REBELS WREAK RED VENGEANCE

Score Blown to Bits in Attack on Premier Stolypin.

HIGH OFFICERS ASSASSINATED

General Min Killed at Peterhof and the Governor of Warsaw Shot to Death.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—In an attempt to assassinate Premier Stolypin here today during a reception at his house, over twenty persons were killed and twenty-four injured by a bomb explosion. Premier Stolypin escaped.

Peterhof, Aug. 26.—General Min, who some time ago put down the Warsaw riots with stern methods, was today assassinated at the railway station by a young girl.

Warsaw, Aug. 27.—General Von Larski, acting military governor-general of Warsaw, was shot, and killed, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, while driving in a cab. The assassin escaped. This morning an unknown man warned the cabmen of this city, generally, not to drive any of the generals.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—Thirty-two persons are dead and 24 others wounded as the result of the dastardly attempt to assassinate Premier Stolypin with a bomb while he was holding a public reception at his country house at Aptkersky Island. The Premier was slightly wounded on the face and neck by flying splinters.

Among the dead are: General Zamaetin, the Premier's personal secretary; M. Khovosteff, former governor of the Province of Benza; Col. Federoff, chief of the Premier's personal guards; Court Chamberlain Davidoff, Court Chamberlain Veronin, Aide Doubasoff, and four women and two children.

The wounded include M. Stolypin's 4-year-old son, who is seriously, though not fatally injured, and a number of persons prominent in the social and official worlds.

Of the four conspirators who engineered the outrage, two were killed with their victims, while the third, who acted as coachman for the party, and the fourth, who remained inside the carriage, were badly wounded and now are in the St. Peter and St. Paul fortress.

Whether the assassins who entered the crowded reception hall threw the bomb or accidentally dropped it probably never will be known, as all the immediate eye witnesses were killed. The tremendous force of the explosion absolutely blew out the front of the Premier's residence and carried away the ceilings above and the floors beneath and the walls of the adjoining rooms.

BLOWN TO PIECES.

Those Not Instantly Killed Were Horribly Maimed.

Persons literally were blown to pieces. Those who were not killed instantly were horribly maimed or lacerated and all the others present were prostrated by the shock.

The Premier's escape was miraculous, for only a moment before the explosion he had stepped inside his study, at the rear of the salon, to speak to Prince Shakovsky. Although he was but slightly injured, he is completely prostrated by the calamity.

The havoc wrought by the explosion is indescribable. Bodies were so torn or mangled as to make identification

Threatens an Injunction Against the Grand Trunk

Ald. Garratt Wants Company to Wait Until Bylaw Passes Before Moving Springbank Tracks.

Tomorrow morning the Grand Trunk Railway will commence the shifting of the Springbank tracks of the London street railway.

The work is in charge of Engineer C. E. Crowley, who has been the man behind the guns in all the engineering that has been done by the Grand Trunk in this vicinity lately. He will be assisted by Resident Engineer Fisk, of the Toronto street railway, and Road Foreman Smith, of the same company, both of whom are in the city today with Mr. Crowley.

The Grand Trunk will give the people of London an idea of what railroading nowadays means in the shifting of the street railway tracks, because the G. T. R. has promised Manager King that traffic to and from Springbank will not be delayed a minute by the work.

The steam railway engineer will simply send a construction train along over a false track and will fill in the swamp and low lands, where the tracks will in the future run. Then when all is ready, hundreds of men will get to work, tear up the old line and put the rails and ties down on the new right-of-way.

"It's only a small job," Mr. Crowley said to The Advertiser.

And it certainly is, when compared with what the Grand Trunk has been doing west of the city the past few months, but, nevertheless, the job is a big one to tackle when the cars are to run regularly.

Ald. Garratt happened into City Engineer Graydon's office when Mr. Crowley, Mr. King, Mr. Fisk, Mr. Smith and others were present. He at once raised an objection, threatening to issue an injunction if the company attempts to take possession of the land granted it by the council until the bylaw has been prepared and signed.

It is not thought, however, that the Grand Trunk will desist, as the bylaw is sure to pass, now that the city has agreed with the company as to the improvement to that portion of the tracks west of Ridout street.

Mr. Alex Calder, the well-known C. P. R. immigration agent, paid a visit to City Engineer Graydon this morning, and he happened to run into the Grand Trunk men. He was also introduced to Mr. King, manager of the London Street Railway.

"I was the first superintendent of the local street railway" Mr. Calder said, as he produced a large silver watch and opened the back case.

Engraved on the inner case was the following: "Presented to Alex Calder, by the employes of the London Street Railway Company, April, 1879."

It was at that time that Mr. Calder left for Winnipeg, where he has since resided and has been employed by the C. P. R. for many years. He was in Chicago at the time of the big fire, and later returned to London, where he had an omnibus line for a couple of years. Then Messrs. Cronyn, Smallman and others built the local street car system, and Mr. Calder was made its first superintendent.

CRUSHED BETWEEN DOCK AND FERRY

Frank Bassett, of This City, Severely Injured While Returning from Detroit.

Frank Bassett, a young man who lives on Hill street, near William, narrowly escaped death at Windsor, early Sunday morning.

Bassett was crossing on the Grand Trunk ferry from Detroit, and when the boat was docked at Windsor he attempted to walk off, instead of remaining in the train and waiting for it to be hauled to the depot by a locomotive. He missed his footing and fell between the dock and the ferry, and had his legs crushed. A number of his companions heard Bassett's cries for help, and they extricated him from his perilous position. He was brought home on the excursion train. His physician says he will recover, although he will be laid up for some time.

The last of the excursion trains left Windsor shortly after 11 o'clock. As many people waited for it, there was standing room only. Eight miles from Windsor the engine broke down, and the train was stalled in the woods until 3 o'clock in the morning. It was about 7:30 when the Londoners finally reached home.

The excursionists had a "high old time" while waiting for the second locomotive to arrive. They "faked" corn from a near-by field and roasted it in a fire alongside the tracks.

And those who could sing whiled away the hours with everything from "Cheyenne," or "Shy Ann," down to "Dearie," and "Comrades." It was a memorable night, but all seemed to have a good time.

KING TO SIR WILFRID

Connaught Will Bring Autograph Letter to the Premier.

London, Aug. 27.—The Birmingham Daily Post says that if, as may be expected, the Duke of Connaught leaves England in October for Canada, he will be the bearer of an autograph letter from King Edward to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

DOWN FOR A YEAR GOES WIFE-BEATER

Fred Johnston Sentenced for Brutal Assault—Has Already Served Terms.

Fred Johnston, the colored man, who was arrested some time ago for beating his wife, appeared in the dock at the police court this morning, and pleaded guilty to the charge of assault, occasioning actual bodily harm. He was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison.

Johnston has a bad record. He has been arrested several times on charges of interfering with women on the street at night, and he has become the terror of the women of the south end of the city. He has already spent two years in jail, but it appears to have had no good effect upon him, for he has been even more brutal in his conduct since his liberation than before. The assault for which Johnston was sentenced this morning was a very brutal one. He came home drunk and beat his wife until she was almost unconscious.

William Cain had been drunk, and had been "Raising Cain" on the street. He also attempted to "raise Cain" with the policeman who arrested him. When he appeared at the police court he had to pay $10, with $2 additional costs, or spend 21 days in jail. Cain paid the toll.

John Johnston and Timothy Sullivan were fined $10 or 21 days each for being drunk.

William McCavill was fined $3 or 10 days for being drunk and disorderly.

Three first-time drunks were allowed to go.

One citizen appeared to buy a tag for his dog.

TOWNSEND—WILSON

Marriage of Well-Known Young Londoners at St. Peter's.

At St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, Mr. John S. Townsend, a well-known commercial traveler, was united in marriage to Miss Isabel Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Alex. Wilson, of Picton street. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Jos. Townsend, of Brantford. Miss Edith Wright, cousin of the bride, was brodesmaid. Rev. Father Aylward performed the ceremony.

The young couple left for a honeymoon trip up the lakes to Duluth, and Winnipeg.

BIG FELLOWS, BIG FEES

Some City Fathers Think Engineer Connor's Figures Too High.

The London and Port Stanley Railway board met at noon today and filed the report of Expert Connor on the bridges of the line.

It was also decided to notify the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway Company to have all repairs suggested by Mr. Connor made at once, especially the repairs to the abutment at Kettle Creek.

Mr. Connor presented a bill for $250, and some of the city fathers thought it was too much.

"The report didn't tell us anything more than the report of Engineers Moore and Graydon, of this city," said Mr. A. W. White.

"When you employ the big fellows you must pay them," an alderman remarked. "It seems to me that some people in London do not appreciate Engineer Moore and Engineer Graydon. Familiarity breeds contempt, you know."

The account was laid over for awhile.

GIRL KILLS RUSSIAN OFFICER CLOSE TO THE CZAR'S PALACE

General Min Assassinated for Harshness in Suppressing Moscow Riots.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 26. — Gen. Min, commander of the Seminovsky Guard Regiment, who suppressed the riots at Moscow last December, was assassinated at Peterhof tonight.

Gen. Min was at the railway station with his family, when he was assassinated. The deed was committed by a young girl, who fired five shots from a revolver into his back killing him instantly. Madame Min seized the assassin by the hand and held her until the police arrived. After her arrest the girl showed the police a bomb lying in the station telling them to beware.

The death sentence had long hung over the head of Gen. Min owing to the disfavor into which he had fallen because of alleged harsh methods and cruelties. It was Gen. (then Col.) Min who commanded the Seminovsky Regiment when the people were shot down near the Technological Institute in St. Petersburg on Oct. 31, and who, it was stated, wanted to set the buildings of the institute on fire and roast the students inside. Min was sent by the Emperor to suppress the disorders at Saratoy after the assassination of Lieut.-Gen. Sakaroff, in December last, and when the trouble at that place was quelled, was dispatched at the end of December to Moscow to assist in putting down the uprising there.

On April 24 a member of the fighting organization of the revolutionists, disguised as an officer, who had called at Min's residence several times, and requested to see him, excited the suspicion of the attaches of the household, and was arrested. It developed that he was a revolutionist and was armed with a revolver and dagger.

On July 18 last it was reported that some of the soldiers of the Seminovsky guard at Krasnoe-Selo had served notice on Gen. Min that they intended to kill him at the first opportunity for forcing them to murder their fellow-citizens in the Moscow revolt, and Min, in fear of his life, had fled the camp.

SECOND VICTIM DIAMOND ACCIDENT

Baggageman Alex. Wiley, of C. P. R., Dies of Injuries Received at St. Thomas.

Mr. Alex. Wiley died at the Amassa Wood Hospital, St. Thomas, at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning, as the result of injuries sustained in the collision at the C. P. R.-Wabash diamond on Friday.

The deceased, who was the baggageman on the C. P. R. train, never regained consciousness. His injuries were all to the head, including a severe fracture at the base of the skull, a scalp wound, the crushing of the nose and the knocking out of several teeth. At the time of the collision he was pulling on his overalls, preparatory to starting work, and while in a stooping position, was pinned under a large quantity of baggage, which was thrown by the force of the collision from the other end of the car. The roof of the car was also driven in upon him. His condition remained unchanged until Saturday afternoon, when he began to sink.

Baggageman Wiley was in his 59th year, and is survived by his mother, his wife, and a daughter, at home, and a son, James, in Cobalt, two brothers, William G. and George, and Mrs. James Pirie, of this city. He also had numerous other relatives in London, where he resided for many years.

The deceased had been employed on the C. P. R. for several years, and was recognized as one of the best railroad men in Western Ontario. He was a prominent member of the Methodist Church, and had many friends in London and throughout Elgin County. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at St. Thomas.

The remains of Engineer McKay were taken on Saturday to Toronto Junction, where the funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

The C. P. R. disclaims all responsibility for the accident that resulted in the death of Engineer McKay and Baggageman Wiley. As McKay was on the St. Thomas-Woodstock run for the first time on the day of the accident, Conductor Stewart was on the steps of the C. P. R. passenger coach to see that the train came to a full stop before crossing the diamond. McKay followed the rules to the letter, and when he saw the semaphore set for him, he started his train again, to cross the Wabash track. The latest report from St. Thomas states that Superintendent Cunningham, of the Wabash-G. T. R., places the blame on Engineer Stephens, of the Wabash special, who, it is alleged, failed to bring his train to a stop before reaching the diamond.

FAIR WEATHER AHEAD

Washington Forecaster Says Fine and Cool for Several Days.

Washington, Aug. 27. — The weather bureau's general forecast of weather conditions today says: "Since Saturday rains have occurred from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic coast. Following the rains an area of high barometer, with fair and cooler weather has extended eastward over the Mississippi Valley and the western lake region, and this morning temperatures are ten to fifteen degrees below the seasonal average in the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri valleys, and the interior of the Southwestern States. Light frost, with a minimum temperature of 42 degrees is reported this morning at Charles City, Iowa.

"During the next 24 hours the area of fair and cooler weather will extend over the Atlantic Coast States, and fair weather, with moderate temperature, is indicated for the Middle Eastern States during the next two days.

LOOKED LIKE TREPOFF.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 27. — An unsuccessful attempt upon the life of Baron Stahl is reported to have been made in the park at Peterhof last night, but the story is denied. A number of arrests, however, were made in the park during the evening. Baron Stahl bears some resemblance to Gen. Trepoff, commander of the palace. A number of officers with beards, who might be mistaken for Gen. Trepoff, have had their whiskers shaven off.

THE PREMIER BACK

Sir Wilfrid Back in Harness—Can't Take Trip to Winnipeg.

Ottawa, Aug. 27. — Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier returned to the city last evening from Arthabaskaville. Their vacation is over, and the Premier will lose no time in getting into harness again. The announcement that he will attend the banquet of the Manufacturers' Association in Winnipeg is not correct. Sir Wilfrid would like to be present, but cannot spare the time from his official duties, which from now forward will engross his attention. Great interest centers in the cabinet meeting to be held on Tuesday, and it is inferred that as a result the election in Queen's and Shelburne will be brought on immediately. There has, of course, been talk of an appeal in Mr. Fielding's behalf on the question of jurisdiction of the trial court, but the Finance Minister is not the man to take advantage of a technicality in such matters. It seems highly probable that all the ministers, with the exception of Mr. Oliver, who is in England, will be in town for Tuesday's cabinet council. Sir Frederick Borden intends leaving on Aug. 31 for England, accompanied by Lady Borden and Miss Borden, but will return here tomorrow and remain in the city until Friday.

MR. HARRIS NAMED

Prominent Citizen Succeeds Mr. Mattinson on Hospital Trust.

The Ontario Government, at the suggestion of Hon. Adam Beck, has appointed Mr. George B. Harris, of Eldon House, Ridout street, to succeed Mr. James Mattinson as Government representative on Victoria Hospital Trust.

Mr. Mattinson left London for Montreal, to accept the management of th big drug merger, formed some time ago.

THE D. R. A. MEET

The Attendance This Year at Rifle Ranges Is Greater Than Last.

Rifle Range, Ottawa, Aug. 27.—The 39th annual meeting of the D. R. A. opened this morning in a heavy rainstorm, and as a consequence there was a poor attendance at the extra series matches, with which the morning opened. The attendance this year is 475, or 40 over last year, and the meeting lasts until Saturday at 4 p.m., giving one day's extra shooting. This afternoon, following the tyro match, the regular matches open at 2 o'clock with the bankers'.

WILL MAKE REPAIRS

Pere Marquette to Put Road at Port in Good Repair.

The Pere Marquette Railway has promised to make certain necessary repairs to the roadway leading up to the hill at Port Stanley at once. A washout recently caused the trouble. Mr. H. M. Douglass, proprietor of the Fraser House, informed the city that if the repairs were not made forthwith, the city will be put to considerable trouble and the expenditure of much money.

SHAW ON SPELLING REFORM

Nothing Like Roosevelt's Act Since Mahomet Changed Calendar.

London, Aug. 27. — Among the numerous opinions canvassed by the newspapers of President Roosevelt's order, with regard to a reform in spelling, George Bernard Shaw says:

"There has been nothing like it since Mahomet reformed the calendar by making the year consist of twelve lunar months. It serves us right. The thing had to be taken in hand somehow, and if we refused to attend to our own experts we must make the best of the two energetic amateurs who have forced our hands."

ST. LAWRENCE WELL LIGHTED

French Admiral Says That Shipping Is Well Guarded.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 27. — Hon. L. P. Brodeur, who returned to the city this forenoon, says that he had just returned from an inquiry into the aids to navigation along the St. Lawrence route. The French admiral told him that he knew of no route better lighted than the St. Lawrence. However, there were certain improvements being made, some new lights and foghorns being added. Mr. Allen accompanied the minister.

At present the best of Canadian fish finds its way to American markets and is shipped back to Canada, the Canadian purchaser having to pay the duty. How to remedy this is a matter which is now engaging the attention of the minister. He hopes to be able to make some arrangements whereby Canadians can have fresh fish sent direct from the Maritime Provinces instead of importing.

BARGE AFIRE.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 27. — Fire broke out early today on the barge Agnes Potter, in tow of the steamer Rhoda Stewart, a few miles off this port. A heavy sea was rolling and the burning barge broke away from the steamer and went to the beach. Her crew was taken off by the life-savers. The barge will probably be a total loss.

THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY FORMING ALCOHOL TRUST

The Octopus Purchasing All the Big Distilleries in the United States Is Chicago Report.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—The Standard Oil Company has taken steps toward acquiring ownership of all the principal distilling plants in the United States, according to a dispatch from Peoria, Ill., to the Tribune. A conference was held Friday last in Chicago between representatives of the distilling interests and the Standard Oil Company. A price has been set upon every distillery in Peoria, and indications are a deal will be effected, and the plants will pass into the hands of the Standard soon.

It is said the price asked was considered too high by the Standard Oil people and the latter threatened that if suitable terms could not be reached to build distilling houses of their own. The chief reason of this action on the part of the Standard Oil Company was the recent passage of the alcohol bill by Congress. Experts employed by the Rockefeller interests, after experimenting, reported their product cannot be manufactured cheaply enough to make it a serious competitor of gasolene, but that it could be used in the manufacture of mercerized cotton and other fabrics, and would be an extremely favorable product to control.

KICKED IN HEAD BY HIS HORSE

Teamster Alex. Henderson Has Narrow Escape from Death —Skull Fractured.

Mr. Alex. Henderson, teamster, llaving at 875 Waterloo street had a narrow escape from being kicked to death by a horse on Saturday evening. As it was he sustained an injury to the skull, from the effects of which he will not fully recover for many weeks.

When Mr. Henderson went to the stable after 6 o'clock on Saturday he found that one of the horses was loose. The animal was somewhat fractious, but Mr. Henderson soon succeeded in driving it into a stall, and was about to follow in to tie it, when the animal kicked him in the center of the forehead. Nothing was known of the accident until Mrs. Henderson went to the stable some time later and found her husband lying unconscious on the floor.

Doctors were hastily summoned, and they found that Mr. Henderson had sustained a fracture of the skull. The injury, it is believed, will not prove fatal.

PLUGGED HIS CAR JUST IN TIME

Cool-Headed Motorman Saves Passenger from Being Crushed to Death.

The prompt action of Motorman George Pugh, of car No. 80, Wellington street line, was all that saved Mr. E. Morley, of 240 Oxford street, from a violent death on Saturday night.

Morley was a passenger on the car going north, and as it neared Oxford street, he went to the front of the car, intending to alight when it was in motion to save time. He stepped down, and as he went to alight, he slipped. He went under the car. Pugh saw his danger, and in a moment he had plugged the car, bringing it to a stop. Morley was got out from in under the car with scarcely a scratch. His head was touching the car wheel, and his arm was across the other rail.

A second's delay by the motorman would have meant a fearful death to Morley. Pugh's presence of mind alone saved him.

MURDERED AT THE TICKER

Windsor, Ont., Man Killed in M. C. R. Station at Galien, Mich.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 27. — Lloyd Gynes, of Windsor, Ont., night operator for the Michigan Central Railroad at Galien, Mich., was found dead at his post early today by the conductor of a passing train. He had apparently been murdered, being shot through the eye and breast. The motive is not known. Seventy dollars and a gold watch, which were on Gynes' person, were not touched.

BAD BOY ESCAPES A SECOND TIME

George Ward Drops from Third Story of Industrial School and Gets Away.

George Ward is a youngster with an innocent look and a bad record.

Some time ago George was sentenced to Mimico for a term of from one to five years. He was a member of a bad gang of thieves in the east end. While being taken to that institution he made his escape from Inspector Sanders. He was caught again, and after being tried on a second charge of stealing and being sentenced to serve not less than three or more than five years, he was safely landed at Mimico.

But Georgie had longings for the song of the birds and the festive mosquito, so the other night, when all was still, he took the sheets off his little trundle-bed, cut them into strips, tied them together, and then slid gently from the window of his room on the third story, to mother earth. Then he hiked for some plece somewhere.

At last accounts George was still going, and nobody knows where he is. He does not seem anxious to come back.

MAY CALL TROOPS FROM THIS CITY

Trouble Anticipated in Event of a Street Railway Strike at Hamilton.

Speaking of the probability of a street railway strike in Hamilton, the Spectator says:

"The company late last night sent Mayor Biggar a letter asking for militia protection. The mayor called up local militia officers to ask them if the troops would be in readiness, if a proper requisition were signed. The military officers in turn called up Gen. Otter, at Toronto, and the general said that in the event of a strike, and the militia being called out, he would send troops from Toronto and London, and that the local troops would not be called out, as it is always against the militia policy to use local troops to quell disturbances. The mayor was afraid at first that in case damage was done to the cars in a riot the city might be held liable, but he has since become convinced that the city is not supposed to do more than furnish police protection. Judge Monck is the man who would have to sign the requisition for the militia. As a result of the letter, Gen. Otter will have troops to send to Hamilton if needed, but it is the general opinion that action along this line was very hasty, and that there will probably be no need for the militia, even though there is a strike on. Clyde Green, when asked if the company would make an attempt to run its cars in case of a strike, refused to answer. This was not a subject for public discussion, he said."

YACHT GALILEE AGROUND.

Yokohama, Aug. 27. — The magnetic survey yacht Galilee, which sailed from San Francisco about a year ago, in the interests of the Carnegie Institute, was driven on the breakwater here during a typhoon on the 24th. She was considerably damaged, but has been refloated and docked for repairs. The crew and scientists aboard are safe.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT DESERONTO; EIGHTEEN BUILDINGS WIPED OUT

Napanee Comes to the Rescue and Saves Town from Destruction.

