H. McGrattan & Sons

on Churchill's

Churchill is the first Minister to break the silence of the recess, as he has done by two speeches, at Birmingham and Leicester. The first speech was, as befitted the occasion, wholly political, since it was Mr. Churchill's presidential address to the Birmingham Liberal Club. He addressed himself mainly to what the Prime Minister has described as the "dominating issue," and Liberals at all events will read with unreserved approval Mr. Churchill's diagnosis of the disease produced in the body politic by the merely acts as the tool of one party in the State. It is quite right that there should be counter checks upon a democratic assembly, but "these counter-checks should be in the nature of delay, and not in the nature of arrest; they should operate evenly and equally against both political parties, and not against only one of them; and above all, they should be counter checks conceived and employed in the national interest and not in the partisan interest." The present state of affairs is a mixture of abuses and absurdities; it is certain that "reform effect and far-reaching, must be the necessary issue at the general election." As to when that is likely to take place, Mr. Churchill could naturally only speak in rather general language. Though a great deal of legislation which Liberals think valuable has been destroyed, it is none the less true that the Government has not been "powerless in the past." "We shall see," says Mr. Churchill, "before many months are past whether His Majesty's Government and the House of Commons, by which it is supported, do not still possess effective means to secure substantial results, not only upon those important political issues in which we have been for the time being thwarted, but also in that still wider and, in my opinion, more important field of social organization into which, under the leadership of the Prime Minister, we shall now proceed to advance. In another passage it is definitely contended that the Government will last the full five years, which are the normal and healthy period of British administration." It "so happens that many of the most important steps which we should now take are of such a character that the House of Lords will either not be able or will not be anxious to obstruct them, and could not do so except by courtting all together novel dangers." This means, we take it, that the Peers will find themselves powerless against the financial powers possible to the House of Commons.

Lincoln's Example

But nothing has outworn the fundamental principles of Lincoln's leadership. We have the right to demand in our leaders equal sincerity, disinterestedness and devotion. We have a right to point, as a perpetual standard, to his moderation; to his conscientious consideration of all interests and views; to his wise and patient tolerance and open-mindedness; to his freedom from rancor and avoidance of personal contention; to his moral courage; to his sense of justice; to his essential democracy. We may well ask of our leaders that they should imitate his manly attitude toward public opinion; that they should disdain to poison its sources of violent and unproved assertions and by the forced uses of our modern machinery of publicity. We may well insist that they shall not merely follow nor feignly and selfishly mould the sentiment of voters, but direct aright and to no ignoble ends the opinion and the suffrages of the people. We have a right to resent leadership based either upon conscienceless advocacy of supposedly popular programs, or still more shamelessly upon the wholesale use of money. It is our duty to warn against the spurious leadership that deals in indiscriminate denunciation, awakens a feeling of class and of class hatred, forgets the bonds of common citizenship, spreads distrust and despair of the nation and sows the very seeds of anarchy and assassination. We have a right to scout the demagogues who take the name of Lincoln upon their lips and in their lives set at naught every principle of his nature, Richard Watson Gilber, in the Century. Short and odd lengths of lumber is the subject of a brief bulletin sent out by the United States Forest Service. It is stated that 25 per cent of the felled trees are never banded from the woods simply because specifications of builders and architects cling to conventional lengths, whereas the actual construction is such as easily to use the short and odd lengths. The work of a prominent architect was examined and it was found that 40 per cent of the siding on fame buildings was under 6 feet in length. It was found that in cutting and grading finished lumber generally 5 to 10 per cent was bound to come in lengths under 10 feet, of which all under 6 feet is burned and all over is sold at reduced prices. This bulletin asks for closer specifications better understanding of the timber situation as a help to the lumbermen and for the preservation of the lumber supply.

COUNTY VALUATION

Work of the Valuators, Recently Completed, Shows Increase of Three Quarters of a Million in Twenty Years

The county valuers have recently concluded the task assigned them two years ago and have made returns to the county council. The total valuation of property in all of Charlotte county is placed at $5,370,150 as compared with $4,645,548, in 1886 when the valuation was last made, an increase of $724,602.

Table with 5 columns: Towns and Parishes, Percentage 1886, Percentage 1908, Valuation 1886, Valuation 1908. Lists various towns like St. Andrews, Town, St. George, Town, etc.

The valuers in 1886 were James Bogue, Thomas Cottrell and Luke Byron who have all since passed away. The new board is composed of Howard Murchie, J. Warren Wooster and J. Henry Dyer.

Found Sixty Skeletons

North Sydney, N. S. Feb. 15.--Information received here from private sources tell of the discovery at St. Pierre, Miquelon, a few days ago of a number of human skeletons. The gruesome find was made by a fisherman named Jougand, and at the place called Anse Allumets, a fishing cove situated on the East coast of the Island of Thierre, while making excavations for a cellar beneath his house. Although Jougand had been the occupant of his humble fishing cottage for a number of years, he had no knowledge that his nightly rest was taken above the sepulchres of a large number of his fellow men. While engaged in excavations, Jougand was startled in unearthing what was apparent to him as being the bones of a human being. Much excited, he hurried to the seat of authority at St. Pierre, some distance away and reported the matter to the Mayor. Further investigations were at once made, and after more digging sixty more skeletons, which had long reposed beneath the floor of the cottage were brought to the light of day. Under the orders of the Mayor the bones were conveyed to the cemetery where they were interred in a common grave, there being no means of identifications. Speculation is rife as to the probable accounting for the presence of the remains of so large a number of human beings in this remote and unfrequented fishing hamlet, even the oldest inhabitants being unable to shed any light on the mystery. Many theories have been advanced, the most acceptable of which is that the remains discovered are those of the ill-fated passengers of the sailing ship "Clarisse," which foundered near this point in the year 1846, in which disaster upwards of sixty passengers perished. This theory is advanced by some of the oldest inhabitants, who claim that the bodies were washed ashore near Anse Allumets, and probably interred at that place. The population of little French Colony, being small and scattered and of such a fluctuating nature verification of this theory is practically impossible until further investigation is made. The finding of the remains has caused considerable excitement in the colony of fishermen, whose lot are cast on the fate in the Atlantic where discovery of such a startling nature was rare.

