

“FORWARD MARCH” GREETES THE THAW

London Citizens Launches a Mass Attack on Ice-Covered Sidewalks.

Apart from being an opportunity for the framing of nice sentiments, a mid-winter thaw is also an opportunity to clean up. It is the odd occasion when sidewalks and streets may be freed of snow and ice with the least amount of human labor and the smallest expenditure of energy.

However, the very large majority of London's citizens is of the kind that holds civic duty a creed. Early this morning a vast army of shovellers and scrapers appeared on streets and sidewalks, taking advantage of the mild weather.

There was once a popular song, common in vaudeville about the wonderful New York sidewalks. It was a large and generous-minded song and covered the sidewalks of the metropolis from every climatic angle.

Gossip Around The City Hall

Meeting in and rain early this morning caused a bit of flood in the "Better Ole" at the city hall. Drains were frozen and the water seeped into the basement of the municipal building. The G. W. A. ougot and the boiler-rooms escaped.

City Treasurer James Bell reports that the east end hall is proving a popular place for basketball teams nowadays. It is being used a great deal in afternoons, too, and there is scarcely an open date available.

WOMEN and THE HOME

IN THE SHADOW OF THE GUILLOTINE

By RAFAEL SABATINI.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.
The stirring days of 1793 find Angele Vidal of Paris awaiting the return of her husband, Col. Jerome Vidal. He arrives from Holland and Angele decides to accompany him on his return. An aristocrat, he is shrewd and she gives it. The married couple prove to be Chevalier de Seyrac, who had once attempted to harm her. With a true Christian spirit, Angele tries to arrange for the safe exit of de Seyrac. St. Just, a questionable character, seeks Jerome. Jerome leaves on his secret mission and Angele shelters de Seyrac.

"I shall, indeed," she agreed with him, without looking up.
"Ah! And yet, when all is said, the exchange, Heaven knows, is none so delectable! To follow an army, and in Holland—a damp, uncouth country, by all I hear—by all!" He shivered as if in imagination at least, he felt the chill of it.
"I shall be with my husband, citizen," she answered.
"Fait, yes! And if you consider that an adequate compensation, there is no more to be said."
She raised her eyes from her work and slowly regarded him. "I will beg you, citizen, not to jest upon such a subject."
"I were incapable of jesting upon it," he assured her solemnly. "After

"What does it mean?" she asked him.
"That is what I am going to ascertain," he answered. "But whatever it may be, it can be nothing to alarm you. What should there be I shall go straight there and back, and I shall be here as soon as the coach arrives."
"What is it?" she asked him breathlessly.
"This," he said, and drew from his breast-pocket the laissez-passer with which Danton had equipped him. He spread it, and smirked it down upon the table under her eyes.
She looked at it vacantly, understanding nothing.
"We must pack, my girl, that is the long and the short of it. We must pack and see it that we are out of Paris before the barriers close tonight or we may never leave it at all. My papers are ratified and in order, as you see. So that there is nothing to prevent our going, and no need of alarm so that we go at once, I have ordered a berline to be here at 8 o'clock. See that you are ready by then."
"But what has happened?" she insisted, coming up to him and setting her hands to his shoulders.
"In the background, near the window, stood Seyrac, who had also risen, he flung the repeated coat over the back of a chair. Seyrac cursed the interruption and his own sluggishness, which had wasted yet another opportunity.
Vidal entered, and the first glance at his face told Angele that all was not well.
"What has happened?" she cried, advancing to meet him.
He checked to stare at her, amazed by her quick perception. Then, with a laugh, he flung his great coat hat into a corner and closed the door.
"The worst has happened," he con-

DRESS By MARY MARSHALL

Will the Hat That Shows the Forehead Be the Next Choice of Fashion?
The angle at which a woman wears her hat has always had a great deal to do with her appearance of smartness. Sometimes the fashion is to wear it high on the head, sometimes tilted forward at an exaggerated angle, and sometimes sliding backward. Sometimes the fashion is to wear hats so that they cover our eyebrows and sometimes so that they barely rest on our topknots. But whatever the fashion may be at the time, not to follow is to run the risk of looking dowdy or indifferent, rakish, eccentric, or a little daft.

