The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XII.

"You mean me, of course," she says, with her frank smile; she will smile, too; Hugh shall not have all the smiling. "You see, I have not forgotten your aptitude at thinly-disguised compliments. Well, if you are good I won't drive you."

"I'll be an angel," he says, eagerly; "I will, indeed! Don't think me conceited. It is your own word. Do you remember telling me that I danced like an angel? Ah! that waitz. Do you think we will have a chance of another here?"

"I should think it highly probable," she retorts.

"It is too much to hope for," he says, with a sigh.

"Does Miss Fairfax dance?" she asks, suddenly interrupting him. Archie laughs amusedly.

"Dance? No! She is far too spirituelle. I think that is one reason why Hugh was smitten with her; he hates dancing, you know. Whoever married him would have to surrender the mazy waltz."

"What an unhappy woman she would be," she says, desperately.

"Now, if I married, I should make it a condition that my husband should take me to at least four balls a week during the season, and allow me to dance as much as I liked."

"And—and—" he hesitates, but rushes on, "if that were the condition and I were the happy man, you should dance every night in the week."

And she does not rebuke him. Instead she smiles upon him with her beautiful eyes, and fools him to the top of his bent.

And so it goes on; her face grows more lustrous, her eyes glitter with the brilliance of desperation, and that though she knows that the face of the one man she loves far above all others on earth is growing darker and heavier with anger and displeasure, and though her own heart is aching with the dull pain of jealousy and remorse.

For all her smiles and rippling laughter the dinner seems to drag wearily; she hates the sight of the small, dark-robed figure, hates the sound of her soft, oppressive voice; and it is with a sudden sense of relief that she rises with the rest and escapes, for it is an escape, from Sir Archie's ardent looks and eager speeches.

Hugh sits over his wine, grim and almost silent, while Sir Archie, his blue eyes sparkling, rattles on, all unconscious, beating time to the music of the piano in the drawing-room.

Hugh sits silent and grim, scarcely listening, bitterly turning over in his mind that broken promise, and at last he rises. He will make an opportunity and see her alone for a moment, if this butterfly at his side will render it possible, and beg her to let there be an end to concealment—to let him make their engagement known.

"If you won't have any more wine, let us join the ladies," he says. They go in, and he makes straight for the tall, graceful figure seated beside Edie. Lucy Fairfax is at the piano playing, Maude sitting beside her with solemn approval and admiration. Dulcie's eyes are fixed on the pale face, now in repose and plain enough.

He goes up to her.

"Edie, go and get that book of hunting sketches; I want you to show them to Sir Archibald," he says, and then, almost before she is out of hearing, he bends over the dark head he loves so well.

"Dulcie," he murmurs.

But she looks straight before her.

"Well?" she drops from her lips.

He tugs at his mustache, and frowns, but he is patient.

"Dulcie—will you manage to come into the hall or anywhere? I want to speak to you."

"Can't you say it here?" she retorts. He colors and frowns.

"No," he says; "will you not come?"

She does not reply, and before he can speak again, Sir Archie is upon them with the sketch-book in his hand.

"Here is something in your way, Miss Dorrmore," he says. "Hunting sketches, you know."

"Really!" she exclaims, turning to him with a sigh of welcome. "But," glancing at the piano, "hadn't you better go and turn over Miss Fairfax's music. She cannot do it, you know!"

"That's more in Hugh's way," says Archie, boldly; "I should turn over in the wrong place, and spoil the whole thing!"

"Oh, pray go!" she says, turning her head but not her eyes to Hugh, and with a heavy frown, he obeys and goes, leaving Sir Archie to seat himself as closely as he dare to Dulcie.

CHAPTER XIII.

Hugh marches to the piano, and stands very much like a sentinel, his hand upon the music, and the green eyes look up with a grateful smile

Cough Nearly Gone in 24 Hours

That's the usual experience with this home-made remedy. Cough Little—try it.

Anyone who tries this pleasant-tasting home-made cough syrup, will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the United States and Canada than any other cough remedy. The way it takes hold of an obstinate cough, giving immediate relief, will make you expect that you never tried it before. It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Easy druggists can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and you have 16 ounces of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup, will give you a surprise. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Kinax Co., Toronto, Ont.

that comes, be his feelings what they may, with welcome contrast to the icy rebuff he had just suffered from Dulcie.

He does not know that she is sitting staring at the sketches, but without seeing them; hearing Sir Archie's pleasant, musical voice, without listening or understanding a word; her whole being filled with remorse, and longing to get Hugh to her side again. He doesn't know this, but simply feels aggrieved and wronged at what he inwardly terms her heartlessness and insatiate love of admiration.

He, too, is not listening, and presently the soft, smooth voice says:

"I am playing a waltz, and not a funeral dirge, Sir Hugh, as your countenance would indicate."

"Oh, no," she says, lightly. "I don't think any one knows it, I am sure your people do not. I happened—"

"So I see. And she smiles up at him sympathetically.

"Well, I am as tired of playing as you are of listening; and—do you always have a fire so late in the spring? Ah, yes—I remember. But is not the room hot?"

He nods. It feels suffocating to him.

"Abominably," he says; "my mother and Maud, you know, cannot bear a breath of air! They are—"

"They are exotics," she says, charmingly; "as for me, I like plenty of heaven's air!"

"You won't get it here," he says, with a rueful smile; "the nearest approach to it is in the fernery there. Will you come?"

"Oh, but I can go without you," she says.

He offers his arm in silence, and they go out—followed by Dulcie's watchful, jealous eyes.

Lucy Fairfax draws a deep breath, and nestles down in a wicker-chair with Oriental cushions—nestles down in the peculiarly graceful, kittenish way that belongs to her, and looks up at him.

"What a time it is since I last saw you," she says, meditatively, not sentimentally by any means, but with soft, suggestive sympathy. "You were starting for India, and now you are back."

"Yes," he says, "I am back;" then he looks at her. Every feature of her face, every fold of her soft black dress invite confidence and offer sympathy. The old charm, fascination, what you will, begins to assert itself. "Yes, I am back," he repeats; "I suppose you know—"

He pauses, and she looks up and smiles, not at all sadly, but with a friendly, interested smile.

"Oh, yes, I know; your mother—"

"Would tell you at once," he says; "of course. Well, it is a strange arrangement, is it not?"

She hesitates a moment.

"No—o. I am not sure that it is. It seems to me a very good arrangement."

"Oh!"

"You are surprised I should think so?" she says, with a laugh, soft and cooling like a dove's. "But really I think it is not so bad as it seems. After all, it wouldn't have been quite just to have left you all the money, and his relatives quite neglected, would it?"

"I didn't want them to be neglected," he says.

"Of course," she assents. "You would rather have had nothing and been left quite free. I can understand that. But, after all, there is nothing to complain of," and she smiles significantly.

He is silent for a moment; then she goes on:

"Sir Hugh, do you want me to be quite frank with you?"

"You always were," he replied. "I don't know why you should begin to be otherwise now."

"I won't," she says. "Well, then, I have guessed your secret." He doesn't start, but he looks down at her soft, smiling face with a questioning glance. She nods just as a bird might do. "I guessed it the moment she came into the room to-night. We were all startled by her beauty—even those who knew her—how much more, then, it—but on your face was not surprise only, but—pride. Now, a man is never proud of a woman unless he loves her, Sir Hugh."

