LIEUT JARDINE ENROUTE HOME

The report published in local papers that Lieut Arthur Jardine, of Nordin, was reported missing are evidently not correct, for a London, England despatch, of Aug 28th says: "Lieut Arthur Jardine, N B Regt and R A F, of Newcastle, N B who recently sustained injuries in a flying accident, has been passed on sick furlough to Canada. He is at present in the Central R A F Hospital, Hazlewood."

British and French Continue Advances

Enemy Giving Away in all Points Before Victorious Allies

LENS IS TAKEN
On a twenty mile front yesterday the Canadians and British troops swept forward for four miles, capturing over ten thousand prisoners. Among the towns occupied by the Canadians was the important city of Lens.

Tuesday
Canadian troops, after capturing Wancourt, carried their lines east of Guemappe.

A counter-attack forced the British back from Longueval to Basentin Le-Grand and High Wood. The counter-attack was broken up at that point and the British positions re-established east of High Wood.

Australian forces have made substantial progress toward Domlherre, south of the Somme, and east of Suzanne, north of the river.

North of the Somme river, Scottish troops renewed their attacks against the Germans last night, and have advanced toward Pleuvain.

Since last Wednesday the British have taken 21,000 prisoners.

An army of 40,000 peasants are fighting against a combined force of Germans and Ukrainians near Skvira, according to the newspaper Pravda.

The railway strike in Ukraine continues. Russian bourgeois, returning from Kiev, report that as soon as German soldiers leave any district the workmen desert the factories and peasants organize resistance.

Wednesday
Chaulnes has been occupied by French troops.

Progress toward the Somme was continued this morning by the French. Since Tuesday thirty villages have been taken by them.

Among the larger villages taken by the French are Ombecourt, Reigise, and Verpilleres.

British forces fighting east of Arras have reached the outskirts of Haucourt, Remy and Bolry Notre Dame, north of the Arras-Cambrai road. The British line in the Flanders battle area has been advanced on a front of four miles astride the Neuf Berquin-Estaires.

South of the Somme, the British have taken Fouquacourt, while north of the Somme they have attacked and taken the greater part of Trones Wood.

Each day accentuates the German defeat and adds to the losses in men, material and prisoners. Since July 18, the Allies have taken well over one hundred thousand prisoners.

The guns captured have numbered more than one thousand and there also have been vast stores of ammunition.

The British troops from August 8 to August 25, took 45,000 prisoners and 460 guns.

Thursday
Paris Aug 29—French troops are fighting in Noyon, according to reports received from the battle front today.

The town, which now forms the apex of a sharp salient, is heavily defended by machine guns. It is already outflanked from the north-west.

Speeding up their advance, the French have enlarged their positions on the west bank of the Somme Canal over a wide front south of Peronne.

In the dry canal, east of Nesle, the fighting was extremely heavy. A huge amount of material was captured in that region.

North of Soissons, the Germans are clinging to dominating positions at Cuffies (a mile and a half north of the city), and Juigny. The Germans are reported to be greatly strengthening their positions in St Gobain.

Police Station No Terror For Thirsty Ones

Chatham Police Station Broken Into on Friday Evening and Quantity of Liquor Stolen

That the thirsty-ones of Chatham have little fear of the Police of that town was amply demonstrated last week in our sister town when thieves visited the lockup there and broke open a cupboard and helped themselves to a generous quantity of fire water that had been seized by Inspector Dickison and placed there for safe keeping.

Shortly after Inspector Dickison was appointed Inspector one night, while absent from home his residence was broken into by persons in search of liquor, and since that time he has been placing all seized liquor in the station for safe keeping. Until last week there was between twenty-five and thirty bottles. This was placed in the cupboard with double locks and its presence made known to only a few of the trusted ones but on Friday night, someone entered the station and after unlocking one of the locks pried the door open far enough to reach in and get six of the bottles, as well as break a seventh one in their endeavor to secure more, but were unable to do so.

On the same evening while Town Marshall Ashford was on duty at the Circus grounds someone visited his home on Upper King Street and endeavored to gain admittance first by the front door and then at the rear. Mrs Ashford, who was alone at the time was given quite a scare but the misdeed ending that someone was at home, did not make an effort to force his entrance.

It is thought that the person or persons were in search of some liquor that was recently seized by Mr Ashford, but they were unsuccessful in their mission.

