

HOW FOWLS GRIND THEIR FOOD.

On this subject S. Edward Todd discusses as follows:—Fowls have no teeth to grind or masticate their food, and the way they have to do with it is to pick it and swallow it whole. The kernels of grain are swallowed whole by them, and as they are surrounded by a tough pellicle or skin, the juice of the stomachs of the animals could not readily dissolve or digest it. It is this tough pellicle that is not broken. Now, if we dissect the gizzard of a fowl of any kind, we find a lot of small gravel stones, which are usually the hardest kind of flint, pebbles or sand stones. Surely here is a pocket edition of Farm Grind Mills.

Fowls swallow their food broken or not, and it enters the crop or first stomach, and remains in it until it has become softened, more or less, when a small quantity at a time, just as grain runs into a mill, is forced into the gizzard among the gravel stones. This gizzard is a strong muscular stomach, and plays night and day, when there is a grain to grind, similar to bellows, contracting and expanding, thus forcing the gravel stones into the grain and breaking it to fragments, and triturating the whole mass. After which, it is in a suitable condition to be quickly digested.—Farmer's Union.

RULES FOR HANDLING A GUN.

1. Never handle a gun unless you know how, nor unless you have a person whom you have control over, and who knows how to handle a gun. You have no right to endanger your own life, or the lives of others by handling a dangerous weapon in any other than the safest manner.

2. Always handle a gun as if it is loaded; never let it point at yourself or any one else; never point a loaded or unloaded gun at any thing unless you mean to kill it. A loaded gun is a dangerous weapon, and you mean to kill it. A loaded gun is a dangerous weapon, and you mean to kill it.

3. Always carry your gun at half cock; never with the hammer upon it. This rule is almost invariably violated by country sportsmen. For experiments demonstrated its correctness. 1. Half cock your gun; if it will pull off the old iron. 2. If it will not pull off put a cap on the end and let the hammer down. If it will not pull off, it is a sign that the hammer is loose, and if the hammer is loose, it is a sign that the hammer is loose, and if the hammer is loose, it is a sign that the hammer is loose.

4. Now half cock your gun, draw the hammer back nearly to full cock and let it fall. It will stop in the half cock notch, and no blow is given. So always carry your gun at half cock. If you are going to get a shot, half cock your gun, draw the hammer back nearly to full cock and let it fall. It will stop in the half cock notch, and no blow is given. So always carry your gun at half cock.

5. If you know of no other way of ascertaining whether a gun is loaded or not, then by putting it in your mouth and blowing, or if you feel inclined to draw the cap, retire to a safe distance and at once blow out your brains, if you have any, before you kill or maim other people by your stupidity and carelessness.—American Sportsman.

AN IRISH MURDER.—Poor down trodden Ireland says Vanity Fair has another grievance, and this time it is a real Irish one. Professor Tyndall has been appointed President of next year's meeting of the Association at Belfast, and the Mayor of Belfast, with all his back, protests at "an Englishman" being nominated as president of any meeting in Ireland. Unfortunately for the Mayor of Belfast's grievance it appears that Mr. Tyndall may be called an Irishman, as he was born in that happy land, and Irishmen may therefore admit his merits although of course they cannot be expected to allow that he is on a par in any way with Dr. Andrews of the Queen's College, or any other thoroughly Irish Professor. Of course it is very perverse of Professor Tyndall to have been born in the land of saints, and the Mayor of Belfast has a distinct grievance against his parents; but we on the other side of the Channel may at least treat the Irishman with a little more respect for war—when Home Rule is established—has been happily explained away.

A backwoodsman, with little sense of the "dram of drachma," is describing his situation as "a first-class 40 acres of land and a log house." I've got no family but my wife and a pair of scorpions. A Glasgow firm is making a couple of monster umbrellas, that altogether eclipse the famous specimens that Paul Pry loves to sport upon the stage. They are thirty-three feet in length, and sufficient to afford protection to about twenty-five people, and cost $250 each. They are made for a travelling firm in Africa, that intends to present them to two polygamous negro chiefs for family umbrellas.

CURIOSITIES IN NATURAL HISTORY.—The sea grasshopper and locust jump two hundred times their length in the ratio of a quarter of a mile to a man. In the migration of birds the males arrive several days in advance of the females, and birds can see through the windings of a mountain range they draw over their eyes to screen them from the sun. The bones of fish are hollow, and filled with air instead of marrow. It is said that perfectly white cats are dead. The Angora cat has one eye blue and one yellow. Black rats are used in Germany to exterminate the grey rats.

The Montreal Northern Colonization Railway Company give notice of their intention to apply for an act to empower them to bridge the Ottawa and effect a junction with other railways running into Ottawa City.

BRIGANDAGE IN SPAIN.