He doesn't speak; but he thinks and wonders. But for Dulcie and the will, she, Lucy Fairfax, would have been his chosen wife; and she knows it, he feels that she knows it; and yet she can talk of Dulcie with this pleasant smile and frank candor. After all, then, she did not care for him. He ought to feel pleased and gratified, but—well, men are men, and he doesn't, not completely.

"I saw it in a moment," she goes on, "and I was very glad. May I congratulate you?"

"Thanks," he says. "You are very kind. I did not know"—tugging at his mustache, thoughtfully—"that my face spoke so plainly. As a matter of fact, we—Dulcie and I—had decided to keep it secret for a while. I suppose, however, that it is everybody's secret by this time."

"Oh, no," she says, lightly. "I don't think any one knows it, I am sure your people do not. I happened—"

"So I see. And she smiles up at him sympathetically.

"Well, I am as tired of playing as you are of listening; and—do you always have a fire so late in the spring? Ah, yes—I remember. But is not the room hot?"

The Outlook on the War.

The good U-boat return for last week and the statement published today that has been made to a news agency by a high Admiralty official encourage us to hope that we are now getting the measure of the most menacing attack that has ever been made on modern England. Alone of the nations at war, this country can be fatally wounded by a successful attack on its communications at sea, and that Germany should have resorted to this form of warfare is the highest compliment that could have been paid to sea-power. Our success in dealing with submarines is only relative as yet, not absolute; and nothing has happened that would justify the least relaxation of any of the several forms of insurance that we have taken out against these attacks. We can, however, say with some confidence that the U-boat campaign, though it may inconvenience us, is not, if we go on as we are doing, likely to injure our military position seriously or to change the course of the war. Hindenburg is a military man, and thinks of the sea in the idiom of the land. The way in which the U-boat campaign recommended itself to his mind was like this: Here am I, faced by the serious decline in man-power, while my enemy, thanks to his command of the sea, is constantly pouring fresh reinforcements of men and guns into France; I cannot afford the men for attacks on a great scale, which, moreover, have no chance of success; the only course for me is to cut the enemy's communications, and that must be done by submarines sinking anything and everything. Already it is possible to say that these calculations have failed. We must not regard the relative failure of the U-boat campaign as a merely negative success. It is a defeat for the Germans as positive as the defeat they suffered in the so-called battle of Calais. It condemns them to a growing inferiority on the west front, which they recognize to be the one that matters most. On success here depends the whole prestige of the military rulers of Germany with the German people.

There is a tendency to blame Russia for the failure of some of our military hopes on the west front, for let it be frankly admitted, so far (happily the campaigning year is not yet over) the results on the west front have not come up to expectations. But if Russia had been conducting an offensive with her old vigor we doubt whether the situation in Flanders would really have been much easier for us. There is no evidence that there has been on the balance, any effective increase of the German strength on the west at the cost of the east. The great gainers by the breakdown of Russia's military strength have been the Austrians and the great losers the Italians, who in the fighting on the Bainsizza, Plateau and the Carso have had to deal with the main fighting strength of the Austrians. Our problem on the west is much what it would have been in any case, unless, indeed, which is not at all likely, the Russians had not only been able to recover all the ground they had lost but had also invaded Hungary and East Prussia. It is well that we should face these facts, and the chief fact about the war on the west front is that we have still to solve the problem of attacking such positions as the Germans have made for themselves except at a cost in life that is prohibitive. Even if the Russians had been fighting from the problem would only have been fractionally easier, for in the main the problem of attack is not one of numbers of men on either side. It is one of tactics, and it is becoming clear that the preponderance of artillery in which we had hoped to have the key of victory will not alone give us what we want. Indeed, it is to be questioned whether it is not possible to have too much artillery fire. The same artillery which makes the enemy's trenches untenable also retards our rate of advance; and the shell-holes that a heavy bombardment of the countryside makes are a very fair substitute for the works above ground that have been destroyed. We have a great deal of work yet to do.

It is just to recognize the gravity of our task, for otherwise there is danger of doing a serious injustice to the army in France. We are confronted by precisely the same problems that worried us in the Boer war, where we were frequently held by forces of one-tenth of our strength. If in that war we had never made up our armies mobile but had gone on accumulating men for the direct frontal assaults, the war might have lasted twice as long as it did and our losses would have been proportionately heavier. Are we sure that this is not what we are doing in France? Our line is clearly impregnable to the enemy's attacks, and so also, we may now hope, are our sea communications. But our frontal attacks might be made with twice the number of men and still give us no guarantee of success. Clearly, for us as for the Germans, the most promising solution of the problems of attack is the war on communications. There is no "way round" as in South Africa, unless, indeed, it is by the sea (which is also the "way round" that the Germans are trying in their submarine campaign). But there is a "way over" by means of supremacy in the air. If we have a chance of attaining such supremacy in the air that the German airmen cannot rise at all, that we are free to bombard the German communications at our will, that we can choose the point of attack without the German knowing anything of our intentions, obviously it is a good policy not to waste a single man in direct frontal attacks.—Manchester Guardian.

Household Notes.

The high boned collar is making a hard fight for recognition. Novelties in short jumper blouses are a very practical fashion. Diamonds at the moment are more fashionable than pearls. Long jeweled insect pins are worn instead of buttonhole bouquets. There is a hint of the bustle in some of the new tailored suits. The great hats of ceremony are as towering as a Chinese pagoda. High ruffled lingerie collars are one of the new fashions. Delicious raisin bread is made by saving part of a white bread dough made with milk. Mix into it a beaten egg, one cup chopped raisins and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Form into a loaf, let rise and bake. A baking dish may be filled with layers of sliced raw potatoes, alternating with layers of corned codfish. The whole should be seasoned with salt, red pepper and celery salt, and a little milk should be poured over the entire contents. Bake slowly.

Householders! Patrons!

Lend us your ears. We come to bury the old-fashion Coal Burner Cooking Stove and not to praise it. The evil it has done will live after it has gone.

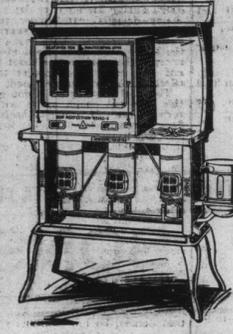

But the story of the noble Oil Cooker has not yet half been told.

Yesterday the word "Oil Cooker" might not have moved the world, but to-day it stands a foremost factor in the homes of the earth and an economic household necessity.

Ask the host of Oil Cooker users about it, and they will with one united voice proclaim "It is a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Let the whole community hear this testimony and buy now.

It saves time and fuel. It is clean and easily operated. It requires no kindling wood and there is no ash, cinder or broken stones to be removed. It's a Perfection.

Household Notes.

If one wishes to keep bedding particularly sweet a good blowing on the clothesline on a bright windy day will help. Save benzine or gasoline after you have used it for cleaning. Simply put it in a jar and let it settle, then pour off the top. Stale rolls can be deliciously reheated. Hold under the cold-water faucet a minute, then heat until brown in a very hot oven. Pack ribbons, collars and such little articles between the leaves of a magazine if you would keep them smooth when travelling. To make a meringue for baked pears, beat the whites of two eggs very light; then beat in four level teaspoonfuls of sugar. Delicious muffins or gems are made by stirring into the batter, made for ordinary gems a cupful of raisins, currants or chopped figs. Sift the baby's oatmeal porridge through a flour sifter that is kept for the purpose, and it will be much smoother and more satisfactory. Smelts are good with anchovies. Clean thoroughly, fill each with an anchovy, dust in a mixture of flour, salt and pepper and fry in butter. Any good cold dish can be used for salad if flaked, seasoned with pepper and lemon juice and served with young radishes and French dressing.