On Thinking Glad

Never mind a change of scene-- Try a change of thinking. What if things seem so dull, mean, What's the use of blinking? Life's not always storm and cloud, Somewhere stars are shining, Try to think your joys out loud, Silence all repining. By degrees, by thinking light, Thinking glad and sweetly, You'll escape the stress of night, Worry gone completely. Get the habit looking for Sunbeams pirouetting, Tapping gaily at your door-- Surest cure for fretting. --John Kendrick Bangs.

Animals and Earthquakes

(By ONE WHO HAS WATCHED THEM) Whenever a terrible earthquake occurs, such, for instance, as that which has recently stricken Sicily, we hear much about the sufferings of the people at the scene of these disasters, but no one mentions the cats, dogs, and horses, and other animals, which are involved. As a matter of fact, animals are very sensitive to the slightest of earthquake shocks. There are portions of this world's unreliable surface, which are disturbed by earthquake with uncomfortable regularity parts of Mexico, Italy, South America, and notably Japan.

ALWAYS YELPED

Among the European residents Nagasaki, the great Japanese seaport, is familiarly known as "Earthquake town." It is nothing at all out of the ordinary for from nine to twelve mild shocks to be felt there during the twenty-four hours. This condition of affairs, with few intermissions of no great length, prevails throughout the year. Its initial effect upon Europeans is to produce a feeling of profound nausea. The native population are, one and all, serenely indifferent to it. But the more domesticated animals and birds seem never to become used to what the poet calls, "the vexed and uneasy earth." Moreover, they appear to be gifted (or cursed) with a foreknowledge of the coming "quake," which is most uncanny. Somewhere stars are shining, Try to think your joys out loud, Silence all repining.

I had a little Irish terrier that used to lie on a mat in my office. He would be curled up, fast asleep, then, suddenly, with a sharp yelp, he would spring up, and immediately dive under his mat. A minute later the house shook, and I knew that the dog had been a true prophet. The shock over, "Jim" would emerge, shake himself, and curl up, and go to sleep again! In his waking hours he invariably barked and crawled under a chair or table just before the "quake" came. I have seen a dog, trotting contentedly along the street, stick his tail between his legs, and race at breakneck speed for the nearest doorway, without the slightest apparent reason. But the animal instinct was never wrong. Another would lie down flat, put his head between his paws, and howl dismally. The shock always followed within a minute or two. Dogs seem to be more frightened of earthquakes than any other pets (cats are unaffected), and their fear never wholly wears off.

POULTRY AMUSING ANTIQUES

Horses tremble violently, and become covered instantly in a complete lather, neighing loudly and incessantly before, during and for a short while after the shock. But, like the humans, they become used to the inevitable in time, although it never ceases to effect their nervous system, and makes them irritable and restless. The antics of this feathered creation supply an amusing side to the situation. I have seen a most respectable fowl, the mother of a large family, suddenly squat down in the dust of the roadway, with her wings spread out to their fullest extent, "squawking" in a most ludicrous manner. The majestic rooster, meanwhile, was running round and round, in aimless circles. When the tremor had passed, and she was shaking the dust off her feathers, her lord and master seemed to be instantly struck with the loss of dignity which had occurred. Male-like, throwing all the blame on her, he chased her for about sixty yards, pecking at her viciously in unmistakable rage. As the cat is the only domesticated animal which is unaffected by earthquakes, so, on the other hand, the snake seems to be the sole wild thing which views them with alarm. Its terror is exhibited in lost hissing, and an attempt to envelope its head in its own coils. During a seismic convulsion the snake will not bite, and, even, if it should, its poison-bag will not discharge its deadly fluid, being temporarily paralyzed. Rabbits retire precipitately to their burrows just previous to a shock, and do not emerge for some time after it. The wild goats, which are abundant on the hills, look up with a sort of questioning air, but are not otherwise interested in the phenomenon occurring under their feet, and continue browsing with the utmost nonchalance. Earthquakes have apparently a bad effect upon the morals of bird-pets. A friend of mine possessed a fine cockatoo, which had evidently sojourned in the company of sailors. It was supposed to be a good talker, but for a long time after its purchase it preserved an impenetrable silence, grudgingly to the chagrin of its owner, a lady of rather rigid principles. Then, one day, the flood-gates were opened unexpectedly and the result was disastrous. A severer shock than usual aroused the bird out of his impassivity, and he swore, fluently and decisively, for fully ten minutes. I was assured by the scandalized lady herself that his language was awful. After that little burst, he relapsed into his wonted speechlessness, which nothing could tempt him to break. The sequel was that the lady was so afraid that another shock would some day lead to a repetition of his shocking behaviour, and the suspense of hearing it would, and waiting for it, so get on her nerves, that she actually bribed her Japanese "boy" to take it some distance into the country, and let it fly away!

Perhaps the most extraordinary effect which the earthquake has on any living thing is to be observed in the case of the squirrel. It causes that little animal to turn somersault! This is well known to hunters and backwoodsmen, and I have myself seen squirrels in the open turning over and over just after a shock, as if in a state of vertigo. This lasts for about two minutes, after which they stop dead, and then scamper for the nearest tree. Life in earthquake latitudes is trying for the nerves of both animal and human beings, and it is a standing joke in Nagasaki that no cook dare include a blanc-mange in the menu, because its stability is too marked a reminder of prevailing conditions.

Passed Away

It is with deep regret we record the death of Mrs. V. M. Wentworth of Red Beach, which occurred on Thursday Feb. 11th. The deceased is survived by her husband, three young children, mother, two sisters and two brothers. A loving mother, a kind and thoughtful wife and a loyal friend has passed away. Mrs. Wentworth's kindly disposition and charitable deeds endeared her to all who knew her, and her death is a crushing affliction to her family and numerous friends. The spirit of this good and estimable woman has sped to the great beyond, and we murmur a sad good-bye, but her memory will ever be cherished and her many noble deeds revered.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

A Real Lung Tonic

There are many preparations that will relieve a cough—few that will cure it. The first class, containing such drugs as Opium and Morphine, simply deaden the irritation and stop the cough, but do little or no permanent good.

