A Big Brother

"Jake" as he was known to his closest friends and his family, has gone, and with his going the poor, the ignorant, and the oppressed of New York and other great cities have lost a friend whose life was devoted to their needs and whose first thought was for their welfare. Jacob A. Riis, a Dane by birth, but an American by adoption, was spoken of by ex-President Roosevelt once as "the most useful citizen in New York." In all the United States, he is said to have added, "I never knew a more useful nor a stancher citizen." On another occasion, some years ago, the Colonel was quoted as saying of his old friend, "He is a man who acts squarely, works hard, wears no sour visage, and not only holds high ideals, but fights for them." This little man, who deserves all the honor and none of the stigma of the title of "reformer," came to this country in 1870, when he was not yet quite twenty-one. Already in his native town of Ribe, Denmark, he had begun in a decided way the fight against ignorance, vice, filth, and careless and unjust oppression that he was to continue his whole life long. For his first few years here he acted in many capacities—coal-mining, brick-making, peddling, anything he could turn his hand to honorably. "The New York Tribune" tells a story of the turn in Riis's life that led him into his life-work of war of journalism.

In Buffalo he was a carpenter, a lumber-yard man, and a travelling salesman for a furniture house. There, too, he made up his mind to be a newspaper man. Of his efforts to break into that profession he afterwards said: "I thought I would make a good reporter. My father had edited our local newspaper, and such little help as I had often been to him had given me a taste for the business. Being of that mind, I went to the 'Courier' office one morning and asked for the editor. He was not in. Apparently nobody was. I wandered through room after room, all empty, till at last I came to one in which sat a man with a paste-pot and pair of long shears. This must be the editor. He had the implements of his trade. I told him my errand while he clipped away.

"What is it you want?" he asked, when I had ceased speaking and waited for an answer.

"Work," I said.

"Work!" said he, waving me haughtily away with the shears. "We don't work here. This is a newspaper office." "I went, abashed. I tried 'The Express' next. This time I had the editor pointed out to me. He was just coming through the business office. At the door I stopped him and preferred my request. He looked me over, a lad fresh from the shipyard, with horny hands and a rough coat, and asked:

"What are you?"

"A carpenter," I said.

"The man turned upon his heel with a loud, rasping laugh and thrust the door in my face. For a moment I stood there stunned. His ascending steps on the stairs brought back my senses. I ran to the door and flung it open. 'You laugh!' I shouted, shaking my fist at him, standing half-way up the stairs. 'You laugh now, but wait!—And then I got the grip of my temper and slammed the door in my face. All the same, in that hour it was settled that I was to be a reporter. I knew it as I went out in the street."

Soon afterward Riis came to New York and became a reporter on "The Tribune." It was while he was there and as police reporter on "The Evening Sun" that he studied New York's underworld and laid his first plans for the rescue of those whom it held chained to vice and poverty. His first view of these conditions was some years before, on his arrival in America, poor and friendless. The New York "Times" relates the story and its sequel.

Riis had had his first experience with the police lodging-houses, after he arrived in New York, a homeless immigrant twenty-one years of age. For days he had trudged the streets looking for a job, but there was no work for him. One night, utterly worn out and brooding on his miseries, he went down to the river. He had made up his mind that life was not worth the struggle. A homeless dog—little black-and-tan—came along and made friends. A few hours later, with the dog in his arms, he applied for a lodging in the cellar of the Church Street Police Station. The dog was not admitted. After a night in the filth and depravity of the police lodging, he went out to find the dog waiting for him. During the night some one had stolen a gold locket with a lock of hair in it which Riis had inside his shirt. He complained to a Sergeant, who retaliated by picking up the animal and dashing out its brains against a wall.

It was after he had become a police reporter that Jacob Riis levelled up the score. He tells of it in his autobiography, "The Making of an American."

"We had been looking the police over by night, Roosevelt and I. We had inspected the lodging-rooms, while I went over the long long fight with him, and had come at last to the Church Street Station. It was raining outside. The light flickered, cold and cheerless, in the green lamp as we went up the stone steps. Involuntarily I looked in the corner for my little dog, but it was not there, or any one who remembered it. The Sergeant glanced over his blotter grimly; I had almost to pinch myself to make sure I was not shivering in a linen duster, wet to the skin. Down the cellar steps to the men's lodging-room I led the President of the Police Board. It was unchanged, just as it was the day I slept there. Three men lay stretched at full length on the dirty planks, two of them young lads from the country. Standing there, I told Mr. Roosevelt my own story. He turned alternately red and white with anger as he heard it.

"Did they do that to you?" he asked, when I had ended. For an answer I pointed to the young lady then asleep before him. "I was like this one," I said.

"He struck his clenched fists together, 'I will smash them tomorrow!'"

"He was as good as his word. The very next day the Police Board took the matter up. Provision was made for the homeless on a barge in the East River until plans could be perfected for siting the tramps from the unfortunate, and within a week, on recommendation of the Chief of Police, orders were issued to close the doors of the police lodging-rooms on February 2, 1896, never again to be opened. The battle was won. The murder of my dog was avenged and forgiven after twenty-five years."

The friendship between Riis and Theodore Roosevelt began soon after the publication of the former's first book dealing with conditions in the slums, called "How the Other Half Lives." Mr. Roosevelt, then a member of the New York Police Commission, read the book, appreciated its sincerity and fine feeling, and recognized the value at once of the indomitable spirit with which its author was imbued. We read:

One night Riis got a message from Theodore Roosevelt, then of the New York Police Commission. "I want to help," it said. From that day Theodore Roosevelt was Jacob Riis's steadfast friend, and when he became Police Commissioner they were constantly together. They walked to tenement-houses and observed for themselves the conditions. They tramped the streets at night and found policemen asleep, and stirred the department from top to bottom. And they abolished the police lodging-house system.

This friendship became celebrated, and it was laughingly said of Riis that, in his later years, he could not make a speech, upon any subject whatsoever, without mentioning Roosevelt's name at least twelve times before, his remarks were concluded. "The Sun" sums up a few of the reforms that Riis, both independently and with the help of Commissioner Roosevelt, accomplished in New York or set in motion:

Mr. Riis did the work that won small parks for bad spots in the city. He labored years to have more school-houses built. The evils he exposed he discovered in his work as a reporter. He knew how to write so as to wring men's hearts with his news of oppression, misery, and hopelessness. He compelled indifferent city officials to concede the reforms he suggested or approved.

It was Riis who exposed the contaminated state of the city's water-supply, and thus brought about the purchase of the whole Croton watershed. It was Riis who forced the destruction of rear tenements, and thus relieved the hideous darkness and density of life among the very poor.

He forced the obliteration of Mulberry Bend, the worst tenement block in the city, and had the space turned into a park. He spoke the word that induced Commissioner Roosevelt to abolish the police lodging-house. He fought for a secured truant-school. He drove bachelors out of tenement basements. He demanded light for dark tenements, thus illuminating the hiding-places of dirt, filth and crime.

