POETRY

When Mother Looks.
I remember such a lot of things
That happened long ago.
When me and Jim was six years old,
And now we're ten or so.
But those that I remember best—
The ones I most can see—
Are the things that used to happen
When mother looked at me.

One time in church when me and Jim
Was nickerin' out loud—
The minister was prayin',
And the people's heads was bowed—
We had the biggest kind of joke
About the bumble-bee,
But things got quiet rather quick
When mother looked at us.

And then there's sometimes when I think
I've had such lots of fun
A-go'in' in swimmin' with the boys
Down there by Jones's run;
But when I get back home again
Just 'bout in time for tea—
There's a kind of different feeling comes
When mother looks at me.

That time when I was awful sick
An' the doctor shook his head,
An' every time pa came around
His eyes was wet and red,
I member her hands on my face,
How soft they used to be—
Somehow the pain seemed easier
When mother looked at me.

It's funny how it makes me feel—
I ain't afraid of her—
She's about the nicest person
You'd find most anywhere;
But the queerest sort of feelin',
As queer as queer can be,
Makes everything seem different
When mother looks at me.

Sweet Violet.

All in an instant these thoughts rushed over him, bent with a silent prayer to God for help in this hour of deadly peril to his darling.

It seemed to him afterward that surely Heaven, in its divine pity, had lent him wings, or he never could have cleared so quickly the intervening space between him and Violet.

But joy! joy! his outstretched hands clutched the hem of her white robes, and he made a fierce spring, drawing her with him back from the arms of death. In the rapidity of the recoil both fell upon the soft grass.

"Saved! saved!" the young man almost shouted in his delirious joy, and he sprang quickly erect, stripping of his coat to wrap it about Violet's thinly clad and shivering form.

He raised the golden head upon his arm, cuddling the bare little feet tenderly against his body to protect them from the chilly air, and murmured, tenderly, anxiously:

"Violet! Sweet Violet!"

The large, blue eyes of the poor girl stared wide open, and looked up at him in wild reproach.

"Ah, Cecil! I cruel Cecil! you should have let me die!" she moaned, piteously. "You are false to me, and I cannot bear my life!"

Cecil believed that the complaint arose from her having been bending down, he kissed her pale lips with adoring love, then whispered:

"This is only a fancy of your sickness, my own little darling! I love you better than life itself, and I have never been false to you even in the most secret thought. Why, I have been almost crazed over your sickness! Has not Amber told you so? I waited here each night, with food impatience for her to come, and tell me how you were getting on?"

Sweet Violet turned herself feebly on his arm and scanned his earnest face with eager, questioning blue eyes, and his heart ached to feel how light and frail her form had grown with the cruel sickness. With a choking sob in her throat, she cried:

"Amber told me to-night that you loved me no longer—that your heart had turned to her again! Oh, Cecil, it almost killed me to hear that you were false and fickle. When Amber left me alone in the room, I stole away to end my sorrows in the river, here by the bending willows, where you first said you loved me."

He wondered if Amber had indeed been so false and deceitful as Violet declared, and, holding her tightly in his arms, as though to defend her from death itself, he told her that she had been wickedly deceived, that Amber was false and perjured.

"She knows well how fondly I love you," he cried, indignantly. "I told her of my love and anxiety every evening when she came to bring me news of you, pretending to be my sincere friend. But I will never trust her again. As for you, my own sweet love, I must take you back to the house again; but before we go, you must tell me that you doubt me no longer—that you will never lose faith in your own true love again. Let me put this little ring on your finger, precious. It is an opal, and is gifted with the power to show whether plighted lovers keep their faith. If false, the gem will grow dull and lifeless, its brightness all gone; but, if true, it will glow with the fiery hues of the furnace. Wear it always, my darling, and let it be the test of my love till the happy day that unites us forever."

"Alas," she sighed, "do you not know, dear Cecil, that my grandfather has sworn I shall wed another?"

