

WESTERN FAIR NOT CRIPPLED BY FIRE THE REBUILDING HAS ALREADY STARTED WITH CITY CO-OPERATING IN THE WORK

City Engineer Ashplant and Staff Will See That Operations Are Rushed at Top Speed—Shipments of Lumber Already on Way for Work.

THE BUILDINGS ARE WELL INSURED ADJUSTMENT WILL BE HURRIED

At noon today the grounds and buildings committee of the Western Fair Association went over the site of the buildings destroyed on Thursday night, in company with representatives of the city council, and unanimously decided to proceed at once with the erection of new buildings, which will be completed before the exhibition.

A temporary shelter will be built over the cement floor of the machinery hall, which remains in good condition, and new horse, cattle, sheep and swine sheds will be erected. City laborers will commence work clearing away the debris this afternoon and building operations will be commenced at once.

Not Crippled.

"We don't want the public to think that we will be crippled by the fire. We will be ready for the fair, which will be held as usual, and we will not allow the fire to detract in any way from the success of the exhibition," said President W. J. Reid, when the board of directors met this morning.

Undaunted by Loss.

It was a very brief meeting. All the directors were optimistic and undaunted by the serious losses. Promptly after Secretary Hunt had explained on the plans of the exhibition grounds just how many buildings were destroyed, the members of the city council present had assured the directors of the association that the council was ready to give every aid in repairing the havoc wrought by the fire, and Lieut.-Col. Gartshore had moved a resolution, which was carried, asking the council to proceed in conjunction with the grounds and buildings committee with erecting new buildings, the meeting adjourned, and the members of the grounds and buildings committee hastened at once to the exhibition grounds to see just what steps were necessary to be in readiness for the fair on its scheduled dates.

Will Start Work At Once.

Mayor Graham stated that he already had had a conference with the underwriters and representatives of the insurance companies regarding the speedy adjustment of the fire losses to allow the clearing of the debris from the site of the burned buildings and the erection of new ones at once. There was nothing to prevent the work being proceeded with at once, and Mayor Graham stated that the corporation laborers would be at work by noon on clearing the grounds.

City Engineer Ashplant was present, and with his staff, will see that the work is rushed forward with all possible speed. Mr. Ashplant and Building Inspector Piper will consider the requirements for the new buildings as decided upon by the horsemen and the grounds and buildings committee, and will prepare plans immediately for new buildings.

The city engineer has already got into touch with the local lumber dealers and stated that large shipments of lumber would be on their way to London immediately. There would be no delay occasioned in securing the necessary building material.

Well Insured.

It was stated at the directors' meeting that the buildings, which are owned by the city, are insured for 90 per cent of their valuation. The valuation will be less than real value, because of improvements made since this valuation was fixed, but still the insurance carried will to a large extent cover the losses.

The contents of the buildings which were owned by the Fair Association, were also covered by insurance. Among the chief losses of the association was the Brush machine recently purchased for reducing the voltage of the hydro-electric power to accommodate the lighting system used on the grounds.

Night and Day Shifts.

The grounds and buildings committee was given full power by the association to go ahead with the work necessary. Night and day shifts will be kept at work by the city and new buildings will be in readiness for the exhibition.

A 12-foot fence will be erected at once and box stalls will be built along the inside, which will provide accommodation for a large section of the horses.

Lieut.-Col. Gartshore was of the opinion that only a temporary building should be built for the machinery and stove exhibits this year. It was pointed out by Secretary Hunt that the cement floor of the machinery hall is still in good condition, and as all the space has already been allotted it is probable that a temporary roof will be built over this and the space roughly sided in.

LOSS WITHIN $50,000 MARK

Insurance Carried on the Fair Buildings Totals Thirty Thousand Dollars.

THE FIGURES IN DETAIL

The insurance carried on the buildings, either destroyed or damaged in the early morning fire at the fair grounds totals $30,300. On the morning of the fire the insurance will be $27,000, with the total fire loss well within the $50,000 mark.

The insurance on the burned buildings is:

Buildings	Amount
Machinery and agricultural implements	$9,500
Transportation	5,000
Swine sheds	800
Boiler house	500
Double horse stable	6,000
Single horse stable	6,000
Dining hall	1,000
Cement exhibits	1,500
Total	$30,300

The single horse stable ($6,000) has been damaged less than $1,000, according to estimates prepared this morning, while the swine sheds are also only slightly damaged. The other buildings will be complete insurance losses, however.

The insurance risks at the exhibition grounds are covered by a rather high insurance rate, but in view of the blaze last night, the directors are congratulating themselves that the reduction in insurance, carried by the board, had not gone into effect.

The loss on the buildings will be borne pro rata by the score of companies that have insurance on the buildings, the risks being placed in bulk.

GRAND TRUNK SHOPS WERE IN GRAVE PERIL

Wind Carried Shower of Sparks From the Fire at Fair Grounds.

The fire at Queen's Park early this morning for a time threatened the Grand Trunk car shops, which are directly opposite on Campbell street. The wind was from the northwest, and the sparks flew thick and fast. The heat from the fire was intense, blistering and peeling off the paint on the doors, window-casings and cornice. In several places the wood was charred. The telegraph poles before the building ignited, and a flat car standing within the yard and at a considerable distance from the conflagration, was blistered and scorched.

The hose crews of the carshops quickly responded to the alarm, and were the first on the scene. They kept continuous streams of water playing on the buildings, thus preventing the flames spreading. As is was, the fence caught fire and burnt, while a shed containing gasoline and inflammable oils was in serious danger. The hose crews fought stubbornly, and eventually extinguished the blaze.

Mr. T. Treleven, master carman at the shops, warmly praised the crews for their splendid work, saying that they had saved the buildings.

Was It Work of Firebugs?

Mr. William Wakeling, 24 Campbell street, who telephoned in the alarm about 2 o'clock, is strongly of the opinion that the fire was of incendiary origin. About 9 o'clock Thursday night, Mr. Wakeling observed two unknown men about the exhibition buildings, and shortly afterwards a car of straw was observed to be blazing. This was put out without spreading to any of the buildings, but Mr. Wakeling's suspicions having been aroused by this minor blaze, he believes that the two men may have returned at a later hour with the same incendiary intentions.

BIG RECEPTION FOR HALDANE IN NEW YORK

Lord High Chancellor Will Only Spend Short Time in States.

Will Give an Address in Montreal and Then Leave for England.

[Canadian Press.]

New York, Aug. 29.—Viscount Haldane, the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, arrived in New York this afternoon on the Cunarder Lusitania.

The reception committee, representing the United States Government and the American Bar Association, of which committee Francis Rawle, of Philadelphia, is chairman, did not go down the way to meet Lord Haldane, but greeted him when the Lusitania reached her pier.

Herman Winter, of the Cunard Line, met the committee at the pier and escorted the members aboard the Lusitania.

On this committee with Mr. Rawle are Joseph H. Choate, ex-ambassador to the court of St. James; J. C. McReynolds, attorney-general of the United States; ex-Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson; Francis Lynde Steierson, Charles Henry Butler and C. A. Saverance.

Lord Haldane and his party, which includes Sir Kenneth Muir-MacKenzie, the clerk of the crown, and the Lord High Chancellor's sister, Miss Elizabeth Haldane, will go from the pier to the Plaza Hotel, where Lord Haldane will receive the newspapermen and submit to the first interview he has given since he became the highest legal dignitary in the British Empire. A luncheon in his honor by the Pilgrims of New York had to be abandoned, owing to the short time the Lord High Chancellor will be in New York.

After the reception, Viscount Haldane and party will be taken by the reception committee on a sight-seeing tour of New York, which will last most of the afternoon. This evening the visitors will be the guests of Mr. Severance at the Metropolitan Club.

At 10 o'clock Saturday morning Viscount Haldane, with Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, will go on board the P. & O. yacht Corral and steam up the Hudson to where the Lord High Chancellor, who was formerly the British secretary of war will be received with military honors by Col. Townsend, the superintendent of the West Point Military Academy, and the tactical and academic staffs of the institution. At West Point the party will be joined by Charles J. Doherty, the Canadian minister of justice.

Will Visit Albany.

After a reception at the home of Col. Townsend, followed by a review of the corps of Cadets, Lord Haldane and party will leave for Albany, over the West Shore Railroad, travelling in the private car of President Loree, of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad. The party will remain in Albany three hours and will leave that city for Montreal at 11 p.m.

Tuesday morning Lord Haldane leaves Montreal for New York, arriving here at 10 o'clock that night. At 1 o'clock next Wednesday morning he will sail for home on the Lusitania. Fellow passengers of Viscount Haldane on the Lusitania coming over now are Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, of the supreme court of the United States, and Lord Strathcona, the Canadian high commissioner in London.

Railwaymen Are Taking Strike Vote

[Canadian Press.]
Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 29.—Balloting in connection with the contemplated strike of employees of the British Columbia Electric Railway Company is taking place just now, but the result will not be known until Saturday. The men's leaders state that they believe a way will be found out of the difficulty and that a strike will be averted.

A strict censorship is being maintained and no statements will be published by the men. The statement is made, however, by some of the men, that a strike will commence at ten o'clock Saturday morning and that the company have 250 men ready to run the cars at a moment's notice.

WANTS GOVT. TO MAKE GOOD ITS FARMERS' BANK PLEDGES

W. C. Nickle Will Urge Finance Minister To Take Speedy Action to Reimburse Depositors Who Lost—Conference Will Likely Be Held Shortly.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, Aug. 29.—Finance Minister White will have the Farmers' Bank depositors and shareholders to deal with as soon as he returns to his desk in the finance department.

W. C. Nickle, K. C., of Belleville, who represents the department, is in Ottawa waiting for Hon. Mr. White. He will urge that speedy action be taken by the Government to make good the promise Premier Borden gave at the close of last session that the depositors will be reimbursed for their losses.

Early next week there will probably be a conference between Premier Borden, Finance Minister White and Mr. Nickle to determine what plan shall be adopted and in what form the relief legislation will be presented to Parliament next session.

RAISED THE MONEY.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Ottawa, Aug. 29.—Finance Minister White and Sir William Mackenzie, who have been in England on a financial mission, are expected to return to Ottawa on Saturday. It is understood that their mission to England was a successful one.

LETTER-CARRIERS WILL DEMAND AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY

Effort To Be Made To Secure Sick Pay and Longer Holidays.

Want Standard Set For Amount of Mail Each Shall Carry.

[Canadian Press.]

Winnipeg, Aug. 29.—Almost all of the 100 delegates expected to be in attendance at the biennial convention of the Dominion letter-carriers have arrived in Winnipeg, eastern delegates coming in a special car from Toronto.

The convention opened its two-day session in the Industrial bureau at 9 o'clock this morning, with President Robert Gray, of Hamilton, in the chair. Many important resolutions are to come before the body for discussion.

Among them being the question of the exclusion of Sundays from annual leave of absence, and the proposal that carriers be granted not less than 21 days' holidays inclusive of 10 days' bonus.

Efforts to secure sick pay will be discussed and the convention will probably be instructed to endeavor to obtain pensions for carriers in place of the present superannuation scheme.

Definite arrangements for an eight-hour day schedule will be taken up and a resolution providing that the executive be instructed to press the Postmaster-General for different regulations, whereby the weight and load that any man is expected to carry is fixed, will be gone into.

Reduction of bonus furnished by letter-carriers will be discussed and also some very important amendments made. A banquet will be given the delegates this evening, and on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock the election of officers will take place, after which the delegates will be paid their expenses for the trip to Winnipeg.

THE WEATHER.

TOMORROW—FINE AND COOL.

The temperature by The Advertiser thermometer at noon today was 72.

Forecasts.
Toronto, Aug. 29—8 a.m.

Today—Strong breezes to moderate local gales, westerly to northwesterly; some scattered showers, but mostly fair and comparatively cool.
Saturday—Fresh northwest to west winds; fine and cool.