Rev. Father Morrissey

"Father Morrissey's No. 10"

does not contain a trace of these dangerous drugs, but is an absolutely safe and scientific preparation of Nature's own remedies—Herbs, Roots and Balsams.

It entirely removes the irritation that caused the cough, by cleaning out the mucus, stopping the inflammation and healing the delicate membrane of throat and lungs.

Moreover, it tones up and strengthens the whole system, particularly the lungs, and protects against future coughs and colds.

Trial size 25c. per bottle. Regular size 50c.

THE RETURN

The shop door lay open, and a sweet breeze blew in, not violent, but cool, as it seemed, with the coolness of the ferns. There was not a sound in the street—of voice or step. The children were still at school; the housewives were tidying themselves before tea. One might well suppose that the old dealer sat in his shop not because he expected business, but because he preferred to sit there.

After a time he dropped his work upon the counter, and going down a step into the back room, set a kettle on the fire there. It was very warm; the glare of the sun seemed to be everywhere. He pushed open the window of the room and pulled the green blind partly down. The air seemed to stir then. He went back to the shop, moving with the quiet deliberation of the aged.

There had been a step in the street and as he resumed his seat it paused at the little gate of the garden. The gate creaked, and the step came on. It was weak, undecided, dragging.

"Tain't a Caverley step," said the old man. He leant back to peer through the window. But he missed the newcomer's approach, and as he peered, the woman, dragging herself over the stone step, entered the shop.

She made a shadow in the doorway; the old eyes came travelling back to find it. They wandered over the woman's dragged dress, then rested on her face.

Something troubled their limpid peace; the old man stared, then stared again. The brown wool dropped from his hands. He said quaveringly, Keziah.

The woman laughed. "Yes, she said, 'It's me. I've come back.'"

She said no more, but stood before him, her faded eyes holding him with a kind of empty boldness, her hands lying by her sides, her grey hair in strands round her meager face, as if it had been beaten by the rain. There was something indefinably shameful about the woman's attitude, as if the onlooker were invited to look and see the worst; as if what he saw mattered nothing to the woman who thus displayed herself.

She said with nothing but weariness in her voice, "Well?"

The limpidity of the blue eyes remained unbroken. What she had so brazenly flaunted, he could not see; perhaps she knew it. He said, quaveringly, "Don't stand nigh again them tins—they be floury. It ain't easy to get flour off of black."

"Ain't it?" she laughed. "It be harder to get black off of white." She stared at him boldly. "Ain't it Thomas?"

He smiled, a little foolishly—he did not understand. "You kin wash white," he muttered.

She shrank then, almost as if she had struck her. The old man noticed the movement, and misinterpreting it, he said, "No one won't come in 'till I shut the door."

He moved round the counter, with that same quiet deliberation, so unlike her shuffling, tired tread, and pushed the door shut. After a moment's hesitation, he turned the key.

The woman faced him. The shadow was kinder to her face than the sunlight had been; the eyes appeared less bold. There was wonder in her glance, almost confusion. "You ain't—you ain't meanin' me to stay?"

He said, in a blind kind of way, as if he had to look too far to catch his thoughts "I used to wait for you— I did. There were times when I almost thought I heard your feet."

Odd as I didn't know today— He broke off, looking at her pitiously.

The look forced her eyes, against her will. She muttered, "I ha' grown heavy footed, no doubt. Lunnon streets—"

"I've heard tell," he said carefully, "as they be tiring. They be less freshsome, I'd say, nor a country road."

"Ay," said she bitterly, "that they be."

Looking at him, perhaps she wondered that they had ever been contemporaries, he and she, husband and wife. Soiled with the grim of the great city, worn out with the passions, she found him little more than a white haired babe. She was aged, through and through. Even to the call of London her ears were dim. But her heart could remember how sweet that call had been.

She said, "You ain't understandin' why I went away."

"You be wearied out," he said. His tone was still tender; it was so long since he had had a chance to care for her. He made tea deftly in a tin brown pot. She remembered it. Things did not wear out in Caverley; if she stayed here—and she meant to stay—she would be good for another 10 or 15 years.

He did not offer to pour out the tea, and in response to the expectation which was so evident in him, she moved to the head of the table and sat down by the tea-tray. Her soiled fingers played round the white cups with garlands of roses. She looked at them once with a careless smile.

She drank her tea, but would eat nothing.

Afterward, when she was alone in the tiny bedroom above, with its spotless muslin curtains and prim furniture, she brought a bottle from her pocket and drank feverishly. She muttered, "I be 'most played out this time; it were a near go." She pulled off her dusty bonnet, and cast it on a chair.

The bed with its white quilt seemed to amuse her. She leant against the end of it and laughed consumedly, the color which the brandy had brought into them still in her cheeks.

But she stripped the quilt back and took off her broken boots before she lay down, her black skirts, bedraggled and dusty, spread over the bed.

When she came stealthily up to her room she was asleep. He went to the window and pulled down the blind with his tremulous fingers. There was still a lingering sunlight, but the heat of the day was past.

She lay heavily, like a log, as if the tired limbs were incapable of restlessness. The old man watched her for a moment or two, then his glance went round the room, full of pity and regret. "I kep' this room same as she liked it for 20 years an' more, waiting for her. It be changed now—an' she has come."

The light began to go. He scarcely needed it in his occupation, which had become mechanical; but absent-ly, from habit, he drew up the window blind. Habit touched him again, and he took off the cloth which had been covering his wares. As he stood folding it, his eye wandered. Suppose she awakened * * * and went?

He climbed the stairs so quickly that he was out of breath when he reached the room. He paused by the door with a beating heart. Here was glamor and witchery, she had said—and of such things he knew naught.

Pushing the door open, he went in to the room. He need not have feared; she still lay on the bed.

He stood irresolute. There was a sharp silence in the room—a sweet, cold silence. He noticed it now. It did not puzzle him. It was one of the simple things of life, and he understood.

