Election Cards.

TO THE ELECTORS OF GODERICH.
I have been asked by a number of ratepayers to stand for the office of
FIRST DEPUTY REEVE
for the year 1882. I am willing to occupy the position and I should like to try my duty to town and county.
1818-2. JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ST. GEORGE'S WARD.
GENTLEMEN.—At the request of my friends, I have consented to stand as a candidate for the office of Councillor in the ward in which I have resided for so many years. Having already served the town in the Council for some years, and having, while acting in a public capacity, already endeavored to do my best in the public interest, I feel confident that the influence of my friends, and the pledge myself to support all measures that will conduce to the welfare of the town.
Goderich, Dec. 28th, 1881. 1819
M. NICHOLSON.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ST. ANDREW'S WARD.
GENTLEMEN.—After being nominated on Monday last, I was at first inclined not to stand. However, friends have urged me to remain in the field, and if elected, I will endeavor to serve the town to the best of my ability. I will not be able to see all the electors personally, but hope to receive the support of a majority of the ratepayers in the ward.
Respectfully yours,
Goderich, Dec. 28th, 1881. 1819-0
J. H. COLBORNE.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ST. ANDREW'S WARD.
I am again before you seeking re-election as one of your representatives on the Council Board. Being a resident of the ward for the past 21 years, you are all aware of my position, and the fact that I always act in public matters without fear or favor. I have a great deal of time to spare, which is freely and earnestly given to the public interests. Re-lying on your support for the coming year, as in the past.
I am, gentlemen,
Yours respectfully,
GEO. SWANSON.

ELECTORS OF ST. DAVID'S WARD.
GENTLEMEN.—It was not my intention to be nominated for Councillor, but since you have nominated me, I feel it my duty to endeavor to the best of my ability to perform the duties appertaining to the office.
Yours most obedient,
C. CRABB.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ST. DAVID'S WARD.
At the request of my friends in the Ward I have consented to stand as a candidate for Councillor in St. David's Ward.
I am, gentlemen,
Yours very truly
1818. C. A. HUMBER.

ELECTORS OF ST. DAVID'S WARD.
FELLOW RATEPAYERS.—In compliance with the nomination as Councillor, I have consented to stand as a candidate for the office. I have no objection to say but little. I am one of yourselves. My interests are yours. During many years, I have acted as a Councillor, and you have had an opportunity of testing my ability and willingness to promote the interests of the town. I am "only a working-man." It is my class who make a town or country. As a labourer in the great industrial field, I ask the support of my fellow-ratepayers. I may not have a continuance of custom. He can personally solicit your votes all the same. I should you elect me. I shall support that which is for the benefit of the whole town, not forgetting the "noble ward of St. David's."
Respectfully yours,
LEWIS ELLIOTT.
St. David's Ward, Dec. 21, 1881. 1819.

CARD.

The subscriber desires to thank the numerous friends and customers for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon him during the past two months, and also to apologize to those who were not able to properly last Saturday, as the extraordinary rush of business during that day made it quite impossible for us to attend to them as we would have wished. Hoping all have spent a merry Christmas, and wishing one and all a happy and prosperous New Year.
JAMES IMRIE,
Successor to T. J. Moorhouse.

Morton; Rvr., E. Graham; G. H. Bell; L. W. M. Crossman; O. J. W. McCallum. Representative to Grand Lodge, W. R. Miller.

The following is a corrected list of the junior division of St. David's ward school: St. David's Ward, Junior division, Miss Watson, teacher; No. on roll 76. Present 67. Promoted 13. Promoted in order of merit, A. Addison, W. Whitley, W. Clucas, R. Breckenridge, W. McIntosh, J. Edwards, D. Yule, S. Wilson, H. Noble, B. Ellis, K. Russell, S. Keag, A. Bruce.

LAST BOAT RACE OF 1881.—On Monday afternoon last, an interesting event took place on the usual course, between our well-known local scullers, Geo. B. Cox and W. Gooding, which was certainly a novelty at this time of the year. The pair started for a row over the course and on reaching the International salt-works, they decided to make the home-ward mile a race for the oysters. The finish was so close that, in the absence of a referee, it was decided to toss up, and Cox was elected by acclamation to foot the bill. Time not taken, but unusually fine.

KENNEDY TO-NIGHT.—Reserved seats for the Kennedy family concert can be obtained at Imrie's.
Do not vote for the man who insults your judgment by personally begging your vote, and who considers his opportunity to be of greater value than your intelligence.
SHIPMENT.—On Thursday Messrs. Buchanan, Lawson & Robinson shipped a carload of ceiling lumber to Crystal City, Manitoba. Mr. Thos. Greenway was the purchaser.
INSTALLATION.—The following officers were installed on Tuesday evening last, by Maitland Lodge, No. 112 A. F. & A. M.:—V. W. Bro. R. Radcliffe, W. M.; Bro. Wm. Craig, J.; Bro. W. H. Murray, Chap.; Bro. C. A. Humber, Secy.; F. F. Lawrence, Treas.; Wm. Phillips, S. D.; Robt. Rhynas, J. D.; John McArthur, Q. G.; Bro. M. McPhail, T.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.—The Christmas services, morning and evening, at St. George's Church, were well attended. The church was tastefully decorated, and the special musical services under the leadership of Miss Bertha Trainer, the organist, were of a pleasing nature. The sermons of the day bore upon the circumstances of the birth of the Saviour, and were listened to with the closest attention. The offerings at both services were of a substantial nature.

CHRISTMAS TREE.—The Christmas Tree entertainment in the M. E. Church, of this place, came off on Friday evening last. When the hour arrived for the opening of the programme, the benediction of the Church was well filled. The exercises of the evening commenced by singing, by the school, and prayer by the Pastor, who then took the chair. Miss Lettie Papp presided at the organ with her usual ability. The recitations, readings, dialogues, and music, were all interesting and well rendered, which showed that considerable time and attention had been given by those who took part. The audience was cheered by the presence of Mr. D. McGillivuddy of THE SIGNAL, who gave a short address. After this part of the programme was ended, the audience repaired to the upper part of the Church, where a beautiful tree stood well laden with useful presents, which were soon stripped to the entire satisfaction of the recipients. All through the entertainment was interesting and profitable.—Com.

COUNTY CONNECTION.—The Seaforth Expositor says: The people of the town of Stratford voted on a by-law on Saturday last providing for the separation of the town from county jurisdiction. There was a very large vote polled, but the by-law was defeated, by a majority of 41. Stratford being the county town, a different result could scarcely be expected. Now that the County of Huron has given up the maintenance of the county roads, it is nothing in the pockets of the ratepayers of Seaforth for this town to remain under the paternal care of the county. This year we pay $784 in county rate, and all we receive in return is the boundary line appropriation, $42, and the High School grant, about $49, making a total of $385. It will thus be seen that we pay $102 for the honor of sending two representatives to the county board. Were it not for the grant we receive for our High School, it would pay as well to follow the example of St. Marys and other towns and secure a divorce from the county, and set up on our own hook. It would be well for County Councillors to cherish this fact in memory and deal leniently with Seaforth in the future.

