Instructive Lecture on 'Germany's Swelled Head'

Rev. S. J. Macarthur Heard in Splendid Lecture In St. James' New Hall Friday Night.

A very instructive and interesting lecture on "Germany's Swelled Head; A Study of the Causes of the War," was given in aid of the Canadian Patriotic Fund in St. James' Hall, Friday night, by Rev. S. J. Macarthur.

Mayor Morrissy, President of the Local Patriotic Fund, presided, and with him on the platform were Revs. W. J. Bate, P. W. Dixon, Dr. Harrison and M. S. Richardson.

Rev. Mr. Macarthur said, in part: The history of the world is exemplified in the lives of great individuals. Germany has had her prophets and priests, who are responsible for her present position. The Kaiser is one of these.

According to a Mr. White, who has written a book on the Kaiser, the latter is a criminal lunatic, who has intimated that he is entitled to almost divine honors from his people. He even claimed that it was his advice to Queen Victoria that saved South Africa to Britain during the Boer War.

Emil Reich, a Hungarian professor, who knows Germany well, says in his book, "Germany's Swelled Head," that the Kaiser is thoroughly capable, a clever orator, and the best informed man in Europe.

The Kaiser had openly aimed to make Germany the greatest naval power. Germany's progress threatened the peace of the world. In 1894 her export trade was $166,000,000, in 1913 it was about $4,000,000,000. A hundred years ago France, with practically the same size, had more people than Germany, now she was some 22,000,000 behind. This was says Emil Reich, because French women lost the imperial sentiment and refused to bear as many children as formerly, while Germans kept on increasing. Germany's population up to last year was increasing nearly a million a year, while France's was about stationary. It is a good thing for us that Germany brought on the war now, before she should outnumber us more.

Prussia, as an imperial power, is a mere upstart. It is not long since she was a mere vassal of Poland. The German States, disunited and individually weak, were buffeted about and despised by their neighbors for years. Prussia, tired of being subsidized or snubbed by stronger powers, at last unified Germany. Bismarck gave her a constitution, and at last defeated the great power of France in 1870. Then Germany's head swelled, and she began to preach that the Germans, not the Jews, were the elect of God. A German author—Houston Stewart Chamberlain—a relative of the English Chamberlains—proves to German satisfaction that all the great men of the past—Achilles, the great Italian professors; Jesus Christ, St. Paul—were Germans. This would be ridiculed in any other country, but the Kaiser recommended the book to be read by all of his people.

The German scheme was to unite all Germanic and part-Germanic countries—Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Britain, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Northeastern France, the Austro-Hungarian monarchy and western Russia—with Turkey, Serbia and Bulgaria, with the present German empire. Thereafter Italy and Persia would be added, and Germany would dominate the world.

Germany looked on France as a decadent nation, on Russians as Barbarians. They began to create a great army and navy, while Britain and Russia were peaceable. In 1905 Germany declared that she meant that no nation should make a bargain without consulting her. That year the Kaiser in Tangier said he would uphold Moroccan independence, and France had agreed to a conference.

Modern Germany has been a hotbed of intrigue and violation of treaties. Five times in seven years she had tried to provoke a general war. She has aimed to get control of countries commercially, and had succeeded in Turkey, to Turkey's downfall. She has secured large control of Italy's industry and finance, and owns the cream of Italy's shipping trade. Italy's alliance with Germany and Austria had made her break with France and had put her into Germany's power.

Germany's spy system was abom-nable. An American had to take his boy out of a German school because the master tried to teach him to tattle on his comrades. A Prussian boy in school was taught to be an agent of the government. Every German consular agent was a spy for the fatherland. German residents outside were always working for Germany, for instance, the concealed gun platforms found in Belgium and France.

Since 1890 the Kaiser has broken with Russia, insulted France and interfered in the Balkans.

General Bernhard's gospel was that Might is Right, that love is impossible between nations, that there Christian sacrifice cannot be asked of is no power above the State, that the State, that weaker nations have no right to live, that war is the physics of the nation. Ten million copies of this book were sold in two years. It teaches that treaties are to be observed only so long as expedient, that wars of conquest are as legitimate as wars of defence. His teachings sank deep, for after Germany had invaded Belgium the Chancellor justified her action on the ground of necessity.

It was known to the British Ambassador that Austria had consulted Germany before sending her ultimatum to Serbia last July. She did not restrain Austria. The Car had offered to let the Austro-Serbian matter go to the Hague Tribunal, but Germany objected.

Germany had sought to denationalize her Polish subjects. Her usage of Belgium was infamous. The author of The Hymn of Hate has been rewarded by the Kaiser.

A remarkable feature is the unanimity of the Germans. Both Protestant and Catholic seem united in complete subservience to the Government. A Protestant missionary leaving for home to join the army, said that Germany came before Jesus Christ with him, and a Catholic prelate in the Reichstag had unblushingly justified Germany's cause in Belgium. Even Bebel, the German Socialist leader, now dead, said in the Reichstag that the Socialists would fight in defence of Germany. So the Socialist Germans as well as the members of the different churches, seemed to be united in defence of the German ideal.

In conclusion, Mr. Macarthur pointed out that if we should deny God and Jesus Christ the destruction of our Empire would result. Had Germany succeeded in conquering the world their empire like Alexander's would have broken up into warring fragments and civilization would have been set back for generations. Let us cultivate the spirit that makes for righteousness in our National and local affairs, or we shall go the same road as Germany is now travelling. Some people fear that Russia will dominate the world. Some fear Japan. What will awaken China do? If we cease to propagate things that make for good citizenship our empire will go. Let all littleness disappear. If there should rise up evil powers in the East, let us hope that in America we shall be righteous and the ambassadors of a higher order to the old world. And let us labor to that end right here in our own community.

REV. P. W. DIXON

Rev. Father Dixon highly complimented the lecture. We all, said he, honor Germany in some things. But Germany dreamed dreams like Joseph of all other nations bowing down before her. The Germans for at least two thousand years had always been great fighters. Ariovistus had boasted to Julius Caesar that when Caesar should meet the Germans, who had not slept under a roof for fourteen years, he should see fighting. And so Caesar had.

It is to the honor of England and her allies that they have shown that Germany is not invincible. England is fighting now, as she often has fought, to preserve the balance of power. Hence she has been watching Germany preparing for the last 40 years. In the 17th century England fought against Austria; in the 18th century first for her, then against her, to preserve the balance of power; then she helped both Austria and Prussia against Napoleon;

Opera House Crowded Last Night to Hear Sylvia

Annual St. Patrick's Concert Was Well Patronized And Will be Repeated Tonight.

The annual St. Patrick's concert of St. Mary's choir, was presented at the Opera House last evening in the form of a two act Pastoral Operetta, entitled "Sylvia," which was greeted by a crowded house and followed with interest throughout, and the hearty burst of applause which greeted the different musical members, showed that they were highly appreciated by the large audience. Too much credit cannot be given the members of the cast for the excellent way in which they played their parts, and to make individual mention would be almost impossible, as all that took part played their part to perfection. The chorus, which was composed of about fifty voices, was well received and deserves the highest praise for the manner in which they took their part.

The specialties which were introduced between the acts were good, and special mention must be made of the duet, by little Miss Carmel McCarron and Master Hubert Murphy, in "The Wounded Soldier" assisted by a chorus of Red Cross Nurses and Boy Scouts, also Miss Doris Buckley, as an elocutionist, was one of the best ever heard here and she was in her best last evening, in the presentation of "Mother Erin".