Temperatures.
The following were the highest and lowest temperatures during the 24 hours previous to 8 a.m. today:

Stations	High	Low	Weather
Calgary	82	54	Cloudy
Port Arthur	68	48	Clear
Winnipeg	70	52	Cloudy
Saskatoon	68	48	Clear
Park Sound	68	54	Cloudy
Toronto	66	60	Cloudy
Quebec	64	58	Cloudy
Montreal	64	56	Cloudy
Quebec	66	48	Cloudy
Father Point	66	40	Cloudy

Weather Notes.
The depression mentioned yesterday is now centred near the Straits of Mackinaw, with its energy still slowly increasing.

Showers or thunderstorms have been almost general in Ontario and Quebec, but the rainfall has been nearly everywhere light.

In the West the weather is fine.

RECONSTRUCTION IN PROGRESS AND FAIR WEEK WILL SEE BURNED BUILDINGS REPLACED

Big Gangs Started at Noon Clearing Away the Debris and Nine Hours After Fire Discovered Work Is Underway on Temporary Structures—Contractors Co-operate and Go to Rescue of the Fair.

Reconstruction is in progress. At noon today City Engineer W. N. Ashplant started 50 men at work clearing away the debris of the burned buildings at the fair grounds. Before morning there will be 150 more at work.

Already the construction gangs of the city electric department are at work erecting poles and stringing wires to provide illumination for the night gangs that will labor incessantly to replace every building with a temporary structure. By night-fall it is expected that the lights will be in readiness, and the first crew of night laborers can be put at work.

Adjuster Appointed.

Insurance adjusters, Western Fair directors and the city officials mutually selected Contractor John Purdom as appraiser. His findings will be accepted by both city and insurance companies. This meant that the work of reconstruction could start nine hours after the fire was first discovered.

Everybody Helping.

London's faith in its fair could have no greater example than the co-operation that made possible the early start this afternoon, and which will provide temporary buildings at least for the fair next week. Contractors throughout the city have come to the rescue of the fair. They have signified their willingness to assist to the limit of their ability. This afternoon they will meet at the fair grounds and each contractor will be assigned a portion of the work. Every available carpenter and laborer in the city will find employment at the fair grounds, where the buildings to replace the burned ones are to be reared in less than a week. City Engineer W. N. Ashplant, Building Inspector A. M. Piper and every city official, great or small, are already at work. They will see the job through to a finish. This "job" will be the replacement of every building destroyed.

Temporary Structures.
At first it was believed that marquees and tents would be used to replace portions at least of the buildings that are gone, but the accommodation will be there. Progressive, co-operative loyalty will make the accommodation possible, and the London Fair will be bigger, better and more progressive than ever for its 1913 exhibition. The fire has served, in any rate, to increase the enthusiasm and ardor of those behind the big project.

Relatively the same floor space will be provided for exhibitors in the temporary structures as in the destroyed ones. The finish and fittings may not be up to the standard of the buildings that are gone, but the accommodation will be there. Progressive, co-operative loyalty will make the accommodation possible, and the London Fair will be bigger, better and more progressive than ever for its 1913 exhibition. The fire has served, in any rate, to increase the enthusiasm and ardor of those behind the big project.

William Bauldry, whose residence is in Toronto, complained to the local detective force by telegram shortly after 11 o'clock this morning that he had been robbed of $230, either in the Union depot in Toronto or on Grand Trunk express No. 1.

Detectives Nickle and Egelton hurried to the Grand Trunk depot and met the express with Bauldry aboard, bound for Detroit. He told them that while getting on the train at the Union depot he had a grip in each hand. The money was in his hip-pocket. He did not discover that it was missing until the train had gone a considerable distance from Toronto.

The detectives are of the opinion that the thief took the money from Bauldry's pocket as he was climbing aboard the train at Toronto. A search of the train failed to disclose any suspicious-looking persons, and as every "dip" of any repute in the country is known to the detectives, the thief must have either taken the money in Toronto or left the train between there and London.

When Bauldry discovered his loss he informed the conductor, who wired from Hamilton asking that the local police be asked to investigate.

Mr. Darch's many friends in London will be glad to hear of his election as supreme secretary. He has been supreme auditor since 1908, and has made a reputation that has led to his selection now for the position of supreme secretary, to which is attached the salary of $5,000 a year. Mr. Darch's career in the I. O. F. began in London when in 1904 he joined Court Welcome, No. 12. In 1906 he was elected high vice-chief ranger, and a year later high chief ranger for Western Ontario.

Mr. Darch was for a number of years chairman of the water commissioners and was prominent in Masonry, having been worshipful master of St. John's Lodge, No. 20.

Claims Adjusted For Goderich Fire
The claims of the Kensington Furniture Company, of Goderich, whose establishment was destroyed by fire about two weeks ago, have been adjusted at $69,000. Messrs. D. Campbell & Sons, of this city, handled most of the insurance. The loss is distributed between about twenty companies.

Dr. Chas. Clark Stricken Suddenly
[Special to The Advertiser.]
Buffalo, Aug. 29.—Dr. Charles P. Clark, aged 50, born in and for twenty years a resident of St. Marys, Ont., and a graduate of Toronto Medical College, expired suddenly of heart failure while driving his automobile last night on Niagara street, near Penfield street, here. Burial will be in St. Marys.

Fred J. Darch, of London, elected supreme secretary of the Independent Order of Foresters.

BIG PERCENTAGE OF PUPILS HAVE DEFECTIVE EYES

Medical Inspection Shows That About One-Quarter Have Poor Sight.
Authorities Say Question Is Not Receiving the Attention
It Should.

[Canadian Press.]
Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Dr. Lewis C. Wessels, ophthalmologist for the Philadelphia Board of Health, addressed the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene today. His subject was the defective vision of school children from an economic standpoint and he said in part:

"Medical inspection of school children has revealed the fact that at least 25 per cent. of all children attending school have defective vision or eye strain sufficiently grave to require the constant use of glasses. In the majority of cases suitable glasses cause these children to advance and take their places in class along with the normal child."

Not Looked After.
In consideration of these facts, the correction of defective vision in the school child is not receiving the attention that its importance deserves. Such corrections not only increase the efficiency of the pupil and teacher, but have an important economic value as well, because if a child is backward and remains in the same class for two or three years, it is costing the state two or three times as much as is necessary to teach that child."

A Big Expense.
In Philadelphia each pupil costs about $35 per year to teach. Under normal conditions a pupil of fourteen years old should reach the eighth grade at a cost to the state of $280. If on account of defective vision the child only reaches the fourth grade in that time, it has still cost the state $280, but with only $140 worth of result, a loss to the state of $140.

The loss to the child is considerably more, because at the age of fourteen it is likely to be put to work, poorly equipped for the struggle for existence, his earning power is curtailed for the want of an education, so he can contribute but little toward his own support, that of his family, or that of the state. So again the state loses and all for the want of suitable glasses."

While it is quite easy for the medical inspector or teacher to detect defective vision, the recommendations for glasses cannot always be carried out on account of poverty or ignorance. These cases can procure free treatment at the dispensaries, but they are too poor or too indifferent to buy the glasses prescribed, and so they continue to struggle along greatly handicapped and fall behind on account of their eyes."

Give Free Glasses.
The department of public health and charities has solved this problem in Philadelphia by establishing a division of ophthalmology under the bureau of health, where poor children can be refracted and furnished with glasses free. We are now refracting nearly 2,500 cases a year. If we save each one of these children but one year during its entire school life there will be an annual saving of over $87,000, not counting the child's time and its increased efficiency. So the furnishing of free glasses to school children is not a charity per se, but is a duty and an economic problem. Many children have come to the dispensary wearing glasses bought from some refracting optician or from a five and ten-cent store. These glasses were not only unsuitable but were positively injurious to the child's eyes."

Few Remain.
"But few children remain in school after the age of fourteen, the legal age at which children are permitted to work. This fact emphasizes the necessity of examining the eyes of children in the kindergarten and the first grades. The fact I wish to emphasize in this paper is the importance of municipalities establishing their own eye dispensaries for the refracting and the furnishing of glasses free to the poorest pupils. This is an economic problem rather than a charity, as it reduces the cost of education and at the same time it increases the efficiency of both the pupil and the teacher."

Mind-Making.
"Mind-making Through Sight-Saving" was the title of a paper read by Dr. P. Park Lewis, of Buffalo, who spoke in part as follows:

"It is a generally accepted fact that near-sight is developed and increased during the period of school life until maturity more than one-quarter of the school population have acquired myopia. It is not an accidental occurrence, nor is it due in its beginning to bad hygienic surroundings. It is caused as frequently in the children of the rich as of the poor."

Escape Entirely.
Many living under exactly similar conditions as do those in whom it develops escape it entirely. It starts primarily as a result of a strain of the eyes having that congenital irregularity of the front part of the eyeball known as astigmatism. In order to produce a clear image on the retina of eyes so malformed an abnormal strain is put upon the muscles of accommodation within the globe. This weakens the resistance of the eye, allowing it to gradually stretch more especially in the back part. The stretching having begun, it is steadily but surely increased by continued near work, such as reading or writing."

Rigid Curriculum.
"Notwithstanding the fact there is no modification in the rigid curriculum of our schools for pupils having eyes so affected, and we have as a result the development of a condition which predisposes to other and later destructive changes in the eyes."

The Remedies are Obvious. First, the correction of the focal defect at the earliest possible opportunity; but when the stretching process has begun this is not enough. The additional strain of near work in the already weakened resistance of the eyeball will inevitably increase the myopia. Near work, such as reading and writing, must cease. Happily the training of the mind and the development of the brain can be carried on as effectively if not more so without the use of books for study than with them."

Not Essential.
"Book study is convenient but not essential. In looking on the printed page we often see without thinking. The child should learn to think without seeing. Teaching from the concrete object, the use of pictures, the developed sense of touch, and of smell bring into play various parts of the brain through the association fibres, and lead to more clear, exact and rapid thinking, than, where the student is obliged to interpret the symbols employed in the printed page, and which require an added mental effort for their understanding. It is, therefore, good pedagogy to use books."

less, not only when the necessity arises, but in all teaching. This is but an elaboration of the idea of Froebel and of Montessori, and finds expression in the technical school, and the hospital.

Should Be Segregated.
"All children in whom near sight is beginning should be segregated into special classes. The same curriculum could be employed as for the others of the same class, but for these book study should be replaced by oral graphic illustration and other methods of study. In this way and in this way only the development of progressive near sight in school children can be arrested."

Standard Diets.
Mabel Hyde Kittredge, chairman of the New York School Lunch Committee, chose as her subject the relation of menus to standard dietaries, and spoke in part as follows:

"The difficulty of this education for the eradication of malnutrition is realized by everyone. In 1910, the chief medical officer of London for the board of education in London, stated that 'While effective nutrition stands in the forefront as the most important of all physical defects from which school children suffer, there is no condition harder to grapple with than this complex and interwoven cause.'"

A Step Forward.
"Not underestimating the complexity of this problem, I still believe that we will have taken one step forward when we realize clearly that the penny lunch, if taken alone without the perfectly possible accompanying education in foods, food values and education in buying, does but little toward lessening the evil of malnutrition among school children."

'Public Feeding of Elementary School Children.' The greatest danger, perhaps of a provision of meals is that they act as a salve to the conscience of the community who, seeing the children being fed and thinking all is well, look no further."

"I believe the school luncheon will lessen the causes of understanding just so far as it gives to those children who buy the full knowledge of the kind of food they are buying, knowledge of its preparation and its value over impure, unwholesome food."

Poverty First.
"In a list of causes of malnutrition, I notice that in England poverty is put first, but it seems to me in this country ignorance comes first, and this ignorance cannot be conquered by lading out a penny's worth of soup and tempting children to buy graham crackers and rice pudding and fruit from a penny table. The general raising of standards will, of necessity, be slow, but we are doing all we can to change the habits of the families of the children, who buy luncheons from us. Take, for example, the habit of setting the table at home, and having no regular time for meals. This habit among many of our immigrants comes from the confusion of living. The school hour at noon does not fit into the husband's hour off, little children demand food more frequently than their elders, the rooms are small and overcrowded, and after a time it seems too much trouble to set the table."