Masonic Banquet.
The members of Maitland Lodge No. 112, Arch. Lodge No. 33, after the installation of their officers on Tuesday last, met at the Park House to celebrate the natal day of Masonry, it being the feast of St. John the Evangelist. Their were also present a number of brethren from Bennille Lodge, and a number of cozzen visitors. The spread was an excellent one, and did credit to the proprietors of the Park House. The chair was occupied by W. Bro. H. Cooke, and V. W. Bro. Radcliffe did the honors in the vice chair. After suitable remarks on the anniversary by the chairman, the following toasts were proposed and duly responded to:
The Queen—"God Save the Queen."
The Craft—"Coupled with the names of the Grand Master and officers of the Grand Lodge—V. W. Bro. Radcliffe."
The Prince of Wales and Royal Family.
The Governor-General—"For He's a jolly good fellow."
The President of the United States—Bro. D. Crane.

The visiting Brethren—P. M. Bro. Robertson, P. M. Bro. Wilson, Bro. Malcolm, Bro. Morton, Bro. R. H. Clucas.
Our Visiting Friends.—Mr. F. W. Johnston, song and encore by Mr. D. McGillivuddy, reply by Mr. Alex. McGaw, and song and encore by Mr. H. Clucas.
Newly Installed Officers—W. Bro. Cooke, Bro. J. Robertson, Bro. W. Rhynas, C. A. Humber, G. Swanson, Jo. Beck.
Song.—Mr. R. A. Williams.
The Marine Interests.—Song by Bro. Green.
The Press.—Bro. Mitchell and D. McGillivuddy.
The Ladies.—Mr. F. W. Johnston.
The Host.—Capt. G. W. McGregor.
The gathering separated at a seasonable hour. "Happy to meet; sorry to part, happy to meet again."

Christmas Day at St. Peter's.
The Grand Mass at St. Peter's on Christmas day was celebrated by the Pastor Rev. Father Waters at 10.30 a.m. The day being so Easter-like, the congregation was very large. The Church was beautifully decorated with evergreens interspersed with flowers, which were gracefully fastened above the altar and between the aisles, entwining the pillars and in front of the gallery. The walls were hung with mottoes suitable for the day, artistically framed with sprigs of cedar. The Altar itself looked lovely, a handsome scroll, with numberless waxlight candles, of evergreen, were suspended from the arches over the sanctuary. A most notable and pleasing feature was the very large number of altar boys, twenty-four, who were dressed with precision and who attended to the duties of their office with great attention. The groto at the left of the Altar was very natural, also the surrounding. The choir sang well, as usual, under their leader, Miss A. Doyle, organist. Mr. Robinson kindly gave his assistance, which he always does on grand occasions. His solo in the "Adeste fideles" which was sung before the "A sperges" was entoned, was particularly fine. The choir sang "St. Clair's Arie" and the "Gloria" and "Credo" from Lambillottes mass. At the Offertory "Pastores" Lambillottes Christmas Hymn, was sung. Miss Robinson doing full justice to the solo part. The hymn "Hark the Herald Angels sing" was given at the Elevation, Miss Lizzy Doyle singing the solo part in an appreciable manner. The sermon was a very pathetic homily, given by the Rev. Father McGauran on the gospel for the grand feast of Christmas, being an exhortation to the congregation to take the beautiful lesson of humanity, given them by the infant Jesus, whose name the heart of every good Christian would melt as a model for their future lives, and for ever remember that the mission of infant Jesus on earth was to become their Saviour and Redeemer. Father McGauran's sermon are always brief and concise, speaking from heart to heart and are always received with great pleasure by the congregation of St. Peter's.
Solemn vespers and benediction were given at 7 p. m.
There was also a mass at seven o'clock a. m. with appropriate hymns, followed by another immediately after. The offertory amounted to $350, and was given to Father Waters.

School Board Nominations.
The nominations for school trustees for 1882 and 1883 took place in the Central school on Wednesday at noon. The attendance was small, the average number of ratepayers from each of the four wards was not over three. It seemed at one time as if no person would put in an appearance from St. George's ward, but finally a mover popped quietly in, whispered his candidate's name, and as quietly withdrew. The opinion of all present was that as now practical the election of school trustees is a farce. The retiring trustees were all re-elected, with the exception of Mr. H. Cooke, who declined to stand. The following are the names of the persons nominated, with their movers and seconders:
ST. ANDREW'S WARD.
A. McGaw, moved by E. Hopper, seconded by John Bain; elected by acclamation.
ST. PATRICK'S WARD.
John Pasmore, moved by John Bates, seconded by T. McGillivuddy; elected by acclamation.
ST. GEORGE'S WARD.
Malcolm Nicholson, moved by Capt. McLeod, seconded by W. Campbell; elected by acclamation.
ST. DAVID'S WARD.
John Butler, moved by Robt. Gordon, seconded by H. Hale.
W. R. Robertson, moved by R. Graham, seconded by R. McLeod.

The Bank Circular.

Ottawa, December 22.—The following is the text of the circular issued by the Finance Minister, concerning which Mr. Buchanan, the General Manager of the Bank of Montreal, has been in consultation to-day:—
The Finance Minister, at the request of Treasury Board, has directed the following returns under the authority of the Act 43 Vic., chap. 22, sec. 40, to be furnished immediately to this department and marked private and confidential.

- 1. Returns of notes and bills discounted overdue and not specially secured, with names of endorsers, together with all details thereof.
2. Returns of notes and other debts secured by real estate, or by deposit of or lien on stock or other securities, and all details thereof.
3. Other assets not included under the foregoing heads.
4. Advances on which stocks or bonds of corporation, Dominion, Provincial, British, or foreign public securities other than Canadian are held as securities.
5. The name of every head clerk, transfer clerk, and clerks generally employed in the Bank of Montreal and the branches thereof, and his duties.
6. The name of every employee of the bank either in Montreal or branches, who holds personally or in trust bank stocks which are held as collateral or otherwise by the bank on which advances have been made.

John Ploughman's Proverbs.

Never offer a looking-glass to a blind man.
If a man is so proud that he will not see his faults, he will only quarrel with you for pointing them out to him.
Many preachers are good tailors spoiled, and capital shoemakers turned out of proper calling.
It is not wise to aim at impossibilities; it is a waste of powder to fire at the man in the moon.

Why he Wouldn't Trust Him.

A printer recently walked into a certain business house on his rounds to learn who desired anything in the way of advertisements, and noticed that a drummer stood by the counter with his sample valises ready to open.
'Anything you want to say in the paper this week?' enquired the printer at the man behind the counter.
'No,' said the business man; 'I don't believe in advertising; I wouldn't give a cent for any amount of advertising.'

Whoooping Cough.

From P. Guite, formerly Proprietor of the Courier de St. Jacques, Canada.
Several months since my daughter, ten years of age, was taken with whooping cough in a very aggravated form, and nothing we could do for her seemed in any way to relieve her suffering. We at length decided to try a bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In three hours after she had commenced using it, she was greatly relieved, and in less than three days she was entirely cured, and is now well. I have since recommended the Balsam to many of my neighbors, who have used it, and in no case have I known it to fail of afflicting

SEE KNEW BETTER.

Why she was not a Marrying Girl.
They were seated together, side by side, on a sofa, in the most approved lover fashion—his arm encircling her waist, &c.
'Lizzie,' he said, 'you must have read my heart ere this; you must know how dearly I love you.'
'Yes, Fred, you have certainly been very attentive,' said Lizzie.
'But Lizzie, darling, do you love me? Will you be my wife?'
'Your wife, Fred! Of all things; no! No, indeed, nor any one else!'
'Lizzie, what do you mean?'
'Just what I say, Fred. I've two married sisters.'