He kissed the little hand on which he had placed the ring, and answered, fondly:

"Yes; Amber Laurens told me that,

Cecil's arms; he could only stare at him in boundless amazement.

Amber was almost choking with rage.

"So the girl was about to drown herself? I wish she had succeeded, I do, from my heart," she thought, bitterly.

But assuming a charming smile, she advanced into the group and said, gently:

"Dear Cecil, do not blame poor grandpa, for, really, I am the only one at fault. I was staying with Violet, and the poor feverish girl asked me for a drink of ice-water, I went down the hall to get it, and while I was out she stole away. That is all."

She told the tale complacently, not dreaming that the sick girl had betrayed her; but the next moment she shrank and trembled, for Cecil turned on her with seething reproaching.

"No, that is not all, Miss Laurens; for, before you left poor Violet, you told her some cruel falsehoods—that I was false to my love for her, and had offered my heart to you. It was that which drove my poor girl frantic, and sent her to end her sweet life in the river. But, thank Heaven, I was at hand and snatched her back, even as she made the fatal leap. I will never forgive you, Miss Laurens, for your wickedness."

She covered beneath his lightning glance of scorn, and Judge Camden, beginning to recover his wits, advanced and took Violet, saying, with cool courtesy:

"I am deeply grateful to you for saving Violet's life, and trust I may be able to repay the debt some future day."

To his wrath and amazement, Cecil replied, with a manly, respectful air:

"Violet and I are deeply in love with each other, Judge Camden, and I ask you to give her to me as my cherished wife!"

Never had the stern old man, striding angrily away with Violet.

CHAPTER VI.

They carried Violet back to her bed, and Mrs. Shirley did everything possible to counteract the effects of her terrible excitement and exposure.

As soon as Cecil's back was turned, Amber vehemently declared her innocence of his charges, vowing that Violet had fancied it all in her delirium.

No one contradicted her, for in their alarm over Violet, they scarcely listened to her words.

But that brief interview with Cecil, and the sweet assurance of his fidelity, had been more potent for good in Violet's case than medicine. She yielded meekly to all Mrs. Shirley's ministrations, and at last sank into a sweet and saving sleep that lasted until morning.

And, in spite of Amber's secret prayers that she would die, the invalid began to convalesce slowly but surely, so that by the middle of September she could sit by the window in her easy chair, and look out at the winding river and the wooded hills, whose dark green began to change to the crimson and gold of autumn.

Amber had been very shy of the sick-room after that night, when Cecil had foiled her clever schemes, but one bright morning she came into the room, determined to brave it out.

Violet was in her chair at the open window, and the sunshine came into the pretty blue and white room and beamed lovingly on its fair, golden-haired mistress in her soft, white cashmere wrapper, with its cascades of misty lace.

It did not touch Amber's cruel heart in the least to see how frail and flower-like her rival looked. She was inwardly sorry that she had not died.

"Good-morning, Violet," she said, coolly, sinking into a chair. "So you are in your right mind again, and can realize what a cruel wrong you did me that night?"

"Wrong!" echoed Violet, in surprise.

"Yes, in what you told Cecil Grant about me. I did not say he was false to you. You either dreamed it all, or imagined it in your delirium, for you were always crying out that Cecil loved Amber best, and that you did not want to live."

Judge Camden was so dazed that he made no move to take Violet from net want to live."

Royal makes the food pure, wholesome and delicious.

"I do not remember any such fancy," Violet answered, with incredulous blue eyes.

"Of course not, for people never remember the ravings of fever. But you fancied it all, Violet, for I never mentioned Cecil to you that night; and you did me a cruel wrong in telling Cecil that I did. He was my friend before, but you turned him against me by your cruel story."

Her assurance staggered Violet's belief in her own memory.

She had been so ill, she had suffered so much, that her brain was still a little dazed and uncertain. Was it possible she had dreamed it all—that Amber was not cruel and wicked, as she seemed?

Amber saw the doubt in the sweet, lovely face, and hastened to add:

"You see now that you were wrong, Violet."

