CHAPTER XXXIV.

"Oh, I would not, indeed," cried Sydney, shrinking from intrusion. "I you think this will not be wanted for ten days more, I will be gone before it is dismantled."

With that last word her voice quivered. It was difficult calmly to discuss these last relics of her father dear old Jacob's treasures, being dispersed.

"Ah, I'll answer now," said Miss Ambler. "You'd like a little some thing out of here as a keepsake like of poor Mr. Cheene, wouldn't you miss? Now, if you'd choose anything I'd see it was bought for you if things are sold."

She had no storing place for aught. Her very capital she would not count her own. "It must be something small, indeed," she said, looking round. "This, if I could have it," taking up a well-used writing-case, one from the office at Stuart's, Jacob had told her.

"Then that I'll get for you, miss," promised the landlady, shaking the dust off the cover. "Ah, deary me he always wrote upon it. I saw him that very day—"

Sydney turned the much-blotted pages over. A sheet with some three written lines slipped out. The words were to herself:

"My own dear Miss Sydney,—I told you once pleasure never killed; but when I think I shall see you here soon for your holiday, and then—"

That was all. Sydney folded the uncompleted message with reverent affection, thankfulness in her breast that no knowledge of her new troubles had dimmed the gladness of his last hours. "Yes, the old case I shall like best," she said, and Miss Ambler, delighted at securing her pale lodger's interest for anything, talked freely on of Jacob and his great kindness, "which nobody, Miss Grey, knew the value of better than myself, for many's the time hunger and me would have shook hands if it hadn't been for him. I've paid the last respects to more than one friend, ah, and relation too, in my black alpaca, but 'no,' said I, 'for Mr. Cheene I'll have merino, and new. I'm not going to walk behind him in a half-worn skirt at tenpence a yard, especially considering there's no one else to follow,—for I didn't know, miss, where you was, nor who—h'm—whether I ought to try and find you out.'"

"Who will attend to everything here, then?" Sydney asked. "Had Jacob no relative, no one who understood such business?"

"Relative, no miss. There were a many Cheenes once in Stillcote, but he has told me he was the last. As for business, I don't suppose he's left much to attend to; but a stranger, I think, will manage that little."

"No, miss. But there was one who came to him first last year—later on than this. He was in and out, and they did a deal of consulting like for a day or two, what about Mr. Cheene never said. Then he came again since this Easter. And Mr. Cheene must have expected him then, for he'd got a neighbor to step in, and by the by he called to me 'Miss Amelia,' and I stepped up, and he had that very letter-case open and a paper on, and he said, 'I'm lawyer enough to have made my own will, and I want you to witness it.' Which of course we both did; and Mr. Cheene locked it up in the cedar box that stands beside his bed, and said to me, 'There now, it's ready for you to find; and 'o the strange gentleman, 'and for you to act on,' he said. So of course that gentleman will be his executor."

"But should you not send this person word?" questioned Sydney, and was answered truly enough. "When things come so sudden, miss, we are never ready for them! I had never so much as heard his name! But I've a notion the letter that brought good news that morning came from him, for Mr. Cheene locked it up in 'the box with his will, and said to me, 'high spritly like, 'We're going to be say with company soon, Miss Ambler!' So I thought I'd wait the month out, and then if I'd seen nothing of any one I'd just go down with the box and ask our clergyman if he'd open it, and find the gentleman's—'Why, goodness gracious sakes alive!—'Miss Ambler broke off abruptly, starting Sydney, whose attention had been wandering—"Here he does come up the street, and no mistake, and some one along with him! And"—peering out of the window—"they are stopping at this door! Don't you mind, nor flurry yourself, miss. I'll tell him about you, and say Mr. Cheene wouldn't have had you disturbed for the world. Perhaps"—hastily setting chairs at right angles—"you'd like to go to the other room if they wish to come up here? I'll run and stop that stupid Nancy bringing them."

But Miss Ambler was not quick enough. As she opened the door, two people entered from the narrow landing. In an instant three were gazing at one another, all doubting the evidence of their own senses.

"Miss Alwyn!" exclaimed the male intruder. It was Richard Drayton.

"Sydney! Oh, my poor Sydney!" cried the lady beside him, running to catch the wonder-struck girl in her embrace. And the rest of that minute was chaos to them all.

The first to find voice was Miss Ambler. Her wiry little curls were bobbing about, her eyelids ominously red, and her sniffs were frequent; but sentiment must wait its turn, now she must out with a long stifled say:

"Yes, and Miss Alwyn I knew you to be these months past, though I would not vex him that was here by letting out what he didn't see fit to tell me! But when Bridget Lewis, that lived once at Stuart's, still-room maid, and I taught hemstitching to when she was six years old, and has been to see me every time she set foot in Stillcote since, no matter what service she's been in, and knew all about my family's misfortunes with poor Mr. Alwyn as well as I knew hers—when Bridget came two years back and told me she'd been with her mistress, Mr. Massey's lady wife, and seen where Mrs. Alwyn had hid herself, and heard all about Mrs. Alwyn's daughter, that couldn't be made too much of, and Mr. Alwyn, that couldn't be made too little; and when she came again avisting last Michaelmas to Lady Wynne's, and brought word through a house-keeping friend in that Suffolk place that the talk was Miss Alwyn had gone in disgrace for something with her ma, and had gone away that summer; and when I measured that against a young lady I'd never seen before, coming here and crying in Mr. Cheene's room, and then all of us getting paid what Mr. Alwyn owe directly after, why, you don't suppose I was going to be deceived any longer! Miss Alwyn, my dear, I've recollected you morning and night, from then till now, and if the prayer of a retired haberdashery old maid like me can fetch you prosperity, you'll surely get it! While"—ended the grateful old soul, suddenly clapping three golden coins on the table—"as for that money there! I'm proud to have found you with the bird's beakful you've taken, and if I touch a penny-piece for payment my name's not Amelia Ambler!"