Deseronto, Aug. 26.—One of the most disastrous fires which has occurred here in recent years started last night, and for about an hour threatened to wipe out the whole eastern portion of the town. The fire originated at the big trestle shed dock, owned by the Rathbun Company, and inside of a few minutes the whole structure was one mass of flames.,

There was a strong south wind blowing towards the town, and it was soon seen that everything was doomed, if aid was not procured at once.

Two fire engines and crews were brought from Napanee and every person available was pressed into service to help keep down the blaze.

The big trestle, refuse boilers, thousands of feet of lumber, and cords of hardwood, belonging to the Rathbun Company, and three dwelling houses were destroyed.

About 9 o'clock the wind shifted and for a while it was thought to be under control. Later the wind again shifted and for a while it was again decidedly dangerous.

It was, however, brought under control, and by 2 o'clock was almost entirely extinguished.

Eighteen houses, besides the lumber and cordwood, were destroyed.

The loss will amount to thousands of dollars. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

STALWART GUARDS OF BEACH; HOW THEY RESCUE DROWNING

Incidents in Careers of Old-Time Life-Savers—Old Lady and Her Wig.

Atlantic City, Aug. 25.—The two remarkable life-saving operations a few weeks ago—one off the coast of Rhode Island, where the bather had been under water twenty-three minutes, and the other at Atlantic City, where the period under water was eighteen minutes—are explained by professional life savers as only proof of the great progress made in applying scientific methods toward resuscitating persons taken out of the water.

There is a good deal of the melodramatic about life saving at the beaches. A rescue is thrilling, and it always will be; but there is something required besides courage. Almost any cool-headed, athletic and plucky young man can effect a rescue. It takes science—knowledge of anatomy, physiology, one almost might say of medicine itself—to bring about resuscitation after the victim is brought out without a flutter of the pulse and with lungs and stomach filled with water. That is the reason why medical students stand a better chance of getting positions as life guards at summer resorts than any other class of men.

Of course the day of the "old salt" has not passed. There are veterans in the life saving business. The keeper of the life saving station at Long Beach, "Cap'n" Schenck, has been there for thirty years. But he stays there the year round and is the nucleus of the corps that is formed in the summer months. E. C. Hunt, captain of the life guards at Manhattan Beach, has been dragging venturesome swimmers out of the surf for eighteen years. But the rank and file of the guards are made up of young men, for the most part medical students who earn money during the vacation season to defray their expenses through college.

The average pay is $50 a month, and the boys earn it. At Manhattan Beach the hours are from 5 o'clock in the morning until 7 at night. At Long Beach the patrol is out night and day, working by shifts. This is done because the life guards at this point have to look out for wrecks as well as rash bathers. At Atlantic City the patrol is out from daybreak until dark.

Systematic Lookout.

Everything is system, and the watchword is a keen lookout for anyone in distress. The guards along the beach where bathers are numerous are stationed about 150 feet apart. The regulations require that they be attired only in bathing suits, except in the chilly days of autumn, when they can throw overcoats around their shoulders. They are not permitted to wear shoes. They must be standing by or seated in the lifeboat all the time, with the life buoy and coiled rope within easy reach.

"There is plenty of strain about the business," said Capt. Hunt of the Manhattan Beach life guards. "You can imagine what it means to stand all day with your eye peeled on the surf with hundreds in bathing at once. After a man has been at it for a while he gets to be an expert in detecting signs of distress. Few persons have any idea that we keep practically every bather under surveillance from the time his feet touch the water. We don't wait till a man goes down for the third time in order to get our warning.

"You see, a large majority of those who drown don't die from drowning at all. That sounds like an Irish bull, but it isn't. They die from heart failure. A person with a weak heart should never attempt to swim alone. Human beings are nothing but pieces of machinery, and you never can tell when a machine will break down, no matter how well it's built. We keep a sharp eye out for those who have weak hearts. Fortunately, it is easy to pick them out. Water of the temperature in this latitude gives the bather a shock when he first hits it. If his heart is weak his lips gets blue at the start. We keep that chap in mind until he goes to his dressing-room.

"Several years ago a robust man, rather stout, in fact, came out here. We noticed when he took his first plunge that he showed blue at the lips, and we watched him closely. He was a good swimmer, and he struck out bravely. Everything seemed to be all right. Finally he turned over on his back when he was about 200 feet out and began floating. He tossed about on the waves like a cork. He did not move a limb, and that seemed peculiar after a few minutes. He kept coming in, but always moving further down the beach. The case seemed so strange that we ran the lifeboat out to him. We found he was dead. When we tried the usual methods of resuscitation on him we saw he had swallowed no water and therefore could not have drowned. It was simply a case of a weak heart.

"You have heard the old adage that it is usually the good swimmer that gets drowned. I wish I could contradict that saying, but I can't. It's true. Part of it is due to recklessness and part of it to a weak heart. A great many athletes have weak hearts. And they fail to make the discovery until they have gone too far out. Then their hearts give out. Frequently it is a case of nerves. A good swimmer likes to show off. There is nothing that pleases him better than to get out about 100 yards. He isn't so pleased when he turns around and sees how far he has to swim to get back. The tide may be against him, and he may have a little fight with a counter current. Then he goes all to pieces from mere fright. He loses his head and begins to expend his strength in wild floundering, and then we have to go out on a hurry call. He is lucky if we get there in time.

"This may seem like a broad statement but I contend that any strong man who knows how to swim even well has no business drowning unless he has been out for hours and is completely worn out from chill and exhaustion. People drown because they lose their heads. It requires almost no exertion to keep afloat in sea water. One hand can sustain a man. If cramps come all you have to do is to turn on your back. Cramps attack the legs, and if you turn on your back and paddle with the hands the pain soon will go away in most cases. But the trouble is that most persons get excited when facing a big breaker or when they see they have swum farther than they thought, and their nerve deserts them.

"Women are easier to rescue than men. They instinctively repose faith in a man who comes to help them and our task is easy. A man usually puts up a hard fight, and strange to say, the best swimmers are the worst fighters.

Didn't Want To Be Rescued.

"Once I had one woman who refused to be rescued. I heard her give a shriek and at once plunged in. She was a plump woman and was making the water boil, while her screams were deafening.

"'I don't want to be saved,' she wailed as I dragged her ashore. 'I have lost my rings.' And then she poured into my dripping ears the tale of how her wedding ring and a big solitaire had slipped from her finger and she had tried to dive for them.

"Women are foolish to wear their jewels in bathing. The water causes the fingers to shrink, and the rings slip off. Tens of thousands of dollars' worth of jewels have been lost in the surf at Manhattan Beach. Rings reported to be worth as much as $2,000 have been fed to the fishes in this way. It is rare that we recover any of them, although I have known of a few cases when the women stood still and called the guard immediately. The losses incurred in this way on this very beach would make the fabled treasure of Capt. Kidd look small.

"How long can a person stay under water before life becomes extinct? From fifteen to twenty-five minutes is the limit. It all depends upon the person and the stage of exhaustion. If the heart is in good shape a good deal more can be done than could be accomplished otherwise. A young person with considerable strength is harder to revive than an older person of moderate physical powers. This is because younger folk always exhaust themselves more than those who are older. When they do give up they are nearer the limit of their resources than those who don't struggle so much. Again, women are better subjects for resuscitation than men, for the same reason."

The keeper of the life-saving station, at Long Beach is a veteran, and his views are the result of long experience.

"I don't know how many folks I've dragged out of the water in my time," said he, "but I've the first time to get more than a 'thank you,' and there have been occasions when I've been rewarded with abuse.

"I remember one night late in October, after the beach season had closed and the patrol had been scaled down to its winter force. It was a still night, but a chilly one, and I was sleeping soundly, about 10:30, when my wife awakened me.

"'I think I hear someone calling for help,' she said.

"I listened and thought I heard it, too. I got up and went out on the beach and walked back and forth, but the only thing I could hear sounded like someone singing from a distance. I went back to bed, and about 2 o'clock my wife woke me up again.

"'I hear some people calling for help,' she insisted.

"I got up and went out on the beach. The moon was up then, and out about a quarter of a mile at sea I saw a capsized boat, and from it came the sound of cries. I got my boat out and rowed to the craft, which happened to be a small yacht. There were two women and two men clinging to it. They were all pretty nearly gone, for they had been in the chilly water since about 10 o'clock. As I got close to them the two women collapsed and fainted. I got one of them out in a moment, and she was later revived. The other got under the yacht in some way, and, probably from a weak heart, it was impossible to bring her to. I got them all to shore and they stayed at the station that night. Next morning the men wanted me to row them across the inlet. The trains were not running then, and they didn't want to take a long tramp. I couldn't leave my work to accommodate them, and I told them so. The men stormed and threatened. I never was quite so badly abused in all my life. You would have thought I was a pickpocket instead of the man that had been up all night after saving their lives.

"No, sir; these folks whose lives you save might do the handsome thing for you if you brought back a poodle that had been lost, but they don't give you a second look for keeping them from drowning. I should judge it was a good deal owing to pride. Half the folks you help out of the water insist they didn't need your help, anyhow, no matter if you spend half the day getting the water out of them. It's this false pride that gets a lot of 'em into trouble. A young fellow came out here one time with a real handsome girl. It appears he had told the girl he was a good swimmer, and when it came to a showdown he had to make a try or lose the girl. He struck out strong for about fifty feet and saw he would have trouble getting back. Then he lost his head and began to flop. He didn't holler but we could see he was in trouble and hustled out. We got there just in time. Do you think that fellow said, 'Good, old boy,' or 'Thankee, sir?' Not a little bit. As soon as he'd spit out about a pint o' salt water he says:

Had to Deceive the Girl.

"'For the Lard's sake, don't tell that girl I ain't a good swimmer. Tell her I had a cramp. If you don't promise me that I'll jump right overboard now.' We promised, and I suppose that girl thought he was a regular whale for water.

"You can always tell a good swimmer from a poor one from the way they start to drown. A poor swimmer flounders like a fish on dry land. A good swimmer simply throws up his hands and quits.

"In my time I have seen more good swimmers drown than poor ones. One night about ten years ago a yacht capsized off the beach. On board were three very wealthy men, all expert swimmers, and a man who didn't have any money and who couldn't swim a stroke. Strange as it may seem, all three of those rich men were drowned, and the poor man who couldn't swim a stroke was saved. The three good swimmers thought they would swim ashore. They got tired out and had to give up the fight. It was impossible to revive any of them because they had so exhausted themselves. The man who couldn't swim stuck by the yacht until help came. He was suffering some from the chill of the water, but that was all."

The Atlantic City life-saving corps is one of the best drilled and best equipped in the world. System is brought to a high state at this resort, where the guards not only have to keep watch over thousands of bathers, but have to be ready to give aid to ships in distress off the coast. In the height of the season the hospitals for reviving drowning persons are situated half a mile apart, little pagoda-like structures covered with canvas, with physicians in attendance.

"We prefer the barrel for use in resuscitating patients," said one of the life guards. "I have been here for two summers, and have been making my salary go toward defraying my expenses through Johns Hopkins Medical College. Some of the boys here are students of Harvard, Yale and Princeton. It is not unpleasant work in the summer, but those who stay late in the fall get pretty chilly patrolling the beach in a bathing suit.

An Amusing Incident.

"Of couse we have more or less exciting times, but I think we usually see more humor than pathos in it. To me the funniest things of all are the swell bathers that never get into the water. As for funny experiences we have them without number.

"The most amusing rescue I ever effected was one about two weeks ago. I noticed a portly gentleman walk out on the beach with a gorgeously attired brunette. Her hair, which was black as coal, was tucked under the cutest little bonnet that ever the waves made sport of. I watched the pair wade into the surf, and didn't look for anything exciting from them, because I didn't believe they would get out very far. But they waded in where the breakers reach a pretty fair height, and then a big comber nearly buried them. The woman disappeared completely, and then I caught a glimpse of raven tresses and a chic bonnet tossing about in the water. I made a grab for the ebon hair and found no lady under it. There was only a wig and a bonnet, and the lady was standing nearby with both hands trying hard to cover a head as gray as the coat of a rat. Her escort looked at her in stupid amazement.

"'Gosh,' he sputtered, as he waddled out to his dressing-room. 'Let's get out before you go all to pieces.'

"Only recently the guard in the station next to mine heard a wild shriek out in the surf and saw an old gentleman bobbing wildly up and down. He raced out and found the old chap in terrible distress.

"'A big wave just knocked my false teeth out of my mouth,' he bawled. 'I'll give you $50 if you'll get them back for me. They are the only set I ever had that fitted, and I won't go back to my hotel till I get them.'

"The poor old fellow was in a dreadful state of mind and his mouth was puckered up like a dried fig. But he had to go back to his hotel without his teeth, and I suppose he cut short his stay for that reason."

Blinded With Headache.

That's the direct result of constipation. Simplest remedy is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut which enliven the bowels, stimulate kidney and liver, action, and thoroughly cure headache.

SHOULD BE TRAINED FOR BATTLE

Something About One of the Most Remarkable Medical Discoveries of Recent Years.

Toronto, Aug. 27.—In his presidential address delivered to the British Association a few days ago, Prof. Lankester devoted an important section to the medical advances of the past few years, and summarized in illuminating words the position of the profession today. A pathetic interest attaches to Prof. Lankester's address, in view of the movement to retire him as director of the Natural History Museum on a pension of £800 a year. In a long letter to the Times, Prof. Lankester protests, eloquently and with dignity, against the action which would deprive him of a salary of £1,200, and throw him, at the age of 60, upon a world with which he is unacquainted having spent his life in research and scientific experiment. It is to be hoped that some better recognition of Prof. Lankester's work as a scientist will be made than that proposed by the directors.

Realizing that the two greatest medical discoveries of the century were made by British doctors, it is only proper to admit that German, French, and Austrian medical men are to be credited with illustrious services in the study and treatment of disease. Prof. Lankester's remarks on medicine begin with a deserved tribute to Koch and Cohn. It was the latter, a professor in botany at Breslau, who gave Koch a start on his distinguished career, to which bacteriology owes so much. Thus did a botanist become a great benefactor to the medical profession; and to a zoologist, Metschnikoff, the explanation of immunity is due. Fifteen years ago Calmette, a brilliant French investigator, startled the world with the announcement of his experiments on a horse, into whose veins had been injected cobra venom. Calmette showed that if the poison was administered in small and attenuated doses at first, and gradually increased, enough might ultimately be given to kill thirty horses without in the least disturbing the animal. The horse had become immune, and an examination of his blood would show that a powerful antidote had been created. The Behring lymph, a practical specific for diphtheria, was a result of this discovery.

There is no discovery in medicine that makes more fascinating and encouraging reading than that of Metschnikoff in reference to the work of the white corpuscles, named by him phagocytes, or "cell-eaters." It is this theory that is now generally accepted as the explanation of immunity noted by Calmette. The white cells, or leucocytes, are the natural enemies of hostile germs. They are the warriors of the body, and so long as they are numerous and healthy enough no disease germs can injure their employer. By means of the microscope Metschnikoff was able to give a graphic description of the action of the warrior cells, as soon as the disease germs set up their action in the blood. Inflammation is the first indication of the battle—a blow struck by the invading micro-organisms. They have declared a state of siege. The blood current in the capillary blood-vessels is stopped. The red blood cells might be likened to terrified wayfarers, huddling together. The infected territory is put, so to speak, under martial law, and the soldiers are called out. These dash out through the arteries, press through the tissue afflicted and give battle to the invaders. The battle rages, and usually ends in the leucocytes seizing and literally devouring their prey. The battle ended, circulation is resumed, inflammation disappears, and health is restored. It is to the action of the gallant little "phagocytes" that we owe our lives, once a deadly germ finds lodgment in the body.

In his address Dr. Lankester praised Metschnikoff's theory that the leucocytes should be stimulated in their activity, so that they might be always in training for the battles they may be called on to fight any moment. He found that alcohol, opium, and even quinine had a tendency to hinder the phagocytic action, and should, therefore, be used with extreme care, if not eschewed entirely. This discovery was probably in Sir Victor Horsley's mind when he spoke so earnestly of the dangers of alcohol as a drug. Of late years experimenters have been endeavoring to complete Metschnikoff's work by discovering some means by which the white corpuscles might be not only strengthened, but increased. When this is done the danger from germs will surely be a thing of the past, and mankind will have solved part of the problem of long life.

The study of disease is nowadays carried on chiefly by means of the microscope. Before this wonderful instrument was brought to something like its present state of perfection by Leitz, a knowledge of the cellular theory and micro-organisms, even if possible, would have been useless. By its use we have had the baccilli of leprosy, cholera, the plague, syphilis, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, yellow fever, malaria, the sleeping sickness, and other diseases identified in the past few years or months. In most of these discoveries European histologists chiefly Germans, have led the way, although a Japanese identified the plague germ and Col. Bruce and Major Ross made the discoveries relating to the germs whose favorite haunt is South Africa, and whose favorite messengers are mosquitoes and the tsetze fly.

In closing his review of medical advance in the past few years, Prof. Lankester warned his hearers that if England desired to keep the place in the world of science that had been won for her by Newton, Harvey, Darwin, Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall, and other fireat geniuses, she must be prepared to follow Germany's example, and employ capable investigators. It is necessary to spend a thousand pounds where one pound is now spent. As a result of wise expenditure of the kind, he did not hesitate to point his countrymen to a day when an end would be made of disease and the millennium ushered in.

KISSES GO AT A BARGAIN

Valued by Woman at $20,000, But Court Fines $10.

New York, Aug. 25. — Mrs. Eugenie Wisby, who resides at Bath Beach, appeared before Magistrate Voorhees this morning in the Coney Island court as complainant against Louis Fleischman, who resides in the same house and is employed as a clerk in Wall street. Mrs. Wisby alleges that Fleischman entered her room while she was asleep with her daughter, and kissed her twice.

Mrs. Wisby said that Sunday night she had just dropped off into deep sleep when she felt something touch her lips. She raised up immediately and, awaking her daughter, asked the young girl if she had kissed her, but the daughter declared that her mother must have been dreaming. Mrs. Wisby said she had not been dreaming. Then it suddenly dawned upon her that the person who had kissed her wore a mustache, because the end of her nose and both cheeks had been tickled.

While the mother and daughter were talking it over the young man on the floor below was having it out with himself as to whether it would be the proper thing to go and offer an apology. Mr. Wisby said the apology was offered her, but it was no balm for her injured feelings. In making her application for a warrant she asked the clerk what a man who stole kisses could get. She was informed that, in her particular case, it looked as though grand larceny would be the proper charge. Mrs. Wisby told the complant clerk that if the accused was worth any money she would charge $2,000 for each kiss.

Fleischman remained in a cell because he was unable to furnish bail. He admitted that he had kissed Mrs. Wisby, and was charged with disorderly conduct and fined $10.

WE HAVE no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhea, cholera and all summer complaints, seasickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

Spain is the only country with a coinage having a baby's head on it. It is the coinage of King Alfonso, issued in 1888.

A MERRY HEART GOES ALL THE DAY.—But one cannot have a merry heart if he has a pain in the back or a cold with a racking cough. To be merry one must be well and free from aches and pains. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will relieve all pains, muscular or otherwise, and for the speedy treatment of colds and coughs it is a splendid medicine.

How It Spreads.

The first package of Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid (the infallible Pile cure) that was put up went to a small town in Nebraska.

It cured a case of Piles that was considered hopeless.

The news spread, and although this was only two years ago, the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it for general use. Now it is being sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles. There is a month's treatment in each box.

WHIPPED TO DEATH

Tiny Russian Girl Refugee Tells of Awful Cossack Cruelties.

New York, Aug. 27. — Thirty Jewish orphans from Russia, whose parents were killed in massacres in Odessa and other Russian cities or towns, arrived from Europe yesterday on the steamship Amerika. There were ten boys and twenty girls in the group. The Jewish societies of New York will take care of the children.

Rebecca Molefsky, aged 12 years, one of the Jewish orphans, told at Ellis Island how her parents were whipped to death by Cossacks in the public square at Kishineff. Through on interpreter she told the story:

"My father was a tinsmith and he had done something to make the Russian soldiers cross with him. They came to our house and beat my mother so hard that she cried. Then my father came home and struck one of the soldiers, who went away. That evening a dozen Cossacks came to our house again and took my father and mother away. I and my little brother, Josef, followed them. Josef is 6 years old.

"On the way to the market place, where they finally beat my parents, they bound them hand to hand first, but when they reached the public square they bound my mother and father hand and foot, back to back. Then they took great whips and they beat them both across the face and body, and each time they fell down they picked them up again and beat them the more. With my brother I had tried to get to where my parents were, but the soldiers dragged us away, and because I screamed and my brother cried, they locked us up for three days without food, after which my brother died. The soldiers then told me to run away. I found out afterward that my parents were dead."

The Empress Eugenie recently gave to the Swiss canton of Thurgau the castle of Arenberg, where Napoleon III. passed several years of his youth.

"Sir" is the name bestowed upon Mrs. Potter Palmer by Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, the only sister of the dignified member of Chicago's leading society.

To Get More Strength from Your Food

LOTS of people are starving with a full stomach.

You know, it's not how much we Eat, but how we Digest that makes us Strong, or Brainy, or Successful.

When the Bowels are filled with undigested food we may be a great deal worse off than if we were half starved for want of Food.

Because, food that stays too long in the Bowels decays there, just as if it stayed too long in the open air.

* * *

Well, when food decays in the Bowels, through delayed and overdue action, what happens?

The millions of little Suction Pumps that line the Bowels and Intestines then draw Poison from the decayed Food, instead of the Nourishment they were intended to draw.

This Poison gets into the blood and, in time, spreads all over the body, unless the Cause of Constipation is promptly removed.

That Cause of Constipation is Weak, or Lazy, Bowel Muscles.

* * *

When your Bowel-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them—not "Physic" to pamper them.

There's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowel-Muscles.

Its name is "CASCARETS," and its price is Ten Cents a box.

Cascarets act like Exercise on the Muscles of the Bowels, and make them stronger every time they force these Muscles to act naturally.

The stronger these Muscles propel the food, the stronger does the friction of the food act on the flow of Digestive Juices.

The more of these Juices that act on food, the more Nutriment does that food turn into, and the richer nourishment do the little Suction Pumps of the Intestines draw out of it.

It needs only one Cascaret at a time to stimulate all the Bowel-Muscles enough, without purging, discomfort or loss of nutrition.

So, if you want the same natural action that a six-mile walk in the country would give you, (without the weariness) take one Cascaret at a time, with intervals between, till you reach the exact condition you desire.

* * *

One Cascaret at a time will properly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue, thus proving clearly its ready, steady, sure, but mild and effective action.

A coming Headache can be warded off, in short order, by a single Cascaret, and the cause removed.