He worked for the abolition of playgrounds for schools and the opened, compelled its enforcement. Playgrounds for schools and the opening of school-rooms to boys, and girls' clubs were of his planning. He started the movement for flowers for the healthy as well as for the sick poor.

Gains 40 Pounds in 40 Days

Remarkable Results of the New Tissue Builder Tonaline Tablets in Many Cases of Run-Down Men and Women.

Prove it Yourself by Buying a Box of Tonaline Tablets Now.

"By George, I never saw anything like the effects of that new treatment, Tonaline Tablets, for building up of weight and lost nerve force. It acted more like a miracle than a medicine," said a well-known gentleman yesterday in speaking of the revolution that had taken place in his condition. "I began to think that there was nothing on earth that could make me fat. I tried tonics, digestives, heavy eating, diets, milk, beer and almost everything else you could think of, but without result."

Any man or woman who is thin can recover normal weight by the best new treatment, Tonaline Tablets. "I have been thin for years and began to think it was natural for me to be that way. Finally I read about the remarkable processes brought about by use of Tonaline Tablets, so I decided to try myself. Well, when I looked at myself in the mirror now, I think it is somebody else. I have put on just forty pounds during the last forty days, and never felt stronger or more 'nervy' in my life."

Tonaline Tablets are a powerful inducer to nutrition, increases cell-growth, food, increases the number of blood-corpuscles and as a necessary result builds up muscles, and solid healthy flesh, and rounds out the figure.

For women who can never appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness this remarkable treatment may prove a revelation. It is a beauty maker as well as a form builder and nerve strengthener. Tonaline Tablets cost $1 for 50-days' treatment, at druggists, or mailed by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.

Britain's Remarkable Financial Position

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Before the adjournment of the House of Commons this evening, David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced that reports received from points throughout the country showed that with the opening of the banks the financial position was perfectly satisfactory.

The Bank of England, he said, has received on foreign accounts £2,500,000 in gold; that there was no sign of gold being hoarded, and that trade was regaining its normal condition.

The Bank of England, Mr. Lloyd George continued, felt that it could reduce its rate of discount to 5 per cent. on Saturday. Some banks had received more money than they had paid out.

At a meeting of the silver brokers here today it was said that the Government had taken over all the available silver supplies for current purposes.

THE WAR SITUATION

Germans Admit Heavy Losses in Their Attack on Liege Belgians Still Masters of the Forts of Liege Although German Troops are in the Town

LATEST TELEGRAPHIC DESPACHES

French and German troops are facing each other off the north of Verdun. There have been numerous clashes of minor importance, probably pending an extensive engagement in the near future. The respective positions of the Germans and Belgians before Liege are apparently unchanged. German forces are making careful reconnaissances in the district of Hesbays which is believed to mean that Germany will take the offensive north of Liege.

According to French reports the Germans have been unsuccessful in their attempt to drive the French from their position outside of Meulhausen.

British war office information bureau states there is reason to believe that the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau which British and French warships were watching have taken refuge. The engagements between Austria and Russia so far have been of minor importance.

A Shanghai despatch says 45,000 Japanese soldiers have embarked on transportation ships and are waiting orders.

Copenhagen despatch states that Russian mobilization will be completed Aug. 21st. Australian warships have joined British squadrons in East Asiatic waters. Recruiting still goes on in London for over-sea service.

The Lusitania in her dash across the Atlantic reached the Mersey in safety.

WAR BRIEFS

We gather the following from our latest exchanges, all of which we believe to be reliable:

The women of Halifax have inaugurated a plan for raising $10,000.00 in Nova Scotia for the equipment of a hospital ship.

Sir Hamilton Gault of Montreal, has offered half a million dollars to raise and equip a regiment, and many other offers have poured in upon the militia department, showing the great interest of Canadians in the Empire's welfare.

France has declared war against Austria as well as against Germany.

The port of Halifax was closed for several days to all shipping, while mines were being laid by way of precaution. A Premier McBride has bought from the Chilean government two submarines for the protection of British Columbia.

Newfoundland will raise a contingent and will increase her naval reserve to 1000 men.

Guysboro has arrested a suspicious character who for sometime seems to have been particularly interested in the telegraph lines leading to the Canso cables. Suspects have been arrested in Chester. Their baggage contained suspicious plans and papers relating to the southern shore of the province.

"On to Berlin" is the cry of the French troops as they advance to meet old foes.

A memorable scene was witnessed in the British Parliament, when in response to Mr. Asquith's appeal, men of all parties pledged themselves to lay aside all local differences of opinion and act as one man in defence of the Empire.

Belgiums are still masters at Liege although German troops are in the town.

Cabinet Conference in Japan and activity in the navy have strengthened the belief that Japan will soon take an active part with Britain in the war.

Tokio reports that a German fleet has sunk a Russian steamer and driven many vessels to the shelter of Japanese ports.

The Germans occupy the city of Liege, while the Belgian troops hold the forts. The Belgian official view is that the situation is quite satisfactory. Strong forces guard all the approaches to Brussels.

The Austrians before Serbia are still bombarding Belgrade, while part of the Serbian army is taking the offensive in Bosnia.

The North Sea is again closed to the fishing fleets, which is regarded as significant, in view of the fact that there are large British and German fleets in that water.

The German cruiser Karlsruhe, which arrived at San Juan, Porto Rico, reported an engagement Friday night off the Bahamas with four British and French cruisers.

The French Government forbids the publication of the French casualties list, so that Germans may not know the movements of the French troops.

German accounts admit the loss of 25,000 in their attack on Liege, and it is reported that in the battle with the French troops in Alsace, their German loss was 30,000. They were buried in trenches four bodies deep.

Six hundred German spies have been captured in Belgium, one hundred of whom have been shot.

German soldiers separated from their regiments are frequently captured. They make no resistance and are apparently quite glad to be fed and lodged by the captors. Two hundred of them were captured in one night.

Germany's Real Peril is Internal Revolution

(Special Cable Despatch.)

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Les Debats in a remarkable article declares that Germany's real peril is not war but an internal revolution. The falsity of the Triple Alliance is revealed in the fact that Austria until yesterday was officially at war only with Serbia. Italy has never had her heart in it because of grievances against Austria.

Within three days of the outbreak of the war there were no active warships in the Mediterranean Sea except British and French. Austria may hope that Italy will still remain estranged from France or that she may be unable to seal the height of infatuation upon which the Kaiser and his General Staff are living. The German Government or perhaps we should rather have said the Prussian Government, is isolated morally, economically and in a military sense to a degree that would have seemed fantastically impossible a fortnight ago. The South German States can foresee no such compensation as obtained in 1870, and can only be lukewarm as partners.

The article points out that the unity of all parties in France and Belgium is conspicuous, which is a factor of no small importance, if only because of the quietude of the great cities.

