Report from Mexico City Says Agreement Has Been Signed.

LESS WAR TALK WAS HEARD YESTERDAY.

Envoys Spent a Busy Day and Report Progress—Opinion
Varied as to Possibility of Peaceful Solution.

Washington, May 1.—Assurances of peace with a steady abatement of "war talk" was the dominant feature in the Mexican developments here today. Attention was still centered on the work of the South American mediators, who reported steady progress and the avoidance of any deadlock between the parties.

In other quarters, however, the fall of Carranza thus far to accept the mediators' proposal for a suspension of hostilities against Huerta caused continued doubt over the outlook for broadening the scope of the mediators' work to a settlement of the whole Mexican situation.

While the gravity and the hopefulness of the situation varied from hour to hour, the envoys kept steadily at their work, holding two lengthy sessions at the Argentine legation. Their long conference last night with Secretary Bryan, representing the United States in the issues before them, was followed today by a conference with the Spanish ambassador, Senor Riano, who represents the Huerta government. The mediators made no announcement.

Secretary Bryan and Daniels were active during the day in their endeavors to neutralize the oil wells at Tampico. Secretary Daniels said he had been informed that most of the wells had been capped with cement and that ordinary gun fire would not ignite them. Most of the wells are in the interior, too, out of range of the fighting in the city.

FIRST READING OF TARIFF BILL YESTERDAY

No Further Tariff Changes to be Made this Session, Hon. Dr. Reid Announces.

Ottawa, May 1.—At the opening of the commons today Hon. W. T. White introduced and secured first reading for the tariff bill which is intended to give effect to the tariff resolutions which appeared in the budget and which were approved in committee yesterday. In this connection the Finance Minister said he desired to correct a misapprehension in some of the newspapers with regard to what he had said last night in regard to readjustments of the tariff which might become necessary with the coming into effect of the new duties on structural steel. There would be no further tariff changes this session, he said.

Hon. Martin Burrell's dairy bill was taken up in committee and evoked some discussion over the clause which prohibits the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine. J. H. Burnham, of West Peterboro, took the ground that if people wanted to buy cheap food like oleomargarine they should be permitted to do so.

E. W. Nesbitt of North Oxford said he thought there was a good deal of sense in this.

Andrew Broder of Dundas said it was not a matter of cheap food but of an imitation of a good food which was intended to deceive. If people wanted to eat lard they should buy lard. If they were buying butter they wanted real butter.

Across the Plaza Constitucional from the parochial church are the Hotel Diligencias, old landmarks at Vera Cruz, and the Hotel Universal.

MORE TROOPS ORDERED TO COLORADO MINES

NEWSPAPERS IN LONDON PESSIMISTIC

Not Very Cheerful Over Ulster Affair—Think Churchill Has Gone to Other Extreme.

London, May 2.—The pessimism which was the keynote of the Irish press of both parties yesterday characterizes the newspapers of Great Britain today. The Daily Telegraph endorses Sir Horace Plunkett's remark on the futility of the Parliamentarians making up an agreement to which nobody in Ireland will accede. The Morning Post says that there is very little justification for optimism.

The Daily Mail contends that the net result of Mr. Churchill's offer is that the opposition have been induced to raise their terms. The Times complains that Mr. Churchill, having gone beyond his party in the direction of peace, now goes beyond it in the direction of force.

The Daily Mail thinks that the fact of two days having passed without Premier Asquith seeking to renew the conversations proves that the Premier has encountered resistance from John Redmond.

Forces in the Strike Zone are to be Quadrupled.

COMPANIES WILLING FOR SETTLEMENT.

Presidents of Twenty-one Companies Ready to Settle, on Terms Suggested by Gov. Ammons Last Autumn.

Washington, May 1.—Orders to quadruple the force of federal cavalry men in the Colorado coal strike regions went from the war department late tonight. The entire Eleventh Regiment from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and two troops of the Twelfth from Fort Robinson, Neb., were ordered to proceed to the scene at once, Col. Jas. Lockart, of the Eleventh, to take supreme command of the situation.

State and federal authorities cooperated today in an effort to settle the Colorado strike of coal miners, but tonight the situation was still unchanged, except that there had been no violence reported. Regular troops occupy the Trinidad, Fremont county and Walsenburg districts and state troops are still in service at Ludlow and in the northern coal fields. At the direction of Major Holbrook additional state troops late today were sent from Ludlow to Aguilera.

The action of Secretary Garrison in granting the joint request of Major Holbrook and Governor Ammons for more federal troops, announced late today, has served to allay uneasiness in quarters where it was feared the quota of regular soldiers would not be sufficient to maintain order.

While Major Holbrook and Governor Ammons today were devoting efforts to secure additional troops, the question of disarming strikers and mine employes remained in a secondary position. Weather conditions prevented action by the strikers who had planned to vote on the question. On behalf of the operators J. E. Welborn, president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, announced that the mine guards would be disbanded whenever such action was deemed expedient by Major Holbrook.

Horace N. Hawkins, chief counsel, and John Lawson, international executive board member of the United Mine Workers of America, sent en route to Trinidad to discuss with Major Holbrook the question of disarmament.

In a second telegram addressed to Martin D. Foster, chairman of the house committee on mines and mining, the presidents of twenty-one Colorado coal companies today reiterated their willingness to agree to a settlement of the coal strike on the terms suggested by Governor Ammons in a letter on November 27, 1913, which was laid before representatives of the operators and miners at a conference on that date.

Governor Ammons in the letter urged that the point of recognition of the union be waived, but that the miners be permitted to maintain their organization.

PACIFIC MAIL STR. SIBERIA AT MANILA

Captain Reports an Uneventful Trip Although Reports of Accident Were Current for Past Two Days.

Manila, May 2.—The Pacific mail steamer Siberia arrived here at 11 o'clock today. Her captain reports that the vessel had an uneventful voyage from Nagasaki to Manila.

San Francisco, Cal., May 1.—The trans-Pacific liner Siberia was reported safe, in wireless despatches to Corregido Island and to Manila tonight after a day of various rumors of accidents to the steamer, but at the office of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company here it was said no direct word had come to the company from the officers of the ship and that all fear had not been dismissed.

Officers of the steamship company said it might be the wireless despatches were sent before the time of the reported accident. The wireless messages from the Siberia, however, were specific in declaring that the ship was in good condition, and would reach Manila Saturday.

The rumors of distress to the Siberia ranged from grounding to an attack by pirates and included a possibility that the vessel had foundered with the 721 persons on board, including eighty saloon passengers, many of whom were Americans. Among those on the Siberia were Mrs. F. B. Harrison, wife of the governor general of the Philippines, and other persons well known in society, educational and business circles in the United States.

Captain Zander of the Siberia expressed the belief that the reports in circulation yesterday and last night that his vessel was in distress off the coast of Formosa and had sent out calls for assistance arose over confusion in the call letters of the steamer Persia "M. B. S." being mistaken for "S. O. S." the marine wireless request for aid.

The wireless operator on board the Siberia said the atmospheric conditions yesterday had been bad, making the sending of wireless messages difficult.

The first report that the Siberia was in distress was a wireless message received at the Osaka station in Japan. It was said to come direct from the Siberia early Friday morning and said that the steamer had met with an accident and was in distress. The message was mutilated and no

NEW LICENSE LAWS IN QUEBEC

Drastic Changes Provided For —Number of Saloons Re- duced—Separation of Bars from Groceries.

Montreal, May 1.—The new licensing laws of the province go into effect today. These laws are of a far-reaching character. They provide for a substantial strengthening of the personnel and powers of the license commissioners, a progressive reduction in the number of licenses in Montreal, a gradual abolition of bars, and the separation of the sale of drink from the sale of groceries.

It will in future be unlawful to sell liquor or even deliver intoxicating liquors to any persons under eighteen years of age; no saloons will be allowed open before 7.30 a. m.; license holders may, at the request of relatives of habitual drunkards, be ordered not to sell liquor to such drunkards; and no order for liquor may in future be taken, or C. O. D. orders delivered, in prohibition areas such as Westmount, Verdun and St. Lambert.

HARBOR AT ST. JOHN'S BLOCKED WITH ICE

St. John's, Nfld., May 1.—St. John's harbor and the whole eastern coast is now blocked with ice, and the Allan liner Pomeranian twelve days from Liverpool is now outside the floe, 220 miles off Cape Race unable to enter port until the wind changes. The Donaldson liner Tritonia from Glasgow to Botwood, for pulp and paper is enmeshed in floes off the mouth of Notre Dame Bay and in danger of being forced ashore by the pressure of the ice pack.

APPROVE OF PLAN FOR CARTIER MEMORIAL IN MONTREAL

Montreal, May 1.—The board of control this morning officially adopted the plan for the Cartier memorial, drawn up by the Cartier centenary committee, and voted $21,500 towards completing the improvements, new roads, etc., contemplated by the plan.

Further information could be gleaned from it.

This message was communicated to the Great Northern steamer Minnesota, and the British cruiser Minotaur and the Japanese government ordered the steamer Kanto Maru from a Formosa port and several warships to the scene of the reported wreck.

ASQUITH PAYS TRIBUTE TO BRITISH PRESS

Says Its Power in Main Has Been Exercised With Na- tional Love of British Fair Play.

London, May 2.—Although politics were ruled out at the annual dinner of the Newspaper Press Fund, over which Mr. Asquith presided last night, the premier was not allowed to get through the opening sentences of his speech without an interruption, apparently from an aide surrogato. The premier at the outset explained that he would have hesitated before accepting Lord Burrell's invitation when it was received several months ago had he foreseen the course of history. At this juncture a guest rose and began: "How dare you—"

The remainder was drowned as he was promptly ejected.

Mr. Asquith's speech was devoted to a tribute to journalists, both parliamentary and otherwise, and he declared that his wide personal experience had led him to conclude that the power of the British press was in the main exercised with characteristic national love of fair play and generosity. He appealed for support of the fund, which provides pensions and annuities for newspaper men, on the ground that journalists are especially exposed to loss of employment and to sickness.