The cast was:

Sir Bertram de Lacey, The Court Poet D. Jackson; Prince Tobbytum, a man of consequence Charles Morris; William, an honest farmer, James Sullivan; Robin, a country lad, Wm. Thompson; Sylvia, betrothed to de Lacey, May Morrison; Betty, betrothed to William, Alice Morris; Arabella, Araminta Ladies in waiting at Court Florence Newman, Annie Craughan Polly, Molly, Dolly, Friends of Betty Irene Foran, Maggie Sullivan, Gladys Foley.

Those who took part in the choruses were:

Misses Irene McCombs, Lou McCarron, May Wright, Kathleen McCarron, Hedge Morris, Mollie Hennessy, Clara Brnard, Sadie Bernard, Grace McCarron, Gladys Foley, Margaret Sullivan, Irene Foran.

Little Misses Bernetta Keating, Agnes Lawlor, Louise Murphy, Florence Wright, May McEvoy, Florence Sullivan, Dorothy Lawlor, May Donovan, Agnes Lawlor.

Messrs. Fred Dalton, Jack Craughan, B. D. Hennessy, Jos. Wright, Clayton Morris, Stewart Demers, Wm. Thompson, Jack Lawlor, Ed. McEvoy, Mike Coughlan, Willie Gabriel, James Bernarl, Willie Hall, Leo Black, Frank Dlotte, Leonard Hachey.

Those who took part in the specialty "The Wounded Soldier" were Little Miss Carmel McCarron and Master Hubert Murphy, in the solos, and Misses Florence McEvoy, Cecelia McGrath, Helen Dunn, Lili Sullivan, Maude Keating and May Dolan as Red Cross nurses, and masters Vincent Bayle, Willie Bernard, Mike Dunn, Charlie Donovan, Alexis McCarron, Joe Campbell, Raymond Gabriel, Willis Campbell, Roger McCabe, Andrew Kingston, John Sullivan and Mark Hachey.

Miss Wheeler, accompanist.

ARGUMENT

ACT I—Sylvia tired of her betrothed wanders into the hayfield where she overhears Betty bemoaning her fate and wishing she were engaged to marry a nobleman instead of honest William. Sylvia suggests that, as they each envy the other her lot, they exchange places for the rest of the day, that Sylvia masquerades as the farmer's daughter and Betty as the maid of honor to the Queen. Betty tells of a flower called "Cupid's Eye," which would blind the poet and the farmer to the fact that such an exchange has been made, and the two girls set off to find the magic flower and change costumes.

In the meantime, Betty's companions, who had left her in the hayfield return to find her. They meet the farm lads on their way to the plough field and half promise to meet them at the stile on their way home from work. A cloud appears in the sky, which throws them into great consternation as they fear rain, and when Prince Tobbytum appears they beseege him to know what the weather will be. Indignantly, he informs them who he is and they apologize. He accepts their apology and offers to allow them to kiss his cheek. They pretend to accept but instead dance about him, pelting him with flowers, until he escapes.

Sylvia and Betty return, dressed in each other's clothes, and with the magic flower in their possession. Betty successfully fools de Lacey, and Sylvia as successfully fools William. De Lacey and Betty set forth to stroll through the woods and lanes, and William drags Sylvia off to help him weed the potato patch.

Robin sounds the dinner horn, and the haymakers return to the hayfield to spend the noorday hour.

ACT II—Toward the close of the afternoon, the haymakers rest from their toil and stroll to and fro in the cool of the day. The farmers' daughters set forth on their walk to the stile.

Sylvia, worn out with her experiences of the afternoon, returns to the field, and Betty rushes in, having run away from de Lacey and a bull. Each girl declares that hereafter she will be content with her own lot and will not envy the other. They retire to change dresses and to set off in search of the poet and the farmer. Unfortunately, their prank is likely to have serious consequences, for the Lady Arabella saw Sylvia carried over the brook by the farmer, and the Lady Araminta saw de Lacey and Betty walking arm in arm, and this news is imparted to Prince Tobbytum, who resolves to expose the Lady Sylvia that night before the assembled Court.

William, accompanied by the farmers' daughters and farm lads, is searching for Betty, and he runs into de Lacey who is looking for Sylvia. The two men are about to come to blows when Sylvia and Betty separate them.

The Ladies Arabella and Araminta, thinking it possible they may have mistaken, ask the prince not to mention what they have told him. Prince Tobbytum tries to make mischief but is foiled. A song of greeting to the harvest moon, rising over the treetops, ends the evening, and all wend their way homeward.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." - Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." - Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

REZISTOL

A safe and sure remedy in all cases of over-stimulation; also indicated in all cases of Brain Fatigue, Nervous Exhaustion caused by overwork or malnutrition, unequalled for nausea and general depression.

A general tonic and body builder. Mail orders filled by Rezistol Chemical Co., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Wiseneighbour Says:

"I should have told you the other day when we were speaking of EDDY'S WASH-BOARDS that it is quite as necessary to have an indurated fibreware tub in which to wash the clothes, if you want to make a success of washday."

MRS. NEWLYWED says: "I've often heard of EDDY'S FIBREWARE Pails and tubs, what's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"EDDY'S pails and tubs are made from compressed fibre baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters—wear longer, look better and are very light to handle. The latter point should always be a matter of consideration when buying kitchen utensils" concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

Straight Talks to Women

About the Home and Other Things

EDITED BY Dorothy Richmond
FOR THE UNION ADVOCATE

There is an old saying, that "a man is a fool until he is forty," and most men will admit that the old saying contains much truth. I sometimes wonder what the time limit is for women.

Perhaps a woman is never a fool—perhaps she is always one. The most prominent characteristic in the average, normal, womanly woman—what is it?

A fair definition of the word "ambition" is, the desire to advance, to excel, to rise above the average level, and to succeed in doing these things calls for a superior quality and quantity of initiative and Creative Power.

Women do not possess these faculties, nor do the females of any other species possess them. It is not natural that they should, and we cannot get away from the laws of nature, however much we may rebel against their workings.

What is the high attribute, corresponding to the word "ambition" which could be said, in truth, to represent the most prominent characteristic of the average, normal, womanly woman?

My own honest answer is, there is none.

Women ARE ambitious—ambitious to wear finer clothes than anybody else; to give the most extravagant entertainments; to be at the top of the ladder; socially; to live in the finest home—and to make all other women jealous.

There are exceptions—to be sure—but where one woman possesses really high attributes and really does rise above the average hypocrisies of typical femininity, there are ten thousand men who will rise above the same average level. So, let us admit that nature has equipped men to occupy one sphere and women to occupy quite another.

Woman's place, however, in this world is certainly no less important than man's—if she would but rise to it and FILL it.

That place is the HOME. It is the Alfa and Omega of everything. It is the heaven to the bread of all human activity. It is the fountain source of national well-being, of national honor, of all real progress, and it exerts the deepest of all influences upon the destiny of nations!

No place can be higher for women than the home, for it is all this, surely her opportunity is infinite—if they would but rise to it and FILL it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Dear Madam:
Thank you for the recipe for chicken salad. Will you please let me know what "blanched almonds" are and how to make French dressing, and oblige.
Miss L.

ANSWER—(1)—Put the desired quantity of almonds into a saucepan, cover with cold water, bring to boiling point, then remove from the fire. Drain and run cold water over them. Turn out on a coarse cloth and rub off the outer skins.

(2)—FRENCH DRESSING—Three table-spoonfuls of salad oil, 1 table-spoonful of vinegar, 1 table-spoonful of pepper. Put salt, pepper and oil into a small bowl or deep saucer and stir with a fork until well blended, adding the vinegar by degrees. When it becomes fairly thick pour upon the salad.

