The Toronto Globe of yesterday had this to say as regards prevailing color and fashions for Queen's Plate day at the Toronto Races. "The numbers of green parasols seen at the races was curiously large, and such a green, too; the smaller the hat evidently the more fashionable; skirts tight, skirts draped, skirts long and short; everything but wide! Hair pulled down over the ears until nothing but long ear-rings were seen; white shoes, yellow shoes, mauve shoes, blue shoes, all with hosiery of the daintiest to match, were quite the thing. An English visitor expressed great amazement at the dressing, so elaborate, and so smart, it was quite beyond the ordinary idea of amusement in Canada and yet we are told it is nothing to the Melbourne Cup Day!

Brantford, Ho One Gam The

As far as the Brantford is concerned, whenever a chance again of observing holiday, it might be well to stick to the Statute. That remark goes as far as is concerned. As for crowds and interest go, the days were awfully good. The Ford team played to a record in two days, and the treasury got the benefit. course, helps to produce a winner, although it is that the Sox should beat the home three games and that should come here and get our own lot. However, the ball, as she is played even leagues.

Engle and Slemm did grand the willow, the latter also beautiful game in centre. throw to the plate in the remarkable and it kept scoreless.

WATCH REPAIRING

A modern watch movement is composed of about 150 distinct parts, and correct time-keeping depends upon unity of action of all these parts, the balance wheel of your watch vibrates one hundred and fifty-seven million times
in two months.
Do not drop because it asks
as a drop of oil once a year.
Ordinarily at the end of six months the oil begins to eighteen months at farthest.

The Leopard

How the Doctor Had "the Time of His Life"
By CLARISSA MACKIE

The very day that the circus arrived in Higgum, Miss Fidella Bennett came to make her home with her niece, the wife of Dr. Gerrick. The wagon that held her trunks and boxes, and the few pieces of her choicest furniture with the circus the intense interest of Higgum's population.

"Here's Aunt Fidella's things, mother," Helen Gerrick had called out as she joined her mother on the front piazza.
"Isn't it queer that she should have sent them on ahead?"

"Perhaps they came by express.
Aunt Fidella spoke of stopping over in the city and spending a couple of days with Richard and his wife," said Mrs.
Gerrick as she directed the driver
where to put the goods.

Miss Fidella had broken up housekeeping and sold her old home in a distant town and had decided to make easily spare a bedroom and sitting room on the ground floor for the old lady, who, with some of her own belongings about her, would feel more at home. The trunks and boxes and bundles were carefully placed in the sunny bow windowed sitting room and the door was closed. Then the Gerricks turned their attention to the circus, for the coming of this attraction was a yearly event, and few Higgumites missed the performances.

Even Dr. Gerrick had signified his intention of going this year and had

"I must go up and tell the circus people so they can take the beast away," said the doctor as he lighted his pipe.

The doctor strode quickly down the street toward the circus grounds. He was anxious to notify the circus men of the discovery of the lost leopard.
The circus tents were down, and the score of workers went about their business without any excitement.
The animal cages were being loaded on their respective wagons, and the roar of the impatient captives was sweet music to Dr. Gerrick's ears.
One of the circus animals would never roar again.

He pushed himself through the crowd of workers until he found a man who was directing matters.

"I've found your leopard," announced the doctor bluntly. "In fact, I think he's a dead leopard now."
"Suppose he's dead?" asked the man brusquely. "Try, just checked off the leopard cage. What's the matter with you?"

"When I left the circus I was told there was a leopard loose. When I reached home I found the beast in one of my rooms, and I shot him, either wounded him or killed him outright.
I came to notify you."

"Hank," called the manager curtly,
"take this gentleman to the leopard cage and let Lulu howl at him. He thinks he's seen her and shot her dead." He turned away, with a little laugh.

Silently the doctor followed the circus man to the line of closed cages and was rewarded with a sight of the imprisoned Lulu, who not only howled at him, but beat the bars of her cage with her huge padded paw.

Dr. Gerrick mastered all his dignity and went home. Once there he got a lantern and carried it to the window of the south sitting room and peered down at the huddled heap on the floor.
It was a dead leopard.

He returned to the office, summoned Bridget and his wife and daughter and, followed by the three women, he led the way to the sitting room and opened the door. He placed several lighted lamps around the room and then pointed at the dead leopard in the corner.