"Was I, Amber? Then I am very, very sorry. Will you forgive me?"

Willingly, child; for no one can be angry with a sick person's vagaries," Amber answered, with a condescending air.

"When I see Cecil again, I will tell him that perhaps I was wrong in my accusation against you, Amber, for I was so ill and my mind so dazed that perhaps I distorted the truth."

"Alas, Violet, I at you will never see Cecil again, for grandpa swears you shall not, and is hurrying up the preparation for your marriage with the man he has chosen for you."

"To her chagrin, Violet answered, firmly:

"Grandpa is only wasting his time. I will never marry any man but my own dear Cecil."

"Ay, Violet, how can you help yourself? Grandpa's will is law to us. We must obey him, for we owe him everything!" exclaimed Amber, craftily, advising the obedience she would not have yielded herself.

But Violet's pale cheeks warmed rosily, and a flash of resentment brightened her languid eyes as she cried:

"I owe grandpa obedience in everything but the sacrifice of my whole life, Amber. Why, it would be a wicked sin to marry another man, with my heart full of Cecil."

Women of Every Age

WHO SUFFER FROM WEAKNESS, NERVOUSNESS AND DYSPEPSIA.

Should Use Paine's Celery Compound.

It is Nature's True Medicine for all Suffering Women.

AVOID WORTHLESS SUBSTITUTES. Paine's Celery Compound is Your Only Hope.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO., GENTLEMEN:—I feel it my duty to let the public know what Paine's Celery Compound did for me, and that it will be a benefit to other sufferers.

I was much reduced in flesh and in a thoroughly broken-down condition, resulting from dyspepsia and nervousness. I was recommended to try the Compound; I did so, and three bottles have made me a different woman.

Previous to taking your Compound I had taken medicine from some of the best doctors in the city, but with no good results. Therefore I have every reason to be thankful for Paine's Celery Compound, and take great pleasure in recommending it to others.

Yours truly,
Mrs. M. THOMPSON,

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 24, 1898.

Editorial Notes.

One of our lady readers has suggested that in view of the laudable interest manifested of late by our citizens in the care of the cemeteries of the town, that a little more regard for the comfort of the living might reasonably be expected.

Wolfville needs a public hall. At present there is no satisfactory accommodation for public meetings of any kind. True there are several small halls, but they are either on the second or third floor and not capable of accommodating a large number.

There is a very interesting collection of Indian relics of the Stone Age. They consist chiefly of arrow and spear heads of quartz and agate, cutting implements with ground edge, and a grooved axe.

The tourist season is now drawing very near and it behooves all our people to put forth every effort to make the town present a neat and attractive appearance. We are glad to see Main street getting a clearing up this week and hope the work will be continued on the other streets of the town.

The Sin of the County Council.

After the appearance of last week's issue of the Kentville Western Chronicle, the County Council of Kings must certainly feel very much like crawling into its shell—we are speaking wholly figuratively just now and by no means to be taken too literally.

It is possible and yet we are greatly mistaken if the Provincial Government is open to conviction in the same manner and to the same extent as our County Council.

To one having such delicate scruples in regard to political corruption as the probable author of the above quotation is known to possess anything so nearly approaching the acceptance of a bribe as the recent action of the Council must appear revolting and shocking in the extreme.

Be this as it may, we fail to see how the County Council performed such an iniquitous office when they accepted Wolfville's offer for the location of the Court House and Gaol. If turning into financial account for the benefit of the ratepayers of the county, an advantage which is in the hands of the ratepayers to bestow where they please, it is an offense; if an attempt of a representative to save money for his constituents is a crime, these are a species of sin which the people of the county are not overly troubled with, and which they are well-entitled enough to appreciate.

A Fee from Within.

Our contemporary the Kentville Western Chronicle in speaking of the agitation on foot to bring the Agricultural College to this county, delivers itself as follows: "As it is, we stand a slim chance of getting the school at all, but if we do it will be simply and solely because we have natural qualifications for supporting such a school, in excess of those offered by any other site."

