This is the opinion of members of the Canadian Arctic exploration party at Collision Point, according to a dispatch received from Fairbanks today.

Stefansson left Victoria last summer with an expedition outfitted by the Canadian Government to make explorations and scientific research along the northern coast of the American continent.

The acquisition of trade must have something higher behind it than the love of gain. Its aim must be one of honor and its ethics must harmonize with the upward trend of humanity.

To conduct business upon a plane of the highest trust has always been the aim of this store. We have endeavored to merit confidence and have tried with gratifying success to instil faith. With such an object in view what would seem hard work is made a most pleasant task.

At times when a little overwrought the head and hand may have fell short of the day's goal, yet we feel, on the whole, that our advancement has been marvelously encouraging, that the percentage o courtesy, intelligence and kindness throughout the store has measurably increased; also that the public has shown in patience and in confidence, as well as steadily expanding patronage, an appreciation of our efforts.

Encouraged and gratified we press on, realizing that the dissemination of those strengthening influences which, even in busy channels of trade, make for friendship and good will, found their basis in the right kind of a beginning—the system of fair dealing inaugurated in this store by its founders more than a third of a century ago.

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take two cups of granulated sugar, add one cup of warm water and stir about 2 minutes, you have as good syrup as money would buy.

If you will then put 21/2 ounces of Pinex

(50 cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly. Any housewife can easily pre-

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect, and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.
It is a splendid remedy, too, for whooping cough, - enoup, hoarseness, asthma, thest pains, etc. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the Tinited States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated, but never success-

Middletown, Pa. - "I had headache, backache and such awful bearing down pains that I could not be on my feet at times and I had organic inflammation so badly that I was not able to do my work. I could not get a good meal for my husband and one child. My neighbors said they thought my suffering was terrible.

"My husband got tired of seeing me suffer and one night went to the drug store and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me I must take it. I can't tell you all I suffered and I can't tell you all that your medicine has done for me. I was greatly benefited from the first and it has made me a well-woman. I can do all my housework and even helped some of my friends as well. I think it is a wonderful help to all suffering women. I have got several to take it after seeing what it has done for me."-Mrs. EMMA ESPENSHADE, 219 East Main St., Middletown, Pa.

Fatality of Whooping Cough

Many parents think lightly vhooping cough, and treat it as a mecessary evil, not giving the child who has it any special attention.

The seriousness of whooping cough was emphasized by the Medical Health Officer in Toronto a few months ago, when he represed to the skipper—same terms. That's agreed?" months ago, when he reported 14 deaths during the month from whoop-deaths during the month from whooping cough, and only ten from scarlet fever, typhoid fever and measles combined.

So many people write to us about the relief and cure of whooping cough by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine that we can recommend it with the greatest confidence.

It loosens the cough, aids expectoration, and by its soothing influence prevents the terrible paroxysms of coughing which are so distressing to witness, and which wear away the strength of the child. By using this treatment the disease is held in check, and cured in a few weeks, instead of months. Look for the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., on the bottle you buy. There are many imitations.

"Yes. Why do you—"

Rosalle put her mouth close to his ear.

THE WIDOWS AND ORPHANS. Speaking in the Legislature on April 14. 1913. Mr. Rowell urged the immediate passage of a workmen's compensation act in these words: "It, is the plain duty of the Gov-will have to wait another year to get plain justice. Hundreds of homes in the province will be affected and may have to suffer. A bill should introduced at this session, and the Liberals are prepared to wait until it can be passed." A bill had been drafted by the commissioner, Sir William Ralph Meredith and was in the Government's hands at the time, but the Prime Minister refused to go on with it. Mr. Studholme, the Labor member, suggested that if the Government were not prepared to consider it then, a special session be called for the purpose, but this plea also was unavailing. The Liberals were prepared to sit all summer, if necessary, to enact a measure, or to meet in the autumn. But the Government demanded a year more on top of years of procrastination. Thus the sum of hardship and penury, which might have been alleviated, has continued to grow, and will grow for months to come. It has been sadly swollen by the terrible toll of the Great Lakes. If there had been a workmen's compensation act on the statute book on the lines of the Meredith bill, each sailor's widow would receive an annuity of 55 per cent of her husband's wages. She has now no redress against the vessel owners.