Dear Miss Richmond:
Would you be so kind as to let me have a receipt for a nice nut cake.
Mrs. H. H.

ANSWER—½ cup of butter, 1½ cups of sugar, 1 cup of chopped nuts, 2 eggs, 1 cup of milk, 2 cupfuls of flour and 2 rounding tea-spoonfuls of baking powder. Cream the butter and sugar, add nut-meats, then the eggs, beaten without separating the whites from the yolks, and alternately, the milk and flour, stirred with the baking powder twice. Bake in a loaf for about one hour.

Dear Miss Richmond:
Will you kindly give me a recipe for Welsh rabbit.
T. T.

ANSWER—½ table-spoonful of butter, ½ pound of cheese; cut into very thin slices, a ¼ tea-spoonful of pepper, ¼ tea-spoonful of paprika, ¼ tea-spoonful of soda, ¼ tea-spoonful of mustard, 2 egg yolks, ½ cup of cream. Melt the butter and let run over the surface of the dish; put in the cheese and seasoning and stir constantly (over boiling water), until the cheese is melted; have ready the eggs beaten and diluted with the cream; add these to the cheese mixture and stir until the whole is smooth and thick. Serve on crackers or on toast.

SOME WAYS OF COOKING CANNED SALMON
CANNED SALMON LOAF—1 can of salmon, 1 cupful of stale bread crumbs, 2 eggs, ½ pint of milk, salt and pepper, a blade of mace. Scald the milk and mace together; chop the salmon and add to it the bread crumbs, the lightly beaten eggs, salt and pepper and pour in the milk a little at a time. Turn into a buttered mould and steam for one hour. Garnish with parsley and serve.

CANNED SALMON SALAD—Drain 1 can of salmon and separate into large flakes and set these on a bed of lettuce leaves. Serve with the following dressing—Mix 1 table-spoonful of scraped onion, 6 table-spoonfuls of oil, 3 table-spoonfuls of vinegar, ½ tea-spoonful each of salt and paprika and pour over the whole. Serve at once.

HOT CANNED SALMON—Set the unopened can of salmon into a saucepan of boiling water and let boil 15 minutes. Open the can at the edge and roll around the top, that the salmon may be removed unbroken. Drain off all the liquid. Turn the fish onto a hot platter; garnish with sliced lemon, hard cooked eggs and parsley. Serve with egg sauce or drawn butter.

CANNED SALMON CROQUETTES—1 cupful of salmon, 1 cupful of boiled rice, 1 egg, slightly beaten, salt and pepper to taste. Mix ingredients thoroughly, shape into balls, dip in egg and bread-crumbs and cook in deep fat until brown. Drain and serve with asparagus points and melted butter.

and registration embodying suitability strictly kept. Then such public works as are in any way possible should be proceeded with. When we arrive at the matter of farm labor we come to the very crux of the situation.

The large majority of the unemployed have never seen a farm except as they have been travelling past. To another section the work is congenial. Unhappily, it is frequently shown that even under stress, men and women will not do work for which they feel completely unfitted. But these cannot be left to starve. They must be employed, but how is a matter for the committees to decide. As to the demand of the land, farmers must be appealed to to be as patient as they can, and to be as lenient and generous as possible to such laborers as they may obtain.

As has been said over and over again, the times are exceptional, and not only call upon us, but demand of all of us, that we shall practice self-denial and thus bear in some measure a share of the common burden.

SYNOPSIS OF TREY O' HEARTS

Owing to the fact that a number of patrons of the Happy Hour failed to see the first installment of this picture at the Happy Hour last Wednesday night, the synopsis is herewith given.

The first reel of this installment is taken up by the prologue. Seneca Trine, middle aged and powerful in the financial world, had married a girl much younger than himself. The girl was forced into the marriage through circumstances rather than through love she felt toward Trine. In fact she loved another, Wellington Law. At the opening of the prologue we find Trine's wife the mother of twin girls, unhappy in thoughts which still haunt her of her old sweetheart Law. Law, on the other hand, is married to a cool, calculating woman, is the father of a boy.

In the course of time Trine begins to suspect the affection that his wife still feels for Law and with a bitter heart, he undertakes a scheme to ruin his wife's sweetheart. At a ball one evening, he secures positive proof of his wife's attitude toward him, and his determination to ruin Law crystallizes into definite action. A month later Trine's plans of revenge against the man whom he believes has robbed him of his wife's love, are carried to completion—Law is ruined.

Desperate and deploring his air, Law drives into the country in his automobile. As fate would have it, he accidentally runs down Trine. Discovering the identity of the wounded man, he flees. Trine recovers but is left a paralytic for life. It is following this that Trine plans to kill Law and he writes him to this effect. Law is already broken down, mentally and physically, and when he begins to find here and there a trey o' heart card—Trine's sign of approaching revenge—he takes the easiest way out by killing himself.

At the opening of the play proper Law, Jr., is a prosperous young business man in London. Trine, still in America, has not forgotten his plan of revenge; he awaits the time when Law Jr., is the happiest to strike him down. Rose, one of twin daughters, he sends to Europe, for the purpose of meeting and securing Law's love. Rose, however, is unaware of her father's intentions; she has high ideals and a tender heart, while her sister, Judith, is hard and revengeful, the prototype of her father.

Law, Jr., meets Rose at a watering place and it is a case of love at first sight with both. It is at this point that Rose receives the first straight letter from her father, blighting at her love and assuring her that she will never marry Law—that he will die before that. Law, for the first time, finds a trey o' hearts, and acquainted with the feud, suspects its meaning. Rose, fearful for Law's life, departs, telling her sweetheart that she will send him a rose—a token of love—if she ever needs him.

Through his age Trine is informed of the complete affair. Through a man a rose is sent from America to Law—he hopes to get Law into America where he can the better kill him. Law receives the rose and leaves London, intending to go by way of Canada to his sweetheart. Informed of this, Trine sends his daughter Judith into Canada to meet Law and bring him back, dead or alive.

Once in Canada, Judith surrounds herself with bribed half-breeds and prepares to carry out her father's wishes. She follows Law into the mountains and captures him. Law believes he stands before Rose, but is informed otherwise; he is left to die, tied hand and foot in a forest fire. Law manages to break his bonds and escapes to the river bank. Far out in the stream he observes Judith departing with her guide in a canoe. He shoots and kills the guide, Judith, in the canoe without an ear, floats toward the rapids and falls below. Law, realizing her plight, rushes to a log spanning the rapids, leans far down and drags the girl out of the crushing canon.

What with his wounds, Law is exhausted after this. Judith holds him to a clearing in the woods and helps his head while he falls into a deep sleep, and to Judith comes the first awakening of love. But she leaves the man sleeping, and the man, when he awakens, finds on his breast a rose where he expected to find a trey o' hearts.

The second installment will be shown tomorrow (Thursday) night.

WEDNESDAY MARCH 17TH, 1915

$$$ DOLLAR DAY $$$

Tomorrow is Dollar Day. Last Wednesday the merchants announced through the advertising columns of The Advocate the bargains they would give on Thursday, the 18th instant, and judging by the show cards and signs in their windows they are going to do what they said they would.

This is the initiative step towards encouraging the principle of buying at home. It is not so much a question of the local merchants, here and everywhere else, wanting the people's money as it is the necessitated want of their trade. Adopt the principle of buying at home. This great need was never felt so much as at the present time. Every town, village and city in the whole Dominion of Canada is going down de pinto to the pockets of its people for the support of the different relief funds, and it is a matter of absolute necessity that the buying public of each and every town go the extreme limit in keeping their money in circulation in their own town. We in Newcastle cannot afford to send our money away to help the large cities support these funds.