Lord Moulton, speaking for the House of Lords, said that the Upper Chamber was an example of solid work done without courting publicity. If the public wanted to appreciate eloquence, they would do better to read the reports, rather than attend the debates. Lord Reading, formerly Sir Rufus Isaacs, was also a speaker. Donations of $20,000 to the fund were reported at the meeting.

SAYS TWO GREAT BLINDERS HAVE BEEN MADE

Lord Lansdowne Says First One Was Capitulation to Nationalists, and the Other Vacillatory Treatment of Ulster.

London, May 2.—Lord Lansdowne, speaking at a primrose league gathering at Albert hall yesterday afternoon, made it clear that he enters the arena with a clear mind. He had observed, after three years working of the parliament act, that the nation was beginning to realize what life under that act meant. The act was so constructed as to render amendments after the first session impossible, and consequently the commons committee stage was omitted. Finally it is now suggested that the United Kingdom be split into an unspecified number of fragments under a federal scheme. It was intolerable that, when the constitution of the country was practically under suspension, the government would not raise its finger to fulfill the solemn pledge, given three years ago when it deprived the country of the protection of the second chamber, that it would couple the parliament act with a reconsideration of the powers and the composition of the House of Lords. The result would be civil war if the home rule bill was passed, and grave trouble if it was not passed.

The government, said Lord Lansdowne, had made two colossal blunders, one being its capitulation to the nationalists, and the other its vacillating treatment of Ulster. To allow the creation of an efficient force in Ulster, and then order naval and military movements, was calculated to provoke a collision. When the plot failed, the government charged the Unionists with having corrupted the army, but the only corrupting done was when the government interrogated the officers with regard to their behavior if they were ordered to fight against Ulster. He described the time limit to the exclusion of Ulster as a grotesque proposal, but the difficulty was that members of the government were not sufficiently their own masters to make an acceptable proposal. The only exclusion which Ulster would discuss was one not terminable without Ulster's consent. The federal plan had no mandate for a federal solution, and there was considerable danger of arranging terms of which the country would disapprove.

NO TRACE OF GYPSY MOTH IN PROVINCE

Large Number of Brown Tails Found by Survey Parties— Thirty Thousand Nests Dis- covered.

Fredericton, May 1.—Brown Tail Moth nests to the total of 30,000 were found in the Province of New Brunswick by the survey parties which have been working during the past winter. The parties which were sent out by the Provincial and Dominion Agricultural Departments concluded their work yesterday.

While the Brown Tails were found to be in a very excessive number, there is no trace whatever of the Gypsy Moth in the province. The most infested county was Charlotte, with Carleton and St. John counties following in order. As a general thing, however, the Brown Tails were found to exist in every county to a very great extent. The number found this year is a great contrast to that of last year, when only 1,500 nests were found by the parties at work. This is accounted for by the fact that a long protracted spell of south winds during the summer months of 1913 brought the pest to this province in large numbers.

L. S. McAlaine, chief entomologist, who has been in charge of the survey work, is now in Boston in connection with the Brown Tail and Gypsy Moth extermination.

REFUGEES FROM MEXICO REACH SAN DIEGO, CAL.

Driven from Homes by Anti- American Outbreak—Were Forced to Seek British Pro- tection.

San Diego, Cal., May 1.—Driven from their homes by an anti-American outbreak, the result of the landing of United States marines at Vera Cruz, 252 refugees from Mexico reached here today on board the German steamer Marie, which left the Mexican port of Mazatlan April 25. The majority of the refugees are from Guadalaraja and tributary. The others coming from Colima and Manzanillo. The feeling against Americans was so intense that the majority of the refugees were forced to seek the protection of the British consulate officers in these cities.

The German steamer Marie, a 10,000 ton boat, under charter to a Chinese company for transportation of Chinese coolies, and having 282 Chinese on board, was the only foreign vessel in the harbor. Captain Davidson unhesitatingly placed his steamer at the disposal of the Americans when informed that their lives were in danger, exacting no agreement as to payment for service.

WOULD REJOICE TO SEE PRESIDENT WILSON CONQUER MEXICANS

London Spectator Says Civiliza- tion Preferable to Barbar- ianism, and States Compe- tent for the Task.

London, May 1.—Commenting today on the Mexican situation, the Spectator says: "Every Englishman wants to see the United States safely and honorably delivered from the Mexican tangle. What we say in criticism is criticism of method and not of aim. If Mr. Wilson would make up his mind to conquer and administer Mexico, in time, at all events, we should rejoice in his undertaking for the simple reason that we prefer civilization to barbarism and believe the United States is competent for the task."

NEWS IN TAMPICO SHOWING CUSTOM HOUSE UNITED STATES WAR SHIP STATIONED THERE

GOVERNMENT DOCKS AT TAMPICO

With the capture of Vera Cruz the United States will hold the Custom House and will collect duties and prevent shipment of arms from reaching Huerta. Tampico is the next point to be seized by the American fleet.

The evening sitting of the House was entirely devoted to various local aspects of the I. C. R. Mr. Chisholm, of Antigonish, spent considerable time in urging the claims of municipalities in Pictou, Antigonish, St. Mary's and Guysboro, for compensation from the federal government for the amounts spent by these municipalities in giving rights of way to the section of the I. C. R. from New Glasgow to the Straits of Canso, a distance of eighty miles.

When this section was taken over by the federal government, the claim of the local government, and of the private company which built the road was settled, but the outlay of the municipalities has never been recouped to them. The provincial government under a judgment rendered two years ago is held not to be liable for the sums now demanded by these municipalities.

Mr. Chisholm declared that all the other municipalities from Montreal to Sydney had been recouped for any sums they had spent in connection with the construction of the road in pre-confederated days. He asked the federal government to give favorable consideration now to the claims of the municipalities still unrecouped.

CHILD RUN OVER BY HEAVY MOVING TRAIN

A rather serious accident occurred on Brunswick street yesterday afternoon about one o'clock. Frank Kennedy, a colored man, was driving a team of mules with furniture down the street when he was struck by the six-year-old son of Thomas Simon, who was knocked down by the horse and the wheels of the heavy stonewagon passed over the child's body.

OLD GOVERNMENT FAILED TO DEAL WITH IT

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring.

After the adjournment of the session of the Council, the Italian women's organizations have invited the delegates to remain and attend a Congress of women. The Council's meeting will last one week; the Congress will be in session two weeks.

The International Council can identify itself only with such movements as have been unanimously accepted by its members. The survival of the fittest of propositions thus far considered includes:

- 1. To further international peace and arbitration.
2. To combat the "white slave" traffic.
3. To win suffrage for women.
4. To promote legislation concerning the general welfare of women and their legal position.
5. To promote the improvement of public health.
6. To protect emigrants and especially safeguard women and children.

Handsone Motor Boat Burns to Water's Edge

Laska, owned by Sydney L. Kerr, destroyed by fire, at mooring near St. John Power Boat Club—Will be great loss to river pleasure boat fleet.

A fire of mysterious origin last evening completely destroyed the handsome motor boat Laska owned by Sydney L. Kerr, and as the boat was considered one of the finest on the river the loss will probably be heavy. The blaze originated in the kitchen. The Laska was moored off the Saint John Power Boat Club house and it was not till ten or fifteen minutes before midnight that people in the vicinity saw the reflection of the fire. When they hastened to the scene of the blaze they saw the boat a mass of flame and no effort could be made to prevent the Laska from being destroyed. Fire made quick work of the craft and at midnight the handsome boat was completely demolished.

The only matter that can possibly be connected with the fire is that men

BUILDERS ARE LOOKING FOR A BUSY SEASON

Expect to erect many dwellings this summer—Cost of brick still high here.

Architects and builders are looking forward to a fairly busy season, though it is not expected that the value of building operations this year will be as great as last, when a number of big construction jobs were started. The indications are, however, that there will be a good many dwelling houses built in the city and suburbs, as there is a general demand for more houses. Construction work of this character will give considerable employment to the local workers, whereas on the big construction jobs the home worker has had little chance, the contractors apparently preferring to bring in outside labor.

W. B. Howard to England.
 Among the passengers on the late Halifax train last night was William B. Howard, district engineer C. P. R., who left for Halifax, from where he will take passage on the steamer Empress of Ireland. To a Standard reporter Mr. Howard said that his trip was partly on business and partly on pleasure, but that his visit to the old country had no special importance. Mr. Howard is taking his wife and child and expects to be away for about two months.

MR. MAGNUSSON RETURNS TO NATIVE LAND

Successful dry goods merchant started life as deal piler here — Came from Sweden.

Among the passengers on the late outgoing Halifax train last night was Charles E. Magnusson, who after a successful business career in this city, rising from a deal piler to one of the most prosperous business men of the city, is now on his way to his native country, Sweden, to visit his father and once again shake hands with his countrymen. Mr. Magnusson left last night on the Halifax train and will sail from the Nova Scotia capital to his home on the steamer Empress of Ireland.

The success of Mr. Magnusson is rather unique in that some seventeen or more years ago he sailed to this city on a schooner, worked as a deal piler, and with but four years of schooling has developed into a prosperous dry goods merchant. After he landed here he worked for some time at a salary of four dollars a week. He then gleaned a general knowledge of the dry goods and clothing business and for a number of years was connected with the Oak Hill firm on King street. He later branched out for himself and is now doing a prosperous business on Dock street.

Mr. Magnusson remarks that in certain ways stricter measures are in vogue in Sweden than in this country. Fish, for instance, are bought alive. The fish are displayed swimming in large glass show cases and when the purchaser picks out the fish wanted it is brought out of the water and killed just before it is weighed. This plan has been adopted by the health authorities to safeguard against bad and diseased fish. Fish weighed alive wiggle of the fish would give an untrue weight, therefore it is killed before it is put on the scales. Before any meat is exposed for sale men are employed who have testing instruments and every piece of meat, sold, must bear the official stamp of the inspectors. Every precaution is taken to safeguard the health of the people.