The calamity on the lakes points an accusing finger at the lawmakers who have made no law for the protection of widows and orphans.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The Toronto News, discussing with lapse of the Macdonald election case of an investigation. The Grits were, not worse; and now no one will know how bad they were.

We do not see what the wicked Grits had to do with the case. They brought the charges and were prepared to prove them. But the criminal pleaded guilty, and there was no trial. His friends did more than plead guilty. In order to divert attention they had brought a counter charge against the Fusien. Liberal candidate, but at the last moment they withdrew the charge, so there could be no trial from that quarter. It certainly was not the fault of not be so guay the Liberals, who were quite ready to go on with their charges, and to defend their own case as well. The News goes on to say:

"Where general charges of corruption are made they should be investigated and established or disproved. There should be public offlcers appointed to assist the judges in probing such charges to the bottom. Such officers should have power to compel proceedings where general corruption is suspected."

That is all very well. We will agree. But why is there not such an officer? On Sept. 14, 1908, Mr. Borden in a his back-down on the bilingual quesspeech at Halifax, which received tion? some attention at the time, promised that when he became premier, there should be no hiding of election irregularities by collusion; "there should be a thorough investigation of corrupt practices," and, if necessary, "they would appoint an independent prosecuting officer, charged with that duty." The Macdonald election took place more than a year ago; the charges He was never very much of a lawyer. were made in the House, and some pretty nasty stories told there. As it dragged its weary length along, obstructed at every step by the counsel for the Conservative defendant, why did not Mr. Borden hurry things up, and get that independent officer appointed? Perhaps he wanted to do so; but Mr. Rogers did not want it. And so the case collapsed without coming to trial.

Mr. Borden will have another chance. The trial judge will make a report to the officers of the House On that report being made, Mr. Borden, without passing any special legislation can have a thorough investigation made. Will he do it? Will Mr. Rogers let him, even if he wants to do it? These are questions for an answer to which we will have to wait tin Parliament meets.

In the meantime, it is not much use that he is a Liberal; so they get after the Government because Mr. Dickson had filled the position long and faithfully." We should have thought that was a very good reason. Had he been Remarked the stag: "Behold the geezer a Liberal there probably would not Shot in mistake for me! Great Caesar! have been so much said; his dismissal by a Tory Government would have seemed perfectly natural. But to dismiss from office one who had been a supporter of the party, though possibly not an active one, in order to put in another who had presumably given more efficient partisan service, does not strike a fair-minded person as being a very nice thing. Our contemporary admits that Mr. Dickson has been a faithful employee of the Government for a long time, but says, in effect, that is no excure for keeping him any longer. He cannot complain, we are told; he has had the office long enough; so as he had his share of Government pay he should get out, and give somebody else a chance. That is the very essence of the spoils system, as practiced for many years in the United States. A man held office under one administration; when another came in he had to step out, and be succeeded by a friend of the new Government. The system was upheld by the same argument used in tion. Unless a law is passed at this session of the House the workmen share of Government money, give anthe Seaforth case; he has had his other man a turn at the trough. Our contemporary is to be congratulated on coming out boldly and advocating a policy which apparently many others, in its party approve, though they are ashamed to say so. As to its sneer

"Had a Liberal Government been in power, the Liberal press would have been the first to urge the long | And employment by the Government of members of the Dickson family as a What various feelings come from days reason for giving the position to someone else of the Liberal faith." It need only be said that Mr. Dickon served undisturbed under a Liberal Government for fifteen years, till t went out of power. We never heard that the Liberals of Seaforth asked for his dismissal. At all events, if any of them did, the Liberal Government did not dismiss him. That was left for his own political friends to do.

SOMETHING WRONG HERE.