In conversation with the Advocate, Mr Ashford said that any person trespassing on his property after dark would do so at their own risk and put up with the consequences as he intends to take harsh measures against anyone endeavoring to repeat the performance of Friday evening.

Young Lady Was Fond of Dress

So She Took the Loan of Her Employers and Hied Away to the City

The love of dress, and excitement promises to make things rather warm for a Douglstown young lady, who for some time past has been employed as a domestic here.

Yesterday morning she started work at the home of a local merchant, and during their absence away from the house during the day took advantage of the opportunity to enlarge her wardrobe with some of the best clothing of the ladies of the house to the value of about one hundred dollars, and then purchasing a ticket for St John, started forth to conquer new fields, but it was not long before the police were notified, and all points along the railway have been notified and are in the look out for the fair damsel with the borrowed plumage.

MOTORED TO FREDERICTON

Mayor Troy, Ald P Russell, Andrew Brooks and Master Charles Dickson motored to Fredericton last week. Mr Roy Dickison, who is at the Convalescent Home there accompanied them back to Newcastle.

Always Had Headaches

Liver Was Torpid and Bilious Spells Brought Sick Headaches—Lost Much Time, But is Now Completely Cured.

Here is convincing evidence that however much you may suffer from liver trouble and consequent biliousness there is cure in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Overeating is the most common cause of sluggish liver action. You lose your appetite, have distressing bilious spells, usually accompanied by headache and vomiting, the bowels become irregular, constipation and looseness alternating, digestion is upset and you get irritable and downhearted.

No treatment so quickly awakens the action of the liver and bowels as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For this reason this medicine is wonderfully popular and has enormous sales.

Mr. Charles R. Tait, Newtown, N.B., writes: "I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and would often have to stop work for a day or two. I lost many a night's sleep every month with bilious sick headaches, and although I tried doctors' medicines, and also many other patent medicines, it was without success. When I had these headaches I would vomit, and could keep nothing on my stomach."

"I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills from G. M. Fairweather, druggist, of Sussex, N.B., and after taking one box I was so much relieved that I continued to take them until I am now completely cured. My advice to anyone suffering from sick headaches is to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and be completely cured."

Mr. A. S. Mace, J.P., endorses the above statement, and says:—"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Charles R. Tait, and believe his statement in every way to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint. Insist on getting what you ask for.

Great Flyers Have Been Developed on Both Sides In the Struggle in Europe

IN the London Aeroplane Mr. C. G. Grey, the editor, writes interestingly about some of the greatest flying men of the war, and explains how they won renown. The first to attract international attention was Roland Garros, not because of his particular exploits, because he was brought down and made prisoner before he could run up a big score, but because of his daring and the great fame he enjoyed as a birdman in the days of peace. Then came the first of the great German flyers, Immelmann with the Fokker, but whether the Fokker made Immelmann famous or the pilot made the machine famous is a moot point. From the point of view of the expert designer of flying machines, the Fokker was more or less a joke, but it was admirably adapted for its own purpose, and had advantages over British machines that helped the Germans for some time to claim mastery of the air. The Fokker was light, and it had a good engine, and as a defence machine was hard to beat.

Being lighter it was swifter and could mount more rapidly than the British machines, built for voyages over the German lines, had to carry enough gas for four and a half hours' flying. The Fokker, operating always behind the German lines, carried only enough fuel for two hours' flying. In his Fokker, Immelmann used to sit up at an altitude of 10,000 feet and swoop down like a hawk upon the British planes flying at 7,000 feet. It is not to be wondered at that with this advantage in position and in machine he should have made a formidable score, but even so, Mr. Grey notes, he has never heard any R.F.C. man say that the German was not a great air fighter. He had a letter from a crack British flyer when Immelmann's fame was at its height, and he said: "I had a scrap with Immelmann the other day. He flies a monoplane, fires through his propeller and flies beautifully. We got off drums of ammunition on one other, apparently without results, except plenty of holes in my machine."

Boeckel was another Fokker flyer, and a contemporary of Immelmann's, though he did not rise to fame as soon. To him is said to belong the credit of developing the German system of training a number of airmen to fight in regular formation, on the lines of what later on came to be known as a "circus." His circus became famous. One of his pilots was Richthofen, probably the finest of all German flyers, who was killed by a Canadian a few weeks ago. Richthofen would appear to have had all the qualifications for success as an airman. He was a cavalry officer by training, a horseman, and a game shot by family tradition. When given command of a squadron of his own he developed the circus tactics to a remarkable degree. His men were not only aviators, but gymnasts. Their machines were painted in all sorts of baroque colors. They moved from place to place along the front, and when the weather was favorable they always gave two performances a day, one in the morning when they were all together, and one later in the day, when the survivors gave solo stunts.