Naturally the customs of his native country appeal to Mr. Magnusson and he is enthusiastic over the first trip home for years.

SAYS MEXICO MAY SEND A DELEGATION TO OTTAWA

WOULD PUT UP A HARD FIGHT TO OTTAWA

R. H. Dickinson, of Guadalajara, believes it would take a generation to conquer country.

"If the United States goes to war with Mexico, years will be required to conquer the country and a generation or so to pacify it," said R. H. Dickinson, of Guadalajara, who was registered at the Dufferin yesterday. "When Maximilian with 40,000 French troops, aided by Austrians and Belgians, invaded Mexico in 1862 it took eighteen months for this force, the flower of the French army, to fight its way from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, a distance of about 500 miles as the crow flies. In the United States war with Mexico in 1847-48, General Scott with a force of 12,000 men and large percentage of whom were trained in Indian fighting, took six months to fight his way from Vera Cruz to Mexico City. At that time the Mexican army was a mere rabble, recruited anyhow and seldom paid. Yet the Mexicans then showed more bravery, according to General Scott, than the Americans forced their way to Mexico largely because of superior strategy.

Men Trained Now.
 Today Mexico has large numbers of trained officers, and its own ammunition factories. The Americans would find it anything but a picnic to fight their way to Mexico City. No doubt they could capture the principal cities, but it would cost many lives and much treasure to hold them, and guerrilla warfare would continue indefinitely. In the brief conflict with Mexico, over 50 years ago, the United States lost 25,000 men, and spent about $170,000,000.

Mr. Dickinson left Mexico before the American occupation, and arrived here from Boston yesterday, intending to make a trip through Eastern Canada.

Guadalajara, where Mr. Dickinson has been living, is a city of 120,000 inhabitants. It is 5,000 feet above the sea, and famed for its beauty. It is the capital of Jalisco, one of the wealthiest states of the Mexican republic. Back in the 16th century, and its magnificent beauty impress and delight the visitor.

Little Change in Cost.

There has been little change in the cost of building material, and brick continues high. It is said that if brick was sold here at reasonable prices a good many more brick buildings would be erected, giving employment to a large number of workers and reducing the pressure upon the existing accommodation for families.

Last month the value of the permits issued for new construction and repairs amounted to $72,500, as against $79,600 in April of last year. The total for this year to date is only $164,500 as compared with $1,082,700 for the same period last year.

Some of the permits issued during April are as follows:

Fenton Land & Building Company, wooden dwelling Seely street, $17,000.
 T. H. Haley, wooden dwelling, Rockland road, $9,000.
 F. G. Spencer, stucco dwelling, Princess street, $7,000.

ENGLISHMEN BUY FARMS IN THE PROVINCE

Valuable properties change hands—One farmer has been in the West for ten years.

Alfred Burley and Co. report the following sales: The farm of Hugh Scott at Gaspeaux, Charlotte Co., the farm consists of 105 acres with good house and barn and there is also 30 acres of splendid brook land. The purchaser is Frederick W. Smith, a young English farmer. Mr. Smith's brother just arrived from England a week ago and they will take immediate possession.

John Herbert Chaplin of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, has purchased the farm Mrs. James. They are situated at Smithtown, five miles from Hampton. The farm consists of 150 acres with large house and five barns and also other outbuildings. This farm is considered one of the best farms along the Hammond River and cuts fifty tons of hay. Mr. Brown died quite recently and Mr. Chaplin, who has just arrived from England with his wife and two children, is buying all the personal property and takes immediate possession.

The Perley farm at Hoyt, recently owned by James Fielding, has been purchased by Mr. Leonard Herridge of Rosedale, England. The farm consists of 250 acres with large modern house containing all the comforts of a modern city home, also good barns and other outbuildings. Mr. Herridge is buying all the personal property including eight pure-bred Ayrshire cows and other stock. Mr. Herridge just arrived from England and will go with his wife and daughter to take possession next week. They had lived in the West for ten years where Mr. Herridge still has large holdings.

Having farmed both in England and Western Canada he has now come to one of the best farms in Sunbury Co. There is an orchard of 350 trees which will receive special attention from Mr. Herridge.

J. A. Gross has purchased from Mr. Burley two large building lots with a large farmhouse located at Onondaga, after making some repairs will occupy it as a summer residence.

SOCIALIST ORATOR IN ADDRESS SAYS ZAPATA STRIVING FOR LIBERTY.

Wilfred Gribble States Villa and Huerta Represent Different Business Factions, and that Zapata is Warring in Interests of Common People.

An interesting lecture on Mexico was delivered by Wilfred Gribble at the Socialist meeting in the Oddfellows' Hall last evening. The speaker said that the United States capitalists had over a billion dollars invested in Mexico, and naturally wanted peace and order in order to protect their investments. He said that the Huerta and Villa factions represented different business interests, but that Zapata faction represented a movement of the Mexican workers to overthrow all kinds of capitalist authority, native or foreign, and to give the land and its resources to the people.

The United States might conquer Mexico; in any case the Zapata movement would be suppressed. A strong government might appear and establish peace for a time, but it could not solve the problems which are at the root of the disturbances there, as these arose from the capitalistic development of the country.

Drop in Traffic.

Team traffic on the Carleton ferry fell off considerably last month, there being about 1,400 less teams crossing than during the same month last year.

Tuberculosis Hospital.

A meeting of the St. John County Tuberculosis Hospital committee will be held on Tuesday to consider the calling of tenders for the construction of a hospital building at East St. John. Alterations have been made in order to adapt the building to the new site.

Presentation.

At the regular meeting of Pioneer Lodge I. O. O. F. last evening Thomas McMaisters, of Main street, who is to remove in a few days to Montreal, where he will make his home in future, was the recipient of an address and pair of suitcases engraved with the lodge's name. The address, which was read by Past Grand Master A. D. Smith, reviewed Mr. McMaisters' connection of forty years with Pioneer Lodge, and expressed the sentiments of other members of the Lodge towards him. Mr. McMaisters briefly responded.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN OF HAROLD MAC GRATH.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Kathlyn Hare believes her father, Col. Hare, to be in dire peril in Allah, a principality of India. The King of Allah has recently died, and because the Colonel had once saved his life he names him as his successor. Umballah, pretender to the throne of Allah, loves Kathlyn and has forged a message summoning her to her father, whom he has thrown into prison. She leaves her home in California to go to him.

On her arrival in Allah she is informed by Umballah that her father is dead and that she is the queen. An elaborate durbar arranged, the central figure of which is Kathlyn, protesting and grief-stricken. When the crown is placed upon her head Umballah announces that she is to be married to him forthwith. Her refusal infuriates him, but as Kathlyn's beauty and spirit have made a strong appeal to the people he yields the joint for the time being to strict demands that no woman may rule unmarryed with the laws of the state she will be given seven days to decide.

When Kathlyn reiterates at the expiration of the week of grace, her refusal to marry Umballah she receives sentence from the supreme tribunal that she is to undergo two ordeals with wild beasts. If she survives, she is to be permitted to rule without hindrance.

Through the pluck and resourcefulness of John Bruce, an American and fellow passenger on the boat which brought Kathlyn to Allah, and who has come to her assistance, she escapes unharmed from two ordeals. With Bruce she flees from Allah. The elephant which carries her becomes frightened and she takes refuge in a ruined temple. The holy men and villagers, believing her to be an ancient priestess risen from the tomb, allow her to remain as the guardian of the sacred fire. But Kathlyn's haven is also the abode of a lion, and she is forced to fly from it with the savage beast. In pursuit, she escapes and finds a retreat in the jungle, only to fall into the hands of a band of slave traders.

CHAPTER VIII. THE SLAVE MARKET.

(Copyright, 1914, by Harold MacGrath.)

HAVING decided upon the fate of Kathlyn, the natives set about recapturing the wild elephant. It took the best part of the morning. When this was accomplished the journey to Allah was begun. But for the days of peace and quiet of the wilderness and the consequent hardness of the flesh, Kathlyn would have suffered greatly. Half the time she was compelled to walk. There were no hounds, and it was a difficult feat to sit upon the mahout. The rough skin of the elephant had the same effect upon the calves of her legs that sandpaper would have had. Sometimes she stumbled and fell, and was rudely jerked to her feet. Only the day before they arrived was she relieved in any way; she was given a litter, and in this manner she entered the holy city.

In giving the litter the chief mahout had been inspired by no expression of pity; simply they desired her to appear fresh and attractive when they carried her into the slave mart. In fitful dreams all that had happened came back to her—the story her father had told about saving the old king's life, and the grim, ironical gratitude in making his heir as if such things could be! And then her own journey to Allah; the nightmarish durbar during which she had been crowned; the escape from the ordeals with John Bruce; the return to the temple of the mart the night from there. . . John Bruce! She could still see the fire in his eyes; she could still feel the touch of his gentle yet tireless hand. Would she ever see him again?

On the way to the mart they passed under the shadow of the grim prison walls of the palace. The elephants veered off here into a side street, and the huge squares where horses and cattle and elephants were bought and sold. The litter, in charge of the chief mahout, proceeded to the slave mart. Kathlyn glanced at the wall wondering, "Was her father alive? Was he in some bleak cell behind that crumbling masonry? Did he know that she was here? Or was he really dead? Ah, perhaps it were better that death should have taken him—better than that having his living heart wrung by the tale of his daughter's un-speakable miseries.

Even as she sent a last lingering look at the prison the prisoner within, his head buried in his thin, wasted hands, beheld her in a vision—but in a happy, joyous vision, basking about the living room of the bungalow.

And far away a younger man beheld a vision as very tenderly he gazed at Kathlyn's discarded robe and resumed his deterring quest. Often, standing beyond his evening fires, he would catch the glance, "Kathlyn where are you? Even then he was riding fast toward Allah.

