In his own childish way he brooded over the matter for some time, and seemed finally to de-cide upon a course of action. Day before yesterday, while the men were in the field at work, and the women either with them or engaged elseyhere, the children were left alone about the cabins to amuse themselves as they might see fit. The mother of the infant and the little six year old had left the baby snugly stored away in the cradle asleep, and her little boy in the yard playing with the other children when she went away. She had scarcely got-ten out of sight when the little boy gathered up a brickbat, almost as much as he could carry, and walking into the cabin where the sleeping baby lay, began to strike it over the head with the brick until he actually succeeded in breaking the infant's skull and smashing it into a jelly. He then managed to get the child out of the cradle and dragged its lifeless body to the woods, a short distance from the house, where he hid the body in the bushes, and returning to his play-mates he said to them, "I believe I it'l ole baby." He then led me to the spot where he had left the infant lying, and sure enough there lay the little innocent with its head crushed and life extinct.