'So people say; but I wouldn't like to stand in either May's or Nell's shoes, that's all.'
'Lizzie you astonish me.'
'Look here, Fred; I've had over twenty-five sleigh-rides this winter, thanks to you and my other gentleman friends.'
Fred winced a little here, whether at the remembrance of that unpaid livery bill, or the idea of Lizzie sleighing with her other gentleman friends, I cannot positively answer.
'How many do you think my sisters have had! Not the sign of one, either of them. Such pretty girls as May and Nell were, too! and so much attention as they used to have!'
'Now, Lizzie—'

'I am fond of going to the theatre occasionally, as well as a lecture or concert sometimes, and I shouldn't like it if I proposed attending any such entertainment to be invariably told that times were hard and my husband couldn't afford it, and then to have him sneak off alone.'
'And then, if once in a dog's age he did condescend to go with me anywhere in the evening, I shouldn't like to be left to pick my way along the slippery places at the risk of breaking my neck, he walking along unconsciously by my side. I'm of a dependent, clinging nature, and I need the protection of a strong arm.'

'Lizzie, this is all nonsense.'
'I'm the youngest in our family, and I know it would break my heart to have my husband vent all his ill-temper which he conceals from the world on my defenceless head.'
'But, Lizzie, I promise you that I—'

'O yes, Fred; I know what you are going to say—that you will be different; but May and Nell have told me time and again that no better husbands than their's ever lived. No, Fred; as a lover you are just perfect, and I shall hate awfully to give you up. Still, if you are bent on marrying, there are plenty of girls who have no married sisters, or who are not wise enough to profit by their example if they have. And don't fret about me, for I've no doubt I can find some one to take your place.'

Why he Wouldn't Trust Him.

A printer recently walked into a certain business house on his rounds to learn who desired anything in the way of advertisements, and noticed that a drummer stood by the counter with his sample valises ready to open.
'Anything you want to say in the paper this week?' enquired the printer at the man behind the counter.
'No,' said the business man; 'I don't believe in advertising; I wouldn't give a cent for any amount of advertising.'

The drummer waited until the printer was half way to the door, and slowly taking up his sample valises, remarked:
'Well that lets me out. I do not care to sell on time to any man who in this age does not believe in advertising. I prefer to deal with live men. When I want to strike up a trade with a dead man, I will go to the graveyard and swamp tombstones. Good day, sir.'

Apply flannel saturated with Hager's Yellow Oil and administer the Oil internally on a little sugar as directed on the bottle. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Chills, Lameness, and all flesh wounds. All dealers supply it, price 25 cents.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALM

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brassy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

Ayer's Hair Vigor, FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence. PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical and Analytical Chemists.

Words of Wisdom.

There is no such thing as an easy chair for a discontented man.

You are better employed in drying the tears of others than in shedding your own.

Of all earthly music, that which reaches the furthest into heaven is the beating of a loving heart.

He who is a slave of his own passions is worse governed than Athens was by her thirty tyrants.

The best capital for young men to start with in life is industry, good sense, courage and the fear of God. It is better than all the credit or cash that was ever raised.

A true friend unobscures freely, advises justly, assists readily, adventures boldly, takes all patiently, defends courageously, and continues a friend unchangeably.

If you would be exempt from uneasiness, do nothing which you know or suspect is wrong; and if you wish to enjoy the purest pleasures, always do everything in your power which is right.

"The better the day, the better the deed," is a bad proverb as it runs; but read it backwards, as wizards undo charms, and it is a capital saying—the better the deed, the better the day.

COURAGE IN EVERY-DAY LIFE.—Have the courage to discharge a debt while you have the money in your pocket. Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet it. Have the courage to speak your mind when it is necessary you should do so, and to hold your tongue when it is prudent you should do so.

Have the courage to speak to a friend in a "seedy" coat, even though you are in company with a rich one and richly attired. Have the courage to make a will and a just one. Have the courage to tell a man why you do not lend him your money. Have the courage to show that you respect honesty in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonest duplicity, by whomsoever exhibited. Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones. Have the courage to obey your Maker at the risk of being ridiculed by men. Have the courage to prefer comfort and prosperity to fashion in all things.

How Girls Can Learn to be Housekeepers.—Begin with your own things and your own place. That is what your mother will tell you if you rush to her, enthusiastic with great intentions, and offer to relieve her of half her housekeeping. Don't draw that little bucket of cold water to have poured back upon your early zeal. Reform your upper bureau-drawer; relieve your closet-peg of their accumulation of garments out of use a month or two ago. Institute a clear and cheerful order in the midst of which you can daily move; and learn to keep it. Use yourself to the beautiful—which is the right—disposing of things as you handle them; so that it will be a part of your toilet to dress yourself; leaving the draperies you take off as lightly and artistically hung, or as delicately folded and placed, as the skirts you lay carefully to wear, or the ribbons and lace you put with a soft neatness about your throat. Cherish your instincts of taste and fitness in every little thing that you have about you. Let it grow impossible to you to put down so much as a pin-box where it will disturb the orderly and pleasant grouping of your dressing-table; or to stick your pins in your cushion, even at all sorts of tipsy and uncomfortable inclinations. This will not make you "fussy"—it is that thing that does that; the not knowing, except by direct experiment, what is harmony and the intangible grace of relation. Once get your knowledge beyond study, and turn it into feet—which is literally having it at your fingers' ends, as I told you,—and order will breathe about you, and grace evolve from commonest things, and uses and belongings, wherever you may be; and "putting things to rights" will not be separate task-work and trouble, any more than it is in the working of the solar system. It will go on all the time, and with a continual pleasure.

Take upon yourself gradually,—for the sake of getting them in hand in like manner, if for no other need,—all the cares that belong to your own small territory of home. Get together things for use in these cares. Have your little wash-cloths and your sponges for bits of cleaning; your furniture-brush and your feather duster, and your light little broom and your whisk and pan; your bottle of sweet oil and spirits of turpentine, and piece of flannel, to preserve the polish, or restore the gloss, where dark wood grows dim or gets spotted. Find out, by following your surely growing sense of thoroughness and niceness, the best and readiest way of keeping all fresh about you. I shall not lay down rules or a system for you. When you have made yourself mistress of what you can learn and do in your own department, so that it is easier and more natural for you to do it than to let it alone,—so that you don't count the time it takes any more than that which you have to give to your own bathing and hair-dressing,—then you will have learned enough to keep a whole house, so far as its cleanly ordering is concerned.—St. Nicholas, August.

There is no doubt that our Canadian climate is conducive to Lung affections, and for this reason Dr. Carson's Pulmonary Cough Drops should be in every house. For Colds, and all other Lung and Throat affections they have no equal. In large bottles at 50 cents. Geo. Rhyms, Agent for Goderich.