Take the case of the farmer and his marked one dollar bill. So long as it was kept in circulation in his own locality, it played an important part in the welfare of that locality; but as soon as it was sent abroad into a foreign city its power of usefulness to the farmer came to an abrupt end.

In these hard times every dollar should be made to go as far as it possibly can, in being a power of good in each particular community; but so sure as it is sent out of that community, so sure does its usefulness stop there, and merchants, as well as the buying public, should realize this fact and reciprocate.

Make up your minds from tomorrow on, that every dollar you have to spend will be spent in your own town, as much as it is possible to do so. Patronize your own grocers, your own dry goods stores, your own tailors, etc., and above all, your own local papers.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WAR

Canada, in common with the other parts of the Empire, is waiting patiently for the great Allied offensive which is expected to be taken at almost any moment now. For weeks a state of practical deadlock has existed, relieved only by desultory fighting in places, which although vigorous enough in itself, could have no effect on the general situation. Lord Kitchener has continued to pour in thousands after thousands of his great army, and at the present time it is estimated that there cannot be far short of 2,000,000 British soldiers in France and Belgium at the present time. Most of the ground in Northern Flanders is now being defended by this army, and if the Germans hope to make any gains in that quarter, they must be prepared for bigger fighting than they have yet been able to bring against the Allies. The forward movement in France and Flanders has been undertaken with a view of relieving the pressure being brought upon the Russians in Poland, and if pushed with sufficient strength, cannot fail to have the desired effect, as troops from different parts of the German line in Poland will have to be withdrawn if the advance being made by the Allies in Flanders is to be checked.

One of the most noteworthy features of the war is the wonderful resiliency and recuperative power of the Russian armies. Time and time again they have met with serious reverses, only to come back again with greater force and determination than ever. Just at present the German General Staff is doing its utmost to so firmly establish their foothold in Poland, that they may feel secure from Russian attack. To this end it appears they have brought up considerably over half a million men from the interior to participate in the effort. Military critics express the view that little good can come of the effort, as in order to carry out their design effectively more men will be needed than the German staff can afford to bring without seriously weakening their line in the western theatre.

The greatest interest in the war centres at present without a doubt in the Dardanelles. The success which the allied fleet has attained brings the fall of Constantinople within measurable distance. While the British admiralty has maintained an absolute silence as to the progress made by the fleet towards that city, enough information is obtainable from outside sources to justify the view that the fleet will soon be off the Golden Horn. It has been announced that once the fleet reaches that point Constantinople will be surrendered without demur to prevent any bombardment with its consequent destruction. The Turkish authorities appear to have adopted the same view of affairs in this respect at least.

The fall of Constantinople would undoubtedly have a far reaching effect on the Balkan States, which so far have been sitting on the fence afraid to jump down on either side. Probably what they are considering now is how and under what conditions they can get into the game before it is too late. They are beginning to ask what it will cost to come in. This, as a contemporary says, will be easy enough, it is the staying in that is going to cost the money. But if they come in on the side of the Allies, the latter will see that they are able to stay in, awaiting all the developments that are pending, the followers of the struggle must have often had sympathetic thoughts of the heroic men in the trenches, suffering all the biting effects of winter's snow, sleet, frost and drenching rain; and all the consequent discomforts and hardships, such as have never been encountered in war before, and award them unstinted praise and recognition for the indomitable spirit and pluck that have sustained them—a spirit that has proven light-hearted, hopeful, and, happily so jaunty but naturally wary, in spite of all drawbacks and discouragements—sure, always as they are in the certainty that a few more months will see an entire change in the aspect of affairs at the front—KITCHENER'S millions ready to aid to.

in the great drive that will send the insolent invader back upon his own ground, into which the war will be strenuously carried.

EVERY BRITON'S DUTY

R. H. Rew, C. B., concludes an illustrative article on "Food Supplies in War Time," being one of a series of Oxford Pamphlets, after pointing out that Great Britain might hold out a year if actually blockaded by saying: "Farmers, in my belief, will prove, in this crisis, not unworthy to be countrymen of those who are heroically defending British homes and hearts on the fields of Flanders. They will do their duty by working their utmost—often under grave difficulties—to maintain and, if possible, increase the produce of their farms, not because it is (as in fact it will be) profitable to do so, but because it is the desire, no less than the duty, of every Briton, each in his own sphere, to do his part to help his country in the time of her direst need." Is not every Canadian a Briton in heart and sympathy, if not by actual birth.

SALVATION ARMY RUMMAGE SALE

To the Ladies of the Town: No doubt in connection with your spring cleaning this year, you will probably be finding clothing, furniture, etc., of no further use to yourself, but which would be appreciated by others.

Would you kindly give any such articles to the Salvation Army for their Rummage Sale and in this way help to benefit the poorer people of the town.

A post card addressed to us will be properly answered and goods will be called for.

Thanking you in anticipation, PETER FORBES, Captain.

Efficient Service At Hotel Miramichi

Brings Forth Much Comment From the Travelling Public

Mr. E. LeRoi Willis, who recently leased the Miramichi Hotel, has, since assuming control, instituted many much needed improvements in order to properly cater to the needs of the travelling public. Judging from the opinion we have recently heard expressed by commercial travellers and other business men who have had occasion to visit our town, we are convinced Mr. Willis is succeeding in making the Miramichi Hotel one of the most popular hotels in the Maritime Provinces, and is thereby justifying the reputation he has already gained of being one of the best and most experienced hotel men in the Maritime Provinces.

Many people visiting the Miramichi who formerly gave Newcastle the go-by, or stayed here as short a time as their business would permit, now make our town their headquarters. Newcastle for many years has been badly in need of a thoroughly experienced hotel man; a good hotel in a town is one of the best advertisements it can have, and some of our citizens in the past, who have been striving to bring Newcastle to the front, have felt the lack of a good hotel service a great handicap in boosting the town.

Spring Impurities In The Blood

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months.

There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these Pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion.

It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood.

In the spring, anemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas, and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention.

Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood, which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, earthily tired men, women and children.

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you. You can get these health-renewing Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"GERMANY'S SWELLED HEAD"

 now she is against Prussia and Austria, but ever with the same end in view—to preserve the equilibrium of the European states. She and her allies were doing the work of civilization in preserving that balance. And he was glad to see men flocking from all quarters to help.

In 1870 the Vatican Council had announced the doctrine of papal infallibility—the doctrine that the Pope when speaking on moral and spiritual questions as the head of the church could make no mistake—the doctrine that Christ when he left the earth had made provisions for the earthly head of the church to speak with authority on matters of doctrine. The German government had forbidden the promulgation of this doctrine in Germany, but the Church had disobeyed and had published it. The bishops were imprisoned, but did not yield. Bismarck found that there was one power stronger than the German government and he at last had to surrender—had "to go to Canossa,"—as a form or mighty Emperor of Germany had done. The Catholic schools of Germany still taught Catholic doctrine. He moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

This was seconded by Rev. W. J. Bate, who said that Germany had struck at the wrong time and now knew that Britain is the leading power. Only three German warships remain on the ocean. He trusted that our boys who have gone and are going will uphold the old traditions of Britain. The vote of thanks was heartily carried and cordially endorsed by the Mayor.

Those who did not hear the lecture—the audience was but 60—missed a great deal.