A slave mart is a rare thing these days, but at the time these scenes were being enacted there existed many of them here and there across the face of the globe. Men buy and sell men and women these times—enlightened, so they say—but they do it by legal contract or from vile hiding places.

Allah had been a famous mart in its prime. It had drawn the agents of princes from all India, Persia, Belochistan, Afghanistan, and even southern Russia had been rife of their beaures to adorn the serenas of the slothful Hindu princes.

The slave mart in the capital town of Allah stood in the center of the bazaars, a great square platform with a roof, but open on all sides. Here the slaves were exhibited, the poor things intended for dalliance and those who were to struggle and sweat and die under the overseer's lash.

Every fortnight a day was set aside for the business of the mart. Owners and prospective buyers met, chewed betel nut, smoked their hookahs, sipped coffee and tea, and exchanged the tattle of the hour. It was as much an amusement as a business; indeed, it was the oriental idea of a club, and much the same things were discussed. Thus, Appaji bought a beautiful girl at the last harbor and Roy found a male who was a good juggler, and only night before last they had traded. The bazaars were not what they used to be. Dewan Ali had sold his wife to a Punjab opium merchant. About Singh's daughter had run away with the son of a bhait. All white people ate pig. And no one read the slokas, or moral stanzas, any more. Yes, the English would come some day, when there would be enough money to warrant it.

All about there were barkers, and fruit sellers, and bangle wallas (for slave girls should have rings of rupee silver about their ankles and wrists), and solemn Brahmins, and men who painted red and ochre caste marks on one's forehead, and ash covered fakirs with withered hands, Nautch girls, girls from the bazaars, periwinkle jewellers, kites, and red headed vultures—this being a proper place for them.

The chief mahout purchased for Kathlyn a beautiful saree, or veil, which partially concealed her face and hair.

"Chalu!" he said, touching Kathlyn's shoulder whenever she lagged, for they had dispensed with the litter. "Go on!"

She understood. Outwardly she appeared passive enough, but her soul was on fire and her eyes as brilliant as those of the circling, swooping kites, hand into the treasury; there were too many about, too many tongues. But Col. Hare knew where the silver basket lay hidden, heaped with gold and precious stones; and torture could not wring the hiding place from him. May he be damned to the nearest hell! Let him, Durga Ram, but bury his lean hands in that treasure, and Naraka swallow Allah and all its kins! Rubies and pearls and emeralds, and a far country to flee to, to be feted in to be fawned upon for his riches!

And Ramabai and his wife, Pundita, let them beware; let them remain wisely in their house and meddle not with affairs of state.

"A thousand rupees!"

Umballah looked up with a start. Unconsciously rescued the vanquished queen from the ordeals. He noded almost imperceptibly. Inwardly he smiled. He was not above giving the haughty upstart a Thuggee's twist. He spoke to his neighbor quietly, assigned to him his bowls and brushes, rose, and made off.

"Follow me," said Umballah to the happy mahout. "Presently he would have his bags of silver, bright and twinkling.

Fate overtook Ali, who in his mad race to Hare's camp fell and badly sprained his ankle. Moaning, less from the pain than from the attempt helplessness, he was carried into the hut of a kindly ryot and there ministered to.

The Brahmin, however, filled with greed and a made up of lies and wickedness, I am the queen you yourself made. I can speak a few words, enough to make myself known to the populace. I will make a bargain with you. I will give you five times five thousand rupees if you will deliver me safely in Peshawar. On my part, I promise to say nothing, nothing."

Umballah raised both his hands in astonishment. He knew now why that form had stirred his recollection.

"You!" He laughed and clapped his hands to summon his servants. Kathlyn, realizing that it was useless to attempt to move this man, turned and started to run, but he intercepted her. "My queen, my bride that was to be, the golden hour! Five times five thousand rupees would not purchase a hair of your head.

"I am your queen!" But she said it without heart.

"What! Do you believe that? Having passed the ordeals, you nullified the effect by running away. You will be whatever I choose! O, it will be legally done. You shall go with me to the council, and the four of us shall decide. Ah, you would not be my wife!"

"You shall die, Durga Ram," she replied, "and it will be the death of a pariah dog."

"Ah! Still that spirit which I loved. Why did I not buy you without knowing who you were? Are you not mine? At this very moment I could place you in my zenana and who would ever know? And now you would not want any one to know."

"Are you without mercy?"

"Mercy? I know not the word. But I have an ambition which surpasses all other things. My wife you shall be, or worse. But legally, always legally!" He laughed again and swiftly caught her in his arms. She struggled like a tigress, but without avail. He covered her face and neck with kisses, then thrust her aside. "Poor little fool! If you had whined and whimpered I should have let you go long since. But there burns within you a spirit I must conquer, and conquer I will!"

Kathlyn stood panting against a pillar. Had she held a weapon in her hand she would have killed him without compunction, as one crushes a poisonous viper.

"Legally! Why, all the crimes in Hind are done under that word. It is the shibboleth of the British Raj. Legally! Come!"

"I will not stir!"

"Then be carried," he replied, beckoning his servants.

"No, no!"

"Ah! Well, then, we'll ride together in the palanquin."

To struggle would reward her with nothing but shame and humiliation; so she bent her head to the inevitable. A passionate longing to be revenged upon this man began to consume her. She wanted to beat him down to his knees, to visit and crush him. But she was a woman and she had not the strength of a man.

"Behold!" cried Umballah later, as he entered the presence of the council, "behold a slave of mine!" He pushed Kathlyn forward. "This day I bought her for five thousand rupees."

The council stirred nervously.

"Do you not recognize her?" exultantly.

The council whispered to one another.

"Legally she is mine, though she has been a queen. But by running away she has forfeited her rights to the law of the ordeals. Am I not right?"

The council nodded gravely. They had not yet wholly recovered from the bewilderment.

On the other hand, her identity must remain a secret till I have developed my plans," continued Umballah.

"You are all courting a terrible reprisal," said Kathlyn. "I beg of you to kill me at once; do not prolong my torture, my misery. I have harmed none of you, but you have grievously harmed me. One even now seeks aid of the British Raj; and there are many soldiers."

The threat was ill timed.

The head of the council said to Umballah: "It would be wise to lock her up for the present. We all face a great complication."

"A very wise counsel," agreed Umballah, knowing that he had but to say the word to destroy them.

"Ah! she shall have company. I would not have her lonely. Come, majesty; deign to follow your humble servant." Umballah salaamed.

Kathlyn was led to a cell in the palace prison, whose walls she had but a little while ago viewed in passing, and thrust inside. A single window admitted a faint light. Umballah remained by the door, chiding softly. Presently, her eyes becoming accustomed to the dark, Kathlyn discovered a man chained to a pillar. The man suddenly leaped forward.

"Kil my Kill!"

"Father!"

She caught him to her breast in her strong young arms, crowned to him, and kissed his matted head. And they stood that way for a long while.

At this very moment there appeared before the council a wild eyed, disheveled young man. How he had passed the palace guard none of them knew. "A white woman was brought into this room forty-five minutes ago. I demand her! And by the God of my father I will cut out the heart of every one of you if you deny me! She is white; she is of my race!"

"There is no white woman here, Bruce Sahib."

"You lie!" thunder the young man.

Two guards came in quickly.

"I say you lie! She was seen to enter here!"

"The man is mad! Besides, it is sacrilege for him to enter our presence in this manner," cried one of the council. "Seize him!"

A fierce struggle between the guards and Bruce followed; but his race to the city and the attendant excitement had weakened him. He was carried away, still fighting manfully.

In the meantime Umballah concluded that the reunion had lasted long enough. He caught Kathlyn roughly by the shoulder and pulled her away.

"Behold, Colonel Sahib! Mine! I bought her this day in the slave mart. Legally mine! Now will you tell me where that silver basket lies hidden, with its gold and gems?"

"Father, do not tell him! He does not put us out of the way!"

"Kil!"

"Dad, poor dad!"

"Little fool!" said Umballah.

Kathlyn struggled to reach her father again, but could not. Umballah folded his arms tightly about her and attempted to kiss her. This time her strength was superhuman. She freed her hands and beat him in the face, tore his garments, dragged off his turban. The struggle brought them within the radius of the colonel's reach. The prisoner caught his enemy by the throat, laughing insanely.

"Now, you black dog die!"

"HALF THE TIME SHE WAS COMPELLED TO WALK."

he had wandered into the slave mart. He shrank and would have passed on but for the strange, unusual figure standing on the platform. A golden haired woman with neck and arms like Chinese jewelry and dressed in a skirt of grass! He paused.

"Two thousand rupees!"

"What!" jeered the professional seller. "For an hour from paradise? O, ye of weak hearts, what is this I hear? Two thousand rupees?—for an hour fit to dwell in the zenana of heaven!"

A keen eyed Mahomedan edged closer to the platform. He stared and sucked in his breath. He found himself pulled two ways. He had no money, but he had knowledge.

"Who sells this maiden?" he asked.

"Mahomed Ghor."

"Which is he?"

"He squats there."

The Mahomedan stooped and touched the old mahout on the shoulder.

"Call off this sale, and my master will make you rich."

The old sinner gingerly felt of the speaker's cotton garb. "Ah! My master must be rich to dress thee in cotton. Where is your gold? Bid," satirically.

"Two thousand rupees!" shouted the professional seller.

"I have no gold, but my master will give 10,000 rupees for yonder maid. Quick! Old fool, be quick!"

"Begone, thou beggar!" And the old man spat.

"Mensahib, the Mohammedan called out in English, "do not look toward me, or all will be lost. I am Ali, Bruce Sahib's chief mahout; and we have believed you dead. Take care! I go to inform Ahmed. Bruce Sahib has not returned."

Kathlyn, when she heard that voice, shut her eyes.

Umballah had drawn closer. There was something about this half veiled slave that stirred his recollection. Where had he seen that graceful poise? The clearness of the skin, though dark; the roundness of the throat and arms.

"Three thousand rupees!"