In a certain conservative community dwells a woman of excellent family who for some reason or other still wears hats of the same style and at the same angle as she did when her husband died some eighteen years ago. Aside from that she follows the fashion as much as most women of her age. But just because she wears her hats the way she does people exchange glances as they pass her—glances that seem to say: "A trifle cracked—too bad!" What persecution still is meted out to non-conformists in the matter of dress!

Sometimes, of course, while hats are worn well down over the forehead they are also worn even further down at the back. The angle of the hat inclines downward toward the back. Usually it touches or just escapes the eyebrows at the front.

Of course this sort of thing cannot continue the same for ever. And there seems to be no good reason to doubt the prediction that when a change comes it will be in favor of a hat raised a little higher at the front, so as to show something of the brow, while it remains quite as low as ever at the nape of the neck.

This is certainly not going to come as a conscious imitation of the Directoire or Empire mode, but it is, nevertheless, decidedly a Directoire tendency.

Even a year ago you sometimes saw hats worn in this way. The exponent of the new fashion was doubtlessly a conspicuously dressed young woman. You were surprised when on second glance you realized that she was wearing her hat at that angle not through inattention to prevailing fashion.

Quite recently a number of young women who give close attention to matters of dress have furthured this new fashion, appearing in little felt hats or satin turbans shaped so as to show not only the brow but something of the hair above the eyebrows.

Small hat worn off the face. It is of golden brown straw embroidered in brown braid.

Mrs. Grouse Proves a True Friend and Enables Peter To Escape

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.
When Mrs. Grouse found just how long Peter had been kept a prisoner in the bramble-tangle, and how he really needed to get out in order to get something to eat, she promptly said that she would help him. You know Peter and Mrs. Grouse are old friends.
"But I don't see how you can help," said Peter.
"I can do it all right," replied Mrs. Grouse. "Just now there isn't any one watching excepting Reddy Fox. After I have rested a while I will lead Reddy away. Then you will have a chance to use these long legs of yours."
"So after a while Mrs. Grouse said that she was ready. "What are you going to do?" asked Peter.
"Watch me," replied Mrs. Grouse. She walked out of the bramble-tangle right into the open. She walked just as if she didn't suspect that any one was watching her. Peter watched her. He saw that she took care to keep well away from a little clump of hemlock trees. She walked along as if she hadn't a care in the world, and she headed straight for two or three little hemlock trees with branches bent down by the snow. Under these she disappeared. Peter watched for her to come out on the other side, but she didn't.
Then out from that other clump of hemlock trees stole Reddy Fox. He moved quickly, but oh so carefully. His eyes were fixed on the place where Mrs. Grouse had disappeared. Peter's heart went into his mouth or at least it seemed to. He wanted to warn Mrs. Grouse, but he couldn't. Reddy was halfway to where Mrs. Grouse had disappeared when he stopped and crouched motionless. Then Peter saw Mrs. Grouse walking from the other side of those little trees. She was still walking as if she didn't suspect danger anywhere near.
As soon as she was out of sight behind a tree Reddy Fox ran swiftly to CHAPTER V. De Seyrac's Base Ingratitude.

Seyrac had watched her every movement with those dark, ardent eyes of his, and he sighed when the door closed and he fled himself into a chair by the table, and sat there awhile absorbed in thought. When at last he stirred it was to take up a paper which lay there where Vidal had left it.
It was the laissez-passer that was to provide the colonel with the means of leaving Paris. He considered it, then dropped it, and rose, stretching himself as if to shake off the despondent lethargy that threatened him.
As his arms dropped back to his side his glance settled upon that blue military coat, that spare coat of Vidal's, which Angele had repaired, lying across the back of the chair where she had flung it. For an instant his face was blank.
It was a blankness that reflected the check of astonishment which a sudden idea had wrought upon his mind. The next moment his brows were knit thoughtfully, his dark eyes gleamed, and a slow, cunning smile played with a touch of malice about his lips. He set his hands behind him and, with head sunk between his shoulders, he paced to the side of it, and coming to a standstill beside that coat. Then he stirred out of his absorption to take stock once more of his surroundings. He stood listening. He could hear Angele the place where she had been, and Peter could see him crouching under those hemlock branches and watching in the direction of Mrs. Grouse. A moment later Mrs. Grouse appeared again. Every time she disappeared behind a tree Reddy Fox snaked forward silently and swiftly. At last Peter could see neither Mrs. Grouse nor Reddy Fox. They had disappeared among the trees.

