Life a Spiritual Conflict.

Reader ! the combat rages darkly still Around thee; though an unrent cloud of flesh Shut from thy soul their movement and their march And the dread soldiery by Hell arrav'd. Yet, in the midst of Satan's host art thou Contending: were thy veiled flesh withdrawn, Full on thy spirit what a battle-field Where all the Chivalries of Heaven contend, And the dread sympathies in darkness fight For souls immortal-would at once outflame! But not with garments roll'd in blood, or death : And not with weapons which our eves perceive : But sightless, these unbodied Hosts engage; And therefore, Satan is the sense's mock, The sneer of science and the scorn of fools But thy revealings, Faith ! are ever true And most tremendous, when the most denied, A Devil doubted ends in God disown'd,-Till the first glance a disembodied Mind Takes of the truth behind the veil disclosed, Looks on the Fiend, who made himself a lie To rock the sinner into damning rest.

Reader ! believe, the combat rages still ; No pause, and no parenthesis of love Or pity for our world the Fiend allows. Darkness his throne, destruction his delight Ruin and ravage his dominion make, And earthquakes seem the echo of His tramp But chief to battle with the sainted host, Fighting beneath the banner of their King Crimson'd with blood, and blason'd by his cross Redemptive, does the Prince of Hell advance Thus Luther felt: and thus shall ever feel, And like him in the spirit's fight, contend E'en to the gasp and agony of faith,-The heirs of Light and heroes of our God.

" The Serpent's head the woman's seed shall bruise ?'

So spake the Lip almighty ; and to man Revolting then the Incarnation preach'd In promise, which by grasp prophetic spann'd Ages of conflict in the church to come Till time's worn clock his closing hour strike.

And this fantasmal scene where Satan fights, This whited sepulchre of sin and woe, This prison-house where dungeon'd nature pines, A thousand years of hallow'd rest shall have In one long sabbath of millennial peace ! But not till hurled by thunder-blast divine Down to his pit, in chaining darkness bound, The mystic "Dragon" will from earth withdraw But fiercely to the last, a fight maintain Implacable, against all truth array'd. So from the first imperial Rome he fired With Pagan fury ; when that flame was quench'd By blood of martyrs, lo! an Arian creed Flooded the church with desolating tides ; And when they ceased. Reflections on War.

From a Sermon by the Rev. Robt. Hall. on the 1st of June, 1802.

Though we must all die, as the woman Tekoa said, and are as water spilt upon the ground which cannot be gathered up; yet it s impossible for a humane mind to contemplate the rapid extinction of innumerable ives without concern. To perish in a moment, to be hurried instantaneously, without preparation and without warning, into the presence of the Supreme Judge, has somehing in it inexpressibly awful and affecting. Since the commencement of those hostilities which are now so happily closed, it may be reasonably conjectured that not less than half a million of our fellow-creatures have fallen a sacrifice. Half a million of beings, sharers of the same nature, warmed with the same hopes, and as fondly attached to life as ourselves, have been prematurely swept into the grave, each of whose deaths has pierced the heart of a wife, a parent, a brother or a sister. How many of those scenes of complicated distress have occurred since the commencement of hostilities, is known only to Omniscience; that they are innumerable cannot admit of a doubt. In man. some parts of Europe, perhaps, there is scarcely a family exempt !

Though the whole race of man is doomed to dissolution, and we are all hastening to our long home, yet at each successive moment life and death seem to divide betwixt them the dominion of mankind, and life to have the larger share. It is otherwise in war; death reigns there without a rival and without control. War is the work, the element, or rather the spirit and triumph of death, who glories not only in the extent of his conquest, but in the richness of his spoil. In the other methods of attack, in the other forms which death assumes, the feeble and the aged, who at the best can live but a short time, are usually the victims; here it is the vigorous and the strong. It is remarked by the most ancient of poets, that in peace children bury their parents, in war parents bury their children; nor is the difference small. Children lament their parents, sincerely, indeed, but with that moderate and tranguil sorrow, which it is natural for those to feel who are conscious of retaining many tender ties, many animating prospects. Parents mourn for their children with the bitterness of despair; the aged parent, the widowed mother, loses, when she is deprived of her children, everything but the capacity of suffering; her heart withered and desolate, admits no other object, cherishes no other hope. It is Rachel weeping for her children and refusing to be comforted, because they are not.

But to confine our attention to the number of the slain, would give us a very inadequate idea of the ravages of the sword. The lot of those who perish instantaneously may be considered, apart from religious prospects, as comparatively happy, since they are exempt from those lingering diseases and slow torments to which others are liable. We cannot see an individual expire, though a stranger or an enemy, without being sensibly moved and prompted by compassion to lend him every assistance in our power .---Every trace of resentment vanishes in a moment; every other emotion gives way to pity and terror. In these last extremities we remember nothing but the respect and tenderness due to our common nature .-- est corner.

Give me the home where kindness seeks To make that sweet which seemeth small Where every hp in fondness speaks, And every mind hath care for all,

Whose inmates live in glad exchange Of pleasure, free from vain expense; Whose thoughts beyond their ways ne'er range Nor wise denials give offence.

Who in a neighbour's fortune find No wish, no impulse to complain ; Who feel not, never felt the mind To envy yet another's gain.

Who dream not of the mocking tide, Ambition's foiled endeavour meets-The bitter pangs of wounded pride, Nor fallen power that shuns the streets.

Though Fale deny its glittering store. Love's wealth is still the wealth they choose For all that gold can purchase more, Are gauds, it is no loss to lose !

O, happy they who happy make,-Who, blessing, still themselves are blest ! Who sometimes spare for others' sake, And strive in all things for the best

The Cottager's Welcome.

BY GEORGE P. MORRIS. Hard by I've a cottage that stands near the

A stream goes in peace at the door, Where all who will tarry, 'tis well understood, Receive hospitality's store.

To cheer that the brook and the thicket afford The stranger we ever invite ;

You're welcome to freely partake at the board, And afterwards rest for the night,

The birds in the morning will sing from the tree And herald the young God of day, Then, with him uprising, depart if you please, We'll set you refreshed on the way ; Your coin for our service we sternly reject ; No traffic for gain we pursue, And all the reward that we wish or expect To find in the good that we do.

Mankind are all pilgrims on life's weary road, And many would wander astray, In seeking eternity's silent abode, Did mercy not point out the way; If all would their duty discharge as they should To those who are friendless and poor. The world would resemble my cot near the woo And life the sweet stream at my door.

I'll clothe each shivering wretch on earth In needful, nay in brave attire, Vesture befitting banquet mirth, Which kings might envy and admire.

In every vale, on every plain, A school shall glad the gazer's sight, Where every poor man's child may gain Pure knowledge free as air and light; A temple to attract and teach. Shall lift its spire on every hill. Where pious men shall feel and preach Peace, mercy, tolerance and good-will,

To every province shall belong Collegiate structures, not a few, Fill'd with a truth exploring throng, And teachers of the good and true. Music of bells on Sabbath days Round the whole earth shall gladly rise And one great Christian song of praise Stream sweetly upward to the skies.