He leant over the bed. "Kesiah," he said sorrowfully, laying his hand against her still cheek.

He knew that she would never leave Caverley now.—The Sketch.

When Shrub Did The Greatest Work

When Alf Shrub made his ten-mile record he ran every mile of the first six under five minutes with an average of 5:04 for each mile. In this race which took place at Ibrox park, Glasgow, November 5, 1903, Shrub was nearing the finish of the ten miles and sprinting for the finish when the official informed him of his chance to annex the 11-mile record. He immediately eased off a bit and then went on for the record, which he found was well within his powers, doing 56,233.5 and then sent him on for the hour record, which he negotiated by covering 11 miles 1,137 yards.

Shrub made his great two-mile record of 9:09.35 at Ibrox park on July 11, 1904. This track is a banked quarter mile cinder track, and Shrub admits it to be the fastest track in the world. The race was a handicap and McGough, the Scotch champion, was the nearest marked man, having 80 yards, but refused to start, much to Shrub's displeasure, as it made his nearest marked man on 125 yards. At the gun Shrub went right out, doing the first quarter in 58.5, going to the half in 2:04 and at 1,000 yards caught his first man, the mile he reached in the fast time of 4:26.5. At 15 yards from the tape he was abreast of the leader, who had started from 275 yards. "Alfie" struggled to the front and won out by 11-2 yards.

The same day that he made his two-mile record he was on scratch in the mile handicap, with McGough on 15 yards, but after his hard race decided not to run, but personal feeling against McGough's treatment in the two-mile persuaded him to start and he was allowed one hour's rest.

Both the judges and McGough urged him to start. The first quarter he ran in 1:01, McGough maintaining the lead. The half was done in 2:08.5, both men closing on the field, during the third quarter Shrub gained ten yards, 52 yards beyond this point the leaders were running on even terms and the same position was held to within 25 yards of the tape. By an extreme effort Shrub won by a yard in 4:24.5.

Living Thoughts

This life is a passage, not a port. Affliction sanctified is better than health.

The trimmings of the vain world would clothe the naked.

Let us be sure when we pray for rain that the tub is right side up.

Prudence is a good form of prayer for Providence.

More good men go to the bad in good times than in bad.

It is always easier to promise butter than it is to provide bread.

The prize of finding truth is being willing to pay anything for it.

No man ever did a designed injury to another without doing a greater to himself.

Lives that do not express something are of very little service in the world.

It's not much use talking of loving, folks unless your liking makes their lives lighter.

Child life is exceedingly precious, and nothing is too costly that we can do in reason in saving the child life of the people.

Threatening feverishness with children is quickly and safely calmed by Preventives. These little Candy Cold Cure Tablets should always be at hand—for promptness is all-important. Preventives contain no quinine, nothing harsh or sickening. They are indeed, "the stitch in time." Carried in pocket, or purse, Preventives are a genuine safeguard against Colic. 25c. Sold by all Dealers.

Bismark's Courtship

The courtship of Bismark has all the romance connected with it that attaches to that of Warren Hastings, and nothing of the discredit. Bismark was a gay young Prussian officer when he met Johanna von Puttkamen. He wrote to her father a formal request for Johanna's hand. The father did not exactly give consent, but replied granting the future Chancellor permission to pay an occasional visit. Bismark hastened to Reinfeld. The whole family were in the drive awaiting the visitor's arrival, Johanna herself standing with her eyes fixed modestly on the ground. The swift, whirlwind decision that scored Bismark his later political triumphs came now to the front, and he carried the situation by storm. Galloping up the drive, he leaped from his horse, ran forward and flung his arms around Johanna, taking no heed of her scandalized parents, and covered her blushing face with kisses. After that there could be no talk of "probation" or "waiting." The betrothal was an accepted fact.

Let the Husband Rule

Here is the advice of an experienced matron to girls about to be married:— Don't begin with the determination to domineer over your husband. The satisfaction you may derive from such a policy is a poor one at the best.

The self-assertive woman who commences married life with the idea that she is to be autocrat of her new home, and who dictates the domestic policy, without reference to her husband's opinions, will in many cases wreck the happiness of that home.

Every woman, sooner or later, feels that to be truly happy a wife should be able to be proud of her husband. And can you be proud of a man who suffers himself to be "hen-pecked"?

Look Ahead for Lines

Sudden illness and pains come in every family—to parents and children alike. But if you have looked ahead, and have right in your home, ready for immediate use a bottle of Polson's Nerviline—there isn't much to worry over. If it's a sore throat or contracted chest, apply Nerviline and put on a Nerviline Porous Plaster. If it's colic, cramps, or any stomach disorder, just administer ten drops of Nerviline in hot water. No family medicine is more useful or more depended upon in emergencies than Nerviline and Nerviline Porous Plasters. They keep the doctor bill small. 25c. each at all dealers. Refuse substitutes.

What to Teach a Girl

Teach her to dress for health and comfort as well as for appearance.
 Teach her how to darn stockings, sew on a button, and mend a glove.
 Teach her to say "No" and stick to it, or "Yes" and mean it.
 Teach her to make hers the neatest room in the house.
 Teach her to have nothing to do with intemperate or dissolute young men.
 Teach her to regard the morals and habits, and not money, in selecting her associates.

Chicago schools are to drop the English vertical and also the backward style of penmanship for the old-time slant method of writing. Perhaps in time the old American style of hand shaking may also be revived among those enrolled in Chicago's elite book.

PULPWOOD RESOLUTIONS

E. N. Lewis (W. Huron) will again introduce in the commons his resolution of last session relative to the prohibition of the export of pulpwood. The resolution is in the following terms:

"That in the opinion of this house there should be placed such an export duty on pulp and pulpwood as will be sufficient to induce its manufacture into paper in Canada and thereby save for Canadian labor the $5,000,000 now lost annually."

Last session the resolution was debated but no vote was reached, objection to it coming chiefly from the Quebec members.