At a gathering in New York a short time ago, a prominent Canadian said:

There is something wrong about this report. Is it possible of course, just as bad as the Tories, if that some disloyal Grit has been masquerading in New York under Mr. Pelletier's name? For the sake of his own reputation the Postmaster-General should have this matter looked into. The disguised separatist should be hunted up, and punished.

AVOID PANIC BY PROGRESS.

[Chicago Public.] Western Canada will suffer no hardship from venturing along the lines of equitable taxation. The only way in which any community can avoid a panic, or periodical business stagnation, is either to stop growing-which means permanent stagation-or to provide for the growth by loosening the bonds of monopoly, and turning economic rent back into the public treasury. The possible setback for the communities of Western Canada is no more likely than in any other growing community. And should it come—as come it may, because of the failure to completely sever the bonds of monopoly-the recovery will be the more certain and speedy because of the freedom that has been extended to business.

Acpie especially for Dad), we clear out just as fast as we can, while Father dons his old suit. Mother leads the way to the kitchen, where everything is in readiness for the ordeal of tackling the stove. Even the stepladder is placed invitingly near.

Father Begins, "Clear out, everybody," he calls, not crossly you know, but with that "Ifyou-don't-I'll-know -the-reason - why' sort of air. We do not need a second bidding, but slto quietly away, while Mother fusses about, in reality seeking an excuse to start Father, and give him a lift occasionally. "Now, there's no use of you being out here," he exclaims to Mother. "For goodness sake, Anne, keep out of this dust and give me room to move, this is a man's job, so please let me do it my own way."

There is nothing to do but to leave the kitchen to Father's tender mercies. With the face of a martyr going to his doom Father mounts the step-ladder, and begins operations. The first section of the stove-pipe loosens beautifully; the second likewise, so far so good. The elbow requires more coaxing, and distributes a quantity of soot upon Father and the room. One by one he carries the pipes to the garden, shakes them, and stands them against the table in kitchen, until all are done. Father muses that perhaps even yet he will have time to slip down town and hear the returns of the rugby match. 'Anything I can help with?" timidly calls Mother, opening the door and peeping out. "Now, Anne, will you kindly keep out of the way? As I said before, you're a woman and don't know anything about this job. I guess cleaned this stove often enough to know how to do it without a woman interfering." Mother closes the door. Father is always this way when there is any work to be done. He can play golf for hours without a murmur.

But then cleaning pipes is different.

Poor Puss!

From the regions of the kitchen the country dame.

It is Saturday afternoon—in other nerves. Even the dishes in the pantry echo with the crash. Mother cautiously peers nto the dusty, soot-laden air. The house-old pussy-cat is the cause of the trouble this time. Puss has the habit of rubbing against the furniture, and makes the mistake of pushing against that provoking parcel of pipes. There is another cash, as Father's pent-up feelings make them-selves known in a lunge for the frisky feline. The result is that Father is deposited with considerable force and un ecessary weight upon an unsuspecting pe. The elbow now has two curves instead of one, and looks like an exclamation mark, or the eternal question unanswered. To enter upon the scene at this critical moment would have the same effect as pouring oil upon the fire. Mother keeps her distance from the disorder and seeks shelter in the dining-room. She vows that this will be the last time poor John cordingly after a hearty meal (we kids are of the opinion that Ma made the and mentally affirms that if it requires a contingent of soldiers, Father's Christian contingent of soldiers. tian temperament will never again be subjected to the point of using a few words which Noah Webster neglected to nsert in his dictionary.

> Perhaps an hour elapses. Then the door opens and a black face peers in. "I don't know what on earth is wrong with those pipes!" Father exclaims crossly. "I never knew such a miserable stove to work on in my life!" Mother knows that this is but an excusa to have her online. this is but an excuse to have her opinion on the erection of the aforesaid pipes. Father would not openly ask her for worlds. She ventures out, steps over an overturned chair, views the debris with outward calm. "See John, you've made a mistake in one pipe, and that throws the rest out of place." "Well, now, did you want to the like Super fault fonding effer rest out of place." "Well, now, did you rest out of place." "Well, now, did you ever see the like! "But," urges Mather, "you see, John, I know every twist and turn of these pipes by heart, seeing them every day. If you just—" But Father exclaims angrly "Anne, don't meddle! First thing you" "Anne, don't meddle! First thing you'll want me to pull the whole stove to pieces. This is the last time I ever attempt to clean up the range." Mother lays her hand quietly and with apparent unconcern on the pipe in quesion. "I'll help you, John, if you just loosen this one." Father reluctantly does her bidding. He is unwilling to admit that his wife could untangle the mistake. Presto! the mischlevous pipe slips into piace, and the chlevous pipe slips into place, and the stove is cleaned for another year.