With which she seized her neglected dinner-tray and whisked out of the room, leaving the long-separated friends to an afternoon of strange, far-reaching explanations, starting with Mary's marriage, ending with something still more wonderful. For Sydney finding this fortnight-wed pair possessed the secret of her leaving St. Clair, was now forced to tell where and with whom her past twelve months had been spent, and what had cast her loose from Wynstone, sending her to meet at Stillcote-Upton a loss she was so ill-prepared for.

"Jacob had made me feel his home was almost mine," she said, falteringly. "When he went from me—"

"He had taken care it should be quite yours," put in Mr. Drayton. "While he lived I was bound to give no hint of it to any one—not even Mary; but now, as you will hear when I read you his will, he has left you everything he had in the world."

"All my father's things?" cried Sydney. "Oh, dear old Jacob! If you could hear me thank you!"

"Yes, Miss Alwyn; these, and other things that were your father's too."

"He told me he bought nothing else but what—how did he put it?—what would have just gone to light a fire!"

"Ah, so they might then, but not now," returned Richard Drayton, dryly. "You have never asked me yet, Miss Alwyn, how I came to be acquainted with your old clerk, nor what first brought me to Stillcote-Upton."

"I have heard so much: I am so glad to have you here," answered Sydney, laying her hand with a long-drawn sigh on Mary's knee, "I think I scarcely want to know any more yet."

"Just five minutes," pressed Mr. Drayton, his wife giving him leave by a nod. "Best clear all up at once, and get it over. So, to go to first facts, I had a glimmering when I first met you of having heard your name, 'Alwyn.' After a bit I remembered when. It was on some visit of mine to a relative at Stillcote-Upton, who spent a night each week violin playing, with some one so called—"

"My father!"

"As it turns out, yes. You and I never seemed strangers, did we, Miss Alwyn? That old network of intimacy must have had something to do with it. Well, now for the next thing. You remember when I came to England it was to take up a little estate in the south. On that bit of property was a mine. The lease of it had been purchased of my uncle for fifty years. It had been closed sixteen. Was worthless, most folks said. I'd had some training in other mines, examined all I could of this, and thought differently. To see if I was right, I worked with all my money and all my time for fourteen months, for on the mine's value depended my chance of getting through with a scheme I think you understood." Sydney smiled up at Mary. "I found out that mine had been wrecked partly by rascally management. Not the first time that sort of thing has happened. I saw my way clear as daylight to reconstructing a paying concern. I laid my plans accordingly. Went to St. Clair to find you."

"Yes, for it was the same Grand-fyde mine your father had got ruined in. His name headed the old list of share-holders. If you, as his representative, had held the original shares your leave as largest proprietor was required to reforming the business. Well, you were gone; no one knew where, nor could tell why. I was on my way to hunt up Mrs. Alwyn abroad, when I fell in with Major Villiers in town, and told him what I was after. He saved me a fruitless journey, by telling me those same shares had been offered at your father's sale, and amid shouts of laughter had been purchased by a clerk named Cheene. Him I foraged up forthwith. Showed him every single detail I had worked out, and to cut short a long business, which would only puzzle you at present, got his consent and that of the other remaining share-holders, to start the company afresh on a safe footing, myself holding a certain amount of stock, and acting as manager. Success has followed so fast that the shares have gone up without one check, and are still rising. I was able to tell Mr. Cheene, when I saw his last May, that his few shillings' worth of scrip, which he almost saved from the flames, represented now a very respectable fortune. It would bring in, if realized, five-and-twenty thousand pounds to-morrow, Miss Alwyn."

"So, no more companions' places for you, foolish, reckless child that you were," said Mary, stooping fondly over Sydney's dark head, and to his wife's gentle care and caresses Mr. Drayton wisely left this new-made heiress awhile, almost mute in her astonishment.

Bullying the Telephone Girl.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"I've waited five minutes before central even answered me, and five minutes more before she condescended to tell me the line was busy," I heard a man indignantly informing the operator over the telephone. "I heard the other day," I glanced at the clock. He had been at the telephone barely five minutes.

And yet, he is a truthful man and one who means to be just and kind to those who serve him. What is about the telephone which so transforms pleasant, reasonable, truthful people? Is it because the exasperating ringing in one's ear when the line is busy, the wearisome waits, the mistakes and disappointments put one's nerves on edge?

That may have something to do with it, but I'll tell you a bigger factor than that. It is the impersonality of the operator. We don't see her. She doesn't answer back. We scarcely think of her as a human being, and so we dare to visit upon her defenseless head all the irritation her mistakes have caused, and for good measure some of the irritation of the day's disappointment.

If you went into a shop and found all the clerks busy, what would you do? You'd wait your turn, of course, then ask pleasantly for what you wanted and give the clerk a reasonable amount of time to get it. Unless she was remarkably slow you wouldn't think of complaining. And if she made a mistake, you'd probably tell her about it pleasantly enough, no matter how indignant you were inside. That's because you are face to face with her and realize that she is a woman and not an automaton.

They say that some day we shall have an instrument which will bring people face to face just as the telephone brings them ear to ear. When we do, if the telephone girl is also made visible, she will have a much better time of it than she now does.

There are many people whose manners to their business associates, their friends and those who serve them are always suave and agreeable, but who have two outlets for their bad temper. One is their family, the other the telephone girl. Anyone who has belonged to the family of such a man ought to be able to sympathize with the operator.

The other day I visited a hospital which is an institution for nervous wrecks rather than for the bodily ill. I was surprised to see several young girls in such a place. The nurse explained to me that they were telephone operators. I talked with one of them. She told me that the operators frequently suffered nervous breakdown. Their work is confining and it requires constant application. A girl often answers a call every few seconds. She is always under the eye of the supervisor. Furthermore, the abuse she must stand for is trying to the nerves. This girl told me she was frequently called chump, bone-head and idiot, and they were not allowed to answer back.

On the whole, doesn't it seem to you that the telephone operator is the last person with whom you should be impatient, rather than the first.

coached by Mr. L. English. Recitations were given by Masters L. Manning and E.S. Gosse, and a solo by Master W. Ryan. A comic sketch entitled "The Genii" concluded the performance. After the concert a dance and sale of refreshments were held. The proceeds will be in aid of the schools, and at a later date the performance will be repeated for church benefit.