They gazed upon its protruding head and shoulders, for the remainder of its body was tightly wrapped in burlap, and a loose piece of the same material lay on the floor.

The doctor laughed, softly at first,
and then more loudly. When his roars had died away he wiped the tears from his eyes and pointed to the leopard.
"That's a dead leopard, my dears," he explained. "In fact, it's about the deadest leopard you ever saw, because it's been dead for years. I'm no detective, but my deduction of this mystery is that our Aunt Fidella is the proud possessor of a leopard skin rug. She had it rolled in this burlap and transported so good. Now, enter Bridget, the cursow, who pokes an inquisitive finger here and there, picks at the loosened thread of the burlap covering, pulls it and it slips off, revealing the terrible head of the leopard; she drops it and it falls against the window, where it remains until my bullet jars it to the floor. In the meantime Bridget, whose imagination has been fired by her visit to the show, sees nothing but a living beast and flees the room and gives the alarm from her window. I suppose that's how the rumor started.
Oh, Bridget!"

"I screamed for ten minutes without a break, sorry," admitted Bridget, rather proudly. "And so would anybody else!"
"Just father's luck on his evening out," bemoaned Helen, but her father's uplifted hand silenced her.

"I wouldn't have missed it for anything, my dears," he chuckled. "I've had the time of my life tonight killing a dead leopard."

A Clear Brain and healthy body are essential for success. Business men, teachers, students, housewives, and other workers, say Hood's Sarsaparilla gives them appetite and strength, and makes their work seem easy. It overcomes that tired feeling.

my friends." — Mrs. VERA WILKES, of F. D. No. 1, Plattsburg, Miss.

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some de-rangment of the feminine system, often curable by the proper remedies.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and able to bear children.

If you want special advice write to

GIVE SOME DETAILS OF ROYAL TRAGEDY

Countess Marie Recalls the Tragedy of 1889 When Her and Baroness Were Found Dead

Countess Marie Larisch, niece of the late Empress of Austria, made public what purports to be the true story of the mystery surrounding the death of Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria. Since 1889, when the bodies of the heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary and Baroness Mary Vetsera were found in the royal hunting lodge at Mayerling, there has been no official explanation of the double tragedy. "The accidental shooting of the Crown Prince when on a hunting expedition," is the way the court circular referred to the tragedy, while there was no linking whatever that the death of the young Baroness had occurred at the same place or at the same time. The Countess says, in effect, that the Crown Prince killed his sweet heart and then took his own life because he feared that a plot in which he was engaged was about to be disclosed, and that he would be court-martialed and shot. That plot, according to the Countess, was a conspiracy on the part of Rudolph, the Archduke John of Tuscany and some others to disrupt the Austro-Hungarian Empire by making Rudolph King of Hungary.

Blames the Baroness
The Countess says that although the Crown Prince was a dissolute man, whose conduct had cost him the love of father, mother and wife, he was not primarily to blame for the affair with the Baroness. The girl fell in love with him before he had ever noticed her, and wrote him a letter begging him to meet her. The Countess appears to have assisted to arrange some of the stolen interviews that followed, though she protests that she only shielded the girl. But soon gossip connected the Countess with the indiscretion of the young Baroness went the length of publicly insulting the Crown Princess Stephanie, and it seemed probable that she would be dismissed from the court.

A Ghastly Riddle
It was in this crisis of their affairs that Rudolph took her with him on a hunting expedition to Mayerling. One morning when they did not appear at the usual hour, Count Hoyos the attendant of the Prince, broke open the door and found both dead, a small revolver in the hand of Rudolph. Calling in another servant whom he could trust, the Count removed the body of the girl to another room. Then he had both doors locked and guarded, while he hurried to Vienna with the news of the tragedy. It was announced that the Crown Prince had been injured, and after a noted doctor had been hurried to the scene the death was announced. In the meantime, the family of the Baroness Vetsera were communicated with. Two uncles went down to Mayerling to bring the bodies home. The police insisted that the girl should be dressed, and that the body should be held upright between two uncles on the seat while they drove in a carriage from the hunting lodge. A few miles away, the carriage turned into the gates of a monastery, and here the body was hurriedly buried, neither the father nor mother being allowed to be present and everyone who knew anything of the scandal being sworn to secrecy.