"Germany, whose industries are stopped, fields neglected, and credit imminently threatened, will feel the pinch long before the allies begin to feel it. Every day the internal pressure will increase the political education so strangely arrested for the last half century, and the country will be forced into a life of repressed hostility. North and South will burst the bounds and social democracy will take on an altogether new aspect. There has not been a flicker of revolution in Germany since 1848. The great fact on the eastern frontier two months hence may well be not war but revolution."

Prince of Wales' Fund Already $1,125,000

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Although it was opened only this morning, $1,125,000 had already been subscribed to-night to the Prince of Wales' fund for the relief of the poor during the war. The provincial cities are still to be heard from.

One of the first subscriptions was $90,000 from the Prince's regiment, the First Life Guards. Among others who contributed to the fund were George Coats, the manufacturer, $250,000; Lord Ashton, $75,000; the Rothschilds, $50,000; King George, Sir Ernest Cassel and Sir William Hartley, each, $25,000.

Indian Rajahs Offer Armies to Britain

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The War Office announces that the Maharajah of Nepal has offered the entire military resources of his independent kingdom to the British Government. Other Indian independent kingdoms are making similar offers.

The Maharajah of Nepal is a Major-General in the British army by virtue of an honorary commission. His regular army numbers thirty thousand men, with an artillery force of two hundred and fifty modern guns. The majority of his troops are of the Gurkha tribe, the most famous soldiers in India.

Germany Has Blundered in Preparatory Stages

(By Frederick W. Wile, London Daily Mail correspondent, in Halifax Chronicle.)

LONDON, Aug. 9.—When the history of this Armageddon is written, no matter what its outcome, the world will know that, as far as Germany was concerned, it was a war of miscalculation.

Germany has blundered in her preparatory stages and initial developments all along the line. Her own people will come to realize this before long. When they do so there will be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

At present they are hopelessly in the dark. Drunk with self-confidence, they are being dragged deeper and deeper into the uncertainties of a world war in the belief that the sword has been forced into the Kaiser's hand.

WHERE THEY WERE WRONG.

Germany's miscalculations have been both political and military. They began with the cocksure supposition that the Triple Entente would not withstand the shock of war. France was held unready. Russia was looked upon as on the brink of revolution; both political and industrial. England was thought to be preoccupied with Ulster and disinclined in any circumstance to risk anything in a great continental war not directly affecting her. Italy's help was regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The idea of Belgian's resistance to Germany's temporary invasion was hardly considered. That Belgium could offer military opposition worthy of Plevna never entered Berlin's mind.

SADLY DISAPPOINTED

American sympathy was absolutely counted upon. Its absence is the cruelest disappointment the Kaiser's Government has so far suffered. Its miscalculations in regard to England were perhaps the greatest of all. It scouted the thought of an English Army, or the idea that a Kitchener might suddenly be placed in charge of it. The Germans have been educated by their political professors to believe that a great European war involving Great Britain meant the independence of Canada, Australia and South Africa and revolutions in India and Egypt. The hour of rude awakening has set in. Great soldiers and statesmen warned me when I left inhositable Berlin that the war would produce surprises. They have begun with a vengeance.

Clyde Liner is Promptly Caught

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Clyde Liner Pawnee slipped from her mooring under cover of darkness tonight, but was overtaken by the United States Cruiser Dayton outside of Sandy Hook, after the battleship Florida had fired two guns across her bow, and forced her to return to her pier in the Hudson River. It is presumed that she was carrying coal for a foreign cruiser which had arranged to meet her outside of the three mile limit.

"Waverley's" Hundredth Birthday

"Waverley" marked an epoch in our literary history, and the turning point in Scott's dual career as poet and novelist," writes Frank Mumby, in T. P.'s Weekly. He continues:

The inner history of the "Waverley" novels is curiously interesting. Byron had lately awakened to find himself famous, and Scott, who in 1813 declined the laureateship in favor of Southey, was perhaps too ready to acknowledge that the younger man had supplanted him in popularity as a poet. The comparative failure of "The Lord of the Isles," a little later, seemed to confirm this view.

"Well, well, James, so be it," he said, with cheery resignation, when the printer told him how matters stood with "The Lord of the Isles." "But, you know, we must not droop, for we can't afford to give out. Since one line has failed, we must stick to something else." And with that he went on with the wonderful series of prose romances which began to make their appearance just a hundred years ago.

HOW "WAVERLEY" WAS WRITTEN.

What really induced him to insist upon the secrecy of authorship for so many years it is difficult to say, though various reasons have been advanced. "I do not see how my silence can be considered as imposing on the public," he wrote to his friend Morritt, of Roxbury and the "Venus of Velasquez" fame. "If I give my name to a book without writing it, unquestionably that would be a trick. But, unless in the case of his averring facts which he may be called upon to defend or justify, I think an author may use his own discretion in giving or withholding his name. Harry MacKenzie never put his name in a title-page till the last edition of his works; and Swift only owned one out of his thousand and one publications. In point of emolument, everybody knows that I sacrifice much money by withholding my name; and what should I gain by it that any human being has a right to consider as an unfair advantage? In fact, only the freedom of writing trifles with less personal responsibility, and perhaps more frequently than I otherwise might do."

SCOTT AT WORK.

Long before he dreamt of becoming his son-in-law and biographer, Lockhart caught a fleeting glimpse of the novelist at work at this period, heedless of the effect of his titanic labors upon the over-looking eyes. The story, as told by Lockhart, is worth repeating. He explains how, in June, 1814, he happened to be spending the evening with his friend William Menzies; afterwards one of the Judges of the Supreme Court at the Cape:

"When my companion's worthy father and uncle, after seeing two or three bottles go round, left the juveniles to themselves, the weather being hot, we adjourned to a library, which had one large window looking northwards. After carousing here for an hour or more, I observed that a shade had come over the aspect of my friend, who happened to be placed immediately opposite to myself, and said something that indicated a fear of his being unwell.

"No," said he, "I shall be well enough presently if you will only let me sit where you are, and take my chair; for there is a confounded hand in sight of me here, which has often bothered me before, and now it won't let me fill my glass with a good will. I rose to change places with him accordingly, and he pointed out to me this hand which, like the writing on Balaazar's wall, disturbed the hour of his hilarity.

"Since we sat down," he said, "I have been watching it—it fascinates my eye—it never stops—page after page is finished and thrown on that heap of MS., and still it goes on unwearied—and so it will be till candles are brought in, and God knows how long after that. It is the same every night—I can't stand a sight of it when I am not at my books." "Some stupid, dogged, engrossing clerk, probably," exclaimed myself, "or some other riddy youth of our society." "No, boys," said our host, "I will know what hand it is—'tis Sir Walter Scott's."

GUESSES AT AUTHORSHIP.

One report had it that "Waverley" was the work of Scott's brother Thomas, who had gone to Canada as paymaster of the 70th regiment, and it amused the real author to encourage this idea. He even invited his brother to join in the plot by sending over the raw martial for another novel.

