CHAPTER XXXVIII.
"Let me keep it until you can read it, Leah. Carry your mind back, my dear, to the afternoon when I first saw you—to the little gloomy room where the bars of yellow sunlight fell upon the floor. Do you remember it, Leah?"

"Yes," she cried, with a shudder; "but why do you speak of it—why remind me of it?"

"You will hear, my dear. This letter is from Hettie; and she says that your father is very ill, and wishes to see you."

Leah clasped her hands in dismay. "Oh, uncle," she cried, "I had so nearly forgotten that terrible past, that dreadful life!"

"I know, my dear," he said, soothingly. "We have kept to our compact well: the name of Ray has not been mentioned between us. But this letter is the result of my words. I said—Heaven forgive me if I spoke too harshly!—that in life I would have nothing to do with him, but that, if when he came to die, he wanted you, you should go to him. You remember?"

"Yes," she replied, shuddering, "I remember it. You said: 'If you are dying, and send for her, she shall come.'"

"Those were my words," said the general, "and I must carry them out. Your father is dying, Leah, and he wants to see you."

She hid her face in her hands, and he saw that she trembled.

"You shall not go unless you wish," he said.

"I must go," she replied, looking up at him in troubled despair. "Duty, conscience, honor, all tell me I must go; but I shrink from it. Oh, uncle, I hated that old life so much!"

"You need not think of it. You will never go back to it, Leah; and you shall not go to Southwood now, unless you wish it."

"I must go," she said, more to herself than to him. "He is my father—I must go. Let me see what Hettie says, uncle. I have longed to speak of her. It eases my heart even to utter her name."

Silently the general placed the letter in her hands, and watched her face as she read.

Simple and pathetic were the words addressed by Hettie to the general. She seemed to think that the presence of death levelled all distinctions. She addressed him as "Dear Uncle," and went on to say that all through the summer her father had been very ill, but that lately he had been much worse. Ten days since the doctor had thought him dying. Since then he had been in a terrible state—dying, yet could not die. "Last night," he had called her to him, and told her that he could not die until he had seen Leah once more. "I cursed her, Hettie, when she left me," he had said, "and I want to take the curse from her. I cannot die until I have seen her. Write to the general, and ask him to bring her hither."

"I must go," Leah repeated, with white lips, turning to the general. "How horrible, uncle! My poor father did curse me, but they were only words. I have never been frightened about it; have you?"

"I have never liked even to think of it, my dear," he replied. "If any one was to blame in that terrible business, it was myself. I was too harsh, but I thought I was carrying out my dead sister's wish—that was all. Everything looks different in the presence of death; and yet I do not see how I could have acted otherwise. Will you go to once, Leah?"

"Do you really believe that he is dying?" she asked.

"Yes," replied the general; "I see no reason for doubting what Hettie says. I do not think he would ask to see you, Leah, if he had any chance of life."

"Then we must go at once," she said. "But was there ever anything so strange, uncle! It looks to me more than a coincidence that they should have lived at Southwood and we at Dene Abbey, so near them, yet never once have met, is it fate or Providence?"

"Providence," replied the brave old soldier. "I do not believe in fate. I remember, when we were at Dene, hearing the duke speak of some worn-out old politician who lived at Southwood. I need hardly say that I never for one moment dreamed that it was Martin Ray."

Leah shrank back with a shudder at the sound of the name.

"Do not think me unfeeling, uncle," she said, "but I suffered so terribly in my early life that I cannot bear even to recall it. And to think that I have been so near Hettie and never knew it!"

Sir Arthur took out his watch and looked at it.

"We can catch the midday express," he said. "If we lose no time."

But Leah seemed hardly conscious of his words.

"Uncle," she said, "there was a time when Hettie and I had but one heart and one life between us. How strange that we were so near, with only the great green hill dividing us! I wonder what Hettie is like."

"She was a very sweet girl," said the general. "I wish she had chosen to come with us; but I admitted them, as I do now, the faithful, tender heart. We must not lose time, Leah," he added.

But there was something in his niece's face that made him stop and draw her closer to him, that made him kiss her again and again, while he said—

"You are the child of my heart, Leah; and you, who came with me, are the one I shall always love best in this world. Go now to your room to dress, and I will get ready at once. Stay—we must think of Basil. Write a note to him—one of the grooms shall take it over—and tell him that we have been sent for quite suddenly to the sick-bed of a relative, but that we expect to return in a day or two. Do not say where we are going. I will tell him the whole story on my return. I intended to tell him in the course of a few days; it is time he knew. How surprised he will be!"

So they parted; but, for the first time since he had adopted Leah, there was in the general's mind a slight sense of disappointment—he could hardly tell why or wherefor. He would have felt happier had she shown more pity, more affection for Martin Ray, more anxiety to be with him; and yet it was by his wish that she had left him. And in Leah's heart there was something like a feeling of resentment or jealousy. It seemed to her that he admired Hettie for staying with her father quite as much as he had admired her for coming away.

"Perhaps," said Leah to herself, "he thinks Hettie the most noble of the two. He does not know. There are many ways of showing true nobility. I may find one some day."

They reached the station just in time to catch the midday express that would enable them to arrive at Southwood long before night.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The sullen, gray light of a dull November sky fell over land and sea. The great hill that lay between the wide woodlands and Southwood looked brown and arid. The tide was high, and the huge waves boomed at the foot of the rocks. It was a chill, uncomfortable evening, with a cold wind blowing, the clouds falling lower and lower and threatening rain, a mist spreading from sea to land, clinging to the trees and hedges, and lying like soft clouds on the grass. There was no sound of a bird's song, no glimpse of a flower. Even the pretty little town of Southwood looked dull and gloomy. All around it was still and silent, except for the sullen roar of the waves and the wailing of the wind. All the sweet summer sounds and scents were dead; autumn reigned supreme.

Inside Martin Ray's cottage the scene was even more dreary than without. There is no room so sad as that in which a man has lain day after day, week after week, dying. When there is any hope in the nursing, it is not so dreary. There is the prospect of a pleasant termination; there is the looking forward to a time when all the paraphernalia of medicine will be done away with. But in this case there was no such hope. The long illness must end in death, and death was long in coming. It seemed at times as though nothing but the fierceness of hate kept life in Martin Ray; all that he had disliked, scorned, denounced in his youth and his strength, was more odious than ever to him now. More than once his doctor, looking at the stern, vindictive face, said to himself—

"It is strong feeling that keeps him alive."

That Hettie was a model nurse, as she had always been a model daughter, surprised no one. She never seemed to think of herself; she scarcely slept or rested, for the dying man was afraid to be left alone.

"You must never leave me, Hettie," he said to her one day. "While you are in the room some of my old thoughts of the angels come to me; the moment you go I have a horrible fancy."

"What is it?" she asked, touching the gray hair with her white fingers.

"When you leave the room, it fills with huge black dogs, their flaming eyes all fixed on me. I know it is fancy, because they only bark. They never touch me."