SPREAD OF RAILWAYS

Canada, on the other hand, has two new transcontinental roads under construction, both of which will be completed in a year or two, when there will be three railways spanning the continent within Canadian territory, from one ocean to the other. When that time comes the Dominion will be like the United States in the matter of railway construction. A line or two are being built to Hudson's Bay and a plan for a great circle trans-Canada still further north of reaching James Bay and north of Lake Winnipeg. It is not plain when we will come to the end of our railway building, whether of main lines or feeders; the era of electricity is coming in, which will encourage efforts to open our routes with. The difficulty and cost of obtaining terminal facilities, which has hampered railway extension in the United States, is beginning to be felt in Canada as cities grow. But when the demand warrants there is sure to be the supply, and where possible a competitive supply. Northern Quebec and Ontario have lands competing with those in the Western Provinces, in the attraction of settlers, with the aid of mineral resources of as yet but partially known but of enormous extent and value. The Dominion thus appears to be entering upon an era of great development, and railway construction must keep pace with the advance. Thus will be fulfilled Sir Wilfrid Laurier's prediction that, as the nineteenth century belonged to the United States, the twentieth belongs to Canada. — Montreal Witness.

LINCOLN AT GETTYSBURG

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in Liberty, dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of war. We are met to dedicate a portion of it as the final resting place of those who here gave their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to the cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain—that the nation shall, under God, have new birth of freedom, and that the government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.—Abraham Lincoln's famous address on the battlefield of Gettysburg.

A short time ago the government of Manitoba took over the telephone system of that province from the Bell Telephone Company and operated it. It is now announced that there is a tidy surplus to the credit of the province as a result of this feature of government ownership and operation.

"L'Etang, in the county of Charlotte, is one of the best harbors on the coast of New Brunswick, and according to the Admiralty "sailing directions," one of the most convenient in North America, in point of entrance, capacity, shelter, depth and holding ground. The harbor is famous for sardines.—From report of the Minister of Public Works, 1908.

There are two little words, simple enough in themselves, that introduce untold trouble in the world and are responsible for more gossip, scandal and harm than any two words in the English language. These two words are nothing more than, "They say." They have done more to ruin the reputations than all other things. If you never quote what "they say" you may be quite certain you are not a gossip.

How many of our readers can tell us what the stripes on the barber pole signify? You see the pole with its stripes and you know there is a barber shop back of the pole, but here the knowledge of the average person ceases. In the early days barbers did the bleeding for the community and surgeons were not as plentiful as now. The first thing thought of, was that any patient should be bled. Tap him and take a few ounces of blood from him, no matter how weak he might be. Well, the red stripes on a barber pole mean the red ribbon bandages that barbers bound over the wounds caused by bleeding people. That's all. When they got through with a plethoric man, of full habit and had tapped him like a hard maple tree in February, he was patched up and bandaged; his arms legs and trunks looked like a much-quartered leg.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Quite a number of children in town are ill with croup.

There are at present only three inmates at the almshouse.

The improvement in the lumber market is one of the signs of improved trade conditions.

Will all our readers who have friends residing outside of St. George, kindly mail us their addresses.

Some of the granite mills are opening up and as spring advances conditions in town will improve.

Excellent programs are provided for the weekly meetings of the Division consisting of songs and recitations. The attendance at every meeting is large.

Thursday evening was very pleasant y spent by a number of young people at Drageorgian hall in dancing, games and music. Mooney's orchestra was present.

M. E. Frauley is installing acetylene in his fine new house. This house which is to be opened as a hotel in the spring, will have every modern convenience. Thos. McIntyre is doing the work on the lighting plans.

At a meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association in Toronto Wednesday, Hon. W. C. Grimmer, surveyor general of New Brunswick, mentioned that his government was desirous of finding a means of draining the bogs of that province and utilizing them for reforestation purposes.

In Canada there are about seventy-six thousand men who gained their living on the water, and that number does not include those who are employed in packing establishments and other enterprises more or less directly connected with and dependent upon the marine and fisheries. The capital invested in the industry is very large and the output amounted to thirty million dollars a year.

Ottawa, Feb. 12.—Fred Pearson, of Halifax, is here and his mission is understood to be in connection with negotiations now pending for the sale of the Sun plant to the conservatives. Some matters are still pending concerning the amalgamation of the Sun with the Telegraph. They occasion Mr. Pearson's visit to Ottawa and until these are satisfactorily adjusted the negotiations for the sale of the plant to the Standard are delayed.

Sir Robert Bond announces that an agreement on the fisheries dispute between the United States and Newfoundland has been reached and that Newfoundland has gained certain concessions. The government claims that the terms of agreement as a whole are of a satisfactory character. It is announced that the Americans agreed to the abridgment of the question of their rights to fish in the inlets of the west coast.

The executive of the new agricultural society had an interview with W. F. Todd, M. P. Tuesday afternoon in which they presented the claim of the society for a grant of $10,000 from the Dominion government to aid in the erection of buildings. Mr. Todd expressed his interest in the object of the society and promised to urge the claim before the minister of agriculture at Ottawa. The society has also made request to the provincial government for a grant of $5000 for exhibition purposes.—Courier.

Surveyor General Grimmer has received application from residents of Grand Manan, asking that a number of deer, as well as two dozen partridge, be captured on the mainland of the province and taken to Grand Manan. The application states that deer were exterminated from the island of Grand Manan about twenty five years ago by the nefarious practice of hunting with dogs. There will likely be little difficulty in complying with the requests, as reports from different sections of the province state that there are too many deer now.

The debating club met Monday evening to discuss the question of government ownership. The speakers on both sides acquitted themselves most creditably. The question as put by the chairman was: Resolved—That Government ownership of public utilities is beneficial to the country. A. C. Toy, Dr. Taylor, Leo McGrattan, Thos. Kent, H. McKenzie, handled the affirmative side of the question. Hazen McGee, Dr. Alexander, K. B. Wathen, S. L. Lynott, H. E. Lawrence, the negative. When the smoke of battle had cleared away it was found that the warriors of the negative side had gone down to defeat. Rev. H. I. Lynda and John McGrattan officiated as judges.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Watch the business ads in Greetings for interesting announcements.