In other words it says that the Government will be influenced in selecting a site for the new Agricultural building entirely by the natural qualifications of the different localities, and that in consequence Kings county stands a slim chance of getting the school. It will be readily seen that no matter how little influence our contemporary may possess as a newspaper, the fact of its being a Kings county newspaper and giving expression to such views will be adapted to greatly prejudice the cause of the county in its agitation for the new Agricultural College.

While in a case like this we would ex-post the county papers to attempt to strengthen rather than weaken the hands of those who are working to obtain a great advantage for the municipality, not one word could be said against the intimations of the Chronicle were they but true, but as they are grossly and patently false they are altogether inexcusable.

Even to the jaundiced eyes of the Western Chronicle writer it must be clear that as far as natural qualifications for the seat of the Agricultural School is concerned Kings is infinitely superior to any other part of the province, and the wonder is that it was not originally chosen for the seat of the institution. In no other part of the province could the agricultural student meet with such extensive and varied illustrations of successful farming. In no other locality could the advantages arising from the amalgamation of the Agricultural and Horticultural Schools be better brought about.

The people of Kings county can perhaps account for this attitude of our contemporary, but to excuse it is a somewhat more difficult task.

Interesting Relics.

his store a very interesting collection of Indian relics of the Stone Age. They consist chiefly of arrow and spear heads of quartz and agate, cutting implements with ground edge, and a grooved axe. The stone is Blomidon material and has been chipped and flaked into shape. The arrow heads are from one half to two and a half inches long. The spear heads range to nearly four inches in length. The grooved axe is ten inches long. The collection also contains fragments of Indian pottery showing primitive attempts at ornamentation. There are also pieces of copper, red ochre and beaver teeth. This collection came from the shores of Minas Basin, where Kitchen Middles or Indian Villages and encampments are known to have existed. The location is determined by the accumulation of heaps of clam-shells, fragments of bone and quantities of stone, consisting of arrow and spear heads, and such materials would belong to the campsite of the Pre-European inhabitants of America. The first white men who visited these shores found the Micmacs or Souriquois, as they were the first known. These natives, with their villages, in different parts of the province, made use of stone implements such as composite Mr Herbin's valuable collections.

Blomidon Budget.

On Sunday June 19, Rev. Holmes Davison, Advent minister, preached here. His sermon was instructive and well listened to.

Since last writing, Mr Harris Winter, and family, of Lower Blomidon, have moved into the new house, the property of the Rev. over the store at the foot of Mill Creek Hill.

Mr Nathan Loomers, recently of Canine, is the proprietor of the new store at the Cape. He has been busy for some time past stocking the store and moving his furniture down there.

Blomidon school had a visit lately from one of its former teachers, Mrs T. L. Newcomb, of Port Williams. Mrs Newcomb, formerly Miss Beattie, taught here two years ago and was considered a very successful teacher. During her visit in Blomidon Mrs Newcomb was the guest of Mrs George DeWitt.

The schoolers belonging here have not been doing much lately. The Blackbird is at Windsor with potatoes from a firm in Canine. The Lindt has been fishing off Isle au Haut for a few days. Fishing is reported very good down the Bay this season. Considerable fishing has been done in the Basin this season, but the catch has been very variable. On the Queen's Birthday, over a dozen craft were anchored off the Cape, fishing. One boat with four persons in it took over one hundred fish, one young lady hauling in thirty-five.

Last Monday evening the young people of Blomidon and Lower Blomidon held a clam party on the beach at Huson's Point. Over a hundred of clams were prepared, and the company did honour to the repast, notably the young men. After the clams were disposed of games were played on the beach by the light of a huge bon-fire. At an early hour the company broke up, well pleased with their clam frolic.

A Good Dictionary for Three Cents.

A dictionary containing the definitions of 10,000 of the most useful and important words in the English language is published by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. While it contains some advertising, it is a complete dictionary, concise and correct.