THE GERMAN BATTLESHIPS.

AMSTERDAM, To-day.
The Westfalen is a battleship of 18,600 tons, built in 1906. The Nurnberg is a new ship and is not listed in the latest naval records to reach this country. She is a namesake of the cruiser Nurnberg of Admiral Von Spee's Pacific fleet which was sunk at the time the squadron was destroyed by British battle cruisers of the Falkland Islands, in December, 1914. (This evidently has reference to the mutiny in the German navy elsewhere mentioned.—Ed.)

War Office to-night says: In the course of the day hostile attacks against our new positions in the neighborhood of Ypres-Staden led to local fighting but without effecting any material change in the situation. No further attacks have been made by the enemy, and our troops on the battle front have been actively engaged in organizing the positions captured yesterday, in spite of the great difficulties arising from the state of the ground; artillery activity continued on both sides. The number of prisoners taken yesterday thus far reported is 2,038, including 29 officers. This number includes 400 taken by the French. We also captured a few field guns and a number of machine guns and trench mortars.

AIRMEN DOING GOOD WORK.
LONDON, To-day.
An official statement on aerial operations issued last night reads: On Tuesday there was little flying except on the battlefield where a great deal of work was done in spite of a strong gale and thick clouds. The enemy's new gun positions and other suitable targets were reported by airplanes to our artillery, which dealt with them. Touch was kept with our infantry all day and the enemy's were harassed by machine gun fire at every opportunity. A ton of bombs was dropped on Stade during the day and at night two tons were dropped on Roulers, Courtrai, Menin and Ledeghem stations. A direct hit was obtained on a hostile train, causing a number of explosions. In the air fighting four German machines were brought down and two were driven down out of control; two of ours are missing.

NEW TROTTING RECORD.
LEXINGTON, Ky., To-day.
A. R. Cosden's filly of the Red Lady, yesterday reduced the world's record for three-year old trotters to 2:03, beating the record of 2:03½, made by Peter Volo here in 1914 in a trial against time.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.
ROME, To-day.
The official report from Italian Headquarters yesterday reads: "Yesterday between the Adige and the Brenta and on the Bainsizza Plateau there were lively artillery duels. East of Gorizia the activity of reconnoitering parties was noticeable; an enemy patrol was captured. On the Carso on Monday evening by repeated attacks preceded by intense concentrations of gun fire enemy storming parties attempted to gain ground in the Castagnavizza area; furious fighting followed but our positions were all firmly maintained and the enemy was repulsed with losses. Yesterday evening between Vippacco and Castagnavizza a violent destructive fire begun by the enemy, which had the character of artillery preparation, was promptly crushed by our batteries. Numerous strong parties which afterwards attacked our positions in that section were driven back with heavy losses.

ROME, To-day.
In all seas last week two Italian steamers of more than 1600 tons and two of less than 1600 tons were sunk by mines or submarines. One sailing vessel of more than one hundred tons also was lost; one steamer and one sailing vessel were attacked without success.

NO NORWEGIANS SUNK.

LONDON, To-day.
Not one Norwegian ship was sunk last week by German submarines, for the first time in more than a year, according to a despatch from Christiania. The Tidens Tegn of Christiania prints a diagram purporting to show that Norwegian sinkings have decreased as the efficiency of the Allies in dealing with the submarines has increased.

RUSSIAN REPORT.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
An official statement from General Headquarters yesterday reads: "Northern Front: In the Skuff sector the enemy's heavy artillery bombarded our advanced trenches; in the sector south of the Pskoff High Road the enemy artillery fire increased, reaching its greatest intensity against our positions southeast of Spittal Farm.

Here the enemy discharged about 2400 projectiles. In the Gulf of Riga 11 motor boats appeared but were dispersed by our coast batteries. Western Front—Rifle and artillery duels reached an intensity beyond the average north of Mladziol Lake. Caucasus Front—Nothing of importance has occurred. On the Baltic Sea on Monday our scouting cutters encountered in the Irbe Channel ten enemy cutters and trawlers and attacked them. One enemy trawler was set afire. The enemy retired southwards. On Monday fourteen enemy airplanes approached Cere (on the Island of Oesel); some of them fired on our transports. At Althod yesterday eight enemy airplanes attacked without result the batteries at Cere and the village of Mendo, six miles to the northeast. On Monday our machines dropped twenty bombs on Rodenois station and on the Riga station. We brought down an enemy airplane in the Riga region. In the neighborhood of Buczacz, French aviators, brought down an enemy machine in flames.

LOOKS LIKE AN OFFENSIVE.

LONDON, To-day.
Allied troops made a strong attack south of Doiran, north of Salonika, according to a Bulgarian official statement issued Wednesday. The attacks, begun after violent artillery fire of twenty-four hours, were broken up at two points by the Bulgarian artillery.

ALLIES FIGHTING THE MUD AND RAIN.

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE & BELGIUM, To-day.
The French and British Allies this morning were fighting both the weather and the enemy in maintaining the positions which they reached in yesterday's drive to the east and north of Ypres. The night brought virtually no change to detract from the victory won along the northern section of the advance. From the region of Poelcapelle southward the British were establishing themselves along a line somewhat in the rear of the most advanced posts reached yesterday. The vile condition of the ground rather than the opposition of the Germans made it unfavorable for those pioneer troops to attempt to remain in the farthest posts reached. Several enemy counter attacks along the Ypres-Staden railway south of Houtholst Forest were quickly repulsed by artillery and machine gun fire. It rained hard again this morning and the Allies were digging themselves in over a wilderness of peaty mud and water such as only Flanders can produce. It was a trying situation. The troops were drenched with the cold rain and all operations had to be conducted in the mud, in which they were wallowing to their knees and deeper. Sharp fighting still continued to-day around Polderhoek

Chateau in the zone of a small separate attack by the British south of the main offensive, but the operation in this sector had accomplished all that had been planned for it and the situation at the Chateau gave no cause for uneasiness. The prisoners, some of whom were mere boys of eighteen, said they were all provided with food while on the front lines, but that in the interior of the country the privations were great. The French troops to-day, despite the condition of the ground, made a further advance, straightening out their line toward the borders of Houtholst Forest and taking additional batches of prisoners.

NAVAL SCANDAL STIRS THE REICHTAG.

ROTTERDAM, To-day.
The statements of Vice-Admiral Von Capelle have turned the Reichstag into a theatre of the wildest scandals, says the Vorwarts, discussing the exposure of mutinies within the German Navy. The Socialist newspaper adds that there is no shadow of proof that any Deputies were guilty of illegal action in connection with the mutiny. The Vossische Zeitung describes the attack on the Independent Socialists as a deplorable and illegal trick on the part of the Government. The Tagblatt contends that if the Reichstag believes that the Independent Socialists are guilty they must be handed over to the court. The Tagblische Zeitung express surprise that the Government, when it had

It costs on the average 14s. per week to keep a cow, and this can only be done in keeping a large number; if a smaller number be kept, food must be bought in smaller quantities for them. REPORTED NAVAL BATTLE NOT CONFIRMED.

HALIFAX, Oct. 10. No confirmation has been received of the reported naval battle.

WAR SUMMARY.