"I will give it all the cobbling that is necessary, and, if you do but exert yourself, I have not the least doubt it will be worth £500; and to encourage you, you may, when you send the MS., draw on me for £100, at fifty days' sight—so that your labors will not, at any rate, be quite thrown away. You have more talent than most people; and all that you want, namely, the mere practice of composition, I can supply, or the devil's in it. Keep this matter a dead secret, and look knowing when "Waverley" is spoken of." Nothing came of this, but Scott continued to disown his novels. When he sold to Constable the remaining copyright of the four works published between December, 1819, and January, 1821—"Ivanhoe," "The Monastery," "The Abbot," and "Kenilworth"—the stipulation was repeated that his name was not to be revealed under a penalty of £2,000. For the remaining copyright of the four novels he had already cleared at least £30,000 before this bargain was completed thus making in all £15,000 for the fruits of scarcely more than a year's work.

A Royal Errand Boy

By Rosalie DeWolfe.

Not long ago, young Prince Henry, the third son of the king of England, shook in his royal shoes quite as violently as any American boy does, when he has to take a difficult examination. King George and Queen Mary, his father and mother, had decided that Prince Henry should attend the famous old school of Eton, and not even a prince may be excused from its entrance examinations.

However, because the boy belonged to the royal family, he was given a private examination before the "Head," as the Honorable Edward Lytton, the head master of the school is called. But being all alone with the learned gentleman, Prince Henry thought was even worse than having companions to share his nervousness. In mathematics, history and English grammar, Prince Henry acquitted himself fairly well, and when it came to French, he was quite at home, for he had studied the language since he was five.

"Very good," said the "Head," and the prince felt sure that he was going to be put in the "upper remove," which is the name given to the higher class. But alas, when Prince Henry began to translate Latin and to recite Greek grammar, studies which school boys in England begin much earlier than is the custom in this country, the "Head" began to frown.

The fact was that Henry was far behind other boys of his years in these studies and must be put for a term at least in the "lower remove." This meant that the son of the king would have to be a "fag" and run errands for Johnny Jenkins, Sammy Smith, or any other boy who happened to be in an upper class. The rules and customs of the school are not changed for any boy no matter who his father may be.

Prince Henry was glad to go to Eton even as a member of the "lower remove." He enjoyed especially laying in a supply of the kind of clothes that every Eton boy must wear. There was the Eton jacket, cut square in the back and without tails; the board rolling white collar; the plain dark waist-coats; the long trousers, and the greatest novelty of all, a silk hat, the "topper."

The very first day, Prince Henry learned that as he was only a "lower remove" boy, his "topper" must have a cloth and not a ribbon band, and that he must leave the lower button of his waist-coat unbuttoned.

Prince Henry was rather anxious for his duties as a "fag" to begin. He heard from the other boys that he was lucky, in having been chosen a "general fag." They told him that nearly every "lower remove" boy must black boots, make tea or do errands for one particular "upper remove" boy whose special "fag," he is. Besides these special "fags," there are ten "general fags" who may be called to serve the members of the sixth form, but not of fifth form at any time when their special fags are busy. Prince Henry's turn came soon when an "upper remove" boy, the grandson of a well-known manufacturer of thread, called on him to make tea. In England even school boys take tea at five o'clock. Prince Henry was slightly nervous over his new duties, for although the children of the royal family are brought up rather plainly, yet he had never attended to all of the details of tea making alone. However, everything went off very nicely.

In the course of the next few days, Prince Henry learned many other things besides tea making and his lessons. He must never walk, so long as he remains a "lower remove" boy on the west side of "High" street, unless he is calling at the shops. He must never wear a fancy colored waist-coat nor brown shoes. Nor may he carry a rolled umbrella. In cold weather he may not turn up his coat collar unless he happens to belong to a society called the "Pop." And until he becomes an upper class boy, he can never walk arm in arm with another boy or whistle a tune when he happens to be feeling cheerful.

Every Eton boy enters himself for a sport of some kind, and Prince Henry has chosen to be a "dry bob." That means that he will go in for cricket and football. If he had chosen rowing instead, he would have been called a "wet bob." When Prince Henry plays football, he wears a pair of grey "knickers," a flannel shirt, a sweater, a scarf, a cap and black boots.

Threepenny Day February 27, is a great day at Eton. Then all the boys receive a threepenny bit as a present. In by-gone times, when the Eton boys had less pocket money, the threepenny bit meant a great deal to them. Nowadays they spend much more than this on Threepenny Day, but they enjoy the fun of receiving the small coin just as much as the boys of long ago. When this custom was new, the boys could have their choice of the three penny bit or a half a sheep which at this time was worth only that amount. The students tell the story that in recent years one boy demanded the half of a sheep.

The greatest day of all for the Eton boys is the Fourth of June, the birthday of George III, who was the the great-greatfather of Prince Henry.

The fourth is a whole holiday when the Eton boys invite their friends to spend the day and the old Etonians come back for reunions. For this great occasion the boys wear a special costume which consists of a blue jacket with gilt buttons, white duck trousers, pink socks and black patent leather pumps with gold buckles. Yet in spite of this elaborate dress, they are real boys; they enjoy thoroughly the big cricket match in the afternoon and the profession of boats in the evening; and, they do full justice to the banquet which, with a display of fireworks, brings the day's program to a close.—The Boy's World.

Protecting Our Feathered Friends

Increase of Destruction by Insects Due to Decrease of Insectivorous Birds in Canada.

(August "Conservation.")

In any discussion of the protection of bird life in Canada, considerable opposition has always been manifested by the agricultural interests. It is claimed that birds are responsible for great damage to maturing fruits, berries, tomatoes, etc., and, earlier in the season, to the seed planted in the ground. This is true to a certain extent. But, as in the study of any subject, there are two sides to the bird protection question. The damage to the fruit is visible to the eye of the grower, and he consequently waxes wroth.

The other side of the subject is one with which the agriculturist is less familiar. Could the birds place their daily food before those hostile to them, it would readily be seen to what extent they serve the interests of those who are dependent upon the products of the soil.

An analysis of the contents of the stomachs of thousands of birds has shown that 90 per cent of the food consisted of insects and 10 per cent of vegetable matter. Upwards of 5,000 insects have been found in the stomach of one bird. It has been estimated that the destruction by insects in Canada amounts to approximately fifty million dollars annually. Last year the tent caterpillar was very prevalent; this year the army worm has made its appearance and is causing great loss to the farmers in certain sections. It is known that, with the decrease in the number of birds which annually reach Canada in the spring, there has been a constant increase in the destruction by insects. It has also been stated that, if all bird life were destroyed, seven years would see the end of vegetation in Canada. This has been the reason for an active campaign for the protection of birds. The United States Congress has passed an act for the protection of migratory birds, and interested parties are bringing the matter before the attention of the Canadian Government.