The carnival to be held Friday night promises to be one of the most interesting functions of the year.

The timber to be used to complete the wharf is being squared in the woods. The wharf crew is doing the work.

A meeting of the Granite Cutters Union was held Tuesday when matters of grave importance were discussed by the members.

The suspension of work at L'Etoile Copper Mine is to be regretted. It is hoped that spring will see the mine in full operation again.

Mr. I. E. Gillmor drove into town Thursday looking satisfied that he was behind something that could show his heels to the best of them.

Aaron Hooper, L'Etoile, aged 47 years, passed away on Wednesday, leaving a wife and six children. Funeral was held Friday. Rev. H. I. Lynda officiating. Interment at L'Etoile.

A horse belonging to Fred Cameron became quite frisky while being led from the blacksmith shop Thursday, with the result that its owner got a bad tussle on the ice, trying to hold him.

All kinds of election rumors are in the air. The latest name mentioned for Mayor is Mr. A. C. Gillmor. There's the usual crop of citizens ready to serve the town, but they fail to "make good" when called upon.

The Carnival, under the auspices of the Utopia Hockey Club, will be held Feb. 19th. A large number have signified their intention of taking part and the committee is now busy making preparations. The first band number will be at 8 o'clock and the committee requests all taking part to be on the ice at 8 p. m. Skating will continue until 9.30 p. m., when all will repair to Drageorgian hall where a dance will be held. The judging will take place on the ice and the prizes will be awarded in the hall. Three competent judges will decide the winners. Those wearing slippers only shall not be allowed on the ice. Mooney's orchestra will furnish music at the dance and refreshments will be served. Tickets to rink 10 cents, to hall 15 cents. Dance 25c. Those in costume admitted to hall free. Should the weather prove unfavorable the carnival will be held the following Monday evening, Feb. 22nd. As this is the first event of the kind ever held in St. George, considerable interest is being taken and everything now points to a good entertainment. The St. George Cornet Band will be in attendance at the rink.

Rats are becoming a pest in the town. Rovers of the greatest renown, imbued with a propensity to travel, the crafty rats are immigrants that look always for a free trip over the waters and any old kind of a water boat will furnish transportation for them. They never pay a fare and the government officials seldom or never collect a head duty on them. Landing here in the shipping season they spend the warm weather near the water front. When ice and snow block the outside edges of their haunts, the rovers offer a choice right of way into the cellars, barns and homes situated along the pipe line. The crafty rodent avails himself of the opportunity to roam and becomes an unwelcome guest in the potato barrel, last year's supply of pork and the oat bin, finally gnawing his way through clapboards, flour barrel, plaster, lath or paper—exploring, ever and always active—into the heart of the homes. The timid members of the family circle become nervous and the sale of traps increases. Residents living near the water front favor a law muzzling dogs. Dogs, whose only object in life appears to be larking at the moon, running after teams and killing cats, should be muzzled they say. With muzzled curs life would be subject to fewer jars and the rovelist tribe would decrease.

TOWN COUNCIL

A special meeting of the town council was held in the council room Friday evening. Mayor Lawrence presided with Aldermen Grant, Bogue, Craig, Dewar, Murphy, Goodill and Johnson present. The committee appointed to get legal advice on changes in town incorporation act, reported that such changes could be made. Every councillor present except Ald. Dewar, voted against any change, and the same old order will continue. There will be no change in town lines, elections will be held in April. The Bank of N. S. and Telephone Co. will not be called upon to pay any tax, unless council is advised that it can be legally done, as there appears to be some doubt at present. E. A. Greenson, Wm. Seelye and Lawrence McCarran were appointed Almshouse commissioners.

Inevitable Penalty
The plain truth of the matter is that the Government has squandered its popularity in the country by the fecklessness of its legislative programme. The average Englishman likes to go slowly, so that he may see where he is going. It is part of his strength. Doubtless Mr. Asquith, if he had been left to himself, would have respected this characteristic of his countrymen; but he has been driven by the extremists of the party to push forward measures for which the country was unprepared, and which the Government itself had never had time to think out. The party is now paying the inevitable penalty.—Daily Graphic, London.

Lights of Ancient Days
A feature of the forthcoming Imperial International Exhibition at the White City is to be a section illustrating the evolution of artificial light. There will be torches, ancient brackets, oil rush lights, early oil lanterns, the candles in all its stages of development, and lamps of all descriptions right down to the most improved electric and incandescent lamp of today. These exhibits are to be so displayed in a series of halls that the visitor will gradually emerge in a very literal sense from the gloom of the Dark Ages into the full radiance of the twentieth century. It will be like a Wagnerian crescendo.—Liverpool Courier.

Indigestion
Stomach trouble is not a symptom of, and is not a sign of, a true disease. We think of dyspepsia, indigestion, and flatulence as real diseases, but they are symptoms only of a certain specific liver disorder—indigestion.
It was this fact that first convinced Dr. Shoop of the existence of that new remedy, Shoop's Restorative. Shoop's Restorative does not cure the stomach trouble, but it cures the liver, and in so doing it cures the stomach. Shoop's Restorative is a powerful and healthy food, and it is the only food that will cure indigestion. For stomach trouble, indigestion, flatulence, and all other ailments of the stomach, Shoop's Restorative is the only remedy that will cure them. We sell our bottles everywhere.