GALLOPING HORSE TOY

Best's Legs and Jockey's Body Move

An amusing toy in the form of a galloping horse has been designed by a Kentucky man. It is particularly appropriate these days when mechanical toys are absorbing the attention of the land. The body of the horse is fixed to a standard rising from the base, but the forelegs and hindlegs are pivoted to the body and at their mitic joints. The tail and neck are also pivoted to the body and the body of the jockey is pivoted at the hips. The horse's feet are fastened to swinging shafts that operate in the base by means of a rotatable gear. As one shaft is pushed forward the other comes backward, each carrying with it a foreleg and hindleg on the same side of the animal. The gear is operated by means of a crank and the faster the crank is turned the faster the horse trots, bobbing his head and waving his tail, while the jockey seems to urge him.

INTERESTING RELICS HAVE BEEN UNEARTHED

A Perfect Network of Tunnels and Many Rare Old Coins Found in a Montreal Excavation

Workmen engaged in tearing down an old convent found a perfect network of tunnels, secret passages and hidden chambers. All sorts of coins, medals, statues of the days of the Bourbons were recovered.

One of the relics found was a five-franc piece, which left the Mint of France bright and shiny in the year 1782, when Louis XV. ruled in glory over France and Navarre. This coin finally came to Canada, and must have lain undisturbed for years, till a workman saw something shining among a mass of fallen stones, and picked it up. "Lud. XV. D.G. Fr. et Nav. Rex." is the inscription on one side, and bears the extraordinary name, "Sint nomen Domini benedictus, 1782." Another coin is of more recent date and bears the inscription, "Charles X. Roi de France, 1828," and still another carrying the name of the Emperor of the early days of the nineteenth century. It is a British-Canadian coin, commemorating the peace which followed the war of 1812. It is dated 1816, and bears the inscription, "Basic Brook, the hero of Upper Canada."

Hand-wrought nails and dried pieces of timber were also uncovered. However, it is the tunnels that aroused the greatest interest. Owing to the extraordinary number and the complete network of these subterranean passages it is estimated that to duplicate this work to-day would cost a figure running well into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. There was discovered a method of construction to render the top of the tunnels impervious to water which if applied to modern day construction of this nature would be of immeasurable value. In the old days, before cement existed, the craftsmen and masons accomplished the desired end by placing over the stones forming the arch of the tunnels a layer of blue clay, with the result that the tunnels were rendered dry.

Another interesting feature of these structures is the clever use made of the materials gathered along the long reaches of the St. Lawrence. Undoubtedly the structures were a part of the early defenses of the settlement as it was customary, then, to supplement the efficiency of the fortifications by complicated subterranean passages and tunnels, into which a garrison could retreat in case it was rendered necessary. The removal of the old building reveals something of the early life of the little colony.

VALUE OF CREOSOTING

Treated Railway Ties Last Much Longer—Creosote Mostly Imported

One million four hundred thousand gallons of creosote could have been produced in Western Canada last year if the coal that was converted into coke had been "coked" in by-product ovens. With the exception of the creosote produced from the by-product ovens at Sydney, N.S., and at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., no creosote is produced in Canada, and the wood preservative is imported from Britain and the United States, but the high cost of the imported article has restricted its use very materially. In view of the steady and even rapid rise in the price of almost all classes of wood products, the importance of creosote is readily seen. For example, there is the problem confronting Canadian railways in obtaining lumber products. There were 15,888,770 ties purchased in Canada last year, an increase of 48 per cent. over the figure for the previous year. When it is considered that the annual replacement of ties existing in amounting to about 10,000,000, it is evident what enormous quantities of the material are required in order to supply the demand. This demand will not remain stationary, but on account of the increased mileage of railways being constructed in Canada, will increase each year. Owing to the other demands for lumber and wood products, the price of creosotes has been steadily increasing. The cost of its maintenance is now a large item of expense and the higher prices of the better grades of wood have forced the railway companies to use inferior woods. In order that the lower grades of wood may be economically used for ties it will be necessary to creosote those species that are used through decay. It is in this connection that the value of creosote is readily seen.

LITTLE VICTIMS OF ST. VITUS DANCE

It is Most Common Among Children of the School Age.