Richthofen's circus flew Albatross biplanes, but shortly before the German spring offensive began, Richthofen, who had been in Germany, presumably training new pilots, returned to the front, and he and the men under him were equipped with Fokker triplanes, which are said to be badly made copies of the British Sopwith. Their engines, however, were good, and the men expert flyers, and when Richthofen was being brought down he could console himself with the reflection that he had done his bit, and done it with a chivalry that is rare among Germans. So much has been written about Guynemer, the French ace, whose name will never be forgotten, and whose single-handed exploits have never been surpassed, that no tribute to his skill and bravery is needed. He flew apparently, by instinct, like a bird flies. Nor does Capt. Ball stand in need of any eulogy. He was a mere boy, quite as modest as the mechanic who looked after his plane, and the veritable D'Artagnan of the skies. He loved best to go off alone, scouting over the German lines, looking for adventure, and whether the enemy was one or ten it made no difference to him. When he fell it was in a great battle against odds.

Equally gallant, but of a different mental type was Major Hawker, an engineering officer, who was learning to fly when the war broke out. He was the first British flying man to win the V.C., a soldier of rare gifts as a leader and administrator and inventor of new "stunts." His fighting abilities and his knack of training and inspiring those under him had much to do with the British supremacy of the air in 1918. He died in a duel with Richthofen, when a west wind drove the combatants far behind the German lines, and Hawker had the option of landing and surrendering or fighting to a finish. He chose the latter course.

Major Bishop, the great Canadian ace, is to be reckoned among the best flying fighters the war has developed. His nerve and his mastery of machine guns—in the latter respect he is not surpassed, if indeed, he is equalled, by any man who ever drove a plane—are his chief characteristics. He has won all the British honors bestowed on Ball and Hawker, and he survives as the commander of a squadron to add new laurels to his magnificent record.

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:
"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pridham-Whitehead Wedding at Chatham

A very interesting event took place at the home of Mr. Ann Whitehead, Chatham on Wednesday morning, at 12:30 when Rev. Dr. Wylie officiated in marrying his daughter Miss Isa Whitehead, to Mr. Frank Tappin Pridham, of Alberton, P. E. I.

The bride who was unattended was becomingly costumed in blue pussy willow Taffeta, and georgette crepe with hat to match and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and maiden hair fern.

Only the immediate friends and the contracting parties were present at the event, and Mr. and Mrs. Pridham left on the Ocean Limited for a short honeymoon trip to P. E. I. Mr. Pridham was for some time the efficient assistant at Messrs. Harve's Studio, but now proprietor of the Harvey Studio, Fredericton, and one of the Capitals rising young business men.

Their many Miramichi friends extend congratulations to which the Union Advocate is pleased to join.

Miss Ruth Henderson of Douglasville, left Tuesday for Baltimore where she will enter Johns Hopkins Hospital as student nurse.

forest (between the Oise and the Ailette), which are regarded as already among the best defences on the west front.

The Canadians are within a mile of Bullecourt.

They spent the night cleaning out a mass of dugouts and pockets filled in by the Germans, including the famous 2000 yards concrete tunnel running west from Bullecourt to the Senese river.

The series of local operations initiated by both sides on the famous Atene battlefield has resulted in violent fighting along the Vesle line. More than a hundred Germans have been captured. American artillery hurled shells toward the Boche last night, the flash of guns illuminating the black overcast sky. A counter-attack against the Americans late yesterday afternoon broke down completely in the face of heavy artillery and machine gun fire.

Bapaume was captured today by the forces of Field Marshal Haig.

The town of the chief highway centres in northern Picardy, is twelve miles northeast of Albert and thirteen miles north of Peronne. It controls a fine network of highways leading to all parts of the battlefield where for the past two weeks the Allies and the Germans have been locked in a death struggle.

When the battle began it was one of the German supply bases, but it is probable that by this time the enemy has withdrawn most of his materials. For the past week the town has been closely invested by the British, but held out in spite of the fact the British have passed beyond it both on the north and south.