It's Flavor that Makes the Meal!

And the sauces that the Libby chefs have adapted for you give flavor to the simplest dishes.

It may be eggs, or macaroni, or a cheap cut of meat—an unusual and delicious sauce will make it something you eat with delight and remember with pleasure—because of its flavor.

LIBBY'S CATCHUP and CHILI SAUCE are made from red, ripe tomatoes, grown in the fertile soil of Kent County, Ontario, picked when they are mellowed by the sunshine of long summer days, then rushed to the nearby Libby kitchen.

Here in sunny rooms the tomatoes are cooked with fragrant spices, onions, sugar and the best vinegar—cooked for hours until all the flavors are blended through and through.

Now the sauce is ready to give an appetizing relish to your steaks and chops, or a new piquancy to the meat gravy you serve with your roasts.

Your grocer has, or can get you, Libby's Catchup or Chili Sauce. Use it with your cold meat teas and note how quickly the second helping is necessary.

The delightful flavor of Libby's Beans is due largely to the wonderful Sauce prepared by the skilled chefs. Have you tried them?

"I am glad to take this opportunity to tell you of my complete satisfaction with this machine. It is exactly the typewriter for an author like myself. It is so light and small that it can be taken anywhere, and it is so sound and foolproof that it is always in good condition. I have needed a typewriter for years; but I could not find anything sufficiently portable, hardy, willing and easy, until I discovered Corona."

The probability of international action to rescue the remaining non-Turkish population of Asia Minor, is indicated to-day by the Daily Telegraph's diplomatic correspondent. They surpass in magnitude even those of Gladstone's day and those of 1915, not being sporadic but systematic and aimed at the complete extermination of the Christian race.

Premier Lloyd George in a message given to the Genoa correspondent of the Yorkshire Evening News says, "We have reached a new phase in Western civilization. No modern nation can exist by itself. It is dependent upon other nations whether neighboring or remote. The pact of non-aggression is fundamental to economic reconstruction. Women and the Ministry

SHOULD THEY BECOME ORDAINED REGULARLY?

TORONTO, May 15th. (Canadian Press)—Should Women be admitted to the Methodist Ministry in this country? This is one of the live questions which will come before the General Conference of the Methodist Church in Canada at the sessions to be held in this city next September, and with women delegates attending the General Conference it promises to be productive of an interesting debate. This General Conference will witness a big departure from precedent in the presence of women delegates on the "floor of the house" on an equality with the male representatives of the various Conferences in the Dominion. Women have sat as members of Conferences in a number of instances in recent years, but this will be the first time for them to take a place side by side with the men in general governing body of the Methodist Church.

WOMEN DELEGATES.

The number of women to be thus honored by being appointed delegates to the Methodist General Conference, which will meet in the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, on September 27, depends upon the action taken in this respect by the various conferences in June. Incidentally it may be stated that "equal rights" to be extended to the women delegates at the General Conference includes election to any office in the Conference except that of General Superintendent. The head of the Methodist Church in Canada must be a minister, and, according to the present church laws—a man.

QUARTERLY BOARDS HAVE VOTED.

On the question of admitting women to the ministry, a vote has been taken by the Quarterly Boards of the various Methodist Churches for the guidance of the General Conference. The result has not been made public so far. At first the vote of the Quarterly Boards indicated a decided opposition to the admission of women to the ministry. The "No's" seeming to be in a big majority, but it is understood that later returns have changed this to a considerable extent. It is believed that the movement in favor of women-ministers may not reach its culmination at the General Conference but, in any case, a comparatively close vote is expected. The women have gained a good deal by the success of Miss Maudie Royden, the noted-British preacher, who was Associate Pastor of the City Temple, London, and who is now on a tour in the United States.

OTHER IMPORTANT BUSINESS.

Church Insurance is another interesting question on the agenda for the Methodist General Conference. The finance department of the Church has worked out a scheme for the insuring of church properties, but many laymen are said to be opposed to the scheme on the ground that it would be in competition with Methodists who are in the insurance business.

COMPETITION WITH PRIVATE BUSINESS.

Competition with private business concerns would be undesirable, they contend. A forward movement in missions is wished for by many leading Methodists, but owing to the present financial position of the church it is probable that the General Conference will be cautious on this score. Religious education in schools will be one of the questions discussed by the General Conference. Another in the relations of Canada and the British Empire. It is expected that the industrial problem will again be a subject of debate, but it may not receive the prominence it was given at the General Conference in Hamilton, Ontario, two years ago. The Church then gave a leadership by going on record as favoring co-operation for service rather than competition for profits, and in the estimation of some of the General Conference officials there has been a decided improvement and a tendency to co-operative effort since that time. The General Conference will probably last about three weeks. It will be presided over by Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown of this city, the General Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada.

THE ART OF CHEWING.

Your whole system depends for its health and strength on the stomach. The stomach, in turn, depends on the teeth. The very foundation of health is therefore laid at the first step in food conversion—the act of chewing. Food improperly chewed enters the stomach in a wrong condition, and it brings about a wrong fermentation which causes flat, indigestion, then kindred ailments. The proper chewing of the food will prevent these things. Chew your food plentifully.

Hay Cultivation.

A copy of the prospectus of Humber Valley Farms, Ltd., has been received by the Telegram, and careful perusal convinces us that this is not a utopian but a very practical and practicable proposition. The main idea of the new concern in beginning, is the cultivation of hay. Perhaps the use of the word cultivation in this sense is inept, but all readers will agree that it is the only definable term to use. Hay has been found to be the most easily grown of any ground crops, in Newfoundland. But notwithstanding the ease with which production may be secured, there is not sufficient ground to supply local needs, and consequently several thousand tons have to be imported annually from Canada. The idea of the new company is to offset this importation and keep the money spent on outside purchases at home. A laudable purpose and one that we trust will succeed in full accomplishment. Six thousand tons are annually required for animal consumption in the Colony, and this complement can, with but little trouble, be raised altogether in the island. Anyway Humber Valley Farms, Limited will demonstrate that it can. Given but the necessary encouragement from those of the public who are interested in hay production and there can be no doubt about the output. The location of the property of the Company is situated on the south side of Deer Lake, an ideal spot for hay lands, and is immediately along the railway line, and also washed by the waters of the lake, thus giving easy water and land transportation for the baled products, when ready for shipment. There are many other advantages offered by the site chosen for the haylands, as a perusal of the prospectus will show. The names of the officers of the company are a guarantee of stability, and we have to congratulate Humber Valley Farms, Ltd. on possessing such a capable executive. The wonder of wonders is, considering how most all new concerns, promising development of the interior desire to be nursed on Treasury milk that the present Company is not asking for Government assistance in any shape or form. We congratulate them on their enterprise, and sincerely hope that as they have begun, so will they progress until their full desires and intentions are realized. May their faith in the internal resources of Newfoundland induce still further development, and thus speed up the production so necessary to the future.

League Baseball Meeting.