If your child—whether boy or girl—is fidgetty, emotional and awkward, you should watch it carefully as it may develop St. Vitus' dance. Frequently children cannot keep still, they move with strange antics, they blink jerk and their features twitch nervously. Speech is confused and the whole muscular system not under control. These are among the symptoms of St. Vitus' dance, a trouble that afflicts growing girls and boys, most frequently during the school age. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are such a splendid nerve tonic that they have cured the worst cases of St. Vitus' dance. They do this because the new, rich blood they make feeds and strengthens the starved nerves, thus at once curing the disease. Here is an example: Mrs. L. G. Gifford, Westover, Ont., says: "For over two years my little girl, Constance, was a sufferer from St. Vitus' dance. She was frightened badly by a dog, which seemed to bring on the trouble, and notwithstanding all we did for her, she seemed to be growing worse. She grew so bad that she could not feed herself and her speech was so badly affected that we could scarcely understand her. The twitching and jerking of her limbs was pitiable. At this juncture we began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and to our great joy they have completely cured her, and she is now as healthy a child as you can find."

Your Furs are Safe in our Vaults!

Why send them out of town when they can be stored just as well in Brantford?

Furs are so highly prized by everyone, it follows that great care must be taken to protect them from the ravages of moths. It is a fact that more furs are ruined by these pests than by actual wear.

The cold, dry air system of storage is a positive safeguard against moths. Much work and worry can be avoided by simply telephoning us at 819, and we will call for your furs and other winter apparel. You place your own valuation on each article, and we are responsible to you for that amount in case of loss by fire or moth.

Our charge for storage and insurance is 3 per cent. of the value—a moderate charge when it is remembered that we carefully dust each article, and hang them in a vault that is intensely cold.

Nothing is packed or folded. Everything is kept on hangers, so that the most delicate article will not become creased or muddled, and will carry no odor of moth preventatives.

"X-to-morrow comes it shall be to-morrow."

"We are going to be so happy next fall," a friend of mine told me the other day. "We are going to move into one of those beautiful new apartments they are building on the Avenue, and I'm going to buy the guest-room where we have been saving up for so long, and at last I shall be able to entertain my friends as I want. It seems to me I can hardly wait for fall to come."

As I look back across my friendship with this young woman, I remember the time when she could "hardly wait" for the day to come when she and her husband were to leave the place where they were boarding in their first little apartment; and before that, a time when she could "hardly wait" for her wedding day; and before that a time when she could "hardly wait" until July for the summer vacation which we planned in the spring.

"And when to-morrow comes, it still will be to-morrow."

There are a great many people in the world who are always about to be happy. In the to-morrow of their fulfilled anticipations they are sure they will find happiness; and they are so intent upon looking forward that they quite forget to realize that to-day is the to-morrow of yesterday's anticipation.

The very best time to do kind deeds is to-day; the very best time to start any good undertaking is to-day; the very best time to be happy is to-day. This hour, this minute.

"If an inhabitant of some other planet were to visit America," says a man named Sweet Marden, "he would probably think that our people were all en route for something beyond, some other destination, and that where they are to be living is merely a way station where they unpack only such of their baggage as they need for a temporary stay. They are not really living; they do not really live in the now, but they are sure they will live to-morrow."

For next year when business is better, their fortune greater, when they move into their new house, get their new furnishings or their new automobile, then they will be happy. But they are not really happy to-day.

That is a great indictment of the American people, and I am afraid a just one. It is peculiarly our national tendency to live in the to-morrow. We are ready to live, to have any time left for living itself. "Manana" is as good a word for us as the Spaniards', only in a far different sense.

Our nation has its uses, but it also has its abuses. Look forward to the to-morrow by all means, but don't look forward so eagerly that you neglect the delights of to-day. Be happy this day, this hour, this minute. You can't get that happiness.

Wrinkles

By HOWARD L. RANN

WRINKLES are a form of facial freckling with which nature embosses people who worry. Some people worry more than others and are embossed to such an extent that they look like a bas relief map of ancient Jerusalem.

The wrinkle is composed of several deep dimples strung together. Everybody admires a dimple, but when a number of them come together, and unite in producing a wrinkle, the owner invests in a bottle of skin food and a rubber massage roller.

Wrinkles are sometimes caused by wearing spectacles fitted by an eye specialist who graduated from a glass blowing factory. This produces wrinkles which mingle at the bridge of the nose. Many a man is wearing a set of encrusted wrinkles due to the astigmatic nose glass and getting by with the neighbors on the score of studious habits.

Dundas 10, Dufferin Rifles, Brantford 2.