Dad will be all right tomorrow, but he Dad will be all right tomorrow, but he does dislike to give in that Mother's divining powers are superior to his. Dad's a good sort all the same, and just wait till he reads the sporting page of the paper and smokes his evening pipel I'll guarantee he will be his own self tomorrow. Mother never mentions the fact that Father made a mistake. The cat has fathed to make her appearance, and I that Father make her appearance, and I venture to say that she has sought other fields, where pipes are not suspended on the floor and cross men are allowed to run at large in the kitchen.

archy. Rose Bertin was always on the look out for new ideas, and that her brain evolved some most striking fashions was evidenced in the most extraordinary headdress, which she introduced known as "pouf aux sentiments." It was called "pouf" because of the numerous objects it could contain, and 'aux sentiments" because all the oblects had to have a certain relation to the wearer. For instance, a celebrated 'pouf" worn by the Duchesse of hartres is described thus: "In the background was the image of a woman carrying an infant in arms; it referred to the Duc de Valois and his nurse. To the right was a parrot picking a cherry; the parrot was the duchess' pet bird. To the left was a little 'piccaninny.' All this was ornamental with locks of hair various relations of

It seems incredible that sensible women should ever have worn such atrocities, but probably the women of the centuries o come will look back upon the styles of the twentieth century and pass the the same remarks about us.

Certain colors became fashionable then in the same queer way they do now. During the summer of 1775 the fashionable color was a kind of chestnut brown, which the Queen had chosen for a dress. When the King saw it he exclaimed, "That is puce" (fleacolored). Thus "puce" became the newest color. At another time "ashgray" was fashionable, because comene remarked that it was the color o the Queen's hair. At twenty-nine, the Queen considered her youth over, and she began to dress in a more elderly fashion. She excluded from her dress all orna ments, which she considered only suitable to extreme youth, among these being flowers and feathers. What do some of our "young" women of forty-

[By Staff Reporter.] Watford, Nov. 17 .- That William Stapleton came to his death on the morning of Nov. 10, 1913, on the G. T. R. tracks, about two miles west of Kingscourt Junction, by being crushed to death as a result of a collision between trains No. 560 and No. 173; and we are of the opinion that the cause of the collision was due to insufficient protection of train No. 560 by

The foregoing verdict was reached by a jury of eleven empanelled by Coroner Dr. Kelly to inquire into the death of Conductor W. Moffatt, Brakeman W. Stapleton and Brakeman G. Holleron, the three Sarnia men who met death on Monday morning, Nov. 10. during a blinding snowstorm, in a rear-end collision between two freight trains. Ten witnesses were heard during the day, but the main witness, Brakeman E. Breckell, of Sarnia, was missing when his name was called, and Crown Attorney J. P. Buck, of Sarnia, when summing up the evidence, intimated that the man had left for the United States.

One of the jury was an English clergyman, Rev. S. P. Irwin. Two inspectors of the Dominion Railway Commission, Messrs. J. Clark and A. J. Gillette, were present at the inquiry, with a secretary. To Col. Towers, he said that during the forepart of the night the precipitation of rain was .500 of an inch, and that during the afternoon until evening 6 inches of snow fell. During the rest of the evening 1.75 inches of snow fell. The wind was also very strong, reaching the proportions of a gale at times.