Friday
British troops have crossed the Somme river south and west of Peronne.

Canadian troops smashed forward this morning in a new attack south of the Arras-Cambrai road. In yesterday's fighting the British pushed more than four miles beyond the Hindenburg line in this region. British troops also are pushing ahead in the Lawe and Lys valleys on the Flanders front.

British troops have captured Combles, between Bapaume and the river Somme.

East of the Senese the forces of Field Marshal Haig made progress, capturing Bullecourt and Hendre-court-Le-Cagnicourt.

The British also captured Clercy-Sur-Somme, off the Somme river, between Combles and Peronne.

The British advanced more than a mile on a front of seven miles between Bullecourt and the Scarpe today, and are now within a mile of Queant (the junctions of the Wotan-arc Stegried sections of a Hindenburg line). It was learned today they have captured Rencourt (two miles southeast of Bapaume).

The Allies now hold a line on the Somme from Bullecourt to Noyon, of which they have captured the northern and eastern suburbs.

The French have captured Quié-vaux, Romy-le-Petit, La Penetierrie and Terme-des-Fonds-Gomez.

The British line this morning, it was learned, extends from Arleux-en-Goselle (two miles and a half south and east of Vimy, westward of Oppy, (a Arleux-en-Goselle), eastward of Romy 7 1/2 miles southeast of Arras and south of Bullecourt).

Saturday
German troops have been driven from their positions east of Clercy.

on the Somme, northwest of Peronne, and the British advance in this locality is continuing.

British forces have entered the village of Dranoutre, on the north side of Lys salient.

On the south side of the Lys salient the British have occupied the village of Lacoutre, northeast of Bethune.

The British have captured a strong point known as the St Servins Farm, and the village of Etergay, north of the Arras-Cambrai road.

Mont St Quentin, a mile and a half north of Peronne, has been taken by Field Marshal Haig's forces.

Mont Kemmel, the famous stronghold southwest of Ypres, which was the scene of terrible fighting during the German offensive in Flanders late in April, has been captured by the British.

The Americans and French Friday attacked the German flank position north of Soisson and in sharp fighting drove forward two miles on a front of more than three miles capturing the villages of Chavigny and Cuffes, and storming Hill 159 and the three mile line to the east.

Sunday
The British have literally smashed the German front over a thirty mile front from Arras to Peronne. The villages of Dury and Mount Dury have been taken, as also have Cagnicourt Wood and Cagnicourt. Many prisoners and guns have also been captured.

Monday
Nikolaj Lenine, the Bolshevik Premier of Russia was shot twice on Saturday by a woman. He will recover.

Many steamers have been sunk in the Atlantic by U Boats.

The British advance still continues. Peronne has fallen to Allied troops.

Hurrah! How's This
Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lock-jaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. * If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

Frequent Headaches

People with thin blood are much more subject to headaches than full-blooded persons, and the form of anaemia that afflicts growing girls is almost always accompanied by headaches, together with disturbance of the digestive organs.

Whenever you have constant or recurring headaches and pallor of the face, they show that the blood is thin and your efforts should be directed toward building up your blood. A fair treatment with Dr Williams' Pink Pills will do this effectively, and the rich, red blood made by these pills will remove the headache.

More disturbances to the health are caused by their blood than most people have any idea of. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment and you may be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia or sciatica. Muscles subject to strain are under-nourished and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago. If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders, try building up the blood with Dr Williams' Pink Pills, and as the blood is restored to its normal condition every symptom of the trouble will disappear. There are more people who owe their present state of good health to Dr Williams' Pink Pills than to any other medicine and most of them do not hesitate to say so.

You can get Dr Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr Williams Medicine Co Brockville, Ont.

CHAPTER XVIII

WHERE THE PRESIDENT PRESIDES. BEFORE the exciting story so rudely interrupted is resumed it may be well to set down in their sequence the queer workings of fortune which led to Philip's timely reappearance at Las Flores.

His troop of scouts consisted of twenty-eight men. Five were sailors and five from the Andromeda; three were Germans from the Unzer Fritz. But the whole eight were ex-soldiers, and one man at arms trained on the European model is worth ten of the Brazilian product. The remaining twenty were hillmen, good riders, excellent shots and acquainted with every yard of the wild country within a radius of a hundred miles. They would fight anybody if well led, and here it may be observed that when Philip called on them to storm the ballroom he said "Come on!" between which curt command and his consent, "Go on!" these half-breed warriors drew a fine distinction. The language difficulty was surmounted partly by an interpreter in the person of one of the Germans, who spoke English and had lived in Bahia, partly by signs and largely by Philip's methods as a leader.