Should Be Regular.
"Every child in our schools should be taught that health is only possible with regular meals; not taught it once, but repeatedly. Every mother, through mothers' meetings, or by circulars printed in her own language, should be made to understand that the school lunch is simply one way to make more possible regular hot meals for her children, that we are not feeding her children because of poverty, but because we realize the confusion of conditions that she is obliged to meet; and incidentally that if she does not give her child at least three cents a day for his lunch she has not done her part."

Need Education.
"But even before we get our universal ideal educational system, I believe we who are serving luncheons can do a great deal more than we are doing. For example, in New York next year we are to serve a noon meal in seventeen elementary schools. We estimate that we shall feed 5,000 children a day. If these 5,000 know each day the name of the soup they have eaten and go home and tell their mothers about it, something will have been done."

"Cannot we have on the classroom blackboard the ingredients used in the soup, and, possibly, a short explanation of their food value, showing, for example, the food value of a bean soup or a candied apple, both being the same price, and the latter very popular?"

It would make the lunch much more interesting, and children do care whether they are strong and big or not. The boy would like to get his money's worth from the penny table. When he saw on the blackboard that the penny he spent today for rice pudding gave him four times as much as the penny he spent yesterday for a sweet cake, it would arouse something in him that would be one step toward better health for that boy."

HENSALL.
Hensall, Aug. 29.—Twenty-six of the residents of this section went on the harvesters' excursion to the West.

An union raised of many years' experience states that he has the best crop this year that he has ever had.

Hensall has a real estate boom on. Five residences and accompanying lots were recently sold in one day, and every few days new purchases are made. It is a difficult matter to find a house to rent and soon the erection of new ones will be a necessity.

A new dentist, Dr. McDonald, of London, is about to locate here shortly.

A large number of citizens are going and coming to and from Toronto Fair, and shortly London will receive a big contingent, as this section usually sends an immense crowd to the Western Fair.

The Salvation Army at Seaforth has made Hensall an outpost, and street meetings are held once or twice a week. The union services of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches held on Sunday last were attended by large congregations and were greatly enjoyed.

The late rains have improved the root crops and the late fall and winter apples. The bean crop in this section is excellent. If it can be harvested without receiving too much rain the farmers will be satisfied.

The flax is all pulled and threshing and spreading are now going on. Nearly all of the 60 Indians who were in the reserve are in circulation that the late varieties of potatoes are rotting badly.

This Exhibition is certainly the most extensive and interesting we have ever held and tells the complete fashion story of Fall Millinery, from the original conceptions from Paris to the copies and adaptations of the best American Designers.

YOUR PRESENCE IS CORDIALLY INVITED
COMMENCING SATURDAY and continuing Tuesday and Wednesday, Next Week. The baskets of autumn foliage and flowers strewn amongst the ledge decorations on the main floor will give the whole scene a tinge of autumn beauty.

Millinery
High mounts and rolling brims are strongly featured in Paris and New York and are very much in evidence in this our first autumn display—Velvet plush and satin brocades, which allow such scope in adaptation and fashioning of models, are seen in most charming effects.

Many small and medium shapes are seen with most distinguished decorations, side-upturned brims, etc., also the soft, flat toques with very light touch of trimming or ornament. Purple, blue-berry, petunia and Russian green are most conspicuous colors. The latitude in size and variety of shapes is so great that no one can say there is no hat I can wear this season. Everyone will find in this display a hat as if it were made specially for you.

Coats and Suits
The cutaway coat with pointed back, and the narrow-around-the-ankle skirts with broad hip effect, are the prominent features in ladies' suits, and the materials most favored are of soft velour, eponge, Jacquards, Bedfords, whipcords and diagonals. Skirts are mostly draped in front or on sides.

Some of the choicest models from Paris and New York will be seen in the opening display Saturday.

Here, too, you will see the newest separate coats and cloaks, mostly three-quarter lengths, full backs, and cutaway fronts. Many suggest the peg-top effect. The most popular materials are double-faced goods, two-toned rough surfaced cloths, boucles and chinchillas.

Furs
Adjoining this section will be displayed our first showing of Ladies' Furs, demonstrating every new feature for winter season, 1913-14, in mink, sable, fox, etc. Muffs, Stoles and Coats. This display will interest you.—SECOND FLOOR.

LONDON, FRIDAY, AUG. 29.

WESTERN FAIR NOT CRIPPLED.

The destruction by fire of several Western Fair buildings this morning was the cause of momentary concern to very many people in London and in Western Ontario. Exhibitors may have felt an alarm that the show might not come off, and many thousands of people who have come to take the Fair as a fixed institution of holiday, a grand general Harvest Home feast, when town and country meet en masse for just once in the year, would be immensely disappointed if the event were cut off or materially crippled.

The directors, however, who have laid out to give the people this year the greatest Western Fair in history, held a meeting without delay, and have given out assurances that the fire will not hurt the show one iota. They deplore the sensational reports appearing in one morning paper, which gave rise to misapprehensions of impending ruin or fizzle. There will be nothing of the sort. The Fair will still be the best yet.
There is a week and more to make the necessary arrangements. As for the machinery building, it is worth noting that the most modern method of exhibiting machines is to put them in the open under awnings or tents at most.

This is the arrangement at Winnipeg, for example, and it has been very successful there. Grandstand and main building are, of course, intact, while full provision will be made for the catastrophe and losses.

It is a lucky thing this did not occur days later in the midst of the big doings. The fire brigade did excellent work in saving the grandstand, and with it the whole entertainment section of the show. Nothing will hinder the complete success of the exhibition as planned. It is far and away the best and gayest week of the year for this rich region of Ontario, and perhaps interest will rise even the higher because of the narrow yet complete escape from disaster.

LONDON'S RAILWAY PROBLEM.

In all the reports and estimates put forth by the advocates of electrification, it is assumed that more than half the revenue of the London and Port Stanley must come from freight.

Certainly the road must depend mainly on freight business. The excursion season is only three months of the year. In the other nine months the passenger business would not pay the operating expenses. Comparisons with the traction company are valueless, because the fixed charges of the L. and P. S. R., if electrified, would be several times those of the other road to the lakeside. The gross revenue of the latter is less than half the sum which Messrs. Gaby, Storer, Warfield and other "experts" estimate will be earned by the L. and P. S. R.
under electrification.

The promoters of the Beck scheme try to whip up public sentiment for it by promising cheap and frequent service for summer picnickers (with nine cars!), but they keep the shipping interests in the background. The vice-presidents of the board of trade, Mr. E. C. Mitchell, speaks for the mercantile community when he asks that these interests be given more consideration. The difficulties are obvious.
If the freight is handled by a municipal road it must be trans-shipped, thus impairing the present direct and efficient service given by the Pere Marquette and Michigan Central, which is now indispensable to the wholesalers and jobbers of London. On the other hand, if these railways were active competitors of the municipal road and declined to hand over their freight to it for haulage, it would have no freight business except that trans-shipped at Port Stanley. Even this traffic would be shut off nearly six months of the year. There might be some coal traffic in winter, but coal is low-class freight, the least profitable, and Messrs. Gaby and Storer say it would be carried at cost. The city would receive a certain rental, of course, from the M. C. R. and Pere Marquette if these companies continued to use the line, but why go to the expense of electrification? It is not necessary to spend a million, or half a million, or a quarter of a million, in putting the road into first-class shape for steam operation.

The suggestion of "Taxpayer" is that the city copy the example of the New York and Long Branch Railway, $8 miles long, which is used by three competing steam roads. The Grand Trunk, Canadian Pacific, Michigan Central and Pere Marquette could be invited to use the L. and P. S. R., paying running rights and guaranteeing certain freight and passenger rates and service. The municipal ownership of the road would be asserted by the appointment by the city of a superintendent, who, with a small staff, would exercise control over all trains on the road, watch the city's interests, and see that all obligations were respected to the letter. The city council should at least make an attempt to ascertain whether this system could be adopted as an alternative to electrification.

There is the other alternative of lease to one steam road, with running rights for others. It will be a civic crime if the majority of the aldermen refuse to consider these plans and try to force a vote upon the Beck scheme before any others have been devised and discussed.

NOT THE SHELTERED SEX.

A reflection arising from these disasters to big stores, factories and also trains, cars and steamboats, is that women are not living the sheltered life of old. Formerly men were destroyed wholesale in wars, mines, accidents by flood and field, and widows, mothers, maids were left lamenting. Now it seems almost coming the other way round. War is moribund. Mines are safer. But women travel by land and sea in great numbers, and it is not always possible for the men to save them as in the case of the Titanic.
They through the theatre and the church, and as shoppers far outnumber men in the congested downtown streets of cities, where dangers lurk or stalk abroad. They lose their lives as clerks and workers in the collapse of holocaust of large buildings. Seven out of nine of those killed or badly injured in the Peterboro tragedy were women.
They are in the firing line of modern life.

Watch the phoenix feat of the Western Fair.

It looks as though Huerta got his back up only to back down.

A western clergyman complains that young Canadians are too engrossed in money-making. Do middle-aged and old Canadians set them a better example?

The London Free Press is giving the city a dastardly stab in the back by trying to inject party politics into the discussion of the railway question.
What has politics to do with it?

The Wingham Times checks up a few of the veterans among Ontario newspapermen. In the list appears, naturally, the name of Mr. M. A. James, editor for many years of the Bowmanville Statesman. He has shown what a force the weekly paper may be made by competent hands. The Statesman is one of the indispensable things of the life of West Durham. It would be hard to point to a journal anywhere in Ontario, cleaner, saner and better equipped with local news service.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, of Peterboro, writes to a Toronto contemporary, complaining that he cannot find a Liberal paper which will discuss "the relative merits of the Borden and Laurier navies." We thought at first that he was trying to get off a joke.
But if he really means it, he need only send us a modest sum, and we will place him on our subscription list long enough to get all the information and all the argument he wants on this or any other question of Canadian politics.

A Conservative contemporary in the neighboring city of Guelph tells us that he could never understand how Canadian editors knew so much about naval matters until he suddenly bethought him that they sat on swivel chairs in their respective sanctums.
He was evidently thinking of the papers which support the Conservative-Nationalist alliance, that have swung around from their policy of 1909 to their policy of 1913, and who are doubtless prepared to keep on swinging according to orders from Ottawa.

BRING IT ALONG.
[Montreal Herald.]
It will take three men to look after the Great Seal of England in Viscount Haldane's absence. If it gets so lonesome as that during its keeper's absence, why doesn't he bring it with him?

A NOTABLE MEETING.
[Ottawa Citizen.]
When Keir Hardie and Jean Jaures met at the bier of August Bebel there was the foreshadowing of a new alliance that shall bind the nations together in closer and more fraternal union.

ANOTHER REUNION OF OLD

[Vancouver Province.]
Nat Goodwin has left for Europe on his fifth honeymoon trip. A reunion of the Goodwin Old Girls would be an interesting gathering.

TROUBLE THAT MUST BE FACED.
[Boston Transcript.]
He—They say kissing brings on diseases.
She—Well, a little illness must come into every life.

THE THAW CASE.
[New York Sun.]
The rich, paranoiac murderer who has so long been the spoiled child of Matteawan, the purse of lawyers and the scandal of justice, has ungratefully left the scene of which he has been often wondered why, with his masterful pecuniary arguments and the easy collusion of inside and outside friends, he has not taken leg bail before. The conviction of his own sanity, the hope of appearing in court from time to time, the consciousness of being the light of that little world, all these considerations may have worked on that deluded brain.

They ceased to work apparently. The young moralist has wearied of his throne; and now he has rushed away, by kind permission, no doubt, in a thundering automobile.

What cafe is he in? Whom will he kill next?
Pleasant state of things, isn't it.

NOT FOR THE MILKMAN.
[Kingston Whig.]

The Chicago Tribune prints a half-column article showing that the eating of chalk is a wholly healthy process.
Milk journals will please not copy.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?
[Chicago Tribune.]

The Postal Telegraph Company has a messenger named Harry Brisk in its office in the Plankinton House, Milwaukee. C. S. Horn is bandmaster of the First Cavalry Band, I. N. G. Francesco Zeri is a student in Columbia University. Miss Laura Dammernann is a spinster in Denver, Ia. Mrs.
Suds has a shampoo shop in Rogers Park. And the Wing sisters are visiting at the Swallows Home in Fenmore, Wis. Call the next case.