One bright June morning in 1822, on the steep road which stretches across the moors to Keighly, the sound of wheels is heard, mingled with the merry speech and laughter of fresh, young voices. Shall we go forward unseen and study the approaching travellers? Their conveyance is a rickety dog-cart, and the horse, freshly taken from the fields, is driven by a youth, who, in spite of his country dress, is no mere bumpkin. His shock of red hair hangs down in front, and the lad's face is a handsome and striking one, full of Celtic fire and good humor. Branvell Bronte esteems himself a genius and a poet. How gaily he jokes with his three sisters; and with what delight he attempts feats of chivalry which fill the timid hearts of the party with sudden terrors!

Beside him sits Charlotte in a dress of marvellous plainness and ugliness, stamped with the brand "home-made," in characters which none can mistake. She talks and smiles, and is enjoying most of all the charm of her brother's society. Behind observe Emily with her wonderful eyes, brilliant and fathomless, and radiant with tenderness. She is quick to note the songs of the birds, the brilliancy of the flowered hedges. Next to her is Anna, who meets her brother's careless flood of words with opposing currents of speech. She has a fine complexion and delicate features, but is unfortunately clad in a dress exactly resembling Charlotte's. This is the one least considered of the sisters, but whose life exemplifies fervent piety and self-sacrificing courage.

Gaze at them as they pass you in the quiet road, and in spite of rough exteriors, a happier four could hardly be met with during a long summer's day.

The vote on the by-law separating the town of Stratford from the county of Perth, submitted to the electors on Saturday, Dec. 17th, resulted in the defeat of the by-law by a majority of 41. Several meetings were held, and much interest was taken. Stratford, therefore, remains true to the county for some time yet.

A company is being organized in Winnipeg, with a capital of $10,000 for the purpose of canning and shipping frogs to Eastern cities, where they are in great demand. Large canning houses will be built early in the spring in the vicinity of the town of Whittemouth, on the Canadian Pacific Railway east.

"Must say it's the nicest thing I ever used for the teeth and breath," says everyone having tried "TEABERRY."

The Cedars of Lebanon.—The cedars, which still bear their ancient name, stand mostly upon four small conical knolls, within a compass of less than forty rods in diameter. They form a thick forest, without underbrush. The older trees have several trunks, and thus spread themselves widely around; but most of the others are cone-like in form, and do not throw out their boughs laterally to any great extent. Some few trees stand alone especially, on the south, is large and very beautiful. With this exception, none of the trees came up to my ideal of the graceful beauty of the cedar of Lebanon, such as I had formerly seen it in the Jardin des Plantes. Some of the older trees are already much broken, and will soon be wholly destroyed. The fashion in now coming into vogue to have articles made of this wood for sale to travellers; and it is also burned as fuel by the few people that here pass the summer. These causes of destruction, are nevertheless sure. Add to this the circumstance that travellers in former years to say nothing of the present time have been shameless enough to cause large spots to be hewn on the trunks of some of the noblest trees, in order to inscribe their names. The two earliest which I saw were Frenchmen; one was dated 1791. The wood of the Lebanon cedar is white, with a pleasant but not strong odor, and bears no comparison, in beauty or fragrance, with the common red cedar of America.

A Lady's Experience.—Mrs. T. A. Gist, No. 1204 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I had inflammatory rheumatism very badly. In one foot and ankle it seemed to have taken hold with the determination to stay some time; and the morning I obtained the St. Jacobs Oil I could not put my foot down to the floor, even for an instant. I used it that evening for the first time, and the next morning for the second time, and that afternoon put my foot down for several minutes. On Sunday following I could stand up and walk a few steps. On Tuesday could walk about my room, and went down stairs by holding on to the banisters. Now I can walk quite well, and there is very little pain left. Just think! one bottle and a half and I am almost free from pain. It is a wonderful medicine."

A Vexed Clergyman.—Even the patience of Job would be completely exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial bottles given at your drug store.

Free of Cost.—All persons wishing to test the merits of a great remedy—one that will positively cure Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs—are requested to call at your drug store and get a trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, free of cost, which will show you what a regular dollar-size bottle will do.

There is no such thing as an easy chair for a discontented man. You are better employed in drying the tears of others than in shedding your own. Of all earthly music, that which reaches the furthest into heaven is the beating of a loving heart.

The Stranger.

One bright June morning in 1822, on the steep road which stretches across the moors to Keighly, the sound of wheels is heard, mingled with the merry speech and laughter of fresh, young voices. Shall we go forward unseen and study the approaching travellers? Their conveyance is a rickety dog-cart, and the horse, freshly taken from the fields, is driven by a youth, who, in spite of his country dress, is no mere bumpkin. His shock of red hair hangs down in front, and the lad's face is a handsome and striking one, full of Celtic fire and good humor. Branvell Bronte esteems himself a genius and a poet. How gaily he jokes with his three sisters; and with what delight he attempts feats of chivalry which fill the timid hearts of the party with sudden terrors!

Beside him sits Charlotte in a dress of marvellous plainness and ugliness, stamped with the brand "home-made," in characters which none can mistake. She talks and smiles, and is enjoying most of all the charm of her brother's society. Behind observe Emily with her wonderful eyes, brilliant and fathomless, and radiant with tenderness. She is quick to note the songs of the birds, the brilliancy of the flowered hedges. Next to her is Anna, who meets her brother's careless flood of words with opposing currents of speech. She has a fine complexion and delicate features, but is unfortunately clad in a dress exactly resembling Charlotte's. This is the one least considered of the sisters, but whose life exemplifies fervent piety and self-sacrificing courage.

Gaze at them as they pass you in the quiet road, and in spite of rough exteriors, a happier four could hardly be met with during a long summer's day.

The vote on the by-law separating the town of Stratford from the county of Perth, submitted to the electors on Saturday, Dec. 17th, resulted in the defeat of the by-law by a majority of 41. Several meetings were held, and much interest was taken. Stratford, therefore, remains true to the county for some time yet.

A company is being organized in Winnipeg, with a capital of $10,000 for the purpose of canning and shipping frogs to Eastern cities, where they are in great demand. Large canning houses will be built early in the spring in the vicinity of the town of Whittemouth, on the Canadian Pacific Railway east.

"Must say it's the nicest thing I ever used for the teeth and breath," says everyone having tried "TEABERRY."

The Cedars of Lebanon.—The cedars, which still bear their ancient name, stand mostly upon four small conical knolls, within a compass of less than forty rods in diameter. They form a thick forest, without underbrush. The older trees have several trunks, and thus spread themselves widely around; but most of the others are cone-like in form, and do not throw out their boughs laterally to any great extent. Some few trees stand alone especially, on the south, is large and very beautiful. With this exception, none of the trees came up to my ideal of the graceful beauty of the cedar of Lebanon, such as I had formerly seen it in the Jardin des Plantes. Some of the older trees are already much broken, and will soon be wholly destroyed. The fashion in now coming into vogue to have articles made of this wood for sale to travellers; and it is also burned as fuel by the few people that here pass the summer. These causes of destruction, are nevertheless sure. Add to this the circumstance that travellers in former years to say nothing of the present time have been shameless enough to cause large spots to be hewn on the trunks of some of the noblest trees, in order to inscribe their names. The two earliest which I saw were Frenchmen; one was dated 1791. The wood of the Lebanon cedar is white, with a pleasant but not strong odor, and bears no comparison, in beauty or fragrance, with the common red cedar of America.

