in the mold where some large palms were growing. Quest and Lenora together made a close investigation of the spot. Afterwards, Quest walked several times to each of the doors leading into the gardens.

"There are four entrances altogether," he remarked as he lit a cigar and glanced around the place. "Two lead into the gardens—one is locked and the other isn't—one connects with the back of the house—the one thru which you came, Mrs. Rheinholdt, and the other leads into your reception-room, into which you passed after the assault. I shall now be glad if you will permit me to examine the gardens outside for a few minutes, alone with my assistant, if you please."

For almost a quarter of an hour Quest and Lenora disappeared. "They all looked eagerly at the assistant, if you please."

For almost a quarter of an hour Quest and Lenora disappeared. 'They all looked eagerly at the criminologist on his return.

"It seems to me," he remarked, "that from the back part of the house the quickest way to reach Mayton avenue would be thru this conservatory and out of that door. This is a path leading from just outside straight to a gate in the wall. Does anyone that you know of use this means of exit?"

Mrs. Rheinholdt shook her head.

"The servants might occasionally," she remarked doubtfully, "but not on nights when I am receiving."

The butler stepped forward. He was looking a little grave.

The butler stepped forward. He was looking a little grave.

"I ought, perhaps to inform you, madam and Mr. Quest," he said. "that I did, only a short time ago, suggest to the professor's servant — the man who brought your mackintosh, sir," he added turning to the professor—"that he could. if he choose, make use of this means of leaving the house. Mr. Craig is a personal friend of mine, and a member of a very select little club we have for social purposes."

"Did he follow your suggestion?" Sanford Quest asked.

"Did he follow your suggestion?" Sanford Quest asked.

"Of that I am not aware, sir," the butler replied.
"I left Mr. Craig with some refreshment, expecting that he would remain until my return, but a few minutes later I discovered that he had left. I will inquire in the kitchen if anything is known as to

The professor's smile was illuminating, his manner simple, but convincing.

"Craig," he asserted, "is the best servant, the most honest mortal who ever breathed."

"You think it would be out of the question then,"

Quest asked, "to associate him with the crime?"

The professor's confidence was sublime.

"I could more readily associate you, myself or young Mr. Rheinholdt here with the affair," he de-

His words carried weight. The little breath of suspicion against the professor's servant faded away. In a moment or two the butier returned.

"It appears, madam," he announced, "that Mr. Craig left when there was only one person in the kitchen. He said good-night and closed the door behind him. It is impossible to say, therefore, by which exit he left the house, but personally I am convinced that, knowing of the reception here tonight, he would not think of using the conservatory."

Cuest nodded absently.

"My testant and I." he announced, "would be glad to make a further examination of the conservatory, if you will idindiy leave us alone."

They obeyed without demur. Quect fook a sent and smoked calmly, with his eyes fixed upon the roof. Lenora went back to her examination of the overturned plants, the mold, and the whole ground within the immediate environs of the assault. She abandoned the search at last, however, and came back to Quest's side. He threw away his eight and rose.

in his pockets, a man walked swiftly along. At every block he hesitated and looked around him. Suddenly he paused. He was passing a great building, brilliantly lit. For a moment he thought that it was some place of entertainment. The thought of entering seemed to occur to him. Then he felt a firm touch upon his arm, a man in uniform spoke to him.

"Step inside, brother," he invited earnestly, almost eagerly, notwithstanding his monotonous masal twans. "Step inside and find peace. Step inside and the Lord will help you. Throw your burden away on the threshold."

The man's first impulse at being addressed had seemed to be one of terror. Then he recognized the uniform and hesitated. The man took him by the arm and led him in. There were the best part of a hundred people taking their places after the singing of the hymn. A girl was standing up before them on a platform. She was commencing to speak, but suddenly broke off. She held out her arms toward where the professor's confidential servant stood hesitating.

"Come and tell us your sins," she called out. "Come and the past. Come and seek forgiveness."

In formation it is similar to the land masses of the north shore of Lake Superior, particularly on Thunder Bay. It is covered with grasses and arctic vegetation. From the height to which we climbed we could see rolling land masses, studded with silver lakes, which appeared to be great breeding places for wild swan and geese and ducks "The part we explored is not inhabited by Eskimos, but on an island to the westward we found old stone igloos, partly in ruins, and elaborate stone wind blinds, used by the Eskiwind blinds, used by the Eskimos in goose hunting. The whole island area is more than 4000 square miles in extent, with a complete length north and south of nearly 400 miles; that is, from the South Belchers, latitude 55 degrees north to latitude 60 degrees north, at the Ottawa Islands. Looking from the hilltops of the main island over sweeps of valley and rise one got an impression of highly cultivated areas, but that was due to the green moss and grass that covered al-

On Tuesday, March 30, Mr. Flaherty will give a public lecture in Convocation Hall, on the life of the Eskimo, and will relate more fully some of his travels and discoveries in Hudson Bay, when the remarkable films taken by the expedition will be shown to the public for the first time. There will be no charge for this lecture, and Torontonians will have a chance to just how successful has been the enterprise of some of her own citizen

Some of methods used by the soldiers at the front in building houses to protect themselves from the weather are very clever. This photo shows men on outpost duty near Verdun collecting limbs and branches for their new home.