In compiling this book care has been taken to omit none of those common words whose spelling or exact use occasions at times a momentary difficulty, even to well educated people. The main aim has been to give as much useful information as possible in a limited space. With this in view, where nouns, adjectives and verbs are all obviously connected in meaning, usually only one has been inserted. The volume will thus be found to contain the meaning of very many more words than it professes to explain.

To those who already have a dictionary, this book will commend itself because it is compact, light and convenient; to those who have no dictionary whatever, it will be invaluable. One may be secured by writing to the above concern mentioning this paper, and enclosing a three-cent stamp.

We gladly welcome to our table the Cities and Country, published at Toronto in the interest of social, moral and economical reform. It is a neatly printed and cleverly edited little journal and we wish it a long and prosperous career.

A Wonderful Discovery.

About the middle of April there appeared in The Halifax Evening Mail a description of the wonderful discovery and invention of Liquid Air, and spoke of the wonderful things it was doing in New York, and of it being a wonderful medicine, and went on to say that it was even more wonderful than OZONE. This article goes to prove the value of OZONE, and also that OZONE has been retained in solution.

OZONE

OZONE is a wonderful remedy for throwing off disease and building up the system. Try it and see if it is not so. For sale at

Pastor Simpson had one of his legs broken below the knees by a kick from his horse last Friday.

Pastors Morgan and Young filled Mr Simpson's appointments on Sunday. Mr George filled pastor Glendinning's appointments.

Mrs A. J. McLeod visited her sister, Mrs E. C. Phinney, in Melvern Square last week. This week she is calling on friends in Weston.

Mr Sidney Bridge and wife returned to their home in Malden, Mass., on Wednesday. His father, Mr William Bridge went with them.

Our genial post master, T. H. Morse, Esq., is now at work building near the P. O. for himself a feed and flour store-house.

Blomidon Day as a public school holiday is a long step in the right direction. Dominion Day, 1st July, celebration promises to be a grand affair. The location on the "Norwood plain," the "rye field" of the past 100 years, adjoining on the east Henry Shaw's famous apple and plum orchards; on the south, the "10 acre" cranberry meadow of Capt. Henry Havelock Norwood, formerly of Arctic fame, and now of the Klondyke; on the west, the Berwick country and beautifully tilled and irrigated orchards of C. H. Norwood, Esq., and north the Cornwalls river and beautiful intervals meadow. And in close proximity to the beautiful Shaw Road farms of far famed John Shaw, Esq., and his descendants, and orchards of H. Shaw, Wm. A. Benjamin & Son, Messrs I. J. W. C. C., and W. M. Shaw, and the Foster and Steadman farms. The wheat and horse tracks are all that could be desired. The food arrangements also will be ample.

These grounds being about midway between the villages of Waterville and Berwick will doubtless at no distant day be the centre of a beautiful villa of retired gentlemen and seekers of "pineland" homes.

When this takes place the union of these two beautiful towns will be complete.

Mr Rose, of the class of '98 at Acadia, takes pastor Simpson's place at Berwick, while he is laid by with a broken leg, in place of his contemplated visit to St. P. E. I. home of his boyhood.

Mr Simpson, under the skilful treatment of Dr. March, is as comfortable as possible under the circumstances.

Rev. J. E. Goucher will fill pastor Simpson's appointments next Sunday.

HOOP PRINTS.

"Longfellow," the Central House paper, is entered in the 3 minute class at Bridgetown for July 1st.

A big celebration is being prepared for at Bridgetown on Dominion Day and quite a turnout may be expected from this county. The Bridgetown folk never do things by halves and a great day of amusements may be expected.

Mr Fred W. Steadman, of Kentville, has purchased from M. D. Messenger his very promising young horse "Torbrook," a foal of 1895. Sired by Myrtleton by Red Wilkes, dam by Nutwood, 2nd dam by George Wilkes. Royal breeding, a royal young horse, of splendid size, unsurpassed gait and promise. Mr Steadman is to be congratulated, and Kings county ought to feel glad that so enterprising a gentleman is in their midst.