Lundas defeated Dufferin Rifles, before the largest crowd of the season. The Dufferin Rifles have the reputation of being the leaders of the Brantford league, and the Valley town people were looking forward to a fast game. Dundas played the same men that trounced the Westinghouse a week ago, with the exception of Bland, who was hurt during the week.

The Sons of England defeated Holmedale Tigers on Saturday by the score of 4 to 1. About 300 people lined the grounds when the following teams took the field:

S. O. E.—Holmes, Wright and Smith; Stewart, Clark and Biggs (captain); Miller, Mathews, Walter Smith, Knightley and Johnson.

Holmedale—Scanlon, Martin and Hoyle (captain); Raneliffe, Williamson and Wilson; Moorcroft, Hart, Owen, Scanlan and Archer.

Johnston scored just for the Sons and Nightley dropped in two by fine work in spite of Scanlon's great stand in goal for the Tigers.

Notes on the Game. Two balls were broken in the first half. Hats off the Sons have won a game. There are more to follow. Three reserve men played good. Two more goals for Jim; four out of six.

The Son's captain, Frank Biggs is the penalty King. Scanlon is a good goalkeeper. Williamson, the Son's old captain, this year with the Tigers, is as good as ever.

Holmedale played ten men the last fifteen minutes. Trainer Clay was only called on the field once. It was a clean game and good. Old James Clay has the smile that won't come off. His boys have started winning.

Cockshutt United 3, All Scots 2. The All Scots and Cockshutt United played a hard, fast and exciting game at Mohawk Park Saturday before a large turnout of spectators.

Right from the start both teams went at it hammer and tongs and splendid football was witnessed throughout. Result, All Scots: 2; Cockshutt United 3. Goal scorers, (Scotts) J. Little 1, Malloy 1, (Cockshutt's) Plant 1, R. Richardson 2.

Trainer Burns requests all players to meet at the Borden Club to-night at 7:45. Every man must bring his outfit.

BERLIN BEAT LONDON

Bramble Twisted Masterly Ball for the Winners

BERLIN, May 27.—Berlin broke London's winning streak, they taking yesterday's fixture by 6 to 2. Bramble worked for the locals and won his first game of the season. He pitched masterly ball and kept the hits scattered with the exception of the eighth. Keenan's hopes had in the difficulty in connecting with the offerings of Fitzpatrick, and after gathering eight safeties and five runs up to the seventh he was banished in favor of Reilly. London had a busy day in the field, which, coupled with the local's timely sweating spelled the Cockney's defeat. By hunching their hits in the third, fourth, fifth and eighth, and aided by London's errors, the five centers were reelected. The visitors got one in the third on two singles. In the eighth Linneburn, Matteson and Bierbauer filled the bases on singles, but Chickenger's best was a sacrifice fly, scoring Linneburn. Bramble got himself out of a hole by fanning Stewart and Dunlop.

LUTHER McCARTY FELL DEAD FROM HARD PUNCH

Heavyweight White Championship of the World at Calgary Ended in a Fatality Pelky's Punch Did The Damage.

CALGARY, Alb., May 27.—Luther McCarty, champion white heavy-weight fighter of the world, is dead from a blow. He died within two minutes in the first round of his battle with Arthur Pelky here Saturday. The arena in which thousands witnessed the tragedy was placed under temporary siege by the police, and a monster round-up of all who saw or participated in the fight was carried by the municipality of Calgary. McCarty died without regaining consciousness.

Thousands of men were kept in the arena for hours and will not be allowed to return to their homes until they give their names to the authorities.

The ring tragedy has thrown the city into a state of wildest excitement. The authorities, awaiting orders from higher officials, are holding Pelky and the promoters.

The fight was bitterly contested. McCarty was confident of victory, and, with the prestige and confidence of a champion, entered the battle with a grin determination to end it as quickly as possible. The crowd had just settled down to witness what was looked upon as a hard and grueling battle. The men felt each other out, neither doing much damage. McCarty suddenly landed a blow on Pelky's face and then missed. Pelky clinched with the champion and when they broke away the crowd cheered. McCarty again landed a right on Pelky's head and Pelky fainted.

The Fatal Blow. McCarty was drawn into the trap and opened his guard. Quick as a tiger Pelky rushed the champion, landing a terrific blow just below the heart. McCarty did not drop. He stood, reeling about, dazed. Pelky was about to strike him again when he noticed that McCarty's eyes were closed. He stepped back, McCarty still swaying.