A new type of barbed wire being used by the belligerents—It is almost impassable, for beside being of very heavy wire, carries a charge of electricity that will injure, if not kill.

The arrival of the mails at Cape Tormentine, Prince Edward Island, from Cape Traverse, N.B.—The channel is filled with floating ice and boats that may also be used as sleds are used in this dangerous work.

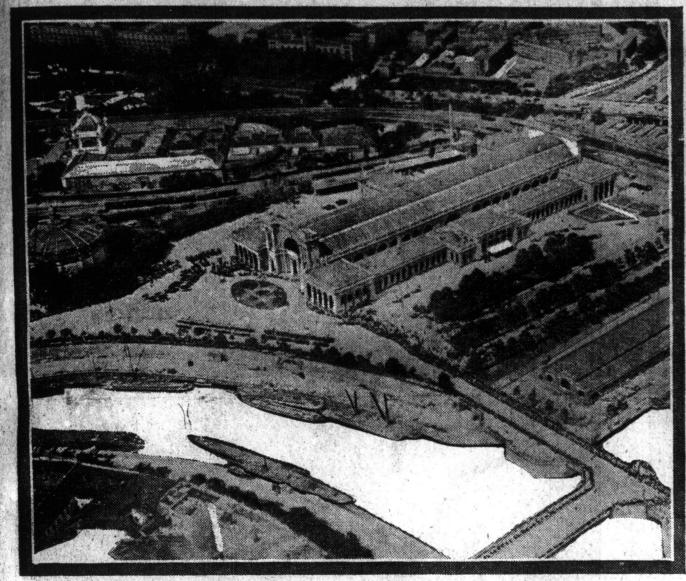

Quite the most popular background in the pictures, the boys of the Australian contingent send home is formed by the Spninx, and of course, a few natives are gathered in to add to the "local color."

All Montreal usually turns out to witness the St. Patrick's parade, and this year was no exception, 150,000 lining the route—

This Zeppelin view of Berlin shows in the foreground the River Spree spanned by the Alein Bridge and crowded with long barges and steam barges. The Lehrte station, one of the five terminal stations of Berlin, is seen in the centre of the picture with railway lines leading into it from the top right hand corner of the view. To the left of the station are the German Colonial Museum, a small, round building near the river, and the Exhibition Park, further away from the river. Behind the Exhibition Park may be seen the square barracks of the Uhlans of the Guard, with the parade ground immediately behind them.

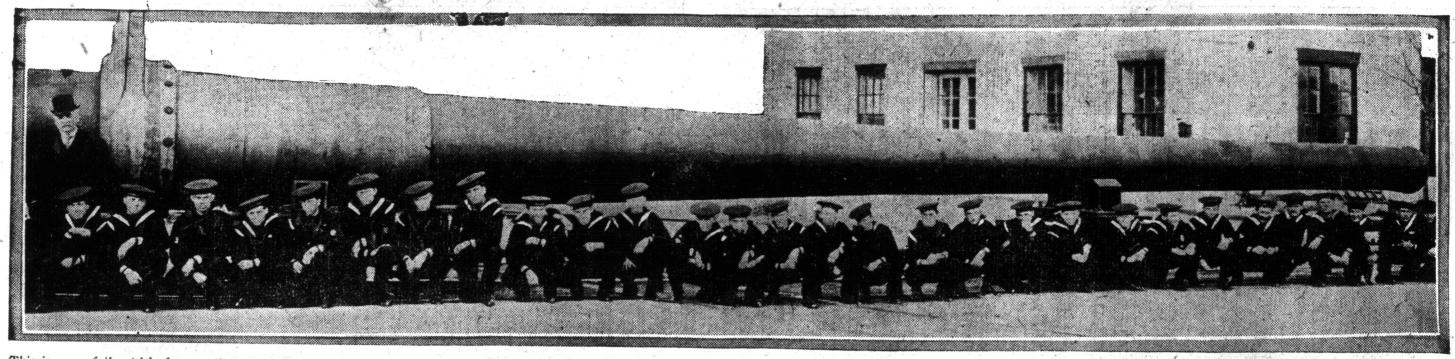

Russian soldiers are the greatest card players in the world—It is their amusement in the trenches and in billets—The Russian soldier is said to be stolid and a ponderous thinker, but some of his games are very intricate.

Full military honors marked the funeral of Capt. Erdman of the German cruiser Bleucher, who was rescued after the sea battle only to die of pneumonia in Edinburgh Military Hospital.