A CASE FOR COMPENSATION.
[Springfield, Mass., Republican.]

A Springfield under life sentence for murder has been set free at Palermo after 38 years by the real murderer's confession. He is 62 years and broken in health, yet if Italy inflicted the death penalty the wrong done him would have been far greater, not because death is a more terrible punishment but because he would not have lived to know of his vindication. The state morally owes a compensation to such cases; failing that, philanthropy should do something to make the rest of his life comfortable.

NOT A SOPORIFIC.
[Toronto Star.]

Sermons in Gaelic are now being preached in some city churches, but they'll never be popular. That language is too harsh to be acceptable to new places.

NO PLACE FOR THE DRINKER.
[Toronto Mail and Empire.]

It appears that in the British army and navy the drink habit is declining, and it is recalled that observers of the great dock strike in London last summer were impressed by the absence of drunkenness among the men. Even without temperance lectures and strictly laws, the events of daily life teach their lessons, and one of these is that the drunkard must go to the wall, whether he is a laborer or a statesman.

SPEED MANIA.
[Chicago Tribune.]

The spirit of Swinburne's Faustine seems to have entered automobilism.
She loved the games men played with Death.
When Death must win.

Day after day it is the grim duty of the press to dispense the news of the latest automobile accident. The list of victims grows unceasingly, but there seems no growth of caution, in spite of the terrible lessons spread by the newspapers to every village and farmstead. Speed, over the ground in trains and trolleys, in motor cars and "scenic railways," over the water in hydroplanes and hydroaeroplanes, through the air in aeroplanes, speed,
the thrill through the nerves of wind rush and roaring wheels, the modern passion, the twentieth century vice; better, perhaps, than the gambling of the eighteenth century or the bear baiting of the seventeenth, but costlier and more likely to produce unexpected results.

NOT GUILTY.
[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

"I thought I told you to quit using tobacco," said the doctor.
"I have quit it," replied the young man.
"Then what is that in your mouth?"
asked the doctor.
"A cigarette," replied the young man.

OUR SPLENDID TAX SYSTEM.
[Hamilton Times.]
This is funny. A Toronto house owner was compelled by the health authorities to put sanitary plumbing into some houses he owned, and the assessors came around and raised the assessment because of the improvements.
Sir James Whitney approves of this sort of thing.

NOT QUITE BLIND.
[Cincinnati Enquirer.]
Love may be blind. But you never saw a bride who couldn't tell orange blossoms from sunflowers.

BIG BLOW AT
PT. BURWELL

Roof of New Cannery Was Ripped Off By High Winds.

TREES WERE UPROOTED
[Special to The Advertiser.]
Port Burwell, Aug. 29.—During a terrible electrical storm here last evening there was a miniature cyclone for about a minute.
During the blow the roof of the new cannery was blown off, and carried 60 feet away. Part of the wall was blown over onto the engine house roof.
The building had only been finished recently and the factory had only been running two days.
A great number of trees all through the district were blown down.
Damage at Derwent.
The storm last night did considerable damage around Derwent. Two cows belonging to Mr. Oliver Willis were struck by lightning and killed;
the roof was torn off the barn at Mrs.
Willis's; silos were blown down and general damage resulted.

A.O.F. Tent for The Western Fair

During the early part of the meeting of the A. O. F., in the Dominion Savings Building Thursday afternoon,
Mr. R. J. McWilliams, of Peterboro, was elected high court senior warden.
It was also decided to have an A. O.
F. tent at the London Fair this year.
G. But, superintendent of organization, and each evening special features, including a stereopticon lecture from the scenes of and doings of Robin Hood and his men, will be given.

CELESTIAL CIRCUS ROUTED CIRCUS UNDER CANVAS

Herd of Elephants on Edge of Panic Were Hurried Into Their Cars.

Storm Was So Fierce and Terrifying That Performance Was Cut Short.

Its field of action suddenly converted into a quagmire, and its system disorganized by the violent electrical storm of Thursday night, the Sells-Floto circus cut its exhibition short, and London saw only the edges of what was pronounced a splendid spectacle.

The rain descended in torrents just as the show opened at 8 o'clock, and the lot on Charlotte street to the rear of the McCormick building, was a veritable swamp in twenty minutes.
The crowds had been thronging into the big tent and for a while the performance proceeded as usual. But the directors had in mind a recent experience in Winnipeg, when the herd of elephants stampeded and created havoc in the big tent.

The eight big pachyderms were led out into the storm and taken to the animal cars. As they proceeded through the streets closely shackled to prevent any attempt at escape, the lightning flashed over and around them, and it took the best efforts of the trainers and the heavy chains to prevent another stampede. Persons on the streets and in the tent were nervous until the big brutes were safely out of the way.

The camels followed, indifferent to the elements.

A Terrifying Storm.
Inside "the big top" rain dripped through wetting seats and sitters.
There was heavy wind and a time and the tempest outside must have been terrifying to some, but all bravely held their ground, and the performers hurried through their work, clad in nonresistant uniforms.

A clown got a laugh when he took off his shoes and started to skate through the slush.

When the chariot and running races took place there was a murky shower bath for anyone who came within range.

The storm was the first the circus had encountered in three months, so that the managers were not so doleful as might have been expected.
"London's a good circus town when they'll come in a storm like they did tonight," said one of the bosses.

Most all the women and the children stuck it out, and the storm had cleared when the hurry-up order had brought the show to a close at 9 o'clock.

Outside the crowds waded through mud ankle-deep to the cars.

PETER POPS' GRAND STAND
AT THE CIRCUS TRENCHES

Goobar Man Routed by the Storm Was "Game" to the Finish.

Peter Stropopolis, or "pops" to that effect, may not have served with his glorious Greek brethren in the trenches before Janina, but after serving in the trenches before the Sells-Floto circus Thursday night he may lay claim to having had an experience that to put it poetically, was some sundry.

In the first place if Peter understood Canadian colloquialism, otherwise "smart chatter" or "wise talk," when you mentioned the Sells-Floto circus to him Pete should say: "Yes, with the accent on the float." The circus almost floated Peter's push cart away.
Peter was routed. They took the "pop" out of his popcorn and almost out of his name.

Peter Sells Goobers.
Peter, to get into the sequence of the story, is no respecter of peanut privileges. The grisly-throated "professionals" might order him away, but he had his field piece in position outside the big tents, in the breastworks, and Bulgarian bluffs fazed him not.
Those who wanted the purely domestic, Dundas street, Chief-Williams censored cubers patronized Peter. And Peter did not retreat for mortal man, and he stuck to his guns and exacted his tribute. Peter was doing a little guerrilla-ing.

Enter, the Storm.
And all would have been well had not the Celestial circus suddenly rushed to the attack. It came as an avenging Turkish horde upon the allied forces, with flashings of heavenly hydro. It sent the circus scampering to an early retreat, but for Peter Pops there was no backing out. The water reached the hubs of his trusty shell-slinger, and the hubs finally disappeared. Peter sought new ground and went deeper. He sought to bring his battery into position by kneeling (in that approved artillery position we have all seen in the sergeants' mess), and throwing his shoulder to the task.
A circus wagon struck his cart. Peter defied the eight-horse hitch and surly driver. He called a half dozen boys to the rescue and they stole his ammunition. Finally when he was holding the road as Leonidas held the pass a husky circus hand put him on the right track and he relinquished the field to Major Mudd.

Cynthia Grey's Answers
Tips on What to Wear Stories for the Children

How to Make the Child's First School Clothes.

SEE DIAGRAM AND FULL DIRECTIONS.

By Cynthia Grey.

You can make your daughter's school dress, which can be worn for two days, clothes after the same pattern that you used to use for your paper dolls. I have had the artist draw a little girl so that you will get the general size, then cut it out of 27-inch goods.

For a normal-sized 6-year-old girl the frock should be about a yard and a quarter about the bottom. Then make your sleeves according to diagram and sew them into the short kimono sleeves. Make little straight cuffs that will button lightly about the wrists and open the neck in a pocket hole that can be buttoned up straight in front. You can belt this little simple dress either with a leather or fabric belt. You can cut it off about the bottom and sew on a straight scant pleating of the goods.

Don't let your child in its first year at school wear anything but wash dresses. Make them out of blue and white, green and white, brown and white and black and white gingham. This will make a very pretty set of frocks, and each one can be worn two days. Trim the black and white gingham with cords of turkey red and use red buttons and belt. Your own taste will suggest different styles of trimming. These little dresses will be warm enough to wear all winter.

The best physicians say that it is harmful to dress a child too warmly, and they recommend knitted cotton instead of wool underclothes. Union suits of moderately heavy knitted cotton can be purchased, but I like the little separate skirts and drawers.

Of course, every mother knows that the drawers should be changed daily. If you take off the skirts at night and air them

Tea-Table Talk

About the New Hats. What are the new hats going to be like? Is a question that has probably been on the tip of your tongue more than once as the harvest moon wanes, and the season of golden-rod, prime peaches, and incidentally of autumn millinery, approaches. And jealously as the hat-makers are still guarding their secrets, a whisper has reached me about what we may expect to see in the millinery shops, and eventually upon the heads of London's fair sex, within a short time.

Some of the modes will not differ much from the spring designs, so the whisper affirmed, only, of course, they will be worked out in velvet, fur and silk, in place of the straws and floral trimmings of summer-time. One feature that is promised is a tiny turban, fur trimmed, worn with a large muff made of velvet and lined with brightly colored satin, a touch of which adorns the hat. Velvet, by the way, is to be THE thing in millinery for young and old, with velours, plush and beaver following in popularity.

Feather bandings and "stick-ups" of ribbon, ostrich, or imitation feathers, usually of brilliant shades, will be another note, according to the prophet, and the Numidi and paradise trimmings will retain their vogue.

The hat stylists have hunted up some new names, too, for the colors which we'll wear. How do these strike you—dragon-fly blue, monkey red, virgin blue and peau de pêche? The last-named is of a soft peach color in a cloth similar to velour.

Oh, well, only a few weeks more, or days, rather, and we shall be able to view the autumn millinery in all its glory and wonder. Till then let us live in hopes that the new hats will be as good as the old, or what is still more to the point, too high in price!

Value of Raw Eggs. Jessie Roberts, a well-known woman writer, in one of her practical talks to girls, writes of the value of the raw egg. She says: "Eggs have a distinct medicinal value that has lately been recognized. If you are under a particularly hard strain of work, and see the roses in your cheek beginning to fade, and feel a listlessness in your entire make-up, try taking a couple of eggs, along with you to your place of business and swallowing one about the middle of the forenoon, say about 10:30, and the other about 4 in the afternoon."

"Actresses often take eggs in this way after a trying scene, or during the exhaustion of one-night stands, since they simply cannot afford to get run-down or lose their good looks. And there is no reason why the girl who works in office or shop should not derive an equal benefit from this simple remedy for frazzled nerves or weary muscles."

Sounds like good, practical advice, doesn't it, girls behind counters and desks! And one might also make mention of several business girls one knows personally, who keep themselves "built up" by drinking a pint of milk daily, a milkman being instructed to deliver it each morning at the stores and offices where the girls are employed.

Find Girls Best. A dispatch from "Old Lannon" states that girl telegraph messengers are now being engaged in preference to the boys, because they give quicker and more reliable service. Our messengers," said the manager of Reuters' Telegram Agency, recently, "perform their duties much better than the boys, being on an average more attentive to the needs of the customer."

ORIGIN OF THE CHINESE. Everyone knows the epithet "Celestial" applied to China, but few know its origin. According to a very old legend, Tibet is a fragment of a planet, once peopled by a yellow race, which in some way became detached and fell on the earth. The dazed inhabitants of the fragment were uninjured, and cold and hungry, they made their way towards China, which they peopled. This origin of the Chinese race led to their calling themselves "Celestials," and it is for this reason that the emperor calls himself Son of Heaven.

The girl messengers wear neat blue uniforms, and plain straw hats, with black bands, according to a dispatch, and carry telegram pouches at their waists.