OFFICERS ELECTED.—The annual meeting of the St. John's Amateur Baseball League was held last night in the office of Mr. J. B. Orr, a representative gathering of the various clubs and fans being present. After the Secretary and Treasurer's report had been read and adopted those present spoke very encouragingly on the result achieved last year. Votes of thanks to the Press for the use of their columns, police for service rendered, and to Rev. Fr. Rawlins for the handsome Cup which he had so kindly offered for competition in connection with the Kilbride Garden Party, to the Management Committee, C. of E. Orphanage for medals presented at the Garden Party, Mr. T. V. Hartnett was moved to the Chair to conduct the election of officers, which resulted in the unanimous reappointment of the old board as follows:— President—H. D. Reid. 1st Vice-President—J. B. Orr. 2nd Vice-President—W. J. Higgins. Treasurer—C. De Mers. Asst. Treasurer—C. I. Merner. Secretary—A. H. Thomas. Auditor—D. J. French. A worthy feature of the meeting was the presentation of cups and medals won during the past year. President Orr made the presentation to the winners in his usual happy style, to which each of the recipients replied briefly. President Orr heartily congratulated Manager D. P. Duff of the Red Lions and his team, on their exceptionally fine play during the past three years, which won for them the permanent keep of the G. G. Allen League Cup. He also made special mention of the Cubs under the management of Claude Hall, on winning each of the trophies in the Garden Party series, viz. Sir Edgar Bowring Cup, Perpetual Challenge, and medals, Church of England Garden Party, Rev. Fr. Rawlins' Cup, Kilbride Garden Party, which was won outright, and a first year on the Mount Cashel Cup. Four teams, viz. B. I. S. Wanderers, Red Lions and Cubs, decided to enter the League series this year. The C. E. I. dropped out, their place having been taken by the Wanderers. The schedule of playing dates will be drawn up at an early date. Keen interest was manifested throughout the meeting and the teams are contemplating beginning practice immediately. The fact that a new cup offered by a great baseball fan is the stake for the League series this year stimulates great interest. Messrs. T. V. Hartnett and C. De Mers were appointed a ground committee to interview the Football League in regard to playing dates, after which the meeting adjourned.

Witches and Wizards.

The Nineteenth Century put an end to the reign of Witchery in the form in which it then prevailed, and under which the human imagination was exercised concerning the mysterious and undiscovered forces of Nature without very much for its guidance that was tangible or illuminating. Those were the days of Witches and Wizards. It is now the man of Science who shocks and startles us in the same appeal to the mystic within us. The "Arabian Nights" does not furnish stranger gaud than the operations of electricity reveal. Mr. J. W. Morris, B.Sc., is to lecture on this subject and will illustrate with moving pictures to reveal some of these mysterious forces in the Origin and Application of X-rays. The lecture is to be given in the basement of George St. Church, Thursday evening at 8.15. Tickets at Dicks & Co., 40c.

No Trains Moving.

REGULAR SERVICE HELD UP.—This morning another step in the railway deadlock was reached when passengers who had purchased tickets for Carbonear found that no train was going. Apparently the train was to go upon the usual time and the Reid management had no notice that it would not do so. Upon enquiry at the despatching office the Telegram was informed that the train crew for the local did not turn up to work this morning. The executive of the company when interviewed also could not add anything to this information excepting to say that no communication to the effect had taken place between them and the trainmen. It is learned that the No. 10 from Carbonear did not leave nor are any trains moving except those already on the road. The crosscountry express arrived in town at 11 a.m., but the express which was to leave at 1 p.m. did not do so. It is apparent that the railwaymen will leave their trains at the stations until a settlement is reached regarding the payment of wages due for April month.

The new palace will be three stories and will include a portion of the Episcopal Library. The building will cost in the neighbourhood of $300,000.

Our Local Papers

HIS DIARY.—May 16th.—The talk of the town is of the railway and the situation tonight, being that the Reid Company have no money to pay their workers, and none know what is like to happen. I wait on Mr. H.D. Reid and he tells me his position, which is that the Cabel will advance his company no money nor can they pay their laborers otherwise. The House in the afternoon in great heat over the Railway, and the Prime Minister introduces a Resolution which he would pass to give his Cabel the right to take the Railway and operate it if the Company fails to do so. The Opposition show the Resolution is not to their liking and would have the House adjourn which was done. At night, I to see Mr. John Burke's players do "Cotton's Patch" and the most ridiculous fooling I ever did see, so that I have a pain in my ribs from laughing at it. Home, and my wife in a rage over the Railway, because that if the express does not come in, she will not have her new dress which she was expecting. I quiet her, and so to read and to bed.

Bishop White at Heart's Content.

CABLE CITY GIVES HIS LORDSHIP ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION.—On May 10th the town of Heart's Content was on feet owing to a visit from our beloved Bishop. The day was fine and all the houses were flying flags. At the entrance to the Rectory grounds a splendid arch had been erected. Along the route to the railway station bunting was displayed and the town presented a very pleasing appearance. Nearly all the populace turned out to welcome his Lordship. About 4.30 p.m. the train arrived and the Lord Bishop and the Chaplain, Rev. E. C. Earp, alighting, they were met by our Rector, Mr. Transfield, Superintendent of the Cable office and Major Anderson in charge of the C. L. B. After an inspection of the Brigade, His Lordship was heartily welcomed by the wardens, vestry and people. Needless to say he had a pleasant word for all. Forming ranks a procession was made to the rectory grounds, the order being C. L. B. Band, Old Comrades and E. C. Earp, the Select Vestry and His Lordship's carriage, school children and teachers, L. O. A. Band, general population. On arriving at the grounds an address from the congregation of "St. Mary the Virgin" was read by the peoples warden followed by one from the school children, which was read by Miss Jennie Legge. His Lordship in reply spoke in a manner that was greatly appreciated by all. The Bands rendering God Save the King, three cheers and a tiger were given as a finale to this part of the programme. Long and happy may His Lordship's life be the prayer of his people. THOS. WELLS, Warden. Heart's Content, May 15, 1922.

At the close of the lecture a vote of thanks, moved by Mr. Walter Sparkes and seconded by Mr. L. M. Knight, was accorded Mr. Smallwood for coming to the League and speaking.

MANY DID NOT TURN TO.—Some dissatisfaction has arisen amongst the carmen who operate in the city over a matter of distributing the horse work. These men claim that for months past many of them have not earned sufficient to pay for food for their animals and they object to farmers and others being given the preference of any work. Some 150 men are now engaged, widening Waterford Bridge and Southside Roads. When the employment bureau issued orders for 140 men these were taken on Saturday only 92 showed up for work. It is supposed that most of the others found work along the waterfront whilst a few thought the job was too far from their homes. Their places have since been filled.

Fortunately a retaining wall brought the car to a standstill before it went over the embankment. No damage was done beyond the breaking of a couple of fence rails.

concern, and we made it abundantly clear to the Government last year we were not prepared to finance it for the current year unless the Government found us $1,500,000 in cash being the amount which we then estimated and still estimate to be the minimum sufficient to see the year through.