Peter knew that now was his chance. He slipped out of the bramble-tangle and away he went in another direction. As fast as his long legs could take him, lipperty-lipperty-lip. He understood just what Mrs. Grouse had been doing. She had been leading Reddy Fox away so as to give Peter that chance. But Peter was filled with a dreadful fear that Reddy Fox might get Mrs. Grouse after all. He couldn't get over that feeling. He felt that she was running a dreadful risk and doing it all for him.
At last, way off in the distance he heard a faint roar like distant thunder. Then Peter knew that Mrs. Grouse had taken to those two clumps of hemlock trees that Reddy Fox had failed to catch her. Peter no longer need worry about this friend, who had helped him in his time of trouble. Happily he hurried on.

the place where she had been, and Peter could see him crouching under those hemlock branches and watching in the direction of Mrs. Grouse. A moment later Mrs. Grouse appeared again. Every time she disappeared behind a tree Reddy Fox snaked forward silently and swiftly. At last Peter could see neither Mrs. Grouse nor Reddy Fox. They had disappeared among the trees.
Peter knew that now was his chance. He slipped out of the bramble-tangle and away he went in another direction. As fast as his long legs could take him, lipperty-lipperty-lip. He understood just what Mrs. Grouse had been doing. She had been leading Reddy Fox away so as to give Peter that chance. But Peter was filled with a dreadful fear that Reddy Fox might get Mrs. Grouse after all. He couldn't get over that feeling. He felt that she was running a dreadful risk and doing it all for him.

Soap from Trees!

The only oils in Palmolive Soap are the priceless beauty oils from these three trees—and no other fats whatsoever

That is why Palmolive Soap is the natural color that it is—for palm and olive oils, nothing else, give Palmolive its green color

Nothing is hidden, for there is nothing to hide. No ordinary soap oils tolerated, no "super-fattening," no "super-anything." Palmolive's only secret is in its blending.

And that secret blend is judged one of the world's priceless beauty secrets. The beautiful natural complexions one out of every two women has today, prove it.

Wash, launder, cleanse with any soap you choose—but when beauty is at stake, use a soap made to protect it.

Sixty years study to insure women keeping "That Schoolgirl Complexion" makes Palmolive safe to use.

Palmolive Soap is untouched by human hands until you break the wrapper—it is never sold unwrapped.

POLITICAL SIDE OF LABOR URGED

English Leaders Address Members of London Individual Labor Party.

Development of the political side of the labor movement was emphasized by speakers yesterday at the weekly meeting of the London individual labor party. W. Phillips and A. C. Avery, both of England, declared that labor in Canada would never attain the ends towards which it was headed unless it paid as much attention to the political side of the work as it had done in the past to the industrial side. It was stated also that the need for this development must come as the result of education and also that education more than revolution was feared by capitalists.

Mr. Phillips dealt particularly with the growth of the labor movement in England from the trial of two workmen in 1793 for banding together with others in an effort to obtain higher wages for their craft, shoemaking, to the present time. He referred to the fact that yesterday was the anniversary of the death of Lenin, who was described as the greatest of all men in the workers' movement to date. He also predicted that the present government in England will introduce legislation this year tending to obstruct the workers in their efforts to better their conditions.

Peaceful Means

Referring to the fact that many have expressed the fear that the workers are somewhat revolutionarily inclined, Mr. Avery pointed out that the working class can obtain its objective by constitutional means. He also declared that the employers are not afraid of the workers adopting revolutionary methods, as every one knows that such would easily be prevented by force, but the employers are really afraid that the workers will attain their objective through constitutional methods.

Mr. Avery also dealt for some time on the success of government ownership. He pointed to the fact that the large manufacturing plants, munitions and ships, having been taken over by the British government during the war, and under nationalization those plants turned out more munitions than any other countries could produce in the same period. In this connection he warned that the C. N. R. would never be a paying proposition until the men in power at Ottawa are in favor of government ownership.

Legislators do not like municipal fish tanks even," one of the audience suggested.

$30,000 Was Saved.

Continuing, Mr. Avery explained how Cardiff, Wales, had saved $30,000 per mile by having its streets and laying new rails for the municipal electric railway system at the close of the war through having the work done by day labor. One contractor wanted $135,000 per mile for doing the work, but he would only have the railway right-of-way, and the city did the work for $105,000 per mile. He urged the men to mind their own business instead of letting the employers look after that.