The New Folding Slat Ironing Boards. Among the many inventions made recently for the convenience of the woman who is obliged, so to speak, to live in her trunk, or for the woman who travels, and who must limit her expense to the last cent, is an ironing board of a novel and most useful kind. Hitherto one of the great inconveniences of the woman who travels but who must press out her own thin frocks, blouses, etc., has been the absence of just such a board as this. Impossible to carry an ordinary ironing board about with one, and equally impossible to weight one's trunk with a thick pine board, heavily padded. Impossible, too, to get an ironing board in a hotel, or in a boarding house to find a landlady sufficiently obliging to give one the frequent use of this necessary article. And the wretched makeshifts one has had to employ, and the heartbreaking, slipping, sliding ironing pad, improvised out of towels or petticoats that many a girl has been forced to use when articles of her wardrobe have been wrinkled and mussy, and in sore need of the flat-iron! But all these things have passed away and become

The Poets' Corner

RUTH.
She stood breast-high amid the corn,
Clasp'd by the golden light of morn;
Like the sweetheart of the sun,
Who may a glowing kiss had won.

On her cheek an autumn flush,
Deeply ripen'd—such a blush,
In the midst of brown was born,
Like red poppies grown with corn.

Round her eyes her tresses fell,
Which were blackest, none could tell,
But long lashes veil'd a light,
That had also been all too bright.

And her hat, with shady brim,
Made her tressy forehead dim;
Thus she stood amid the stalks,
Praising God with sweetest looks.

Sure, I said, heaven'd not deem,
Where I reap thou shouldst but glean;
Lay thy sheaf down and come,
Share my harvest and my home.

—Thos. Hood.

Half an Hour With the Cook

Readers of this page are requested to contribute recipes or helpful hints along culinary lines for publication in this column, the desire being to make it one of mutual benefit. Original recipes, or any found to be tried and true, will be especially appreciated.

While it is true that the system does not require as heavy food in summer as in the colder weather, it must not be forgotten that a definite amount of nutriment is required to keep the body in good condition, and it is part of the duty of the housekeeper to plan the daily meals as to afford the members of the family nourishing and appetizing food without overtaxing the digestive organs. In winter, with its exhilarating weather, and with our more vigorous pursuits, we can assimilate heavier meals—griddle cakes and syrup, more or less fat meats and starchy vegetables—but, as the thermometer rises, these must be replaced by salads, green vegetables and lighter foods of all kinds.

Eat Less Meat. Fish, eggs and poultry take the place of beef and mutton, these last appearing on the table much less often than in winter. Rice, macaroni, lentils, and sometimes beans, will provide the proteins, while the oil contained in the varied salad dressings which the wise housewife provides will help to supply the needed fats which the body must have at all times if vitality is to be kept up. Nuts, too, are valuable foods and can be served in many ways both cooked and uncooked. The peanut can be used as a base for salads, nutloaf, in nut bread, croquettes, sandwich fillings, as a stuffing for tomatoes, and in a host of other ways, while the pignolia or pine nut, the English walnut and the almond are equally valuable though somewhat more costly, and the pecan crowns the list for delicacy of flavor.

Value of Daintiness. Fresh vegetables are plentiful during the summer, and only a little forethought and ingenuity, are needed to evolve dainty and appetizing dishes from these. Unfortunately we have been content, in the majority of instances, to serve them plainly cooked without taking pains to make them look attractive, and it is largely to this that we can trace a distaste for vegetable diet, especially on the part of the men of the family. Put a dish before a man which looks unappetizing, and he at once acquires a distaste for it—even before tasting it, but it is equally true that a prettily garnished dish begets appetite, and the battle is then half won, even before a mouthful has been taken. Tomorrow some new ideas for special vegetable dishes will appear in this column.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

THORNDALE.

The Thorndale Branch of the Women's Institute visited the Kintore Institute on Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, and was largely attended. It was opened by singing the "Maple Leaf," after which an address of welcome was given by Mrs. Dunster, vice-president of Kintore Institute. The meeting was then placed in charge of the Thorndale ladies, with Mrs. James Angus, president.

PROBLEMS OF THE FAIR SEX SOLVED BY CYNTHIA GREY

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn. No letters can be answered privately.]

"When Out Walking"

Dear Miss Grey: Will you please answer a few questions?

1. When out walking which is proper to do, the lady take the gentleman's arm or the gentleman take the lady's?

2. What will be the most fashionable color for winter dresses?

3. What is the meaning of Constance, Monto and Inger? The last is a Norwegian name. Please tell me what it is in the English language.

4. What is the most fashionable style in sweater coats? Are they the Norfolk?

5. Do you consider a girl of fifteen too young to take a position as book-keeper?

From, HEATHER, a Scotch Girl.

A.—1. The correct way is for the lady to take the gentleman's arm.

2. Dark green and taupe shades promise to be popular. But brown and navy are well in the lead also.

3. Constance, firm or constant. I regret to say that the other names are unknown quantities to me. Can any reader help us?

4. The Norfolk designs are among the styles shown. Others are double-breasted, with square "patch" pockets.

5. I think it would be better to wait for at least a couple of years before venturing out into the business world, but, of course, your parents are the ones who should help you decide.

Is Rather Nice-Looking.

Dear Miss Grey: This is the first time I have written to you, but have received many helpful ideas from your column.

1. I am in a very embarrassing position. So many people tell me I am nice-looking, and that they envy my complexion, etc. I know I am rather

When Out Walking.

Dear Miss Grey:—In Monday's Advice Column, "Joe" asks you to help him along and tell him what to do. You promptly tell him he isn't in love at 19. I would not be so cruel, Miss Grey. Don't you honestly think a person is capable of loving at that tender age? And let me whisper it, don't frighten him about the awful responsibility of marriage, or the country will be flooded with old maids. If you treat me kindly this time I will call again.

A SYMPATHIZER OF JOE.

Answer.—A good old "old maid" I am, but I don't agree with you that real love comes at 19 to either man or woman. However, let's shake hands upon it. I've given my opinion, and you yours—that's fair play, is it not? Others can decide as they choose. By all means call again. The latch string's always out.

Debutante Beauties at Newport

Two of the beautiful and charming debutantes, one from the Middle West, the other from the East, who will be among those who will make their initial appearance before the elite of society at Newport. The western debutante is Miss Frances Miller (left), of Chicago. On the right is Miss Hope Hamilton, of New York. She is the favored cousin of Mrs. George Gould, who last season tendered a number of dinners and dances in her honor. Miss Hamilton has the distinction of being not only the youngest, but the tallest debutante at Newport.

POOR PICKINGS NOW FOR FORMER LEADING BOXERS

Less than a year ago Joe Rivers, Joe Mandot, Ad Wolgast and Knockout Brown were harvesting a third of the wealth to be found in the boxing mart. They gathered in the tolls of prime fistic efficiency in heavy yellow bundles, any one of which could have bought a jewel or two for King George's headpiece. But the goose is not laying any more.

Wolgast recently was offered a couple of matches in the Pacific country. One of them was on a straight percentage basis, with no guarantee. The other, the Dundee contest, will pay him $5,500, with no extras, if it comes off. This is quite a come-down for the prince of Cadillac, who used to ask for $15,000 purses with all the abandon of a velvet-vested plutocrat. Only last winter he wanted $22,500 to box McFarland at Madison Square Garden.

For 25 battles Joe Rivers accumulated the trifling sum of $58,000. In his last fight with Ritchie he drew a solid retainer of $7,500. Outside the prominent persons at the head of the classes, the Spaniard was the biggest thing in the line of attraction the coast had. Many think that Joe has seen his best days and his best purses. His knockouts by Ritchie and Wolgast, more particularly the latter one, sapped his popularity. It is not known what he was offered for boxing Cross in Vernon, which go was cancelled, but it was a long ways from $7,500.

Mandot was the lion of Memphis and New Orleans. He had some great paying propositions at both these cities, with Wolgast, Ritchie, Grover Hayes and Saylor, and three good ones on the coast with Rivers and Anderson. But he's a harmless animal now, for his ability has declined a thousand kilowatts. Joe can't name his terms any more; the promoters will name them instead.

Kayo Brown, the German sensation of New York in 1912, will be lucky if he gets a thousand-dollar bout this coming season. His guarantees will run him from $400 to $800, not over. That's somewhat of a slip from $9,000, his greatest plum, which he got for boxing Matt Wells, down to three-figure stipends.

It's not that the game is not giving as big returns as it did; the four boys have fallen down some, that's all.

ROCHESTER EASILY BEAT PROVIDENCE

Hoff's Good Pitching Was Too Much for Bill Donovan's Boys—Score Was Five to One.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Rochester had an easy time with Providence today, winning 5 to 1. Hoff allowed four singles and fanned ten, while Reisigl, who started for the Grays, was easy. He was replaced by Bentley in the third, and Manager Donovan himself hurried in the fourth. Score:

LEACH CROSS ON HIS WAY TO VANCOUVER

Says He Will Show Them Up There What a Real Boxer Looks Like.

[Canadian Press.]

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 28.—Leach Cross, the New York lightweight, accompanied by his brother and his manager, Sam Wallace, left here yesterday on board the Shasta Limited for Vancouver, where Cross boxes Frank Barrie on Labor Day afternoon. Cross has been in constant training, and looks in fine condition. He took a miniature gymnasium with him, which is fitted on the baggage car on the fast train, and he will do his regular training while on his way. "I am going to show the folks up there what a real boxer looks like when in action," said Leach, "and I am determined to demonstrate that I have class necessary to meet the winner of the Ritchie-Welsh bout."

MAY END STRIKE

Leaders in London Walkout Are Expecting Settlement.

[By a Philly Scribe.]

London, Aug. 29.—There is now strong hope of an early settlement of the London strike. The men's leaders took an optimistic view of the situation last night, though no announcement as to the result of the various conferences which have been held was made. Moreover, there is reason to believe that the board of trade, which has already had the matter under close consideration, will in the public interest intervene with the object of bringing the contending parties to terms.

Initial Fall Display Society Brand Clothes

FOR YOUNG MEN AND MEN WHO STAY YOUNG

We invite your most critical inspection of this early fall showing of these world-famous clothes. Not only have the makers excelled themselves in the choice of designs and patterns, but in the production of this season's models they have gone a step forward in making these garments the most widely copied on the continent.

While the style tends rather strongly toward the English designs, we have provided a range of models to suit men of every taste.

Not the least valuable feature of "Society Brand" Clothes is the extreme modesty of the prices; the values are a constant surprise when compared to any other worthy make.

RAN INTO OPEN SWITCH CRASHING INTO CAR

Part of a G. T. R. Express Was Derailed in the Yards This Morning.

Running at speed estimated at between 12 and 15 miles an hour through the Grand Trunk yards this morning at 1:20, the Grand Trunk Chicago and New York Express No. 8 ran through an open switch near William street and crashed into a loaded express car, injuring George Porter, of Talbot street, this city, an express messenger, who was in the express car.

Porter's injuries consisted of a deep gash over the right eye and several bruises caused by trunks and boxes falling over on him.

The engine of the express train was derailed and damaged considerably, the express car turned over on its side, and the tracks torn up for a considerable distance. None of the crew of the express were injured, and very few of the passengers knew of the accident until some time later.

The London auxiliary was summoned to the scene immediately after the accident and succeeded within a short time in clearing the tracks enough to let the express continue on its journey.

Engineer Griffith, of Sarnia, who was in charge of the express, was able to continue with his train.

On the Wrong Track.

The train had just left the London city depot and was getting up speed, as is one of the fastest trains on the Grand Trunk system, when the engineer noticed that he was going on to the wrong track. He immediately applied the emergency brakes, but before the heavy train slackened to any noticeable extent it had crashed into the express car.

As Superintendent W. R. Davidson, of the Grand Trunk, is to be today, an official statement could not be secured. It is said, however, that the switchman is held responsible for the accident, and that an investigation will be held as soon as Mr. Davidson returns.

A rumor to the effect that the switchman could not be located by the company this morning was circulated about the Grand Trunk depot, but it could not be verified.

BURIED AT INGERSOLL.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ingersoll, Aug. 28.—The funeral of Jas. P. O'Neill was held yesterday for his late residence, John street, to the Church of the Sacred Heart, thence to the Roman Catholic Cemetery, and was largely attended. Rev. Father Gnam officiated.