The semi-monthly payments due on April 15th and 30th, 1922, have been withheld, and we are given to understand that no further payments will be made on the basis of the payments being made at the time and to the amounts agreed upon.

I think that upon a consideration of the foregoing the Government will understand that unless money is provided as arranged last year we cannot be held to blame if we are forced to suspend operation before June 30th.

the Reid Newfoundland Company to my communication of the tenth instant.

I have submitted your letter to the consideration of Committee of Council. I desire to make it clear to you that there is no intention on the part of the Government to revert from the position stated to you in my letter of the tenth. The position as I understand it from the information and advice given by the Auditor General and Government Engineer is that you have already been paid more than actual losses payable under the 1921 Railway Act.

Yours very truly,
E. A. SQUIRES,
Colonial Secretary.

May 12th, 1922.
Hon. Sir E. A. Squires, K.C., K.C.M.G.,
Prime Minister, St. John's.

In reply to your communication of even date I have the honour to state that owing to the gravity of the issues involved this Company does not feel that in justice to itself it can make any commitment which may govern its future conduct in case the position laid down in your communication of the 10th instant is adhered to by the Government.

We desire, however, to again make it quite clear that no funds are available to meet our April payroll on Monday next, and unless the funds are provided by the Government we will simply have to inform our employees that we are unable to pay them owing to monies due us by the Government not having been received.

We have no desire, however, to adopt such drastic measures and are still open to consider any reasonable proposal for a settlement of all disputes.

To All Railway Employees:
We regret to inform you that the Government having failed to pay us the instalments due under the operating contracts, we have no money on hand to pay your wages for April due to-day. We are taking proceedings to recover this amount due us and you can be assured that we will protect your interests to the fullest possible extent and that you will be paid, immediately sufficient money is received by us.

H. D. REID,
President.

A WRONG INTERPRETATION.

The first letter, said the Prime Minister, was from the President of the Reid Newfoundland Company, and states that the agreement made last year between the Company and the Government called for an advance of $1,500,000 during the fiscal year ending this June, irrespective of losses, for the purpose of financing railway operations. There was no such agreement. The actual agreement stated the Government should pay losses up to the amount stated but not exceeding $1,500,000. The Government had been advised that the loss would not exceed the amount of the guarantee. Up to Dec. 31st, the sum of $1,000,000 on account of losses incurred and to be incurred, had been paid. This also included a sum for the purchase of such supplies as would be necessary for the winter. In February, the accounts were examined, and it was found that the losses were not likely to approach the amount of the guarantee. The Government consequently decided to pay any further amounts until Reid had satisfied them that the actual losses were over the amount paid up to the present. From the returns of the Reid auditors, the actual losses on railway operations for the nine months ending last March, were $785,000.

REID'S CLAIMS.
That amount was disputed by the Government Audit Department who certified that the losses were $785,000.

Prime Minister Suggests Public Ownership.

Referring to the Government's reply to the second letter, Sir Richard said that this had been written only after an elaborate examination into the whole situation by the Government advisers. On receipt of the letter of May 3rd, copies had been sent to the Government Engineer and the Auditor General, and after conferences with them and Committee of Council, the reply was drafted. To be sure of the facts contained in it, it was submitted to the Auditor General and the Government Engineer, before it was sent to the Reids.

LOSSES ON OPERATIONS.
The Government estimated that the losses on operation of the railway for the present fiscal year ending in June next, would be $1,123,957.85. Reids, said the Prime Minister, had replied to this by saying that they had no money to pay their railway employees on April 15th. Further conferences were held by the Government and the whole situation again received a thorough examination. Reids were on the one hand, not prepared to go ahead, and on the other hand, did not wish to default. The reply to the Government's letter of May 11th was a carefully worded legal document. After some further criticism of this, Sir Richard rapidly reviewed the crisis which had so suddenly arisen.

HARVEY & CO., Ltd.

Whether there would be trains running to-day or not, was unknown to him. It was essential that the Legislature should be prepared to deal with any contingency which may arise. He then asked the House to consider without notice a Resolution which had been prepared in the event of immediate action on the part of the Legislature becoming necessary. Under present circumstances, a cessation of the railway system would be most undesirable.

THE RESOLUTION.

With the concurrence of the House, he would now move the resolution and would then ask that it be considered in Committee of the Whole. It passed unanimously. It would enable the Government to cope satisfactorily with the question of the future operation of the railway. Sir Richard then surprised the House by reading a resolution which would have been considered amusing were it not that the matter was of so serious a nature. The resolution is:

Whereas, from correspondence tabled in this House it appears that a serious interruption in railroad transportation throughout the country is imminent;

And Whereas, it is in the public interests essential that at this season of the year there should be no interruption in railroad services, which are necessary to the general trade of the country;

Be it Resolved, that this House is of opinion that in the event of any immediate interruption in railroad services, His Excellency the Governor in Council should take over and operate the railway system of the country, with all its appurtenances, pending further proposals to this House; and should take such steps as it may consider necessary for the maintenance of railroad operations essential in the public interests.

If the Prime Minister hoped that he would rush this resolution through, and apparently he did, his disappointment was a grievous one.

EXPECTING SOMETHING MORE.

Sir Michael Cashin said the Opposition had been expecting something more than had been contained in the Resolution. It was not altogether fair to expect the House to consider it that afternoon. It was only that day that the Prime Minister had brought down the correspondence in connection with recent railway matters. From a layman's standpoint, he did not think it was necessary to pass the Resolution at that early date. There was apparently a misunderstanding between the Government and the Company auditors. Last year the Government had agreed to pay the Reids losses on railway operations to the extent of one and one-half millions. He asked the Prime Minister if the large sum stated to be owed the Railway Commission by the Company was subtracted from the amount of the guarantee.

The Prime Minister—"No."
Sir Michael Cashin—"I fall to follow the correspondence. Where does the misunderstanding come in?"

The Prime Minister—"There was no shadow of a suggestion that the Newfoundland Government should make the 1921-22 account pay more than the losses."
Sir Michael Cashin did not think there would be much risk in advancing the whole amount of the guarantee to the Company, and of collecting it at the end of June.

SMALL HOPE OF REFUND.

The Prime Minister's answer to this was that there was small hope of ever recovering overpayments from the Reid Newfoundland Company.

Sir Michael Cashin said that if the Reids had a large stock of coal and other supplies on hand they would be able to reimburse the Government. In response to the Prime Minister's remark that there was trouble enough in collecting the amount owed to the Railway Commission, Sir Michael said it had nothing to do with the present point. On that occasion the Government had been "badly stung." The matter was now a plain business proposition and there was no reason why the money should not be advanced. He then asked what amount had been spent upon Government authority on capital account. He was told that the amount had been tabled in reply to a question, and the Prime Minister could not recall it at the moment. He was further told that this amount was not deducted from the guarantee. Sir Michael then said that the position was that the Reids were unable to pay their employees and he could quite understand the Prime Minister's anxiety in pushing the Resolution. If such a stage had been reached there was no reason why a Commission should not be sent down to grapple with the situation immediately instead of holding up the employees of the Company.