He never asked his men to do anything that he did not do himself, and they were never dubious as to his tactics, since he invariably closed with any Nationalist detachment met during the day's operations.

About midday, then, they came upon the advance guard of a column sent off a week earlier by the expert at Pesqueira with instructions to arrive at Las Flores before sunset that very day. Instantly the twenty-nine charged. With equal celerity the advance guard bolted. From the crest of a rocky pass Philip looked down on a column of fully a thousand men. The situation was critical. It called for prompt handling. Five men held the horses, twenty-three spread themselves among the rocks, Philip unslinging his carbine, and twenty-four rides indulged in long range practice on a narrow mountain path crowded with men and animals.

Nothing more was needed. It has been noted already that the Brazilians disliked long range shooting. There was a stampede. The scouts occupied the ridge until sundown and were returning leisurely to report the presence of the column when they fell in with the first batch of fugitives from the valley. Forthwith Philip became a general and each scout an officer. They reasoned and whacked the run-aways into obedience, picked up quite a number of men who were willing enough to fight if told what was expected of them, and the rest was a matter of simple strategy such as Macaulay's schoolboy would exhibit in the escalation of a snow fort. But it was a near thing. Five minutes later and Hozier might have seized the presidency himself.

And now as to the night and the next day.

Russo and his diminished staff took Philip's little army as a nucleus. Brazil had duly elected Dom Corria, as provided by the statute, and the news spread like wildfire. Before morning the Liberationists were 10,000 strong. Before night closed the roads again the Pesqueira genius wrote to Dom Corria under a flag of truce and pointed out that he served the president, not any crank who said he was president, but the honored individual in whom the people of Brazil placed their trust. Dom Corria replied in felicitous terms, and, as the newspapers say, the incident ended. The navy sulked for awhile, because it held that Russo's treatment of the Andorinha was not cricket or baseball or whatsoever game appears most to the Brazilian sportsman. It was not even professional football. It said, but an acrimonious discussion was closed by a strong hint from the treasury that pay day might be postponed indefinitely if too much were made of a regrettable accident to the guns of the Maceo artillery.

Meanwhile Dom Corria, the man who did not forget, was puzzled by two circumstances not of national importance. San Benavides, never a demonstrative lover where Carmela was concerned, was a changed man. He was severely wounded during the fight, and Carmela nursed him assiduously, but there could be no doubt that he was under her thumb and would remain there. The indications were subtle, but unmistakable. Carmela even announced the date of their marriage.

Dom Corria remembered, of course, what San Benavides said his daughter had said when they all met in the ballroom. It seemed to him that Salvador was telling the truth and that Carmela was shying on that occasion. But he was well enough alone. It was good for Salvador that he should obey Carmela. He blessed them and remarked that a really "smart" wedding would be just the thing to inaugurate the new reign at Rio de Janeiro.

He was far more perplexed by the untimely wrath of Philip Hozier. He thought of it for at least five minutes next morning. Then he sought Dickey Bulmer, who had just quitted Coke's bedroom and was examining the rare shrubs that bordered the lawn.

"What news of that brave man?" asked Dom Corria, and his deep voice vibrated with real feeling.

"First rate, sir," said Dickey. "The bullet is extracted, and the doctor says he'll soon be all right. Leastways, the doctor Iris tells me. I can't talk Portuguese myself, and poor old Jimmie's languid ain't fit to be repeated."

The president laughed.

"He is what you call a bundle of contradictions, eh—a rough fellow with the heart of a bull? But he saved my life, and that naturally counts for a good deal with me. And how is your niece after last night's terrible experience?"

"My niece? D'ye mean Iris?" demanded Bulmer, obviously somewhat annoyed.

"Yes."

"She's not my niece. She's—"

"Your granddaughter, then?"

"No, sir. That young lady 'as done me the honor of promisin' to be my wife."

"Oh!" said Dom Corria, fixing his brilliant eyes on Bulmer's waxed face. "There's no 'oh' about it," growled Dickey. "It was all cut and dried weeks ago, and she 'as't rused of 'er bargain yet, as far as I can make out."