Apart altogether from the practical view of bird life there is the sentimental side. What would Canada be like without our feathered friends? If we could no longer look forward to the arrival of the first spring robin, or of the wren, of the wild canary, something would be missing from our lives which we could not replace.

This is a subject which should engage the attention of school boards and teachers. The pupils should be taught to protect our feathered friends and their nests. The Boy Scout movement has taken up the protection of bird life and in their hands good work is being done.

CAN'T LOSE HAIR

Twenty Years From Today a Bald-headed Man Will Be An Unusual Sight.

One of the most prominent druggists of America made a statement a few weeks ago which has caused a great deal of discussion among scientists in the medical press. He said: "If the new hair grower, Mildredina Hair Remedy, increases its sales as it has during the past year, it will be used by nearly every man, woman and child in America within eight years."

"When Mildredina Hair Remedy is used almost universally, dandruff will disappear and with its departure baldness, itching scalp, splitting hair and all scalp diseases will be a thing of the past."

There is only one way to cure dandruff, and that is to kill the germs. There is only one hair preparation that will kill the germs and that is Mildredina Hair Remedy. This unusual hair restorer with its record of thousands of cures will grow on any head where there is any life left; it will cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching of the scalp in three weeks or money back.

It is the most pleasant and invigorating tonic, is not sticky, or greasy and is used extensively by ladies of refinement who desire to have and to keep their hair soft, lustrous and luxuriant. Fifty cents for a large bottle at druggists everywhere. Mail orders filled by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.

Financial Aspects of Fur Farming

Continued Growth of the Industry—Dangers in Company Promotion to be Avoided

(August "Conservation.")

Phenomenal as was the development of the fur-farming industry in 1913, the present year, in all probability, will easily outstrip it. Scores of farmers throughout Canada, but especially in the Maritime provinces, are commencing the breeding of fur-bearing animals. Heavy capitalized companies are being organized on every hand for a similar purpose, although it is now three years since the industry entered upon its first boom. This unusual condition is due, in part at least, to the fact that capitalization values are at present based on stock for breeding purposes, but it can only be a question of time before values are reduced to a pelt basis. Moreover, the extensive importation of wild-fox stock into the Maritime provinces stimulates and maintains the interest that is being taken in this form of investment. The danger of over-capitalizing such untried stock should be, and doubtless is, discouraged by those having the best interests of the industry at heart.

It is worthy of note that at the March sales of C. M. Lamson & Co., the London fur dealers, very little demand was found for black fox skins. To quote the company's report of the sale: "A feature of the sale was the entire absence of the demand for black (fox) skins; which in many instances brought less than former values."

"This is a serious matter to the breeders of black foxes in eastern Canada, as values will assuredly be lower as supply of this class of skins is largely increased."

It is unfortunate that some form of commission, such as exists in Manitoba, is not to be found in each of the provinces, to check and prevent questionable promotions which bring into disrepute an otherwise legitimate and profitable industry.—A. D.

There are now six vacancies in the Canadian Senate which when filled will bring the parties within nine of a tie.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12th, 1914.

There have been occasions in which Great Britain has declared war without the unanimous concurrence of the people. Such was the case in the late war in South Africa. Many of the most patriotic and best of her citizens felt that British subjects had been the aggressors, that the end sought might have been reached by peaceful methods. Whether their opinion was the correct one is a question which need not now be discussed. But, when Premier Asquith, on Tuesday night of the 4th inst., in the House of Commons, declared war against Germany, the members of both parties with wonderful unanimity were in complete sympathy with the announcement. And the people of great Britain have very enthusiastically endorsed the decision of their representatives and from every part of the Empire offers of co-operation have been forthcoming, as the result of similar convictions.

When Col. S. Hughes, Minister of Militia, wired that Canada would immediately send a contingent 20,000 strong, he must for the moment have forgotten that the Canadian militia is enrolled only for home defence, or else, he must have taken for granted that the men who compose it would volunteer to serve the Motherland. But if this were the case, he was not greatly mistaken, for before three days passed, 11,000 Canadians, officers and soldiers, besides doctors and nurses had offered their willing service. One of the nurses, Miss Mary Grey Macdonald, hails from Bridgewater, another is Miss Alice Muriel Mills, of Truro. Many have since volunteered, and the latest report is that Canada's first contingent will consist of 21,000 men and will be supplemented to make 25,000.

Parliament is called for the 18th inst., to vote the necessary funds, and to legalize the steps already taken by the Governor-General, and the military department, with the sanction of the Cabinet. Sir Edward Grey said in the House of Commons, "Since Germany will have war she must have it in good measure, and Britain never went to war with a clearer conscience." Mr. Asquith was equally pronounced. Parliament at once voted $500,000,000, for special war purposes, and Chancellor Lloyd George invited and has received the co-operation of Mr. Austin Chamberlain for raising the amount.

It is the conviction that Britain is not the aggressor, that she has done what she could to avoid war, and that she is in duty bound to honor her treaties and aid her allies, which has produced such oneness of opinion and feeling in the whole Empire.

Germany has certainly acted in this case the part of the big bully. If I have a quarrel with a neighbor two doors removed from me, and my next door neighbor is unwilling that I should trample and destroy his grain field in order that I may get through to fight my enemy, what right have I to defy the prohibition because I am the stronger? Belgian did right in asserting her neutrality and refusing permission to the Kaiser, with the "Mailed fist" to destroy her property and inflict injury on her citizens by making her territory a thoroughfare for the German army. And Britain did right in standing by her old friend and ally.

Austria, too, has acted with the same spirit as Germany when in the late Balkan war, Serbia got possession of Albania, Austria refused to allow her to retain it, because she herself wanted an opening to the Adriatic Sea, and now because Serbia was displeased with this conduct, and because a Serb assassinated the Archduke, Ferdinand and his wife, though there is no evidence to show that he had any connection with the Serbian government, Austria proposes to swallow up her little neighbor. The responsibility rests upon Francis Joseph who has been for sixty years on the throne of Austria. Nations in these days cannot do such things with impunity. The world has advanced so far that might is not regarded as the synonym of right, at least to the degree in which it formerly was.

It seemed remarkable that with no immediate expectation of war the most numerous and most powerful fleet ever assembled on the British coast should have come together for review just in time to respond to the war cry. More than two hundred warships of all classes forming a line of about twenty miles and carrying between 70,000 or 80,000 officers and men, passed before the royal yacht. Steaming at the rate of eleven miles an hour, it took them two hours to pass a given point. They were accompanied by airships whose evolutions added to the very striking display of Britain's strength. The entire fleet was manned and armed and ready to receive orders when Germany on the 1st inst., declared war.

Many false reports have been put into circulation respecting battles and naval engagements which have taken place—one object of which seems to have been to increase prices of articles of food. We have been warned against them. All lines of communication are now under the control of the government, and only such reports as are sanctioned by the Government are reliable.