A Lady's Experience.—Mrs. T. A. Gist, No. 1204 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I had inflammatory rheumatism very badly. In one foot and ankle it seemed to have taken hold with the determination to stay some time; and the morning I obtained the St. Jacobs Oil I could not put my foot down to the floor, even for an instant. I used it that evening for the first time, and the next morning for the second time, and that afternoon put my foot down for several minutes. On Sunday following I could stand up and walk a few steps. On Tuesday could walk about my room, and went down stairs by holding on to the banisters. Now I can walk quite well, and there is very little pain left. Just think! one bottle and a half and I am almost free from pain. It is a wonderful medicine."

A Vexed Clergyman.—Even the patience of Job would be completely exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial bottles given at your drug store.

Free of Cost.—All persons wishing to test the merits of a great remedy—one that will positively cure Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs—are requested to call at your drug store and get a trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, free of cost, which will show you what a regular dollar-size bottle will do.

Winthrop.

OBITUARY.—It is our painful duty to record the death of Mr. Hyman Tyeerman, who resided near Winthrop, on lot 19, con. 9, McKillop township. He was a man considerably advanced in years, being about 69 years old, and always lived a quiet and peaceful life among his many neighbors. He was a native of Yorkshire, England, and came to this country about 30 years ago, settling in McKillop when it was but a wilderness. During that time he made for himself many friends, who greatly sympathized with the large family he has left in their affliction. About two months ago the deceased endured a loss of about $4,000 in the shape of his barn and contents being destroyed by fire. He caught cold and inflammation settled on his lungs, and not having procured medical aid till too late, death followed. He was a consistent member of the Methodist church. He who rules above thought best to take him out of this world of trial and weal and place him in a better world. He had buried the present city at Bolton's Corner yesterday, when his remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of friends.

What to Study.—Pope, the poetical philosopher said, "The proper study of mankind is man," and yet, how little is the real science of man studied. If people understood and heeded the laws of health, and if when out of sorts would resort to a common sense like Burdock Blood Bitters, many of the "ills that flesh is heir to" might be effectually remedied. It invigorates and regulates all the secretions to a healthy action.

Mr. Charles Stewart, formerly of Guelph, left for Winnipeg about six years ago and secured about 15 acres of land near the present city at Bolton's Corner yesterday, when his remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of friends.

A great many people are troubled with cold feet, which is invariably caused by a sluggish circulation of the blood. A few doses of Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters will soon produce a free circulation of the blood and Stimulate and Tone the system. Sold in large bottles at 50 cents. Geo. Rhyms agent for Goderich.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1881.

THE 1ST DEPUTY REEVESHIP.

Perhaps the most important contest for municipal office now before the electors of Goderich, is that between Messrs. Williams and Campbell for the 1st Deputy Reeveship. At the nomination meeting on Monday last, the electors who were present had a fair opportunity afforded them of gauging the merits of the candidates, and a perusal of the report of the proceedings in another column of this issue, will give an idea of the calibre of the two men to whose lot had not the privilege of being present at the meeting.

Mr. Campbell, who spoke first on that occasion, and who beyond question, exceeded all his previous platform utterances, so far as fluency was concerned, gave a record of his stewardship during the past year. In his remarks he did not fail to do justice to himself as a public servant, but he overdid his work slightly when he claimed almost all the credit for many of the benefits which had accrued to the ratepayers. In reference to the reduction in the rate of taxation, the efforts to obtain a County House of Refuge, the getting the vote through on the iron bridge, obtaining better securities from the town officials, and creating a town surplus in 1877 (which he said had dwindled away during his absence from the Council Board), the impression created was that there was no need for any other person to be elected to the Town or County Council but the speaker. Even Mr. Johnston's able assistance during the past year was ignored, but perhaps that was done because our worthy Reeve had sounded "his own praises" loudly and stoutly almost immediately before. "I did it, gentlemen, and don't forget it," seemed to stand out boldly in his utterances upon public matters, and it seemed almost a pleasure to learn that one vote in a gathering of sixteen in our Town Council, and one voice in a meeting of forty-seven in the County Council was so all-powerful and potent of influence.

But there are many in town who know the working of the County Council and the guiding of the Town Council during 1881 were not wholly and solely in the hands of Mr. Campbell. Good men and true occupied seats at the two Councils, before Mr. Campbell was a member of either, and other good men and true will occupy seats as members, even after Mr. Campbell will have been placed on the retired list; and the wheels of the machinery of either the Town or County Council will not cease to turn should it so happen that Mr. Campbell be not elected on the present occasion. That gentleman makes an average Councillor, but even in the Goderich Town Council of 1881, there were fully a dozen equal to him as a Councillor, and some far superior.

Of the superior men, none stands out more conspicuously than Mr. Joseph Williams. A man of sound judgment, ripe experience, progressive views, literary culture, high morals and thoroughly consistent in all his doings, this gentleman was, soon after the meeting of the Council of 1881, looked upon as being in the front rank of the solid members of the Board. Some may say that we are erring on the side of flattery, but all who heard Mr. Campbell speak of Mr. Williams at the nomination will admit that the praise accorded the latter by the former was fully as strong as the above, and "Praise from Sir Hubert is praise indeed." If Mr. Campbell speaks of Mr. Williams while privately prosecuting the canvass as well as he did at nomination, and the people want a good man and a sterling man to occupy a public position, then Mr. Williams will assuredly be their man. If, on the other hand, Mr. Campbell, during his canvassing tour, misrepresents the gentleman who is opposing him, then his public utterances will rise in judgment against him, and he should be deemed unfit to occupy the position. But we believe Mr. Campbell was honest in his expression of admiration for the abilities of Mr. Williams. And on the recommendation of Mr. Campbell we claim that Mr. Williams is a fit man for the position, and should be elected.

We have given our opinion of Mr. Williams as a suitable man for the office of 1st Deputy Reeve of Goderich; in another column will be found Mr. Campbell's opinion of Mr. Williams, delivered on Monday; and where friend and opponent alike accord praise, what reason can exist why any voter should censure Mr. Williams by casting an adverse ballot? We hope Mr. Campbell will endorse his utterances regarding Mr. Williams' fitness for office, by voting for that gentleman on Monday next, and we ask from the "free and independent" electors that hearty support which should always be accorded to an upright and honorable man, and a man fit for position—and Mr. Campbell has said that Mr. Joseph Williams is that man.

GUTEAU on Wednesday indulged in one of his boisterous outbreaks, when Judge Cox ordered him to be removed to the prisoner's dock. The assassin whined and begged for a stronger guard, as his new position in the Court House was so exposed that he might easily be shot. The Judge stated that the latitude heretofore allowed Guitau was part of the plan of the prosecution, as the experts had a chance to study the prisoner. Hereafter the voluble and impudent fellow will be treated as an ordinary criminal.

"I would not like to see Mr. Williams left out of the Council."—Wm. Campbell.

THE Christmas week of 1881 will long be remembered for its mildness. The thinnest scum of ice had not been formed on the harbor, and on December 27th the steamer "Despatch," from Georgian Bay, entered port by moonlight in weather as mild as that of the latter part of an ordinary September. The singing of birds, the highway cow nibbling the green grass growing on the side streets, and the cheerful clacking of the hens laying their Easter (?) eggs, assert the mildness of the season. The weather prophets have all come to grief.

"Mr. Williams has been one of our best members, and I hope he will get a seat in the Council."—Wm. Campbell.