It Stops the Twinges of Rheumatism, Limbers the Muscles, Eases the Joints

Amazing Relief Comes at Once—Cure Every Time.

USE NERVILINE

Aching joints and sore muscles are common in rheumatic people. Inflammation is deep in the tissues. You might use a dozen remedies and derive less relief than Nerviline will give you in half an hour. Nerviline is a pain-subduer that works do not altogether describe. It is fully five times stronger than most remedies, not that it affects the skin unfavorably—no, its great power is due to its wonderful penetrative quality—it strikes in deeply, but never burns or blister.

Just rub Nerviline into sore muscles, stiff joints, and note the glow of comfort, the ease of pain that follows. You are astonished, delighted; this is because words do not express the promptness and permanency with which Nerviline cures every ache and pain in the muscles and joints. Marvellous, you say. Natural, we say, because Nerviline is different, stronger, more penetrating, a true pain-subduer. Just try it and see if it doesn't cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, strains and sprains. The large 50c family size bottle is far more economical than the 25c trial size. Get it today. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarhboze Co., Kingston, Canada.

SUCCESSFUL BASKET SOCIAL

Basket Ball Game and a Boxing Match Were Attractions

The basket ball game and basket social held in Temperance Hall on Monday night, under the auspices of the Young Men's Club and the Sons of Temperance, was a good success.

The basket ball game between the Bankers and merchants, which was the advertised attraction, was followed by another attraction not on the program, but which was very interesting, a three round boxing bout between Robt. Crocker and Earle Macdonald, two of Newcastle's exponents of the manly art. As knock-outs were not permitted, the bout ended in a draw.

In the basket ball game the Merchants proved their superiority by winning 18 to 12. The game was fast and very exciting. Lt. A. L. Barry was referee, and Harold Drumme kept score. The line-up was as follows:

Merchants	Forwards	Bankers
Allison	McInerney	McInerney
Crocker	McRae	McRae
McMurray	Centre	Cook
McNutt	Defence	McNeill
Macdonald	Hutchison	Hutchison

Scoring—First period—Merchants—Allison, 8; McMurray, 5. Bankers—McInerney, 4; Cook, 1. Second period—Merchants—Allison, 2; McMurray, 3. Bankers—McInerney, 4; McRae, 2; Cook, 1. After the boxing match the baskets were sold and brought good prices.

Cruiser Dresden Sent to Bottom

Bulletin, London, March 15—The British Admiralty announced tonight that the German cruiser Dresden had been sunk.

The sinking of the Dresden was announced by the British Admiralty tonight in the following statement: "On the 14th of March, at 9 a. m. H. M. S. Glasgow, Captain John Luce, R. N., H. M. auxiliary cruiser Orma, Captain John R. Seagrave, R. N., and H. M. S. Kent, Captain John D. Allen, C. B., R. N., caught the Dresden near Juan Fernandez Islands.

"An action ensued and after five minutes fighting the Dresden hauled down her colors and displayed the white flag. She was much damaged and set on fire, and after she had been burning for some time her magazine exploded and she sank.

"The crew were saved. Fifteen badly wounded Germans are being landed at Valparaiso. "There were no British casualties and no damage to the ships." The Dresden was a member of the German squadron which was defeated by the British squadron of the Falkland Islands in December. She was said to have fled to the westward, but there have been no definite reports as to her whereabouts since that time. She was reported unofficially to have been seen in the Straits of Magellan, and later to be in hiding in one of the bays on the Chilean coast. The Dresden was a sister ship of the Emden, which was sunk off Cape Horn, in the Indian Ocean, by the Australian cruiser after an adventurous career.

The sinking of the Dresden leaves at large on the high seas, so far as is known, only the cruiser Karlsruhe, last reported as operating in the West Indies, and the auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm, which is still raiding commerce in the South Atlantic.

The Dresden, a vessel of 2,600 tons was no match for the battle cruisers in the battle of the Falkland Islands, and after the destruction of the Scharnhorst, Gueisena, Nurnberg and Leipzig she steamed away and escaped her pursuers in the darkness.

Since that time both British and Japanese warships have searched persistently the waters of the South Pacific and South Atlantic, but for more than three months the German cruiser eluded pursuit.

Never be ashamed of your own home town.

PATRIOTISM and PRODUCTION

"I would urge the farmers of Canada to do their share in preventing the people of Great Britain from suffering want or privation."
 HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

Fertilization and Thorough Cultivation Will Help the Empire

Patriotism and Production must go hand in hand. Great Britain and her Allies need food. Canada must help in supplying that need. You as a Canadian must do your share. The soil is the basis of food production. Therefore, cultivation, proper fertilization and good seed are important factors. This does not seem very complex, but with the right crops on the right soil, this is the whole gospel of crop production.

How can you better fit yourself for your work this year?
 (1) Attend your Conference.
 (2) Talk matters over with your neighbor farmers. Give help and get help.
 (3) Read the agricultural articles in the daily and weekly press and in the agricultural papers.
 (4) Write to the Canadian Department of Agriculture at Ottawa and your Provincial Department of Agriculture for information.

Germany, France, Belgium, Holland and Denmark have increased their food production enormously during the last twenty years through cultivation, fertilization and seed selection. These are the countries that are being either devastated or most seriously affected by this war. Now is Canada's opportunity as well as Canada's responsibility.

The German Kaiser has cut off the supply of potash fertilizers from the rest of the world. This does not mean that we are without all supplies. Canadian fertilizers are still available. Use these "Made-in-Canada." Read the Bulletin on "Potash in Agriculture" issued by the Canadian Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Attend Your Conference

Do not waste anything this year. Save carefully every pound of fertilizer in and around barns and stables.

Gather waste vegetable matter of all kinds. It will pay this year to clean up and to keep clean.

Wash-water contains potash. Coal ashes are good for heavy soils. Wood ashes are rich in potash and lime. Save everything.

Every day counts in getting on to the land. Drain off all surface waters as early as possible. Do not wait for Spring. This may mean a week or two more for growth.

Perform every farming operation thoroughly. Do the ploughing well. Disc and harrow the land until a perfect seed bed is prepared. Sow the seed carefully. After seeding, roll if the soil is not too damp, then lightly harrow.

See that water furrows are run where needed. Keep the weeds in check. Do not economize in labour at seed time. A last stroke of the harrow after the seed bed seems perfect usually means extra bushels.

By each and every one of us doing the best that is in him and making the very wisest use of every acre, we, as Canadian farmers, may do much to help our Country.

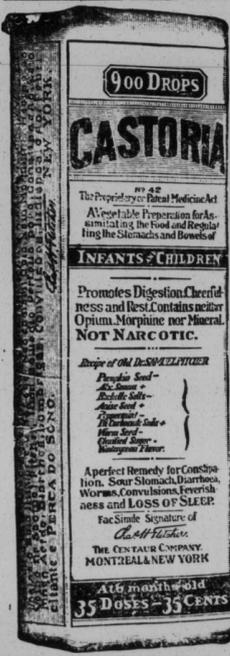

LIVE STOCK

Breeding stock are to-day Canada's most valuable asset. The one outstanding feature of the world's farming is that there will soon be a great shortage of meat supplies. Save your breeding stock. Plan to increase your live stock. Do not sacrifice now. Europe, as well as North America, will pay higher prices for beef, mutton, and bacon in the very near future.

1. How is the best way to keep a gun from rusting through the summer?
Ans. The best way to get the inside of the barrel in such condition that it can be left a long period without rusting it to clean it thoroughly twice at intervals of two or three days and then grease the inside of the barrel with vaseline or one of the regular gun greases. A barrel cleaned in this way may be put away for a long time without fear of rust.