"You mean that the marriage was arranged before the Andromeda sailed?" said Dom Corria gently.

"Why, of course. It couldn't very well be fixed after, could it?"

"No—not as between you and her. I can vouch for that. Forgive me, Mr. Bulmer, I have a daughter of marriageable age, you know, and I speak as a parent. Do you think that it is a wise thing for a man of your years to marry a girl of twenty?"

"If I didn't I wouldn't do it."

"But may it not be selfish?"

Then downright Lancashire took hold of the argument.

"Look 'ere! 'ot are you drivin' at?" demanded Dickey, now in a white heat of anger. He had yet to learn that the president preferred a straightforward way of talking.

"I want you to forego this marriage," he said.

"Why?"

"Because that charming girl loves another man, but feels that she is bound to you. I understand the position at last. Mr. Bulmer, you cannot wish to break her heart and drive that fine young fellow, Philip Hozier, to despair. Come, now! Let you and me reason this thing together. Possibly when she agreed to marry you she did not know what love was. She is high minded, an idealist, the soul of honor. What other woman would have consented to be separated from her friends on Fernando Noronha merely because it increased their meager chances of safety? How few women, loving a man like Philip Hozier, who is assured of a splendid reward for his services to this state, would resolutely deny the claims of her own heart in order to keep her word?"

Bulmer had never heard any one speak with the crystal directness of Dom Corria. Each word chipped away some part of the fence which he had deliberately erected around his own intelligence. Certain facts had found crevices in the barrier already. Dom Corria broke down whole sections. But he was a hard and stubborn, and his heart was set on Iris.

"You are mighty sure she is wrapped up in this young spark?" he growled.

"Were I not I would not have interfered. Take my advice. First ask yourself an honest question, then ask the girl. She will answer. I promise you that."

"I'm a rich man," persisted Dickey.

"Yes."

"Nobody forced 'er one way or the other."

"Possibly. One wonders, though, why she hid herself on the Andromeda."

"It's true, I tell you. David said—"

"Who is David?"

"Her uncle."

"In England, I take it, if a man wishes to marry a girl he does not woo her uncle. Of course these customs vary. Here in Brazil—"

Then Bulmer said something about Brazil that was not to be expected from one of his staid demeanor. In fact, he regarded Brazil as the cause of the whole trouble, and his opinion concerning that marvelous land coincided with Hozier's. He turned and walked away, looking a trifle older, a trifle more bent perhaps, than when he came out of the house.

An hour later Dom Corria and Carmela met in a corridor. They were discussing arrangements for a speedy move to the capital when Iris ran into them. Her face was flushed, and she had been crying. Much to Carmela's amazement, the English girl clasped her round the neck and kissed her.

"Tell your father, my dear, that he has been very good to me," she whispered. Then her face grew scarlet again, and she hurried away.

"Excellent!" said the president. "That old man is a gentleman. His friend is not. Yet they are very much alike in other respects. Odd thing! Carmela, can you spare a few minutes from your invalid?"

"Yes, father."

"Go, then, and find that young Englishman, Philip Hozier. Tell him that the engagement between Miss Yorke and Mr. Bulmer is broken off."

Carmela's black eyes sparkled. That wayward blood of hers surged in her veins, but Dom Corria's calm glance dwelt on her, and the spasm passed.

"Yes, father," she said dutifully.

He stroked his chin as he went out to pronounce a funeral oration on those who had fallen during the fight.

"I think," said he reflectively—"I think that Carmela dislikes that girl. I wonder why."

Philip had never, to his knowledge, seen the Senhora de Sylvia. It was therefore something more than a surprise when the tall, dark, willowy girl, black haired, black eyed and most demure of manner, whom he remembered to have met in the gateway of Las Flores early on the previous day, came to his tent and asked for him.

She introduced herself, and Philip was most polite.

"My father sent me"—she began.

"I ought to have waited on the president," he said, seeing that she hesitated, "but several of my men are wounded, and we have so few doctors."

"Dom Corria is a good doctor himself," she said.

"His skill will be much appreciated in Brazil at the present moment," said he, rather bewildered.

"He mends broken hearts," she persisted.

"Ah, a healer, indeed!" but he frowned a little.

"He is in demand today. He asked me to tell you of one most successful operation. The—er—the engagement between Miss Iris Yorke—is that the name—and Mr.—Mr.—dear me?"