E. L. Goodwin, dispatcher at London, said that train No. 560, extra, the one which was wrecked, left London about 4:40 in the afternoon, with Conductor J. Smith in charge, Train No. 173, in charge of Conductor Havers and Engineer Burrell, which ran into No. 560, did not leave London until about 11:41 at night, seven hours after No. 560 left, according to his statement. He also told of the engine of train No. 675 going "dead" at Komoka. and of Conductor Moffatt, who was in charge, being ordered to store his train, and to "hook" his engine and caboose on to train No. 560 and go as to protect the rear end of the train, far as Strathroy to get water. At Strathroy, he was to take his caboose and proceed to Sarnia on his own

To Mr. Towers he said that Mr Rutherford, the chief dispatcher, gave the order, but that he was standing beside him when he sent it over the No record of the order was kept at the office, as it was only a running order.

Mr. H. Holding, fireman on freight No. 675, who was injured in the wreck, Tunnel. threw some interesting light on the accident in a straightforward way. He told of his engine going "dead" at his engine and caboose deadhead on Komoka, and said the engine and caboose deadhead on leaking and also short of water. "We train No. 560 to Stratford, according to the witness stayed in Komoka about two hours," said he. "After that our engine and caboose was taken out on train No. 560. The engine was put in the train about five car lengths from the rear, and our caboose was attached to the rear of the train. Before we left Komoka I found that we only had a little water in the boiler, and after telling this to Engineer Hall he told me to dump my fires in order to keep the boiler from blowing up. That is the back about half a mile. Later he was reason we did not cut loose from the called in, but before leaving he put train when we reached Strathrov.

A torpedo exploded about 10 car lengths from where he struck the train. Two might have exploded, but if they did, they were close to gether, he said. As soon as he heard the torpedo he applied the emergency brakes, but a moment later his engine struck the stalled train. His train at that time was travelling about 11 or 12 miles an hour, he thought. He did not see the rear end of the stalled train until an instant before he struck the caboose.

"I stayed on my engine until it stopped dead, when I got off on the left side," said the witness. "As I stepped off my engine I saw Brakeman Breckell on the ground. He had a white lantern in his hand, as far as I can remember." Conductor W. Hawes, in charge train No. 173, which collided with the stalled train, was in the caboose at the time of the collision. His train consisted of 32 loaded cars and a cabooce. In his opinion it would take at least a train length in which to stop his train travelling at 12 miles an hour, on account of the snow and ice. On account of being on the rear end he did not hear the explosions of the torpedoes.

"When I felt the train stop suddenly Thought a hose bag had broken, and left for the front end of the train. I carried a hose bag, a wrench, torpedoes and fusees. I later saw Breckell standing in the shade of a car. His first remark to me was: 'I'm almost perished. I want to go in and get warm.' I would not allow him to do so, and made him come with me.'

"How was it you did not have a flag
out protecting that train?' I asked him.
"Brakeman Stapleton was out,' he replied. 'I was out one hour and forty minutes, and Stapleton had promised to relieve me.'

"'I suppose they were all asleep, and when they did not come to relieve you, you went in to get one of them, and we followed you while your end was un-protected? I asked him. "He denied this, and said he had given Stapleton his overcoat, and that the lat-

He arrived at the wreck about 9:30, and at that time the body of one of the victims was mixed with a lot of wreckage, and was badly burned. It would look to him as it he had been killed instantly and burned afterwards.

The jury drawn for the case was as follows: A. G. Brown foreman; E. Mc-Gillicuddy, Rev. S. B. Irwin, S. E. Thompson, J. S. Williams, W. S. Kelly, Wm. McKercher, J. H. Hume, Andrew McDonaid, D. Gillies, T. Harrison, this point adjournment was made

Train No. 173, which collided with it, arrived at 4:48, and departed at 5:04. He stopped the latter, and gave the conductor a clearance. He did not hear of the collision until late in the orenoon. The wires were in such condition that no orders could be taken or given on them, and as the block was clear and No. 560 had passed some hours before, he O. B. The new ball park will be situated close to the heart of the city, almost as near as Tecumseh Park, it is expected, and the site may also be used for a new hockey arena. If it is decided to build a ball park on the grounds it is fully expected that the whole location will be turned into a big amusement park, and it will not only be used for baseball, but for every other line of sport. NO KNOCKDOWNS IN BOUT

Hint That Fight Was Not on Square-Spectators Were Divided in Opinion on This Point.