2. Which is the best rifle for big game hunting, the 30-30 or the .22 Hi-power?
Ans. The 30-30 cartridge is more regular in its effect than the .22 high power cartridge. Neither of these cartridges are, however, generally considered by hunters powerful enough for the largest of big game.

3. Is smokeless powder better than black for field shooting?
Ans. I assume you mean smokeless powder in a shotgun. If so, I should prefer smokeless powder for field shooting as the recoil is lighter and on second and third shots there is no smoke to obscure the view.

4. Is 3 1/2 drams of bulk smokeless too heavy for a 12 ga. pump gun?
Ans. 3 1/2 drams in a factory loaded shell with any of the standard makes of pump guns is perfectly satisfactory.

5. Can buckshot be used in a 28 in barrel?
Ans. Buckshot can be used in any length barrel. The length of barrel has nothing to do with the size shot which can be used.

What causes a band of what resembles burned powder to form in the barrel of a new carbine about an inch from beginning of rifling in breech after being fired about three times? It is almost impossible to remove this with a wire cleaner and nitro solvents have no effect whatever. Load my own shells using Duponts F.F.G. black rifle powder and soft point bullets.

Ans. You do not say what cartridge you are using. It may be you are using black powder in a cartridge designed for smokeless. If so, this is probably the cause of your trouble.

RUSSIA DRINKING TEA INSTEAD OF VODKA
Both German and Russian Troops are Using it—Tea Trade Tightens.

Elimination of the vodka from Russia has evidently started that immense nation tea-drinking. According to The New York Journal of Commerce, heavy buying by Russia of India and Ceylon teas has caused abnormal prices for these teas, the quotations being from 8 to 10 cents a pound higher than a year ago. From reports in the trade the Russians are buying all the India-Ceylon teas available, and there is a likelihood of prices going still higher.

Not only is the Russian army using tea in enormous quantities now, but the Kaiser long ago ordered it for his troops. Unusually large buying by these two nations and their entrance into new markets as competitors have placed the tea market in a tight position. (It has been previously pointed out that Britain is turning more to tea-drinking. United States drinks 90,000,000 pounds a year. To these factors the Canadian tea trade is sensitive, and advances in market value are not unlikely.)

There is no possibility of any firm continuing in business and selling tea of the quality of "SALADA" for less money. You can get "SALADA" Brown Label from your grocer at 55c a pound; Blue Label at 45c, and Red Label at 55c a pound, and these teas are from the choicest gardens in the Island of Ceylon. All "SALADA" Teas are clean, pure and free from dust, which so many other teas are loaded with, to reduce their cost.

Ans. It is advisable always to use 2. Is it not advisable to use the same size cartridge after once starting with it?
Ans. It is advisable always to use the longest cartridge for which the barrel is chambered.
3. Where can I get a good 25 yd. target to use with this pistol and what one do you recommend?
Ans. The standard distance for pistol shooting indoors is 20 yds.; outdoors, 50 yds. Targets can be secured from C. W. Hinman, 127 Portland St., Boston, Mass., or from any hardware or sporting goods dealer.
4. Do you consider hitting a piece of metal the size of a penny three times out of five at 20 yds. good shooting? (with a .22 rifle).
Ans. Yes, this is good work.

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 23rd, 1913
"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pills manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them.

ON PRINTING

FINE PRINTING IS AN ART

Do you know good printing?
Do you like good printing?
Do you know that it always pays to have the BETTER kind?
Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.
If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.
Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.
Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.

Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.

1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.

2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.

3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.

4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fashioned notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT WE DO ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong pull for increased business—more business than usual.

The LAPSE of ENOCH WENTWORTH

The Play.
Enoch Wentworth sat before a table littered with sheets of manuscript when a knock sounded on the library door.

"In a second!" he cried. Then he tried to gather the pages together in numerical order.

"All right," cried a cheerful voice. "Lord, it's Merry!" whispered Enoch. He swept the sheets of paper into a drawer of his desk, then he rose and opened the door. Merry stepped into the room with a dancing light-hearted gaiety that Enoch had seen him don with his stage garb. Still it was accompanied by a dignity of manner odd to the comedian, a dignity which had self-respect behind it. Wentworth put an arm about him affectionately.

"Have you come into a fortune, boy?" he asked with a laugh.

"Better than that—I'm on the verge of making a fortune."

"Good!" Enoch pushed him into a comfortable chair and stood looking down at him. "Let's have the news, boy."

"I will," answered Merry slowly. "I've got to—want your advice and help. I need it as I never needed it in my life before. Only—I'm not going to trot out a word of it until we are sure of a couple of hours clear. I can't stand a solitary interruption—today."

Wentworth shut and locked the door, then he opened a small cupboard.

"What'll you have?" he asked, lifting down a couple of glasses.

"Nothing," Andrew pulled a large envelope from his pocket and sat down beside the fire. Wentworth faced him with an expectant look upon his face.

"You never guessed, I suppose, that I'm an ineffectual playwright?"

"Never!" Enoch's tone was emphatic.

"Well," Merry laughed hilariously, "well, I am, I'm the coming dramatist."

"Take care of my hat to you, boy," Enoch swept him a pantomimic gesture.

"Wait a minute," the comedian's face grew unusually resolute. "Wait, old man, you've got to take this seriously, or I won't tell you a blessed word about it."

Merry rose and laid his hand on Enoch's shoulder with an imploring gesture. "Dear old man, I want your help and guidance. I'm such a blighted unbusiness-like chump. If you hadn't been head and right hand and mother, father and brother to me for years as well as the truest friend a man ever had, I'd have been in the gutter."

"Enoch," Merry's face flushed, "if I win out, it means more to me than fame or wealth—it means the happiness of a lifetime."

"Andrew! A woman at last!" the actor nodded gravely. "Yes, a woman at last!"

"Not Drustilla?"

"Oh, curb your curiosity," he laughed lightly, "you can't have everything at once. Now I'm going to read."

"Well, it's waked you up. That's dead certain. Who did it?"

"The woman—I told you," Merry turned aside and stood with his back to Enoch, running his eyes over a volume he had lifted from a bookshelf.

"Say, old man," suggested Wentworth, "leave that with me over night. You've given me a lot to think about. I want to read it again—when I'm alone."

The closely written sheets fell reluctantly from the comedian's hand. He fondled the paper as if it were a beloved child.

"You'll be careful of it, won't you, Enoch?" he said anxiously. "It's all I dim with wistful sympathy, but he knew the man well enough not to put it into words.

Wentworth pulled out his key-ring, opened a drawer, and took the slip of paper from the yellow envelope. He stood staring at it for a moment. A wave of crimson swept across his face, then his mouth straightened into a cruel, inexorable line. Merry's eyes were still fixed on him. Enoch did not speak, but crossed the room with the paper in his hand and laid it on the table beside Merry. Andrew's eyes took it in with one sweeping glance; it was the bond he had signed when they played that last hand of poker.

"Do you remember this?" asked Wentworth abruptly.

"Of course. Say, old chap, what has that to do with our business? Oh, I know," he lifted his eyes with a relieved glance. "Of course it's an earnest thing you're running things and for money, Lord, I don't care for money. Take all you want of it. It's fame my heart's set on; I've a grand ambition and a thirst for greatness—as I told you—but it runs in one's blood; to win a name as a dramatist, a name that will live when my capering days are over. I want a halo; not such an aureole as Shakespeare's," his eyes sparkled and a smile lit his face, "but a halo—I demand a halo. I'll be satisfied with nothing less than a cartwheel."