Reception to Rev. G. C. and Mrs. Warren

The Bridgetown Baptist Church last Friday evening was the scene of a very pleasant and happy social gathering, when about three hundred of the members of the church and congregation and their friends gathered to meet their newly married pastor, the Rev. Gordon C. Warren and his bride. The vestry of the church had been transformed into a drawing room, and was artistically and beautifully decorated with cut flowers. At eight o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Warren took their place at the head of the receiving line and for an hour received words of congratulations and best wishes from the large number present as they were formally introduced by the ushers.

After congratulations were over the gathering was called to order and a short program followed. Mr. A. D. Brown was called upon to extend formal congratulations from the Bridgetown and Centrea churches and congregations. Revs. (Dr) Jost, J. F. Dustan and A. R. Reynolds of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches were present and extended congratulations.

A purse of gold from the church was presented to Mr. Warren by Mr. Geo. H. Dixon. The program was interspersed with piano duets by Mrs. Stephen Porter and Miss Marguerite Hicks, and vocal solos by Mrs. Karl Theiss and Mr. Milledge Salter. At the close of the program ice cream and cake was served by the ladies of the Church.

Unique "Baby Party" at Colonial Arms Hotel

On Friday afternoon, Aug. 7th in honor of the third birthday of Miss Francis Chaplain of Montreal a "baby party" was given at Colonial Arms, the guests assembling at the Hotel parlors in costumes suitable for young children.

After the customary greetings and presentation of gifts, the Orchestra struck up for the game of "Musical Chair." This was followed by a "puppet hunt" Miss Harriet Huntington of Springfield, Mass. carrying off the prize for finding the most.

After the games were over, supper was served to the little ones on the veranda the table being very prettily decorated, and having as a "centrepiece" a handsome birthday cake, with candles lighted.

Votes were then taken, and prizes awarded the one for the. Best behaved baby going to Miss Francis Chaplain, Montreal.

The naughtiest baby to Dr. W. V. Ryder, of Northampton, Mass.

The Cutest baby to Dr. H. W. Broadbridge of Haverhill, Mass.

The Prettiest baby to Mrs. E. M. Green of Boston, Mass.

The best dressed baby to Miss Marion Spurr, Colonial Arms.

The baby with the most original costume to Miss Janet McRobie of Montreal.

The Army Worm in Nova Scotia

This season has given up to date a number of outbreaks of this pest. In several sections myriads of them are defoliating corn, oats, barley and grass. When they have cleaned out one field they often migrate to another. In most cases nothing can be done for the first field. If they are found when small spraying with 4 ozs. paris green, 2 lbs. lime to 40 gals. water will be effective. If they have completed damage in a field before noticed a furrow should be plowed around the infested field with the land side to the field to be protected and about every 30 feet in the furrow a 1 to 2 foot hole with steep sides dug. The worms when they march will get in the furrow follow it and tumble into the holes and perish. This method is protecting several fields in Annapolis County at the present time. The Army Worm looks like an ordinary cutworm, 1-2 to 1 1-2 inches long dark faintly striped on the back and a light stripe along the sides.

Get the Best out of Your Farm

When you fail to fertilize your farm, to fill it right and drain it right, you will fail to get the best out of it. Successful farming today means scientific farming. And there is no farm today giving forth its fullest capacity of crops that isn't properly drained.

Use Drain Tile Freely

Use it correctly, use it judiciously and Mother Earth will respond with a willingness that will surprise you. Take away the surplus water. Use our burned Clay Drain Tile and you will never have to do the work a second time. Send for price list today.

The bulletin board in front of the Western Union Telegraph Office has been a great attraction for a few days. Numbers of persons are frequently to be seen reading, or listening to the reading of the dispatches. The spectacle reminds us of scenes we witnessed in the United States during the Secession times. Miss Healy, the operator, has found her work considerably increased. The trouble is, as we have intimated elsewhere, that many of the dispatches are unreliable. However, everybody is interested in them, and comments, pro and con, are frequent.

WE KNOW RESISTOL WILL HELP YOU

To Regain Your Strength and Energy

Report of the Hotel Physician in a Leading New York Hospital on the Cure of Brain Fatigue and Nervous Exhaustion

"A few years ago we considered that we were doing well if we cured 10 per cent of the cases of Brain Fatigue and Nervous Prostration brought to us, but since the introduction of Resistol into our hospital we cure more than 90 per cent of all the cases in its various forms brought to us. It builds new tissues, gives new energy, new life, new blood and strength to any part of the body attacked by these diseases."

Resistol is a powerful tonic nourishing food medicine composed of valuable tonic stimulants obtained from vegetable drugs. Resistol contains no narcotics or other dangerous drugs which merely deaden pain temporarily but give no permanent relief or cure the cause of disease. Resistol is a powerful body builder and blood maker; it is the best remedy known to the medical profession to enrich thin, watery blood and supply new rich blood to the whole body.

It will be found a most valuable remedy in cases of over stimulation in which the excessive use of liquor causes depression, dullness of the faculties or intoxication; it counteracts the depressing effects and restores the system to its normal condition. FREE—To prove the wonderful merits of RESISTOL we will mail a large sample bottle for 25c in silver or stamps for postage, etc. Resistol Chemical Co., Boston, Mass.

THE PARSON'S SOFT JOB

"There is a prevalent idea among the criminal classes that the clergy have nothing whatever to do."

The authority for this statement is the archdeacon of London, who has three large prisons in his archdeaconry. An old woman once said to a jail chaplain: "I wish you could find a job for my old man. He is not up to much and cannot do anything, but he wants a soft job like yours!"—London Globe.

A gentleman met a child crying in the street, and said, "Now be a good boy and stop crying." "I can't," sobbed the child. "Here's a penny for you," said the gentleman. "Why can't you stop crying and be a good boy?" "I'm a girl, was the reply."

"Women must consider it a dreadful fate to be old maids," mused Mr. Chugwater. "They do, Josiah," said Chugwater. "Look what terrible notions they sometimes marry to escape it."

The Lilbridge Scandal

A Mistake in the Name

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Miss Tabitha Way scuttled across the street and entered the gate of her nearest neighbor, Fenella Mason.

"Fenny, what do you think?" she gasped as she sank into a chair. Fenella Mason lifted her little brown eyes from the molasses cookies she was rolling out and spoke calmly:

"Mr. Tab, but you're all bet up!" she said. "What if I be?" snapped Tabitha, mopping her face with a corner of her white apron in lieu of a pocket handkerchief.

"Makes you look so uncomfortable," remarked Fenny casually as she knelt before the stove to put a pan of cookies in the oven.

"You never asked me any such thing," retorted Fenny over her thin shoulder. "You asked me what I thought, and I told you I thought you looked all bet up, so there?"

"I declare, Fenny Mason, you sit the greatest critter," Tabitha said. "You won't listen all you get good and ready, so I'm just going to set right here until you say you're ready to hear about the scandal."