THE NOMINATIONS.

The Men who are Willing to Sacrifice Themselves in the Public Interest.

Facing the Music in the Town Hall—Speeches by Mayor Horton, Reeve Johnston, and Messrs. Campbell and Williams.

A large and enthusiastic gathering of electors was held at the Town Hall on Monday morning last at 10 o'clock, on the occasion of the nomination of candidates for the mayoralty, reeveship, and 1st and 2nd deputy reeveship of Goderich. Mr. E. F. Moore, Town Clerk, occupied the position of Returning Officer on the occasion, to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. The following nominations were made:

FOR MAYOR. Horace Horton, was proposed by R. W. McKenzie, seconded by S. Platt, and elected by acclamation.

REEVE. F. W. Johnston, proposed by J. T. Garrow, seconded by Chas. A. Nairn, and elected by acclamation.

1st DEPUTY REEVE. W. Campbell, proposed by E. Campion, seconded by S. Platt.

2nd DEPUTY REEVE. Joseph Williams, proposed by S. H. Malcolmson, seconded by A. Morton.

M. Hutchison, proposed by S. Malcolmson, seconded by W. G. Smith.

At the call of the electors, Mr. Horton ascended the platform, and began to address the electors, by stating that the Lieut-Governor had proclaimed the day a public holiday, and thereby given the electors an opportunity of taking an active interest in the nomination of candidates. Not much of a public character had transpired during the past year. The Council had endeavored to work economically and in the best interests of the town, and the financial position of the town was kept in good shape. He would not enter into details on the question of finance, as the chairman of the Finance committee would have an opportunity of addressing the electors before the present meeting closed. During the year the question of water-works had come before the Council and a committee had been struck to look into the matter. The committee, in the discharge of their duties, had visited several places for the purpose of obtaining practical information on the subject, and, amongst others, the city of Toronto. The Mayor of Toronto had acted courteously toward them and had placed the city engineer at their service, so that full and free information could be obtained. About this time the railway question loomed up, and at a public meeting held in the Town Hall, the latter question was given precedence, and the water-works committee, with added members, was empowered to take steps toward bringing in a competitive line to Goderich. The committee had attended outside meetings with this object in view, and Goderich had been prominently before the Province as an objective railway point and important lake outlet. However the existing complications in railway matters generally had militated against the successful adoption of a feasible scheme, although at the present time the committee had more than one under contemplation. The scheme from the south, with which they had identified themselves at Exeter, was one which was confidently spoken of by the promoters at St. Marys, and would be a valuable acquisition to the town. But perhaps the best connection to seek would be by direct route to the seaboard, and if, by any possibility, connection with such a road could be formed, our harbor business could be fostered, and made to bear good results. An opportunity of connecting with the G. W. R., at Clinton was even now visible, and if that line became connected with the Toronto and Ottawa, and thence to the seaboard, that road would be the most important connection for Goderich to ally itself with. The waterworks would have to stand second to the railway question, for although water-works and gas-works were looked upon as self-sustaining institutions, the revenue which they drew in was only another method of taxing the people. In a growing town both these latter would be important factors, but as Goderich had unfortunately, not progressed as much as its inhabitants would have liked during the past few years, these systems were perhaps a little in advance of its absolute requirements, and it would be only prudent for the people to bite the bullet. The working of the Council during the past year had been of a most harmonious nature. He thanked the Council of 1881 for the assistance they had given him in carrying on the public business, for in all his long municipal experience he had never witnessed so much unanimity of feeling in the interest of the town, as had been evinced during the past year. True, Goderich had not made great advancement, nevertheless she had been singularly free from calamities of a serious nature, and her people had many blessings to thank Providence for. He concluded by wishing the ratepayers a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

Mr. F. W. Johnston was the next speaker, and he said that it was always necessary for councillors whose terms were expiring, and who were desirous to explain their position and defend their actions of the past year. In the first place, he would return thanks to the public if he was returned by acclamation, for he understood that on this occasion he was not likely to be opposed. He referred briefly to the waterworks agitation, and then took up the railway question, which he said was a matter of deep interest to the people of Goderich. He had attended the meetings at Exeter and Brussels, as a delegate from Goderich, and with the other delegates, had endeavored to keep in view the interests of Goderich. The G. W. R. had sent up a representative and in conversation we found out that the cost of the connection between Goderich and Clinton would probably be $240,000, exclusive of deep interest to the people of Goderich. He had a large sum of money, but if any suitable road offered to give us a competitive line, we must have a railway. At the present time we hardly knew the position of the G. W. R., but if the C. P. R. Syndicate could be brought to connect one of their branches at Goderich, and give competition to the seaboard, we must be prepared to seize the opportunity. We must not relax our efforts, and we must not be built in a day, and railway projects required time to mature. During the past season the Minister of Public Works had visited Goderich and had been lavishly received by the town representatives, irrespective of party politics. The result of the Minister's visit had been that plans and specifications had been prepared by the Government Engineer, which would prove of considerable importance to the welfare of the town. The plans and specifications for the proposed improvements could be seen in the clerk's office. The speaker here read a letter from Sir Hector Langevin, bearing on the subject. Continuing, he said that he had been four times deputy-reeve and once reeve, and had only been opposed twice, which showed that the people appreciated his services. In the County Council, he was on not be built in a day, and railway projects required time to mature. That Lass o' Lowrie's

A STORY OF THE MINES. BY FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

"No," she answered, "it is no. The woman heaved a sigh of relief. 'I thought it was na,' she said. 'I told th' Maxeys as I did na believe it when they browt th' tale to me. They're powerful fond o' tale-bearin,' that Maxey lot."

Joan stopp'd in her play with the child. "They dunot understand," she said, "that's aw. I ha' learned to think different, an' believe i' things as I did na used to believe in. Happen that's what they mean by talkin' o' th' Methodys."

People learned no more of the matter than this. They felt that in some way Joan Lowrie had separated herself from their ranks, but they found it troublesome to work their way to any more definite conclusion.

"Hast heard about that lass o' Lowrie's?" they said to one another, 'hoos' taken a new turn sin' Lowrie deed; hoo allus wur a queer-loike, high-handed wench."

After Lowrie's death, Anice Barholm and Joan were often together than ever. What had at first been friendship had gradually become affection.

"I think," Anice said to Grace, "that Joan must go away from here and find a new life."

"That is the only way," he answered. "In this old one there's been nothing but misery, sorrow, and bitterness and pain."

Fergus Derrick was sitting at the table turning over a book of engravings. He looked up sharply.

"Where can you find a new life for her?" he asked. "And how can you help her to it? One dare not offer her even a semblance of assistance."

They had not spoken to him; but he had heard, as he always heard, everything connected with Joan Lowrie. He was always restless and eager where she was concerned. All intercourse between them seemed to be at an end. Without appearing to make any effort to do so, she kept out of his path. Try as he might, he could not reach her. At last it had come to this: he was no longer dallying upon the brink of a great and dangerous passion, — it had overwhelmed him.

"One cannot even approach her," he said again.

Anice regarded him with a shade of pity in her face.

"The time is coming when it will not be so," she said.

The night before, Joan Lowrie had spent an hour with her. She had come in on her way from her work, before going to Thwaite's, and had knelt down upon the hearth-stone to warm herself. There had been no light in the room but that of the fire, and its glow, falling upon her face, had revealed to Anice something like languidness.