"Bulmer," scowled Philip, a block of ice in the warm air of Brazil.

"Yes, that is it. Well, it is ended. She is free—for a little while."

There was a curious bleaching of Philip's weather tanned face. It touched a cord in Carmela's impulsive nature.

"It is all right," she nodded. "You can go to her."

She left him there, more shaken than he had ever been by thunderous sea or screaming bullet.

Visiting the sick is one of the Christian virtues, so Philip visited Coke.

Iris had just finished writing a letter, partly dictated and much altered in style, to Mrs. James Coke, Sea View, Ocean road, Birkenhead, when a gentleman brought her to the door. She opened it. Her wrist was seized, and she was drawn into the corridor. The tall young man who held her wrist proceeded to squeeze the breath out of her, but she was growing so accustomed to deeds of violence that she did not even scream.

"There is a British chaplain at Pernambuco," was Philip's incoherent remark.

"I must ask my uncle," she gasped.

"No. Leave that to me. No man living shall say 'Yes' or 'No' to me where you are concerned, Iris."

"Do not be hard with him, Philip, dear. He was always good to me, and—and—I have grown a wee bit afraid of you."

"You are so much older, so much sterner, than when you and I looked at the Southern Cross together from the bridge of the Andromeda."

"I was a boy then, Iris. I am a man now. I have fought and loved and suffered. And what of you, dear heart? What was throwing the furnace hand in hand. What of the girl who has come forth a woman?"

"I must ask my uncle," she gasped.

"No. Leave that to me. No man living shall say 'Yes' or 'No' to me where you are concerned, Iris."

"Do not be hard with him, Philip, dear. He was always good to me, and—and—I have grown a wee bit afraid of you."

"You are so much older, so much sterner, than when you and I looked at the Southern Cross together from the bridge of the Andromeda."

"I was a boy then, Iris. I am a man now. I have fought and loved and suffered. And what of you, dear heart? What was throwing the furnace hand in hand. What of the girl who has come forth a woman?"

When Coke was pronounced fit for comfortable travel David Verity and Dickey Bulmer conveyed him home. They took with them drafts on a London bank for amounts that satisfied every sort of claim for the sinking of the Andromeda. Judged by the compensation given to the vessel's survivors, there could be no doubt that the dependents of the men who lost their lives would be well provided for.

At odd moments David and Dickey Bulmer discussed the partnership. The young people would be home in two months, and then Philip was to come into the business.

"We're growing old, David," said Dickey. "I've got plenty of money, and you'll 'ave a tidy bit now, but there's one thing neither of us can buy, and that's youth."

"I don't want to be young again," said David, "but I'd like to go back just a year or so—no more."

"Why?"

"Well, there's bin times w'en—w'en I'd 'ave acted different. 'ot do you say, Jimmie?"

Coke, thus appealed to, glowered at his employer.

"Say!" he growled. "I say nothin' I know you, David."

Philip and Iris attended Carmela's wedding during their honeymoon. The cathedral at Rio de Janeiro was packed, and Iris was quite inconspicuous among the many richly attired ladies who graced the ceremony by their presence. Nevertheless Colonel Salvador San Benavides favored her with a peculiar smile as he led his bride down the central aisle.

She laughed, blushed and looked at her husband.

"Yes, I saw him," he whispered. "But I never feared him. It was you that made me sit up. By the way, old girl, let us cut out the reception. I want to call at the bank and at a shop in the Rua Grand. You will be interested."

Well, being a good and loving wife, she was interested deeply. Ten thousand pounds was Dom Corria's financial estimate of the services rendered by Philip, and Iris was absolutely dumfounded by the total in millions. But her voice came back when Philip took her to a jeweler's and the man produced a gold cross on which blazed four glorious diamonds. Dom Corria had given her a necklace many times more valuable, but this—

"For remembrance?" said Philip.

"Oh, my dear, my dear!" she murmured, and her eyes grew moist.

The Wolves Were Hungry

Angus McGregor and his collie dog left the Canadian Pacific Railway main line at Kamloops and went north and west for six days to get into good trapping and hunting territory for a winter's work. They made several trips before the snow came and shut them in. When winter shut down there was much cold weather and not an excessive amount of snow. The rabbits drifted north to the thicker brush, and McGregor and his dog extended their lines twenty miles further. Big snow came and the wolves found hard work to get a living through the rabbits and partridges were fat and contented. McGregor took a lot of fur, mink, lynx, marten and fox.