GLENCOE.

Glencoe, Aug. 29.—Rev. and Mrs. James Dallas, of South Carolina, are visiting their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. George Innes, Moss.

Mrs. Charles Brown, of Long Beach, California, was here with her brother, D. P. Mitchell, a few days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gilchrist and daughter, of Kingsman County, Kansas, have arrived and will spend a few weeks with friends here. Mr. Gilchrist is a brother of Mrs. John McLean, Main street south.

No Other Way

BY GORDON HOLMES.

Author of "A Mysterious Disappearance,"
"The House of Silence," Etc.

The valet understood that the massive eyes and hurried away on the errand, the Township of Saginaw being nearly a mile distant. Being quite a human person he glanced at the address, and was positively startled on finding that it was intended for "Mrs. Elstead," at Narragansett Pier. Now, Rice was well aware that Mrs. Waverton had reverted to her maiden name, and his gaudy face creased in an appreciative grin.

"Good luck to you!" he murmured, as the letter disappeared in a window slit of the Saginaw postoffice. "If it wasn't for Miss Kathleen, there mightn't be much hope; but now I'll lay a five-spot on my hairees that that blessed kid will bring 'em together again."

Rice, it may be observed, liked taking odds, so he lost a remarkable number of bets. On Sunday and Monday he cast an observant eye over his master's mail, but no envelope bore the Narragansett postmark. Indeed, Waverton's correspondents were growing smaller every day. Rice himself, at first, used to send a stereotyped acknowledgment of nearly all letters, in which Mr. Claude Waverton regretted that his recent accident prevented him from answering yours of the "th," and this style of retort exercised a marked effect in lessening the volume of condolences and anxious inquiries which poured in from clubs, theaters, hotels and sporting centres like Chicago and Saratoga.

Rice, of course, had seen Mrs. Waverton's handwriting quite recently, and he fancied he would recognize it. He was not mistaken, though, to use his own expressive phrase, it fair 'gave' him a turn. It did, when the expected letter arrived on Monday evening, by hand, and addressed to himself.

"Dear Mr. Rice (it ran)—I am here, in Saginaw, at the Rev. Mr. Norton's house. Can you come and see me for a few minutes, and as soon as possible? I believe that no one in the world other than Mr. and Mrs. Norton, knows of my presence, and I wish the fact to be kept quite private at present. Sincerely,
"DORIS WAVERTON."

"Who brought this?" he gasped, glancing wide-eyed at the footman who handed him the note. "One of Mrs. Norton's girls, an' a pretty one, too," came the answer with a wink.

"That wink was helpful. It restored Rice to a semblance of self-possession. "Oh, it's a pretty one! I must attend to her without delay," he smiled, and the footman announced in the servants' hall that old Rice wasn't quite such a dyed-in-the-wool bachelor as he made himself out to be.

On his way to the door the valet determined that, come what might, he should see his former mistress, and he told the waiting messenger that he would be at the parsonage a few minutes after eight o'clock.

He rushed through his duties when Waverton had dressed for dinner, and a rapid scurry on a bicycle was at Norton's house at the appointed time. He was shown into the study, and there found Doris Waverton, expectant, and from a travelling costume and wore a large hat draped with a dark-blue motor veil. This, however, was lifted off the moment, and her charming face was flushed with excitement and anxiety.

"I sent for you," she explained, "because I did not care to trust my affairs to any other person. I want to prevent any chance of error. I want to see you—see Mr. Waverton tonight if possible. How can I manage this?"

Rice was wrung with conflicting emotions. He was puzzled, pleased, flattered, at the same moment, but he could only hurt out a commonplace opinion that if she would authorize him to ask Mr. Norton, "Oh, I don't mean in that way," she interrupted eagerly. "I am afraid, after my Rhode Island experiences, and from circumstances that have come to my knowledge since, that if Mr. Waverton knew I was in Saginaw he would think I really meant in his power to avoid me. I want to take him by surprise, to come upon him so unexpectedly that he cannot refuse to discuss certain matters with me. You will help me, won't you? I am quite alone here, and I have no one else to appeal to. Can you manage this thing for me somehow?"

Very beautiful and pathetic she looked in her pleading, the valet, who might have been a knight errant had he lived a few hundred years earlier, vowed that he would be her slave if it cost him his job, which meant far more to him than the fret and fume of life to a light-headed troubadour.

His right hand rose to the shaved upper lip, and his left travelled to the small of his back. "Well, ma'am, seen' as it's you, I'll do what I can—"

"Ah, I was sure of you, Rice!" broke in Doris, with a catch in her voice that went to the man's heart. "You see, this is the way, ma'am," he went on. "Bein' a fine night, an' not givin' much time to his dunnin', Mr. Waverton will probably find a cigar and go out for a stroll with Bob—"

"Bob?" she exclaimed. "Who is Bob?" "The old settler, ma'am, the lame dog."

"Oh, I remember. He was my particular friend. But—"

She hesitated in a bewildered way, until the urgency of her mission drove aside all other considerations. "You mean that I may meet Mr. Waverton in the park?"

"It's almost a certainty, ma'am. If you was to go now to the postoffice by the lake he will probably pass that way before nine o'clock."

"But if he does not? Tonight, just because I happen to be waiting him, he may remain in the house."

Rice coughed, sure sign of a diplomatic utterance. In that case, ma'am, if Mr. Claude steps indoors, he will be in the library, an' the drawing-room windows will be open. I'll take care that they are."

"Ah!" Doris sighed her gratitude, and opened the gold purse that hung from her neck by a chain.

"If you don't mind, ma'am—I'd rather began the valet sheepishly. She closed the purse with a snuff, and smiled brightly. "I quite understand, Rice," she said. "You are acting as my true well-wisher, not as one whom I could pay for services rendered."

Rice's placid face flushed with pleasure. "I can only hope, ma'am," he blurted forth, but recollecting himself, checked the expression of a pious desire, and went on to ask if she needed any assistance in reaching the postoffice, since she would probably wish to avoid the main road.

She laughed at that. "I have not forgotten my way about the place," she said. "By walking a quarter of a mile down the sycamore avenue I can enter the park by climbing a gate, and then take the path through the wood to the lake. It is not dark, and the distance is short, so there is nothing to be afraid of, and no snuffing rabbit or two will alarm me."

So the valet backed to the house, and, watching only hopeants from an upper window, heard Waverton whistle to the dog, and saw the pair descend an Italian terrace and strike off across the sloping pasture and that led in a gentle descent to the broad expanse of Lake Champlain.

Rice looked at his watch—ten minutes to nine. "It's as good as a play," he chuckled. "Now, I wonder if it will work out all right? What a feller it 'ud be for Mrs. Waverton if Mr. Norton an' his lawful wife come together again!"

Meanwhile, Doris had gone to her self-appointed trust. The avenue she had spoken of was a public road lined with sycamores, trees, and half-way along its straight and level road a gate gave access to a densely-planted wood, which provided cover for some of the pheasants which Waverton had imported. The gate was locked, but that was no matter, for the active young woman made light of that, and a "drive," or shooting-rund, that led to the lake was really a mere gloomy that the archer-in-avenue.

The drive stopped somewhat short of a belt of willows and osters, but a path to the left would bring her to the boat-house, while the same path to the right crossed another shooting alley some two hundred yards farther on.

In the gloaming of that midsummer night Doris Waverton could see the water shining like a sheet of burnished silver above the fringe of willows. She stepped on smartly, and gave no heed to the boiling of white-tailed rabbits or the rustling of birds. Much to her regret, she saw no one during that traverse of the wood. But it did not follow that because she did not see she was therefore unseen.

As she turned into the narrow path bordering the lake, a man rose from the wood's undergrowth, and which figure appeared in the alley.

"Unless I'm losin' me eyesight, that's Mrs. Waverton," soliloquized the apparition, who had "hobo" with large on face and garments. "I couldn't see her pretty face, bless her little heart; but I'd swear to her walk an' style among a thousand."

Now, what's she after?—but, curse the papers, they mostly tell lies. Joe, me boy, you believe your own eyes, an' perhaps if you're lucky, you're right."

And with that he followed his quarry, stalking her with a wary skill born of the woodland and the wild.

ENGLISHMEN HAD A FINE OUTING DESPITE WEATHER

Gathered at Port Stanley Thursday and Ran Off Part of Programme.

Balance of Contests To Be Held at Springbank on Saturday Afternoon.

The fine, drizzling rain, which fell all day, marred to some extent what would otherwise have been one of the largest and most successful gatherings held this season at Port Stanley, where the annual English picnic was held on Thursday. In spite of the weather, however, a fine time was experienced. Shortly after the Seventh Band and the advance section of the picnic entrained at the London and Lake Erie Transportation station, the rain began to fall. But hopes were entertained that it would clear about noon, and crowds thronged to the lakeside.

The Pere Marquette regular trains carried many extra coaches, and the London and Lake Erie had also had cars, served as conveyances. All along these lines people from town and country helped to swell the company. It is estimated that at least 500 were present.

Adjourned to Heights. At 2:30 there were no signs of the weather clearing. The band was taken up on Invererie Heights to the pavilion, where the picnic committee held a consultation, and it was decided to give a band concert and carry out as much of the program as was possible. A vote was taken, which was carried unanimously, to hold the remainder of the sports at Springbank Park on Saturday afternoon.

Games Started. These matters decided, the band struck up "O Canada," and preparations were made for the first event, which was the melon-eating contest for boys of 14 years and under. At a given signal the youthful gentlemen plunged their faces into the luscious fruit. It was much faster work than the proverbial dry-cracker contest, and in a remarkably short time Master Teddy Jennings displayed the clean rinds of his portion. Others on his list were Arthur Joffe, Bert Vining and Arthur Morris, who were rewarded accordingly. The prizes were three penknives, but as the fourth gentleman was a "runner-up" for third place, he was awarded a money prize.

The Baby Show. The following feature is always the most interesting one of a program. It was the baby show for infants from 1 to 12 months. As is always the case, the competition was very keen, there being 26 entries, and the judges had great difficulty in awarding the three special prizes. Many times they carefully scrutinized the fine specimens of young Canadians in the making, and at last decided on 4-month-old Edward Evans, of 495 Horton street; six-month-old Irene Wilson, of Ealing P. O., and Robert Lister, of 725 Adelaide street. All the other babies received prizes. The three special cups were donated by Dr. A. Thompson, Dr. Hadley Williams and Mr. Willmott.

The Greasy Pole. Another event that brought roars of laughter from the spectators was walking the greasy pole without shoes. The pole extended over the lake, and many an unfortunate went sprawling into the water. The attempts to keep their equilibrium were ludicrous in the extreme. The winners were John Jackson first, W. French second, and F. Pugsley third.

The energetic president of the association, ex-Ald. John Nutkins, gave a stirring address, in which he declared for upholding the dignity of the British Empire as all Britons should. He spoke glowingly of the work of the organization, and declared that the preparations for this annual picnic had completely eclipsed any attempted previously. The audience applauded vigorously, and cries of "Hear, hear," went on from all sides. It was the duty of the committee, he said, to continue the splendid program would be run off. He regretted the wet condition of the grounds, but promised the party an

JEROME ON NEW TACK IN FIGHT OVER THAW

Trying To Get Attorney-General of Quebec To Liberate Prisoner.

[Canadian Press.]
 The case of Harry K. Thaw, so far as the temporary doloors today. The court victory of his lawyers yesterday in quashing their own writ of habeas corpus and having him recommitted to jail, means either that he will remain there until tried by the King's bench, criminal side, in October, or that New York State, outflanked to date in legal skirmishes, must make some new move looking to his liberation and seizure by the immigration authorities for deportation.

Two New Moves.
 They were working today along two lines. William Travers Jerome and Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney-general, conferred with the Attorney-General of the Province of Quebec, seeking some means of obtaining his authority for getting Thaw out of his cell.

Other counsel for New York continued their efforts to persuade Alexis Dupuis, a magistrate or justice of the peace, at Cocaticook, to withdraw the commitment which he issued after Thaw's arrest twelve days ago, and on which the fugitive is held in the Sherbrooke jail. Efforts to get M. Dupuis into court thus far have met with flat failure.