As is customary after the attainment of the objectives of his drives, Field Marshal Haig on Wednesday permitted his troops in Flanders to have a breathing spell along the Ypres front. Likewise the French forces along the British left flank were busy organizing their newly won positions. A heavy rain fell during the day and no attempts at strong attacks were made by either side, although at various places there were small forays in the nature of line straightening operations by the British and French, and weak attempts at a counter offensive on the part of the Germans. These latter manoeuvres all were repulsed, and the Allies held the ground they won in Tuesday's offensive.

Along the right bank of the Meuse in the Verdun sector the Germans north of Bois le Châumes, following a violent bombardment, attacked the French and penetrated their lines at several places, but were kept from proceeding further by the fire of General Petain's artillery.

In the Austro-Italian theatre the Germans also attempted to gain ground against the Italians on the Carso Plateau, but in the furious fighting which followed they were worsted, suffering heavy casualties. Along the Bainsizza Plateau lively artillery duels are again in progress.

Considerable action, both by artillery and infantry continues on the Riga front in the north Russian fighting zone. Southeast of Spital farm the Germans have violently bombarded the Russian positions. In the middle sector of this front the duels have reached considerable proportions to the north of Midzvil.

Peace is impossible, according to the statement of the Imperial Chancellor of Germany, so long as Germany's antagonists demand German soil or try to separate the people from their Emperor. The German Foreign Secretary in an address to the Reichstag, asserted that there was no impediment to peace that could not be overcome by negotiations except the demand of France for the return of Alsace-Lorraine.

REVOLT IN GERMAN NAVY.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 10. Announcing to the Reichstag yesterday that a plot had been discovered in the German Navy to paralyze the fleet, Vice-Admiral Cappelle, Minister of Marine, is quoted in a Berlin despatch as saying: "It is an unfortunate and sad fact that the Russian revolution turned the heads of some persons in our navy and introduced revolutionary ideas among them. Their incessant plan was to recruit representatives of the ships' crews to refuse to obey orders, to paralyze the fleet and force peace on the country. It is proved that the principal agitator conferred in this building with the Independent Socialist faction in the Reichstag has explained his plans to Deputies Haase and Vogtherr and obtained their approval. I cannot make a statement here on the subsequent events which occurred in the navy. A few persons who forgot their honor and their duty suffered the penalty."

Wilhelm Dittman, a Socialist member said the punishment inflicted on the men in the navy for the mutiny at Wilhelmshaven, amounted, collectively, to 200 years penal servitude, and that several men were condemned to death.

THE CAUSE OF MUTINY.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 10. Emperor William's visit to Wilhelmshaven in company with Chancellor Michaelis was made after the mutiny had been suppressed. The Chancellor's objection to the Emperor's order that one mutineer in every seven be shot was on the ground that he could not assume such responsibility before the Reichstag. One of the reasons for the mutiny was the bad and inadequate food.

FIGHTING UNDER GREAT DIFFICULTIES.

British Front in France and Belgium. (By the Associated Press). Oct. 10.—The British and French armies who yesterday made such a spectacular assault over the Flanders bog-lands against the German defenses east and north of Ypres, were digging themselves in to-day along a line that represents an important gain; but never-ending reaches of almost bottomless mud, had during the past 24 hours robbed Field Marshal Haig's men of some of the laurels which they had won in such a remarkable manner. Over much of the front involved those small bodies of heavy prisoners who floundered forward through morasses to the most forward positions that were reached had been forced to fall back and re-join their comrades on the main line of advance. In some places this was due in part to German counter attacks but for the main part the terrible condition of the ground was responsible. Even to-day those rain-drenched, mud-caked weary men were still reaching for more ground. Late reports to-day told of bodies of infantry that were far beyond the line which can now be claimed as definitely held. What they may achieve only another day can tell.

THE 'KAISER' IN THE MUTINY.

LONDON, Oct. 10. A Hague despatch to the Daily Mail says, according to a report there the mutinous battleships at Wilhelmshaven included the Luitpold and Kaiser.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES.

LONDON, Oct. 10. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Reuter's correspondent at headquarters in France telegraphed to-day: There has been heavy fighting on the new battlefield since Wednesday at noon. In the evening our withdrawal south of the Ypres-Staden railway was due to repeated counter attacks against exhausted troops and concealed machine gun fire, which in some spots was intense. The enemy threw in his reserves in mass formation again and again, but these were beaten back by artillery, rifle and machine gun fire. What success they gained was most costly. Despite the state of the ground we are getting our guns forward, while there is reason to believe the enemy is moving some of his batteries backward. Prisoners say there is much disorganization in the German rear. It is again raining heavily. However, we are consolidating. While we are nearly everywhere on the highest ground of the ridge, the enemy is mostly down in swampy country.

SHIPPING LOSSES.

LONDON, Oct. 10. The shipping summary follows: Arrivals, 2,519; sailings, 2,452. British ships over 1,000 tons sunk by mine or torpedoes, including one previously lost, under 1,600 tons, including one previously lost; fishing vessels sunk, 3. British vessels unsuccessfully attacked, including three previously, 5. The above report shows an increase of three ships more than 1,600 tons over the Admiralty's weekly report of last week, but the figures are the same as those of the previous week with regard to the ships in the smaller category.

THE COUNCIL OF FIVE.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 10. The Coalition Cabinet absorbs the Council of Five which has held sway since the Korniloff revolt, plotting the country through a perilous political crisis. This Council of Five apparently carried out Premier Kerensky's programme in full. It succeeded in ending the Korniloff affair, except for some agitation on the part of the Radical Councils of the Workmen and Soldiers' Delegates, and seemingly it turned the Democratic Congress, which was planned originally to overthrow the Kerensky Government into a force of support. The first session of the preliminary Parliament will be called by the Government probably next week. The new Cabinet consists of six Socialists, four Constitutional Democrats and seven members from other parties. Foreign Minister Tereschenko, it is reported, will be sent to Paris to represent Russia at the Allied conference.

LOST AND FOUND.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 10. Count Von Luxberg, the German Minister, who was recently handed his passports by the Argentine Government has been arrested. He is now being taken to a German detention camp under military guard until an opportunity is found to send him out of the country.

Slander Case.

A slander case preferred against a married fisherman of the South Side by a married woman of the same place was heard in the Magistrate's Court to-day. It appears that a brother-in-law of the plaintiff told her that the defendant had impudently denied the charge. After reviewing the evidence of several witnesses, His Honor Judge Morris held that the defendant was wrongly accused and dismissed the case. Lawyers Hunt and Winter acted for the plaintiff and defendant, respectively.

Social Service Congress

Yesterday Morning's Session.

Rev. W. H. Thomas occupied the chair at yesterday morning's session of the Social Service Congress. Dr. Shearer spoke first, on the subject of dealing with vice. He defined this vice he had in mind as commercial vice, vice as a trade, which public opinion often comes to approve, and which a public campaign is the only means of removing. There are three methods of dealing with vice, punitive, preventive and redemptive. The speaker showed the object and scope of each method and the success attending its adoption in Canada.

After some discussion on the subject, Hon. W. F. Coaker read an able analysis of the Newfoundland Fisheries. He spoke of the need of keeping the great industry up, of the use of motor boats and other up-to-date appliances, the value of education, the great need of a standard cure and cull and the importance of creating markets the world over.

Mr. J. P. Downey, M.P.A., spoke next on the subject of agriculture. The science has been much neglected here. There is much good soil in the island recoverable at reasonable cost. Nevertheless, recent years showed satisfactory progress in many branches. He quoted figures to show the improving returns in the regular crops and emphasized the desirability of paying more attention to the raising of live stock.