The thousands who began cheering Pelky's rush, became silent as they watched McCarty. Suddenly the champion raised his hands in the air and said "I am defeated, but I dropped again, his arms limp. He made a feeble effort to strike a blow, and before Pelky could rush him, the champion's body stiffened, his heels clicking together and his spine rigid. He fell with his head bent forward, his forehead striking the canvas as a faint blow. As he fell, Referee Ed. Smith of Chicago began counting. At the count of ten he waved Pelky away and pronounced Pelky winner.

Seconds rushed into the ring and McCarty was lifted to his corner. The arena was a beam. Believing it a plain knockout, the spectators threw their hats into the ring, in the air and cheered as only a crowd can when a new champion arrives. Hundreds of them had left the arena, when the activity at the ringside attracted those who remained. It appeared as though a plain knockout, out, and the ring was rushed in the crowd's effort to learn what was the trouble. Doctors, hurriedly summoned, were attending McCarty. He had not opened his eyes and had failed to respond to restoratives.

After fifteen minutes a doctor stepped to the ringside and raised his hand. "He is dead" he said. "The blow over the heart caused a paralysis."

There was no sound greeted the doctor's statement and he soon was lost in the crowd. When the doctor, who was lifted over the ropes, his gloves still on, and carried to a dressing room in a corner of the arena.

Police Held Spectators. The news of the champion's death spread rapidly and soon police were on the scene in great numbers. They came in automobiles and ordered the gates closed. They did not place the promoters under arrest, but told them they would be arrested if they attempted to go away.

There were probably 10,000 men in the arena when it became known that McCarty was dead. A few minutes before, whetted by the lust of primitive battle in the preliminaries that had been fought, it had been a howling mob, but the next put a quietus on the spirits of the spectators, and they fell quietly out of the arena, shocked by the tragic end of the battle. Both men apparently were in splendid condition when they entered the ring, although McCarty weighed 200 and had not trained for this fight.

When McCarty entered the ring he was laughing and joking with his friends and assistants and apparently was in a confident mood. A few minutes later Pelky appeared. Both men were cheered. Pelky, a strong local favorite getting a greater volume of the applause.

Almost the last words McCarty heard were from a preacher. The pastor of a local church entered the ring and after saying there was nothing butal in the preliminaries, asked the great assemblage to think that they were daily engaged in a similar fight in life. The preacher said he did not disapprove of boxing, that he had boxed himself when he was younger. He concluded by inviting all present to church on Sunday. He was listened to respectfully by the crowd.

The physician who took charge of McCarty and made a thorough examination after death contends that the collapse of the fighter was due to organic heart trouble and paralysis of the heart. He said that owing to McCarty's condition, almost any blow over the heart was sufficient to cause death.

Pelky Overcome. William McCarty, McCarty's manager, is prostrated over the tragic end of his protegee. When physicians announced the pugilist dead, McCarty burst into tears.

Luther was the cleanest and best boy I ever had anything to do with," McCarty said. "I am very sorry," said Tommy Burns, manager of Pelky. "It is one of those things which cannot be helped, and my sympathy goes to Pelky too. He was no more responsible for what happened than a man would be who was a mile away from the ringside."

Pelky is still too overcome by the tragedy to make any statement. McCarty was well known in Calgary, where he worked until two years ago as a teamster before he took up pugilism; it was here that he started his career and here he ended it.

Referee Smith preferred to say nothing except that it was not a hard blow that knocked McCarty down. Luther McCarty is the first 'champion' to be killed in the ring. There have been many other fatalities, but the victims were usually preliminary fighters—lads and men who did not train properly.

Arthur Pelky, by the knockout punch, automatically gained McCarty ring title—the champion white heavyweight of the world.

McCarty Record. Luther McCarty was born in Lincoln, Neb., on March 17, 1892. His father was an Indian half-breed, his mother, a Scotch woman. Standing a trifle over 6 feet 3 inches, he was physically powerful, yet a comparatively weak hitter.

He first sprang into ring prominence when he defeated Carl Morris at Springfield, Mo., on May 3, 1912. McCarty was immediately hailed as a real "white hope," but he failed to live up to the reputation. His best battle was Al Palzer at Los Angeles last New Year's day, when he defeated the conqueror of Bombardier Wells in eighteen rounds.

Previous to that bout he stopped Jim Flynn in sixteen rounds on Dec. 10, 1912, at Los Angeles. His last bout previous to the fatal battle of Saturday was a ten round victory over Frank Moran here on April 30.