The prospects for a great fruit crop in the Valley are not as encouraging as they were a few days ago when the orchards were a mass of bloom. From all quarters of the Valley an unusually heavy dropping of the buds has been reported, and it is feared that the fruit crop, instead of being a large one, will hardly equal the average, even if favorable conditions prevail for ripening and harvesting.

Mr C. A. Patquin has removed the dwelling he recently purchased from Mr R. W. Storr, on Gasperau avenue, to a site some distance farther south on the same street. It is occupied by Mr William Henderson.

YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Brought About by a Fall in Which the Back Was Severely Injured—The Pain at Times Almost Unbearable.

Mr Geo. F. Everett, a highly respected and well known farmer of Four Falls, Victoria Co., N. B., makes the following statement:—"Some years ago while working in a barn I lost my balance and fell from a beam, badly injuring my back. For years I suffered with all I could to remove it, but in vain. I at last gave up hopes and stopped doctoring. My back had got so bad that when I would stoop over it was almost impossible to straighten up again. When I would move with a creak for some little time without stopping it would pain me so that it seemed as if I could scarcely endure it, and I would lean on the handle of my scythe in order to get ease and straighten up. At other times I would be laid up entirely. After some years of suffering I was advised to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try one box. Before I had finished it I saw the pills were helping me. I bought six boxes more and the seven boxes completely cured me. It is three years since I took them and my back has not troubled me since. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an invaluable medicine and I highly recommend them to any person suffering likewise. I consider that if I had paid $10 a box for them, they would be a cheap medicine.

Rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, painful paralysis, locomotor ataxia, nervous headache, nervous prostration, and diseases depending upon humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc., all disappear before a fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They give a healthy glow to pale and sallow complexions. Sold by all dealers and post paid at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Do not be persuaded to take some substitute.

From Cab to Chair.

Chauncey M. Dewey lately visited the mechanical department of Cornell University. He found at the head of it Professor Morris. The latter chimed him as an old acquaintance.

"How is that?" said Mr Dewey. "I used to work for the New York Central railroad," was the professor's answer.

"Indeed! In what department?" "Oh, just in the ranks."

"How did you get here?" asked Mr Dewey.

"I was first a fireman on an engine. That was a tough job, but it led up to the position of engineer. When I became an engineer, I made up my mind to get an education. I studied at night and fitted myself for Union College, running all the time with my locomotive. I procured books and attended as far as possible the lectures and recitations. I kept up with my class and on the day of graduation I left my locomotive, washed up, put on the gown and cap, delivered my thesis, and received my diploma, put the gown and cap in the closet, put on my working shirt, got on my engine and made my usual run that day."

"Then," said Dewey, "I knew how he became Professor Morris." "That spirit will cause a man to rise in any calling. It is ambition, but it is ambition wisely directed, seeking to make one's self fitted for higher work. When this is accomplished a opportunity for higher work is sure to come."—Buffalo News.

Art for Art's Sake.

It is a very difficult thing to obtain admittance to the beautiful residence of Rosa Banheur. Most of the information printed concerning the talented artist is supplied by her friends, as strangers seldom get a chance of seeing her at work. One of her friends has recently explained how it is that there are not more of her pictures on the market. Rosa Banheur works very hard in spite of her 72 years. All round—on the window frames, the little tables and the walls—are fresh studies. She literally puts a masterpiece upon most things, not to sell and make money, but because she must work and try to do something better than she has done before.

At one end of her studio is an unfinished picture, a magnificent piece of work. It has been in an unfinished condition for 20 years, yet she has a standing offer of 400,000 francs for it when completed.

"I do not want the money," she says. "I prefer to work for myself. I want money to get my work done. I do a picture or two in order to keep things going and then continue in my own way."

The artist, as most people know, prefers to work in male attire.—Strand Magazine.