Boston, Nov. 17 .- Gunboat Smith outpointed Sam Langford in their 12round affair at the Atlas Club tonight and Referee Dick Fleming gave him the decision. Smith fought hard after the first four rounds and in the fifth opened his opponent's left eye. There was no knockdown during the bout. Smith's tactics were to hold off his man with left hand jabs, then swing with his right.

Langford had a slight advantage in he sixth round and had altogether the better of the eighth and eleventh. In the second, fourth, fifth, tenth and twelfth, honors appeared to be even. Unsuccessful attempts were made during the afternoon by an attorney said to represent G. H. Benton, to induce the authorities to forbid the meeting on the ground that the fight was not to be on the square. The spectators were divided in opinion on this point. Smith is the first fighter to gain a decision over Langford since Young Peter Jackson beat the Tar Baby in 5 rounds at Southbridge on June 14, 1906. Langford has fought 44 bouts since then, losing his 45th when he

FINE RALLY AT LAMBETH FOR A GOOD CAUSE AND FOR A GOOD CANDIDATE

Fusion Nominee Laidlaw, With the Liberal Leader, Col. Mayberry, Mr. J. Bailey and Others, in Clear-Cut, Virile Speeches Drive Home Necessity To Abolish Bar.

[By Our Own Man.]

Lambeth, Nov. 17.—Nearly two hun-red people attended the Liberal rally held here in the Masoric Hall tonight, when stirring addresses were delivered by the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Newton W. Rowell, K. C., M. P. P., Col. T. R. Mavberry, M. P. P., of Ingersoll; Mr. J. Bailey, of the Dominion Temperance Alliance, and Dr. G. A. Routledge, ex-M. P. P., of Lambeth. Marked enthusiasm pravailed, and strong arguments were made for temperance policy and other lanks in the platform of the Ontario iberal party. The hall was filled alest to its capacity, and the audience vas thoroughly representative of both he village and the country around. A arge number from London were presnt. a special traction car leaving 'he city at 7:30 o'clock bringing many.

Dr. Routledge Presides. Dr. G. A. Routledge was elected chairman. He expressed pleasure at the number of ladies in the audience, and he expressed regret at the death of the late George W. Neely, which had vacated the riding.

He was glad, however, that Mr. W. Laidlaw was the candidate contesting the riding for the Liberal Three things were necessary to win, first, a good cause, second, a good candidate, and third, hard work. Applause for Mr. Laidlaw. On rising to speak Mr. Laidlaw was ccorded an enthusiastic reception, being greeted with rounds of applause. He felt highly honored, he said, at being nominated by both the Temperance Alliance and the Liberal party The abolition of the bar was the great issue on which the present campaign was being fought out. He restated his stand made at prev-

He pointed out that 90 per cept of the total number of public indigents owed London Branch-211 Dundas St. their dependent condition directly or ndirectly to the influence of intoxicating liquors. He would not say that the bar would immediately be banished should he be elected, but he believed he could safely say that the Government would see the necessity lation. The question, "Am I my brother's keeper," had long ago been answered in the affirmative. On Nov. 27 the electors of East Middlesex safeguard their weaker brothers, who now suffer from the evils of intem-

Col. Mayberry Speaks.