Mr. Davies, Government analyst, dealt with mineralogy and the question of mineral development. This has only been sketchy and superficial; there is need of much more state encouragement. The Commission could do wonders by investigating our mineral possibilities scientifically. Our splendid water power could do much to develop our mines. Newfoundland should become the Wales of America.

Canon Tucker then spoke on "The public ownership of natural resources." Such ownership is not socialism nor inconsistent with private ownership. It was an evil, however, to let private owners have large tracts of land and speculate with them.

Our Government should hold our land and forests as much as possible. The same applies to mines; the Government should protect the public property from mineral speculators. So, too, water power, of which there is such plenty in Newfoundland, should be owned and controlled where possible, by the State, and not used for the enrichment of individuals.

Mr. Alexander Johnson took as his subject "The defective delinquent and the public." He gave a striking address on the nature and prevalence of feeble-mindedness in modern society. Only recently have experts found how many there are in the population of a country that are mentally deficient. Such persons have larger families than the mentally sound by reason of lack of their self-control. Our methods of dealing with them are being reformed, and prisons, which only accentuate the evil, being removed. The feeble-minded must be looked after carefully and solicitously, being incapable of looking after themselves.

Afternoon Session.

Mayor Gosling took the chair and spoke of the great interest being evinced in Social Service. He referred to the Child Welfare Week and to the disgraceful rate of infant mortality in the country. Action was necessary in many ways, and the municipal body which he represented needed to possess more powers to raise money and to work for the good of the public.

Dr. Hart followed with an address on Child Welfare. He spoke of the different classes of children in need of treatment—defective, dependent and delinquent. Orphanages were the old method of caring for dependent children, but lately a change of sentiment in favour of healthy home life had set in. Institutions were apt to be too mechanical and disciplinary, stifling the child's independence of thought and action. Ideal home life was what he strongly recommended. Where institutions are used the greatest care is necessary that they should be in charge of competent persons. Family homes for children should be well managed and subject to State visitation and control. There is great scope for social work of this kind in St. John's.

Hon. R. A. Squires then spoke on "The children's laws of Newfoundland and what they ought to be." There are no protective laws for children here as there are in the States and Canada. Nor is there need of them; what is needed is additional institutions to take care of children. We need clean towns. We also need compulsory education of children. A children's court has been suggested, but the Judge in the existing court is largely a child's judge. The child needs to be helped to the place in society to which it belongs.

Canon Tucker followed on Compulsory Education. He said this was quite necessary in every civilized country. Education is the best thing that can be given to any citizen. It is the solution of every problem in the training of the man. To be effective it must be compulsory. Children whose education has been neglected or omitted in after years cursed those responsible for it. The illiterate man rarely rises to be anything more than a hewer of wood and drawer of water. He becomes the feeble-minded man of whom others take advantage. It is not fish nor agriculture nor mines that are the richest harvest of Newfoundland, but boys and girls, men and women.

Rev. D. B. Hemmeon spoke on "Play in a child's life." Nature had provided, in children as in other animals, for the expenditure of surplus energy, for which play must be allowed. Schilliar and Spencer pointed out the necessity of play to young children and how natural it is. Play should be used to develop both the mind and body of the child. The kindergarten system, while good, had erred in not developing sufficiently the will power of children and in allowing them too often to imitate the bad things in others. Parents should supervise and take interest in their children's recreations.

Mr. Johnson spoke on the subject of the care of the weak and the relation of feeble-minded children to the general care of children. He spoke of the proper treatment of such children and showed the value of study of abnormal cases to a knowledge of the treatment of normal cases. When fully trained, the feeble-minded child can be made a great asset to society. He described different aspects of the work done by institutions having the care of such cases.

EVENING SESSION.

Rev. Dr. Curtis occupied the chair at last night's session. He called at once upon Dr. Moore, who spoke up on the theme "Keep the home fires burning." His address was an incitement to practical patriotism at home. It is our duty to look after the interests and the dependents of those who are fighting for us. We must reduce foodstuffs and increase economy in the use of them. Destruction is going on at an appalling rate, but the best and truest things in life are indestructible, education, high morals and spiritual factors. Intemperance is being abolished and the liquor traffic in Newfoundland is at an end. Social vice must next be exterminated. We must construct; we must build up home life, and make our children happier in their homes than anywhere else. The address was listened to most closely and aroused much enthusiasm.

Mr. Johnson then delivered a lecture on feeble-minded children, illustrating it with a large number of interesting views depicting the different kinds and classes of mentally deficient children. He also exhibited charts showing the effects of heredity and the transmission through generations of mental affections and infirmities.

The last session of the Congress, which has been an unqualified success, was held this morning. The distinguished visitors left by the express for Canada, bearing with them the good wishes of a host of friends and admirers.

Thrus the Law Aside.

Cromwell Had His Own Views on the Rights of an Embassy.
Nowadays the invasion of a foreign embassy would be a serious matter, but in the days when Oliver Cromwell was lord protector of England there was no fine discrimination to favor members of an embassy. When such members committed crimes against the law of the land they were held to the same accountability as though they had been natives.
So it was that on July 10, 1653, Don Plantaleon Sa, a Portuguese nobleman, brother of the ambassador from that country to England and a knight of Malta, was beheaded on Tower Hill. He had killed an Englishman, mistaking him for another. The Portuguese took refuge with his brother, the ambassador, who claimed that by the law of nations his house was an inviolable sanctuary for all his countrymen.
Cromwell sent a messenger to state that if the criminal was not given up to the civil authorities the soldiers would be withdrawn from guarding the embassy and the mob left to do as it pleased. Every effort was made by the Portuguese and other ambassadors to save Don Plantaleon's life, but without avail. Cromwell made no other reply than, "Blood has been shed, and justice must be satisfied."

"Some" Talkers.

Faets of Famous Speakers.
The man who holds the world's record for "quick-fire jaw" is Billy Sunday, the famous American evangelist, who can get through 45,000 words a day. It is true that a good deal of Billy's vocabulary would not be found in the Century Dictionary, but that only makes his performance the more unique.
Among public speakers the average rate of delivery is about 8,000 words per hour. The Prime Minister is quite content to keep within this limit, but with such rapid speakers as Mr. Asquith, Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Winston Churchill the rate frequently rises to 10,000 words an hour, and even through a long speech these speakers maintain an average of 150 words a minute, or 9,000 words an hour.
Robert La Follette, the leader of the "windbag" senators at Congress, has long been famous "across the Herring Pond" as the most notorious "long-winded" speaker in the world. He thinks nothing of speaking five or six hours on end with an average of 150 words a minute. Even America's champion filibuster, however, does not come near the record created by Mr. Gladstone. Many of the G. O. M.'s speeches run something like 52,000 words, crowded into one stupendous effort of a little over four hours.
The Attorney General, Sir F. E. Smith, frequently averages 25,000 words a day when appearing in the Courts on behalf of the Crown, while men like Sir E. Marshall or Sir John Simon may be said to average something like 12,000 words per day all the year round.—Tit-Bits.