A WOMAN'S CAPRICE
"Twenty years! I am notched and grizzled. You are only mellowed, ripened."
My friend smiled, and lighted a fresh cigarette. He puzzled me. Rumor had led me to expect to find him after my long absence a disappointed if not soured man. I had sought him here in the retreat where he and his cold, congenial wife lived, it was said, like a pair of hermits. Arriving at a moment when the lady was absent, I thought myself fortunate, and prepared to probe the unhappiness of one whose affection in early youth had left a very sunny spot on my memory.
I was, in fact, ready to give him all the pity and sympathy which a bachelor of experience can feel for the irremediable mistake of a married friend.
"Go on, old fellow," I said low.
"How did it all work out?"
He continued: "After a time, when the excitement of my first pride and happiness had subsided. I began to feel reluctantly conscious that there was something wanting in our life together. My wife's behavior was perfect from every point of view, but there was a wall of reserve between us which nothing was able to break through. Whenever we went I was aware that people said I had been married without love for the sake of my million. How was I to feel sure that the verdict was not a true one? Had she given her heart to some worthy fellow who was millionless and rejected him even as she had accepted me at her mother's bidding? Gradually as my eyes opened to much that had always been going on in the world unperceived by me, I admitted that this cruel case of ours, hers and mine, and blamed her, if blame there might be. It was a bitter world where a map required a million to buy the woman he loved, and after all got only the shell of her, destitute of heart and sheathed in a perpetual frost."
"Go on, my boy," I whispered.
"I resolved to take things as they came and to make the best of the good the gods had provided for me. We led a life of amusement and pleasure. Our house in London and our country house (not this house, something more grander) were as perfect as money could make them. My wife went everywhere, dressed and jeweled as the world expected to see her. We entertained the smart crowd known as society. I was proud beyond the pride of man when I saw the woman I had chosen receiving the admiration no one could refuse her. As time went on her reserve, which was my despair, communicated itself to me, and the impassable barrier between us was complete.
"Does all this agree with what my friends say about me in London?" he asked me suddenly.
"I confess I had heard that you had unfortunately married a cold and heartless woman," I said.
"Well," he said, "some time I may tell you how my unexpected fortune departed as suddenly and surprisingly as it arrived. The news of what appeared to be total ruin reached me first in a telegram which I found waiting for me one night when I returned home from a dinner party alone, my wife having pleaded a headache and retired to her room early in the evening. I gathered up the letters which had come by the last post and carried them to my dressing-room, where I sat down to read them. Imagine casting one's eye on a bit of paper as the eyes of the owner of a million and raising them with the knowledge that one does not own a penny in the world. I sat immobile, stunned with the suddenness of the blow. I sat confronting one idea which dominated all others concerning the consequences of this misfortune.
"How was I to tell my wife? How would she bear it—she who had married me for the splendors which she must relinquish? If she could not love me before, how bitterly would she turn from me now.
"I had sat for two or three hours motionless as a stone, and then the door opened and a figure in a white robe appeared on the threshold. It was my wife.

"What ails you?" she said gently.
"Nothing that I can tell you at present," I said. Go back to your rest."
"Will you not tell me what is the matter?"
"Certainly. I will tell you tomorrow."
"While I was speaking her keen eyes caught sight of the open telegram and of the letters sprawled on the paper which spelled ruin. The next moment she was on her knees beside me."
"I was so stupid from the shock I had borne that the sweet words and pleading tone came on me like a second blow. The next morning I was not sure I heard them, did not believe in them. I answered cruelly. "Unfortunately, you will have to share it with me."
"No, say 'fortunately.' Oh, my love, my husband; am I so unworthy? Must I be counted as a thing bought with gold, living on gold and for gold, and cast aside when gold fails and love might well take its place?"
"My brain was so dizzy that I could not accept the truth of her meaning and kept arguing with her like a man in a fever."
"Is it not absurd, I said, that you should imagine you could love me now when you could not love me through all the five years of my devotedness to you?"
"She crept nearer to me and wound her arm round my neck.
"I loved you," she said. I loved you since the first day I knew you. But I knew there was a plan made by others to force me upon you that your possessions might be useful to me and those belonging to me. The knowledge of this paralyzed my actions, even my looks now for the first time my heart has found a way to speak. We will work, we will laugh, we will be happy together."
She tightened her sweet hold of my neck. My arms closed round her—
"He stopped suddenly. There was a long silence and before it ended my hand found its way to his shoulder.
"I understand now, old friend," I said softly.
He shook himself up and laughed a little bright laugh.
"Yes," he said, "I thought I should give you a surprise. So much for the opinion of the world and a man's penetration of a woman's heart and mind. And here we are after all with enough to live on simply and with content. Hark, I hear my wife arriving home. Come and be introduced to her."—Tatler

ANALYTICAL CHEMIST TELLS OF PATENT MEDICINES

A graduate in organic chemistry has made a study of many of the best-known patent medicines on the market, states that many have virtue, but as a rule people have to pay for a lot of unnecessary expense. The following is the recipe of a well-known secret preparation, and is known by authority to be one of the best stomach and liver tonics. It is prescribed by many of the best physicians.

This mixture cures constipation and biliousness. The recipe: Fluid Extract Cascara, 1/2 oz.; Compound Syrup Rhubarb, 1 oz.; Fluid Extract Carrions Compound, 1 oz.; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, 5 oz. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

An eminent authority, who has made a careful and scientific study of the relative value of drugs having a specific action on the kidneys, bladder and liver, pronounces this an excellent combination.

You can buy the ingredients separately and mix at home.

Get this formula out and save it.

A Three Months' Night

A writer in the London Magazine describes a visit he paid last year to the Esquimaux of Baffin's Bay.

The winter "iglous," or snow houses, are much more pretentious erections than the summer "tupeks," or tents of skins, and are made to resist the extreme cold of the Arctic winter, and to serve as a comfortable hibernating place for the months during which the sun never rises above the horizon. The foundation is usually made of stones, upon which cleverly shaped blocks of snow are built up to form a dome-shaped hut. After these have frozen together the interior is lined with skins.

A long tunnel is then constructed to serve as a porch, this being built very low and narrow, necessitating an entrance being made on hands and knees, closing the first skin door before opening the second, so as to admit as little of the icy atmosphere as possible.

Heat is supplied by an "ikomar," or oil stove, made from a kind of soapstone in the shape of an oval saucer. It is filled with seal or walrus oil, never sweet-smelling, and usually very rank.

In this floats the wick, which is made of moss. This stove not only serves for heating, but also for cooking. Although I believe the part of their food is eaten raw, at any rate, not more than warmed through.

I saw one man eat quite four pounds of raw bear-meat, which was frozen as hard as a rock, only waiting for a second for it to half thaw in his capacious mouth.