FOR HOME WORK

Only the Best Goods Give Satisfaction. Diamond Dyes, the World's Leaders, Do the Best Work.

When you take you must use the best brand of baking powder; when making a jelly or custard pudding you must make use of the best flavoring extracts; when you sew it is economy to use the best sewing cotton; when you have home dyeing to do you should also bear in mind that your success and the safety of your material and garments depend upon the brand of dye you employ.

When the Diamond Dyes are used you achieve marvelous successes. Your old faded and dingy looking goods after a bath in the Diamond Dyes are made as good as new. The colors are always brilliant, fast, rich and full.

If you unfortunately made use of some one of the many weak, muddy and worthless dyes sold by some dealers for the sake of low profit—well, you must be prepared for cruel disappointments and losses. The Diamond Dyes save time and money, and are solid guarantees of success and good work.

Temperance Rally. Delegates to Conference Speak on the Approaching Plebiscite. (Special to the Halifax Herald).

TRURO, June 15.—The temperance public meeting held in the church this evening opened with the singing of the hymn, "The Lord's Prayer," after which the chairman introduced the speakers of the evening whom he announced as "good men and true."

The first speaker was Rev. A. Hockin, who has preached for five years in Halifax city. "If the man must act the fool for the Lord's sake," he was willing to speak, much against his wishes.

He was glad that the rumor that the Duke of Leeds was to be next governor-general of Canada was without foundation, on account of his connection with and brought in the temperance committee of the conference will favor the appointment of Lord Walsley to this high office with great enthusiasm on the strength of his having proved himself a temperance man in his great Sudan expedition.

"It must make my brother to offend etc.," is the testator's character given in the scriptures. Robinson Crusoe may have used intoxicating liquor on his lonely island and not offended his brother, but the speaker could not put a beer barrel in his cellar without doing his brother evil. Fermented wine has got to be banished from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

GIVING FERMENTED WINE TO A REFORMED DRUNKARD like giving blood to a tiger. Ministers should not accept rum money for church purposes. Those in the liquor traffic have got to be banished from the church. Not for the sake of banishing the persons themselves, but in order to get clear of the liquor in the church. The duty of the church is "totalism for the individual and prohibition for the state."

Rev. B. C. Borden, principal of Mount Allison University, said there is now used in Canada 314 gallons of intoxicants per day. It is the work of the church to work against this. So long as the gin mill continues, so long will there be an incessant crop of drunkards. We have reached a crisis in the temperance cause by the forthcoming plebiscite.

Our action on it will mean much for the next 20 years. We must take the issue as it is. Our politicians are not men built on lines to give plebiscite without a vote.

We must create a temperance vote that will carry the day. We have got to vote against us—no many stand for party against principle.

The independent temperance vote must be made so strong that any party will cater to it.

The claim that the loss of liquor revenue if prohibition is granted must be made up by direct taxation is not a great evil. Direct taxation is not so great an evil as the present system of taxation is.

A GOOD RATHER THAN AS AN EVIL. There is truth in the saying, "you cannot make a good man by law." But by law you can make it harder for a man to be bad. A good law is an educator. Let us place the law and then bring the men up to the standard. If we can, by a prohibitory liquor law, hold up a moral standard, let us have it. The time is coming when the liquor law will be a thing of the past. It is only a case of who can hold out the longer—the liquor or temperance element. We want no license laws. The selling of liquor must be made a crime—to subvert it effectually.

In the absence of Dr. Woodbury, of Halifax, Rev. William Dobson was the next speaker. In his remarks he said you must come to the conclusion that the liquor traffic is wrong in the nature of things before you can bring on the plebiscite, and I think you must place it as wrong, as it antagonizes the physical nature of things and is out of every ecological law, and throws the man out of harmony with the universe.