ANCIENT BEAUTY CULTURE.
We hear a great deal about beauty culture and are somewhat inclined to think it is a new art, at least in some of its developments. The truth is it is not a new art at all, but one as old as the hills, at least nearly as old as Eve.
One of the instruments used by the professors of beauty culture is the face mask, whole or partial, to be worn during sleep as a preventative of wrinkles, it is of kid, with apertures for the eyes, nostrils and mouth. A similar apparatus under different forms was well known to the ancients and having of time intervening did not allow it to be forgotten. Beauties of the Renaissance period took it up, and we find Marguerite Valois, the good queen Margot, wearing a mask at night in order to preserve her beauty.
We read also that her husband Henry IV, objected to it. After she was divorced from him, and when Marto de Medicin had taken her place, did she continue the practice. Probably as this royal Marguerite was not only a coquette when young, but lived to be a very old coquette. Baths enter largely into the system of modern cultivators of physical beauty, but these beautifying baths consist seldom of pure water. Ingredients are put into the water which are supposed to have a more or less marvellous effect on the skin.
There is nothing new in this practice any more than in the mask system. Roman ladies, under the Caesars, bathed in water redolent with costly compounds. Some bathed in asses milk diluted in water. Nero's wife used to sleep with compresses of this milk on her cheeks—such was the belief then in its beautifying powers.

Undesirable Laughter.

Men show their character in nothing more clearly than by what they think laughable.—Goethe.

A great deal can be said in praise of laughter.

As much, to my mind, can be said in dispraise of it. There are many kinds of laughter. There are desirable kinds of laughter, such as the laugh of a child, the hearty laugh of an unself-conscious man, the well modulated musical laughter of a woman (one of the rarest things on earth), the fit of a musical laugh is about five times as rare as that of a tubical voice and you know how far from common that is) and the pretty laughter of young girls ("which is and always was," says DeQuincey, "among the most delightful sounds of earth.")

And then there are kinds of laughter not so desirable. There is the apologetic laugh, the coarse laugh, and the nervous laugh. The latter is the one I especially want to speak about.

No Nervous Habit Worse Than The Nervous Laugh. Of all nervous habits, none is any more to be avoided than the nervous laugh. I used to know a woman who laughed constantly. She laughed at everything and she laughed at nothing. She would make a plain statement of fact such as "it is a pleasant day" and then laugh at it. When anyone made a jest she laughed for almost a minute. I dread to hear people make jests in her presence. On all occasions when other people smiled she laughed. I don't know that I ever saw her smile.

At first I judged her whole character by that laugh. Later I realized that it was nothing but a nervous habit. When she was more nervous than usual from one cause or another, such as overtiredness, shyness at meeting strangers, etc., she laughed more than usual.

I really pitied her for the unfortunate habit, and yet I think I should advise her to try to live with it as one-like that.

I could hear that laugh coming and something inside me shuddered. Perhaps other people do not feel as keenly as I do about this habit but I am sure most people find it more or less offensive.

The very fact that laughter is normally the expression of mirth and happiness somehow makes it more hideous when it is twisted out of its normal use.

Nothing More Horrible Than A Maniac's Laughter.

A maniac's shrieks are bad enough but nothing in all the world is more horrible than a maniac's laughter. And the loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind is even more imbecile than the fool's most foolish utterance. Watch your laugh.

Don't let yourself get the habit of nervous laughter. It is one of the most unnecessary as well as one of the most objectionable habits in the world.

JEALOUSY. Jealousy is something which comes between husband and wife and sometimes between wife and husband. It consists of a dark, olive-green ache under the left shoulder-blade, which ebbs and flows like the dividends from an Oklahoma oil well. Sometimes it refuses to ebb until it strikes the divorce court and is assuaged by an oblong chunk of alimony.

There are two kinds of jealousy, masculine and feminine, but both have the same prehensile strength and high explosive qualities. When we look around us and see so many men who have "jealous wives," and then take one long, painful look at the men themselves, we lose several grains of confidence in woman's capacity for self-government. Some husbands also have a tendency to become jealous of a wife who couldn't stir the blood in a clay pigeon, which teaches us that love is blifed in both eyes and carries considerable vacant space in its beifry.

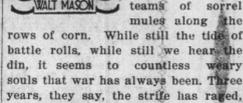

When a man becomes jealous he is convinced that some cave-man admirer of his wife, in a polka-dot shirt, is going to steal her when she is engaged in bedding down the cow. A jealous husband can convert a type-written invitation to be present at the annual election of officers of the Epworth League into a cipher message of undying love, and when his wife returns home she will have to present the sworn affidavits of the pastor and the first vice-president to the effect that she was on hand for roll call. When this is kept up for any length of time there is a distinct explosion, followed by the low, muffled tones of a petition in equity. Jealousy on the part of wives is wholly unbecoming and should not be tolerated. No self-respecting husband will allow his wife to interrupt the course of platonic friendship, unless it gets too blamed platonic. The average wife can be lalled into a sense of security by assuming a stern and injured air, and this should be practised in front of the mirror several times a day until it will not slip when tried out in public. When a wife goes so far as to follow her husband to the skating rink and observe his spry and kittenish ways, the law should step in and be allowed to take its course.

There would be less jealousy between married people if more eyes could be straightened without use of the knife.

THE DAY OF PEACE.

The war will end some blessed day, some day it is a strife, will cease; the kings will put their guns away, and boost the boom of peace. The captains then will drop the tools, which made the world forlorn, and drive their teams of sorrel mules along the rows of corn. While still the tide of battle rolls, while still we hear the din, it seems to countless weary souls that war has always been. Three years, they say, the strife has raged, across the mourning seas, but it would seem that war's been waged for three eternities. The days that reek of blood and tears pass slowly over the stage; to weary hearts three gory years become an endless age. We're looking forward to the day when peace with honour comes, when kings will put their swords away, and soak their battle drums. I long to see the colonels drop their shining snickersnes, and buckle down to raise a crop of beans and early peas. I long to see field marshals hang their batons from a nail, and then get busy with the gang, to earn some bloodless kale.

WALT MASON

Household Notes. Wash the fruit closet every day, and if there is any sign of fermentation open the jars, release the contents. This will often prevent the waste of good material. Keep a table with two shelves in the upper hall, and keep on the top shelf all magazines, glasses, etc., that are to go upstairs and on the lower shelf all that are to go downstairs. To make coffee butter icing, stir six ounces of butter with fourteen ounces of fine icing sugar until it is the consistency of cream; add by degrees strong coffee to taste; spread between cakes like jam.

Flannigan and Lannigan

A BOOT DISCUSSION.

"Oh, I met with Mister Lannigan, and he shook me by the hand, oh, said he, how are you, Flannigan, and how do you stand? Sure I'm standing in Buddy's, they're the best I ever wore; there's no boots in the country like the Buddy Boots for sure. On the Labrador last summer, sure wherever I did go, everyone of Terra Nova's hardy fishermen said so. There's no other boot a patch on the Buddy Boots to-day, and everywhere I travel that's the thing the people say. Sure they're worn at fair Placencia by the stalwart sons of toil, at Bay St. George, at Buifin, and at Bargeo and LaPolle, where the milk-white waves are dashing 'gainst the shores of Notre Dame, and at St. John's famous landfill, there the fishers say the same. So come on, Mister Lannigan, you'll find all I said is true; oh, go buy a pair of Buddy's there; the only boots for you.—adv11

Off to the Front.

Mr. P. C. O'Driscoll received a telegram yesterday from his son, Lance-Corporal Joseph O'Driscoll, stating he was off again for France. This young soldier joined the colours at seventeen years of age and was wounded in the big drive, April 14th past. He has fully recovered, and although a mere school boy is setting an example for those men slackers who are remaining at home enjoying the luxuries of motor cars, etc.

Famous Consumptives.

Great Invalids Who Were Great Authors.