Try Again.

You have, it may be, used ointments, pastes, lotions for Eczema till you begin to get tired of trying things. Well, but you should remember that science is advancing all the time, and that what was not possible yesterday can be accomplished to-day. If you neglect to try Zylex—the newest and best thing that science has yet to offer for the relief and cure of Eczema and other annoying and disfiguring skin diseases—you are missing a great opportunity. It may be that it will cure you. It has cured some very bad cases. Price 50c. a box. Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

Champion Zybko.

Our flags are flying at half mast, and crepe is on our doors; our noblest relics gone at last to distant, alien shores. The wrestler's crown is ours no more, the garland of the wreath; our heads are sore, and we have aching teeth. From Poland's shore there came a gent whose name is but a joke, and our American he bent across his knee and broke. We cannot halt imported beef with him. Like sporting men, till we've recovered from our grief, and got our nerve again. And now to Gotch's sylvan farm, we turn, in our despair; is there no talisman or charm, to lure him from his lair? Is there no way we ask, to drag, the Gotch from his retreat? Will he defend the stary flag, or has he got cold feet? You know how at Jim Jeffries' door we pounded, on a day, when all our hearts were sick and sore, our laurels wrenched away. And Jeffries came to bring them back, a figure grand, sublime; what happened? then—alas! alack! we'll tell some other time. And now all patriots demand that Gotch, the laurels in this land, where surely they belong.

Seven Pictures To-day.

At The Nickel.
The Manager of the Nickel Theatre has no less than seven different subjects in store for patrons to-day. This is one of the longest and best shows ever given in this city, and as the stores close at 6 o'clock this evening everyone will be anxious to attend to-night. "The Bull Fight" is a film which has created considerable interest, but the others are equally as good. Beside a Pathe weekly there will be a Selig drama, "The Old Clerk," another strong dramatic story "Money Not All." There are two fascinating travelogues, and the funniest comedy ever shown: "Faust and the Lily." All who wish to spend an enjoyable time should attend to-day's Nickel. A big holiday programme is being arranged for Wednesday.

Concert at Torbay.

On Thursday, May 21st, an enjoyable concert was held at Torbay by the pupils of St. Michael's Academy. The acting and singing were of a very high order and proved a treat for the audience which on that occasion was a record one. The singers who were trained by Mr. Augustine Thomas, teacher of the junior department, reflected credit on their tutor. The boys of the senior room presented the farce: "Aunt Hannah's Valentine," in which the performers did full justice to their different roles. The different characters were upheld by Masters J. Manning, W. Barron, M. Gosse, E. Gosse, J. Fitzpatrick, V. Bradbury and S. McGrath, who were

The Hyena.

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Sivas."

The Hyena is what Nature has wished upon the unfortunate African as a substitute for the dog. There is a great deal of superfluous love in the world, but there has never been enough to encourage anyone to waste some of it on the hyena. He is generally disliked and his character is aspersed with impunity. He is a cross between a wolf, a dog and a rendering works and has jaws strong enough to masticate a gas pipe with ease. He is as large as a large dog and is very strong in the chest and forelegs, but Nature used up most of her material at this point and finished him off with a short, weak hind legs. She also equipped him with an odor which would have the skunk extremely popular in Africa by comparison.

The hyena has long coarse hair and a stiff mane. He wears the hair along his back pompadour and has stout claws which he uses in lieu of a steam shovel. The hyena can dig a hole in the ground faster than a well-drilling outfit and when a native dies, his sorrowing relatives are not satisfied until they have put a stone which is a little larger than the stoutest hyena, over his grave.

The hyena spends his days hiding in caves and the ruined buildings of an ancient civilization which closed out below coast in Africa several thousand years ago. By night, he roams in packs, eating whatever has just died and making remarks to each other from one hill to another. The hyena has a long, built-in smile and talks in a horrible chuckle which sounds like a high protectionist deploring hard times during a free trade administration. One of the favorite amusements of the African hunter is to steal softly up to an uproarious hyena by moonlight, armed with a huge gun, and to make him laugh out of the other side of his mouth.

Laska.

The Big Feature at the Crescent.

Laska, the much spoken of and advertised big feature two reel Bison pictures is on at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day and it is sufficient to say that this grand subject will be a great attraction, the production from the celebrated poem and should please every lover of motion pictures. "A Man and a Serving Maid," a hypnotic drama, is also a strong number and is followed by the second of the Freckles series entitled: "How Freckles Won His Bride," a very laughable and amusing comedy. Sidney Earnshaw, lyric baritone, is at home in his song "Dear Old Girl." The bill is without exception the best ever presented at the Crescent. Another strong feature is booked for the holiday programme, viz.: "The Saint and the Sinner," and due to arrive shortly a two reel special: "His Own Blood," Edwin August's greatest success. Certainly a feast of pictures beginning with Laska.

Dear Sir,—
I wish to state that I am well satisfied with the results which your Company have given me in connection with my Endowment Policy No. 47,775, which matures on the 17th of March. I find that the returns give me over $424.00 more than I have paid in premiums, in addition to the protection that I have had during the Policy term. I consider this all the more satisfactory taking into account the fact that the dividends were applied as a Bonus every five years. I, therefore, received a return beyond Bank interest, in addition to the protection.

Yours very truly,

The Marconi and Weather Forecasts.