The old mahout purred and smoothed his palms together. Three thousand rupees, a rajah's ransom! He would own his elephant; his wife should wear shoes. Three thousand rupees! He folded his arms and walked gently to and fro.

"Five thousand rupees!" said Umballah, impelled by he knew not what to make this bid.

A ripple of surprise ran over the crowd. The regret, the powerful Durga Ram, was bidding in person for his senant.

Kathlyn's nerves tingled with life again, and the sudden bounding of her heart stifled her. Umballah! She was surely lost. Sooner or later he would recognize her.

The mahout stood up, delighted. He was indeed fortunate. He salaamed.

"Huzoor, she is gentle," he said.

The high-caste who had bid 3,000 rupees salaamed also.

"Huzoor she is yours," he said. "I cannot bid against my resent."

It was the custom to mark a purchased slave with the caste of her purchaser. Umballah, still not recognizing her, waved the aide toward the Brahmin caste markers, one of whom dabbed her forehead with a yellow triangle. Her blue eyes pierced the curious brown ones.

"The sahib at the river," she whispered in broken Hindustani. "Many rupees. Bring him to the house of Durga Ram." This in case Ali failed.

The Brahmin's eyes twinkled. Her Hindustani was execrable, but "sahib" and "rupees" were plain to his understanding. There was but one sahib by the river, and he was the white hunter, who had reached his destination in safety. Naturally cunning, double tongued, sly, ingratiating, after the manner of all Brahmins, who will sink to any base level in order to attain their equivocal ends, his actions were unhampered by any sense of treachery toward Umballah. A Thuggee's twist to the schemes of the street rat Umballah, who wore the Brahmin string, to which he had no right! The Brahmin chuckled as he peered at the edge of Bruce's camp. A fat purple lay yonder. He approached, his outward demeanor a mixture of pride and humility.

Bruce had returned but half an hour before, mind weary, bone tired. He sat with his head in his hands, his elbows propped upon his knees. His young heart was heavy. He had searched the bewildering jungle as one might search a plot of grass before one's door, blades by blade. A hundred times he had found traces of her; a hundred times he had called out her name, only to be mocked and gibbered at by apes. She had vanished like a perfume, like a cloud shadow in the wind.

His soul was bitter; for he had built many dreams, and always this fair haired girl had ridden upon them. So straight she stood, so calm in the eye, mannered with that gentleness known of the brave. . . Gone, and skilled as he was in jungle lore, he could not find her.

"Sahib, a Brahmin desires audience."

"Ask him what he wants."

"It is for the sahib's ear alone."

"Ah! Bring him to me quickly."

The Brahmin approached, salaamed.

"What do you wish?" Bruce asked curly.

"A thousand rupees, Huzoor!" blandly.

"And what have you that is worth that many rupees?" irritably.

The Brahmin salaamed again. "Huzoor, a slave this day was purchased by Durga Ram, Umballah, so-called. She has skin the color of old tucks, and eyes like turquoise, and lips like the flame of the river, and hair like the sands of Ganges, mother of rivers."

Bruce was upon his feet, alive, eager. He caught the Brahmin by the arm.

"Is this woman white?" harshly.

"Huzoor, the women of Allah are always dark of hair."

"And was sold as a slave?"

"To Durga Ram, the king without a crown, Huzoor. It is worth a thousand rupees," smiling.

"Tell me," said Bruce, stilling the tremor in his voice, "tell me, did she follow him without a struggle?"

"Yes. But would a struggle have done any good?" Bruce took out his wallet and counted out a thousand rupees in Bank of India notes. "Now, listen. Umballah must not know that I know. On your head, remember."

"Huzoor, the word of a Brahmin."

"Ah, yes; but I have lived long here. Where is Ali?" cried Bruce, turning to one of his men.

"He went into the city this morning, sahib, and has not returned."

"Come," said Bruce to the waiting Brahmin. "we'll return together. He now felt no excitement at all; it was as if he had been immersed in ice water. It was Kathlyn, not the least doubt of it, bought and sold in the slave mart. Misery, degradation. . . then he smiled. He knew Kathlyn. Hare. If he did not come to her aid quickly she would be dead.

It is a great blessing to be stopped when we are heading in the wrong direction. For oftentimes we can not stop ourselves, but habitually reverse our course. Some of us have been driven away from that which we know is right. It is then that we need the experience of the reversed life. As an engineer in the cab of a locomotive moves a lever and reverses the whole action of that locomotive, so the Christian must reverse every natural inclination and tendency of our consciously sinful nature, and do it the instant such a tendency is felt. If we do not reverse it, it will run in its old groove, and the power of some habitually reverse our course. Some of us have been driven away from that which we know is right. It is then that we need the experience of the reversed life.

Rev. H. G. Kennedy, of Houlton, Me., preached at the Brussels St. Church, last Sunday. Dr. Johnson is still receiving members into his church, as the result of recent special meetings.

It is a great blessing to be stopped when we are heading in the wrong direction. For oftentimes we can not stop ourselves, but habitually reverse our course. Some of us have been driven away from that which we know is right. It is then that we need the experience of the reversed life.

HOW MEN SHOULD BE TRAINED

By Mac Levy of Babylon.

(Mac Levy, the famous Long Island "health farmer," has been engaged for eighteen years in the training of athletes and the building up of run-down people, and is a recognized authority on all subjects connected with athletics, physical culture, and scientific exercise.)

Thomas A. Edison often refers to the human animal as a machine. And he is right. The human mechanism, like other machines, becomes rusty, sluggish and slow from underuse, and wears out if subjected to over-use or improper use. The human machine that is properly constructed, and is properly lubricated and well cared for, may withstand almost any amount of normal use, but the use of such machines will soon go to pieces if abused.

Herbert Kaufman, in his book, "The Efficient Age," has written some good sound sense on this subject. He says: "You're a machine, and you're a machine of abuse and overuse. Your capacity in every direction is distinctly limited. You're designed for definite purposes, and you can't do more than you're built for."

"When you overstep and overland, something must give way, and when you're overstrained, something must snap. You're strung with delicate wires, you move on exquisitely poised joints. If you're not constantly overhauled and carefully cleaned, if you're left exposed to the rust of neglect, your efficiency will decrease, your output will diminish, and you'll be thrown into society's waste-pile."

"Every time you think, every time you move, you destroy matter. When you tear down, you must rebuild; when you disperse, you must store in due ratio."

"Take an inventory of your physical assets—you can't expect buyers to purchase dilapidated and obsolete service so long as greater speed and reliability are available. We judge your ability to manage for us by observing how you conduct your personal affairs."

"If you won't guard your own welfare it's safe to assume that you'll be even more negligent of our interests. Before you complain of the value we place upon you, consider when you last added improvements to your brain or your body."

"Put in fresh batteries, lubricate, rub off the dust, polish, and bring your equipment up to date."

Excellent advice, this—but how shall you act on it? By taking advantage of the next two months, when weather conditions are most favorable to physical rejuvenation, by getting out into the sunshine and fresh air as much as an often as possible, by using plenty of water inside and out, by regulating your fuel—food—to meet the decreased demands of your machine during the warm period and by taking plenty of exercise.

Not one human machine out of a thousand goes to the scrap heap because of overwork. It is not too much work, but too little, that most frequently causes breakdown—too much work indoors, perhaps, but too little out in the open.

A machine is no stronger than its weakest part. The factory owner replaces this, and demands that his machines be kept in the best of condition and their weak parts repaired or replaced but he overlooks the fact that his own body is a machine and needs equally careful attention. In his factory he uses fuel that will produce the most power at the least cost, but he fills his own engines—his digestive organs—with slinkers that clog the works and vastly reduce his efficiency and his mental output.

Physical exercise is necessary to the digestion of food, to the combustion of the body's fuel. There are exceptions to all rules, of course, and once in a century you find a man with an alimentary tract akin to that of an ostrich or a William Tell, who can eat and drink everything, avoid all physical exertion and still survive to a ripe old age. You may belong in that class, but the chances are about a million to one against it, and if you are wise you will not wager health and life against such odds.

When I advise exercise, I can hear the business and professional men cry out "in unicorn," as H. Togo would express it, "but we haven't the time."

From my long experience as a trainer, I am willing to admit that a majority of you haven't the time, and if you had the time you haven't the inclination, and if you had the inclination you haven't the will power to put it into action, without somebody around to prod you on. Quite likely you have the time to go to ball games and watch other men exercise, and it is altogether probable that you waste an hour or two a day in worrying and fretting and in dawdling over your work. You are lazy, and you want to be transported to health on flowery

"CHIEF" MYERS SIGNS FOR THREE YEARS

Chief Myers, the Giants first catcher, signed a three-year contract to play with the New York club, which period includes this year, for which he receives two-year contract called for.

Myers was the last of the Giants regulars to sign his signature to the long-time document, and President Hempsstead, who did the negotiating, expresses himself as being much pleased over his success.

The chief, being under contract for this year, Federal League agents "kept their hands off him," even Manager Stovall of the Kansas City Feds, who was one of the most insistent searchers after National and American League talent, when he was in San Diego, Cal., and indeed Arthur Wilson to sign, only had one interview with Myers, being informed then by the chief that he was not at liberty to negotiate.

TRIPLE PLAY OF DOUBLE SQUEEZE

Philadelphia, May 1.—Nothing looks more foolish in baseball than a squeeze play that goes wrong except perhaps a failure of Connie Mack's copyrighted double squeeze. Washington effected a triple killing on the world's champion Athletics, thereby breaking up a serious rally and doubtless saving the game in the bargain.

With two runs already in and the expert bunter Jack Barry at bat, Melvin and Strunk both started to race for the plate from third and second bases respectively. Barry's attempted bunt was a sharp liner into Gandil's mitt. Melvin, who was almost to the plate, was easily doubled on the snap throw to Foster. Before Strunk could scramble back to the midway Foster whipped the ball to George McBride for the third, out of as many seconds.