It has been said that while consumption slowly but surely kills a man, it incidentally brings out his genius. This is the opinion of Dr. Jacobson, an eminent American scientist, and the following notable instances certainly go to prove it. One of the most striking examples is that of Thomas Hood, the "irrepressible" wit and humorist. Hood's life has been called "one long disease," for he was a victim of tuberculosis from infancy until his death at forty-six. No amount of discouragement could dull the edge of his humour. It was during the height of the disease that he wrote "Eugene Aram," upon which his immortality rests.

Genius of R. L. S.

Robert Louis Stevenson, like Hood, was a chronic invalid from boyhood. The slowly wasting ailment prevented him from writing more than two hours a day, but during that period it gave him unsurpassed command over the English language, an emotional insight into child life, and the world's greatest romantic touch. In his younger days Stevenson wrote essays, but in 1881, when he was thirty-one years of age, he abandoned these and devoted himself to the imaginative type of story, such as his "Treasure Island," "New Arabian Nights," "Kidnapped," etc. Despite his literary activities during this period, tuberculosis was gradually wearing him down, but as his body grew frail his wizardry of expression and his ability to write strengthened.

It is of interest to note that in her younger and healthier days Elizabeth Barrett Browning failed to sell her poems. They were absolute failures, and until she was thirty she had no success at all. Then she fell a victim to the "white plague," and, strange to relate, within a year she began to pen those deeply emotional poems that have given her enduring fame in English literature.

Antoine Watteau, one of France's foremost artists, painted his celebrated decorative panels while dying of the "white man's scourge." He sprang from humble and poverty-stricken surroundings, and was forced to work on the brink of starvation for the greater part of his thirty-seven years. Just as his fame rose to national proportions his tubercular condition became worse, and he worked desperately during his last few years to complete as much work as possible before he died.

Emerson's "White Plague."

Although Ralph Waldo Emerson lived past the allotted three score years and ten, his health was undermined by tuberculosis, and only a rough sea voyage saved him at one time from dying of the disease. His wife and two brothers died from it, and his life was a struggle against it. However, it released his marvellous gift of genius and made him America's greatest essayist.

The case of the author of "Jane Eyre," Charlotte Bronte, affords another convincing proof of the power of consumption to inspire supreme excellence in literary work. It was after consumption held her in its grip that she wrote that famous novel.

It is said that Chopin composed his best pieces of music when almost choked with nasal catarrh. The "white plague," however, permitted him to turn out those unprecedented themes and harmonies which brought him everlasting fame.

Paganini, perhaps the greatest of violinists, was often prevented from appearing at concerts on account of lung trouble. It is said that his impassioned and soulful performances became far more intensely beautiful as his life burned lower.—Tit-Bits.

Miss Parsons was among the first of Newfoundland's nurses to go on active service, having served in hospital in England, at Saloniki and other places, where she established a fine record for herself and the country that gave her birth. Capt. Marcy has been attached to the Royal Army Medical Corps and like his bride has done good work in aiding the sick and wounded soldiers. Eczema Cured Five Years Ago.

A Treatment Which Has Proven a Wonderful Healer of the Skin—Certified Evidence of Lasting Cure.

Jordan, Ont., October 10th.—The old notion that eczema is a disease of the blood is refuted time and time again by the cures that are daily being effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment. It matters not what the cause may have been if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment regularly you will obtain relief and cure of eczema. Here is the proof. Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "My brother had a bad case of eczema on his legs. He was troubled nearly all one fall and winter with it, and could not work for days at a time. He tried different salves and ointments, but none cured him. One day he tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it gave almost instant relief. He continued its use, but had not quite finished the second box when he was cured. It is now about five years since then, and it has never returned. We certainly can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and are very grateful for my brother's cure."

(Rev. S. F. Coffman, Vineland, Ont., states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites and the party to whom she refers, and her statements are correct.")

Mr. J. E. Jones, 228 University Avenue, Kingston, Ont., writes: "I had eczema in my hand for about five years. I tried a great many remedies, but found that while some of them checked it, none cured it permanently. Finally I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and in six weeks my hand was completely better. I would not do without a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house if it cost $2 a box. I am giving my name to this firm so that it will get to those who suffer as I did." Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint you. Insist on getting what you ask for.

Italians Absolute Masters of the Air.

Caproni Machine Practically a Howitzer Which Lifts and Drops Huge Projectiles—Accuracy of Aim Deadly—Army's Aviation Experts Consider Plan to Cross Atlantic Not Only Feasible but Easy.

With the Italian Army, Sept. 26.—No day or night passes by but great bomb-dropping Capronis sail over Austrian gathering points, railway junctions, and crossroads and churn them into ghastly disorder with a rain of bombs. Prosecco, upon the main line of communications from Trieste to Tolmino, and the road leading back from it and that concentration of Austria's remaining forces, which are reorganising along the Chiapovano Valley, are frequently visited.

The Italians hold foremost place in the development of the airplane, which is practically a howitzer; that is, a mere means of lifting huge projectiles and depositing them on objectives. They have given particular attention to accuracy of aim, so that often they achieve an effect equal to intensive fire by large calibre guns. I was told recently of a squadron which flew over an Austrian trench line on the Carso reaching the trench with every bomb dropped. It was like the fire of a widely spaced battery as the bomb explosions sprang up along the windings of the parapet.

Their mastery of the air is so complete that throughout the fighting

No more home-made Chutney or Tomato Catsup for me—that is what everybody says when they have tried H.P.—the new sauce from England

Its delicious flavour makes it unique—quite unique. Wouldn't it be worth your while to try a bottle of which commenced Aug. 19, I personally only witnessed two air battles. The aviators tell me they are rarely attacked save when a single machine is flying in the neighborhood of the woods near Komen, where the Austrians have several large machines. These will pounce out and take a chance against a single fier. The only active and daring Austrian aviators are those of the hydroaeroplanes from Trieste and the Istrian coast bases, among whom is the redoubtable Bamfield, employed by the Austrian Lloyd. Prisoners brought down and captured alive by Grado airmen describe him as a young man about 25 and exceedingly reckless. He is now obliged to walk with a stick since he has been twice wounded while flying. He was among the aviators who attacked the English monitors.

The Austrians were the first nation to use the airplane in warfare. They maintain this prestige by unceasing activity in the development and perfection of types of machines. I visited to-day an aerodrome which is occupied by a squadron of which Laureati, the Turin London flier, was a member for a time, and saw many of the latest types of the great machines which have done so much to establish Italian air mastery. The Italians build nothing which has not a look of finality. Their hangers of reinforced concrete are as handsome and solidly constructed as country villas, and the very airplanes showed a touch of artistry in finish and completeness or fittings. A modern Caproni is as comfortable for its occupants as a limousine.

I asked the aviators, in view of Laureati's success, what they thought of the prospects of the Caproni fliers in America who are to make an attempt to fly across the Atlantic. One and all were enthusiastic about it. They seemed to have been discussing it among themselves for weeks. They pointed out that by choosing starting and landing places the passage could be done with only about a thousand miles of water to cross.

"We have already machines which normally go into action with a crew of four men, besides a cargo of bombs," one of them said. "By reducing the crew to two and substituting for bombs and the other two men an extra fuel supply the thing is obviously possible."

They laid stress on the value of multiple engines and quoted the case of an aviator flying a three-engined machine who got back safely though two engines were out of action. "We shall all be mail carriers after the war," said one of them.

Salesmanship unaided may make some first sales, but even at its best it cannot build a repeat business, unless supported by Quality Goods. INFERIOR PRODUCTS SOON REVEAL THEIR REAL CHARACTER, and weaken the courage so essential to success in selling on a permanent basis. Sugar to Sell at 8c. After Oct. 15.