SHOULD PAY EMPLOYEES.

Sir Michael took the attitude that the Government ought to assist the Company to pay their employees. Many of these men were in an unhappy condition and they should receive their pay. The Government should send down two or three of their best men to settle the difficulty. It would not do to place all the responsibility on the shoulders of the Government Engineer alone. There should have been legislation introduced earlier to deal with the railway. The House has had to wait two months before the railway legislation had been passed. The House was now asked to pass the Resolution without having an opportunity to consider it. It was too important a matter to pass over lightly. The House was only within the rights in asking for time to consider. He thought it only a reasonable request to ask that the Committee should rise and the matter be allowed to stand over until the members of the Opposition were familiar with the correspondence. Sir Michael appealed to the Government on behalf of the employees who were suffering on account of Government neglect. They should never have arrived at such a point when the train workers should be the first to suffer. The railway policy should have been before the House months previously. It was the most important question to come before the House during the present session. He repeated his request for time for consideration of the vast issue involved.

LACK OF FORESIGHT.

Mr. Bennett endorsed the stand taken by the Leader of the Opposition. We wished to know if the Government proposed to take full control of the Railway at once. The position was most extraordinary. The Government should have been ready with their programme.

The Prime Minister—"This is our programme. If Reids default, we run the railway for them."

Mr. Bennett asked if Government control might not cost more. The experience of the Government Railway Commission had been a sad and costly one. It had resulted in the biggest deficit in the history of the railway. What would happen if the rights fell into the hands of the Government? This matter and the manner in which it is dealt with might mean the real or woe of our country. Surely, he said, there must be some further correspondence. The Reids had made one statement, the Government auditors another. A deadlock had ensued. The employees of the Company had been thrown out without a dollar. This was due either to the incapacity or indifference of the Government. The Prime Minister had made a slipshod reply when asked what he proposed to do. That the Government should take over and run the railway was not good enough. To vote on this resolution was impossible without full consideration and more information. The Opposition would not only be doing an injustice to the House, if they did not look before they leaped. The railway had to be operated and he believed it could be done economically. It is the most momentous problem the Legislature has ever had before it, and until assured that the Government policy was in the best interests of the country, it would not be passed with the consent of the members on the Speaker's right.

THE LEGAL VIEW.

Mr. Higgins approached the question from the point of view of a legal man. He was glad the Resolution had come down. He had tired of the task of keeping the Reids to their contract. It was full time for a show down. It was just as well to know exactly where we stood. But although he was glad the show down had come, he regretted the way in which it had arrived. It was a great pity that it had not come two and a half years ago. When the present Government came in it was their policy to put the Reids in their place. He was not looking at the matter from a partisan standpoint. The Prime Minister, under compulsion from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, put the Railway Commission Resolutions through. Five millions of dollars were expended without any returns. If the show down had taken place over two years ago, that amount would have been saved. The Government had bungled badly. In the meantime, the Reids were preparing for the ultimate show down and their position is that under the Contract they have not defaulted. The Government and Reids will go on scrapping and in the meantime the unfortunate Railway employees have to go without their pay. It was the irony of fate. When scrapping occurred over the railway several years ago, the country was put back twenty years. Now, the men had to wait for their wages. It was the duty of the Government to see that these men were not deprived of the pay which they had earned by the sweat of their brows. He assured the Government that this was not a political question nor was there any desire on his part to impede them. He agreed with the previous speakers that the Resolution should be permitted to stand over so that the Opposition might have time to consider it. They wanted to vote in a way that would not be unfair to the people they represented. The Government had bungled so often that it was possible they were making another mistake.

AN IMPORTANT ASPECT.

Mr. Higgins then introduced an important aspect in connection with the Government payments to the Reids. The Resolutions of last year provided for the payment of losses up to, but not exceeding the sum of one and one-half millions. A paragraph of the Resolutions stated that "the payments by the Government as aforesaid, shall be made in such manner as agreed upon between the parties thereto." The allegations of the Reids in their letters showed that they had got the Government where they wanted them. From the paragraph he had quoted, it would appear that the actual losses were to be ascertained only after the full amount had been paid, and that a refusal of excess payments should then be made to the Government. He had advanced the whole legal position. The Government could not set up the position that the payments were only to be made on account of the actual losses, because one million dollars had been passed to the Reids before the Government had any knowledge of the losses. In short, the losses were not met as they accumulated and one million had been paid before that amount had been lost. The Reids now claimed the final instalments and they would refund the amount over and above the losses at the end of June. It was a good thing that the country at last realized where it stood. The Government must stop carefully and understand that they are not dealing with fools but with men prepared for the emergency which has now arisen. The Prime Minister would appreciate the point he wishes to make when he suggested to the Government that they take time to see that the matter is properly cleared up. They should put on their brass knuckles when they were fighting with men who were ready for them. He agreed with the point of the Resolution if it were necessary, but as a matter of actual value, the Resolution was no good as the House, whether it wished to do so or not, had always to support the Executive Council. He wished to make clear that the aspect on which this matter was approached should be neither haphazard nor hurried. They should make up their minds that the trouble was now ripe which had been brewing for years. It must be cared. He advised the Government to give full attention to the legal aspects of the problem.

DRASTIC STEPS.

Mr. Walsh thought that the people should be consulted before such a drastic Resolution should be put through. The problem was too big to be dealt with without a mandate from the people. He favoured a temporary arrangement, whereby the employees of the railway would secure their wages for April.

Mr. MacDonnell laid the responsibility for the present situation on personal animosity between the Government and the Reids. This feud had cost the country millions of dollars and it was time that such conduct should cease. The welfare of the country should be uppermost in the minds of all.

Mr. Sullivan made his first speech for the session. He regretted that the employees of the Reids should be the scapegoats. He referred to the deplorable financial condition of the Reids as evidenced by the fact that they were unable to borrow even small amounts from the Bank of Montreal. He said that this Bank had more than ordinary interest in the present situation and had a representative present to listen to the debate. He was sick of this continuous voting of money to the Reids. They should have been kept to their contract in the first instance.

Mr. Moore pleaded for assistance for the men deprived of their earnings by the inability of the Reids to pay them. Some of the men and their families were in a distressed state.

The Committee rose and the House adjourned until Wednesday.

Congratulations.

(From the Argonaut.)
"Well," cried Mrs. Huspeck, "our son is engaged to be married. We will write to the dear lad and congratulate him." Mr. H. agreed; he dared not do otherwise. "My darling boy," read the son the next day, "what glorious news! Your father and I rejoice in your happiness. It has long been our greatest wish that you should marry. A good woman is heaven's precious gift to man. She brings out all the best in him, and helps him to suppress all that is evil." Then there was a postscript in a different handwriting:—"Your mother has gone for a stamp. Keep single, you young noodle."

Value of Self-Control.