We have already set forth our views as to the value of wireless in preventing such misunderstandings as existed between Capt. Abraham Kean in the Stephano and Capt. Westbury Kean on the Newfoundland, which led to the Newfoundland crew being sent on the venture which proved so disastrous, and which misled both Captains as to the whereabouts of the men during the days of the storm. Wireless would also prove of value in the receiving of the Toronto weather reports, which might well be amplified during the period the sailing steamers are at the ice. The messages would put the captains on their guard and induce them to pay close attention to the barometers on their own ships. We were by no means favourably impressed by much of the evidence that was given at the "Comer's" enquiry either as to the barometer or as to the logging of those readings. It appears to us that statutory directions should be given as to the frequency of the readings and as to the recording of them in the ship's log. With more attention to the barometer, more careful logging of the observations of the weather, and with the guidance of the Toronto forecast, a greater degree of safety to life could be secured. Whatever value can be given to barometric readings and barometric records on the ship it must be remembered that these records of air pressure and changes are those of the immediate vicinity, and storms are the results of difference in air pressures extending over a considerable area, may be that of half a continent or more, and that is where a forecast founded on hundreds of observations over a continent and partly over the ocean, has its supreme value. In such forecasts there is scarcely ten per cent. of errors. That is one reason why we are advocating the installation of wireless on all steamers, the sending of the Toronto forecasts, the more careful observation of the barometer and thermometer and the more frequent logging of the readings and the more careful scanning of the heavens. While risks have to be taken, risks have been taken too recklessly in the past, and the wonder is that there have not been greater fatalities at the ice in the past. The immunity of the past has led to too much recklessness but the disasters of the past spring has caused everybody to pause and ponder over these matters. Seals are valuable, but souls are more precious still, and greater attention must be given to the safety of the latter. Although we have learnt much of the circumstances of the disaster to the sealers of the Newfoundland, no evidence whatever has been taken as to the loss of the Southern Cross with the 173 sealers aboard. It is high time a Commission was appointed. We hear efforts are being made to find men to undertake the work and that it will be appointed within a few days. It is illuminating to learn that Canada will pass special legislation to provide an Enquiry Newfoundland must work in existing powers. No one would tolerate delay for new legislation. Great as is Canada's loss in the St. Lawrence, it is eight times less in proportion to population than that of Newfoundland.

Obituary.

MISS POWER.
Miss Mary Ann Power, sister of Hon. M. Power, passed peacefully away after a short illness on Saturday, fortified by rites of holy church, at her brother's residence, Theatre Hill. The deceased lady was of a kind, gentle and generous disposition, and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She was one of the old stock who are fast giving place to a new generation, and a large circle of friends, particularly of the west end, regret her demise. The funeral will not take place until Tuesday in order that her nephew, Bishop Power, who will arrive by to-day's express may be able to attend the obsequies. The Telegram tenders its sympathy to the Hon. M. Power, His Lordship Bishop Power and other relatives.—R.I.P.

LONDON, To-day.
The Royal Edward arrived at Avonmouth yesterday morning. Passengers and crew were thrown into a state of consternation when they learned the fate of the Empress of Ireland, the more so on account of the thrilling escape which they themselves experienced in the icefields off Cape Race last Saturday in a fog. A large berg was sighted four hundred yards long lying in the water. The Royal Edward's engines were reversed, but an impact being unavoidable the Captain decided to take the shock end on, and the liner escaped with twisted stem and buckled plating instead of meeting disaster. The Royal Edward repairs to the Dry Dock and will miss next week's sailing.

The Irish Medley

Man at Rossly's.
By the s.s. Florizel, Dan Cusack arrived, and he will open his engagement at Rossly's to-night. This performer has a very fine tenor voice and a crowd of the old melodies of Ireland. He is also a very good dancer. He has travelled all over the world and is a great favorite everywhere. Mr. Jack Rossly has gone to New York for a few days to make out contracts for the Lucy Hayes players, dramatic sketch artists, now playing with the Third Degree Co. on Broadway. While there Mr. Rossly will secure the greatest novelty before the public to-day. Mr. Dan Cusack was for many years with the Four Irish Major's Quartette. To-night there will also be presented "His Squaw," a beautiful Indian feature in two reels with other two pictures featuring Maurice Costello and other star artists.

Here and There.

EMPLOYERS MEET THE LONG SHOREMEN.—The Employers will meet the Longshoremen to-morrow night.
"KINTAIL" OUT OF KILTER.—The F.P.C. steamer Kintail was on her way to Bonavista from North Sydney with a cargo of coal on Saturday when her high pressure cylinder cover was blown off and she was obliged to make this port for repairs, which is now being effected.
MONGOLIAN ARRIVES.—The Albanian liner Mongolian, 5 days from Philadelphia, arrived yesterday morning with 9 bags of mail, 300 tons of cargo and those passengers: Mrs. Goodwin and child, Miss Whitten, Mrs. Weeks, and child, Mr. Bradshaw, Mrs. Bradshaw and Miss Snow.
SENTENCED.—Ayre & Sons water man was on Saturday sentenced to six months imprisonment with hard labor without the option of a fine, and his accomplice, the planter, to six months imprisonment with the option of $100 fine, which was paid.
NEW BARBER SHOP.—Today Joseph Courtney, our well known barber, opened a new tonorial parlor on Water Street, opposite St. Chaplin's, the tailor. The new store is one of the best equipped in the city. Mr. C. is one of our most enterprising young business men, is an artist in his profession and we hope for him a liberal share of public patronage.

Brigades on Parade.

The C. C. C., headed by their brass band, and in command of Lt.-Col. Conroy, attended High Mass at St. Patrick's Church yesterday morning, after which they paraded through some of the principal streets before returning to their hall. The excellent marching of the battalion elicited favorable comments as did also the music discoursed by the band, under the direction of Lieut. Bulley.

Lecture on Socialism.

At the monthly meeting of the Star of the Sea Society held yesterday, the Rev. Dr. Greene delivered a very interesting lecture on Socialism. The Rev. lecturer dealt with the question from the standpoint of the workman and also the capitalist. He explained the position of the Catholic Church on the labor question and read from Pope Leo's Encyclical, Rerum Novarum, showing the rights, duties and obligations of organized labor to their employers and also the duties of employers towards those associated with them in the introduction of wealth.
An appreciation of the lecture of Dr. Greene was expressed by the President of the Society, who congratulated the members for the great interest displayed by the Rev. Doctor in the literary work of the Society.

Here and There.