Quiet Day For Thaw.
 Most of Thaw's Canadian counsel left town last night to recuperate after their court battles, and Thaw himself, content to stay in jail here rather than take any chances of being deported, either to Vermont, New Hampshire or New York by ill-adviced liberty at this time, spent a quiet day in his cell. His statement of last night expressed appreciation of the "fair play" accorded him so far since his arrival in Canada. Meanwhile he is not neglecting his campaign.

THAW'S CASE LAID OVER BUT CHAUFFEUR'S GOES ON

Jerome Makes Fruitless Effort to Interview Sir Lomer Gouin.

[Canadian Press.]

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 29.—William Travers Jerome, chief of the New York State forces working for the deportation of Harry K. Thaw, having returned here from Quebec early today after a fruitless trip to see the Premier and Attorney-General, Sir Lomer Gouin, whom he found absent, the status of the state's case in the Thaw matter remained unchanged, and lawyers for both sides gathered in police court for the trial of "Gentleman Roger" Thompson, the chauffeur who drove Thaw from Matteawan on the morning of his escape. He is charged with aiding Thaw to cross the Canadian border, and in so doing violating the immigration laws by assisting an undesirable alien to enter the Dominion.

"I do not think I shall return to Quebec," said Mr. Jerome. "We did not see the Premier; he was not in town. I cannot say now what will be our next step."

Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney-general of New York, who accompanied Jerome to Quebec, made substantially the same statement.

"Gentleman Roger" told his lawyers that he would plead not guilty and insist that he was a Canadian subject, having been born in Toronto.

LOW RATES FOR LABOR DAY VIA GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY.
Return tickets will be issued between all stations in Canada east of Port Arthur, also to Detroit and Port Huron, Mich., Buffalo, Black Rock, Niagara Falls and Suspension Bridge.

SINGLE FARE.—Good going Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Aug. 30 and 31 and Sept. 1. Valid for return until Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1913.

FARE AND ONE-THIRD.—Good going Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Aug. 29, 30, 31, Sept. 1. Valid for return until Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1913.

SEVERAL BUILDINGS AT WESTERN FAIR PREY TO FLAMES

Blaze Early This Morning Is Believed To Be of Incendiary Origin.

Firemen Handicapped by Delay, But Confine Fire After Gallant Fight.

Reduced to ashes by an incendiary fire that made a clean sweep of every structure on the Campbell street side of the Fair Grounds as far east as the grandstand, five of the Western Fair buildings were destroyed early this morning with a loss of $50,000.

The cement building, the L-shaped machinery hall, the transportation building, the main horse stable and the W. C. T. U. dining hall fell victim to the flames that ate the frame structures with a voraciousness that defied the efforts of the fire department to stop the running, leaping sheets of flame.

Exhibition Will Go On.
Happening just a week before the opening of the London Fair, the fire was one that might have proved a handicap to the big show, but such will not be the case, Phoenix-like, the fair will rise from the ashes greater, larger, and better than ever.

While the flames were at their height arrangements were being made for temporary structures to replace the burned ones. Everything will be accommodated and everything will go on as usual when the exhibition gates are opened to the public Sept. 7.

It was at 3 a.m. that the alarm was telephoned to fire headquarters. Within an hour nothing but smoking ashes marked the spot where the buildings had stood. It was a clean sweep of everything.

Couldn't Get Central.
Mr. Bryce McLeod, caretaker of Queen's Park, was awakened shortly before 3 o'clock by the roar of the flames. He immediately sprang to his telephone to send in an alarm, but was unable to get any response.

The "central" according to his story he tried in every way imaginable to rouse the attention of the telephone headquarters for at least ten minutes, but was unable to do so.

William Wakeling, of 24 Campbell street, had a similar experience. He would not say how long he stood at his telephone waiting for a response, but he claims that it was long time before his call was answered.

Fire Spread Quickly.
After trying in vain to get a response, Mr. McLeod ran to the scene of the fire. When he arrived, the flames were in the middle of the agricultural implement building, which is 300 feet long. He took out his watch to see how fast the flames were traveling.

He found that the fire had traveled through the middle of the agricultural building 150 feet into and through the machinery hall, 60 feet long, through the transportation building 50 feet long across a 40-foot lane, through the first horse barn, 150 feet long and into the W. C. T. U. building.

Firemen Delayed.
The fact that the alarm sent to headquarters was a telephoned statement that the Grand Trunk carsheds were on fire caused considerable handicap to Deputy Chief Chas. Scott and his men. The brigade turned out on Campbell street rather than to the fair grounds. The hydrants on Campbell street behind the fire, that was eating its way westward, were, therefore, the first connected. If the fire department had been properly notified the hydrants west of the block could have been the first connected, and the work of cutting off the blaze, fanned by strong west wind, would have started ten minutes before it did.

A Gallant Fight.
As it was the firemen made a gallant fight to stop the progress of the fire. As they swung out of the central hall, the fire had turned into the East London section was in flames, and by the time they reached the fair grounds the buildings, as far west as the second horse stable, were a mass of flames.

Concentrating his attack from three points—from the Campbell street, from the hydrants at the west side of the fire, and right in the centre of the flames, Deputy Chief Scott managed to cut off the fire before it spread to the training stables and the grandstand. Several times both these structures caught, but the rain-soaked roofs, and the work of the department kept the flames in their original area.

Two Alarms.
The fire that swept the buildings into ashes and nothingness was the second alarm turned in from the fair grounds last night. At 9:30 fire started in one of three cars of straw that were totally destroyed in the second blaze. The department responded and put out the flames that were, as in the second case, suspected of being of incendiary origin.

Saw Several Tramps.
Fire Captain James Findlater, of No. 2 station, saw several men of the tramp order, who were hastily driven away from the fair grounds on the occasion of the first alarm. Others were seen there when the second fire broke out, and stories of drunken men and women being seen in the buildings during the night heightened the suspicion that the blaze was an incendiary.

Deputy Chief Scott, in charge of the department during the absence of Chief John Aitken, an incendiary. In a statement to The Advertiser this morning he declared that there was little reason to doubt the theory of incendiarism. Captain Findlater declares the blaze was not caused by the tramps, and the deputy chief turned the case over to the police department for investigation.

Stories of a Revolt.
The case does not seem to have been opened during the day to allow hay and straw to be unloaded, and it is believed that the tramps, or drunks, or both, found an entrance to the cars in this manner. By some it was alleged that women figured, had been in progress during the night, and there is strong reason for believing that it might have been participants in this revel, who were responsible for the loss to the fair buildings.

Aerial Truck Destroyed.
The old aerial truck of the London fire department was involved in the destruction of the cement building. Nothing remains but a mass of twisted steel. When it was put in the discard some time ago to make room for the new aerial truck, it was bought by the Seagrave Company, the price paid being in the neighborhood of $800. It was stored in the cement building to await shipment to Walkerville.

Downpour Helped.
Thursday night's rain that played such havoc with the circus and other amusements about the city was a blessing in disguise to the fair grounds. The soaking that downpour gave the roofs of the various buildings proved their salvation, for sparks were carried in all directions by the high west wind, and found lodgment on the tops of other exhibition buildings than those that fell victim to the flames.

Hog Pens Saved.
At one side the open hog pens caught, and after two of them had been half-destroyed they were saved. These are of the driest possible wood, and if the fire in that direction had not been "nipped," the cattle sheds, the poultry building, the sheep pens and the King street offices would have been added to the toll the fire extracted from the exhibition.

Firemen Did Well.
Everything was against the firemen. The odds were entirely with the fire and the fact that the damage is as light as it is, may be taken as a tribute to the men who compose the London fire department. Wind, start, structures, and the mistake about the alarm all told against the men in their fight. In spite of this handicap, the various companies started in with well-learned skill to combat the flames. They did.

FAIR GOES ON SAME AS EVER

The Western Exhibition To Be Carried on as Intended, Declares Secretary Hunt.

AMPLE ACCOMMODATION

"Make it very clear," said Secretary A. M. Hunt, "that we are going on with the exhibition just the same as ever. We will have to work night and day, but we are going to do it. Temporary buildings will be erected at once for the live stock and machinery. A large part of the horse sheds were saved. Those which were destroyed will be rebuilt at once."

FAIR WILL GO ON.
Mr. Hunt emphasized his statement that the Western Fair would not be delayed or adversely affected by the fire, disastrous as it seems. Many of the directors were on hand early this morning at the office of the association, ready and willing to put their shoulders to the wheel, and with titanic efforts push forward the work of replacing the buildings destroyed.

AMPLE ACCOMMODATION.
"We will provide ample accommodation, either by temporary buildings or tents," said Ald. J. H. Saunders. "Many of the big fairs of the United States use tents very largely for their exhibitions. We will rebuild the burned horse sheds and the other buildings as far as possible. Where we leave off building we will use tents."

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Sarnia, Aug. 29.—George Colbrook, a negro waiter on the Hamilton, which came in this morning alleges that another waiter on the same boat struck him over the head with a plate, inflicting serious injuries. The trouble occurred while the boat was still out in the lake. A policeman went to the boat to make the arrest, but the Hamilton had gone up to Point Edward, which is outside the jurisdiction of the local officers.

FIVE BODIES TAKEN OUT OF STORE RUINS

One of Those Hurt at Peterboro May Die From Her Injuries.

Cousin of One Victim Had Left Her Only Moment Before Crash.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Peterboro, Aug. 29.—After a long and careful search of the ruins of the Turnbull store, no more bodies were found today, and the official death list is placed at five. The dead are:

Miss Lillian A. Boddison, saleslady with Turnbull's.

Miss Dolly Sisson, saleslady.

Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, 264 Hunter street.

Mrs. John Kelly, of Norwood.

John James Cuff, carpenter, Braidedwood avenue.

Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Kelly were making purchases in the store. Cuff was employed with the construction gang.

Miss Sisson and Miss Boddison, the two salesladies who lost their lives, were very popular, and both were engaged to be married in the near future.

Another May Die.

The injured are:

Mrs. Alfred Finlay, of Norwood, customer, probably fatally hurt.

Harry Manley, carpet layer, both legs fractured, dug from ruins.

Miss Ola Mulligan, cashier, and Miss Agnes Tucker, clerk, caught by falling mass, but escaped serious injury.

Miss Sisson and Miss Boddison were in the ready-to-wear department, which had been moved to the second floor of the corner building. It was here that Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Kelly and Mrs. Finlay were also inspecting goods.

A Close Call.

Just a moment before the accident, Miss Eva Sisson, cousin of Miss Dolly Sisson, had been waiting on Mrs. Kelly. She left for another department, and as a result escaped being killed. Her cousin walked towards the cashier, but never reached the desk. The Simcoe street wall collapsed about half-way up the four stories, falling outward, while the upper part came down on the pavement and was thrust out by the mass of timbers and floors that were ejected with awful force across.

Another Wall.

The wall adjoining the Simcoe street building next was torn apart. A part of George street wall still stands, but may fall at any time.

All the bodies recovered were badly disfigured.

Although the question of appointing a building inspector has been brought before the city council, no appointment was made. At the same time Contractor Johnston says he took every precaution to insure safety.

ARCHDEACON MACDONALD

IS DEAD AT WINNIPEG

Pioneer Anglican Missionary Did Great Work in the Northland.

[Canadian Press.]

Winnipeg, Aug. 29.—Ven. Archdeacon Robert Macdonald, one of the oldest and most widely known of the early Anglican missionaries of the northland, died yesterday at his residence here after an illness of five months, aged 84 years.

Ven. Archdeacon Macdonald was the son of one of the intrepid band of explorers which ranged the northern seas under Sir John Franklin. He was born at Point Douglas in 1829, and educated at St. John's, Winnipeg, being one of the first graduates. He was ordained as a deacon in 1852, and a priest a year later. He served first as a missionary for the C. M. S. at Islington on the Winnipeg River in 1862, and then went to Port York, where he labored eight years. He travelled to Porcupine River, where he spent a year, and to Peel River for another twelve months. He was appointed archdeacon of MacKenzie River in 1876, and only in 1906 it was that he retired through ill-health.