"Scandal!" shrieked Fenny, sitting up straight in her chair, with open mouth. "Why didn't you say so before? I thought you'd come to tell me about the new twins down at Black Hannah's, and I heard all about that from the milkman."

"Well, I never!" gasped Tabby, for this was news to her. "Boys or girls?" "Girls," "I wonder what Hannah's going to name 'em?"

"They're all named—Magnolia and Perigolia." "The idea! Now, for the news. I'll bet you haven't heard about Deacon Quigg's son."

"Not Alfred?" "Yes, ma'am! He's robbed a bank!" "No!" shrieked Fenny, for she was second cousin to the Quiggs and felt Fenella Mason and Tabby Way still sat in Fenella's kitchen discussing the fugitive concealed in the loft room closet.

"They had been up there once and handed Alfred a well laden tray of food, for which he had given them scanty thanks." "I'm glad he came here first," Fenella was saying for the hundredth time that afternoon when there came a thundering knock at the kitchen door.

"It's them!" hissed Tabby. Fenella went to the door and peeped through an opening in the shade. "That's no one but Alfred's pa, the deacon," she whispered. "Guess I better let him in."

She cautiously opened the door and permitted the amazed old man to enter the darkened room. "What in tarantula pumpkins is the matter with you, Fenny?" he asked testily. "Locked up here tight as a drum! You old minks air the confoundest critters! You act as if a hull regiment of marauding men was breaking in around the yard waiting to break into the house and elope with you! Have you seen Alfred?"

"Alfred?" gasped Fenella. "Alfred?" echoed Tabitha. "Yes, Alfred!" barked the deacon, flinging his cap down on the table. "We had a telegram from him saying he'd just got back from Patagonia. You know he went as first mate on a freight steamer. Station master on the 11 o'clock train this morning and some body around the yard waiting to break into the house and elope with you! Have you seen Alfred?"

"Up in the loft room closet," said Fenella faintly. "Why?" thundered the deacon. "It was Tabitha who told him of the news of the bank robbery and how Alfred Quigg, scapgrace son of Deacon Quigg of Lilbridge, had become an absconder and that the detectives were close on his trail."

Fenella. "I've got something important to tell you." "Thanks," said Alfred, going round to the screen door and letting himself inside.

As he stood there hat in hand, smiling good naturedly around at the familiar old fashioned room, he was startled at the actions of the two good spinsters whose earnest gossip he had interrupted.

Fenella flew to the door through which he had just entered and slammed it tight shut and locked it. Tabby pulled down the window sash, locked it and pulled the shade to the sill. Then from window to window of the little house flew the two women, pulling down shades and drawing curtains until from without the place looked deserted.

"What's up?" demanded Alfred Quigg when they rushed breathlessly back to the kitchen and caught him by either arm. "They're coming, Alfred, and you must hide," warned Fenella. "Remember, Tabby and I don't believe a word of it, but you don't want to be caught. Remember your poor parents. You just hide until the whole blows over, and then we'll know what to do. I'm so thankful you came to my house first. You will be safe here. No one would dream of looking for you in Fenella Mason's house. Come!"

So, half explaining, they dragged the bewildered young man up the narrow back staircase to the little closet in the loft room over the kitchen. Here they locked him in, confident that he could not suffocate, for the tiny diamond shaped ventilator would let in sufficient air.

"They're a pair of crazy loons, and I may as well let them have their own way until dark," decided Alfred when his indignation had cooled. "Then I can push out of this place and go home."

It was drawing toward sunset, and Fenella Mason and Tabby Way still sat in Fenella's kitchen discussing the fugitive concealed in the loft room closet.

"They had been up there once and handed Alfred a well laden tray of food, for which he had given them scanty thanks." "I'm glad he came here first," Fenella was saying for the hundredth time that afternoon when there came a thundering knock at the kitchen door.

"It's them!" hissed Tabby. Fenella went to the door and peeped through an opening in the shade. "That's no one but Alfred's pa, the deacon," she whispered. "Guess I better let him in."

She cautiously opened the door and permitted the amazed old man to enter the darkened room. "What in tarantula pumpkins is the matter with you, Fenny?" he asked testily. "Locked up here tight as a drum! You old minks air the confoundest critters! You act as if a hull regiment of marauding men was breaking in around the yard waiting to break into the house and elope with you! Have you seen Alfred?"

"Alfred?" gasped Fenella. "Alfred?" echoed Tabitha. "Yes, Alfred!" barked the deacon, flinging his cap down on the table. "We had a telegram from him saying he'd just got back from Patagonia. You know he went as first mate on a freight steamer. Station master on the 11 o'clock train this morning and some body around the yard waiting to break into the house and elope with you! Have you seen Alfred?"

"Bosh!" snorted the deacon when Tabby had concluded her tale. "I read that rubbish in the paper myself. Name was Twigg, not Quigg, and 'twasn't no Lilbridge in Connecticut. Where's my Alfred—the best sailor boy in the whole world?"

He stamped upstairs, and the two chagrined women heard him arguing with Alfred. They talked for a long time, and at last they heard the sound of muffled laughter. When father and son came downstairs their eyes were twinkling.

"Come over to the house tonight, girls," said the deacon pleasantly, "warning for Alfred, and he's got some little present from furrin' parts for each of you. I declare, from what Alfred tells me, he ain't forgot one of his old friends."

Fenella Mason looked Tabitha Way straight in the eye. "I told you it couldn't have been our Alfred," she said proudly. "You was in a mighty hurry to hide him just the same," retorted Tabitha. "Still," she added hopefully, "if there hadn't been a mistake in the name it might have been him after all!"

How He Proposed. "She" was working at a woolen article for a bazaar. "He" asked her what she was making. "A comforter," she replied. "That is exactly what I want," he answered. "Oh, I shall be most happy to make you one," she innocently rejoined. And she did—Weekly Telegraph.

Mrs. Kenton repulsed his seriousness with a flirtatious laugh. "Let's see! Why, you've known me only a month," the pretty widow objected. "You've never even seen the rest of the family!"

"You mean Henry?" he said. "Of course I mean Henry!" she exclaimed. "Who else could I mean? The very idea of your starting to propose to me, Mr. Barton, without ever having seen Henry. The man who loves me must love him too. He must think that Henry is the handsomest, sweetest little fellow in the world."

"Oh, you don't realize what such a baby as Henry means to a young mother. He is her joy, her hope, her life, Mr. Barton. The man she loves must share her feelings about her child. You understand, don't you?"

"But how am I to share your love for the child—how am I ever to meet him—if you don't give me the chance?" he demanded. "I call in the evening, and the nurse is just putting him to bed. I stop by in the afternoon, and you and Henry have gone out for a ride."

"Something always happens to keep Henry out of my sight. I've about come to believe that he is a myth, a prattling phantom that willfully eludes me."

"How can you, Mr. Barton, use the word 'prattling' when speaking of Henry?" she demanded, trying to keep a serious face. "The little dear doesn't prattle—he talks!"