Arthur Pelky. While never a clever boxer Pelky has always been noted as a terrific slugger with a knockout blow with either his right or left hand. He has fought a number of bouts throughout the east, usually meeting third-raters with rather indifferent results. His two bouts of importance were against Jess Willard at the Garden A.C. last July and Tommy Burns at Calgary several weeks ago. Willard out-pointed him.

He has had twenty bouts and won twelve. Jim Coffey, the Dublin Giant, who fought Jim Flynn at the Garden A.C. on Friday night is the only man who ever knock out Pelky. Coffey, in Philadelphia last winter, dropped Pelky for the count in the second round of a scheduled six-round bout. Coffey rushed Pelky just as the bell rang and knocked him flat with a right hand smash to the jaw. The Canadian was believed to be only a third rater. Billy McCartney, McCarty manager, entertained a similar opinion regarding Pelky as a fighter.

In a letter to Dan McKittrick, McCarty wrote: "After the bout with Pelky, Luther fights another 'big stew' at Regina. McCarty will receive $4000 for his end. Pretty soft, eh?"

McCarty's Town in Mourning. O'NEILL, Neb., May 27.—Luther McCarty's death in Calgary Saturday put O'Neill in mourning. A number of years ago McCarty, a raw young Irishman came to O'Neill, and got a job as cowboy. He came in in a farm down near Lincoln, and while he was handy with his mitts, as look like an over-grown country boy.

For several years he rode the ranges around O'Neill and won a good reputation as a local fighter. McCarty did with his hands what other cowboys did with their guns when it came time to fight. He was never known to carry a revolver when he was in this country, but by the time he was here a year he was cock of the walk.

He was matched against local fighters from Omaha to Sioux City, and in time left here for Chicago where he went into training quarters.

When the telegram came Saturday afternoon that McCarty was killed in the first round it was believed to be a hoax. All the loose money around O'Neill was bet on the Irishman, and at first it was thought that somebody was putting up a job on the boys of the town. Later when the report was confirmed, all business was practically suspended.

McCarty was O'Neill's one excuse for being on the map, and with his death loses its chance of fame. McCarty was born near Lincoln, but his advent in the fighting world was made in this town.

Widow Shows No Emotion. FARGO, N.D., May 27.—Mrs. Luther McCarty, the newly-made widow of the white champion heavyweight pugilist, pursued her labors in a restaurant in the saloon district of Moorhead Saturday night, apparently unaffected by the tragic end of her fighter-husband. She doubted the first telegraphic reports of his death, and when the news was confirmed she declined to make any statement.

Mrs. McCarty was deserted by her husband when the latter got the pugilistic "bug" and to support her child, she worked in several restaurants as dishwasher and waitress. After Palzer's defeat, she was called to Ohio for a conference with McCarty's father and to see her husband en route east on tour. Preliminary arrangements were made for a divorce, and she returned to Fargo, and resumed her employment here. She was expecting McCarty to come back this way after his match with Pelky, and final arrangements were to have been made for the divorce and alimony.

His First Big Fight. McCarty first drifted into Fargo three years ago. He came from the Canadian Northwest after a brief stop in Montana. He worked here for some time as a waiter in a restaurant, and later in a cleaning and sutpressing establishment. His first serious pugilistic encounter really occurred here. In each instance he was victor, and with the accumulation of a little money, he branched out as manager of a small hotel. His father, of White Eagle, came up here for a visit, and spent some time endeavoring to finance his son's ambitions as a pugilist. The oftener McCarty fought the less attention he paid to his hotel, and finally he left his wife and child to take on the lift that that ultimately led to his acquiring the championship title.

For the first few months after his departure his earnings were so small that he sent back nothing for the support of his wife and child. He sought employment in restaurants. Later, when more successful in the ring, McCarty remembered his family. After his defeat of Flynn, he sent Mrs. McCarty money, and wired her more after his defeat of Palzer.

Mrs. McCarty was a resident of Sibley, Minn., and married McCarty three years ago, when both were sixteen. She frequently related her experiences with McCarty as a boat hand on lakes, coast and rancher in the Canadian Northwest and Montana, and as a hotel manager here. She regarded him as a big overgrown kid, good natured to the extreme but thoughtless and irresponsible. She stated some time ago that she never intended to live together again as their domestic life had not been happy.