He rose and went prancing buoyantly about the room on his toe tips, humming a fantastic waltz from "The King at Large." Wentworth sat with a grin, brooding look in his eyes. Andrew stopped to stare at him.

"Why so mum, sweet Sirrah?" he asked blithely.

"Merry," Wentworth spoke in an expressionless voice, "read that bond through—carefully. Read it aloud."

The actor picked up the sheet of paper and read it with dramatic gestures, bowing almost prostrate at each pause.

To Enoch Wentworth.
I hereby pledge myself to you until death—to do your every bidding—to obey your every demand—to the extent of my physical and mental ability—you to furnish me with support.

ANDREW MERRY.

He dropped lightly upon his knees in front of Wentworth when he finished. "I await thine orders, most grave and reverend seignior." Then he laid his fingers upon Wentworth's arm and looked up with an expectant smile.

Enoch wrenched his arm free and rose awkwardly to his feet. The comedian drew back with a startled expression, as if he feared struggled with bewilderment.

"You see," Enoch's lips were perfectly colorless, "your mental ability is pledged to me, that's all."

Merry stared at him, curious and perplexed.

"It is your mental ability which I claim now," Enoch said deliberately.

Andrew spoke in a coarse whisper. "I don't understand."

"I demand your play!"

"No; of course not," Wentworth jerked out the words abruptly. "Why should I want to sell? I want to produce it—as mine, as one—I have written."

Merry moved toward him with an agony of terror in his eyes. "You want to take from me my one complete effort, my one ambition, my everything—the work which is making a man of me, on which I have toiled steadily for weeks? You would do that! Do you understand—while I

CHAPTER VI.
Stepping Out—Downhill.

"Jason, this is nobody I know."

Wentworth sat staring at a card his man had before him, and looked at his brows querulously. "Make him understand that I'm engaged."

"He's terrible masterful, Marse Enoch," he said darkly apologetically; "he's bound 'e'll say so."

truth, it was nothing but a fancy of his. When you came to me with this," Enoch's hand dropped on the manuscript which lay upon the table, "you came with a great temptation; it was too much for me."

"Evidently," cried Merry. His tone was withering in its scorn. He seated himself and his eyes turned fiercely upon Wentworth. The muscles of his cheek twitched as regularly as a pulse.

"The play is mine," Enoch seemed to have grown strangely cool and impervious to contempt or anger. "The play is mine," he repeated; "it is the due and forfeit of my bond."

The eyes of the actor narrowed and he laughed savagely.

"Take your pound of flesh," he cried. "What will you do with it?"

"Everything we had planned."

Enoch's voice was calm. "Give it to John Esterbrook." Merry's eyes were wide with astonishment before, and built up your fame as an emotional actor."

"What will you not play the convict?"

"I? Of course not. There is only one actor in America who can play John Esterbrook."

Andrew rushed across the room in a blind fury. He stretched out his hand and dealt Wentworth a stinging blow across the mouth. "That actor won't play it. Do you understand?"

Wentworth lifted his arm fiercely, then it dropped, nervelessly by his side. The veins rose in his neck and forehead like taut cords. He stood staring at Merry, who strode about the room in a demoniac fury.

"God! You're not a man! You're a damned, low-down, scurrilous black-leg. And to think of you standing there, looking me in the face—God!"

Merry raised his hand again as if to strike, then he dropped it by his side, shuddered, and dashed across the room. He picked up his hat and turned to the door.

"Where are you going?" asked Enoch sternly.

"I'm going straight to hell."

He lifted his gloves from the table. Beside them lay the manuscript of his play. He reached for it, but his hand turned his eyes on the other man, watching him as a thief might, who fears being caught in an act of robbery.

"Take it," cried Enoch. "I have a copy of it, a copy in my own hand."

Merry stood fingering the pages.

"What do you propose to do with your—swag?"

"Call it by a decent name. It belongs to me. Money does not count with me in this transaction. You may keep the royalties. I want nothing but the authorship of the play."

"Nothing but the authorship—Merry's glance was a malediction.

He dropped the pages and tossed his hat upon his head. Wentworth watched him curiously. The outer shell of his man had changed. His clothes, immaculate an hour ago, looked disheveled. A lock of fair hair strayed down over his forehead, his linen had a battered appearance, the white hosiery drooped from his buttonhole like blossoms which had been touched by frost.

He stood for a moment with the door-knob in his hand, looking at Wentworth, who returned his gaze with a cold, ruthless scrutiny. Merry's eyes fell before them. It was the first palpable concession to Enoch's stronger will.

"I beg your pardon, Dorcas, I've a guest here." Her brother led her to the inner room and introduced his caller to her.

"Mr. Oswald and I were having a business talk, Dorcy—not exactly business either. You may stay if you wish and hear a play. I was just going to read to him. If he likes it he will star Andrew Merry in it."

"Oh!" A glow of anticipation shone in the girl's eyes. She laid her coat and hat on the window seat and dropped into a low chair beside her brother. Once or twice she patted him affectionately on the shoulder. The Englishman watched her. There was vivid admiration in his eyes, but Dorcas did not see it. Her only thought was of the happiness in store for Merry.

Wentworth laid the pages of manuscript on the table and cleared his throat. Oswald sat ready to bestow a business-like attention upon the reading. When Enoch lifted the first page his visitor asked: "May I know who wrote the play?"

"I did," answered Wentworth quietly.

"Ah!" said the Englishman. He noticed the startled look on Dorcas's face. It escaped her brother, who sat turned half way from her.

Wentworth began to read. He was an excellent reader; his enunciation was slow and distinct. The story quickly unfolded itself in strong, vivid language. Grant Oswald, who was an ardent student of dramatic literature, fell immediately under its spell and listened with intent glee.

The minds of both men were so vitally concentrated upon the drama that they were scarcely conscious of a movement when Dorcas crept from her low chair to the window seat. She lay back against a pillow, gathered the folds of a silky portiere around her, and stared down at the square. She heard her brother's voice in fragments. Those fragments were always the words of the girl, Cordelia, or of the father fallen to pitiful estate. She clasped her hands together with such a grip that it numbed her fingers, and strange pain and a horrible suspicion were seeping through her body and burning in her veins. Outwardly she was inert.

Suddenly she was awake again, wide awake, tingling with life and emotion, listening to her brother's vibrant voice. The day of release had come for John Esterbrook. He stood with halting, tremulous steps, fearful at the sight of the world he had left twenty years before, hiding his eyes from his tumult. Then Cordelia ran to meet him—young, hopeful, loving and eager. Dorcas forgot the horror and doubt which had swept her down for a moment, she was thinking of nothing but the play. It was greater, more human, than she had dreamed of that day when Andrew and she walked home across the beach at Juniper Point. Her eyes grew wet with pity, then she smiled happily as life ceased to be a problem for Cordelia. Love had come, and the father turned to work out what was left him of a future.

Enoch laid the manuscript aside. The Englishman, hearty in his congratulations and enthusiastic in urging the earliest possible production. He offered unlimited money and insisted that the best company New York could produce should be engaged. The spell of the story was still upon Dorcas. She gazed out, shaking hands hastily with Oswald.

"Dorcy," cried her brother. She did not answer.

"The play stirred her intensely," said Oswald. He had noticed a trace of tears on her cheeks. "Was this the first time she heard it read?"

"Yes, I had never even told her of it. She has been away while—it was written."

"Is your sister an actress?"

"No—she wants to go upon the stage."

"Let her have her way," advised the Englishman. "Her every action shows that she possesses dramatic talent, and it isn't my idea of her future."