"Joan," she said, "are you ill?"

Joan stared a little uneasily, but did not look at Anice as she answered.

"No, I am nae ill; I never wur ill i' my life."

"Then," said Anice, "what — what is it that I see in your face?"

There was a momentary tremor of the finely moulded chin.

"I am tired," Joan answered. "That's aw, an' I ha' na fell upon her lap."

Anice turned to the fire.

"What is it?" she said, almost in a whisper.

Joan looked up at her, not defiant, not bitter, and she simply in appeal against her own despair.

"I want there a woman's place for me i' th' world? Is it all to be this way wi' me? Can I never reach no higher, strive as I will, pray as I will — fur I have prayed. Is na there a woman's place for me i' th' world?"

"Yes," said Anice, "I am sure there is."

"I've thought as their minn be some-where. Sometimes I've felt sure as there's a place for them minn be, an' then again I've been best to see that I ha' almost gien it up. If there is such a place for me, I must find it. I must."

"You will find it," said Anice, "some day, surely."

Anice thought of all this again when she glanced at Derrick. Derrick was more than usually disturbed to-day. He had for some time been watching his way to an important decision, fraught with some importance and anxiety to himself. There was to be a meeting of the owners in a few weeks, and at this meeting he had determined to take a firm stand.

"The longer I remain in my present position, the more fully I am convinced of the danger constantly threatening me," he said to Anice. "I am convinced that the present system of furnaces is the cause of more explosions than are generally attributed to it. The mine here is a fiery one, as they call it, and yet day after day goes by, and no precautions are taken. There are poor fellows working under me whose existence means bread to helpless women and children. I hold their lives in trust, and if I am not allowed to place one frail barrier between them and sudden death, I will lead them into peril no longer — I will resign my position. At least, I can do that."

The men under him worked with a dull, heavy dazing, born of long use and a knowledge of their own helplessness against their fate. There was not one among them who did not know that in going down the shaft to his labour, he might be leaving the light of day behind him for ever. But seeing the blue sky vanish from sight thus during six days of fifty-two weeks in the year engendered a kind of hard indifference. Explosions had occurred, and might occur again; dead men had been carried up to be stretched on the green earth — men crushed out of all semblance to humanity. Some of themselves bore the marks of terrible maiming; but it was an old story, and they had learned to face the same hazard recklessly.

With Fergus Derrick, however, it was a different matter. It was he who must lead these men into new fields of danger.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The last time came, before many days, when the tie that bound Joan Lowrie to her present life was broken. The little one, who from the first had clung to existence with a frail hold, at last loosened its weak grasp. It had been ill for several days — so ill that Joan had remained at home to nurse it — and one night, sitting with it upon her knee in her accustomed place she saw a change upon the small face.

It had been moaning continuously, and suddenly the plaintive sound ceased. Joan bent over it. She had been holding the tiny hand as she always did, and at this moment the short fingers closed upon one of her own quietly. She was quite alone, and for an instant there was a deep silence. After her first glance at the tiny creature, she broke this silence herself.

"Little lass," she said in a whisper, "what ails thee? Is thy pain o'er?"

As she looked again at the baby face upturned, as if in silent answer, the truth broke upon her.

Folding her arms around the little form, she laid her head upon its breast, and wept aloud — wept since she had never wept before. Then she laid the child upon a pillow, and covered its face. Liz's last word returned to her with a double force. It had not lived to forget or blame her. Where was Liz to-night, at this hour, when her child was safe?

The next morning, on her way down stairs to the breakfast-room, Anice Barholm was met by a servant.

"The young woman from the mines would like to see you, Miss," said the girl.

"I ha' come to tell yo'," she said, "that th' little un deed at midnight. There wur no one I could ca' in. I set alone wi' it i' th' room aw' th' meet, an' then I left it to come here."

Anice and Thwaite's wife returned home with her. What little there was to be done, they remained to do. But this was scarcely more than to watch her until the pretty baby face was hidden away from human sight.

When all was over, Joan became restless. The presence of the child had saved her from utter desolation, and now that it was gone, the emptiness of the house chilled her. At the last, when her companions were about to leave her, she broke down.

"I canna bear it," she said. "I will go wi' yo'."

Thwaite's wife had proposed before that she should make her home with them; and now, when Mrs. Thwaite returned to Riggan, Joan accompanied her, and the cottage was locked up.

This alteration changed greatly the routine of her life. There were children in the Thwaite household — half a dozen of them — who, having overcome their first awe of her, had learned before the baby died to be fond of Joan. Her handsome face attracted them when they ceased to fear its novelty, and the hard-worked mother said to her neighbors —

"She's gotten a way wi' childer, somehow — that lass o' Lowrie's. Yo' wonder if yo' could see her wi' 'em. She's mony a bit o' help to me."

But as time progressed, Anice Barholm noted the constant presence of that worn look upon her face. Instead of diminishing, it grew and deepened. Even Derrick who met her so rarely, saw it when he passed her in the street.

"She is not ill, is she?" he asked Anice once, abruptly.

Anice shook her head.

"No, she is not ill."

"Then she has some trouble that nobody knows about," he said. "What a beautiful creature she is!" impetuously and low incomprehensibly.

His eyes glanced to meet Anice's, and a dark flush swept over his face. He got up almost immediately after and began to pace the room, as was his habit.

"Next week the crisis will come at the mines," he said. "I wonder how it will end for me?"

"You are still determined?" said Anice.

"Yes, I am still determined. I wish it were over. Perhaps there will be a fate in it," — his voice lowering itself as he added this last sentence.

"A Fate?" said Anice.

"I am growing superstitious and full of fancies," he said. "I do not trust to myself, as I once did. I should like Fate to bear the responsibility of my leaving Riggan or remaining in it."

"And if you leave it?" asked Anice.

"For an instant he paused in his walk with an uncertain air. But he shook this uncertainty off with a visible effort, the next moment.

"If I leave it, I do not think I shall return, and Fate will have settled question for me."

"Don't leave it to Fate," said Anice in a low tone. "Settle it for yourself. It does not — it is not — it looks —"

"It looks cowardly," he interrupted her. "So it does, and so it is. God knows I never felt myself so great a coward before!"

He had paused again. This time he stood before her. The girl's grave, delicate face turned to meet his glance, and seeing it, a thought seemed to strike him.

"Anice," he said, the dark flush rising afresh, "I promised you that if the time should ever come when I needed help that it was possible you might give, I should not be afraid to ask you for it. I am coming to you for help. Not now — some day not far distant. That is why I remind you of the compact."

"I did not need reminding," she said to him.

"I might have known that," he answered, — "I think I did know it. But let us make the compact over again."

She held out her hand to him, and he took it eagerly.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE ENGINEER RESIGNS.

The owners of the Riggan collieries held their meeting. That a person in their employ should differ from them boldly, and condemn their course openly was an extraordinary event; that a young man in the outset of his career should dare so much was unprecedented.

It would be a ruinous thing, they said among themselves, for so young a man to lose so important a position on the very threshold of his professional life, and they were convinced that his knowledge of this would restrain him. But they were astonished to find that it did not.