EXPRESS.—The incoming express with the Invermore's passengers, is due in the city about 8 p.m. to-day.
CONINGSBY DOCKED.—The S.S. Coningsby is now on the Dry Dock receiving repairs to her stern gland.
S. S. A. MEETING.—The Star of Sea Association held its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon when several new members joined and some amendments to the rules were adopted.
EARL OF DEVON SAILS.—The S.S. Earl of Devon is now loading freight at the Newfoundland Produce Co's wharf and will sail at noon to-morrow making a trip in the Fogo Mail Service, replacing the S.S. Pogota which is still ashore at Musgrave.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferers and also thankfulness for the personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected. An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?
BLOCKING THE HARBOR.—At present there is a flotilla of ships in the harbor and the Customs authorities are complaining of the salt steamer Nest which has six crews around her taking sail. She is blocking the fairway and this morning was a great hindrance to the Florizel in berthing.
LINTROSE HERE.—The S.S. Lintrose, Capt. Jacob Kean, arrived here from Port aux Basques at 5.50 p.m. yesterday, having made the run from there in 27 hours. She will enter the dock for a general overhauling, and her service is being performed by the two masts now lying on Cabot Strait in conjunction with the Bruce.

Here and There.

By Helen Hessong Fuesle

"Whom God Hath Joined Together"

"I cut a clipping out of this morning's newspaper which I know will interest you, my dear."
"What is it, Mrs. Lily?" inquired Marian, motioning her visitor to a chair. The latter, the angular childless gossip-loving magazine subscription canvasser who sat at Marian's table at the boarding house, had been altogether too persistent and frequent a caller at Miss Winthrop's door of late. To Marian, this creature seemed to be the embodiment of everything she detested about a boarding house.

"It's about the prevalence of divorce," smiled Mrs. Lily. "A United States Senator from the South, I see, proposes an amendment to the constitution, prohibiting divorce entirely with the right to re-marry," she added with a tone of obnoxious triumph in her voice.

"A brilliant idea, I'm sure," rejoined Marian ironically.
"But why not, my dear?" argued the other. "I'm sure few of us realize the extent of the evil." Here Marian conquered an impulse to protest against the term "evil" and resolved to let her visitor go on unchecked, in order the quicker to get rid of her.

"Did you know that more divorces are granted in the United States than in all the rest of Christendom combined?" pursued Mrs. Lily ruthlessly. "Listen what this senator says: 'Divorce is spreading with alarming rapidity. It has permeated every walk of life, and every class of people. The total number of divorces granted in 1867 was 27 for every 100,000 of population, while in 1906 there were 86 for every 100,000 of population. At this rate, before the middle of this century, we shall have annually in the United States 275 divorces for every 100,000 of population, or one divorce for every five marriages.' Isn't it perfectly shocking?"

Marian bit her lip. "Well, what do you want me to do," she said coldly. "Draw you a diagram showing the reasons why I got my divorce?"
"Why no. It isn't any of my affair, you know. I surely didn't mean it personally," purred Mrs. Lily.
"Oh, didn't you? That's very sweet of you, I'm sure," returned Marian just as softly, thinking it best to hide her resentment behind soft words. "But really divorce statistics and glittering generalities about what they call the divorce evil don't interest me at all. To me, it's a purely personal proposition in every case. As long as we permit easy marriages, we've got to permit easy divorce. But it does seem to me that since society makes getting married the aim and end of a woman's life, her business so to speak, it ought to set up a few safeguards before allowing her to make the matrimonial plunge. Why, the state makes it more difficult to form a business partnership than to form a matrimonial partnership! Ridiculous! loes!"

A sanctified look overspread the countenance of Mrs. Lily. "Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder," she retorted.

"As long as we permit easy marriage, we must permit easy divorce," says Marian.

"That's ridiculous! If you'll pardon me," shot back Marian. "What is easier, and at the same time sillier, than for human beings to blame their mistakes upon God? I think it's the height of sacrilege. It's the argument of religious fanaticism. And it doesn't grow out of a worship of God either. It grows out of a man's blind egotistical idea of what God is, which he then proceeds to worship. In every other phase of life, progress and righteousness are based upon the effort to correct mistakes, and make amends. Why shouldn't the same rule of action be applied to marriage?"

Mrs. Lily could think of nothing to reply. So she changed the subject, and soon she glided with cat-like motion, and a purred farewell, to the door.

"I rather think I settled her," mused Marian with a smile.
"To-morrow, A Hunting Subject."

NEWS BY CABLE.

MONTREAL, May 30.
When the steamer Empress of Ireland was rammed off Father Point yesterday morning, she carried to the bottom of the Gulf with her, not only the hopes of many bereaved families, but also a fortune amounting to over $1,000,000 in silver bullion bars, from the Cobalt mines, which were being shipped to London. The bullion was contained in 163 bars, and was in two packages, aggregating $275,000 and $824,000 respectively. There is but little doubt that efforts will be made to recover it. The C.P.R. values the Empress at $2,000,000, her cargo $250,000 and with the bullion the total loss is $2,250,000, this exclusive of personal values carried by passengers.

DETROIT, Mich., May 30.
About 300 passengers on the Empress of Ireland were booked from here, most of them foreigners and former employees of the Ford Motor Co., who were recently laid off because of the approaching slack season in the automobile trade.

OTTAWA, May 30.
In order to provide for a wider investigation into the wreck of the Empress of Ireland, than is possible under present departmental machinery, the Government will introduce legislation authorizing the appointment of a specially constituted Commission of three members, one of them to be appointed by the Imperial Government, who will be the judge of evidence and have special experience in Admiralty cases. The Bill will probably be introduced Monday. While this tribunal is being constituted now to meet this exceptional case, it will be a permanent commission to enquire into cases of extreme gravity. In the present case its duty will be to investigate and report upon the cause or causes of the present disaster and make such presentation as the commission deems advisable for the prevention of similar accidents in the future. The enquiry will therefore resemble in most respects the investigation held after the loss of the Titanic, by Lord Mersey in England.

MONTREAL, May 30.
With her bows crumpled in and twisted around at an acute angle to port and a gaping rent showing on the port side, but a foot or so above the waterline, in mute evidence of the tragedy in which she had figured, the Norwegian collier Storstad limped into harbor early this p.m. A few minutes later a warrant of arrest taken out by the C.P.R. was hailed to her mainmast by order of W. Simpson Walker, K.C., Registrar of the Quebec Admiralty Court. "By what authority do you come on board my ship and place it under arrest?" asked Captain Andresen. "By the authority of the British Empire," curtly replied the Deputy Sheriff. "No sooner was the vessel moored than the work of unloading her cargo of 11,000 tons of coal was started."