"Stage life is exactly what one chooses to make of it. Curiously enough, I have a conviction she could play Cordelia."

Wentworth brushed his hand across his forehead and stared at the scattered sheets of manuscript on the table.

"Get Merry here as soon as possible. I want a consultation with both of you," suggested Oswald while he drew on his gloves. "It is now only a matter of time and theater. If I may advise now, don't choose anyone on the side for Mrs. Esterbrook. I know a woman who can play that part to perfection. Again let me congratulate you. It's a great play, one of the greatest I've heard in years. It's bound to succeed."

Wentworth bowed, but a sudden flush blazed into his face. He was not hardened enough yet to accept congratulations for the brain product of another man.

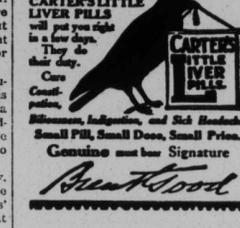

"Good-by," said the Englishman, holding out his hand cordially.

"Good-by," murmured Wentworth. He moved to the window. A carriage stood waiting in front of the house. He watched Oswald step into it and drive away.

Suddenly he recollected that Dorcas had not spoken a single word of praise or congratulation on the play. She was always enthusiastic and happy over every triumph that came to him. She must have thought well of the play. She had a full appreciation of Merry's talents and she had seemed to like him while they were together during the summer. He paused to pull himself together mentally, then he called her. She came slowly into the room, which had grown dark.

During a few minutes Enoch Wentworth fought the battle of his life. It was the struggle between good and evil, which every human being harbors to a greater or lesser degree, in one soul, in one body. Wentworth sighed. The battle had passed and evil had won. It was prepared to carry him through the most dangerous moment. With it came fresh valor, and not only the power to sin further, but a mysterious weakening of the moral tissues which made it possible for him to sin coolly and remorselessly. He turned on the light and with cool composure faced his sister. He met her gray eyes without a quiver. They asked a question which could not be evaded.

"I hate to tell you, Dorcas," there was a tone of reluctance in Wentworth's voice. "But Merry is down again, down in the gutter."

The girl jumped to her feet. "I don't believe it," she cried. "Besides, if he were, what has that to do with his play?"

Enoch did not answer. Instead he asked a question. "Dorcas, do you care for—do you love—Andrew Merry?"

A flush blazed into the girl's face. In spite of the telltale color her brother believed her.

"Yes, I care for Andrew Merry—very much. I do not love him."

Enoch gazed at her wistfully. He knew, as she did not, how easy it is to cross the bridge from mere friendship to love in the woman's voice. "Why did you ask me that?"

"I wanted to find out how much it would hurt if I told you the truth. Merry is not worth your love, he is not even worth your friendship."

"It is not true!" There was indignation in the woman's voice. "I know better, so do you. Only this does not explain about his play, for it is his play."

"You remember he left Juniper Point suddenly?"

"Yes," she raised her head with an eager gesture. "He wanted to write his play." She pointed to the manuscript which lay on the table.

"Yes," said Enoch slowly. "He began bravely enough. Then—he went under, as he had done so many times in his life."

"What was it?" cried the girl. "Drink or gambling?"

Enoch lay back in his chair. He began to marvel at how easily he could lie, because a lie had never come readily to him before.

"Drink and gambling—and everything." Her brother gazed at his shoulders as if in disgust. "Of course he stopped writing. A man could not write in his condition. He sent for me. I stayed by him night and day and—wrote. You see—I wrote it. He lifted a written sheet from the loose pile of manuscript on the table.

"Perhaps—but it is not your play," Dorcas shook her head with obstinate incredulity.

"I told him so. I suggested we make it a collaborated play."

"It is not even a collaborated play, Enoch. Why, every situation in the plot, even the very words, are his."

"He wants me to father it."

"He must have changed since he said good-by to me. He was on fire then with hope and ambition."

"He has changed," accented Enoch gravely. It was a relief to make one truthful statement.

"Is he to play 'John Esterbrook' when it is produced?"

"No other actor can. Merry has the entire conception of it now."

"Where is he?"

"I don't know."

"I thought you promised Mr. Oswald to have him here and get things started for an early production?"

"I did. I am hoping to find Merry at one of his haunts. He must be found and put on his feet. There's a tremendous lot at stake. Dorcy," he turned to her appealingly, "won't you help me?"

"I'll help you," Dorcas spoke slowly, "if you can assure me of one thing."

"What?"

"That there is no wrong to be done."

"There is no wrong to be done. Merry will have the opportunity of his life, if he can only be made to see it that way."

"And there is no wrong to be righted?"

"There is no wrong to be righted. When he is found," the girl spoke decisively, "the music will be in the world as the author of his play."

have. My first draft was a garbled, dirty mess; I threw it away."

"Bless your soul, I'll be careful. When I've finished I'll put it in my safe. I'll have it typewritten tomorrow."

Merry laughed. "Good night, old man; I'm grateful for your faith in me."

"Good night, boy," Enoch gripped his hand. "I'm terribly glad to have you make good. Your play is wonderful."

Merry went down the stairs whistling. A few seconds later he turned back. He put his head in at the door and said in a melodramatic whisper: "Rush the business, my lord, I'm owing thee a hundred and much else. It shall be paid with compound interest from the first night's returns." Then he laughed and shut the door.

"A hundred!" whispered Wentworth. He dropped into the chair beside the fire and covered his face with his hands. The room had grown dark and it was so silent that when a cluder fell from the grate it made him start to his feet. He searched for a small brass key on his ring, hurried into the library, and unlocked a drawer in the wall. He took the slip of paper from a yellow envelope and stood staring at it for several minutes. His brows wrinkled and a curiously startled expression came into his eyes. He drew a long breath, put the paper back in the envelope, laid it in the drawer, and turned the key in the lock. He walked to a window, which looked down on the square, and stared at the life of the city. It was a habit of his. He has solved many a knotty problem with his eyes fixed unconsciously upon the busy street.

The thought-spell lengthened out indefinitely, then ended abruptly. He hurried to his den, lifted Andrew's manuscript, and seated himself before the desk. From a lower drawer he took a heap of paper, filled the ink-well almost to overflowing, and tried several pens before he found one that suited him. Then, switching on the electricity under a green-shaded bulb, he began with steady laboriousness to copy Merry's play. The clock struck three before his task was ended. He gathered the manuscript into two neat piles. One he placed in his safe, the other he locked in the drawer which held the bit of paper he had studied so intently.

He returned to his chair beside the ghost of a fire, laid his face between his palms, and fought a battle between two antagonists, his conscience and temptation. He felt as if his soul was in shackles.

A very successful service of song was held in St. James' church Sunday night by the choir, assisted by Mrs. Fred McKeen (formerly Miss Hattie Gunn of Chatham) and Messrs. DeWitt Cairns and Harry Shaw of St. John. There was a large attendance, and the generous proceeds went to the choir.

Band Benefit Night

The Newcastle band, which has been supplying such excellent music at the rink during the past season, will hold a band benefit night tomorrow night (Thursday, 18th) and posters are now out announcing the same. The special attraction for the night will be a hockey match between the fast local ladies team and the Campbellton ladies, with whom the local girls played a star game a short while ago. There seems to be no doubt in the minds of those who witnessed the Campbellton game, and who know the game, that our local girls will come out victorious on their own ice. For real hockey without outside play, the local team gets the credit of being the best on the North Shore. Here is a chance for lovers of good music and good hockey to meet and lend their assistance to a good band and encourage these lady players of Canada's winter sport.