Heartburn, Gas-belching, Acid-risings in the throat, and Colicky feeling are sure signs of Bowel trouble from food poisons, and should be dealt with promptly.

One Cascaret will stop the coming trouble, move on the Bowel load, and free the Digestive Juices, if that one Cascaret is taken as soon as the first signs are noticed.

* * *

Don't fail to carry the Vest Pocket Cascaret Box with you constantly.

A thousand dollars a year spent in amusements could not buy for you half so much hearty Happiness, solid Comfort, Cheerful Temper and Health Insurance, as that little ten cent "Vest Pocket" Box of Cascarets will bring you.

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past.

CALL LEOPOLD GREAT WASTER

Newspaper Issues Violent Attack on His Private Life.

HIS WIFE IS THE CAUSE

Her Caprices Said to Cost the Belgian Monarch a Small Fortune Every Year.

Brussels, Aug. 26. — A violent attack on the private life of King Leopold has just appeared in one of the Brussels newspapers, and is causing excitement throughout the country. The writer plainly accuses his ruler of using money wrung from the Congo, and the heavy taxation of his country people to satisfy the caprices of his morganatic wife. It is feared that the King may be induced to recognize as his legal heir, if not successor, the baby boy to whom the wife has given birth, there being no law to prevent this.

The woman who now reigns supreme over the fancy of King Leopold is known by the title of Baroness Vaughan —Vog-han, as the Belgians call her. Her little son was born, to Leopold's intense delight, while she was at the Riviera last winter. She then lived in a pretty villa which ostensibly belonged to Dr. Thirlar, his majesty's Brussels physician. The royal yacht was lying off the shore close by, and the king was in constant attendance. He much amused himself with strangers, who tried to get a peep into the villa, and loved to give confusing answers to such as occasionally asked him for information, not knowing who he was.

Now the baroness is installed in a beautiful chateau, near Brussels, just over the road from the king's own palace at Laeken, to which access is had by a bridge that crosses from one estate to the other. The chateau, which has been renamed the Villa Flora, is surrounded by a high wall, and a porter keeps the gate. It stands close to the church of the village of Heysel, and just within the gates and near the stables is a small riding school, wherein the Baroness Vaughan has learned to ride. The house has three towers, and a veranda. There are a fine music-room and a summer-room of alabaster and marble, whence, on warm days, the baroness gazes over her pretty gardens. A curious fact about the drawing-room is that everywhere there are mirrors which reflect every turn of the person occupying it. This and a curious choice of furniture reveal a certain taste on the part of him who furnished the abode. The apartment of the baby prince is hung with pale blue, while everywhere are designs of flying birds for baby hands to stretch after.

All the linen, all the silver, all the appointments for the house, come from the royal palace, and bear the royal mark. Quite a retinue of servants is kept and a certain royal state is maintained. Indeed, the article which is so denunciatory of the king's private life declares that the baroness aims at the throne, and asserts that every day fresh land is added to her domain, peasant proprietors and others being forced out of their holdings.

Has Autos and Horses.

Four automobiles and a handsome victoria, with black and bay horses, are in the stables of the baroness, and every day sees her in one or the other, with the King beside her, driving in the neighborhood of Laeken. There is no doubt that such open behavior is arousing criticism here. Naturally, such a life puts a strong card in the hands of the Socialists, who make great use of it. They declare that the King is unfit to govern, that he is in his dotage, and in the hands of a rapacious and ambitious woman. Attention is drawn, too, by the King's detractors to the contrast between the splendid home provided for the King's favorite, with all its luxury and brightness, and the little villa close by, gloomy and badly furnished, which has been assigned to the Princess Clementine, the King's only remaining unmarried daughter. It is said that the princess insisted on a home of her own as the price of her giving up, to please her father, the idea of marrying Prince Louis Napoleon last year, finding life with her father impossible. Even in her own home Princess Clementine has not apparently found life too pleasant, with her father's favorite close by, and so has withdrawn for the summer to her villa at Spa, where the late Queen, her mother, died, and which her majesty bequeathed to Baron Goffinet, who has lent it to the princess. There the princess will be happy among friends, for she will have a little court about her, while the inhabitants will love her for her troubles and in memory of the Queen, who did a great deal for the little town among the hills. King Leopold is indifferent to what is said of him so the scathing newspaper article, with its accusations, is likely to pass unnoticed, unless the editor be brought to book by some question in the House of Representatives.

The Baroness Vaughan's real name is Caroline Lacroix. She is just 28, rather over middle height, with a beautiful complexion and skin, and has quantities of chestnut hair. She is plump, but graceful; her principal charm lies in her smile and expression, which has all the innocent candor of a child. Her eyes are clear and modest looking. In character she is, it is said, haughty, sharp, irritable and fantastic. Her choice of words is small, for she has no education to speak of. Her parents were originally janitors from Budapest, who came to Paris, both honest people, and both now dead. She has five brothers and sisters; one of the latter, Angele, spends most of her time at the Villa Flora with the baroness. The eldest sister, Laura, is a hard-working fruit seller in Paris.

The third resident at the Villa Flora is a person whom some people consider to be a brother of the baroness. It appears that he lived for several years with her at No. 77 Rue de Villers, Paris. His name was, before he was ennobled, Durieux, and he was much mixed up in turf matters. Every day between 12 and 4 o'clock M. Durieux (created Baron Vaughan by the King) and the baroness drive out together in an automobile or a high phaeton.

Leopold II. met Caroline Lacroix at the Palace Hotel, Paris, and fell hopelessly in love at once, despite his 70 years. Hitherto he has been faithless in his friendships, and not even Margot, Queen of the Congo, as she was called, and who has a fine house in the Avenue Louise, could keep him true, but Caroline has succeeded, and keeps her royal lover chained to her side. She is exigent about being treated with respect, and anyone in his majesty's entourage who falls in this feels his displeasure. At first his majesty saw her only at places outside his kingdom, and visitors at Luchon witnessed the King and his aide-de-camp dining discreetly at one table, and she and M. Ducrieux tete-a-tete at the next. First, the King took her for a voyage on his yacht. Then M. Ducrieux and Caroline came to Brussels, and stayed at the Hotel de Flandre. Next she was introduced into the palace at Laeken, when Princess Clementine learned the truth. Her child was registered at Saint Jean sur Mer, in the Alps Maritimes, on Feb. 8, as the son of Caroline Lacroix and an unknown father, the witnesses being Dr. Thiriar of Brussels, and Professor Thiriar, his son, both attached to the King's Brussels household.

The Inquisitive Barred.

The bridge to the chateau is of a pale green color, built with domes and minarets, in a light trellis work. Both on the side of the King's property and that of his morganatic wife, the bridge continues in a series of descending pergolas into the depths ofthe respective gardens. The domes are surmounted with the royal crown and bear the double "L," which is the King's monogram. It is decorated with plants and flowers, and when some time has elapsed and the creepers have grown, the passer over the bridge will be hidden. At present his majesty can be seen limping across, and at night he carries a small electric lamp in his hand. The entrance of the Villa Flora is strictly kept. Not only is there a stern janitor, but the iron gates are doubled by a second pair of gates inside—black, solid and strong—through which nothing can be seen. The wall that runs along the road between the garden and the new church of Heysel has been surmounted by a trellis at least twenty feet high, closely made, and impossible either to see through or climb.

Rather oddly, close to the King's Flora bridge, there is another bridge, small and plain, which runs also from the royal property to a neighboring villa. It was over this bridge that the first Leopold used to travel, on adventure bent, so that the son follows the father's example. The King is buying all the ground possible in the neighborhood of his Laeken palace and the villa, so as to keep out the inquisitive. He is bidding for the little farm near, and as there is not, for so wealthy a man, much difference between the $4,000 offered and the $5,000 wanted, it is sure to become his in time. The Chinese restaurant, which he built at Laeken, and which is nearly finished, is a white elephant. No one will take it, as it is too far from the street cars and the center of the town to promise profit. The beautiful fountain, copied from that of Bologna, remains useless, too, for there is no water, though many artesian wells have been bored for the purpose. It is estimated that it will cost $50,000 to bring water to that well. It is a beautiful fountain, and cost a large sum of money.

HOTEL ROBBED.

St. Thomas, Aug. 26. — The Park House was broken into this morning and $36 in silver and half a thousand cigars were stolen from the barroom. Entrance was made through a window, which they broke, but their midnight marauding did not disturb the inmates.

They left no trace, and Proprietor Leakey cannot throw suspicion on any person.

LOOK OUT FOR THE "QUEER."

Toronto, Aug. 26.—The detective department yesterday received a counterfeit $10 note on the Bank of Toronto. It is not a good imitation, but might be taken in a hurry. The coloring is bad, especially the yellow tinting. There are also other defects.

There are also in circulation some $1 United States notes, which have been raised to fives and tens. Just how much of this "queer" stuff has been put out is not known, nor have the detectives any clue to the identity of the "shovers."

WOMEN WAGE FIST FIGHT ON BEACH

Hundreds of Muskegon Resorters Treated to a Hair-Pulling Match.

Muskegon, Mich., Aug. 25.—Lake Michigan Park beach was turned into a pugilistic ring this afternoon, and one of the most spirited fights ever seen in this section of the country took place. The combatants were women. One of them was young, good looking and attired in a bathing suit. She was Blanche Howard, of Carson City. The other exponent of the manly act was a married women, a resident of Muskegon Heights. Her name is Mrs. Peter Johnson.

The fight was precipitated through a man who is the husband of the latter. Two thousand resorters witnessed and heartily applauded the go. The manner in which the two got into action follows:

About 4:30 o'clock this afternoon Johnson, attired in a bathing suit, wandered down to the water's edge and began talking to Miss Howard. The young lady appeared sociable, and Johnson was finally heard to suggest that they disport themselves in the water. The lady assented and the two started in to have a jolly good time.

After a half hour Miss Howard evidently grew tired, for her companion picked her up in his arms and started for shore.

As he reached the dry sand with his shapely burden Mrs. Johnson appeared. She seemed very angry at something, and motioned wildly for her husband to join her. He did so, and Miss Howard, thinking the woman was a friend of her companion, followed. Miss Howard stepped forward for an introduction. She got one. It came in the shape of a resounding whack on her back from an umbrella wielded by the irate Mrs. Johnson. It made a loud whacking sound, and hundreds on the beach turned to see what was the matter. They saw Mrs. Johnson belaboring Miss Howard on the back.

The latter started running up the beach with her assailant close behind. Miss Howard stumbled and the two rolled over together on the sand, before the eyes of a vast whooping crowd of spectators. Then the fight began at short range. Upper cuts, jolts, swings, jabs and hooks followed swiftly in succession. Finally Mrs. Johnson secured a firm hold on Miss Howard's bathing suit, there was a ripping sound, and Miss Howard stood clothed principally in blushes and confusion. At this instant a policeman shouldered his way through the crowd and separated the two, with visible embarrassment.

Johnson disappeared when the fight started, evidently badly frightened.

FAIR ONE'S MIGHT FRIGHTENS GIANT

He Signs Bond to Quit His Wooing, While She Smiles at His Undoing.

New York, Aug. 25.—Andrew Booke is 6 feet 6 inches and weighs 276 pounds, and when he falls in love he falls hard. Mrs. Johanna Schwannecke is 5 feet 4, weighs about 140, is rotund, rosy-cheeked, and a widow, and she basks in the memory of her dear, departed husband. Accordingly when the six-feet-sixer turned eyes full of love upon her it was exceedingly annoying.

Andrew once invited the fair widow to go with him to a strawberry festival, but she, in the words of her American neighbors, gave him the frosty stare. He asked her to take a trolley ride, but Mrs. Schwannecke gave him another frigid gaze. Booke wrote letters, sent telegrams, messenger boys, newsboys and tried newspaper ads. He strutted gallantly, and endeavored to attract the attention of little Mrs. Schwannecke, but she gave him more frosty stares, and when she left her house, No. 575 East One Hundred and Thirty-third street, he departed by the back alley, leaving her admirer twirling his mustache in front of the gate.

Andrew sent a telegram to the widow yesterday afternoon to meet him at the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street station of the Third avenue elevated, but Mrs. Schwannecke was downtown shopping when the message arrived, and it was just by chance that she found her six-foot-six suitor awaiting her at the church corner of the elevated.

Mrs. Schwannecke riled up and rushed at the giant. His nerve forsook him, and he faded away behind an L road pillar. Then the fair widow started down the street. The giant followed her, with love light in his eyes, humility in his tone and abject servility in his gait. At the Willis avenue corner he reached out a trembling hand and touched her. The indignant widow flew at him, pummeled his features, boxed his ears, pulled his hair and tweaked his nose. Andrew was almost happy in having her pay so much attention to him, and his six-foot-sixedness hung limp and unprotesting. The crowd cheered. Detective Heaney felt sorry for the big man and interfered. He took both Book and the widow to the police station and then to court.

Mrs. Schwannecke poured out her story of persecution by her giant lover, and he humbly said his love was so great he could not help himself.

"I place you in $500 bonds to keep your love to yourself for six months," said Magistrate Cornell. The big suitor reluctantly produced the bond, and the fair widow sailed away happy.

The average woman likes to be bossed during courtship almost as well as she likes to boss after marriage.

A POOR JAIL.

It is no new story that there are people who prefer to go to jail rather than go to work. But a striking illustration of it is the story coming from Winnipeg, that a contractor in that city, in great need of men, offered to pay the fines of fourteen men in jail there, if they would work for him. But they declined to be liberated on such terms. They preferred the cells, which are said to be none of the cleanest or most comfortable, rather than earn an honest living.

There is evidently something wrong with the punitive arrangements of Winnipeg. A jail should not be a lodging-house for tramps and lazy loafers. There is a class of the criminal population, for whom not only the best punishment, but the best medicine is work. Hard labor is the only thing that will do them any good. If no work inside can be provided for them, they should be given something to do on the public streets, with a ball and chain attachment. We spend a great deal of money in caring for prisoners, but it is going too far when the jail becomes a desirable place to live in. It is not necessary for convict labor to be brought into competition with honest labor. But the convict should be made to work. It is better for him; it is better for society when he becomes a free man. Any jail without provision for setting its inmates to work is a very poor jail.

EMOTIONAL INSANITY.

It is now announced that the defense of Thaw, the millionaire murderer of Stanford White, is to be emotional insanity. An ordinary plea of insanity would not suit this young man or his friends. Because if acquitted of murder on that ground he would be sent to an asylum. But the beauty of a plea of emotional insanity is that it assumes the subject to have been perfectly sane up to the moment he committed the crime, and immediately after he became sane again. The length of time he is insane is just as long as it takes him to kill his man.

If generally accepted as a plea for crime, this emotional insanity is going to be a serious disease. The emotionally insane will not only commit murder during their brief spasms of insanity, but all other kinds of misdemeanors—forgery, burglary, arson, will be as defensible as homicide.

We have no objection to accepting emotional insanity as a cause of crime. But we object to allowing the emotionally insane to run at large. They are unsafe people. You never know when they will have a fit. If the jurists will provide some suitable way of disposing of this class of people, so that they will not be a menace to the community, it will be all right. Capital punishment would, of course, be effectual; but if that is not approved of on general principles, then imprisonment for life, would be satisfactory.

Between the two extremes of lynching a negro and acquitting the millionaire lunatic, society ought to be able to find some reasonable medium.

THE OPIUM TRAFFIC.

It has always been regarded as a blot on the British Government of India that she has insisted on the perpetration of the opium traffic with China, even at the point of the bayonet, as was the case when British soldiers were used last century to compel the continuance of the importation of the drug into the Chinese empire.

But there is evidence that a new era is dawning in the east. The awakening has been slow, but both British and Chinese statesmen are now showing they are alive to the degradation of the traffic. Good evidence was given of this fact in the resolution passed in the British House of Commons in May last on the subject, though so far the proposal that there should be virtually a prohibition of the traffic has not yet been responded to by the Chinese authorities. They are dependent for over four million dollars of their none too plentiful revenue from the duty collected on imported opium, and they are naturally slow to give up so profitable a source of revenue.

Nevertheless, the feeling of disquietude among the better class of Chinese against the great increase in the opium traffic is increasing. Not only has there been an increase in the imports of the drug, but there has been an enormous extension of the growth of the poppy throughout the empire. The cause is the steady increase in the consumption of opium by the masses. It is denied by the authorities that the better class of Chinamen use the drug. The assertion is made that a very small percentage of the high officials set a bad example in this regard, and it is stated that of all the viceroys and governors throughout the empire only one is addicted to the enervating habit. The extent of the traffic may be gathered from the fact that native opium is produced to an extent ten times greater than that of imported opium—the proportions being 3,000 tons imported, and 30,000 tons home-grown. There has been, at the same time, a great development in the use of morphia, the Japanese settlers importing large quantities of cheap hypodermic syringes.

By the new scale of taxes collected on opium, the rate applied to the eighteen provinces and to Manchuria is the same. But Indian opium being double the strength of the native article, China claims that she will henceforth be taxing the native article at twice the rate of the imported article, with the result, as pointed out by the London Times Pekin correspondent, that it is expected there will be a large increase in imported opium. Many of the Chinese authorities are, therefore, contemplating approaching the British Government with the request that it will consent to an increase in the duty of 50 per cent or double. Other Chinamen of eminence oppose such a policy on the ground that such action might put them in a false light, and that the increase in taxation would defeat its own end by leading to a large increase in smuggling.

It need cause no surprise if in view of all the circumstances, China asks the Government of India to consent to an annual reduction in the import of opium to China, which would have the effect of extinguishing the trade in ten or twelve years. Before doing this, however, it is expected that as an evidence of good faith the Chinese Government will cause to be issued an imperial edict condemning the use of opium, and forbidding the employment in the Government service of any opium eater, at the same time decreeing an annual reduction in poppy cultivation, which would lead to its extinction in ten years. It may be that the issue of such an edict by China, in view of the known instability of her governing classes, will not be regarded by the British Government as an evidence of good faith. But the evils arising from the traffic are so great that it is worth while making a supreme effort to even reduce them, and any effort in that direction by the people most vitally affected should be welcomed by Great Britain, whose responsibility for any part of the traffic the great majority of the British people would gladly see ended.

Many Canadians will be interested in the explanation given by the Rome correspondent of the London Tablet, of the recent attacks upon Cardinal Merry del Val, formerly papal ablegate to Canada. This correspondent says that the wrath stirred up against the cardinal arises from the Pope's recent encyclical condemning the National Democratic League of Italy. The leaguers lay all the blame for its issuance on the cardinal, and as the correspondent says, his eminence serves two important purposes in the Vatican—one to be secretary of state to Pius X., and the second to take the blame for everything which the people do not like—it is easily seen how the cardinal becomes the target of the dissatisfied. He has even been accused of causing the majority of the cardinals to go into "opposition" at the Vatican, and that they "are determined to oust his eminence from office." If the outside public were to believe one-half of these stories, they would be forced to the conclusion that there is even more politics in religious circles in Rome than there is in Toronto, but the Tablet correspondent, who is usually well-informed, discounts all these stories, and adds that "the real trouble it that there is not a cardinal in the Curia at this moment who would be willing to accept, except as a hard duty, the office of secretary of state," and, further, "the sympathies of the entire Sacred College are with his eminence." They seem to have dogday political romances in Italy as well as in Canada.

They were standing in the shadows down by the old mill. In the copse a night bird called.

"Parting is such sweet sorrow," he said, with a sigh, as he stood and steeped his soul in the lovelight from her eyes.

"Break away, George. Your liver's on the bum. What you need is sassafras tea."

HE PLAYED THE FLY SPECKS.

[Boston Herald.]

Bandmaster Hemenway of South Framingham led the band in the old days of E flat cornets. One day while filling an engagement he selected a march, and while playing it the rest of the band were surprised to hear, instead of the customery E flat melody, a series of startling and brilliant variations. One of the players looked over Hemenway's shoulder and noticed that his page was so covered with fly specks that the notes could hardly be seen.

"How could you read and play that part?" he asked.

"Oh," replied Hemenway. "I just played everything there, fly specks and all."

Or Captain Kidd of sable quill,
Hiding treasures in the hill,

Nature made thee for each season,
Gave thee wit for ample reason,

Good crow wit that's always burnished
Like the coat her care has furnished.

May thy numbers ne'er diminish,
I'll befriend thee till life's finish.

May I never cease to meet thee,
May I never have to eat thee.

And may thou never have to fare so
That thou playest the part of scarecrow.

NATURAL FLOWERS IN HATS.

[London Mail.]

Interesting crowds, composed chiefly of the fair sex, were constantly forming in front of the windows of a florist's in Tottenham court road yesterday, where there were on view several attractive spring hats, trimmed with real blossoms. THE LIMIT OF POETRY.

[Milwaukee Sentinel.]

That poets' themes are attaining a higher standard is evidenced in the following little lyric taken from the Chattanooga Times.

A broken toy, a chicken bone,
A piece of liver, a rubber shoe,
Some faded flowers, a stale corn pone—
Is garbage.

Old tin cans and melon rinds,
Sister's letters and father's hat,
Empty bottles of various kinds,
The fuzzy remains of the family cat—
Is garbage.

Things of iron and wooden things,
Anything dead or old or bad
That walked the earth or went on wings,
A relic of a wornout fad,
Is garbage.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS.

When the Welland canal is deepened so as to admit of large grain laden vessels coming through to Kingston, this port will be one of the busiest on the chain of inland waters.

ONE MEAL A DAY.

[Windsor Record.]

The no-breakfast practice is not a craze nor a fad, but a practice which thousands have found to be wholesome for both mind and body, while increasing the luncheon capacity. As for cutting out the luncheon, many hard brain-workers find the taking of only one meal a day an advantage. As during the sleeping hours the body is assimilating and using for repairs the food taken the day before, the breakfast is an illogical meal. The world is becoming less devoted to gastronomy.

WEEPS FOR HIS IGNORANCE.

[Colfax (La.) People's Demands.]

A scaley skinned "fido" living near Pollock, makes the broad assertion that "no gentleman would allow the People's Demands in his house." Poor old fool; we weap for his ignorance and his blindness. May God some day make him as good as the most degraded man reading this paper. His poor schriveled thoughts will never procure for him a home in Glory unless he receives grace from the Throne sufficient to make him full of forgiveness and respect for the opinion of his fellow-creature.

STRANGE STORY OF NOTED CRIME

Odd Evidence That Ends in Sensational Arrest.

DID MAN MURDER WRONG GIRL?

New Face Put on Bedford, Indiana, Murder Which Out Sherlocks Holmes.