One day while on the trail of a moose he saw a big black wolf looking down. The collie saw it too and dashed to the conflict. The wolf turned and fled, and when the man topped the rise he saw his dog nearly a half mile away still fiercely pursuing the wolf which had just entered the mouth of a steeply sloped draw. Half way up the draw the wolf stopped, and down from either flank swept two more wolves. The first brute had acted as decoy for the dog. The collie, realizing his danger, wheeled and ran toward his master, pursued by all three of the pack. He led them by a few yards, and threw himself finally against the feet of McGregor, while the wolves, gaunt, hungry and unusually fierce came right on, and only swerved aside to circle when the man yelled. One he shot before the others fled, and a few days later, having placed out "baits" with the satisfaction of picking up the other two big, black bodies.—L. V. K.

Record In Concrete Bridge-Building

THE double tracking of the North Toronto Sub-division of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Leaside and North Toronto is now nearing completion, and involves the replacement of bridges (known as 0.9 and 1.8) which heretofore had been trestles constructed of steel. Owing to the high price of steel and the difficulty of procuring it since the war began it was found that reinforced concrete competed successfully against steel.

The bridges were therefore constructed of this material and are a triumph of railway construction work. No. 0.9 being 386 feet long and 80 feet high carrying two tracks and No. 1.8 of similar dimensions but a three track structure. The length of the individual spans and the details of their construction are unprecedented in the engineering world. Previous to this no reinforced concrete beam with a length of more than about 25 feet had been attempted; the spans of these two C. P. R. structures are each from 35 to 37 feet long. These spans have been made possible by the employment of unit construction by which each span was designed as two beams which, after being manufactured near the work, were laid side by side on the previously built reinforced concrete towers. The towers themselves are really reinforced concrete buildings constructed in the usual manner by means of wooden forms built around a steel reinforcement which was previously assembled and securely wired together. When all was in readiness the concrete was poured by means of long spouts which led in several directions from the main mixing tower. The pouring of the concrete was maintained as continuously as possible until a whole tower was completed. This work was done during the winter at a time when the temperature was below freezing point; it was performed inside of what was virtually a building erected to maintain a suitable temperature around the newly deposited concrete until it was out of danger of being damaged by frost.

These two structures are provided with narrow sidewalks and handrails, which enable trainmen to move conveniently along side-standing trains. The hand rails add considerably to the aesthetic appearance of the structures, which are extremely artistic in appearance and at the same time satisfactory from a general and utilitarian point of view, besides being absolutely permanent. Both are designed to carry the heaviest engines in existence with a considerable margin of safety, and are speaking in the art of bridge engineering inasmuch as they have demonstrated that reinforced concrete can take the place of steel for a very large number of permanent bridges. These two structures are so solid that when passing over them on a train one gets the impression that he is on a solid fill instead of a bridge.

The method employed in the erection of the reinforced concrete spans is a specially interesting feature of the structures. Each slab, as a unit, weighed 55 tons, which—as the limit load that could be handled by the C. P. R. 100 ton standard wrecking cranes. The crane engaged handled no less than 110 slabs, each 55 tons in weight, or in all something like 6,000 tons, and all this was done without a single mishap to either men or material. Another remarkable feature is that both structures were built without interruption from June, 1917, to July, 1918, which was a shorter period than would have been required to manufacture and erect similar structures in steel. Passenger and freight traffic on the C. P. R. main lines was continued without interruption during the progress of these interesting works.

HAPPY HOUR SPECIAL

A stirring war play, on whose action centers on the front lines in France, will be shown at the Happy Hour Theatre Thursday. It is a William Fox play called "A Daughter of France," and in it the beautiful Miss Virginia Pearson is starred.

It is a typical "love in the trenches" play but with a twist that is surprising. In fact, it is one of those dramas that keep you on edge continually because you cannot foresee the ending, and while you hope it will turn out according to your sympathy for heroic France you are never sure but what the villain may conquer.

The picture also presents an idea of what happened when the Germans overran France, regarding neither women nor churches. Miss Pearson gives a splendid portrayal of the angel that overcomes a true-hearted French girl of noble blood when the enemy occupy her town and her chateau. Here is romance and adventure aplenty.