During thirty years of association with John D. Rockefeller, first as stenographer and later as financial secretary, George D. Rogers, never once saw Mr. Rockefeller lose his temper. "Unquestionably," says Mr. Rogers, "Mr. Rockefeller had early learned that self-control was a short-cut to the control of both men and events." Henry M. Flagler, on the other hand, used to let his temper go, and later on, just to stumpe himself with rage, whose feelings he had hurt, necessarily, he'd make them extravagant presents. The man who loses his temper is in the position of admitting to all who witness his exhibitions that he is not master of himself. A loss of temper means loss of self-control. No man can enjoy the luxury of losing his temper regularly and enjoy long life. Neither can such a man win the loving loyalty of his associates.—Tom Dreier, in Forbes Magazine.

Almost a Fabulous Career.

When Ernest T. Hooley entered upon a three years' sentence at the Old Bailey prison some days ago an amazing career came to a just and glorious end. Thirty years ago he dazzled Europe by his Monte Christo exploits. He bought the Dunlop tyre, for example, for $15,000,000, floated it for $25,000,000, and in a few months it was rated at $35,000,000. In less than two years he put over 20 companies with a capital of nearly $100,000,000 "over the coat" dimmed in splendor. He continued to practice the arts of "high finance," only on a scale that dwindled from millions to hundreds and finally merely to thousands, and his decline was marked by his successive bankruptcies, in 1898, 1911 and 1921. Yet he never paid a penny on his liabilities and went to prison for defaulting on about $4,000,000.

The son of a worker in a Nottingham factory, Hooley had the shrewdness to see the tendencies of the times, the skill to formulate an easy-money policy, and the audacity to act upon his philosophy. The idea was to buy prosperous and reputable enterprises, increase their capitalization and sell out. His vast success bewildered and hypnotized the Victorians. Everybody with money, aristocrat or plebeian, hovered about Mr. Hooley, "the man with the foxy face, who played the role of city super-magnate in loud, sporting equire, who dressed like a racing, sporting equire, and professed to 'hate town life and wiles,' adding estate to estate and buying houses and parks in a dozen counties." They made him a high sheriff, he intended to buy a title, and he gave a set of gold communion plate to St. Paul's Cathedral. "Every peer has his price," he used to say.

Then his wit failed, his luck changed, the temper of the public became more critical, and the dupes who once flocked to him begging him to invest their money now had to be sought by him. But his bankruptcies did not deter him from seeking, finding and plucking new victims, and in all the 30 years of his career he never until now has come under the ban of the law but once. Ten years ago he was found guilty of stripping a credulous youth of his wealth by false pretences and was sentenced to a year's imprisonment. Hooley's present sentence is the penalty for his fraud in connection with the Jubilee Cotton Mill in Lancashire. The inflation scheme was the same used in the Dunlop tyre a quarter of a century before. He sold shares first on the promise of big dividends and then by the deception that big dividends had been earned and paid. With no accounts on their tables the directors calmly declared a dividend at one time of 33.13 per cent. While the 1919 boom lasted the stock soared, then it slumped. Shares that in 1920 were quoted at $5 are now high at 5 cents.—Ex.

"Cotton's Patch"

LOCATED AT CASINO THEATRE.

If the couple that "A little non-sense now and then is relished by the wisest men" be true to form, then St. John's is one of the wisest cities in North America, for thousands of both sexes packed the spacious Casino Theatre last night to witness the presentation of that altogether indescribable and humorous burlesque opera, "Cotton's Patch," dramatised by the veteran artist, Mr. J. Burke. The creation was wonderful. Not a dull moment, not a dry eye—laughter producing the lachrymal flow. The performers in the most original and comic local adaption of a current phrase, had previously made their debut at St. Joseph's Hall and, therefore, coming from the East were all the more welcome. It is doubtful however if their original performance was up to last night's mark. Their audience could not have been for hundreds were disappointed in not being able to secure seats at the Casino, and were reluctantly obliged to turn away. As it was every bit of available accommodation in the Theatre was utilized, and not one person present but enjoyed to the utmost the vaudeville, songs, dances, and other varieties, particularly the satirical exhibition of Miss Miss Kennedy, which was a revelation of that art as exemplified in her turn. The play itself is the thing and the dialogue is most amusing. Salles of wit pervade every sentence, and at times it was impossible to hear a word because of the roars of laughter and applause of the audience. The veteran, Mr. J. Burke was given a tremendous ovation when he made his appearance as Larry Shute, and his singing once more captured the hearts of the audience. "Cotton's Patch" is too good to keep in Newfoundland, for assuredly it would create a run in any theatre on this side of the Atlantic. As all the players have already received mention, it is not necessary to repeat all that has been said in their praise. If you want to laugh, buy a ticket at the Casino Theatre tonight, and you will discover the exact position of "Cotton's Patch."

Concert at Kelligrews.

On Tuesday evening, last, 9th inst., the people of Kelligrews and neighboring settlements were afforded the opportunity to witness one of the best concerted entertainments staged there for some considerable time. The programme was very suitably arranged and the participants under the capable direction of the teacher Miss Power, performed their respective parts in a highly creditable manner. Some excellent vocal talent was displayed by Miss Lottie Tilley and Mr. Alex. Snow, supplementing incalculably to the success of the evening. "Sandy" is particularly good in his comic selections, and on this occasion he was right up to the minute. Miss Nellie Gardner is also to be commended for the proficient manner in which she performed the duties devolving upon her in the role of organist. The affair was well patronized, the building being filled to its utmost capacity. Incidentally, the results were better than any ventured to anticipate. The programme terminated with the singing of the National Anthem, after which dancing was indulged in until the wee sma' hours of the morning. Aggregately, the event was an unqualified success. Miss Power and the troupe are deserving of congratulations.—B.S.H. Upper Gutties, May 13, '22.

What Does Your Roof Cost, Per Season, Per Year?

THERE'S a revelation awaiting any one who figures up his roofing expenses—per season, per year! Dominion statistics show roof upkeep to be abnormally high. You, as one of the 'per capita,' are overpaying; wasting your money on unnecessary roofing repairs.

NOLEAK—The Perfect Roof Covering has, in every case, lowered these ultra-high upkeep figures—and, incidentally, the first cost of roof laying. Laid on with a trowel, calling for no experienced labor, NOLEAK offers the most positive roof protection to-day!

Let us show you samples and quote you specific instances of NOLEAK Positive Protection.

SIDE TALKS. By Ruth Cameron.

MR. S. WILL THINK IT QUEER.

It really is terrific when you stop to think of it how much our lives are influenced by what other people think of our ways of living, or even by what we think they think. If it were the people we love and want to please, that would not be so strange, but often it is the people we don't love at all and don't have the least desire to make happy who hold this strange power over us. I often meditate on this subject when I find myself troubled that "Mrs. S. will think it queer" or "Mrs. I. will wonder" and so on, and the other day I read a story that was a wonderful example of this influence—and incidentally of what I call a cracking good story.

