THE INJURED PUPILS

Annie Johnston, 795 Hellmuth Ave., internally injured. Is suffering great pain.

Willie Sanson, of Dundas street, several cuts and bruises on head, and suffering severely from shock.

A large number of the other children have cuts and bruises of a slight nature.

When at last the noise had died away, out came the brave little boys and girls from under the debris.

With their little bodies bruised, and with dust and dirt almost obliterating their features, they trooped out like little soldiers, not a cry or complaint being heard. It was an heroic sight.

They were sitting in the farthest corner from the door, and when the eiling came tumbling down they had no time to get out, but "ducked" down under the seats, and patiently waited until the end came.

When the crash was over they crawled to the window and pushing it up stood on the ledge.

Children Terrified.

They had become so terrified by this time that they were about to jump. Principal Wyatt and Assistant Principal Claude Brown called upon them to stand still.

They did so, and a ladder being put to the window, they were got out in safety-the last two to leave the room.

Saved by Presence of Mind. It was so heavy that it smashed many new seats down to the floor.

The only thing that saved the boys and girls from shocking injury, and perhaps death, was the fact that they He was taken in hand by another of had the presence of mind to "duck" under the seats. been nothing to cause the accident.

Principal Wyatt informed The Advertiser that no person had been in the ceiling. An Advertiser reporter went into

"I went up to the room and saw many of the children crawling out from under the ruins. "They were as orderly as they possi-

Put Up a Ladder.

"I saw Myrtle Pryor and Vera Keyes in the window, and I called to them to stand until a ladder was put up for them. They did so, and were all right. "I looked after the youngsters as well as I could. I found several of them bruised, but none very badly

A Miracle.

"It is a miracle how they got out alive. They all seemed instinctively to know what to do, and were selfpossessed and courageous all the time. "Had there been a panic, the results might have been serious.

Miss Powell and Miss Upshall were n a worse position than the children, "They were both standing up in front of the class. When the first crash was heard, they 'ducked,' and were carried out by the onrush of the children. It is extremely fortunate that no more were hurt.

"The children acted like veterans. No excitement, no hurry, just quietly, It was really splendid. I am greatly pleased with the splendid conduct of the boys and girls."

Fifty Children in Room. The escape is indeed remarkable. How fifty children could be in a room The accident happened in lower and the whole ceiling, weighing many down upon them, and no one killed, is Ceiling Did Not Break. "The reason that the accident was not more serious is owing to the fact

Some years ago, about six or seven, that the ceiling did not break," said Inspector Edwards. "The roof came down as a whole, and coming down fast. The children saw it coming, and were able to get out or get under the seats out of danger. "Had the ceiling smashed in two, as it might have done, it would have many would have been killed.

"The fact that it came down slowly! saved them. I cannot account for the accident, except that the ceiling was not supported properly. When it reached the desks, there foot and a half were nailed strips of "In all the rooms of the new school

MISS UPSHALL'S STORY

Miss Upshall, teacher of grade VI., at St. George's, when interviewed at her home this afternoon, said: "I was standing in the center of the room at 10 minutes to 12 watching Miss Powell who was giving the regular drawing lesson on the board. Suddenly I heard a noise as if some one had taken a step on the roof, and then I saw the northeast end of the ceiling start to come down. I ran to the aisle at the south side of the room, calling to Miss Powell and the children to run for their lives.

"A few of the children managed to get through the door before the celling fell. I do not know what I did.

CALLED TO SCHOOL. "There was a crash and then I remember calling to the children to come to where I was. I could get them out the door that way quicker.

"I am astonished at the coolness of the children. There was not the least excitement until the ceiling had fallen and many had got out. Not long ago I told the class that if there ever was a fire and they saw they could not get out at the door to make for the windows, and somebody would come and take them down.

"Four or five of the little girls evidently thought of this, for I saw several of them climbing out from under the desks and getting up on the window ledge. After they were out they began to get frightened, but not before, and some of them called to me that they were going to jump. I told them not to and they did not. A few seconds later a man came up a ladder and took them down.

A CURVE IN CEILING. "I noticed yesterday morning when I came into the room that there was a curve in the ceiling at that end of the room, but I did not think anything about it. I had never noticed anything wrong with the ceiling before, and thought it was perfectly safe. One of the great things that enabled us to get out so quickly was the fact that only a few weeks ago a whole row of seats were taken out. That gave us a very wide aisle on the side just where we needed it.

"The aisle in front was also very wide and the children had no difficulty at all in creeping out. The boys who got out, were very cool and many of them went back in to make sure that some of the smaller boys or little girls were caught in their desks. There were forty-two children in the room this morning."

New York, Cay 6 .- During the course of the proceedings today in the investigation before Commissioner Hand of the charges against District Attorney W. T. Jerome, in connection with the conduct of his office, Mr. Jerome made a statement of what he said was the custom of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company to contribute to the campaign funds of both Tammany Hall and the local Republican organization.

"It was a matter of policy," said Mr. Jerome, "for the Metropolitan to get on the right side of the politicians. In the city here all motions as to street openings have to be countersigned by the commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity, and by the borough president. Before the days of these contributions work often was delayed at great annoyance and expense, until the proper person had been 'seen.' "

He declared that every conceivable step was taken to bring the facts in the Metropolitan case to light.

CANNON CAUGHT AT HAMILTON

Badly Wanted By the Columbus, Ohio, Authorities on Several Charges.

Hamilton, May 7.-The local police nade an important arrest today, when they captured a young man giving the name of Nelson Cannon, who claims to be a distant relative of "Uncle Joe" Cannon, the speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and one of the presidential candidates. Cannon is badly wanted by the authorities of Columbus, Ohio., on several charges. It is claimed that in January, last year, Cannon, who was the Columbus agent of the Cleveland Trinidad Paving Company, bribed the city engineer to give his company the contract for paving several miles of roads. The specifications called for 18 inches of concrete, and the company laid only 6 inches, this being discovered when a water main was laid later. Cannon and the city engineer were arrested, and pleaded guilty to several charges of bribery before the grand jury. The city engineer was allowed out on $12,-000 bonds, and Cannon was released on $10,000 bonds. Shortly before their trial they skipped, and for the last few weeks Columbus detectives have been scouring this part of the country. 'Cannon, with his wife, stayed in Grimsby, and today was seen by one of the detectives at a station. He was arrested. The city engineer is also supposed to be in this part of the country. Cannon takes his arrest very coolly, and asserts that he will fight extradition. As a result of the bribery, the city of Columbus was touched for