MONTREAL, May 30.
Not since the foundering of the Titanic have Lloyd's underwriters sustained such heavy losses. The Empress of Ireland was insured in the city for $1,400,000, in addition to which must be considered her cargo, variously estimated to be worth around $250,000. At first it was considered very unlikely that the Empress of Ireland should founder in 14 minutes, and re-insurance was effected at two guineas per cent, which shows how wholly Lloyds disbelieved the report at first. As it became certain news the rate was raised to fifty guineas per cent, and as a final confirmation came in the ship became un-insurable. The closing price for re-insurance on the Storstad was 60 guineas per cent, and re-insurance on the Storstad became impossible early in the afternoon.

MONTREAL, May 30.
The crippled Norwegian collier Storstad arrived at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Capt. Andresen and other officers refused to say anything. The officers of the Cherbourg Co. said the captain would first tell his story at the inquiry.

We know who he will buy it for? But who will he buy it from? Hundreds of Engagements and Weddings are sealed yearly in Newfoundland with Trappell's Solid Gold Rings. Hundreds of friendships and tokens of affection to sweetheart, wife, mother, sister and friend are embodied in lasting embrace with Trappell's Rings, the popularity of which is based upon their quality, finish and variety and beauty of design. Rings for men, women, baby and miss for every occasion. Gem Rings, Chased Rings, Signet Rings, Birthday Rings. ### Large Market and Provision Store

ESTABLISHED ON BELL ISLAND.
Bell Island Co-Operative Co. Open for Business.

The Bell Island Co-Operative Company—a concern recently capitalized amongst the residents and working class of Bell Island—has opened its doors to the public and will conduct an up-to-date meat and fish market, where meats and fish will always be on hand, together with all fruits and vegetables in season; while provisions and groceries of all descriptions will be kept in stock. In taking this forward step the promoters of this concern are doing much for Bell Island where such a market was badly needed. Mr. Michael Sweeney, well known in St. John's as butcher with the firm of Connolly, has been secured as meat-cutter for this concern while the store will be under the management of Mr. Samuel Lodge. We understand that this Company has a representative and financial backing, and going into this business on such a large scale will no doubt capture much of the trade of the Island. A special delivery van where fish and meat will be kept on ice until the article has been delivered at the door of the purchaser has been secured. The premises is located at the Mines near the plant of the D. I. & S. Co.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office—its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland. ad17.1f

Becker Guilty of Murder.

Jury Decide Verdict on First Ballot—His Counsel Will Make an Effort to Secure an Appeal.

New York, May 23.—On the first ballot yesterday, former Police Lieut. Becker was found guilty of murder in the first degree for the murder of Herman Rosenthal. The ballot was taken almost immediately after the jurors returned from lunch at an uptown hotel, where they went as soon as Supreme Court Justice Seabury finished his charge. It was unanimous for conviction.
They had agreed that the corroboration which the District Attorney failed to present at the first trial to support the stories of Rose, Vallon and Webber, the three accomplices who turned informers, had been furnished by the new witnesses at the second.
Becker and his wife were talking shortly before 5 o'clock in a room adjoining the Sheriff's office, when a court attendant announced that the jury had reached a verdict and that Becker's presence was required at the bar. Becker kissed his wife and left her.

"It's all right," he told her. "Don't worry, I will free me."
Becker walked briskly to the rail, facing Justice Seabury, and gripped it with both hands.
Clerk Penney asked the jury to rise. "Foreman," he said, "have you reached a verdict?" Blagden, a young man, blonde and slim, brushed his eyes with a handkerchief, already damp. "We have," he said, softly. "We find the defendant guilty as charged in the indictment—guilty of murder in the first degree."
Becker's face was grey as he gripped the bar in front of him with all his strength. The big muscles in his neck jumped out in heavy rolls. The veins at his temples swelled. His great frame swayed and dropped, then with quick control he became himself again.
Becker stood motionless while the usual questions were being put to the jurors. Immediately upon their conclusion the clerk began to take Becker's pedigree.
Becker's counsel announced that he would appeal, and gained until May 29th for the preparation of his future campaign.
The whole proceedings from the time Becker was pronounced guilty until a recess was declared, occupied scarcely four minutes.

The defendant was granted a short meeting with his wife. Her brother had advised her of the verdict; she collapsed completely, and was still sobbing when her husband was led into the room. She threw her arms around his neck and buried her face on his shoulders. "Oh," she cried, "Charlie, I'm so sorry, so sorry. I did not expect it." She could say no more. Becker stood looking down at her as she wept.

Handcuffs were then locked around his wrists; he was taken to the other side of the building across the Bridge of Sighs and into the Tombs.

Potomac Will Dock.

The U. S. Tug Potomac which put into Curling last week, reached Port au Basques at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon and from there will likely come on here for the necessary repairs. As far as can be ascertained, the hull of the steamer is intact, and her machinery is in perfect running order. The crew who boarded her and brought her to safety will receive a rich salvage award.

Having decided to retire from business I am prepared to sell, as a going concern, my well known business, City Club Building. A splendid business, neither worn-out nor on the wane, but in a more flourishing condition to-day than ever. The chance of a lifetime for some one to form a limited liability concern. # 1,000 People Hurlled Into Eternity!

ONLY THREE CHILDREN WERE ON THE TRAIN THAT BROUGHT THE SURVIVORS IN—ONE LITTLE GIRL WHOSE FATHER AND MOTHER ARE DROWNED, SAYS, "OH, I SAVED MYSELF."

Montreal, May 29.—There was a touch of gloom on the part of the people of Montreal all day, especially those who had friends on the Empress of Ireland, when the list of rescued passengers. The C.P.R. handed out a list at 10:30 to-night, showing that 1,022 people had gone down to death, and 355 had been saved, as stated.