DEFIANCE HAS LARGEST MASTS ON A CUP BOAT

Bath, Me., May 1.—A part of the crew of the Yankee cup candidate Defiance was busy today scrubbing the spars and body of the big racing yacht preparatory to the launching on Monday, May 11.

Captain Solah Howell and the remainder of the crew are on the big racing schooner Iroita. Aboard the Iroita are also George S. Fynchon and E. Walter Clark, managing directors of the Boston-Philadelphia-New York syndicate that is building the Defiance.

Miss Frances Clark of Philadelphia, daughter of E. Walter Clark, will christen the cup contender and it will be a daylight launching with considerable ceremony.

Yacht Shines Like Glass

The Defiance got its first coat of finish on the mahogany above the water line, today, and shone like glass.

The crew immediately started in to rub it down for another coat and when the job is complete the Defiance will have "it" on the Vantite and Resolute for looks.

As for speed, the Maine seafaring men who have had an opportunity to look the boat over are ready to bet good money that the Defiance will win the trial races against the other two New England boats.

As has been predicted, George Owen the Newton, Mass., designer, has incorporated much of a class P boat in this cup candidate.

The Defiance will have two sets of spars with hollow steel and wood masts.

Both of these masts are the tallest ever put on a racing yacht, even exceeding the length of the cup defender Reliance's mast.

This will give a chance for a tremendous ball spread and power and coupled with the boat's powerful, yet easy, graceful lines, it should make the Defiance fast in any sort of weather and give her a chance to take care of the time allowance she will probably have to give the Herreshoff boat.

It is the intention to give the Defiance a trial a week after she is launched, probably off the Maine coast and then take her to Marblehead.

THIS DATE IN RING ANNALS

Saturday, May 2, 1914.

1905—Stanley Ketchel knocked out Kid Tracy in 1st round at Butte, Mont. This was the first real ring battle of the future middle-weight champion of the world, although he had previously engaged in a number of impromptu bouts as a bouncer in a Butte dance hall. Young Ketchel, as he called himself then, had had little training as a boxer, but he was a natural fighter and he polished off Tracy, a bigger and more experienced man, with the greatest ease. A few months later Ketchel was matched with an innocent young fellow who called himself Mose LaFontaine and who disclaimed any particular knowledge of boxing, but who in reality was a clever man at the game. He got the surprise of his life when Ketchel weathered all his storm of blows and then knocked him out in the 24th round.

SPORTOGRAPHY

Baltimore has had many Famous Baseball Clubs

Baltimore's right royal welcome to the Federal League club was due to the fact that the fans of the Maryland metropolis have for a dozen years entertained an ingrowing grudge because their city, although larger than Pittsburgh, Detroit, Washington and Cincinnati, has been relegated by the baseball powers to the position of a minor league town. Since the National and American league clubs were withdrawn from the Monumental City, thousands of fans have refused to enter a ball yard controlled by organized ball, and these peevish ones have naturally flocked to the standards of Baltimore for demanding redress of their grievances, for since the very beginning of the pastime the Maryland city has been accustomed to high class ball. In that period before the civil war when the American national game was a-borning, the people of Baltimore were its most enthusiastic supporters. As early as 1857 Baltimore had a fast team in the Excelsiors. They had the gap with Herbert Murphy from Thomasville, in the Georgia State League. It is a far hop from Thomasville to Philadelphia.

Doonan's jump to the Feds left the Phillies pretty flat, as far as short stop position is concerned. They will try to plug the gap with Herbert Murphy from Thomasville, in the Georgia State League. It is a far hop from Thomasville to Philadelphia.

beds of ease, without effort on your part. You dodge the issue as long as you can, and when outraged nature finally presents her bill and demands immediate payment, and you realize that the time for aversion has passed and you've got to do something to keep the old dame from pestering you to death, you go to the drug store and get a bottle of some patent dope and to the grocery store for a package of predigested piffle, and you eat your piffle and afterward take a teaspoonful of dope in a little water, and consider you have "seen your duty and have did it."

In an audience as large as the one I am addressing, however, there are bound to be some people who have sense enough to know that nature can't be placated by any such methods, and their plea of lack of time deserves serious attention. To these I would say:

The days are now very long, and it won't be any hardship for you to go to bed an hour earlier and get up an hour earlier. Wonders can be accomplished in that hour you have gained. You can spend a part of it in bag punching, or in boxing or throwing the medicine ball, if you have a companion; or in chopping wood, if you have a wood pile. You can follow this lively exercise with a slow jog trot, gradually increasing the distance breathe deeply all the time, and follow your exercise with a cold shower, a plunge, or a sponge bath, and a brisk rub, first with bare hands and then with a towel.

Do this for a few months, persistently and conscientiously, eat plain and nutritious food, including plenty of "garden sass" and fresh fruits, and get sufficient sleep, and if you are not vastly improved, in health, I am a liar.

AGRICULTURE

When To Spray

For old orchards that have never been sprayed and for young orchards newly infested with oyster shell bark lice, spray before growth starts with commercial lime-sulphur diluted 1 to 8. This spray may be applied any time during the dormant season of the trees, strain the concentrate through a fine mesh before using. This mixture acts as a general cleaning spray for old trees.

Application No. 2.

Poisoned lime-sulphur or Bordeaux mixture when the leaf buds are swelling in the Spring. For tent caterpillars, but moths, clear case bearers and apple scab.

Application No. 3.

Same mixture as above, made just before blossoms open and just after the cluster buds unfold. This application is for the scab, and protects the young leaves and stems for the forming fruit. The poison is added for leaf insects.

Application No. 4.

The same as above, applied when most of the blossoms have fallen and the little apples are still standing upright. Do not wait until the little apples have turned downwards, as it is then too late. This is the first application for codling moth and is important in fighting the scab, as it is this application which gives clean fruit.

Application No. 5.

Arsenate of Lead 3 lbs., and water 40 gallons, a week to ten days later. If judged necessary lime and sulphur may be used instead of water. All five applications are not always necessary, and the grower must be guided in their use by the prevalence of insects and fungi and the character of the season. If only one application can be made let it be No. 1. If only two can be made, use Nos. 1 and 2. If three can be made, use Nos. 1, 2 and 4.

For full information on the insect and fungus enemies of the apple, see Part 2 of Bulletin No. 4, which will be mailed on application to the Department of Agriculture, Fredericton, N. B.

Amount of Spray to Use.

The number of trees one barrel of spray will cover depends on the age and size of the trees, and on skill of the man who is handling the spraying job. Generally speaking, well developed fifteen year old trees should receive not less than one gallon of spray for each application.

How to Spray.

Spraying should be done in every case by hand with the wind. When spraying the first side of large trees, stop the wagon or spray cart just as it comes within a few feet of the tree and spray the nearest side as far as you can completely. The spray can be driven; then drive directly opposite and spray all the central part thoroughly; then, move just past the tree and spray the last part as far as possible. In this way, nearly two-thirds of the tree will be covered and when the wind changes it will be easy to complete the spraying from the other side. A very strong wind no doubt wastes a little of the mixture, but it is very seldom that there is any loss of spraying operations because of its violence. In spraying small trees it will not be necessary to stop so long at each tree. Go through the orchard as soon as the spray has dried on the trees, and if you notice limbs or portions of the trees here and there that have been missed, it is well to take out the machine and give these spots an application of the spray mixture. In spraying after the foliage has appeared, people are often misled by the advice that is given to cease spraying just before the leaves begin to drip. It is impossible to spray a large or medium size tree thoroughly without a considerable amount of drip; hence, the first rule to follow is:—(1) Make sure that every leaf and fruit is covered; and, (2) To try to do this with as little material as possible.

General Spraying Directions

The essentials for successful orchard spraying are:

- (1) Spray intelligently. The grower should have a general knowledge of the more important insect and fungus pests. Unless a man knows exactly what he is trying to fight or prevent, he is apt to waste much time, labor and spraying material. For particulars of the life history and habits of the more common orchard pests, see Part 2 of Bulletin No. 4 and read the same thoroughly. Those who have not this bulletin may obtain it on application to the Department of Agriculture, Fredericton, N. B.
- (2) Promptness is absolutely necessary. For those spraying applications which commence with the first signs of growth in the spring, delay is fatal. In most cases, at that time of the year, one might as well not spray at all as put it off for two, three, or four days or even more. The object of a fungicide is to prevent and not to cure. Practically all fungicides are so in the case of insects, it is important not to delay spraying for them, since when they are well established and more fully grown, they are difficult to control.
- (3) Absolute thoroughness in all phases of work. Many growers do their work in a half hearted way and then complain of poor results. In spraying for fungi it is absolutely necessary to entirely cover every portion of the tree, and in fighting insects, every individual must be reached. Every portion of the tree should be thoroughly moistened with a fine mist or spray in order that a uniform coating of the same may be left on the tree. The owner of the orchard, who, presumably, is the man most anxious to get good results from spraying, should not trust the work to ordinary labor.

but he should do it himself or personally supervise it, unless he has very reliable help.

(4) Spraying solutions must be properly made. Standard made commercial lime-sulphur such as the Niagara Spray Co., The Grassell Chemical Co., and other reliable concerns, only need dilution as previously directed. The best makes of arsenate have proved so far to be the most satisfactory and most reliable poison for spraying apple trees, either with or without lime-sulphur.

(5) Spray every year. In some seasons fungi and insects are not very numerous and the fruit grower is then strongly tempted to save the expense and trouble of spraying, but it is a great mistake to do so. The spray done in years when insect and fungus pests are scarce counts in the years when they are plentiful because the effects of proper spraying are not all harvested in the first year.

(6) Use a strong durable brass pump fitted with the best attachments. A No. 2 hand pump fitted to a tank of 40 gallons capacity, with 25 feet 1.4 inch hose, 10 foot bamboo rod, atomizer, and double nozzle, will meet the requirements of most of the orchards in the province at the present time.

Notes.