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 27. — By the strange linking together of a chain of circumstances that reads like an adventure of Sherlock Holmes, Prosecutor Fletcher, of Bedford, Ind., and the authorities of the city, have run down a man they will charge with the murder of Sarah Schafer, who was killed at Bedford, Ind., on the night of Jan. 21, 1904.

That man is Ernest Tanksley, who was arrested here on a charge of abducting Nellie Rainey, a young Sunday school teacher, who, it is now alleged, was selected as the victim of the Bedford tragedy, but in whose stead Sarah Schafer was slain by mistake.

The story, it is said, starts back in the little village of Heltonville, Ind., eight miles from Bedford. Five years ago there lived in adjoining houses the Rainey and the Tanksley families.

Won Girl's Heart.

Nellie Rainey, 14 years old, visited the Tanksley home, and, it is claimed, became infatuated with Tanksley when she was but about 15 years old. Two years ago the village folk began to talk about the alleged relations between Tanksley and pretty Nellie Rainey, then a teacher in the Baptist Sunday school.

Tanksley was married and had three children. To escape the whispering tongues of the villagers he left his family in Heltonville, and went to Bedford in the fall of 1903, but kept up a correspondence with Miss Rainey.

For some reason, at present unknown, Tanksley returned to Heltonville from Bedford in the spring of 1904, but left again suddenly in October, 1905. At the same time Miss Rainey told her father she was going to Bedford to have some dental work done. That was the last ever heard of her until the detectives arrested Tanksley and Miss Rainey here in a rooming house. They had been traced through the efforts of the girl's father, who never gave up the search for his missing daughter.

After several months of search the father, about three weeks ago, turned over to Prosecuting Attorney Fletcher, of Bedford, a number of letters Tanksley had written to Miss Rainey. A warrant was sworn out charging Tanksley with kidnaping Miss Rainey, and the prosecutor then began looking over the letters.

Telltale Missive.

He came across the letter, asking Nellie to meet Tanksley at the head of the alley in Bedford on the same night and hour when Sarah Schafer went to her doom. Immediately the prosecutor took his cue and began searching Tanksley's Bedford record. Then a remarkable story came to light, which started a vigorous hunt for Tanksley.

In Bedford Tanksley roomed at the Owens boarding house, near where Sarah Schafer took her meals. Tanksley's roommate was Earl Hunter, a tall, slim, man, employed as a painter by the Southern Indiana Railroad. Hunter owned a long overcoat.

Prosecutor Fletcher found Hunter, and through him another roomer, George Hainler, at the Owens boarding house, and upon the testimony of both men, in connection with the letter asking Miss Rainey to meet Tanksley in Bedford on the night Sarah Schafer was murdered, the authorities base the charge they declare they will place against Tanksley.

According to Hunter, Tanksley borrowed Hunter's long overcoat at 6 o'clock on the night of Jan. 21, 1904, saying he was going to buy a bottle of whisky.

"Tall, Slim Man."

That night a tall man, clad in an overcoat that almost swept the ground, was seen by a number of persons, who have testified at former trials, walking back and forth on the street at the head of the dark alley between 6 and 7 o'clock.

On her way from supper to where she roomed tripped the light-hearted school teacher, Miss Schafer. She was hastening to meet a pupil. She was of the same height of Miss Rainey and of about the same build. The only difference was that she had black hair, while Miss Rainey's was light. Nellie Rainey did not go to Bedford on the night of Jan. 21, 1904.

Tanksley, according to Hunter, returned to his room in Bedford at 7:20 o'clock, almost an hour after the murder had been committed. He carried a bottle of whisky. Hunter noticed fresh scratches on Tanksley's face, it is said, and "kidded" him about it. Tanksley said nothing as to where he received the bloody marks on his cheeks and lips.

In the conversation which followed he spoke of nothing unusual, but, it is alleged, seemed to be very nervous and much perturbed, so Hunter has informed Prosecutor Fletcher. About midnight, after Hunter had gone to sleep, Tanksley, it is claimed, slipped softly into Hanner's room, where there was a fire burning in a stove.

Tanksley thought Hanner was asleep and, according to the latter's story to the prosecutor, started to poke a bundle of clothes into the stove. Hanner awoke and asked Tanksley what he was doing.

Burned Bloody Clothing.

Tanksley, so Hanner claims, explained that he had been out that night and had got his clothes bloody. He continued pushing the bundle of clothing into the fire and stood by until the garments were reduced to ashes.

After getting the sworn statements of Hunter and Hanner, Prosecutor Fletcher redoubled his efforts to find Tanksley. Again fortune favored him in a strange way.

Two weeks ago a former Bedford (Ind.) man was in Evansville and saw Tanksley on the street. He wrote to his friends at Bedford and told them of meeting Tanksley. The news that Tanksley was here came to the ears of Prosecutor Fletcher, and he sent to the police here a description of the man and of Miss Rainey.

The detectives searched the stoneyards and found their man employed here with the Caden Stone Company as a marble cutter. He refused to talk to the police.

Miss Rainey, when arrested yesterday, said at first that she and Tanksley had been married at Lebanon, Tenn. Now she admits they have been living together for almost a year illicitly. She claims she was brutally treated at home. She says she loves Tanksley, and told the police she would say nothing against him.

She made a sensational statement to a newspaper reporter that it was not the charge of kidnapping her she feared on Tanksley's account, but that he had lived in terror since she joined him last October. "If I have to go back to Bedford," she said. 'I will commit suicide, for I can aid him best by taking my own life and stilling my voice forever."

ENGLISH GAME LAWS

Instance Showing the Great Power of the Landlord.

It would be hard to find any more impressive illustration of British conservatism, of that indisposition toward change which is characteristic of the average Briton, than the resigned submission of the British farmer to the game laws which a Parliament dominated by the land-owning aristocracy has for centuries imposed upon his acceptance. These laws are an incongruous and hateful relic of feudal days. They survive from a time when the man who owned the land was an autocratic despot to those beneath him, while the man who cultivated it and by his exertions imparted to it whatever value it possessed was little better than a slave. A recent instance of their oppressive operation is given in Labouchere's "Truth."

It seems that a Mr. Hodson, occupying a farm in Surrey, agreed with the landlord that the cultivation of fruit should be substituted for the growing of wheat. He also secured the insertion in the lease of a clause which empowered him to kill rabbits in certain woods unless the landlord restrained their undue multiplication. Thus protected, Mr. Hodson went to work and developed a prosperous fruit-growing and jam-making business. All went well until the estate passed into the possession of a new landlord, who had a taste for preserving game. Then the rabbits and other game increased and multiplied to such an extent that in one year they damaged Hodson's crops to the extent of $1,350. He then asked the landlord to reduce the number of rabbits in accordance with the provisions of the lease, and when the landlord after a reasonable time had failed to do so, the tenant, acting upon the authority which he had obtained, took his shotgun, went into the woods and in a few days had killed about 500 of the pests.

The game-preserving landlord then went into court and obtained an injunction restraining Hodson from killing any more rabbits, his argument being that his failure to keep the rabbits down had not been established, and he followed this up by a suit for damages based on the killing of the 500 rabbits and on the coincident disturbance of the pheasants in his preserve. He was successful here also, and the unfortunate Hodson, who had previously been mulcted in costs to the amount of $2,000, was condemned to pay more costs and nearly $1,200 damages. All this meant that his fruit trees were placed at the mercy of the rabbits, etc., and he was, moreover, forbidden to plant any more of them.

Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that Hodson should have fallen into arrears with his rent, whereupon he was promptly evicted without being allowed a penny by way of compensation for what he had expended in the improvement of the property. At last accounts the farm was vacant, and the hares, rabbits, partridges, pheasants, etc., had the whole place to themselves. Isn't it astonishing that the British people should keep on the statute book at this late day laws under which such flagrant and outrageous injustice is possible? The radicals are in power now, but the sacred game and land laws have not been touched. It's no wonder that rural England is being depopulated.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A MISSION FULFILLED

CHAPTER I.

Enchanted.

"Pren-de, pren-de, signor!"

Keith Ronaldson was rushing down the hotel stairs three steps at a time, in a hurry to join his friend Spencer below, when he was suddenly arrested by the soft, supplicating voice. He paused; and a small brown hand pushed a coral necklace gently into his, with a repetition of the former refrain—"Prende, ah! prende, signor."

The young Englishman was not great at talking Italian; and what words were within his mental grasp had a tiresome trick of getting themselves forgotten exactly when wanted; hence, after the eccentric fashion of his sex and race, he made reply in his own tongue, more perhaps for his own than his hearer's delectation.

"Now, my good woman, what on earth am I to do with coral necklaces?"

These coral girls, crowding up the courtyard and stationing themselves upon the very staircase, were something of a nuisance—some one really ought to tell old Collimanchi, the landlord, to put a stop to it.

"Tre franche, solamente, signor! Ah, prende!"

Keith looked up, with a deprecating smile. But, as he did so, his expression changed.

The features into which he gazed were the most perfect he had ever seen. Heavens, how beautiful they were! A small, oval face, with smooth olive complexion and dark eyes of a Southerner tenderness, straight nose, small, sweet mouth, gleaming teeth, and masses of black hair rolling in heavy waves above a round, low brow. Everywhere a richness of coloring, a fullness of expression absolutely new to his experience.

Keith Ronaldson had the reputation of being a well-bred fellow, treating women of all ranks with an instinctive courtesy that among his social equals almost amounted to deference; but now he remained staring at the beautiful apparition with a fixity that would have been rude had it not been wholly unconscious. Then he suddenly shifted his gaze and let it travel downward. Surely a girl with features so lovely must be possessed of some defect of figure—Nature must make compensation to her fellows somewhere? But no, the lithe young form, dressed in its simple clean jacket and skirt of light material, was graceful and well-proportioned, and the little bare brown foot that rested on the wooden stair might have been taken as a model by a sculptor.

Suddenly he became aware that the young peasant was changing color beneath his scrutiny, and the hot flush mounted to his own forehead. How long had he been staring at her in this unconscionable way? Involuntarily he raised his straw hat, and bending over her basket of corals, pretended the deepst interest therein, making purchases to an alarming extent. But, if he remained still in the land of dreams, the same could not be said of the coral girl, whose simple mind was immediately absorbed by her monetary calculations and by her unfeigned delight in the good bargains she was making. Ah! but this Englishman was generous; he gave more than she asked for everything—truly these Inglese were a strange people, overburdened with money, but not with wisdom—why, the madre would be able to buy a new skirt for Sundays and festas, and Stefano would have a fine lump to go toward the new punt! Dio, what a good thing it was for Capri that these English milords came over so often!

Meanwhile, Keith had emptied his purse, and put his little heap of purchases upon the window-sill. He was trying to call up his few words of Italian from the vasty deep; and at length succeeded.

"What is your name?" he asked.

"Margherita, signor," she replied; and the soft syllables fell with a sort of vocal swing from the liquid voice.

"Do you live here, Margherita?"

"Ah, si, signor!"

"With your mother and father?"

"Not with the padre, signor. He is away for two years, fishing coral off the coast of Africa. But with the madre and Stefano, and Rafaella, and the bimbo."

"Your brothers and sisters?"

"Si, si, signor," and her two rows of pearly teeth gleamed in a brilliant smile as she began to rearrange her disordered basket. Both words and manner had the unconsciousness of a child; she was not the least shy; neither, on the other hand, had she a thought of coquetry.

The young Englishman found it hard to withdraw his eyes. Every time he looked at her she seemed more beautiful, she discovered to him some new grace. He knew it was time to go, that he had said enough, but he could not tear himself away. Keith Ronaldson was, at all times, peculiarly susceptible to the charms of beauty, and he was not in the habit of combating this characteristic over-strongly. Hence, as his friends remarked, the more extraordinary the fact that fate—for it certainly was not his own caution — had preserved him from the bonds of matrimony up to his present ripe age of seven-and-twenty.

"Margherita," he repeated, softly, letting his tongue dwell upon the syllables as a native would have done—"Margherita! that is the same name as your queen's, is it not!"

She simply nodded assent. She was busy over her basket.

"Your beautiful queen," he went on vaguely. "But not so beautiful as you, Margherita."

He longed foolishly to provoke the rich color into the oval cheek, to see the light flame into the great dark eyes.

But she did not blush, nor even look up. Probably, Ronaldson said to himself, with a momentary self-contempt she had listened to words like these many times from more congenial lips; or, perhaps, merely thought the signor Inglese was talking nonsense.

"Ah, no, signor," she said, quietly; "that is not so."

And she took up her basket and prepared to depart. There was not much more chance of customers within the hotel now. It was getting toward noon, and most of the visitors had already passed downstairs.

"Buno giorno, signor," she said, with perfect friendliness, as she placed her basket on her coil of raven hair.

"Margherita," he exclaimed, suddenly, "will you show me your home?"

"Ah, si, signor, if you wish it. My mother will be pleased to welcome you. But there is nothing there to see; only the bimbo. And young signors," said the girl, with a spice of gentle fun, "do not often care for bimbi. But perhaps the signor will let Stefano take him to the grottoes in his boat!"

"Why was she so terribly business-like?" thought Keith, with a smile. Nevertheless, an arrangement was satisfactorily made for both visit and boating excursion that afternoon; and then he watched the slight figure, queenlike in its carriage, patter softly on bare feet down the stairs, the small black head swaying with every movement of the girl's body, yet never for a moment imperiling the safety of the large basket poised upon it.

Glancing through the staircase window, he could see her passing through the courtyard with a smile and quiet greeting to all or nearly all—to a party of three Germans smoking in a corner, to two artists good-humoredly wrangling over their knapsacks previous to an excursion, to a solitary Englishman who sat upon a bench, reading his newspaper.

This latter it was to whom, a moment later, Keith Ronaldson joined himself, with profuse apologies.

"So sorry to have kept you waiting old fellow; I always was a lazy beggar. Even Capri can't get me out of bed before nine o'clock."

Spencer glanced keenly toward the speaker. He was a spare, slight man, with sallow and somewhat dried-up features, redeemed from the commonplace by an expression of mingled shrewdness and humor. He was, to an outsider, evidently a gentleman, and probably a good fellow, although belonging to the oyster tribe. But Ronaldson knew him to be a good fellow, during an acquaintance of twelve or thirteen years, which had first begun, in fact, when together they handled an oar, or construed their Virgil side by side at Eton. He was, however, the other deemed, eccentric; and none the less so that a vein of benevolence often showed itself amid the phases of his eccentricity. The latest development of this latter quality had, to Keith's mind, displayed itself in the fact of his settling down for a visit of undefined length in this out-of-the-way part of the world. The only explanation of his conduct was the slight tendency toward lung disease which he possessed, or fancied he possessed, and which someone had persuaded him might be cured by the beneficial air of Capri. On hearing of Ronaldson's Italian tour, Spencer had written to recommend the natural beauties of Capri, and the comforts of his own particular hotel; and the night before had welcomed his old school-fellow to the island of goats. This morning they had agreed to devote to an excursion to the further end of the island.

"Possibly, also," he now remarked, quietly, "Margherita delayed you a little—she does many people."

Ronaldson turned toward him eagerly.

"She is the most beautiful creature I ever saw, Spencer."

"She isn't bad looking, even for Capri," returned the other. "And, what's more, she's a good girl as well as a pretty one."

"She looks it," said Keith, warmly. "But surely there are not many so handsome as she is, even in Capri?"

"Not many—perhaps, none quite her equal. Did you buy many coral necklaces?"

Ronaldson's face flushed, and he began to laugh; but in his heart he felt a little bit annoyed with his friend for making fun of him.

"Oh, you needn't be shy about it," remarked Spencer, dryly. "They all do it—all the newcomers. I mean, of course, of your age and sex. I did it myself at first, until I'd filled both my portmanteaus with rubbish. Anybody can have it at half price now that likes. Not but what I'm just as much in love with Margherita as ever. Every one I know is in love with her—including all the native population."

"I don't believe," remarked Keith, half humorously, half crossly, "that a hermit crab like you is capable of falling in love. Shall we start?" he added; for his friend's tone jarred upon his mood ever so slightly.

CHAPTER II.

A Curse Upon Your Evil Eye.

It was a pretty scene, well worthy of the brush of one of the many artists crowding the island, had he happened to be there at the moment—which unfortunately he was not. The sun was setting in a blaze of glory—bars of gold and crimson deeps; the sea lay in an unusual calm, green and glistening many colored shadows tracing patterns on its brown rocks, seamed and fissured above with the passions of the elements, worn away below into countless hollowed caves. The boats lay moored in a long line upon the shingly beach, which was flanked by a row of fishermen's cottages, many of them reached from the strand by a little wooden ladder or staircase.

Leaning against one of the bigger vessels, one hand holding her knitting the other upraised to shade her eyes from the burning sun, stood Margherita her bare feet, round as a babe's in their untrammeled outlines, crossed one above the other just within reach of the ripples which swept across their arched insteps. It was a position full of unstudied grace. At her feet lay the bimbo, an infant of about a year old, more than half naked, who was engaged in alternately dabbling his brown legs in the wavelets, and raising, with praiseworthy energy, a pile of small stones. A smile played upon the girl's features, and as she looked across the sea, and cheeks and eyes caught the reflection of the bright sunset glow, she might have stood as a very type of youthful beauty, health and radiant happiness. So, perhaps, after a rendering of his own thought the young man who was coming toward her—a fisherman dressed in the usual blue shirt and scarlet cap. He was dark and short, and singularly handsome; his figure, had it been a little taller, might well have served as model for some Greek statue, with the massive strength of the broad chest, the shapely head, and well-placed neck, and the straight firm legs bronzed and bare almost to the thighs. He was evidently an intimate acquaintance; and she nodded as he approached, dropping her hand from her eyes and once more resuming her knitting. A word of greeting passed between them then he stooped and lifted the little one upon his shoulder, making it shout with delight, as with two chubby hands it clutched his scarlet cap. But a moment later he put the child down as suddenly as he had taken it up, and turned toward the girl.

"What were you looking out for, Rita, just now?" he asked, searching her face eagerly but silently.

"Stefana's boat," she replied, readily. "He is out tonight."

"Ah! I know—with the signor Inglese who came to visit your house this afternoon?"

Margherita simply nodded her head, and went on knitting.

"What did he come to see the madre for, Rita?"

Margherita shook her head again; but this time less readily.

"How know I? He wished to come. He engaged Fano to take him out in his boat."

"Fano could have gone up to the hotel."

Margherita shrugged her shoulders in silence. She had neither power nor desire to explain to the young fisherman the eccentricities of a foreigner. He turned away his head, but stood beside her leaning against the same boat and absently kicking over the pebbles with his bare feet.

"Did you sell much coral up at the hotel today, cugina mia?"

"A good deal, Nimo—a fine lot."

He paused a moment, and his voice changed.

"To the Englishman out with Fano, I suppose?"

"To the Englishman out there. Why not, Geronimo?"

A sudden cloud swept across the young man's face, and lowered in his deep-set eyes.

"Your mother should not send you there, Rita—you should not stand upon the hotel stairs to sell to these milords Inglese."

"And why not, Nimo? Why should I not earn what I can to help the madre and the little ones?"

She was perfectly calm, he was changing color and breathing with suppressed excitement — it was easy to see which must win the argument.

"They do but mock at you, Margherita. They make fine speeches to you—they tell you you are beautiful—what else? But they do not mean it. It is not fit, Margherita—why should they laugh at you?"

The girl listened to him intently, knitting rapidly, but when he had finished, she paused and turned toward him with a sudden light in her eyes, and a touch of scorn in her soft, young voice.

"And if they did, Geronimo, what harm would their fine speeches do to anyone? They buy from me, and that is all I care for. I do not listen to their words. But there is not one among them who would dare to mock at me. You are foolish, cugino mio."

And with a stately air she gathered up her knitting and her bimbo, and turned up the steps into her mother's domicile hard by, leaving Geronimo behind her kicking at the stones more fiercely than before. So soon as she was gone, the young man flung himself full length upon the shingle. He was sore at heart and angry, with one of the many presentiments of trouble which were apt to assail him whenever he discovered a new admirer of Margherita's. Now, as the number of these was considerable, the pangs he suffered from his jealousy were neither few nor far between. True, the girl herself seldom or never seemed in any way to reciprocate or scarcely to be aware of the pretty words and admiring glances often enough thrown in her way by strangers; but this fact scarcely lessened his anxiety. What did this Englishman mean by coming to the house today? It was all nonsense to say he came to engage Stefano—Stefano would have come up to him at the hotel in the natural course of things, not he to Stefano's lodging. And he was tall and fair and good-looking, the Englishman—just the sort of man with his ready smile and flattering looks, to exercise an unlawful fascination over the weaker sex.

Geronimo Garroni was a young fellow with a passionate heart; ever since he could remember, he had adored his cousin Margherita with all the depth and fiery ardor of a southern nature. And still at times his heart was sore within him with a terrible fear lest, after all, the prize he had so long coveted should fail his grasp. Margherita had never said she cared for him—how if some day he should find that she had set her heart upon another? How if some day the love for which he lived should be suddenly and forever blasted by a word from her?

He was still lying face downward on the hard shingle, when he heard a boat's keel grate upon the stones not far off, and looking up he saw through the misty twilight, Stefano pulling in his oars while the Englishman sprung lightly from the punt. Then as the young boatman bent to secure the rope Geronimo was not slow to observe the eager glance with which the stranger searched the shore until his gaze rested upon the little white cottage which was Margherita's home, turning away at length with a disappointed air.

"Not yet," he muttered grimly to himself, "not yet. Signor Inglese, will the bird come to your hand. Our Capri maidens are not so quick at being caught. Nor," he added, more fiercely as he rose, "shall you ever capture this one if I, Geronimo Garroni, can prevent it. A curse upon your evil eye."

CONVERSION OF THE TAILORS.

Men Who Were Prosperous Custom Tailors Adopt Semi-Ready Tailoring.

The New York journals published for the custom tailoring trade admit that the Semi-ready system of tailoring has been a serious factor in their trade. They are continually encouraging the members of their profession to get out of rut and meet this new intruder. Perhaps the best proof of the advantages of Semi-ready tailoring is the fact that of the 55 Semi-ready wardrobes in Canada some 42 are presided over by men who were formerly merchant tailors themselves. As soon as they learned of Semi-ready and visited the big tailor shops in Montreal they accepted the first opportunity to get a Semi-ready agency. Custom tailors who get the agency are the most ardent advocates of the new system.

AN EXCELLENT SCHOOL FROCK (4086).