A Single Sentence Influences. I wonder if you read it, too. An elderly couple have inherited some money. They are on their way home from the lawyer's office and considering what they shall do and their first plan is to get rid of M., a little orphan girl whom they had taken from an institution and trained as a maid. M. is very capable and efficient but because of her own sweetness of disposition and their natural friendliness they have let her become almost like a member of the family instead of a maid. And (mark this well) only a week ago Mrs. Nelson said, "I wonder you allow that girl to join in the conversation unasked. If she was a servant of mine I wouldn't like it."

It seems to me that all that follows flows out of that sentence. You can just see Mrs. Crane's mind going back to it when she plans to get rid of the adorable little M., and have "two smart servants, wearing caps and starched aprons," take her place. Won't Mrs. Nelson be surprised when the respectful parlor maid lets her in the front door, she is thinking.

The Ending. I needn't tell you the denouement of the tale. You can probably work it out for yourself or better still, find it in one of the current magazines and read it. But isn't it true to life, the way that sentence rankles and makes Mrs. Crane blind to the adorable qualities of her little maid and friend, ready to do a cruel thing, insensitive to feelings of which she would naturally have been tender. Sometimes it is things we think people think, things they have never said at all that influence or annoy us.

I once knew a young, married woman who made herself perfectly wretched because she thought her sister-in-law thought that she ought not to have urged her husband to buy their new house. As a matter of fact the sister-in-law never thought anything about the matter at all—at least if one could tell by what she said.

Why Should She care? But supposing she had. Either it was right to have bought that house or it was not. The woman and her husband were in a position to judge that matter better than anyone. What difference should it make to the wife what her sister-in-law, whom she cordially disliked, thought. Of course one is foolish not to let what others really do think have any influence on one's judgments. Other people have a different point of view on our affairs and that has its value. But on the other hand it is foolish to let other people's viewpoints have undue influence. The balance between the two extremes is beautifully expressed in Kipling's "If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you But make allowance for their doubting, too."

Massaged Heart.

Wonderful efforts to revive a woman whose heart stopped beating during an operation were described at the Inquest at Park Royal Hospital on Lillian Lane, aged thirty-one a domestic servant. It was stated that Lane suffered from a goitre, and an operation was performed. The operation was nearly finished when she stopped breathing. Injections were given, and her cardiac massage—an operation performed by opening the chest and massaging the heart—was resorted to, but without success. The coroner said it was clear that everything possible had been done to save the woman's life, and returned a verdict of "Death by misadventure."

Legislative Council. "Revenge of Tarzan" at the Crescent.

MONDAY, May 15. The House opened at 4 p.m. when the following bills passed second reading:

"An Act respecting War Pensions." "An Act further to amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes entitled 'Of the Customs.'" "An Act to amend Chapter 35 of the Consolidated Statutes entitled 'Of the Postal and Telegraph Service.'" When the leader of the Government moved the second reading of the Bill relating to Customs Bonds, Sir P. T. McGrath took occasion to remark that the movement to abolish this accommodation was desirable, but it was regrettable that the step had not been taken several years ago when business men were in a better position to stand the wrench. Hon. R. K. Bishop (Gov.) said he could not see any justifiable reason for the step. As the bonds were preferential he did not believe the Government would lose anything on the outstanding amounts. The discontinuing of the practice of taking bonds, he said, was an unnecessary hampering of trade, as he could not see any specific reason for the Government's action. He asked to have a statement showing the loss sustained by the Customs during the past ten years owing to duty bonds. Hon. F. McNamara, supporting the remarks made by Sir Patrick McGrath, said he knew that the privilege of Customs Bonds had been flagrantly abused, and in this particular he mentioned dealers in tobacco and sugar. The practice was unfair to many firms, inasmuch that taking advantage of the Bonds the importers would sell at cost or below upon arrival of the goods and the money so obtained was diverted to other enterprises. Mr. McNamara, in conclusion said that in all parts of the world duties were payable in gold, and a like system should prevail here. Hon. George Shea in moving the Bill to Committee, said that the matter of the abolition of the Bonds was brought to a head because it had been learned that the concessions had been grossly abused as was pointed out by Hon. Mr. McNamara. Several bills were given a first reading, after which the House adjourned until Wednesday next at 4 p.m.

Jewelry That Betrayed Convict.

Sing Sing attendants had to use a file to remove the ear rings from Pasquale Fassano in compliance with the prison rules taboos all jewelry. Fassano, who received a sentence of 20 years in Queens county for shooting his brother-in-law, Anthony Branca, in 1907, was found in Chicago a few weeks ago. The ear rings he wore at the time of the shooting, he had been unable to remove and they led to his identification. When the 55-year-old convict was asked to hand over his earrings he replied: "They won't come off." He was sent inside the prison with instructions to have them filed off. They will be kept in the prison office until Fassano's release. The crime for which Fassano was sentenced occurred in Long Island City.

Quit for 10 Days Your old methods of teeth cleaning

See what this new way does. Watch your teeth whiten—note how clean they feel. Millions have learned in this way how much film removal means. It is something that you should know. You must fight film. Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. It clings to the teeth unless you combat it, gets between the teeth and stays. It forms a dingy coat which dims the luster of the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film. And, despite this daily brushing, very few escape them. The old brushing methods do not effectively fight film. Pepsodent, with every use, brings five desired effects. It attacks the film in two efficient ways. It keeps teeth highly polished. It stimulates the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That to digest the starch deposits which cling to teeth and often form acid. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay. Modern authorities regard these effects as essential aids to Nature, in view of the average diet. To bring these effects twice daily means such protection as you have not known before. The results can be seen and felt. They are delightful, and this 10-day test will bring them 20 times. Send the coupon for it. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects, and the book we send you will tell you what they mean. Do this now in justice to yourself. Learn how much this new-day method means to you and yours.

Pepsodent REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. The New-Day Dentifrice. A scientific film combant, combined with two other modern requisites. Now advised for daily use by leading dentists everywhere. Supplied by druggists in large tubes.

Send No Money

Just mail the coupon for this 10-day test. Then watch your teeth improve.

The Kid Attracts Huge Audiences.

CHAPLIN AND COOGAN CO-PARTNERS IN BIG COMEDY. The greatest combination of comedy stars ever seen on a local screen was witnessed at the Nickel Theatre last night when Charlie Chaplin and young Jackie Coogan, appeared in the greatest comedy film ever produced. Unlike the other Chaplin pictures, "The Kid" has not only got its laughs, but also has a share of pathos which touches the very cockles of the heart. Henry G. Kelly, the popular Baritone, was warmly applauded by his splendid renditions.

ANNUAL AT HOME. Last night in the C. C. C. Hall the W. and N. C. O.'s of the C. L. B. Cadets held their annual At Home. There was a large attendance which included representatives from the C. C. C. and Highlanders. Dancing began at 9 o'clock, with a programme of 14 items. The Battalion Band under Capt. Morris furnished the music. The floor management was looked after by R. S. M. Harold Rendell and C. S. M. Bert Colton. The catering by the Ladies C. L. B. Auxiliary exceeded all similar efforts. The affair proved very enjoyable and the dance committee of which C. S. M. Andrews was chairman, and C. S. M. Best, secretary, are deserving of great praise for their efforts.