A very touching re-union was witnessed by the survivors at Rimouski when Mr. and Mrs. Greenaway, of Toronto, who were married about a week ago, met. They became separated and each, believing the other lost in the stampede after the collision, was disconsolate until their re-union took place in a house in Rimouski where the young husband found his bride in a feeble condition.

Conversation with some of the passengers of the ill-fated steamer, reveals the terrible suddenness with which hundreds of human beings were launched into eternity. All tell practically the same story—story of bewilderment at the unexpected shock which many took to be the grinding of the keel of the Empress on an iceberg or on a hidden rock. Then in a few moments the listing seemed to be the terrible tragic affair, the beautiful Empress began to list. For a few moments the listing seemed to cease and many thought the vessel was righting itself. But it was not so. Soon the ship made its last fatal plunge to the bottom of the sea, taking with it a load of precious lives. Most of the passengers were asleep at the time in their berths. They could not realize that there was any danger, and many turned over in their berths and commenced to go to sleep again. But soon they were aroused from their quiet by the sudden listing of the vessel, the Canadian waters, only to find that they were too late to get out of their berths much less reach a safe place in the lifeboats.

Of the Canadian Salvation Army Band that went on board to the sound of "God Be with You till we Meet Again," sung by their comrades at the dock at Quebec—a band of thirty-nine—only nine remain to tell the unhappy story. There were many tragic events, and all can barely be recorded. Few of the passengers can yet realize what they went through in so short a time. Only in the weeks that are to come will they realize the fullness of the tragedy which eclipses the Titanic disaster in that the passengers this time, had not even half an hour to make their escape. In less time than it takes to tell it, the trim Empress with her beautiful lines was at the bottom of the St. Lawrence, which she has ridden so proudly and so successfully for 50 many years.

The nine survivors of the Salvation Army band are a sorrowful party. They have the sympathy of all their comrades. Ernest H. Greenaway, of the band, lost his father, Adjutant Harry Green, and his mother and sister Jessie, and is now the only remaining member of the band. H. Measures, another member of the band, residing at 72 Withrow Avenue, goes to his place of abode at Toronto alone, while both Major Findlay and his wife were drowned.

Just about a week ago Thomas Greenaway was married in Ontario. With his bride he was going to England to take part in the International Salvation Army Convention, to be held there shortly. Accompanying the bride party was the groom's brother, Herbert Greenaway. Strange as it may seem, all three were saved. Five of the well known band of the army rescued were A. Keith, Kenneth McIntyre, an American from New York, Frank Brooks, Captain Spooner and Captain Wilson. These are all that remain of the band.

Further, the wreck crippled the organization of the army in Canada. Many of the leaders from the Army in Canada went to a watery grave. The financial secretary of the organization, Scott Potter, was drowned. The editorial staff of the War Star was almost completely wiped out, only one member of the leaders of the paper remaining, and for the reason that he stayed behind in Toronto.

Very few children were saved. On the train that brought the survivors to this city there were only three children to be seen. Many were drowned. One of the really wonderful rescues was that of the little eight-year-old Grace Hanagan, daughter of the bandmaster of the Salvation Army band. Her father and mother were both drowned and the little girl coming up on the train thinks that both her father and mother will join her again, coming on the next boat.

When asked how she was saved she replied: "Oh, I saved myself." The little child with her hair in braids down her back, was entirely unconcerned, apparently not realizing what she had been through. She had no life belt, and when thrown from the doomed ship she had nothing to keep her afloat. She sank and when she came up she saw a piece of floating wood and grasped it. Then the little girl was pulled into a life boat by the strong arms of a man. The cold water and the chilly air benumbed her to the point of exhaustion. Kind hands were soon at work, however, and the child soon revived.

Major Attwell, of Toronto, and his wife were among the saved. They tell a fairly graphic story of how they managed to escape from the vessel. "I got," said the Major, "a lifebelt" for my wife and we both jumped in the water together when we saw that the vessel was doomed to go down. We both went down three times, being carried under by the water, which was, however, not very great. When we came up the third time I saw a lifeboat near and to it I swam, pulling my wife and her mother. Then those in the boat pulled us in and we were saved."

"The impact," continued the major, "was such that the Salvation Army sounded as if the boat had struck a dock. It was very slight, and I was surprised when I afterwards came to realize the awful consequences of the crash. When we got on the deck there was very few persons to be seen. In fact, the people on deck were so few they were hardly noticeable. The reason for this is that when the boat listed to one side the stairs from the sleeping apartments up to the boat decks were very difficult, almost impossible to mount. They seemed to be going every way, and excited women and men were entirely unable to mount them to possible safety. "I did not mount the stairs," continued the major, "but I did see the water pouring in volumes that threatened to drown us before we could mount the stairs."

K. A. McIntyre was in the second cabin with most of the Salvation Army passengers. He tells a vivid story of his own experiences and of what he saw as he swam to safety.

"Practically every leading officer of the Salvation Army in Canada," he said, "is gone, save for four or five who are left. Commissioner Rees and his wife and three children went down with him. I saw only one survivor. And out of our Salvation party of nearly 150 on board, probably less than twenty were saved."

"I was on the upper deck and therefore had a better chance to get to safety than those in the lower berths. The water came in through the port holes and the lower decks, and those passengers realized their danger or that there was any danger at all. I was aroused from my sleep by the impact and looked at my watch. Then I awakened the others in the cabin with myself. I could then hear plainly the rush of water, and I felt sure that something serious had happened. I also heard the running of the machinery, and I saw the lights. I did not stop immediately after the crash, but continued until the explosion. I at once grabbed a lifebelt and swam to the deck. There were no lifebelts to be found, and there was quite a number of people on the deck, apparently unable to determine what to do. They had no belts and I saw many of them trying to get on one of our party. I tied the belt on her myself. My three comrades went to the bottom. I swam in the direction of the lower deck, and I saw the water and I was pulled into a lifeboat of the collier. Then I saw her all lit up and light flashed from the darkness over the comparatively calm river from all the portholes. There was also a red light visible on the coal steamer.