The Sabbath rightly used is the greatest institution for learning and culture and soul growth the world has ever known. There is need of special guarding against anything that tends to weaken the effect of the Sabbath law. To break down this safeguard is to open the door for the oppression of the poor, and of all the working-classes. It is a terrible fate to be compelled to work seven days each week, with no chance for better things, for home, for rest, for culture, for religion. There can be no permanent slavery, or oppression or degradation where the Sabbath rights are reserved to all men and women who are employed by others.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

"What do you regard as the most reliable weather report, professor?" "Thunder."

Turnkey—A reporter wishes to interview you. Will you be him? Prisoner—No, indeed; tell him I am not at home.

She—Yes, dearest, I made this cake all alone. He—I can't believe that. Somebody must have helped you lift it out of the oven.

Minards Liniment is the Best. "Of course I will be homier some day," she whispered. "Impossible," he replied gallantly. "And she marvels that she sent his presents back."

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "is mighty proud of his ancestors. He de all folks was alive I has my doubts about whether de feelin would be reciprocated."

The latest fad is the "Davy" contest, the picture of the admiral being worked on the feminine enclosure in silk. A kind of reminder, you know, that he has seen those tight squeezes.

Lady—Now that you have partaken of a good dinner, are you equal to the task of sawing up some wood? Tramp—Madam, equal is not the proper word. I'm superior to it.

Minards Liniment for Rheumatism. "Mamma, does 'Portuguese' mean all the inhabitants of Portugal?" "The word may be used in that way." "Well, mamma, if you mean only one of them, do you say Portuguese?"

"Willie Glegg is regarded as the flower of his family," said Maude. "Perhaps," rejoined Mamma, "that explains why we so frequently hear him alluded to by the men as a 'blooming guy.'"

A woman quarrelling with her husband, told him she believed if he was to die he would marry the devil's daughter. The law did not allow a man to marry two sisters, replied the tender husband.

He (sarcastically)—I wonder if the poor stricken sufferer much when they pulled those feathers out of his chest. Wife (plaint)—Got half as much when you appeared to suffer when I pulled the price of them out of you.

Minards Liniment Cures La Grippe. The race of Irish "bulls" will apparently never be entirely run. In the House of Commons a week or two ago a well known eloquent Irish member spoke of Mr Gerald Balfour as being "iron-bound in red tape."

The dexterity of a modern virtuoso's fingers made a deep impression on an old farmer who was present at the audience at a "piano recital." Clapping both hands suddenly down upon his knees, he was heard to exclaim, "I'd give $100 to have that man pick peas for me!"

Mr Johnson—Jee as I was coming out of Marse Jones' wife de fowls I met de pabson. Wife (plaint)—V. wot did he say? Mr Johnson—He said he was comin ober to tek dinner wif us to-morrow.

"Thackeray a master of style!" repeated Charlie to the amazed parson. "My dear fellow, you parvididly don't know what you are saying. I've seen dozens of the pickwicks of the old Johnney, and not one of them showed a coat that had the least approach to a fit."

Minards Liniment the Best Hair Restorer. Jack (tenderly to the little brother of his aged one)—Would you like to know a secret, Tommy? Tommy—Shouldn't I know it? "Well, I'm in love with your sister." "Oh, that's no secret. The family has talked about it every day since Aunt Emma promised Ned that she would bring about an introduction."

An Irishman was once asked by a friend to go to a concert with him. Pat commences to sing, and the friend says, "Pat, you had better stop the price of admission. His friend said the front seats were one shilling, the back seats sixpence each, and the programs one penny each." "All right," said Pat, "I will sit on the program."

Mollie, the good-humored maid-of-all-work, related to her mistress a most nervous dream she had had the night before. "Pooh, pooh!" cried the latter at its conclusion, "you must have been asleep, Mollie, when you dreamed such nonsense." "Indeed, I was not," replied the malignant Mollie; "I was just as wide awake as I am this minute."

MINARD'S LINIMENT is the only Liniment asked for at my store and the only one we keep for sale. All the people use it. HARLAN FULTON, Pleasant Bay, C. B.