The change in the fashion of children's clothes are never at any time so marked or sudden as is sometimes the case with the fashions of their elders. We hear very often these days that the little folks were never so well-dressed, and surely good taste has made itself evident everywhere in the simplicity which characterizes these small garments. For general wear mothers find that the simple mode of dressing survives the longest and a gown which will serve excellently for the daughter's school gown is shown. The square yoke and panels are very becoming and afford enough adornment for a dress of this kind. Made of a contrasting material or color together with the cuffs and belt, the dress is one that any girl will like. The tucks at the side in front and back relieve any tendency to plainness and add fullness to the figure. The skirt is one of unusual merit, being a circular one and of excellent shaping. The pleats stitched to yoke depth give extra fullness and grace. Any of the light worsteds may serve for the dress. For the medium size 2 1-2 yards of 44-inch material are needed. 4086—Nine sizes, 6 to 14 years.

FIRE ALARM TO SAVE OLD NAG

He Was Only a "Plug," But He Got All Kinds and Plenty of Sympathy.

New York, Aug. 25.—He was only a plug of a horse—a big, raw-boned animal of brown, hitched with one of his color to a rattling, springless wagon, smeared with mud. He had performed his duty well until he reached the corner of Monroe and Clark streets, shortly after noon yesterday. Then the earnestness of his endeavor and the viciousness of the sun and humidity dropped him in his tracks.

He was what is known as a "plug"—just a big draw horse—but the expression of sympathy that went out to him was of the sort that went out to the lamented kings of the course—Sysonby and Ram's Horn. Men hurrying to their work took a minute "off" to look at the stricken beast, and got back to their offices half an hour late; women clasped their hands in womanly sympathy and forgot about the big bargains; coppers forgot the heat and tried to think of something to relieve the heavy breathing horse's suffering.

That horse's eyes were getting glassy; his legs were working rigid; his sides—well fed sides, as they were—heaved spasmodically. Presently a man possessing the appearance of great prosperity—he wore white sidewhiskers and carried a cane—thumped his brow and suggested that water be given the horse. It was only a plug, but that animal's suffering had touched the heart of everyone who passed by.

Buckets were not at hand, although a big-hearted saloonkeeper across the street sent his porter out with a wet sponge, and his rubbing seem to afford relief for the moment. But the man with the side whiskers and an appointment, maybe, at some directors' meeting, didn't think there was enough water in the sponge.

"Where's the fire department?" snapped the man with the side whiskers. "That horse is still on fire. We must get more water or he will burn up. Call a fire company."

Forthwith fire company No. 1, La Salle and Monroe streets, was called. A line of hose was laid from a plug at Clark and Monroe streets. Before ten minutes had elapsed a big hose was attached to the hydrant on the corner, and before another ten minutes had passed about 40 square yards of Clark street resembled flood time.

Long after people—late eaters—had partaken of their evening repasts volunteers were wading through the puddle and keeping the nozzle of that big pipe pointed at the slow breathing, gasping animal.

"Hanged if this don't do my soul good!" came from an old man in an alpaca coat. "I've been hanging 'round for an hour and a half, and some of these lads here have been working like beavers all the time to save that horse's life. He's a homely plug, but his 'station' don't seem to make much difference. I didn't think it was in 'em."

For hours the street cars had to pick their way through the crowd that inclosed the poor horse—that plug of raw bones, but even the motormen didn't lose their temper. A big man with a red mustache, operating a Wentworth avenue car was heard to remark:

"Why don't they shoot him?"

"Why, there's a chanst to bring him 'to,'" said a boy with a bundle of "extras" under his arm.

"He's breathin' mighty heavy," said the motorman.

"O, so do you, when you run faster'n you c'n walk."

"I hope they save him," and the vigorous ring of the conductor was the only thing that sent the motorman on his way.

At 9 o'clock the plug made a frantic effort to get to his feet, but some man in the crowd who said he knew all about horses, urged that he be kept on the ground.

At 11 o'clock p.m., more than nine hours after the sunstroke, the old horse's fever was receding and the humane society's wagon took him away to a barn. The plug is in a fair way to recover.

CZAR ALONE IN FIGHT ON DUMA

Representatives Sent to Their Homes Continue Agitation Against Government.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—If the Czar and his ministers had appointed a commission of infallible philosophers to devise the best means of hastening the revolution that is agitating Russia they could not have recommended a more effective measure than the dissolution of the duma. Dismissing the parliament he created, he appeals to the people, and every human being in Russia is against him except the imperial family and court, the officeholders, the nobles, the army and the police, and not one of those classes is unanimous or loyal in his support. The remainder of the 140,000,000 of his subjects are against him, and by dispersing the Duma he has released from other engagements more than 400 of the ablest and most determined of his enemies to go out into every portion of his empire and organize them for the fight for liberty. And that is exactly what it is — a struggle for the privilege of thought, for the luxury of free speech and the exercise of the conscience; for the privileges that the citizens of every other civilized country enjoy.

Acting upon personal experience and a personal knowledge of the methods of their Government, almost every member of the lower house of parliament fled for shelter as soon as he learned that its legal existence was over. Mr. Stolypin, the new prime minister, is wise enough to realize that it would be a fatal blunder to interfere with them, because the Czar's proclamation cannot deprive them of their prestige as representatives of the people. General Trepoff, or Durnovo, or Plehve, if he had been living and in power, would have clapped every blessed one of them into the dungeons of St. Peter and St. Paul.

Most of them have packed their trunks and have gone to their homes to agitate and organize and consolidate the various elements of strength against the Government, and no one will oppose them. The only influence upon the other side is the soldiers, and they are becoming more and more mutinous every day.

The dissolution of the Duma was a double act of folly. It was like closing a smallpox hospital and sending 460 patients into every part of the empire to carry the infection with them. As long as the Duma was in session the organizers and agitators were under the surveillance of the Government and were engaged in comparatively harmless occupations. But now they are free to carry on their propaganda by ways and means that cannot be interfered with. The adoption of an appeal to the peasants against the Government, which seems to have been the chief cause of the dissolution, is but a trifling incident compared to the universal overturning that is to come.

The same mistake was made when the universities were closed and the students were sent to their homes. It is an astonishing and significant fact that every student in every university in the Russian Empire is a revolutionist, no matter where he comes from or what class of society he belongs to. No resident of Russia, unless he has personal interests on the other side, can study the history of civilization without becoming an enemy of his own Government. No young man of ordinary intelligence can read or hear about other systems of government without attempting or wishing to reform his own. That is the reason why the universities are hotbeds of revolution and why the students are insurrectionists. And the Minister of Education, when he closed the universities two years ago because the students were engaging in political demonstrations, sent out into the country, to the farthermost parts of the empire, 20,000 or more revolutionary agitators, whose work among the people may be seen in every direction. It has been more effective than that of the professional revolutionists—yea, a thousand fold.

As long as these students were segregated within the walls of the universities in St. Petersburg, Moscow, Kazan, Warsaw and other great cities they were comparatively harmless. They were, of course, a continual cause of irritation to the police. They were always organizing meetings and political demonstrations and marching in processions in the streets, but such pranks were harmless compared to the advent of an enthusiastic apostle of liberty in his native village, where he is an object of pride and admiration, and where every word that falls from his lips is received as a vivid truth. Very much of the rapid progress of the revolution during the last two years, very many of the local disturbances and uprisings are due to the active efforts of students who were sent home by the Government two years ago to plot and labor for its overthrow.

And now the Duma has been scattered in the same way.—Chicago Record-Herald.

RICH, BEGS FROM POLICE

Old Man Worth $40,000 Asks Piteously for Food and Gets It.

New York, Aug. 25.—Patrick Traynor, of No. 549 West Forty-fifth street, 72 years old, and decrepit, was sent to Bellevue Hospital for the purpose of inquiring into his sanity.

Traynor walked into the Fifth street police station, late last night, and drawing his tattered coat about his emaciated figure, whined that he was starving, penniless and homeless.

Touched by his apparent distress, Sergt. Sullivan made a collection of $1 05 among the policemen in the station, and sent out the porter to get the aged man supper, pipe and tobacco. The food was eaten with ravenous appetite, and the pipe was smoked with keen satisfaction. There is a rule forbidding the housing of any person save one under arrest at this season of the year. But the beggar looked so lonely and ill that the hearts of the men were touched and they prevailed upon the sergeant to strain a point and give Traynor shelter for the night. But he must be searched, for a knife or some contraband article which might pass to a prisoner.

When they went to search him the mendicant resisted with a vigor surprising in one of his years and condition. Great was their amazement and anger when the beggar was found to have bills hidden in every pocket, and also bank books and documents. Cash to the amount of $227 was found, and the bank books showed deposits aggregating $20,000. In addition, there were papers which proved the man to have real estate worth as much more.

Agnes Traynor, who lives in Brooklyn, and is a niece of the aged prisoner, told Magistrate Baker, in Yorkville police court, that her uncle is a miser and insane upon the subject of money, believing that all of his family are conspiring to rob him. She asked that he be confined in an asylum.

WOMAN TO ACT AS NAVIGATOR

Will Conduct a Long Whaling Expedition Into the Indian Ocean.

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 25. — "While this city is still the leading whaling port in the world, and can boast more whalers and whalemen in a declining industry, it can also boast of more women navigators, who actually sail out in ships and take the sun each day, than any port in the world.

"This fact has been brought out during the last few days by persons who have been interested in the fitting out of the whaling bark Charles W. Morgan for a voyage to the Indian Ocean after right whales. The whalebone market has been depleted, and hardly a pound of this valuable commodity, which sells at $5 a pound, is found in stock in the whole country. The whaling vessels that go to the Arctic Ocean were all caught in the far north last year, with a single exception, and whalebone will be scarce.

"So, when the old bark Morgan came home about two months ago, after an absence from this port of twenty years, during which time she has sailed out of San Francisco, she was immediately overhauled by her owners, and fitted for a cruise down around the Crozette, in the Indian Ocean, where one of the firm's vessels the bark Josephine, made a big cut of bone last season.

"The Morgan is the second oldest whaling vessel in the world, having plowed all oceans for sixty-five years, but she is one of the best whalers at this port today. She was built on the Acushnet River, in this city, by the famous shipbuilding firm of Hallman & Sons, and her hull of live oak and locust has lived longer than many a fine ship built about the same time. She is fitted by the oldest whaling firm—J. and M. R. Wing—who established a partnership in 1856. The firm owns and fits eight whaling barks at the present time, a fourth of all the whalers in this country.

"Capt. J. A. M. Earle has been pulled out of his retirement and induced to make the voyage in the ship. He commanded the Morgan out of San Francisco on several of her voyages to the Ochotsk and Japan seas, and always made good cuts of oil and bone in her. He has been busy for some time getting the bark ready for her cruise, which will be extended to two years. This will include two seasons on the Crozettes grounds.

"Mrs. Earle has taken an extraordinary interest in everything appertaining to the outfit of the craft. It has developed that Mrs. Earle is to ship on the Morgan's articles as "assistant navigator." She is an out-and-out navigator, and she takes the sun, a lunar or a stellar, and reckons latitude and longitude as readily as her husband. She acquired the art of navigation on her several cruises with her husband.

"'Navigation came very easy to me,' said Mrs. Earle. 'I had been married only two weeks when my husband took me to sea with him. We sailed out of New Zealand, where I had been a school teacher and the figures didn't bother me a bit. I wanted something to do, so I applied myself very closely to the art of learning navigation.'

"Since Mrs. Earle planned this trip to the Crozettes she has been hearing all sorts of stories about the rough country she is to sail to, but the brave little woman navigator has not let any of the stories she has heard deter her in her intention to ship on the Morgan.

"'Have you ever photographed a whale?" was asked the woman navigator.

"'Yes, one alongside the ship. Do you know that to photograph a live whale is the most difficult thing in the world? I have tried time and again to get a snapshot of a whale in the distance, but generally when I was ready to snap the picture the whale had turned flukes and sounded. Whales generally lie too low in the water to make good pictures, and then they are dark against a dark background if taken alongside the ship.'

"Mrs. Earle has negatives of the Pacific whaling, the bowhead whaling of the Ochotsk and Japan seas, the South Pacific Islands and types of natives found in all the places she has visited."

TO RETURN A LETTER

Real Reason Why Eugenie Visited the Austrian Emperor.

Vienna, Aug. 25.—According to a story which is going the rounds, the Empress Eugenie visited the Emperor Francis Joseph at Ischl neither for diplomatic reasons nor to arrange a royal marriage.

She went to Ischl, the story says, in order to return to the Austrian Emperor a letter written by him somewhere in the later 60's to the Emperor Louis Napoleon.

The Emperor of Austria was then full of anger against the Germans, because of Sadowa, and in the letter he promised nothing less than the full help of the Austrian army for France if Prussia attacked or provoked her.

Napoleon III., knowing the difference between constitutionalism and absolutism, never took the letter to be worth more than a generous expression of sympathy, but as such he prized it highly. Many a time he would show the letter to intimate friends at Chiselhurst, and would pose the problem: What would have happened if the Austrian Emperor had been an absolute monarch?

At his death the letter could not be found. According to the story, the Empress Eugenie had it, and at Ischl returned it to its writer.

HAVE YOU TRIED Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

STEVESTON TOWN IS WIDE OPEN

The Gamblers Are There by the Score and Doing a Terrific Business.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 25.—During the sockeye salmon fishing season on the Fraser, now practically over, the lid of Steveston, sometimes called Salmonopolis, has been lost in the clouds. If ever a British Columbia town was run wide open Steveston is the place.

One visitor who was entreated by the men of the green cloth to take his chances at "Black Jack" describes the town as "a upas tree of vice and iniquity, to find a parallel for which one must go back to Skaguay in the palmy days of Soapy Smith, except that there is, of course, no shooting at Steveston." A newspaper man who was sent to the fishing town to inquire into conditions openly asserts in his paper that "there is what amounts to a disgraceful connivance in the fleecing of fishermen by professional gamblers and other tricksters, male and female, on the part of the Richmond municipality, in which the town is situate."

"'Black Jack.' The words came from an alert-looking Chinaman standing in the doorway of one of the shacks that make up Steveston's Chinatown," continues the reporter. "The Celestial seemed to be taking great interest in the line of people that had just come from the tramcar at Vancouver. It hardly seemed real that a gambling joint in a Canadian town would be allowed to keep a rustler on the street, a condition of affairs that, if report be true, puts even Seattle in its palmiest days in the shade. But there the rustler was, and, obedient to his call, white men from many countries, Chinese, Japanese and Indians, were going in and out of the place, taking a turn at the tables and then going on to the next den in search of better luck. It was a Sunday night, too, and though most of the fishermen were on the river, all the gambling tables seemed to be doing business. Black Jack was the predominant game, but craps, chuck-a-luck and other dice games were in evidence.

"Eight similar places were found running wide open, without the slightest attempt at secrecy, excepting that a strip of cotton flapped from the top of the door, evidently meant to curtain off the scene within. A well-known citizen of Steveston was asked if the police made any objection to the gambling, and he replied that it was not the police who were at fault, but the government of Richmond municipality. 'You mark my words,' he said, 'they will run the game operators in in a day or two, fine them all, and then turn them loose again.' Another citizen expressed the same opinion."

As if to carry out just what was said five Chinamen have been summoned to appear before the magistrate, charged with keeping a common gaming house, and fifteen players will be charged with gambling.

It is declared that the professional gamblers from Seattle, Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster reap so rich a harvest that several hundred of the 2,000 odd fishermen who make some hundreds of dollars apiece during the sockeye season, leave the town without a cent in their pockets.

Steveston has about 3,000 people during the fishing season, and undoubtedly contains then as much money as any city of 10,000, no small portion of which finds its way into the coffers of the tin horn fraternity. The town is in a disgraceful condition, so far as sidewalks and lighting, or rather the want of them, are concerned. After 8 p.m., the town is in darkness, save when the moon shines, and if a row starts in Chinatown a constable is quite unable to capture the culprits unless he happens to be right on the spot, and then he stands in danger of being killed. It would be hard to find a worse hole in Canada than Steveston's Chinatown. The dark alleys therein have been the scene of numerous crimes, and the policeman who goes there takes his life in his hands.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY

A Michigan Central Agent Must Answer to Serious Accusation.

St. Thomas, Aug. 26. — Archibald, formerly relieving agent on the M. C. R. here, and now at Cayuga, was arrested this morning on a charge of forging his brother's name on a note for $50, and cashed by I. W. MacPherson, broker, of this city.

The note was dated four months ago, at which time Archibald was a telegraph operator at Iona. He sent the note by mail to MacPherson to be discounted, and the money was sent back to him.

The brother was advised when the note became due, but he denied the signature was his, and the arrest followed.

Constable Merry brought the man to the county jail today, and he will have a hearing tomorrow morning before County Magistrate Hunt.

The unfortunate young man's relatives are respectable farmers in Yarmouth Township, and he has a wife and baby depending upon him, now residing at Cayuga.

WHO WAS "BENNY BOY"?

A Mystery Added to the Life of Scholar Benjamin Franklin.

London, Aug. 25.—At a recent book sale among the interesting things brought to light were two scraps in the handwriting of Benjamin Franklin that throw a shade of mystery into the life of this noted American.

The first, a flyleaf from a small octavo volume, contains the following inscription:

"To my Benny Boy, from his affectionate Father B. Franklin, Feb. 17, 1771."

The second, the cover of an octavo volume, shows on the inside the following letter, dated West Wickham, July, 1771:

"My Dear Child—I am just going a journey for a few days and I trust my Benny will like this volume. I have no opportunity to send my Pook Paket but with this. Love to our children, and not forgetting Benny Boy, and ever, your affectionate husband,

B. FRANKLIN."

The question arises, who was Benny Boy? Franklin is known to have had one illegimate son, named William, besides a daughter and a son (Francis Folger) born in wedlock. At the time the above were written he was on his third visit to England. His son William had long before left the family home, Francis was dead and the daughter married.

Thus these documents raise a curious point in the career of the great statesman, and his autobiography, closing with his second arrival in England, in 1757, gives no assistance to those who may wish to determine the identity of Benny Boy.

ADAMLESS EDEN OUT OF WATER

Everything Stands Still in the Hotel MarthaWashington: Only Fried Breakfasts.

New York, Aug. 27. — The Adamless Eden on Twenty-ninth street was much disturbed yesterday morning. Practically everything about the Hotel Martha Washington, where none but the manager is of the male sex, was paralyzed, from the tooth brushes to the curling irons. The electric lights were out and the ice plant in the basement, on which Eden depends for the cold, cracked solid that goes into milk shakes, Felica Hemans cocktails and English breakfast cobblers, was one of the warmest spots on the premises. The elevators lolled lazily at the bottoms of their shafts, watching their usual freight toiling up and down the twelve flights of stairs. The faucets gave forth sounds of distress instead of Croton water and the more they were twisted and tweaked the more they uttered sighing notes, bewailing their own dryness. Nobody can perform ablutions or get cooled off in a tubful of deep moans. So the only Eden dweller who enjoyed a morning tub was the opulent stout lady on the ninth who takes the daily milk bath for beauty's sake.

How the Evil One sprung all this trouble on Eden is not wholly clear. In frosty weather he might have burst the water pipe with ease and finish, but Manager Cadwell knows that it couldn't have been the frost this time. However it happened, in the morning there was enough depth in the cellar to suggest the propriety of a bathing suit to the engineer. Not being a marine engine the engine ran down. The fires were put out, too. The ice plant was under water. With the stoppage of the engine the dynamos subsided, the elevators sank to the ground floor and the pumps ceased to send water up the plumbing.

"I was wakened up," said one guest, "by a loud, prolonged noise. It seemed to come from the washstand and sounded as the steampipes do when you turn the radiator on the wrong way. I jumped up, slipping on my Turkish sandals, and went to investigate. I turned on the water, but neither hot nor cold was running. So I reasoned it out that the other ladies must be hitting their water pipes with things to let the engineer know. I took my shoe horn and a bronze paper knife and hit the pipe—knocked on the pipe, rather—for a while too.

"Then I decided that this would not do any good. As the man did not answer the bell, I slipped on something loose and tucked my hair up with a big shell comb and went out into the hall with my little drinking water pitcher, one of those ridiculously small ones, you know, to find some water.

"The women of the floor were all in a group, looking down the elevator shaft. A large lady who is interested in the rights of women was rattling the elevator grating with an umbrella. I learned that the maids had come up and said that something was wrong in the basement but all would be right soon. The woman with the umbrella said that the manager was responsible—that 'it was the fault of that man.' She wanted to give him a piece of her mind, but refused to walk down eight flights to do it.

"I found that the ladies who had water in pitchers had already given it away to others, a medicine glassful at a time, so that there was none left for me. One woman, however, gave me one of those little cold cream papers that you use when you are out. Don't you know? You hold them under your handkerchief and pass them over your cheeks and forehead and the bridge of your nose, when nobody notices and then crumple them up in a little ball and throw them away. So I gave myself a dry wash with it and was glad to get that.

"When we had walked all the way down to breakfast we were pretty hungry. But when I ordered boiled rice, boiled eggs and coffee the waitress came back with an empty tray and said there was no boiled stuff. I had to subsist on fried things with just milk to drink."

A reporter who asked for Mr. Cadwell, the manager, was told that he was not in the hotel and was, in fact, gone for the day. The lady with the umbrella met the reporter on the way out and said to him:

"Looking for Mr. Cadwell, eh? Let me know if you find him."

The reporter wondered what could be keeping the manager away.

A number of women came downstairs at the beginning of the trouble in kimonos and slippers. If there was anything wrong they felt they would be safer down on the ground floor. They stayed down, once they were there, rather than walk all the way up again, and waited until the elevators resumed business. They added a picturesque touch to the lobby and writing room for several hours of the morning.

"A woman can't keep a secret."

Especially the secret of perfect ironing, for it's too good to keep.

Listen, ladies, the secret of perfect ironing is Celluloid Starch.

Don't send linen or white goods to a laundry because you doubt your own ability to produce a true laundry finish in your home ironing. Home work equals the finest laundry work if you use Celluloid Starch, the cold water starch, which requires no cooking, never sticks to the iron, gets rid of your wax-pad and always produces that pliable stiffness and pearly whiteness hitherto thought possible only in the finest laundry work.

If your grocer doesn't keep it, send us his name and we will send you free sample. 104

THE CRICK IN THE BACK.—"One touch of nature makes the whole world akin," sings the poet. But what about the touch of rheumatism and lumbago, which is so common now? There is no poetry in that touch, for it renders life miserable. Yet how delightful is the sense of relief when an application of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil drives pain away. There is nothing equals it.

SNAP-SHOTS AT VARIOUS SPORTS

All is quiet at Goldfield, Nevada. The miners are busily watching their claims, previous to being worked by the fight promoters. It is a short road from the mines to Chicago.

There is a chess tournament on in Chicago this week. It is the open season for headaches.