"When I was taken on board the ship I saw many men rescued practically unclothed. I was almost in a state of nakedness myself and the rest of those on board was shivering and in a bad state from the chilly water of the river and the morning air.

"We were soon, however, attended to by those on board and made warm and comfortable. "I swam through the icy waters I saw the explosion caused by the sinking ship. I was then swimming on my back and saw the white smoke of steam that spread to all parts of the vessel. The noise was a dull sound and it was the beginning of the end, for shortly after the sudden and quick listing of the line was followed by a final turning over. It looked to me as if the liner turned turtle.

"I do not think there were any first class passengers saved. I saw only one of the first class boats lowered. "The weather was practically calm and there was plenty of light on the water when I came out from my cabin. When I got on deck I saw no fog. I thought at first that we had hit a rock. Some officers of the vessel came along and said that the ship would not go any further, for bottom had been struck. So far as I was concerned it might have been either an iceberg or a submerged rock.

"The water was terribly cold. The behavior of the crew was on the whole, good though it must be said that the crew hardly had time to collect themselves or to effect rescue in any systematic way. The boat was really sinking before the crew or anybody else realized it or could do anything. Those of the crew who got to the deck tried to launch a boat on the upturned side of the listing vessel, but this was impossible because the listing had gone on to such an extent that the boat could not take the water, but landed on the side of the vessel raised out of the water. The only side available for launching boats was the side nearest the water. As a result of the leaning of the boat sideways, the decks were almost perpendicular to the water, and many passengers in order to escape had to slide down from the upper deck to the lower or water side. There they were able to get in or out of the boats that were launched. Some passengers slid right down the upturned deck and unexpectedly landed in the lifeboats in the water. "Some of those who were aroused by the first indication of danger refused to believe that the vessel was sinking and went back to their state-rooms. They did not come back. "In some ways it was a worse accident than the Titanic. Here we had no time to do anything. Moments meant life or death. We had to rush from the cabins. Some had belts and others had not. And no belts were to be found on the upper decks, as we felt the listing suddenly quicken."

Messages of Sympathy

LONDON, May 30. The Lord Mayor of London, upon learning the extent of the disaster, decided to open a fund toward the relief of widows and orphans. King George cabled Connaught as follows: "Deeply grieved over the awful disaster of the Empress of Ireland, in which so many Canadian lost their lives. Queen Mary and I both assure you of our heartfelt sympathy with those who mourn for the loss of relatives and friends." To Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, His Majesty cabled: "In the appalling disaster which has befallen your company by the loss of the Empress of Ireland, in which so many perished, I offer you my sincerest sympathy." The King, this morning, received the following from the President of the French Republic: "It is with profound emotion I learn of the terrible catastrophe in connection with the Empress, which will plunge so many families into mourning. The Empress, however, according to the sincere regrets and keen sympathy of the French people."

MONTREAL, To-day. According to the captain and officers of the Storstad, and contrary to what has been stated by certain of the Empress' officers, the Storstad did not back away after the collision. On the contrary she steamed ahead in an effort to keep her bow in the hole which she had dug into the side of the Empress. The Empress, however, according to the Storstad's officers, headed away and bent the Storstad's bow over at an acute angle to port. After that the Empress was hidden from the view of the Storstad, and despite the fact that the Storstad kept the whistle blowing, she could not locate the Empress, until the cries of the victims in the water were heard. The captain absolutely denies he was a mile or so away from the Empress. After the vessel struck the Empress, the Storstad had not moved. It was the Empress which had changed her position. According to a report made by the captain to the owners immediately after the collision occurred, he heard Capt. Kendall's shout calling upon him not to pull away. "I won't," shouted the Storstad's captain as loud as he could. After that the Empress disappeared from the Storstad's view. The statement continues: "The Storstad lowered every one of her boats and sent them to save the passengers and crew of the Empress, though she herself was in serious danger of sinking. When two boats from the Empress reached the Storstad, the Storstad's men also manned these boats and went in them to rescue her own boats and made several trips. In all about 350 persons were taken on board. The owners of the Storstad were sued at the instance of the C.P.R. Company, whose claim against the owners is for two million dollars loss. There may be a further claim by the C. P. R. for the loss of cargo. The owners of the Storstad ask of the public that in all fairness to both vessels and their Commanders, judgement as to where blame for this terrible disaster should rest, be suspended until an impartial Tribunal has heard the evidence of both sides." The total dead it would appear, is 969, according to the count based on the latest C. P. R. list.

B. I. S. Meeting.

The adjourned quarterly meeting of the B.I.S. took place yesterday morning, when the unfinished business of the previous meeting was dealt with. The chair was occupied by the Vice-President, Mr. J. L. Slattery, who made enthusiastic reference to the passing of the Home Rule Bill, and his remarks were received with an outburst of applause from the descendants of the sons and daughters of Ireland. It was decided that a message of congratulation be sent to

Weak, Tired Folks Given New Vigor

Strength Returns, Health Renewed,
 Vitality of Youth Re-created.

Exhaustion and Bodily Tiredness Every Day Being Turned Into Vigor and Ambition by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From Cheboque Pt. N. S., comes the following from Mrs. W. A. Reynolds: "A year ago my health began to fail, I lost appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked, and had black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when springtime arrived I was in the 'blues.' Read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my appetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home."

Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1 at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Express Derailed.

The Bruce express which arrived in the city early this morning met with an accident when about a mile east of Torburn Lake yesterday, from which, fortunately, no accident resulted. Two of the passenger cars and three others became derailed at the place before mentioned at 2 p.m. yesterday and a special train was despatched from Clarenville to which the passengers and mails were transferred.

To Manager,

St. John's Gas Light Company.
 Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manures. Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Yours truly,

In Cleaning LACE CURTAINS

We have in mind always that they must be clean and then finished so that they will hang right. This is exactly what we do, and why our work is so satisfactory.

Leave your order with our local agents,

THE RELIABLE HOUSE.

Pianos and Organs.

N.B.—When you are ill you see a doctor; when you want a Piano or Organ you see and purchase from a musician, as he knows something about musical instruments; it is his business.