DISPERATE AND VIOLENT BRIGANDAGE ON THE MOUNTAINS OF PENINSULAR SPAIN. We have been favoured with the following account by a correspondent:—A violent attempt by brigands to seize and carry off an Englishman has just been made at Denia, near Valencia in Spain. It appears that a Mr. Andrew Graham, a merchant in the fruit trade, and connected with the firm of Messrs. Graham & Co., Mining Engineers, London, on the way from his warehouse to his country residence, about 6 o'clock on the evening of the 15th, was attacked by eight or nine armed brigands. Their object was evidently to carry him to the mountains and demand a ransom. In attacking Mr. Graham, however, the brigands did not know with whom they had to cope. He is a man of considerable nerve, great presence of mind and ready resource. When attacked he was driving home alone in a "tartana"—a kind of carriage peculiar to the kingdom of Valencia. The nature of the attack will be best understood by Mr. Graham's declaration before the judge, which is to the following effect:—

"On Monday evening, between 7 and 8 o'clock, I was stopped on the road about half-way between Denia and the entrance to the ranges leading to my house by six or eight or more men, armed, and I believe, masked, who presented at me from the front part of the tartana four guns on the right side and two or more on the other hand. I immediately drew my revolver and fired at the other men from my tartana, one to the left and one behind, then jumped out and ran for my life. Immediately a gun was discharged at me, and I fell. I rose, but fell again immediately, when a volley of at least 12 or 15 bullets whizzed about my head, and I lay on the ground with my head and body the first one, which wounded me on the left thigh, was fortunately charged only with shot. By this time some of the villains who followed me came up to me, I threw myself on one of them, wrestled his gun from him, and struck him on the ground with the butt end. I did ditto to two others with the same gun. I seemed then to have only one opponent, a very powerful looking man, who was aiming at me with a gun. I presented the gun at him, and we seemed both to fire at the same instant. I saw no more of him. Some of the other men were coming forward, but I began in desperation with both hands to throw stones at them from a heap fortunately beside me on the road. When I had beaten them off, I ran in the direction of Denia, calling for help at the top of my voice, but faint from loss of blood I lay down among the vines and listened to hear if the men were following me, when I heard the tartana being driven off with all speed towards Oudara. I then proceeded as best I could in the direction of D. Jose Aranda's country house, where every kindness and attention was shown me, the doctor sent for, and my wounds dressed."

As soon as the news was conveyed to Denia the authorities proceeded at once to the spot where they found a man disarmed and masked, quite dead, a horse jacket, and a good deal of blood. The pony and tartana were found near Oudara, three miles distant from Denia, and the pony covered with wounds, and with a knife or dagger made the poor animal go at its fastest, and the cushions of the tartana saturated with the blood of the wounded brigands. The dead man has not yet been recognized, nor have any of the others been heard of, though the witnesses are using every means to discover the perpetrators of the outrage.

The following additional particulars have been received with regard to the case of brigandage at Denia, in Spain:—The greatest activity and energy has been displayed by the Spanish and local authorities, and it seems that the band of brigands who attacked Mr. Graham consisted of ten or twelve men. The brigand who was killed on the spot has been identified, two of the brigands were taken alive, and several of the band have been apprehended after a hard fight with the police. In this encounter a sergeant and policeman were killed and two more severely wounded. At the time the mail left Denia the judge and fiscal of the district, with a large body of police, were on the track of the brigands, and it was expected that they would succeed in apprehending them. Mr. Graham is confined to bed, and suffers much from the gunshot wound, and, indeed, his whole body is covered with wounds and bruises, but he is not considered to be in any danger. The surgeon has extracted several of the bullets from his thigh. The affair has created the utmost excitement throughout the whole district.

All went away apparently well satisfied with the proceedings of the day.—Gazette.

KINGSTON AND PEMBROKE RAILWAY. It is evident from the tone of an article in the Pembroke Standard in reply to some remarks of a contemporary that the people of Pembroke and of the county of Renfrew are exceedingly dissatisfied with the progress of the Railway, and hold out the threat to the company "that if they fail now to fulfil their portion of the contract nothing can prevent the people of the county of Renfrew from proceeding to build the line themselves. We don't know exactly what portion of the contract has been filled by the company, or what they were expected to do that they have failed in performing. We have not heard it alleged that the company had bound itself to commence operations simultaneously at Pembroke and Kingston, but the Standard refrains from distinctly making any such charge against them. We are fully anxious at this end of the line as the people of Pembroke that the Road shall be completed at the earliest possible date, but we think unreasonable grumbling is not likely to produce that consummation. We would all rather give credit to the company and contractors for the best intentions until we know of some good reason to the contrary. The laying of the rails was commenced last night, the fish plates having arrived in the afternoon in one of Montreal Transportation Company's trucks. There is a large quantity of iron coming up and the work will be pushed vigorously. The fall is likely to be a favorable one for operations, and it is fully expected that a portion will be in running order before the winter sets in.—News.