The Broncho is the greatest buster ever. She will make Dan Patch go some.

The Chicago Spuds will also be classed with the Sox as the "Hitless Wonders" if they continue to win games without hits.

Three-Fingered Brown can easily count the games he has lost on the fingers of his one hand.

The two Boston teams will play for the booby prize this fall. The push-over championship also belongs to Beantown.

Pink teas will beat the Harvard oarsmen, it is said. That's right. When they are dangerous they are not so kind to them.

E. Barrow is robibng the Aged People's Home for ball players. He has signed George Bannon and Weidenshaul.

City league pitchers are in rare form these days. Close games keep the fans on the keen edge all the while.

The Tecumsehs had to hurry to defeat the Shamrocks Saturday. They will have to revise their creed to the effect that the Irishmen are dead ones or else admit they are some of the same.

The Broncho's record at Galesburg Saturday makes it look as if she is easily a two-minute paces. She is the busiest ever.

The way Pulliam and McGraw roast each other would make one almost believe that there would be murder when they meet. The great American pastime is largely a game of press agents.

Dyce Saunders, of Toronto, has made two centuries at cricket within the past week or two. The Canucks never make them when there is a real live match on.

One of the half-pathetic sidelights of the Saratoga meeting was the sight of poor old Riley Grannan betting $5 markers. Less than fifteen years ago this remarkable man stood to win or lose as much as $25,000 to a single track. Ill-health and the constantly changing methods of turf speculations overcame his cunning, and now he is on the lower floor.

Six trotting horse bookmakers were arrested at Readville, Mass., the other day on the charge of "gambling." We never saw a trotting horse that looked like a "gamble" for the man who made it.

Jack O'Brien's clever move in going to England, whipping a stiff named Ted Beecham and then getting on a match with Hackenschmidt for a $10,000 purse, has aroused the admiration of everybody in New York. As soon as Jack has polished off Hack he will then wander over to Australia, and put the finishing touches on Bill Squires. Great business man is Philadelphia Jack.

"Notwithstanding the glowing accounts of the work being done in England by the Harvard boat crew," says C. S. Titus, "I don't believe the Americans have a ghost of a chance of winning their race with the Cambridge eight. There are several pure and simple reasons why Harvard will be beaten. The first is, the crew is not fast enough, and the others are not really necessary."

Angus Pointer, 2:03¼! A star pacer of the Dominion of Canada, and his speed limit not reached yet. He trimmed the bunch at Poughkeepsie, pacing a half in 1:00½, and a quarter in :29¼. Two years ago last winter when Geo. McPherson, of Montreal, won so much money with this son of Sidney Pointer at the Ottawa ice racing carnival, I picked Angus Pointer for a Canadian champion. He could have taken a record that season considerably faster than 2:04½, having shown a trial mile in 2:02¾, or thereabout, for Mr. McPherson, if I was correctly informed. Now that he has rounded to again, it is possible for this Canadian hummer to pace a few ticks faster than 2:03¼, and if he should enter the select two-minute society, it would be no surprise. At Jewett's covered mile track two years ago last April, Angus Pointer is credited with having stepped a half-mile in 59½ seconds.—Horse World.

COVERPOINT.

EARLEY AGAIN IN SPOT LIGHT; THE CHAMPIONS WIN A PAIR

Brilliant Work by Big Twirler Saturday—McNerney Also Pitches Well.

W. Fat Earley was again leading lady at the Tecumseh Park show on Saturday, and with his little bat and his curves he defeated the Rockets in a ten-inning session by a score of 2 to 1. The Champs were real good in the double-header, and they certainly did things to the Soldiers in the second spasm. There was a fair crowd at the games.

The feature of the first game was Mr. Earley. The Human Cushion was good, very much so, and he had the hard-hitting Rockets walloping the ozone, or pushing up easy chances for Fat's help. For nine innings all the Rockets could do was to get one hit, Doc Sippi cutting one to right field that Wagner almost got. Fat had his best assortment on exhibition, and he kept them going right all the way.

His Hired Men were also very good. Wagner was the Star. He plucked them right off the clover tops, one catch of his being very sensational. Ecclestone smothered a few in first-class style. The infield worked beautifully. Costello had a brace of errors, his three-base heave being responsible for the run, but he made a couple of stops that helped some. Jackson and Ball were good, and McHugh was great. Steele caught well.

McNerney pitched a splendid game. He had terrific speed and swell curves. He snuffed the Champs out at critical moments in the most improved fashion. The Champs made more hits off him than his help did off Earley, but they were separated by a wide margin. There should have been only one run made in the game, and that off McNerney. Games like that will win very often.

His help was splendid, except in that tenth. They showed nothing brilliant, but they turned the trick when necessary. Dewan and Rose made fine catches, and Sippi and Hosie made some good stops.

The Rockets started the doings. Dewan was given a ride. Hosie bunted one to Costello, who made a three-base toss over McHugh's head, Dewan hitting home. Sippi whiffed the wind. Hosie was tossed out at the plate on Rose's hit to Jackson, and the next man went out easily. One run and not a hit. After that W. Fat had them shooting ducks, and they did not have a look in. In the seventh Sippi made a hit to right. He was sacrificed to second. He stole third, and with two out and two strikes on G. Arthurs, Doc tried to steal home. He almost had it, but Arthurs let the ball go by him, and the Ancient Mariner was out.

That one run looked fearfully large until the sixth, when the Champions got one. Costello led off with a spanking single to left. W. Fat Earley came next, and picking out a nice fast one, he gave it a two-story ride to left, Costello scoring. The Fat One was tossed out trying to make third on it.

There was nothing doing until the tenth. Walter Gibson was sent in to bat for Ecclestone. He laid one down in front of the plate, and beat the toss to first, when Mines fumbled for an instant. Jackson skied to Mines. Costello forced Gibson at second. He got to third on a wild pitch, and scored when Majah Hosie fumbled Earley's grounder. McHugh went out to Wilson.

The Rockets in their half of the tenth started out as if they were going to do something. Rose led off with a clean two-base hit, and G. Arthurs followed with a single over second. Fat tightened up then. Gatecliffe rolled one to Costello, and Rose was nailed at the plate.

Fat then made Mines and McNerney whale the wheeze, and it was all over.

The second game was a very poor one. Smith, the Sojers' pitcher, was far from right, and his benders were hammered for further orders. He was not supported as he should have been, his help making some very costly errors. Walter Gibson was in great form for the Champs, and should have had a shout out. His error, and that of Costello being responsible for the run aft in the first inning. After that it was all his way, and he chopped the Soldiers down at every stage. His work was good.

Males' swatting was the feature. He had four nice little hits to his credit. Costello and McHugh did some fine work, in fact, the whole infield played brilliant ball.

Stein received a bad rap in the eye, and had to retire. The score:

RECORD FOR DANIELS

New York, Aug. 26.—At the annual championship swimming races of the Metropolitan Association and Amateur Athletic Union, held yesterday at Travers Island, C. M. Daniels, N. Y. C., broke the American record for 440 yards, making the distance in 6:05 1-5.

Score on Round Is a Tie; Must Play Another Game

Toronto Thistles and Dundas Scots Stand 2 to 2 in the Championship Series.

Dundas, Aug. 26.—The final game for the Ontario Football Association championship was played here last evening between the Toronto Thistles, eastern champions, and the Dundas Scots, western champions.

The game resulted in favor of Dundas by a score of 2 to 1, but as the Toronto team won the first 1 to 0, it left the score on the round a tie, 2 to 2. Five minutes' extra time was played each way, but neither side scored.

Mr. Ward, Stratford, the appointed referee, could not come, but H. H. Fullerton, Toronto, took his place and gave fair satisfaction.

The game was an exciting exhibition of football and was always interesting. In the first half the play was very evenly divided. Toronto scored the first goal, but Dundas tied the score on a fine shot by Walker. This ended the scoring in the first half.

In the second half Dundas had the better of the play and forced matters. From a mixup in front of the Thistles' goal, Chatland scored again for Dundas. When time was called, the score was 2 to 1, making a tie of the round, so extra time was played, but neither side scored.

The game will have to be played later on neutral grounds.

M'GRAW NOW ROASTS PULLIAM

Accuses the National League President of Favoritism, and Will Sue Him.

Cincinnati, Aug. 25. — Manager McGraw, of the Giants, was not in a pleasant frame of mind when he received notice of his reinstatement from President Pulliam, of the National League. McGraw issued a statement which covers his sentiments in the matter pretty fully. He said:

"It does not surprise me that I am reinstated at this particular time. I have called the turn several times. I knew that the suspension would last until after the Chicago and Pittsburg series. I think these are the clubs that Pulliam favors. He probably has no special liking for the Cincinnati club, and therefore I am allowed in the game in this series. For two weeks I have been walking around in the rear of the grandstand and have seen the Giants lose games that ought to have been won. If we are out of the race for the pennant Pulliam is responsible.

"Pulliam regrets that he is unable to take the baseball patrons into his confidence and give them the evidence before him. He and Johnstone will have to answer to me in court before I am through with them, so he can give out his evidence, if he has any; but I want both sides—something I have not had yet. The only way I have ever been able to get justice from Pulliam has been in civil action, and before I am through with this the public will learn to what extent I have been maligned and vilified by him and Johnstone.

"I was indefinitely suspended for protesting against a decision of the umpire on Aug. 6. I was given no reason for the suspension until Aug. 13, although every club in the league except the New York club was furnished with a report of the umpire several days before this. I immediately, on Aug. 13, filed with Pulliam six affidavits from persons on the spot, denying having used the villainous language imputed to me, providing that the things charged were never uttered by me; and yet he takes no action until twelve days later, or until we have lost the most important games of the season. He prates about being the exponent of justice and fair play. His press agent makes him in favor of a square deal. His square deal with me is like the one he tried to hand me last summer, when the superior court judge called him in Boston.

"If I was guilty of the things charged I deserved the severest penalty; if I was not guilty, then someone else should be penalized, and before I am through it will be determined who it will be."

NATIONALS WIN

Montreal, Aug. 26. — The Nationals defeated the Cornwalls in the senior championship series on Saturday, 8 to 3. The match was a one-sided one. The Nationals had decidedly the better of the playing.

CRICKET MATCH A DRAW

Toronto, Aug. 26.—Toronto raised the score to 299 in the international cricket match with the Philadelphia Pilgrims yesterday afternoon on Varsity crease. Saunders was stumped on reaching 109. Hynes and Leighton contributed 31 and 41. The Pilgrims, with the loss of six wickets, secured 216, chiefly by Heasman, W. P. Newhall, Bailey and Old extras. Thus the match ended in a fairly even draw.

CAPS BUMP MONTREALS

Ottawa, Aug. 26.—By a score of 6 to 3 the Capitals put the Montreal lacrosse team practically out of the running yesterday.

It was a great game. It was lacrosse from the facing of the ball. Both teams did stellar work, but the Capitals seemed to have the most vim and better staying powers. The visitors played well, but at no time were they regarded as superior to the home team. The game was clean and the offenses were minor ones.

BASEBALL IN BRITAIN

London, Aug. 26.—Londoners yesterday had an opportunity of seeing baseball played, if not as in America, at any rate a keen imitation of the American game. Despite the threatening weather, a large crowd went to Tottenham to see the game. The game was between the Tottenham Hotspurs and a nondescript amateur nine. The former won, 16 to 5.

What the players lacked in knowledge was compensated by the enormous enthusiasm they displayed. Their comments betrayed their pardonable but complete ignorance of the game.

The baseball evangelists in this country are the American Rhodes scholars—Nelson P. Cook, J. A. McQueeny and G. A. Wilson. Games are planned all over England for 1907, and the Rhodes scholars still hope to win over Oxford University authorities, who at present decline to regard the game seriously.

THREE HEAT RACE RECORD BROKEN

Gratt and Bolivan Pace Three Wonderful Miles — Angus Pointer Paces Fast.

Readville, Mass., Aug. 25. — The Neponset stake, for 2:06 pacing horses, at the Readville track today, will probably be recorded as one of the most notable features of this year's Grand Circuit, for one world's record was beaten, and another equaled. In the first heat Bolivar, owned by James Butler, of New York, stepped the mile in 2:00¾, equaling Prince Alert's time, made at Memphis, the fastest mile ever made in competition, while the second and third heats were paced in 2:02¼ and 2:03½. The event was the fastest three-heat race ever held. The previous record was made by Anaconda and Coney, at Detroit, in 1901, 2:02, 2:02¾, 2:03½.

The second and third heats today were won by Gratt, a son of the famous Gratton, and won for the horse the principal portion of the $3,000 purse. The times in the other fast event, the 2:02 pace, were also fast, while Angus Pointer captured the better part of the purse by taking the first and second heats.

In the Neponset, the pace was terrific from the word in the initial heat. Quarters and halves at a two-minute gait were made without apparent difficulty by the field of seven horses, and all seemed to have something in reserve. The Friend led the field in the first heat until the drive for the wire, when Bolivar beat him out with Grattan in third place.

The Friend also led in the second heat, only to have Gratt step out ahead of him at the wire. Gratt was the strongest in the third heat, and won, while Bolivar went to a bad break in the first turn, and was distanced.

Angus Pointer led the field from wire to wire in the first and second heats of the 2:02 pace, but broke in the third and had hard work beating the flag.

Billy H., owned by Wm. A. Clark, jun., son of the senator from Montana, won the 2:18 trot, but not without difficulty. Summary:

HOW THEY STAND

The Champs' double win on Saturday gives them a long lead for second place, with still a possibility of getting up to first. If the Rockets win from the Stars on Saturday next, and the Champs win from them a week later, the teams will be tied for first. Everything is possible in baseball, although the Stars' lead looks to be sufficient. Stein's Sorrowfuls are safe in the cellar.

HOGAN'S NEW RECORD

Celtic Park, Long Island, N. Y., Aug. 25. Dennis Horgan, former record holder and Irish champion for putting the 176-pound shot, broke the world's record this afternoon for putting the 28-pound stone. Horgan was scratch man in the big two days' meet of the United Hibernian Societies in Celtic Park, and put the stone 35 feet 4½ inches, displacing the figures of 35 feet ½-inch.

Horgan secured only third place in the competition, as John J. Flannigan, holder of the world's record for throwing the hammer, had allowance of three feet, and won, with a put of 38 feet 8 inches.

TECUMSEHS WIN FROM SHAMROCKS

The Indians Have Hard Time Beating the Ancient Irishmen.

Toronto, Aug. 26.—The Shamrocks of Montreal went up against the Tecumsehs in a N. L. A. match at the island yesterday afternoon, and a most strenuous game resulted.

Six times during the afternoon the score was tied, and at the expiration of time was a tie and the teams had to work overtime, the Tecumsehs finally winning out by a score of 8 to 6.

The game was fast all the way but was not up to the Tecumseh standard of lacrosse. The checking was hard and close, but for the first half was clean. After that the boys mixed it up merrily and it was inclined to be rough. The teams were:

Tecumsehs — Goal, Clark; point, Pitcher; cover, Davidson; defense, Stewart, Graydon, Pickering; center, Felker; home, Rountree, Querrie, Whitehead; outside, Durkin; inside, Murton.

Shamrocks—Goal, J. Brennan, jun.; point, Howard; cover, Rochford; defense, Kavanagh, McIlwain, Mundy; center, Riley; home, Riley, Robinson, J. Brennan; outside, Hennessy; inside, Hogan.

Officials—Referee, Green; judge of play, Errett; umpire, W. Kittis and A. Iler; times, F. F. Slattery, W. H. Hall and Dr. Doyle.

JUNCTION JUNIORS WIN CUP.

Lindsay, Aug. 26—The Toronto Junction Shamrocks defeated Peterboro in the junior semi-finals here today by a score of 4 to 3. One team was as good as the other throughout the whole day's play.

Brantford, Aug. 26.—The semi-final C. L. A. match, played here this afternoon between the Shamrocks, of Toronto Junction, and the Shamrocks, of Brantford, resulted in favor of Brantford by a score of 6 goals to 1.

The half-time score was 2 to 1 in favor of Brantford. Considerable rough work was indulged in by players of both teams, and Referee Henry, of Brampton, in order to keep the game clean, kept the fence well decorated with players.

BRITISH BOWLERS TAKE ANOTHER

Fifty-Six Up on Day's Play at Walkerville—Win Every Rink.

Walkerville, Aug. 25.—The British bowlers had an easy task at Walkerville yesterday defeating the rinks opposed to them. Their opponents were selected from Windsor, Walkerville, Detroit, Chatham, London and Toronto teams. The British bowlers were not down on a single rink when the game was finished, and the total points made were: British, 180; opponents, 124.

The games were played on the lawns surrounding the offices of the Messrs. Walker, and a number of invited guests witnessed the contests.

Superiority of British bowlers to the Canadian was early manifest and some object lessons were taught yesterday afternoon. The Canadian game is about 100 years behind that of Great Britain, and the old system was all at fault when opposed by the bowling done by the Britishers.

The Messrs. Walker had refreshment tents on the grounds and an orchestra. The players and visitors were entertained in splendid style, and at the completion of the game the British curlers gave three rousing cheers for their hosts. Following is the result of the games, the names of the skips being given:

British.		Opponents.
		Toronto—
Telford	21	Henderson	17
		Walkerville—
McColl	23	Chater	16
		Windsor—

GO BETWEEN WINS SARATOGA CUP

Shields' Horse Celebrates Return to Turf by Winning Feature at Saratoga.

Saratoga, Aug. 25.—R. R. Thomas' Go Between, the 2-to-5 favorite, won the Saratoga cup, one mile and six furlongs at Saratoga today. The Suburban winner was considered so far to outclass the two colts opposed to him that he was always at a prohibitive price, but he had to be hard ridden at the end to win. Sir Huon, who was not in the best of condition, was second.

Samson was played to beat the favorite. He was backed down from 15 to 1 to 8 to 1, and went to the front in the first few strides by three lengths over Sir Huon, with Go Between trailing. This order remained the same for one mile and a furlong, when Sir Huon took the lead. In the stretch Sir Huon still led, but Shaw was hard at work on the favorite and in a terrible drive, won by 1 1-2 lengths from Sir Huon, who in turn was ten lengths before Samson. The time was 3:05 2-5.

Paul J. Rainey's $45,000 colt De Mund easily won the $10,000 United States Hotel Stakes, six furlongs, defeating a number of futurity candidates. De Mund picked up 122 pounds and ran the distance in 1:14, which is considered good, as the track was not at its best. De Mund was backed down from 5 to 2 to 11 to 5 and at no stage of the race was he in trouble, winning easily.

A first-class field went to the post for this rich stake and after a few moment's delay they were sent away to a good start. Marathon broke in front, but De Mund soon took the lead, and at the end of the first quarter was leading by two lengths. At the head of the stretch he was four lengths in front and all the way to the finish Radtke was looking back and easing up De Mund, who won by three-quarters of a length. Arcite, who was slow to begin, closed strong in the stretch, and was second, one length before Vox Populi, who was four lengths in front of Paumonok.

Herculoid, favorite, won the Beverswyck steeplechase.

CORINTHIANS TRIM ALL-CHICAGOS

Brilliant Work of Britishers the Feature of the Game.

Chicago, Aug. 25. — In the greatest exhibition of socker football ever seen in Chicago, England's famous all-star Corinthians defeated the Chicago Association team yesterday afternoon at Marshall Field by the score of 5 to 2. The visitors furnished a magnificent example of finesse, accuracy and team work, and the picked local team held up their share of the contest by playing a creditable and scientific game, although practically outclassed by the Britishers.

The Corinthians displayed almost perfect form. In their general team work, brilliant, concerted rushes and combinations, solid defense and sensational individual work they were unapproachable most of the time. Chicago was outplayed most conspicuously in the matter of team work and steadiness, displaying wildness and lack of co-operation much of the time.

Big Crowd Watches Contest.

A good-sized crowd of socker enthusiasts and Anglo-Americans, in addition to the usual Marshall Field contingent, watched the game and applauded wildly. More than four thousand people were present.

England's team was never in danger of losing the contest, though the locals gained their two goals in succession at the end of the first half. The most notable difference in the style of play used by the teams was that the Corinthians were at every point sure of themselves and their intentions. Every kick and every pass was judged accurately, and nothing resembling hit-and-miss play was seen.

In the matter of individual starring for the Corinthians, S. H. Day, inside right, in bullseye shooting at Chicago's goal; M. Morgan Owen, center half back, in tackling; E. G. Wright, outside left, in brilliant runs down the field, and T. S. Rowlandson, goalkeeper, in defense of England's goal, were some of the heroes. For Chicago, J. Evans, outside right; J. Watt, center, B. and S. Govier, at inside left, and center half back; Williamson, right half back, and A. Shallcross, at outside left, played great games. The Corinthians complimented the Chicago players on their work, declaring them the classiest team they had met in America.

Neither team appeared to mind the heat in the first half, and a good breeze materially helped out conditions. Toward the end of the last period, however, both sides became fagged and slowed down.

The line-up:

*Changed positions in last half.

Chicago — Roberts, goal; Dillon, left back; Archibald, right back; Scott, left half back; D. Govier, center half back; D. Williamson, right half back; A. Shallcross, outside left; B. Govier, inside left; J. Watt, center; B. Pillatt, inside right; J. Evans, outside right.

Referee—C. Wenford Brown. Linesmen—Peter Peel, N. S. Cornelius. Goals—Day, 15 minutes; Day, 5 minutes; Harris, 5 minutes; Watt, 10 minutes; Shallcross, 7 minutes; Harris, 20 minutes.

FARMER LOSES BY FIRE

Barn and Contents on Proof Line Road Completely Destroyed.

During the storm which swept over this section last night, the lightning set fire to three large barns belonging to Mr. Hugh Young, with the result that one was completely destroyed.

The barns were situated on Mr. Young's farm just outside the city limits on the Proof Line road. About 7:30 one of them caught fire, and the flames spread to the others, but a number of the farmers of the neighborhood organized a bucket brigade and prevented the flames from destroying the other two.

The grain cut on forty acres had just been put into the destroyed barn, and all of it was lost. Fortunately there were no horses or cattle in the barn. None of the contents of the barn could be saved.

THE DAYS OF LONG AGO

When Currency of Canada Was Pounds, Shillings and Pence.

An old-timer, in the Hamilton Spectator, writing of the days of long ago, says: "What beef the old-time Hamilton butchers used to furnish their customers! For the Christmas market in 1867 Mr. Lawry killed a pair of steers that cut out roasts of 9¼ inches thickness on the ribs. Mr. Lawry sent a 100-pound roast to Queen Victoria, an 80-pound roast to the Lord Mayor of London, and Sir Allan Macnab was favored with a 50-pound slice.