Touching on the educational side of the situation, Mr. Phillips, the first speaker, pointed out that 55,000 students from the factories, etc., passed through the workers' educational classes in England last year, 30,000 took the courses in the central labor colleges and thousands others passed through Ruskin classes. He also cited that co-operative factories, owned by the workers, in England, had turned out products to the value of $30,000,000 during the last three months of last year.

President Donald Wright occupied the chair. There was a fair attendance of men from all branches of industry in the city.

HUNDREDS CAME TO CITY FOR VIEW OF ECLIPSE

Although the snow is drifting rapidly in many places and there is a strong wind blowing in the country, the London and of St. Stanley trains are keeping to schedule this afternoon.

This was the statement of the chief dispatcher, who also said that both local and limited trains were losing little time, the snow fences protecting the tracks.

Although no extra trains were run on Saturday for the crowd from St. Thomas and the surrounding district to view the eclipse, it is estimated that nearly 500 came to London to see the great phenomenon.

All trains starting with the 7 o'clock local up to the 9 o'clock train were crowded, and many were compelled to stand in the aisles.

NEW ST. JAMES HAS NEW ELDER

Thirteen Are Elected to Fill Places of Unionists.

Church union has brought in its wake in New St. James' Presbyterian church, North London, practically a 50 per cent new session.

As a result of the church voting to remain out of the United Church of Canada, twelve unionist elders resigned from the session, and yesterday thirteen new elders were elected to take their places.

The remnant of the original session was assisted at yesterday's communion service by ten elders of the Presbyterian church in Canada, but not inducted as elders in New St. James'. The thirteen newly-elected elders will be ordained and inducted as elders of New St. James' at a special service to be held on Sunday, Feb. 8.

The outside elders who assisted at yesterday's communion were: Wm. J. Braunter, James McRae, Wm. Taylor, R. Stevenson, S. Clark, Rev. A. E. Henningson, Wm. Weir, J. W. McRae, A. E. Dunn and Rev. A. Peacock.

The thirteen new elders are: Thomas Brady, Wm. J. Braunter, W. K. Dorch, R. F. Donaldson, Wm. Forbes, D. McEachern, L. E. McGowan, J. W. Rae, Andrew Robson, Robert Stevenson, H. E. Stratton, Wm. Taylor and R. A. Walde.

The unionist elders who have resigned are: C. A. Wheable (clerk), W. A. Tanner, P. J. Thompson, Prof. W. J. Patterson, S. B. Greville, R. J. Webster, R. D. Millar, A. E. Nell, A. L. Fletcher, Dr. A. J. Murray, Donald McCrimmon and Wm. Mooney.

The ten members of session in addition to the thirteen who have just been elected are: James Gray, Andrew Miller, S. Milliken, Rev. John MacNeil, Dr. McAlpine, T. A. Bryan (clerk), W. T. Brown, W. D. Beamer, Rev. F. A. Ballantyne (roll clerk), and Rev. James MacKay, B.D. (moderator).

Of the newly-elected elders two are former members of other Presbyterian churches in the city, Andrew Robson of St. Andrew's church, and J. W. McRae of King street church. Having filled out the session to its full strength again the congregation will proceed to elect the necessary number to constitute the managing board of the church at a congregational meeting to be held Wednesday night.

E. J. JENKINS SPEAKS.

E. J. Jenkins, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was the speaker at the friends meeting held in the association "Ding yesterday" at 3 o'clock. Mr. Jenkins spoke on the subject of "David". He incited in his talk some points on Browning's "Saul". E. J. Penny was chairman, A. F. Penny, pianist.

BONNE ENTENTE GATHERING—CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

Social Through Train Service—No Steeple Necessary.

Those who have been invited by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec to attend the above event, and who have given their acceptance but have not yet made sleeping car reservation, are respectfully requested to do so without delay.

Canadian National Railways "Bonne Entente Special" will leave Toronto Union Station 7:00 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 28, and will make a fast and direct run to Quebec city, arriving in time for breakfast on the morning of the 29th. The advantages of travelling on the official special are numerous, the least being the opportunity afforded the guests of foregoing with those of the party with whom they may not be already acquainted, and also with the parties of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and the Honorable the Prime Minister of Ontario.