- (1) Have a good strong man to work the pump and keep up as high a pressure as possible. The spraying material should come out of the nozzle with rain or dew. Its much sound that can be heard for some distance. Agitate the mixture frequently.
- (2) Lime-sulphur should not be applied when the temperature is below freezing point or while the trees are wet with rain or dew. Its much sound when generally experienced about spraying time, one cannot always wait for a long dry spell. If, however, you can get the spray applied about three-quarters of an hour before a rain, it will be effective and will not wash off unless followed by heavy rain.
- (3) Unless properly taken care of, spraying apparatus will easily get out of order. Wash the hose out at night with clean water and also pump some of it through the hose, rod and nozzle. Uncover the nozzle and either wash in boiling water, afterwards drying thoroughly, or place in kerosene or some other oil over night.
- (4) If the packing of the pump gets worn, replace with new packing, otherwise the power cannot be kept up.
- (5) Lime-sulphur is strongly caustic and it is necessary to have all connections very tight to prevent leakage. Vaseline and leather gloves are used to protect the hands. The horses and harness may be protected by a blanket or light cover.
- (6) Handle with care all spraying materials as most of them are poisonous. Everything should be kept correctly labelled and under lock and key. Lead Arsenate should be mixed in wooden, glass or earthen vessels.

and Cheese. This makes a very hearty food, heavy enough to form main dish of meal. Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until soft. Turn into colander and pour cold water over macaroni to prevent pieces adhering one to the other. Put Macaroni in buttered dish, over it pour the white sauce having the grated cheese in the white sauce. Cover with crumbs and bake.

Cheese is useful in disease. Thus in case of diabetes, when all sugars and tarches must be withheld from patient and the fat greatly increased, cheese is considered one of the best ways of conveying fat to patient.

Then how much better it is instead of eating the cheese in squares with bread and butter, to have it grated, perhaps mixed with cream or mayonnaise and then spread between thin slices of bread to form delicious cheese sandwiches.

Cheese and Olive Salad.

Grate cheese, moisten with cream or mayonnaise. Add six olives finely chopped. Press into shape of small loaf and let stand about an hour. Cut in slices and serve on lettuce with Salad Dressing.

Cheese Souffle.

Two tablespoons butter, three tablespoons flour, one half cup of milk, one half teaspoonful of salt, Cayenne, one quarter cup grated cheese, yolks three eggs, whites of three eggs.

Melt butter, add flour and when well mixed add milk. Then add salt, cayenne and cheese. Remove from fire, add yolks of eggs well beaten. Cool mixture, add and fold in whites of eggs, beaten until stiff and dry. Pour into buttered, baking dish, bake twenty minutes in slow oven. Serve at once.

Cheese Fritters.

Grate four tablespoons cheese, and mix it with fine bread-crumbs. Add one tablespoonful mustard, season well with pepper and a little salt. Work all into paste with two table-spoons of butter and one large well beaten egg. Form into cakes, dip in frying butter, fry to golden brown. Scatter grated cheese over top and serve.

Cheese Omelette.

One cupful of scalded milk, one cupful bread crumbs, one cupful cheese grated, one tablespoonful butter, one half tablespoonful of salt, yolks of three eggs, whites of three eggs.

Mix first ingredients, add yolks well beaten. Cut and fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff. Pour in buttered baking dish. Bake twenty minutes in moderate oven.

These two latter dishes are very nourishing indeed.

Interesting The Young Folks

Recently on the Pacific coast an investigation was made of seven thousand school children, and one question related to the children's desire to follow their fathers' callings. Only two per cent. wished to earn their living as their fathers did. Why not? Was it not because we are apt to present the seamy side of things to the people we love best. Are we not all pretty sure to see the "hole" before we see the "doughnut"? Is it not a rare thing to find a lawyer who tells his children how glad he is that he chose the profession he did? How often do we hear the doctors telling of the compensations of their work? Does the home-maker express enthusiasm for her profession? Do farmers, as a rule, expatiate upon the joys that fall to a farmer's lot, in his independence, his chance for developing all his intellectual powers, his opportunity to master the secrets of nature, and turn them to man's use? Instead of revealing in the sky, the trees and the sunshine, does he not ordinarily blind himself to the charms of his surroundings and dwell chiefly on his hardships as do most of us? When we take so little pains to provide our young people with an atmosphere of contentment, is it any wonder that the boys and girls on the farms wish for the delights of the town? And it is strange that the city boy has the same yearning for some other place, perhaps the freedom from restraint afforded by the far West?

There is more in this than there seems at first. For the existence of all breathing things the first thing to do is to create an atmosphere. If the atmosphere of the farm home is one in which the young minds stifle, how can it be expected that they will stay there? If the father is morose and talks before his growing sons of the hardships of farm life and never shows the bright, cheerful, inspiring side, there is to it if he goes about his work grumbling at this turn and that; if he is enshrouded eternally in a wet blanket of trouble and worry, how can he expect to inspire in the hearts of those sons a desire to be farmers? How can he ever hope to keep them on the farm? A healthy, contented, joyous atmosphere is what the youth of the farm wants, and it is most acknowledged, that it is just the thing hardest to attain to by the average farmer in the average farm home.

And yet to follow in his father's footsteps is the first natural impulse of the little boy. "I'm going to be a farmer like father." The farmer father has that impulse as a foundation to build on. How carefully should he cherish and nourish, encourage and stimulate it. If he wants to make it permanent in time? And the way to do that is to show that farm life, although it may not be void of drawbacks, and its pleasures, yet that it has its compensations and advantages which cannot be associated with city life.

Cheese And Its Uses

Before speaking of cheese let us glance for a moment at its source, namely milk. All of you are familiar with milk and its great possibilities, and uses in the home, but I wonder if you are familiar with its food value. There is no other article of food which enters so extensively into the diet as milk. Milk contains all of the food principles. It is capable of sustaining life for comparatively long periods and is the chief article of food in many diseases.

In the case of young children, milk is their only food, as their digestive organs have not become developed for the digestion of other foods. Milk is unsatisfactory for the only food for adults however.

We see the great food value of milk and we all know how useful it is to the housewife in cooking. From milk we derive cream, butter, and buttermilk and whey.

Since we have seen that milk has a high nutritive value, we see at once that anything derived from milk must be of great value as a food, as well.

Concerning milk and its derivatives much might be said, but we shall only take time to consider cheese.

Cheese.

It is one of the many articles of food that is not given the place in our diet which it should have. There are few cooks who avail themselves of the possibilities connected with the cooking of cheese dishes, or even to realize the nutritive value of cheese at a meatless supper or luncheon.

and then pressed into shapes in wooden moulds, care being taken to expel all the whey. The cheeses when formed are stored in a moderately warm place and then undergo a process called "ripening." This ripening or decomposition may go on for a longer or shorter time, according to the kind of cheese. It may be for several weeks, it may be for several months.

During the ripening there are developed in the cheeses the peculiar flavors characteristic of the completed product.

Cheeses may be classified as hard cheese or soft cheese. Soft cheeses are produced at low temperatures and with little pressure. Hard cheeses demand higher pressure and temperature. Among common soft cheeses are Cream, Nonfat and Roquefort. Hard are Stilton, Gorgonzola and Dutch.

There often appears on the market a "Pilled" Cheese. Of course this cheese has been adulterated, by having lard or other cheap fat added. The law demands that all filled cheeses be labeled as such. If so, they are sold at a lower price. If they are not labeled it is violation of the law. If filled cheese be left in a warm place it will become very greasy, as the lard will have all melted out. Filled cheese has not nearly as high food value as the pure cheese.

Cheese resembles eggs in giving such a large amount of nourishment in a small bulk. It should be used much more commonly than it is. It is not a luxury, but is one of the cheapest and most nutritious of human foods. One pound of cheese contains as much nutriment as 1 pound of meat. Cheese may take the place of meat, indeed it is called the "poor man's beef." It is just what can be expected when one remembers that 1 pound of cheese represents the growth of the nourishment from a gallon of milk.

cheese with that of meat, at its present exorbitant figure, we see that the concentrated nourishment of cheese will often make an excellent substitute for a meat food. In order to get the full food value we must buy the best cheese not filled or otherwise adulterated.

Canadian and Dutch Cheeses are ranked among the best, Canadian being given the preference even by foreign specialists, and writers.

Cheese should be used regularly and in reasonable amounts, rather than irregularly and in large amounts. It is said that in the food of European armies, cheese takes the place of meat. Unfortunately cheese is not readily digested by every one. For this reason it should be nearly excluded from the dietary of invalids or children, but for all other persons, it is a splendid muscle builder. It is an excellent food for men working the open, and from whom a great output of work is expected.

Cheese is made earlier of digestion by "grating" and whenever used in a recipe should always be so treated. The additions of a pinch of soda to the recipe will eliminate its digestibility. Always eat once for its thrown aside and left uncovered, the pieces will become moldy and unfit for use.

There are a number of ways in which cheese may be used and I only wish I had the means of demonstrating how to make these. Cold boiled potatoes may be used to advantage this way: Put a layer of thinly sliced potatoes into baking dish, season with salt, pepper and cover with layer of grated cheese, then another layer of potatoes and so on until all are used. Pour a cupful of white sauce over all, and bake in cupful of milk (cheese) with a little flour, and small piece of butter. Sprinkle top with crumbs. Bake thirty to forty minutes.

THE SILENT DRAMA WAS BAGGED ANOTHER

A Broadway favorite has joined the ranks of the Film Actors—Hard work necessary.

Even Broadway favorites have to serve their apprenticeship before they can star in the films. For four months, Donald Crisp, now appearing in Reliance Mutuals was compelled to work as an extra man before he won sufficient recognition to be placed on a regular salary in the company. Meanwhile, he received many tempting offers to return to the legitimate drama, but he swallowed his pride and made good.

Although he has an excellent tenor voice, he is one of the several hundred who were in the original Flora Dora Sextette, he says that all his ambition now centres about the silent drama.

SHORT FILM STORIES WEEK END SPECIALS

Star caters to its patrons with various features that hold attention—Many good things coming.