"On the first day of January, 1858, the currency of Canada changed from pounds, shillings and pence to dollars and cents. From that date the Government and the business men changed their account books from the old to the new style. It sounds odd nowadays to hear the old terms of pounds, shillings and pence, but it is mainly by those who have come from the old country of late years."

THROWN OVER SEATS

Toronto Man Hurt in Accident on Springbank Line.

Charles E. B. Smithett, of Toronto, was in London, Ont., Thursday evening on the rear seat of a Springbank car, and when about a mile outside of London the trolley pole slipped off the wire and the car came to a standstill.

Another car ran slap-bang into the end of the first car. Mr. Smithett, who was enjoying an after-dinner cigar, was thrown backwards over three seats and severely injured. His back was badly wrenched, his left arm twisted into three or four knots and the motorman in the second car pitched headlong into the middle of the first car. Mr. Smithett felt quite sure that his insurance policy had come due, but fortunately he was not so severely injured that he had to go to the hospital, but was sufficiently injured to make up his mind to return to his home in Toronto and seek medical advice.

On the advice of his doctor he has gone to his summer residence at Niagara-on-the-Lake, where he will recuperate for a week at least. Mr. Smithett is one of the most prominent insurance men in Ontario, and his many friends will be pleased to hear of his lucky escape from death.—Toronto World.

"Forbidden" is a familiar word abroad. In Italy it is "vietato," in Germany "verboten" or more politely "untersagt," and in France "defendu." The Swiss are the hotelkeepers of Europe. Various Swiss syndicates are running civilized hotels in all the places where the multitude go.

There's Only One Best

in Baking Powder—it is Strong's. There are a number of good reasons why it is best, but the three principal reasons are:

1st.—Only the purest and finest materials are used. 2nd.—It is all Baking Powder—no adulterants added to make weight. 3rd.—It is always fresh and of full strength. Another very good reason is that it costs one-half the price of other good powders. Have you tried Strong's Baking Powder?

CUBAN REBELS MERELY BLUFFING

Would Frighten President Palma Into Making Political Concessions.

Havana, Aug. 27. — News from the somewhat uncertain shifting "front" is meager early today, due in a measure to the Government's determination that false reports from insurgent sources shall not be generally circulated.

The expected battle in the vicinity of Pinar del Rio is yet to be fought. Failure of the Government forces to take the offensive against the insurgent leader, Guerra, and the latter's hesitancy in striking the promised blow encourage the hope that peace may be secured without great bloodshed.

It is hinted in some quarters that the insurgents do not seriously contemplate the overthrow of the Government, and would be quite satisfied if by making a show of force they could frighten or persuade President Palma to restore certain deposed Liberals to office, and make concessions as to the conduct of future elections.

Claims and counter claims are frequent, but there is comparatively little actual fighting.

At the palace little is given out. The enrollment of volunteers continues; horses are being requisitioned, and army nurses are being sent to the front. Skirmishes between small bands continue.

MANY TO GREET BRYAN

Governors of All the Southern States Except Florida To Be in New York.

New York, Aug. 27. — At the headquarters of the Bryan reception committee today it was stated that the crowd of visitors from other states to this city to attend the reception to Mr. Bryan on Aug. 30 will reach mammoth proportions.

State Senator David Nelson, of St. Louis, was in town today, making arrangements to lodge a delegation of 250 members from the St. Louis Democratic Club. A still larger delegation is to come from the Jefferson Club of St. Louis. Senator Nelson said that Missouri to a large extent "is going to empty itself into New York by next Thursday."

Josephus Daniel, the Democratic national committeeman from North Carolina, wrote the committee that a delegation of 150 will come from North Carolina, including the governor, his staff, both United States senators and eight members of the House of Representatives.

Governor Warfield, of Maryland, and staff will arrive on Tuesday.

Governor Folk, of Missouri, the chairman of the reception committee, will be here on Wednesday.

The governors of all the Southern States except Florida will be here.

The National Democratic Club, and the Manhattan Club, and various clubs composed of former residents of various states expect to entertain many of the distinguished guests.

SAMARITANS IN ENGLAND

Jewish Sect Needs Funds—Maltreated and Overtaxed by the Turks.

London, Aug. 27.—All sorts of people from all parts of the world come to London to see the King. The latest and not the least interesting are four men who are lodging in a quiet house of the east end. They are representatives of a dying race, the Samaritans. They are tall of stature, gaunt, dignified, and silent, and are clad in the robes of their priestly office.

They have come to England to attempt to raise funds fir their tribe, which has been so harried and taxed by the Turks that they find it difficult to live. They have brought with them books and manuscripts of priceless value. Among these is a scroll which has been used in their synagogues for untold centuries. One of them is the son of the high priest who showed the King (when he was Prince of Wales) the tribe's famous scrolls.

Dr. Gaster, a Jewish rabbi and Hebrew scholar, says the Samaritans represent the last remnant of the oldest Jewish sect on earth. There are only 200 of them left. They cannot speak English or any European language, only Arabic or very poor Hebrew. They believe only in the five books of Moses, and regard the orthodox Jews of today as schismatics.

RACE WAR IN KENTUCKY.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 27.—Two men were killed and five persons were injured yesterday in a fight at a railway camp at Crab Orchard, Virginia, between officers and negro workmen, led by John Powers, a white man.

Powers and Charles Smith, white, were killed. Wm. Barker, an officer, and a white woman and three negroes were wounded.

A negro secured goods at the railway commissary on fraud orders. Officers were sent to arrest him, but Powers and the negro chased the officers away. Seventy-five deputies then went to the camp and the fight followed.

CUBAN REBELS EASILY ROUTED

Government Troops Have Little Trouble in Scattering the Insurrection Bands.

Havana, Aug. 27. — Congressman Faustina Guerra, who goes under the nickname of "Pino" Guerra, and the men under him, still constitute the strongest group in the revolutionary movement against the Government forces sent out against him, seems yet to be ready to engage in a decisive fight for the mastery.

The Government has not suffered a reverse of any consequence and Saturday it chronicled further victories. The principal of these came as a result of an attack by 150 mounted rural guards under Major Gomez upon Reinoso's band of 200 insurgents at Cascajale, near Santa Rosa. This engagement came at the end of a three days' pursuit of the enemy.

A forced march brought the Government forces suddenly upon the revolutionists. After the first exchange of shots, the rural guards chased the enemy, who dispersed and fled, and inflicted severe punishment with machetes. A report of this occurrence received by Gen. Rodriguez says at least twenty of the revolutionists were killed or wounded.

This makes the engagement the most serious yet fought. The rural guards did not sustain serious injury. Minor encounters have resulted in uniform victories for the Government.

Those who are responsible for the conduct of affairs are considerably encouraged and are perfecting everyday, systematic methods to down the insurrection. Furthermore, it is undeniable there is some discouragement among the conspirators, who, a week ago, had hoped that the moderates would be swept out of power immediately.

JAPANESE FORM MATCH COMBINE

International Trust to Control the Output of World's Lucifers.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—A special to the Tribune from San Francisco says: Japan has entered into a compact with the Diamond Match Company to form an international trust in matches on two continents. An English match concern dominated by Bryant and May will be taken into the combination. Negotiations for the formation for the trust has been in progress since the Russian-Japan war. They were started by Russell Hawkins, of New York, who was sent to Japan a year ago.

Japan for several years has carefully nursed its match-making industry. The empire is an important factor in the distribution of the product throughout the Far East.

The factories of the empire at first were increased in capacity, so as to meet the entire consumption of Japan. Later they were enlarged to compete with foreign manufacturers in China, Australia, part of East India and the Philippines. Eventually it gained control of the match trade in those countries, finally adding Manchuria, and holding them all as its particular territory.

DEFECT IN H. M. S. AFRICA.

Chatham, Aug. 27.—The trials of the new first-class battleship Africa, of 16,350 tons, have been postponed, owing to some minor defects having developed.

This is the latest misadventure in a run of extraordinary ill-luck which has been attending the British navy recently, and which the advocates of a strong navy are using to urge the admiralty to adopt a more forward policy.

Besides the Africa no less than seven battleships have been placed out of action within a few months.

THINK THEY HAVE BLACK HAND CHIEF

Arrest Man in Brooklyn Suspected of Being Leader of Desperadoes.

New York, Aug. 25.—Sheriff Merritt, of Westchester County, who has had Pinkerton men at work here, in Boston and in Philadelphia trying to catch the "Black Hand" bandits who are terrorizing the laborers in the Croton watershed region before they can escape to Italy, received word yesterday that a man, supposed to be the leader of the band, has been arrested here. The prisoner is Tom Osara, and it is said that he used to be a bandit in Sicily. He is widely known by the Italians of the watershed region, who fear him as they do death.

Osara was arrested early yesterday morning at No. 227 North Ninth street, Brooklyn, where he was in hiding, waiting for a ship to take him to Italy. The prisoner is believed to be the leader of the gang of masked bandits who held up and killed John Tucci near the Cross River dam early Sunday morning.

Detectives employed by Sheriff Merritt learned at Katonah on Tuesday that on the morning of the murder Osara came walking into the Italian camp with a pistol in his hand and exclaimed savagely:

"I want some money from you fellows. I am in trouble and have to get away. I am going down to One Hundred and Ninth street, and when I reach there I will send you the money back."

The men saw the "Black Hand" man meant business and were so terrorized that they chipped in $100. Later they heard how Tucci had been held up.

Yesterday when the news of Osara's arrest reached Katonah eight men believed to belong to the Black Hand Society threw up their jobs and fled. It is believed they feared being compelled to tell the secrets of the society. Osara has refused to make any statement. He is now in the county jail at White Plains.

Owing to the large number of holdups and murders among Italians in Westchester County, Sheriff Merritt will have thousands of placards printed and posted throughout the county warning Italians against carrying concealed weapons. The placards will state that honest workmen will be protected against bandits and murderers at any cost.

AN $800 SILVER NUGGET

Taken from New and Rich Vein in the Nipissing District.

Toronto, Aug. 26.—Probably the greatest mineral discovery in the world is the latest find at the Nipissing vein.

A new vein was located about two weeks ago on this wonderful property, near working vein No. 25. It was about 13 inches wide where first discovered. It has been uncovered and followed for a distance of over 50 feet, and has gradually widened, until, on Friday, by careful and accurate measurement, it was found to be five feet wide, with a surface outcropping of practically native silver.

Prof. W. A. Parks, of Toronto University, who has just returned from the north, is one of the men who held the tape when the measurement of the vein's width was taken. Dr. Kenny, of Sturgeon Falls, held the other end of the tape line. Both make the statement.

A huge nugget, 800 pounds in weight, was taken out while these gentlemen were there, and Professor Parks says it will asily run 70 per cent silver. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of silver nuggets will be exhibited at the Canadian National Exhibition for the next two weeks.

STOCK MARKETS.

H. C. Becher, stockbroker, received the following by private wire from Bartlett, Frazier & Carrington today:

New York, Aug. 27—Noon—Union Pacific is now on a reguar 10 per cent basis, and is amply able to pay it. In fact, they get 7 per cent out of investments alone, all of which are constantly becoming more valuable. We still believe this stock is worth more intrinsically than Northern Pacific, and in time expect to see it sell above the latter. It is a cheap stock, and after the public becomes used to present prices we think it will be put over 200.

QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

Essex, Aug. 27.—Henry Clay, a Windsor barrister, who is defending George Holmes, proprietor of the Amherst Hotel, Amherstburg, has raised a point of law which involves the jurisdiction of the presiding magistrates. The defendant is charged with selling after hours. Information was laid before the magistrate here. Clay contends the act stipulates that the complaint must be laid before the magistrate in the district in which the offense was committed. Magistrates Beeman and Church have remanded the complaint to examine the law.

impossible, some of them headless, armless or legless lying among the blood dripping wreckage. Pieces of flesh and clothing clung to the shattered rafters overhead and some lodged in the branches of the elm trees which border the roadway, separating the Premier's residence from the river. When the Associated Press this evening succeeded in securing permission to pass the cavalry guarding the approaches to the house, the dead and wounded already had been removed to a neighboring hospital, but by the light of flaring torches the police still were picking out from the wreckage bits of flesh and placing them in towels for transportation by ambulance to the morgue.

At the hospital the correspondent saw frantic attendants trying to arrange the shattered bodies into some semblance of human form for identification by weeping and wailing relatives outside.

The terrorist, who carried the explosive into the house, was literally converted into pulp by the force of the explosion. Inside the gendarme officer's coat, which he had on, was found the death sentence of Premier Stolypin that he had tried to execute. The police refuse to make public the contents of this document.

The tragedy created a tremendous sensation here, and extra editions of the newspapers were sold in the streets until midnight. In the clubs where officials and officers gather the most intense indignation prevails, and the prediction freely was made that the revolutionists would pay dearly for such senseless crimes, and no doubt was entertained that their only effect would be to drive the Government to more severe methods of repression.

WORK OF THE REDS.

Awful Deed Was Revenge For Stern Repression By Government.

From information obtained from revolutionary sources it is certain that the crime was committed by the fighting organization of the social revolutionists in retaliation for the war which the Government has been waging against them. Since M. Stolypin's accession to the premiership over 1,000 of their members have been arrested, 400 in St. Petersburg alone, and many of these have been deported.

To fight this crusade the fighting organization, which is composed of a wing known as Matimists, and who believe in setting up a purely socialistic state upon the ruins of the autocracy, have deliberately entered upon a duel with the Government such as that which characterized the famous fight of the Nihilists in the late seventies, and which ended in the assassination of Emperor Alexander II.

Within a single year at that time a little coterie of Nihilists, under the direction of Jeriaboff, made 28 attempts against the Emperor and high officials, fourteen of which were successful.

Plotters In Hiding.

At the head of the present organization is a prominent revolutionary, who is considered to be an organizer equal, if not superior to Jeriaboff. All the members of the organization had due notice that today's attempt on the Premier would be made, and went into hiding.

It has become known that an attempt upon M. Stolypin was frustrated ten days ago by the discovery of the beginning of a subterranean passage from the wall of the Grenadier Church adjoining his residence formerly was a favorite method of the Nihilists, but has not been used of recent year.

Emperor Nicholas, when apprised of today's disaster, sent his personal congratulation to Premier Stolypin on his escape, and the cabinet ministers and many members of the diplomatic corps tendered expressions of sympathy.

News received here from Peterhof is to the effect that feeling runs high against the revolutionists in court circles.

As a result of the inquiry it was learned tonight that the men who threw the bomb came from Moscow, via Warsaw. They took lodgings in Morsakaia street, and today hired a carriage in which they visited one of the open-air summer theaters prior to going to Premier Stolypin's. The chief of the assassins, whose body is now guarded by troops, is apparently about 25 years of age. He wore a brand new uniform, beneath which he had on a civilian vest of very dirty linen.

A few days ago a retired officer named Bodorykin attempted to warn M. Stolypin of threatened assassination, but he was refused admission to the premier. On the order of Deputy Minister Makaroff, Bodorykin has been examined before a magistrate.

Premier Stolypin's three-year-old boy had his right hip broken and received a gaping wound in the head. Both the boy and the 15-year-old daughter of the premier, who died, were covered with sand and dirt, the balcony upon which they were sitting collapsing in ruins from the explosion. At the moment of the explosion, M. Stolypin was closeted with two marshals of the nobility, who declare that there were two or three explosions.

M. Stolypin's first question was for the members of the family. He himself freed his children from the piled up debris with which they were covered. Later in the evening he visited them twice in the hospital.

At a late hour tonight there were 28 corpses and 24 wounded persons in the St. Petersburg Hospital, all brought from the Stolypin residence.

For over an hour after the explosion there was a scene of the greatest confusion at the villa. A great concourse of spectators gathered there, handling horrible remnants of the tragedy and carrying some of them away as souvenirs. The police apparently had lost their presence of mind, for they did little or nothing until the arrival of M. Makaroff, the assistant minister of the interior, under whose orders the villa and grounds were cleared and an investigation of the tragedy begun.

According to statements of the survivors, none of the overpowering fumes accompanying the use of melinite, lyddite or pyroxoline, were noticed after the explosion, and it is thought the bomb was charged with camphor and dynamite, which are extensively used in loading the revolutionists' bombs, and which explosive was employed in the assassination of Alexander II. Among its advantages is the fact that it is safer to handle than ordinary dynamite, and it is also more powerful.

Was Prepared For Trepoff.

A revolutionist with whom the correspondent of the Associated Press conversed, conjectured that the bomb probably was one prepared last summer for the assassination of General Trepoff, and which was gotten up so as to resemble a handsome, gilded vase, or else was one similar to it.

A woman was to have presented the bomb to General Trepoff, but she lost her nerve, owing to a long wait in his anteroom, and departed without seeing the general. Later the woman was arrested, but the bomb, which was a very expensive article and difficult to prepare, is said to have been held in reserve for another occasion.

While the correspondent of the Associated Press was at the Stolypin villa, a piece of torn, bloody paper was taken from the fragments of flesh representing the dead revolutionists. This was the Premier's sentence of death, passed on him by the fighting organization of the Social Revolutionists, and which, contrary to the usual custom, was not sent to the premier in advance.

With what was left of the revolutionists three revolvers, two of them automatic pistols, were found.

After the outrage the long avenue of lime trees, in which the Stolypin residence is situated was barred at both ends by cavalry, and no one was allowed to pass, except high official personages going to the house to express their condolences, and ascertain the full extent of the calamity. Additional troops soon arrived from all directions, and excited crowds gathered in the neighboring streets.

According to one account, the premier, just previous to the explosion, had received Count Alexei Alexievich Mukhanoff, a former marshal of the nobility Tchernigov, who was a member of the lower house of parliament, and whose arrest had previously been ordered for political reasons.

When M. Stolypin accepted the premiership he was perfectly conscious of his personal danger. One of his remarks at a recent interview was:

"I have no doubt that attempts will be made upon my life, but I hope that order will be restored and stability established in Russia before they are successful."

EXPLOSION WAS TERRIFIC.

An Eyewitness Tells of the Awful Havoc Wrought.

M. Moukhanoff, a member of the late Parliament, who, at the time of the explosion, was waiting to see Premier Stolypin concerning permission to hold a congress of the Constitutional Democratic party, says:

"I was sitting with some twenty other visitors, including several ladies, at a long table, in the waiting-room, M. Stolypin then being engaged with M. Polivanoff, a marshal of the nobility of the Province of Zimbirsk, and the president of the Zimbirsk Zemo deputation. After waiting for some time I changed my seat and joined M. Petisolkoff, a chamberlain of the court, in a bay-window, overlooking the avenue leading up to the house. A few seconds after the arrival of the carriage bearing the assassins, which attracted my attention, because visitors usually come in smaller carriages, I was suddenly hurled backward against the wall, which my head struck. I was so stunned that I did not even hear the explosion.

"When I recovered consciousness, I saw that the ceiling and one of the walls were gone, and that the room was heaped with debris from the floor above. The first words I heard came from the lips of a mother superior, who was standing among the ruins in a corner of the room, praying before an ikon, 'Sausi Sauvius,' and crossing herself. She was one of the six who escaped uninjured. The occupant of the chair I had occupied was killed.

"I then went into the garden, where I came face to face with M. Stolypin. He had complete mastery over himself and was perfectly calm. I urged him not to go back into the house, saying, 'There may be wounded persons in there.' The premier's face was bespattered with ink, thrown there by the explosion.

"During the course of the evening, Madame Stolypin went to St. Petersburg aboard a small Government boat.

"It appears the assassins were well supplied with funds. They paid $125 in advance for the rooms they engaged. Before leaving these apartments, they disguised themselves and made the house porter drunk. The extraordinary power of the explosion is judged by the fact that the houses on the opposite side of the Neva were shaken and windows broken. One of the most painful features of the tragedy was the delay in securing medical aid for the injured, as over an hour elapsed before an ambulance arrived.

"M. Stolypin's one thought was for his daughter, and he kept exclaiming, 'For God's sake, fetch a doctor. Oh, my poor girl.' "

It was fully half an hour before the beginning was made to systematically clear the wreckage, during which the injured suffered agonies. At dusk, torches were lighted, annd by the fitful light from these the work was continued, and the walls were shored up with strong beams. Many trees in the avenue were blown down by the force of the explosion, and the aspect of the house and the grounds was one of complete desolation. Parts of human bodies were thrown a great distance. An officer chanced to knock against a small tree, and a bloody, dust-covered head that had lodged among the branches fell at his feet.

Inquiry at the Calmeyer hospital today elicited the statement that Premier Stolypin's daughter was still alive, but that her condition was critical, and it was feared that gangrene would set in. M. Stolypin has received touching telegrams of sympathy from the grand dukes, Former Premier Witte and other persons.

STOLYPIN HAS COURAGE

At One Time He Braved a Furious Mob and Calmed Them.

London, Aug. 27. — An interesting story is told of M. Stolypin, the Russian premier, an attempt to kill whom on Saturday resulted in the death of 32 persons and the maiming of many others. When he was governor of Saratov the superintendent of police there was being attacked for carrying out orders that aroused their resentment. Stolypin, seeing what was happening, rushed up between the superintendent and the angry crowd, exclaiming, "If you want to kill the responsible official, it is I. The superintendent is but doing his duty executing my orders. He had no choice but to carry them out. It was I alone who issued them. He had no choice but to carry them out. It was I alone who issued them, and here I am." The crowd, surprised at Stolypin's courage, silently slunk away.

The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent, commenting on the outrage, says: "No political reforms can heal the present moral gangrene which is eating away the soul of the nation. Political motives play hardly any part in the epidemic of loathsome crimes. The ideas of right and wrong are wholly perverted. Bestiality and humanity are now struggling for the upper hand and the chances are on the side of bestiality. If the Constitutional Democrats were in power tomorrow, the epidemic of crime would continue, for the struggle is not between this party or that, but between rascaldom and man of law and order."

FUR-STEALERS SENTENCED

Jacob and Simon Gebritski Given Seven and Five Years.

Chatham, Aug. 27.—Sentences were handed out Saturday, when Judge Bell gave the prisoners, Jacob and Simon Gebritski, seven and five years in the penitentiary respectively for bringing stolen goods into Canada and for receiving stolen property.

Defendants' counsel, argued that, as the family of the elder prisoner was in great need of what help they could get from the sons, and that Simon, if concerned, had only been so from the fact that he was drawn into it by his father, the sentence in that case should be light.

His honor, however, could not see it that way, and after administering a severe talking to the two, gave out his sentences.

When she had left the room after the conclusion of the trial, which has dragged along for some time, Mrs. Gebritski, the wife of the elder and mother of the younger prisoner, fainted.