At the back of the "igloo," at the end removed from the door, is a raised bench covered with skins, which serves as the sleeping chamber. Here the whole family turn in, taking off every vestige of clothing, finding quite sufficient warmth in the thick bear and deer skins which serve as blankets.

ASTHMA CURED

Mrs. Farndel, of Clements-Port, N. S., suffered all her life from asthma but was permanently cured by Catarrhozone after all other means failed.

Mrs. Farndel's recovery affords overwhelming proof of what Catarrhozone will do. Nothing except Catarrhozone was of the slightest benefit, but when given a fair trial it cured.

Now perhaps you need something for your cold, or bronchitis or Asthma? Why not try Catarrhozone? Thousands have been cured by inhaling it a few minutes, now and again, and certainly it wouldn't do you any harm to profit by their experience.

Mrs. Farndel gives the following statement of her case for the benefit of others who are suffering from asthma, and hopes that many will follow her example and use Catarrhozone.

"I am now in my eightieth year, and cannot recall the time when I was free from the Asthma. I had always a choking cough, feverishness, spasms, difficulty in breathing, headache and nausea. My druggist advised Catarrhozone one day, and I bought a large outfit. It gave relief in five minutes and helped me very much in one day.

"I inhaled Catarrhozone ten minutes every hour, and by the time two bottles were used I was completely cured. I am as free now from Asthma as if I never had it. My perfect recovery is due entirely to Catarrhozone. I prize my Catarrhozone Inhaler next to life itself. (Signed) MRS. T. FARNDEL."

This is a proof positive that Catarrhozone is a sure and speedy cure for the worst kind of Asthma. It is guaranteed to give satisfactory results, and your money will be refunded if it fails. All you need is a trial of this grand preparation to be quite satisfied and convinced that it is the best. Your druggist recommends and sells it. Price $1.00, small size 50 cents. By mail from N. C. Pol-on & Co., Kingston, Ontario.

Of all woman's remedies, Ferrozone is the best; it vitalizes the functions upon which health depends--makes the purest richest blood, gets perfect complexion and lots of vigor. Every girl and woman who seeks health, vitality, looks--let her get Ferrozone to-day. Fifty cent boxes at all dealers.

Afforestation Report

The report of the Afforestation Commission has been received with a remarkable amount of approval. The scheme which they propose is pronounced to be at once bold and practicable, and if the Government decide to legislate on the lines of the report, it does not seem as if they would meet with much opposition. It is recognized that if any system of afforestation is to be carried out on a large scale, it must be the work of the State.

Dr. Hamilton's Cure for Pimples

All skin diseases such as pimples originate through failure of the kidneys and liver. All taints that block the avenues of health must be removed. Dr. Hamilton's Pills do this quickly. They cleanse the system, make the skin smooth, restore roses to the cheeks and give clear, dainty complexion. For good looks, good health and good spirits there is nothing so sure as D. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. boxes at all dealers.

Anchor Dropped

In Whale's Mouth

The rather unusual case of an anchor dropping into the mouth of a whale is the experience the master of the British steamer Espinama de Larrinaga reports here. The story is borne out by Captain Dolph Steinhart, of the Galveston Pilots' Association, who boarded the liner of the bar here Wednesday to bring her into port. The weather becoming very foggy, the anchor was let go, and, after letting out the usual amount of hawser, the chain didn't tighten and the vessel kept drifting. The next morning it was discovered that the vessel had drifted seven miles and as the weather had cleared up, the anchor was hauled in preparatory to bringing the liner up to the docks. The anchor brought up a mass of mud and other substance and by close examination it was found to be bone from the mouth of a monster whale, and the most valuable bone gotten from the whale. Evidently the anchor had lodged in the remains of a large whale long dead, and this prevented it taking hold of the bottom of the sea. Hence, the failure of the anchor to grip.--Galveston Notes in N. Y. Shipping Illustrated.

Carrying Money

Some curious facts have come to light in regard to how emigrants carry their money. When Swedes or Norwegians decide to seek pastures new, they take the precaution of gathering all their available cash together and placing it in a huge pocket-book, which is generally headed down from father to son. These pocket-books sometimes contain sufficient leather to make a pair of boots.

Italians usually carry their money in a large tin tube, and this tube is hung about their necks by a small chain. Hungarians carry their money in the long boots they wear, together with a knife, fork, and spoon. The French mostly carry a small brass case.

Germans find a secure place for their money in a belt round their waist, and the belt is usually an elaborate and costly affair, no matter how poor the emigrant may be. Irishmen carry their money in a little canvas bag, while Irish girls, on the other hand, make a pocket in an undershirt, or, if it is paper money, they place it in their stockings.

Does Not Color Hair

Ayer's Hair Vigor, as now made from our new improved formula, does not stain or color the hair even to the slightest degree. Gray hair, white hair, blonde hair is not made a shade darker. But it certainly does stop falling hair. No question about that.

Formulas with each bottle Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says.

Indeed, we believe it will stop every case of falling hair unless there is some very unusual complication, something greatly affecting the general health. Then you should consult your physician. Also ask him about the new Ayer's Hair Vigor.

Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a stomach nerve, or it may give strength and support to the heart or kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the heart or kidneys. The old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing nerve centers. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see it Sold by all Dealers.

WILSON'S BEACH

Most Canadians Have Catarah

Our Changeable Climate is Responsible.

Where the atmosphere is damp, with sudden changes in temperature, almost everybody has Catarah, in some form or other. The ordinary cold in the head inflames and weakens the membranes lining the nose and throat, and starts a discharge. The next cold is more easily caught, and soon the patient is never quite free of it.

As Catarah develops the discharge increases--drops into the throat, especially at night--and takes on an offensive odor. Besides being exceedingly disagreeable, there is great danger of the disease extending to the lungs, stomach, or bowels.

Though it is very difficult to cure, Father Morrisey devised a combined internal and external treatment that has cured thousands. The Tablets tone up and invigorate the system, and assist Nature in throwing off the disease, while the salve, applied up the nostrils, clears out the discharge and heals the membrane. Combined treatment, see at your dealer's, or from Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B.
