the one gets his wealth by the impoverishment and enalavement of the other. We do not generally peint out the mon who commit crimes as models for the youth to follow, but the men who asked forth as the leaders in mertality and who are supposed to lead saintly lives, these men become the most dangerous when by their silence they become the abbattops and accessories to the crime that robs humanity of these rights.

dim, when the officer called to her to keep off the grass. I felt very sorry, for I knew the old-lady's history, and site had seen hetter days, when she had tulips and a lawn and no one to order her away. But sickness and death visited her home and took away a loving huaband and left her with six children, the roungest only a haby. But she was very trave, and managed very well what little she had left, and so was able to give all her children a fair education; but then sikkness again reduced her income until she was obliged to give up her little six roomed house and take rooms, but she was quite cheerful about it, and said, poses of gaining some financial advant age. That paper quotes a statement, made by the Rev. W. S. Bainsford in which he speaks of the "dangerous men who are not the masses, men we know and dine with, who are bound to look who are with the masses, men we know and dine with, who are bound to look who cut the corners to save time, and thus wear out the grass, and the ware of taxes. If those signs are only meant for pedestrians passing through the parks, and thus wear out the grass, as we know thousands going the same way every day to that effect; but when an old lady walks miles to see some flowers, don't.

THE NEXT LESSON

moral truths, every town site has become an agency for the robbery and ensiave ment of the masses of the propie. The taxation is so imposed that the burden of one man becomes the fortune of the other. Some men have become militon aires with the power through all the ages to despoil the toilers of the homes they huild the goods they produce. So badly are the methods of taxation ar ranged that one set of men inevitably force their fellows into perpetual poverty with all its vicious degradation. The palace given to idleness at one end of society inevitably means the alum with

What does the polipit for the religious press say about this, the crime of crimes. In the language of the Bible they are duminous and profound. Moses was not affaid to sell that the land was the gift of God for the people, and he propounded a system of law which secured for every family its share in the land of the nation. But this question is treated by our religious organizations as unworthy of socies.

Let a man try to bribe a legislature so as to gain some advantage and a process that he working robbery of the larger part of humanity of their right to the face of the everlasting robbery of the larger part of humanity of their right to the face of the earth and their reduction to a system of industrial slavery is passed by in silence.

It is not always asfe to lay a wager on the relative putridity of two rotten eggs; but it may be a proper question to ask which is die greater erime, that of the church which stands ostensibly for everything that is holy and then maintains the most profound silence as to the greatest crime against humanity, thus giving its silent acqueceones; or the overt acts as, bribery and theft? The first crime mikes religion is its browlest sonse impossible; for how can we have brotherly love where we place one in the castle and the other in the but, where we give one a lifetime of leisure and crime to the one gets his wealth by the impover one and the castle and the other in the but, where we give one a lifetime of leisure and crime as models for the public ownership. They may not understand them at first, but they will sook be and them as first, but they will sook be some in and enalavement of the other. We do not generally point out the meet who commit crimes as models for the public ownership. They may not understand them at first, but they will sook be some involved the strike lines as they have made the strike

COLLECTED

The workers must make a collective effort, the individual to-day is as helieus fighting co-operative wealth as would be running a itrest ratiway, or steam ratiway, or an ocean steamer.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND.

The fifteen thousand workers show

ous when by their silence they become the abbattory and a accessories to the crime that robs humanity of those rights without which life is despoiled of its goodness and existence of its joy.

History repeats itself. In the days of chartel slavery the church acquiescel is the institution which legraded men and women to the level of the broasts of the field. Thus conjuceence brought forth the terrors of a destructive war. To day the church is pursuing a similar course. It is true that the employed cannot sell the look of the toiler, but by insidious methods of taxation the landical aristocracy can live as iruly by the sweat of his beighbors as could the Southern planter of yore.

THE CONSUMER.

Organize the consumer and unite labor and capital in the hands of the people by establishing co-operative industries of and by the people for the people, like they have in Oreat Britain.

A NEW THOUGHT.

Organized workers have discovered a new thought, and that in that a man annot live on nine dollars a week. It would be interesting if one of our great students of political economy would show the people how a man can keep a wife and family on sine dollars a week with out either stealing or running into dedf.