Canadian National management are doing everything possible to provide for the enjoyment and comfort of the visitors on the trip and a train of the finest equipment available has been assembled for that purpose. A dining car will be attached at Toronto to serve the evening meal on the 28th.

His Worship the Mayor of Montreal has extended an invitation to the visitors to partake of the hospitality of that city on Friday, the 30th, on the return trip. This will be in the nature of a civic reception, a drive and other entertainment, and the event should prove a very enjoyable conclusion to the proceedings.

Applications for reservations from Toronto city should be made to Mr. R. C. Gadsby, general agent, passenger department, telephone Adelaide 4501, Adelaide 4242 or Main 4207. At points outside of Toronto any Canadian National representative will be glad to arrange space upon request.

W. P. FITZSIMONS, who has just been moved to Buffalo as general freight agent for the Canadian National railways.

MESSENGER BOY WINS HIGH POST IN SYSTEM

William P. Fitzsimons Goes to Buffalo as General Agent For C. N. R.

One time a messenger boy and now general freight agent of the Grand Trunk railway system, Canadian National railways at Buffalo, is the story, in brief, of the rapid rise of William P. Fitzsimons, who has just been moved to Buffalo in succession to the late Ira W. Gantt.

Although yet a man in the prime of his business career, Mr. Fitzsimons has been a figure of great importance in the railway world of Canada, and was known throughout the dominion as an expert in industrial survey work. At one time manager of the bureau of transportation and manufacturers for the Detroit board of commerce, he joined the Grand Trunk with which he had been identified previously, to initiate and conduct over its entire system the work of developing natural resources and promoting the establishment of industries.

Mr. Fitzsimons' work was so successful that when the amalgamation of the Grand Trunk and Canadian National railways took place, it was decided to enlarge his duties to cover the entire National territory east of Fort William.

Mr. Fitzsimons' career is a splendid example of the opportunities which await the messenger boy in the big corporations, and the management's confidence in his ability has just found a new expression by his appointment to the position of general freight agent of the Grand Trunk railway system-Canadian National railways east and west of the Niagara frontier and Michigan junctions.

GOVT. FACES TROUBLE OVER VATICAN ISSUE

Father Bergery Ready to Deliver Attack Against French Foreign Policy.

Paris, Jan. 26.—The chamber of deputies is resuming its discussion of the foreign affairs budget today with Father Bergery, deputy from Gironde, as one of the first interpellators on the thorny subject of the proposed suppression of the French embassy to the Vatican.

Father Bergery who delivered a forceful speech before the Legislative Catholic association last night, made a hurried trip from Metz in order to be in his seat in time to give the benefit of the benefit of the same government launched in his Metz address. The government will reply to general criticism of its foreign policy, notably regarding the resumption of relations with soviet Russia, after which the foreign affairs budget will be discussed, article by article, the Vatican question being ninth when it is expected that former Premier Leger, under whose ministry in 1920 the embassy was re-established, will speak.

As the rules of the chamber prevent the deputies from voting to re-establish the credit for the embassy which the government has proposed to suppress, the only recourse for the opposition is to move its reference back to committee. The vote on this is expected Thursday or Friday.

OPPOSITION ATTACKS JAPAN RULING PARTY

Accusations of Weakness Are Hurlled at Cabinet.

By J. RUSSELL KENNEDY, Special Editor to The Advertiser and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright.

Tokio, Jan. 24.—The American immigrant question, the naval manoeuvres and the British naval base at Singapore all were buried at the cabinet by the opposition during the first days of interpellation in the Diet. There were accusations of weakness in yielding to the foreign "menace to Japanese interests."

Premier Kato and Foreign Minister Shidehara replied, the former curtly, the latter evidently endeavoring to head off further attempts to bait the government on these points. He said he regretted the immigration act, which was domestic affair of America and refused to discuss the Singapore question, while the naval manoeuvres certainly were outside the sphere of Japan's right to protest, he asserted.

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

Mrs. L. G. Nethercott, R. R. No. 1, Crinan, Ont., writes: "I was awfully troubled with constipation, and sick and bilious headaches, accompanied with severe vomiting spells, which made me very miserable. I tried different remedies, without relief, but since taking Laxa-Liver Pills the headaches and constipation have disappeared, and I am very thankful for what they have done for me."