Samuel, the other son, having expressed his willingness to return to New York City and face the charges there, the metropolitan police representatives who were here took him east this afternoon.

The case was a very interesting one, as the value of the furs stolen was large, $16,000, while the rivalry, and almost hostility, excited among the various persons concerned in the capture, because of the award of $2,500 held up, has served to increase what there already was.

The elder prisoner pleaded very hard for a light sentence, but the judge was obdurate.

Dedicated for Service Was German Evangelical Church

New St. Paul's Occupied for First Time by Congregation on Sunday.

St. Paul's German Evangelical Church, corner of Wellington and Grey streets, was dedicated yesterday, when Rev. W. H. Schild, of Bethany German Evangelical Church, Buffalo, preached at both morning and evening services.

About an hour before the time set for the morning service the congregation met in the basement of the church, where they held a short preparatory service. From the basement they proceeded to the auditorium, Miss Edna Kaiser leading the way, carrying the key of the edifice on a fancy cushion. Following her came Miss Rosa Hertel, daughter of the chairman of the building committee, and Miss Antoinette M. Eiermann, daughter of the pastor, each carrying a large bouquet of flowers. Next in order were the two ministers, Rev. Mr. Eiermann and Rev. Mr. Schild, with Mr. J. M. Moore, the architect, who supervised the building of the church. The members of the building committee and the church council then entered, the first-named carrying a Bible, and the others each carrying a piece of the communion set, and the baptismal basin. Next came the Sunday school, led by its teachers and officers; then the choir, and lastly the congregation. After the presentation of the key by Architect Moore, who delivered a short but appropriate address, the congregation sang an appropriate hymn, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Eiermann, thereupon opening the doors.

When the public had been admitted, the regular service, in German, was proceeded with. The choir opened with a well-rendered anthem. Mr. Alfred Peine sang a bass solo, in which his rich voice showed forth to advantage.

Rev. Mr. Schild preached the sermon in German, taking his text from Jeremiah xxxi., 23. He went on to demonstrate to the congregation the glorious significance of their house of worship; their sacred duty toward their church, and the importance of their fervent prayer for the same.

In the evening, Rev. Mr. Schild preached in English. His theme was "The purpose for which we come to worship, and in which we should come to worship." He went on to say that the names of the great soldiers, who have, by deeds of valor, saved nations from destruction; the names of great scientists, who have made the great discoveries which have done so much for humanity, and, in fact, the names of great men in every walk of life, are cherished in our memories as sacred. When we consider the great benefits bestowed upon us by such men, it should remind us of how thankful we should be that God, the giver of all good gifts, the creator of all things, had given his son to die that we might have everlasting life. But even the good gifts bestowed upon us every day fail in time to remind us of our duty and obligation toward God, and we, like the children of Israel, need something to keep us constantly in remembrance of God. So we have our church, as they had their tabernacle.

Mr. Schild went on to show that after the church has been built only a part of our duty has been done. We must live in such a way as to be helpful to others. We should remember that we are setting either a good or a bad example at all times. Then we should be constantly preparing for the hereafter, as those who have been preparing all though life are ready to meet their creator.

Rev. Mr. Schild conveyed to the congregation the hearty congratulations of the German Evangelical churches of Buffalo and New York State.

The St. Paul's German Evangelical Church is the first German church to be erected in this city. For years the little body of Germans residing here have tried to get together and erect a house of worship, but without success until Mr. Eiermann came here from Buffalo thirteen months ago and, after laboring untiringly, managed to organize a congregation sufficiently strong to carry the work to completion. The church is a cement block structure, and has an exceedingly pretty appearance. The auditorium is square, with the entrance at one corner. The pulpit and choir and organ loft are at the back of the church, while two aisles run the entire length of the church. The seating capacity is nearly 300. On the auditorium floor are the secretary's room and the minister's study, both large and comfortable. In the basement is the Sunday school, which affords seating capacity for 300, and has two class rooms. A kitchen and toilet room are also situated in the basement.

The whole building, which was designed by Messrs. Moore & Henry, architects, impresses one with the idea of comfort and utility. Nothing appears to be wanting, and everything is in its proper place. It is so constructed as to admit of enlargement, at a comparatively small cost.

The congregation contemplate holding Sunday school in the morning at 9:30, the instruction being in English and German. Regular services will be in German in the morning and English in the evening, every Sunday.

A programme for this week has been arranged as follows:

Monday, 8 p.m.—The congregation is to be received into the membership of the German Evangelical Synod of America.

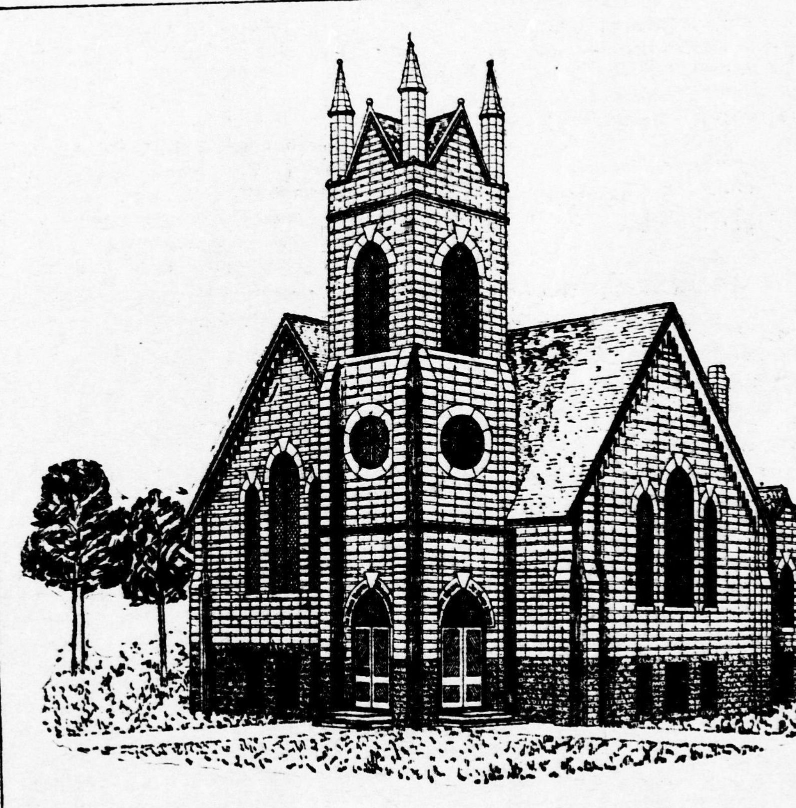

Tuesday, 8 p.m.—English services, to which the ministers of the city will be welcomed.

Wednesday, 8 p.m.—Family gathering. No admission charged.

Thursday, 8 p.m.—German services. Examination of German confirmation class.

Friday, 8 p.m.—English services. Confirmation English confirmation class.

Sunday, 9:30 a.m.—Sunday school; 10:30, German services. Confirmation of the German and celebration of the communion. Seven p.m. English services. Confirmation of English and celebration of communion.

Eat What You Like

Don't Starve or Diet, But Use Mi-o-na. and Cure Your Stomach Troubles.

The average treatment of stomach troubles consists of a rigid diet list, which often half starves the patient. Of course it would be foolish for anyone who knows that some foods are positively harmful and poisonous to continue eating them, even while following the Mi-o-na treatment, but in ordinary cases of stomach troubles it is not necessary to starve or diet if Mi-o-na is faithfully used, a tablet before each meal.

This scientific remedy for the cure of stomach troubles, acts upon the whole digestive system, and strengthens the organs so that they are able to digest any food that is eaten without fear of distress. If you suffer from loss of appetite, belching of gases, sour taste in the mouth, furred tongue, severe pains in the region of the stomach, depression of spirits, bad dreams, lack of energy, headaches, backaches, loss of strength and weight, you can be assured that these troubles are all due to imperfect digestion.

Strengthen the stomach by taking a Mi-o-na tablet before each meal, and soon you will gain in weight, strength will return, and your food will give nourishment, so that the rich red blood will carry good health to every part of your system.

Mi-o-na costs but 50 cents a box.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

SHOT TO DEATH

Man Kills Wife and Male Companion on Streets of City.

Portsmouth, Ohio, Aug. 27.—John Harr and Mrs. Flora Hughes were shot to death last night, and the woman's husband, Jarro Hughes, is in jail, charged with the crime. He denies knowing anything about the shooting. The streets were filled with people on their way to church. Harr and Mrs. Hughes were walking together down Third street. Just as they got under a street lamp at Jefferson street, a man rushed out from a foundry yard, walked between them and fired five revolver shots. Harr dropped dead, and Mrs. Hughes died at the city hospital. Hughes and his wife have been separated for some time.

THE FAIR ATTRACTIONS

Programme the Best Ever Obtained for the Western.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Western Fair Association was held Saturday afternoon at the general offices. Nearly all the directors were present, and all were very enthusiastic over the splendid prospect for the exhibition this year. Considerable routine business was transacted, and plans were laid and adopted for the Fair. The president, Mr. W. J. Reid, occupied the chair, and as Mr. Reid is also chairman of the attractions committee, he reported to the board of directors what had been done in regard to attractions for this year, pointing out that they are away in advance of anything ever attempted by the association before. The directors were unanimous in adopting the report of their president, and are all ready to help make this year's exhibition the best ever held.

NICKALLS ON HARVARD CREW.

London, Aug. 27.—In an article in the Morning Post, Guy Nickalls, the oarsman, says that after a careful study of the men of the Harvard crew, he has reached the opinion, that contrary to the general impression, they will go the 4 1-2 miles at a very fair pace indeed, though he does not fancy their pace for a single mile. Taking all things into consideration, Mr. Nickalls believes that the odds of 10 to 4 on the Cambridge crew are in no way justified.

A BRUTAL ACT

For Revenge Man Cuts Off Horse's Hind Legs.

Gladstone, Man., Aug. 27.—Early yesterday morning some party or parties entered the barn of E. Bowman, veterinary surgeon, of this place, and chopped the hind legs off his horse, which stood in the stall. Dr. Bowman had been called to Plumas and returned by train, arriving about 8 o'clock. On going to the stable he discovered the animal. So completely was the work done that the detached parts hung only by the tendons midway between the hoofs and hocks.

Mrs. Bowman heard noises early in the morning, but there was a storm raging, and she was timid about going to investigate the cause.

The animal was slaughtered. So far there is no clue leading to the discovery of the perpetrator.

Will Appear at the Grand Friday and Saturday of Next Week.

Manager Stewart announces that Mr. Aubrey Boucicault, the sterling actor who was seen in London a couple of seasons ago in "Captain Charlie," will appear at the Grand Opera House, here on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 7 and 8, in "The Greater Love." Ivy Ashton Root, a favorite niece of Elihu Root, secretary of state, is the author of the play, which is a four-act drama, and it comes to this city direct from the Madison Square Theater, New York, where it had a successful run. Mozart, the greatest composer, is the central figure in this play, the many romantic incidents in his life affording the author splendid subject matter for an absorbing stage story.

May Ask Militia Council to Cut Out the Big Jaunts

Are Little Too Costly for Officers of Urban Regiments—Getting To Be a Fad.

The following article from the Toronto Star will be read with interest by local militiamen:

The ever increasing popularity of these regimental trips of city corps is causing a discussion in some quarters as to the advisability of encouraging them. With nearly every military organization in the cities of Canada, scarcely a year passes that a pleasure trip is not taken somewhere. Of late years the taste of the urban militiaman for travel has developed to such a fastidious extent that an exchange of visits with another Canadian regiment does not suffice. New York, Buffalo, and other cities across the border are being made more famous year after year, because they have the honor of a visit from one or more Canadian regiments.

Last April, it will be remembered, the Queen's Own Rifles, from Toronto, visited Gotham, and innocently enough came perilously near causing a "regrettable international incident," because the entire National Guard of New York quartered in big New York City did not turn out to meet the visiting Canadians. The officers and men of the regiment were quite satisfied with their reception and entertainment, but there were sundry complaints in the New York newspapers, and jingoistic dispatches to the Canadian dailies, that were calculated to set the Canadian patriots' teeth on edge.

When the storm had blown over, it was ascertained that all the smoke was caused by a New York gentleman, who desired to have it known to all and singular that he was the only person in New York City who was hospitable enough to invite Sir Henry—the commanding officer of the regiment—and Lady Pellatt to dinner!

Costly To Officers.

That is one objection to these holiday trips. There are others. It generally means that the officers are required to supplement the regimental funds with substantial contributions, to meet the expenses of the trip. Some of the men who wear stars and crowns on their shoulder straps—and are well qualified to wear them—are not men of wealth, and the contribution thus required of them is made willingly, probably, but it frequently means a big sacrifice to themselves.

Refuse Jaunt Permits?

It has been suggested that the militia council be asked to refuse every application from corps to visit cities of a foreign country, and it is stated that the council has the matter under consideration. There are arguments in favor of the international holiday trips, of course. One of them is that they are evidence of the entente cordiale between Great Britain and the United States. Moreover, they give the regiments an opportunity to get into their marching order kit, and furnish practice in entraining or embarkation, experience in the bivouac and the camp, which, as city regiments, they get little enough of outside of these special trips.

THE BRONCHO PACES MARVELOUS MILE

Turns Galesburg Track in 2:00¾ Without Pacemaker or Wind Shield.

Galesburg, Ill., Aug. 25.—Without any help except that given her by her driver, Charley Dean, The Broncho, the champion pacing mare, today paced a mile here in 2:00¾, in her effort to beat her previous record of 2:02. No pacemaker or wind shield assisted the mare. Under the conditions that prevailed, the performance was pronounced by all the horsemen who witnessed it as one of the most wonderful ever achieved by a harness race horse. Many considered it the most winderful.

The conditions were against the little mare. She is small and light, and likes a hard, smooth track. At its best the Galesburg track is as fast as any outdoors, but it was not at its best today. Yesterday's heavy rain had left it with a tendency to "cup," and she did not get the firm foothold that he likes best. There was also a soft spot next the rail at the turn for home, which necessitated her keeping out wide and going a long mile. To add to these handicaps, a stiffi breeze blew directly in her face for half the journey.

Before mounting the sulky Dean said that he did not expect her to beat 2:02. The quarter time was :29½, 1:00, 1:30¾, 2:00¾. She finished going faster than at any other spot in the mile. The rating was truly remarkable, considering that Dean did it entirely without assistance.

The mile excels any other by a harness horse under such conditions. Not even Dan Patch ever turned such a trick without either pacemaker or wind shield. It is but a half second from Dariel's wind shield mark of 2:00¼, made at Memphis in 1903. Dean is now confidence that The Broncho can do two minutes or better all alone, and says that not until she has will be put a pacemaker beside her.

Seven were carded to go in the feature event of the afternoon, while the remainder of the events were well filled and resulted in excellent finishes.

SOX GREAT RUSH STILL A SENSATION

Review of Magnificent Work of Spuds and Sox Lately.

New York, Aug. 25. — "Will somebody please stop Chicago?" was the cry John McGraw sent out on May 28 last, when the Chicago Cubs took the lead in the National pennant race, never to lose it again. The plaintive appeal has not only remained unanswered, but has since been echoed over the American League circuit with redoubled vigor.

The onward marches of the Cubs and White Sox have resulted in causing ing Chicago to be baseball frenzied. The fans can hear nothing but the flapping of the flag.

"Two pennants for Chicago and a world's championship" is now the war cry in the Windy City. Thousands of fans crowd the local grounds to witness the struggles between the Cubs and their eastern rivals. At the same time they are watching and cheering the returns on the bulletin boards that show how the White Sox are mowing their way to the American League pennant through the helpless eastern teams—helpless on their own stamping grounds.

Without doubt the great spurt of the White Sox is the most sensational in the history of baseball. Coming from seventh place in the middle of May to first place on Aug. 13, they followed this up by winning 19 straight games, challenging the record of 20 straight made by the Providence National League team in 1884.

The Sox went upward by jumps and bounds. On June 15 they stood sixth, and the next week they were fourth. Then they dropped back a peg, but they soon got started upward again, and on July 6 they were fourth again. A beginning of the end was seen when they floated to third place Aug. 7, and the climax came last Sunday, when the two leading teams were passed at one and the same swoop. The following table shows their rise:

Date.	Position.	Won	Lost.	P. C.
May 7	7	8	9	.471
June 8	6	19	23	.463
June 15	6	25	23	.479
June 22	4	28	25	.528
June 29	5	32	29	.525
July 6	4	38	31	.551
July 13	4	43	34	.558
July 20	4	45	37	.549
July 27	4	47	42	.529
Aug. 3	4	52	43	.547
Aug. 7	3	56	43	.566
Aug. 13	1	61	43	.587

Since July 27 the Sox have won 23 games, lost 1 and tied 1.

As a matter of reference the record of the Providence Grays in 1884 is appended. Beginning Aug. 16, the Grays defeated every team in the league at least once. At that time the league comprised New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Providence in the east, and Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo in the west.

Charley Radbourne pitched 18 of these games. On Sept. 9 Buffalo broke the Grays' great streak, defeating them by two runs to none. Radbourne pitched for Providence.

The Cubs have done nearly as well as the White Sox since July 26. They have played 26 games, winning 23 and losing 3. Of these the Giants took 2 games and forfeited 1.

While the two Chicago teams continue their triumphal marches and the teams behind them see the chariots disappearing in clouds of dust, the beaten aspirants for pennant honors are pushing forth excuses. With the Giants it is Mathewson's inefficiency early in the season, the absence of Mike Donlin and now lately the suspension of John McGraw for baiting Umpire Johnstone. With the Pirates, it is their batting slump, and the failure of Brooklyn to win more games from the Cubs. The other National League teams are so far behind that excuses would be useless.

In the American League ranks the weakness of the pitching staff is the Highlanders' excuse; with the Athletics it is the absence of Lave Cross and Connie Mack's inability to develop a successor for the veteran at third base. The excuse of the Cleveland Napoleons are the injuries to Bradley, Bay, Bemis, Buelow and Rossman early in the season.

Manager Frank Chance, who brought the Cubs to the front, is considered one of the greatest ballplayers in the business. As a first baseman he has long been considered a star. As a batter he is among the first half-dozen in the league. He is one of the best baserunners in the business.

Chance's ability as a manager was discovered by accident. When Frank Selee was compelled by illness last season to give up his post as manager of the Cubs, Chance was placed in charge of the team as acting manager. The team did so well that Chance was signed to manage the club this year. His shrewdness in trades carried through by President Murphy at the suggestion of Chance made his team pennant winners. He secured Sheckard, Steinfeldt, Jack Taylor and Overall. They were the men he wanted and he paid heavily to get them.

In Chicago they think Chance is the greatest manager that ever lived. On the National League circuit, outside of Chicago, the young Californian has many staunch admirers.

The great work of the Windy City teams has developed Mordecai Brown, of the Cubs, and Ed Walsh, of the Sox, as the premier slabmen of the year. They have pushed aside veterans like Mathewson, Philippe, Young, Waddell, and Chesbro. Both are youngsters and less than a year ago were threatened with the "tin can."

Up to date Brown has bagged 22 out of 27 games pitched this season. He has won his last six straight, including two victories over the Giants, and in 53 innings has allowed his opponents only three runs.

Walsh has done even better since he struck his gait. He won ten straight games, and only two runs were made off him in 64 innings.

The feat that pleases the young pitcher as much as anything he has done is the striking out of Willie Keeler twice this season. Few twirlers who have worked during the last fifteen years in the National and American Leagues can boast of this achievement.

The pitching staffs of both teams have stood the strain well. Lundgren, Taylor, Pfeister and Reulbach have been winners for the Cubs all along. Now Big Ovie Overall has joined the victorious bunch.

For the Sox, Owen, White, Patterson and Altrock have done splendid work. Manager-Fielder Jones has announced that Walsh's success has been due to his mastering the spit ball. Jones says Frank Smith also has the "spitter" under control, and he will be used in the box when the Sox make their final stand on the home grounds.

Only once before in the history of the game has it been possible to play a warld's championship series between two teams in the same city. That was fifteen years ago in Boston in the last year of the existence of the old American Association, when both the National League and the Association teams landed the pennants in their respective organizations. The Association made overtures for the post-season series, but the National club owners refused to recognize the representatives of the "outlaws."

BASEBALL.

TO PLAY CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES.

New York, Aug. 25.—Telegrams from Pittsburg today announce that John T. Brush, president of the New York Baseball Club, of the National League, has accepted the offer of Frank Farrell, owner of the New York Americans, to play a post-season series for the championship of New York.

Farrel suggested that the teams play for a perpetual trophy, which should carry with it the championship honors of New York. Brush agreed. The games will be played in October.

CASKETMAKERS WON.

A very exciting game of ball was played between the Globe Casket and Sherlock-Manning teams on Queen's Park Friday night, the Casket Works winning in the last inning by 2 to 0. Chapman pitched a fine game for the winners, while Heathfield for the losers, was also in good form. The game was a five-innings one, it it was left to Chapman to score the first run and Myers the second. Both runs were scored in the last inning. Batteries—Globe Works, Chapman and Myers; Sherlock-Manning, Heathfield and Sherrit.

TIED FOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Berlin, Aug. 25. — The Beavers, of Waterloo, and Alerts, of Berlin, are tie for the championship of the Twin City Baseball League, as the result of today's games. The Alerts defeated the Y. A. C.'s, of Waterloo, by a score of 6 to 0, and the Beavers won from the Scotch Greys by 7 to 5 in a decidedly interesting game.

It is likely that the final game will be played in Berlin next Saturday afternoon.

THE PHILLIPPINE WAR

U. S. Troops Will Make Another Desperate Attempt to End It.

Manila, Aug. 27. — It is officially reported that the main band of the Pulajanes has been broken into smaller bodies. A general movement of 1,000 troops and 300 constabulary through all parts of the disaffected region is planned. A part of the Province of Leyte, south of Buvog Bay, has been cleared of Pulajanes. There is no disaffection on the west coast, except a few bands which have escaped the soldiers. On the east coast native volunteers are bringing in prisoners. Governor Veyra reports that hundreds of natives have volunteered to help the troops.

MURDER STARTS RIOT.

New York, Aug. 27.—Following a quarrel over a game of pool, Taylor Hutchins, colored, 32 years of age, was murdered last night in the rear room of a saloon in West One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street.

He was stabbed in the neck, the jugular being separated. The murderer, a man known as "Sonny," escaped.

Following the murder a crowd of about 2,000 negroes gathered in front of the saloon and the police reserves were compelled to use their clubs freely in order to get into the saloon.

Numerous street fights occurred, and for a few minutes it looked as if a riot would be the result.