"Indeed!" he exclaimed. "I hardly thought he was old enough to—'Certainly he's old enough,' she interrupted. 'He can say 'mamma' just beautifully, and at present I'm concentrating my energies on getting him to say 'dear mamma' and 'nursie' and other necessary words.'"

The light of inspiration flashed over James Barton's face. "Why don't you teach him my name?" he asked eagerly. "It's very easy—just Jim, you know. Then when Henry and I do get acquainted we'll start on terms of friendship without any preliminaries."

"Oh, what an idea!" she cooed. "Why, of course Henry shall be taught to say—Jim." Barton noticed with a thrill the blush that tinged her cheek even as her tongue hesitated at the name.

"Well, when shall I see him?" he asked. "Let me make an engagement with you and Henry." "Let me see. This is the 20th, isn't it?" she mused. "Well, on the 1st of next month, in the afternoon, the Young Mothers' club meets at my house. You can come around then and have tea with us. Henry will be wearing his best frock in your honor."

"Fine and dandy!" declared Barton as he lifted his hat in farewell. "I'll be on hand, Mrs. Kenton, you may be sure." On the eventful afternoon Barton came, as he had said, a smile of confidence lighting his face—a smile that, alas, faded as quickly as the blush of a debutante.

Mrs. Kenton greeted him with a warm hand clasp, and the next moment he found himself in a drawing room filled with young women. He was the only man in sight, and his hands trembled as the rapid tire introductions began.

But he faced, like a hero, the chorus of "Oh!" "Delighted!" and "How charming!" and came through with face unflushed. Tea was served, and the meeting gave promise of passing off pleasantly enough. But the blow fell when the president, a middle-aged woman with a twinkle of humor in her eye, arose for the first formal announcement.

"Ladies," she said mildly, "several of us, as is our custom, have brought our children with us—the proper thing for young mothers to do. These children, as you are aware, are upstairs in care of two of our most loyal mothers."

"Each of us has listened with patience, he said, to praises of another's prodigy. But now we are prepared to learn the truth. There is a gentleman in our midst. He shall see the children and make formal report to us as to which is the prettiest." Barton's heart went right down into his patent leathers as he turned upon Mrs. Kenton with a look of unforgiving reproach.

"Really, I didn't do it!" she whispered. "It's one of the surprises the club always springs on the hostess—upon my soul it is!" There was no doubting the sincerity of her tone, and Barton, summoning to his aid every fiber of his courage, rose to protest. The quick-eyed president divined his intention, and she gave him no chance to utter a word.

"The young gentleman may wish to protest that he is not a good judge of children," she declared, "but we cannot listen to him. We all feel sure that he is a man of judgment and courage and that he will do what we ask of him." A dozen smiles were suppressed as a dozen heads nodded approval. Barton's eyes flashed, for the humor of the situation had not appeared to him.

"I shall not protest, ladies," he said with quiet determination. "On the contrary, I shall be very glad to pick out the prettiest baby for you. And, furthermore, I am prepared to face the consequences, whatever they may be." The president smiled and appointed a committee to escort Barton to the nursery. Soon he was the center of six contented infants, who were toddling and crawling about over the floor in care of two guardian mothers. The impromptu nurses were sworn to secrecy, and Barton was given a long blue ribbon to tie on the arm of the baby he thought the prettiest. Then he was left alone with the infants.

A patronizing young lord was seated opposite a famous scientist at a dinner one evening not long ago. During a lull in the conversation he adjusted his monocle and leaned toward the scholar.

"Aw, y' know, Mr. Jones," he drawled, "I passed your house this mornin'." "Thank you," said Jones quietly. "Thank you very much."—Harper's Magazine.

"Pat," said the doctor, "your case is a very peculiar and baffling one, and if you'll agree, I'd like to call in another physician. Two heads are better than one, you know."

"Oh, agree," returned the willing patient. "Sure, 'thel'ly must be worth seein'. Bring in the doctor with the two heads!"

She was an Irish widow, and she had buried three husbands. It was leap year, and she went to inspect the graves of the departed with the man who had paid her marked attention in years gone by.

The afternoon was warm, holidays were approaching, and the teacher was almost worn out trying to drum the elements of grammar into the cranium of her pupils.

"Now, Johnny," she said wearily, "tell me—would it be proper for you to say: 'You can't learn me nothing!'" Johnny looked thoughtful for a moment, and then replied in a tone of conviction: "Yes, mum."

The teacher sighed. "Why, Johnny?" she asked. "Tell me why." And the answer came quick and pat: "Cause yer can't."—St. Paul Dispatch.

A Canadian who has just been to New York on a pleasure jaunt tells an amusing little incident of Gotham's amusement life. He went to the Carnegie Lyceum. It's a big place, with several different entertainments going on at the same time in various parts of the building. On this particular day they had moving pictures of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" on the ground floor and an orchestra concert upstairs. High-brow music lovers and patrons of the movies would have got all mixed up in looking for their respective places of entertainment if it had not been for a big-voiced negro porter, who stood at the stairs to announce in stentorian tones:

"Dis way to de Symphony Concert, Less Miserable downstairs."—Canadian Courier.

Little Sammy was generally at loggerheads with his father, who had a habit of using his razor strap in a way that was not in accordance with Sammy's views. One morning, after the razor strap had been more than usually busy, Sammy's mother went out into the field to look for her much-stropped child.

To her intense astonishment she found him fondling a huge goat for which he usually professed a deep hatred. "Why, Sammy darling, it is nice to see you being so kind to poor Billy! Why are you being so gentle with him to-day?"

Over Sammy's face came a look of un-speakable gratitude as he gave the wondering goat another carot. "He butted father into the pond this mornin'," murmured the dear little chap, patting his four-footed friend affectionately.—New York Mail.

Peep again in your oven.
See those loaves, those pleasing loaves you've made.
How fat—rounded—substantial.
No, they won't fall when colder.
Because the Manitoba strength that is in FIVE ROSES will hold them up till eaten.
This sturdy elastic gluten has kept them from dropping flat in the oven.
No unshapely holes—twist crust and crumb—no spongy.
All risen evenly—to stay risen.
Never heavy—sudden—soggy—indigestible.
Yours are the FIVE ROSES loaves—Crispy and appetizing of crust. Golden brown and tender. Snowy of crumb—light as thistledown. FIVE ROSES helps a lot. Try it soon.

Concrete Fence Posts Last Forever
THEY never rot away in the ground. They stand the hardest knocks and never have to be replaced, for they are practically everlasting. They are easily and cheaply made and are the most satisfactory of all fence posts.

Concrete Drain Tile Cannot Decay
 Concrete drains do not decay and are cheaper, because they do not crumble and stop up drains, hence they need no digging up or relaying.

Let us send you this free book, "What the Farmer can do with Concrete." It shows you how to make concrete fence posts and will save you many dollars when doing other building round the farm.