He brought his plans with him, and laid them before them. They were plans for the abolition of old and dangerous arrangements, for the modification of the condition of the men who labored at the hourly risk of their lives, and for rendering this labour easier.

Specifically, there were plans for a new system of ventilation — proposing the substitution of fans for the long-used pumps. One or two of the younger men leaned toward their adoption. But the men with the greatest influence were older and less prone to the encouragement of novelty.

"It's all nonsense," said one. "Furnaces have been used ever since the mines were opened, and as to the rest — it's all nonsense. They always will complain — they always did."

"So far they have had reason for complaint," remarked Derrick. "As you say, there have been furnaces ever since there have been mines, and as there have also been explosions, which may in many cases be attributed to them. There was an explosion at Brown-ton a month ago which was to some extent a mystery, but there were old miners who understood it well enough. The return air, loaded with gas, had ignited at the furnace, and the result was that forty dead and wounded men were carried by the shaft, to be recognized, when they were recognizable, by mothers, and wives, and children, who depended upon them for their scant food."

Derrick argued his cause well and with spirit, keeping a tight rein upon himself; but when, having exhausted his arguments, he found that he had not advanced his cause, and that it was a settled matter that he should not, he took fire.

"Then, gentlemen," he said, "I have but one resource. I will hold no human life lightly in my hands. I have the honour to tender you my resignation."

There was a dead silence for a moment or so. They had certainly not expected such a result as this. A well-disposed young man, who sat near to Derrick, spoke to him in a rapid undertone.

"My dear fellow," he said, "it will be the ruin of you. For my part, I admire your enthusiasm, but do not be rash."

"A man with a will and a pair of clean hands is not easily ruined," returned Derrick a trifle hoarse. "As to being rash or enthusiastic, I am neither the one nor the other. It is not enthusiasm which moves me, it is a familiarity with stern realities."

When he left the room his fate had been decided. At the end of the week he would have no further occupation in Riggan. He had only two more days' work before him and he had gained the unenviable reputation of being a fire-and-tow young fellow, who was mighty enough to make a martyr of himself.

Under the first street-lamp he met Grace who was evidently making his way home.

"I will go with you," he said, taking his arm.

Once within the walls of the pleaunts little room, he found it easy to unbosom himself. He described his interview with his employers, and its termination.

"A few months ago, I flattered myself that my prospects were improving," he said; "but now it seems that I must begin again, which is not an easy matter, by the way."

By the time he ended, he found his temporary excitement abating somewhat, but still his mood was by no means undisturbed.

It was after they had had finished tea and the arm-chairs had been drawn to the fire that Grace himself made a revelation.

"When you met me to-night, I was returning from a visit I had paid to Joan Lowrie."

"At Thwaite's?" said Derrick.

"At Thwaite's. She — the fact is I went on business — she has determined to change her plan of life."

"In what manner?"

"She is to work no more at the mines. I am happy to say what I have been able to find her other employment."

There was an interval of silence, at length broken by Derrick.

"Grace," he said, "can you tell me why she decided upon such a course?"

Grace looked at him with questioning surprise.

"I can tell you what she said to me on the subject," he replied. "She said it was no woman's work, and she was tired of it."

"She is not the woman to do anything without a motive," mused Derrick.

"No," returned the curate.

A moment later, as if by one impulse, their eyes met. Grace started as if he had been stung. Derrick simply flushed.

"What is it?" he asked.

"I — I do not think I understand," Grace faltered. "Surely I am blundering."

"Nay," said Derrick gloomily. "You cannot blunder since you know the truth. You did not fancy that my feeling was so trivial that I could have conquered it so soon? Joan Lowrie —"

"Joan Lowrie?"

Grace's voice had broken in upon him with a startled sound.

The two men regarded each other in mutual bewilderment. Then again Derrick was the first to speak.

"Grace," he said, "you have misunderstood me."

Grace answered him with a visible tremor.

"It is not to your love for Joan Lowrie I referred when you spoke to me of your trouble some months ago, I have misunderstood you. If the obstacles you meant were the obstacles you would find in the path of such a love, I have misunderstood you. If you did not mean that your heart had been stirred by a feeling your generous friendship caused you to regard as unjust to me, I have misunderstood you miserably."

"My dear fellow," Derrick exclaimed, with some emotion, "my dear fellow, do you mean to tell me that you imagined I referred to Miss Barholm?"

"I was sure of it," was Grace's agitated reply. "As I said before, I have misunderstood you miserably."

"And yet you had no word of blame for me?"

"I had no right to blame you. I had not lost what I believed you won. It had never been mine. It was a mistake," he added, endeavoring to steady himself. "But don't mind me, Derrick. Let us try to set it right; only I am afraid you will have to begin again."

Derrick drew a heavy breath. He took up a paper-knife from the table, and began to bend it in his hands.

"Yes," he said, "we shall have to begin again. And it is told in a few words," he said with a deliberateness almost painful in its suggestion of an intense effort at self-control. "Grace, what would you think of a man who found himself setting reason at defiance, and in spite of all obstacles confronting the possibility of loving and marrying — if she can be won — such a woman as Joan Lowrie?"

"You are putting me in a difficult position," Paul answered. "If he would dare so much, he would be the man to dare to decide for himself."

Derrick tossed the paper-knife aside.

connected with Joan. Now and then she had puzzled and startled him, but here, possibly, might be a solution of the mystery.

"And Joan Lowrie herself?" he asked, ed, questioning.

"Joan Lowrie herself," said Derrick, "is no nearer to me to-day than she was a year ago."

"Are you" — hesitatingly — "are you quite sure of that?"

The words had escaped his lips in spite of himself.

The Old Scotch Woman's Faith.

By the side of the rippling brook, one of the relictions of Scotland, there stands a low, mud-thatched cottage, with its neat, honeysuckle bush facing the south.

By her bedside, on a small table, lay her well-thumbed Bible, her "barrel and cruse" as she called it, from which she daily, way hourly spiritually fed on the Bread of Life.

One day the young minister put to the happy saint the following startling question: "Now Nanny," he said, "what if, after all your prayers, and watching, God would suffer your soul to be eternally lost?"

Pious Nanny raised herself on her elbow, and turning to him with a wistful look, laid her right hand on her "precious Bible," which lay open before her, and quietly replied: "Ah dearie me, is that a' the length ye hae got, mon?"

And then continued, her eyes sparkling with almost heavenly brightness, "God would have the greatest loss. Puiry Nanny would lose her soul, and that would be a great loss indeed, but God would lose his honor and his character. Haven't I hung my soul upon His 'exceeding great and precious promises'?"

No article ever attained such boundless popularity in so short a time as Baddock Blood Bitters, and that too during the existence of countless numbers of widely advertised bitters and blood purifiers.

The United States Treasury Department.

Hon. Thomas B. Price, U. S. Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., U. S. A., recommends Dr. J. C. Jacobs Oil as the most wonderful pain-relieving and healing remedy in the world.

It is at the head of the list for all purposes of a family medicine. It is used with unprejudiced success, both internally and externally.

The most reliable remedy for a cough or cold, asthma, shortness of breath, sore throat, weak lungs and all bronchial troubles, is Dr. J. C. Jacobs' Asthma Balm.

We call the special attention of postmasters and subscribers to the following synopsis of the newspaper laws:

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning a paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it be taken from the office or not.

3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