Producers Agree With Food Administration on Wholesale Price.
Washington, Sept. 20.—Beet sugar producers, in conference with the food administration to-day, reached a unanimous agreement under which the stable retail price of sugar will be about eight cents a pound. They will sell to wholesalers at Eastern refining points, at seven and one-quarter cents a pound, cane basis, and the retail price, it was stated, would normally be not more than three-quarters of a cent higher.
At the same time, the food administration announced that an international committee of five had been named to arrange for the purchase and distribution of the vast quantities of sugar needed by the United States and allied countries. This committee, acting through the food administration under authority of President Wilson's Executive Order, will control a large proportion of the world's sugar output.
To Plan for Distribution.
George M. Rolph, head of the food administration's sugar division; Earl D. Babst, president of the American Sugar Refining Company, and William A. Jamieson, of Arbuckle Brothers, are the American members of the committee. The Allied nations are represented by Sir Joseph White-Todd and James V. Drake, sr., British sugar men.
Details of the sugar distributing plan will be worked out by a food administration committee including H.

A. Douglass, Detroit; E. E. Howe, Denver; W. H. Hannam, San Francisco; S. H. Love, Salt Lake City; W. S. Petriken, Denver; S. W. Sinshelmer, Huntington Beach, Cal., and W. P. Turner, Detroit.
Inclusion of the big Cuban cane sugar producing interests in the Allied distributing scheme will be discussed with the food administration to-morrow by the Cuban Minister, Dr. Manuel De Cespedes, and two Cuban sugar-growers, Jose Miguel Terana and Jose Ignacio Lezama.
Cuban's participation in the plan is expected, particularly in view of the government's power to prevent importation by refusing licenses to producers not agreeing to the uniform price.
American cane sugar representatives, it is believed, will take action similar to that of the beet sugar men within a week. Most cane producers already have agreed to a 7 1/2-cent price, or its equivalent, but this is not regarded as final until the decision is unanimous. The objections of above 10 per cent. of the beet sugar men to the low price were composed at a final conference to-day.
Effective in October.
The new sugar price will become effective in the West on October 1, when the 1917 crop reaches the refineries, and in the East about two weeks later.
The present price of beet sugar to wholesalers is about 8 1/2 per cent a pound.
"This patriotic action on the part of the beet sugar producers of the United States," said a food administration statement to-day, "demonstrates conclusively the value of this industry to the country in coming

She Misses Merry Yuletide.

A dispatch from Ottawa announces the death at the age of 98 of Mme. Jean Baptiste Bigras, whose claim to fame is that she is survived by 331 descendants in direct line—2 sons, 10 daughters, 79 grandchildren, 212 great-grandchildren, and 23 great-great-grandchildren. If there have been any demises among her colossal progeny, the chronicler of the Bigras annals neglects to state the fact. He is equally silent as to whether or not the lady had any other claim to fame than the one he mentions, and he leaves the world uninformed as to whether or not any member of the family has ever done anything for the world except live in it. Even that is something, however, especially in a country like Canada, where living comes near to providing participation in one or another form of honest and productive toil.
A more interesting question, if not a more important one, is suggested by the approach of the holiday season. With what feelings could Mme. Bigras have awaited the arrival of Christmas? Did she buy her presents early or, after the commoner prac-pretending to solve it by deciding to divert all of what little money they could spare for presents to other objects connected with the war, but in their hearts they know that no such simple scheme as that will work—that when the time comes they will be unable to resist the inevitable pressure to give. As usual, part of the giving will be voluntary, and even glad, the rest compelled and reluctant.

Mme. Bigras has escaped it all, and there is temptation to congratulate her as fortunate, for she could not have been helped at all by determining, as others can, not to give anything more than a pretty card to anybody except "the children."—N. Y. Times.

Memory System.

Forget each kindness that you do
As soon as you have done it;
Forget the praise that falls to you
The moment you receive it;
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it;
For get each slight, each spite, each Injury
Whenever you may meet it.
Remember every kindness done
To you, whatever its measure;
Remember praise by others won,
And pass it on with pleasure;
Remember every promise made
And keep it to the letter;
Remember those who lend you aid,
And be a grateful debtor.
Remember all the happiness
That comes your way in living;
Forget each worry and distress,
Be hopeful, and forgiving;
Remember good, remember truth,
Remember Heaven's above you,
And you will find, through years and youth
True joys and hearts to love you.

Unknown Heroes.

The Paris Petit Journal has brought before France the story of great unknown heroes of the war, and its latest contribution deals with a heroic sergeant "just one of those men who go quietly by in the march—a bull dog of the British breed. In the attack on Langemarck, the Britisher saw his officer fall, and not recognizing any one of superior rank than himself took command of the company, and in a quiet, business-like fashion, said, 'Our work is to go on till we are ordered to halt.' The order did not come till the third line of the enemy was successfully pierced. Just on the eve of the victory, a bullet struck the sergeant in the groin. His place, however, was taken by a soldier and that company finished with every German within sight put out of business. The Journal remarks, 'It is thanks to such acts that Langemarck was seized, crossed, and left behind.'

Your Boys and Girls.

The greatest problem that confronts a mother in planning children's birthday party is not what form of entertainment, but in nine cases out of ten—what to do with the bigger boys. If any gathering of little boys and girls ranging up to 7 or 8 years there are always a few young lads overcharged with animal spirits who "cut up" to the boundless terror of the little girls in their dainty ruffles and ribbons. Even boys who are models of behaviour on other occasions are apt to catch the contagion this birthday party restlessness, and it sometimes takes almost all pleasure out of giving birthday parties.

Clerks Must Be Civil.

A recent pronouncement of the Bavarian Ministry of the Interior, though couched in polite and fatherly language, contains a threat to all food storekeepers that unless they treat their customers civilly they will be debarred from conducting their business in the future. Countess complains about the arrogance of the storekeepers, who are variously described as having become the "lords of creation", "autocrats", and "dictators" are responsible for the order. The Ministry's proclamation reminds all who sell food of any kind that, because of the war and the state of affairs it has brought with it, they have become in a way public servants. They are no longer purely private individuals but members of the communal economic machine. That being the case, continues the order, each storekeeper must subordinate his own interests to those of the state. He is not allowed to ridicule his patrons, ignore their wants, nor be impolite to them. "Accordingly," concludes the proclamation, "it becomes the duty of the communal organizations to remove the merchant, butcher, baker, etc., who falls in his duty to his patrons, to refuse to apportion any further goods to him. On occasion he may even be debarred from trading under the regulation of the Bundesrat which covers undesirable and irresponsible persons in business."

Everyday Etiquette.

"If I come home from an evening entertainment at nine o'clock is it all right to ask my escort to come in for awhile?" inquired Mildred.
"As early as nine would be quite proper for you to ask the young man in for a brief call," answered her aunt.

Happy 'Cause We're Doing Good.

We are making BIG profits for our 328 clients and for ourselves; and the MORE we make for them, the more we make ourselves, while the GREATER our profits are, necessarily, the GREATER must be our clients' profits. Ponder that statement! This Company cannot make money unless our clients make BIG MONEY.

328 active clients are not enough for an organization able to cater to 1,000. Consequently we want 500 by Christmas and 1,000 by Spring.

YOU will be our client if you have the human desire to MAKE BIG PROFITS. We can "deliver the goods" and while doing so are well able to GUARANTEE THE SAFETY OF YOUR MONEY.