Macdonald, in addition to translating the four gospels into the Tutchu language for the British and Foreign Bible Society, aided Archdeacon McKay in the biblical translations in the Cree tongue.

A.O.F. IS SOLID AND DEPENDABLE

Oldest Fraternal Society For the Care of Sick and Protection of the Home.

RATES ARE FIXED AND SURE IN ALL RESPECTS

A World-Wide Reputation, With Courts in All Civilized Countries of the Globe.

The Ancient Order of Foresters is the oldest fraternal society instituted for the care of the sick and providing protection to the home, and having the experience of time, it knows what to charge for its benefits and also what to give.

It can provide any protection a man should desire for his home for a moderate, adequate payment. The society in London provides medical attendance and medicine free. It gives $4 per week for one year when sick; also $2 per week for another year if required; $100 insurance and $50 for death of wife.

It has courts established all over the world and members may transfer thereto. It issues regular certificates of insurance of $250 to $2,000, a straight life, a pay life or endowment, with loan and cash values.

There is no assessment system, the rates being fixed and sure in all respects.

There is also juvenile branches for the boys and girls and companion branches for the wives and lady members.

The society knows no creed in religion; no code in politics. It gives protection at cost price and security in old age.

Any citizen desirous of information, inquire of Fred Rossiter, secretary union committee, London Brush Company, York street.

Check For Traher Fund.—Bandmaster Slater, of the Seventh Regiment, today received a check from the Southern Printing Company for $25 for the Traher fund, bringing the total up to $205.

Lost a Finger.—Fred Price, a butcher employed by G. F. Morris, had his middle finger cut off at the second joint while running a cutting machine yesterday. He was feeding meat into the machine, and in some way got his finger caught. The finger was cut off at the first joint, and it was necessary to amputate it at the second joint because of the badly smashed condition.

A Family Picnic.—Members of the Hudson family of London Township, London and vicinity, held a reunion and picnic at Port Stanley Wednesday. About 75 attended. A luncheon on the beach and an impromptu musical program were features of the picnic. Among members of the family present from a distance was Mr. Roy Hudson, M. P., of Vancouver, B. C.

Special Campaign.—Adj. Smith, of the Salvation Army headquarters here, has returned from a tour of inspection and a series of special campaigns at Leamington, Essex, Windsor and Ridgeway. He was in London on the afternoon of Labor Day. In the evening he will hold a musical festival in Springbank Park. The band will also take charge of the services in the Clarence Street Citadel on Saturday evening and Sunday.

FORESTERS ADOPT THE WINNIPEG PROPOSAL

Full Funeral Benefits for Members Immediately Upon Joining Order.

The High Court of the Ancient Order of Foresters Wednesday afternoon adopted after considerable discussion and debate the amendment sent in from Court Excelsior, Winnipeg, to the effect that all members be entitled to full funeral benefits immediately after joining the order. The former rule provided for half benefits only after six months' membership when full benefits after one year's membership.

Bro. T. Wood was elected high court junior member.

Gift For Bro. Vale.

A presentation of a silver tea service was made to Bro. W. J. Vale, chairman of the laws committee, as a token of appreciation of his work for the order in connection with its laws. The presentation was made with an appropriate address by Bro. E. W. Ramsay, past high chief ranger, and was responded to by Bro. Vale.

Cheers For Bro. Williams.

Bro. W. Williams was accorded an enthusiastic reception when the announcement was made that he had been again re-elected permanent secretary. He is one of the veteran members of the order. A standing vote of appreciation, with cheers, applause, brief addresses, and singing of "For Him a Jolly Good Fellow," showed Mr. Williams' popularity with his fellow members of the Ancient Order of Foresters.

OFFICERS STUDY DETAILS OF THE MIMIC WARFARE

Conference Held at Mt. Brydges Shows Mistakes and Good Points.

Col. Hodgins Well Pleased With Result of the Four Days' Campaign.

[Special Staff Man.]

Mount Brydges, Aug. 29.—Mount Brydges has today assumed its natural aspect, following the departure of most of the troops which were engaged in the manoeuvres of Thursday. All day yesterday, the quiet little town resounded to the tread of marching feet, from early daylight, when the Blue column moved forward to the front, until both Red and Blue forces marched back into the town just at noon at the conclusion of the battle. The last bivouac of the campaign was made in the Fair Grounds, where the headquarters staff was established at the beginning of the campaign. The Red and Blue columns, with their pitched tents together, and the majority of the troops left for home this morning. Victory was generally conceded to rest with the Red forces under Col. Black, although the umpires in accordance with established custom made no announcement as to the final result. It was by no means an easy victory, however, Col. McKenzie, in command of the Blue forces, having planned his campaign with great forethought, and several brilliant tactical evolutions, added laurels to the work of his officers and men.

Officers Confer.

During Thursday afternoon the officers of both forces gathered at the Cardiac Town Hall, where a conference was held in which the main points of the campaign were carefully gone over, and the mistakes and good points of the manoeuvres were pointed out by Major Gordon-Hall, who was responsible for much of the detail work in connection with the manoeuvres.

The object of the manoeuvres, said Major Gordon-Hall, was to bring representatives of every arm of the service working together, like a big machine. Each should dovetail perfectly into the other.

Watching the Enemy.

He then took up the campaign in detail. The first day taught many valuable lessons upon the importance of watching the flanks of a column either halted or on the march. Owing to the paucity of cavalry attached to both columns this was rather difficult to do. The Red cavalry were surprised and driven out of position in the first day's fighting, leaving the flanks practically unprotected. The flanks should be watched by all arms of the service to guard against an attack of that nature. The same fault, he said, might be found with some of the infantry during the heavy fighting of Thursday morning, when they were so busy in front that they did not take time to watch their flanks, thereby laying the columns open to great danger, as an attack of that nature is more deadly to infantry than to mounted men.

Message Carrying.

Major Gordon-Hall also emphasized the importance of duplicating all messages and sending them by two or three messengers along different routes. He referred to the incident of Wednesday morning, when a Blue messenger was intercepted and captured by the advance guard of the Red force and his dispatches taken. As they were not duplicated his messages went undelivered.

The breakdown in communication between the Red cavalry and their headquarters, he said, was doubtless due to the paucity of signallers. He highly praised the cyclists for the good work they had done in carrying dispatches, but stated that most of it should have been done by signalling. He urged the officers to try and build up their respective signalling corps to the highest point of efficiency, as they were very important units in actual service. Taking up the subject of protection, generally, he advised sending out the advance guard for the day about an hour before dawn, which, he said, was the most dangerous time, before the outposts came in, so that a double guard would be on duty for that hour.

Some Fine Strategy.

A splendid piece of strategy was brought to light when the incident of the unsuccessful night attack on the Blue bivouac was brought up. Col. McKenzie stated that his second had ascertained the approach of the Red force, and he had broken up camp, and marched out. He left his outposts on duty, and left a tent and the baggage and lights of the said hospital standing. The attacking party were completely deceived. They captured the outposts as they drew near the camp, and as they observed the tent still pitched, and the lights burning in the camp, thought that they had approached the bivouac all unobserved. They were surprised on reaching there to discover that the bird had flown.

It was a good strategic move, said Major Gordon-Hall, but the sacrifice of the outposts was perhaps a little too great for the advantage gained.

Some Criticism.

He criticized the action of the Blue force in neglecting to search the signalling officer of the Red force when he was captured. It was a most important capture, as he was carrying all the dispatches, but these he concealed about his person, and as he was not searched, the capture was of no value. Many other points in the campaign were taken up, the great weakness in the Blue attack, which resulted in its being driven back, lying in the fact that they attempted to defend too long a front. Their front extended two miles and a half, but had no depth, with the result that they were unable to hold their position. The Red force, in time to check the Red advance. The position of their artillery was also rather weak.

Manoeuvres a Success.

Major Gordon-Hall expressed pleasure at the spirit in which the officers and men of both sides went into the contest. "I think the city officers will agree that a hearty vote of thanks is due to the officers from the country districts, who, in spite of the fact that they have completed their summer training, turned out to help make the manoeuvres a success." Hearty applause followed this statement.

Col. Hodgins, in a neat speech, thanked the officers for the manner in which they carried out the operations, which, he said, had been most useful and instructive.

He then referred to the coming departure of Major Gordon-Hall for Ottawa, and also expressed great regret at the coming departure of Major Dean and Col. Belton.

SWIMMER INFLATES BLOUSE WHICH PREVENTS DROWNING

Successful Demonstration of Life-Saving Apparatus at Port Stanley.

Mr. William Clarke, an English inventor, living at 288 Ottawa avenue, gave an admirable demonstration of his life-saving jacket in front of the casino at Port Stanley Thursday afternoon. The apparatus, which consists of an inflatable rubber air vessel fitted between the lining of a coat or blouse, is readily inflated by the breath of the swimmer wearing it. On Thursday Mr. Clarke demonstrated that it could be filled in 14 seconds. Hundreds of people witnessed the demonstration, and expressed admiration and surprise at the simplicity and efficiency of the apparatus. The jacket weighs practically nothing, and one cannot tell the difference in the weights of a coat or blouse fitted with the jacket. Life-saving experts and others who were present at the demonstration expressed the opinion that the general use of Mr. Clarke's invention would practically eliminate all possibility of drowning accidents.

The surf was unusually rough at the time, and Mr. Clarke showed beyond any doubt that it would be impossible to sink while wearing a garment equipped with his life-saving apparatus.

The Huerta Government could afford to go against the unanimous view of the country and press that he should not allow outside interference.

ENGLAND IS DOUBTFUL.

[Canadian Press.]

London, Aug. 29.—The London morning papers continue to find little reason for encouragement in the situation between Mexico and the United States, and express the strongest doubt as to the wisdom of President Huerta's policy, mainly on the ground that Mexico is not yet fitted for democratic government.

The Daily Telegraph fails to see how even the acceptance of Mr. Wilson's conditions by General Huerta would operate to bring about peace and security in Mexico and contends that, whether wise or unwise, the refusal of the United States to recognize the Huerta administration has created an unfortunate situation.

Are Not Too Hard.

Referring to Ambassador Henry Lane, Wilson's advocacy of recognition and the fact that the Mexican Congress, although it was "made" by Madero, nevertheless acquiesced in Huerta's Government, the Telegraph says that it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that President Wilson's demands bear rather heavily on the Huerta Government, suggesting that the American antagonism to Huerta is due to the belief that he is a confirmed enemy to American interests, while Madero always proclaimed himself a champion of those interests.

The article proceeds: "Nothing could be more deplorable than the developments in this situation along the lines of an open feud between the anti-Huerta American trade interests and the pro-Huerta trade interests of other foreign nations."

The Daily Graphic asks if Secretary Bryan regards the situation as encouraging why troops are being rushed to the frontier, and says that President Wilson's policy is interesting, as an idealist experiment in international politics, but, carried out logically and consistently, must end in intervention.

UPHOLDS STATES.

[Canadian Press.]

Rome, Italy, Aug. 29.—The energetic but courteous attitude of the United States towards Mexico is favourably judged in Italy, according to the Giornale d'Italia in an article today commenting on the Mexican situation. It says that President Wilson has given proof of political and diplomatic capacity of the first order.

MR. BECK TO TAKE UP DEER'S EXTRADITION

Will Lay Alleged False Pretences Case Before Toronto Authorities.

Hon. Adam Beck, M. P. P., left Wednesday for Toronto, where he will take up with the Attorney-General's department the question of extraditing John Deer, the man who is now in Detroit and who is alleged to have secured $450 from Joseph Cantrell under false pretences.

The alleged offence occurred last April. Deer was captured in Detroit some time ago, but owing to some hitch was not extradited. He was allowed out on bail by the Detroit officials, and it is said that he can be located any time he is wanted.

Deer's wife is said to have made overtures to Cantrell towards a settlement, but the Canadian officials would not hear of any such thing. For a time it looked as if Cantrell would be able to receive no address. The Ontario authorities having apparently dropped the matter, but when it was taken up by The Advertiser several weeks ago, Hon. Adam Beck signalled his intention of going into the question as soon as he went to Toronto.