Col. Mayberry, in his opening remarks, also expressed keen regret at the death of his fellow-member, the late Mr. Neely. He was glad that East Middlesex Liberals had set out to elect a man of the stamp of Mr. Laidlaw. He believed that all parliamentary and legislative candidates should be of an equally high stamp, and men of equally fine ideals. The people of Ontario, he said, were looking at East Middlesex. If Mr. Laidlaw were elected the Conservative Government would get busy at once and give the province a greater measure of temperance rereferred to an editorial in a Conservative paper, which he said, was al-East Middlesex did not elect the Conservative candidate, the benefits of cheap electric power would not be extended to the farms of the riding. This was strange, said Col. Mayberry, inasmuch as both ridings in Oxford, where the farmer enjoys electric power, were represented by Liberals. The only criticism which the Opposition had aimed at the introduction of hydro power was regarding the uneven prices for compensation for land damages paid to farmers on whose land towers had been placed. Following this criticism, and virtually admitting its justification, the hydro-electric commission had made extra payments to the farmers, whom the Opposition pointed out had been unfairly dealt with. More farmers in Oxford than elsewhere used hydro because in that county were more low tension

Mr. J. Bailey, of the Dominion Temperance Alliance, said that it was the first time he had ever spoken on a political platform, but in view of the policy and the character of the Lib-eral candidate, he esteemed it an honor to speak from the Liberal plat-

The liquor men had frankly avowed that their trade was their party, and claimed that their organization was non-political, yet they had managed in the past to great. ly corrupt politics. If the temperance people would only, as avowedly and frankly, make temperance their party, the evils of the traffic would soon be by-election meant more than merely electing a candidate to take the place of a former representative. It gave the electors an opportunity, if they desired, of registering a protest against the acts of the Government. Touching on the agricultural interests affected by provincial legislation, he emphasized how not only the commercial and financial, but also the moral and religious stability of a country depends on its agricultural industries and interests.

Referring to the decrease in the rural population of old Ontario of about 100,000, caused by large numbers of young people going from the to the city and to the west, he said that the cituation could only be satisfactorily faced by making life in the country more remunerative and more attractive.

He also found fault with the license dissioners and license inspectors of the province for the laxity with which existing regulations were enforced. Goderich, Nov. 18 .- Lake Huron vas in an ugly mood Monday afternoon and evening, and frowned on the spaces for the bodies of her victims. The patrolling trip to be made by the Government vessel Lambton and the tug Horton had to be postponed, due to the rough water stirred up on the lake by a 30-mile gale from the southwest. It was not in any sense dangerous weather, but the authorities came to the conclusion that would be useless to operate with other than reasonably calm water.

Mr. Bowen, who is at Kincardine epresenting the Lake Carriers' Asociation, journyed all the way to Port Elgin along the shore: He reports by telephone having come across much wreckage of the Hydrus. Rooney's body was identified by purse which fell out of the clothing while some of the corpses were being transferred from one room to another at the undertaker's. A Reply to Captain Murphy. To the Editor of The Advertiser: Capt. Murphy takes me to task for speaking disrespectfully of Lord Ab- (and others) in the public schools of erdeen. He mentions Lady Aberdeen's this country. Capt. Murphy's stateisit to London. I don't remember say- ment respecting the relatively large ing anything about her. As regards Lord Aberdeen's private life, I know are Nationalists is too absurd to renothing. He may have very many amible qualities. And if a man commits a wrong against the examples was the wrecking of the Mcpublic it does not lessen his guilt if he were an earl and a viceroy ten times over.

Your correspondent objects to Lord Aberdeen being called the chum of a lawbreaker. How, then, does he explain the attitude of Lord Aberdeen on that occasion. towards Larkin and the lawbreakers in the Belfast troubles of 1907? In addition, every time Larkin has been put in prison Lord Aberdeen immediately pardons him. If the above does not satisfy Capt. Murphy, would he like to be reminded of Lord Aberdeen's ratepayers would have voted for the $250,000 bylaw last January, if they had had any idea it was to be spent in purchasing land for the Federal Square. The general opinion was that the Government would buy the land and the city would erect the buildings. The cost of the land to the city will be over $200,000, leaving very little on hand to start the building of a city hall. The best thing to be done is to postpone building a city hall for five or ten years, and in the meantime to rent the McCormick factory building from the company at a nominal rental. The city could then lease the building for factory purposes to new industries, such as the C. N. W. Shoe Company, etc. I understand that the McCormick Company have the right to remove their present factory next year, though they have been paid $125,000 for the lands. Yours, etc.,