An enchanting story, like a yarn from Stevenson or Poe and brimful of adventure will be presented to Star patrons during the early part of the coming week. Jamie Sandos, a rich young man visiting in Paris meets the mysterious Count Seroff, who shows him a diamond of remarkable size and beauty. Jamie disappears in disgrace and a year later his sister goes to Paris and agrees to marry an old sweetheart on condition that he attempts to lift the diamond he is caught by a concealed camera and then he is blackmailed by the Count. The Count, however, meets punishment in an extraordinary manner and the young man, Jamie, clears himself from the law. The trial and tribulations of the young people finally end in a happy strain.

Star will have other special stories and up-to-date entertainments. This house features short story films at the end of each week. Four reels of these stories are given and prove very acceptable to the large patronage of the Star.

MARIE DRESSLER TO STAR.

Marie Dressler, America's most popular comedienne, last seen in "Tillie's Nightmare," will soon appear in a series of Mutual comedies. She has signed a contract with the New York Motion Picture Corporation to appear in three and four-reel special Keystone pictures which will begin to appear in motion picture theatres all over the country by the first of July.

AN ALL-STAR FEATURE FILM WILL SOON BE PRODUCED

Twenty-five Screen Artists will be seen in Picturized version of the life, work and death of John Howard Payne, author of the Immortal Song, each in the type of part suited to his or her ability.

Probably the most novel motion picture drama ever produced and surely the one of greatest interest to lovers of the photo-play and photo players will be the picturized version of the life, work and death of John Howard Payne, author of the immortal song, "Home, Sweet Home," by the Mutual Film Corporation.

This will, indeed, be an all-star motion picture, a big Mutual feature. It will be a plural reel production, but the important part of it from the point of view of the public lies in the novel idea and in the fact that it contains the greatest collection of photoplay favorites ever assembled in a single picture. Twenty-five screen favorites will appear in the picture, each one in the type of part to which he or she is most suited or best liked.

On a recent trip to the Los Angeles producing studios of the Reliance and Majestic Mutual, President H. E. Allen took the matter up with D. W. Griffith. The result will be a Griffithian adaptation of the life, work and death of the author of the great song, "Home, Sweet Home," which embraces in the telling all the Reliance and Majestic players.

Mr. Pickwick, as played by John Baker, for a Vitagraph firm in front of the very house in London where Pickwick is supposed to have lived.

Something of note attaches to every player who will be seen in "Home, Sweet Home," and makes his or her appearance significant to the photo-play fans of the country. Blanche Sweet has known for years only as "the Biograph blonde." She played the leads in many important pictures, including the hit role in "Judith of Bethulia." She is now playing leads in mutuals. Two other young actresses who gained fame and popularity in Biograph pictures, now with the mutual people are Lillian Gish and Dorothy Gish, two sisters. Lillian Gish has been called "the most beautiful blonde in the world" by David Belasco.

Henry B. Walthall is rated as America's best motion picture actor. He, formerly played in leads in Biograph productions. Among his most conspicuous parts was that of Holofernes in "Judith of Bethulia." He has starred in recent mutual movie features, such as "The Gangsters of New York" and "The Floor Above."

Mae Marsh is one of the best known young actresses in the country. She was starred in "The Great Leap," a mutual feature, and other big productions. Previous to her advent in mutuals she was a favorite in Biograph pictures. The names of players who will appear are, indeed, ones to conjure with. Here they are:

- Blanche Sweet, Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Mae Marsh, Mary Alden, Irene Hunt, Fay Tincher, Teddy Sampson, Mrs. Crowell, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Robert Barron, Courtney Poppie, Earle Foxe, Owen Moore, Donald Crisp, Jack Pickford, John Dillon, Edward Dillon, W. E. Lawrence, F. A. Turner, Spottiswoode Aitken, George Siegmann and W. H. Long.

"GOOD LITTLE DEVIL" COMING TO IMPERIAL

Other Splendid Features at Imperial next week—Singers, too.

Next week at the Imperial Theatre bids fair to be a restful one for those who have been undergoing the ordeal of changing their residences and also for those who have been in the throes of house-cleaning. Two new singlets will grace the programmes, the lady being Miss Helen Atkins, of New York, a mezzo of fine vocal abilities and having stage presence; the gentleman, Arthur Huskins, of Bangor, Maine, a tenor robust, whose experiences in festival work and on the concert platform has given him much prominence in his native state.

In pictures the supply of good things continue. Monday and Tuesday a quaint society drama in two parts by the Vitagraph Company entitled "The Mischief Maker" is scheduled. In this play a splendid cast will doubtless prove a strong attraction as the "leads" are played by Edith Storey and Earle Williams.

On Wednesday and Thursday Mary Pickford will be seen in her most remarkable success, the Belasco variation "A Good Little Devil." This is a Famous Players feature which brings a real Broadway attraction to the eyes of the people of St. John. A ridiculously low price of admission and the fact that Miss Pickford plays the part she created for David Belasco should be unquestioned guarantee of the worth of the production, which is a fantastic fairy tale pointing a splendid moral.

Friday and Saturday those who enjoy emotional stories—the fervid lovers kind—will doubtless be pleased with Father's two-part work, "When The Heart Calls." These picture features will make the Keith house the centre of entertainment next week, and doubtless many will take advantage of the whole series. The festival orchestra continues to be a delight to all who enjoy good music.

PRISONERS SHOWN IN MOTION PICTURES

The Convicts before the camera were greatly interested in the exposing of the films—Several faced the machine.

A novel scene caught by Mutual photographers for the Mutual Weekly, the great moving picture newspaper, was the special performance of "O' My Heart," the drama which has now played on Broadway for more than fifteen months, given in New York State Prison at Dannemora for Warden J. B. Trombley and the 1,425 prisoners. Two of the life prisoners, who have been confined for more than 25 years had never seen a motion picture, and the operation of the camera was explained to them by M. M. Robinson, the Mutual photographer.

Excellent views were obtained, including interior scenes showing the prisoners filling into the chapel, the prison shops and the great central hall. It was noticeable that the prisoners did not wear the striped suits formerly given to convicts, nor close-cropped hair. Owing to prison regulations the camera man took his views of the prisoners from the rear, but many of the men turned their faces to view the camera.

After the performance the warden, the keepers and the players in "O' My Heart" were filmed in the jail yard with the prisoners looking on.

"OUR MUTUAL GIRL." Thirteen is a number which always attracts attention, especially from the superstitious. But Norman Phillips, who plays the title role in the "Our Mutual Girl" fifty-two-reel Mutual serial, goes on her way calculating the number of thirteen involved in her work.

On the thirteenth of April the thirteenth chapter of the "Our Mutual Girl" series was shown on the screen at the Strand Theatre, New York City. Further investigation shows that thirteen letters spell Norma Phillips, and that there are thirteen letters in "Our Mutual Girl," and in Strand theatre. Furthermore, Miss Phillips is playing under the Reliance brand, in which the indoor scenes of "Our Mutual Girl" are taken in at 29 Union Square, which address totals thirteen characters.

Miss Norman Phillips as Margaret "Our Mutual Girl," met Briggs, the cartoonist, and Franklin F. Adams, "F. F. A." of the staff of the New York Tribune recently. "Our Mutual Girl" was sketched by Briggs, who has written and directed a motion picture series of cartoons, "The Days of Real Sport" and "When a Feller Needs a Friend," and chatted for a most pleasant hour with the man who signs his initials each day at the bottom of "The Conning Tower." As he finished Briggs looked at Margaret, who was watching the progress of the sketch intently, and then he wrote at the bottom the caption, "Gee, I Ain't Mad at Nobody."

ANOTHER FEATURE WEEK AT THE GEM

Many items of interest to be seen at the Waterloo Street house.

To the ordinary person it is not given to be allowed to have a glimpse behind the scenes at the making of a motion picture production. It is a novel experience of which much could be said and written. In his now famous serial "Peg of the Movies" in "The Ladies World," James Oppenheim has provided many peeps into the interior as regards the producing of the photo-play, and now that the Edison Co. have put these into an actual pictorial feature the scenes are doubly interesting. They are embodied in the Edison feature "Peg of the Movies" to be shown at the Gem Theatre on Monday and Tuesday next. It is a charming story of the rise of a young woman to stardom in the field of motion pictures and its theme is almost entirely new in this regard. The picture has made a tremendous hit wherever produced. It is not so tame as one might think, for in the making of the picture which brought stellar honors to "Peg," there were many thrilling episodes.

For the next change of show on Wednesday and Thursday there will of course be the presentation of the Sellig-Hearst News Pictorial with several events of current popular interest displayed, and besides this a Vitagraph feature with Julia Swayne Gordon in the leading role, entitled "The Whimsical of Destiny." This is a fascinating drama of the sawdust ring, dealing with adventures under canvas with a big circus. The story deals with a jealous rival who causes a pretty young equestrienne to be drugged and to narrowly escape a death by fire. The plot is well advanced and the action is wrought to an intensity which commands keen attention but its failure is brought about, and the better love is victorious. This is another particularly good feature such as the Gem has become famed for, and should prove most pleasing to all who see it. The Gem orchestra at every show will have a programme of musical numbers given under the direction of H. W. Burnham.

UNIQUE AND LYRIC LIVE HOUSE TOPICS

The activities of these two Theatres set forth in Pointed paragraphs.

Our Mutual Girl is steadily becoming more popular in St. John. She was greeted with crowded houses at the Unique last week.

The three versatile Boyds appearing at the Lyric present an unusual offering of songs, dances and music. The selections on the bag pipes are exceptionally well rendered.

In the next of Our Mutual Girl series at Unique Wed. and Thur. Miss Billie Burke is a conspicuous figure. A jaunt through Fifth avenue, New York, is also shown.

Marion and Thompson, two young ladies who will be seen at the Lyric this week are representing the pictorial feature depicting The Life of Queen Victoria was a welcome visitor to the Unique and Lyric this week.