Government Encourage Schr. Races

FOR LUNENBURG ASKS FOR $5,000.
(Canadian Press)
St. John's, N. S.—When William P. Lunenburg, N. S., Parliament and requested a $5,000 to encourage sailing races on the deep sea fishing grounds of Canada and those of other countries. The question is:—The Government countenance a contest which may be the march of progress in one because in its encouraging the last stand against the elements of mechanical power? The House that two sailboats had been built in Nova Scotia during the winter in the hope that they would arrive the elimination races in the International Regatta in the International Regatta to be held off this Fall. When these regattas ceased to build fish-boats relying entirely on sail; Nova Scotia, too, most of the fishing vessels were being equipped with motor engines and propellers. It had not the prospect of entering them in international races, it is probable that no fishing vessels, mechanical power, would be built in Nova Scotia.

GOVERNMENT RECOGNITION

men who love tall spars and spreading canvas hope government will recognize international sailing races in the world by Mr. Duff. It only the friendly rivalry for supremacy between the fishing boats of the United States and interest to the fishermen of the life of the fisherman at the same time they have that these ocean races but beginning of the end for the races of the winds. They will struggle of the state-clipper, against the tramp steamer, of the fishing smacks of the North Sea the gainfully steam trawler. It is a dozen ports that once the sailing vessels to the boats now carry on their own craft equipped with motor engines, sometimes as an auxiliary and often as their sole source

Household Notes

Put a layer of halved marshmallow and shredded coconut in the bottom of a greased baking dish. Pour over this a custard, bake and serve cold. Do not throw away the light-colored suede shoes when they are soiled beyond cleaning. Stain them black with a commercial shoe dye, which costs only 25 cents. To renew taffeta ribbon, first squeeze through soda of good soap and soft water and rinse in clean water. Then dip into solution of two teaspoon of sugar in one pint of water. Press between two cloths until dry.

Makes Work Easier

But even the old fisherman, trained in sail, views the revolution which the motor engine is making in the ways of ships and the sea with scant regret for the past. Many a man who once sailed to the Grand Banks, a wanderer upon the waters for months now has a vast motor launch, and seldom spends a night away from his home. "The sailing vessels, they say all right in their way," the old fisherman grumbles, "but they are useless to look at than to sail in," for life aboard them is a hard drag. The motor boat has made work a lot easier for us fishermen. We can make for the grounds in calm or head winds. In the old days the boat fisherman had to leave port at one or two in the morning to be at the fishing grounds at dawn, and often had to beat out in a muzzler or break his heart on an ear in calm. Now if we are making tide sets we can leave harbour sure to be ready to set our gear when the tide serves." Again we can go further away from our port in a motor boat than we dared to in a sailing boat, especially when a storm was brewing, and we get thereby a larger fishing ground. And when we get our fish aboard we can get them into market in prime shape, which was a thing we couldn't gamble on in a sail boat." "The bigger vessels that go to the deep sea fishing need motor engines and a bit of propeller under their counter top. They need them for getting in and out of port, for shunting around from wharf to wharf, for running around the coast looking for bait, for picking up dories in calm and fogs, for running down a school of mackerel when they are sighted in calm, for sneaking up on a sword fish."

For fifty-one years millions of women have been using "Diamond Dyes" to add years of wear to their old, shabby waists, skirts, dresses, coats, sweaters, stockings, draperies, hangings, everything!

A Famous Battle Organizer

William Carr, Lord Beresford, who commanded the allied English, Spanish and Portuguese in the battle of Albuera (perhaps the most heroically contested of all the Peninsular battles) on May 16, 1811, was notable rather as an organizer than in command of troops. At Albuera he showed indeed, great personal intrepidity, but his management of the battle has been criticized with severity, and it was only the exceptional constancy of Cole's Fusilier Brigade that saved the Allies from a disastrous reverse. Subsequently Wellington was careful not again to leave Beresford with the chance of directing independent operations; and, although he participated in the battles of Salamanca, Toulouse and others, he was then under Wellington's immediate control. As the

Tarvia Prevents Dust; Tarvia Preserves Roads

In the United States and Canada Tarvia is the standard by which all other road-binders and preservatives are judged. Tarvia is made in three grades—"Tarvia X" for road construction, "Tarvia B" for preservation of road surface and "Tarvia K-P" for repairing roads. Both "Tarvia B" and "Tarvia K-P" have been used in St. John's Municipal works for several years. "Tarvia B" actually enters the road surface, acts as a cement and resists the tear and wear of traffic. By cementing together the dust particles "Tarvia B" prevents the formation of dust. After the application of "Tarvia B" to a road surface a thin layer of sand should be applied to take care of the excess liquid and to prevent tracking. This layer of sand will prevent horses from slipping and automobiles from skidding and will prolong the life of the road surface. Broken stone is not as satisfactory or as economical as sand for this purpose. A road after being treated with "Tarvia B" does not become muddy in rainy weather, but sheds the water and dries off quickly after the rain, leaving the road in admirable condition while untreated roads are still deep with mud. "Tarvia B" surfacing should be applied annually but only when roads are in good condition and free from surplus dust. All holes and depressions should be repaired with fine broken stone and "Tarvia K-P." When "Tarvia B" is applied by mechanical sprinker, care should be taken to have men with brooms and hand sprinklers go over the ground so that excess "Tarvia B" may be brushed out and not allowed to run waste and so that bare spots be treated and the entire road surface secured. A loose, "happy-go-lucky" application is sheer waste of time and money, "whatever is worth doing, is worth doing well."

WAITING

All my life I have been waiting for the good I hoped to reap; in the summer dreams of skating made me mutter in my elp. And in winter's stormy waiting, always looking, for the good things just ahead, still odashing, still gazing, since time's feet were made of lead. And I missed all kinds of pleasure, missed my chance to dance and sing, while I waited for the treasure that the coming days would bring. So around the dump I hovered, waiting for the future's gold, and one morning I discovered that the years had made me old. On my forehead there are furrows, and my form is tired and galled, and the chigger comes and burrows undepath. I wish that's bald. All my hopes have lost their rating, all my rosy dreams are canned, and there's no more use in waiting, for the end is close to hand. If to-day is sweet and pleasant, if its merits make the most, for doctors, nurses, and "Tommies" alike. His publications, consisting mainly of surgical treatises, were considered of great value. In 1885 he married a daughter of the late Mr. Justice Lush. He had four daughters and two sons. After being elected at Middlesex Hospital in 1882, he gradually rose to fame as a foremost authority on the surgical treatment of cancer. He received his knighthood in 1911. In the operating theatres his skill was of great value during the war years. Appointed a Lieutenant-Colonel of the R.A.M.C.
