ACADIA LOST TO UNIVERSITY OF N. B.

In League Rugby Match at Fredericton Last Thursday—Score 19-3

Fredericton, Oct. 23.—University of New Brunswick whipped Acadia under a score of 19 to 3 in the opening game of the western section of the Maritime Provinces Intercollegiate Rugby League here this afternoon.

It was the biggest score with one exception that has been rolled up in the twenty struggles in which the rugby teams of the two institutions have met since 1895. The only bigger score was in 1914, when U.N.B. won by 25 to 3, but victory ten years ago for the red and black by such a one-sided score was not so unexpected and so surprising as that which the U.N.B. scored today.

The teams trotted out upon College Field yesterday with no past performance upon which to judge their comparative merits. U.N.B. had failed to impress St. John critics in their game against the Trojans in that city, but Acadia's feat in holding Dalhousie to a 3 to 0 score was regarded as significantly strong. As is often the case in rugby, accomplishments in previous games counted for little, and to add to the uncertainty in this game there were twelve players—five of the U.N.B. team, and seven on Acadia's line-up—who were having their baptism under fire in intercollegiate rugby. The half time score was 6 to 3, U.N.B. scoring two tries before the visitors got their legs tally, but it was fairly well along in the second half before U.N.B. cut loose with a rapid succession of spectacular open runs by their half line which rolled up the score until it bordered upon record figures.

U.N.B. depended almost entirely upon the superior kicking and running in open play of their back division, with Paul Fraser, two-footed punter extraordinary, as the pivot around which their offensive was continuously worked. Acadia relied upon their scrum and their advantage there was not sufficient to offset the offensive strength U.N.B. developed in its back division. Rugby followers were surprised at the loose scrum work which Referee J. W. Allen, of Halifax, permitted. U.N.B. has been trained to play a game which called for the ball to come out of the scrum cleanly, but much to the surprise of U.N.B. strategists, Referee Allen didn't seem to have the ball come out, as long as it got out. Evidence of this is that he never called a free kick in the whole game. It wasn't until the last ten minutes of the second half, however, that U.N.B. got to realize this and when they got started scores came thick and fast.

U.N.B. carried its heavy Acadia's line for five tries, two of which were converted, and on several additional occasions the visitors were forced to touch for safety. Fraser was the outstanding—as well as over-worked, outkicking—and all of his opponents all afternoon, with Sterling and Currie handling the ball well back of the scrum, and McCaffrey, Keene and Donohue being the other stars of the back division. Chip Sealey got little chance to uncoil his speed. Keene's resourcefulness was an important factor for U.N.B., when the red and black division got into motion. Davidson seemed to be the hardest worked and most effective back of the Acadia team, with Captain Noble having plenty of opportunities at fullback, but Acadia, as previously stated, depended largely upon their forward line except for an odd good tackle. Both teams showed the weakest defensive play seen here in intercollegiate rugby, and most effective in the game was scored and emphasizes that the eventual portions of the play were the opening of the first half and the last ten minutes of the final period.

First Half—First try (U.N.B.) 12 minutes. U.N.B. heeled cleanly in front of Acadia's goal and the ball was snapped over on short passes to McCaffrey who drove over on a straight end run, circling the Acadia players behind the goal line until he placed the ball almost before the goal.

Unconverted by Fraser, skinned top of goal post.

Second try (U.N.B.)—Four minutes. From a scrum inside Acadia's 25 yard line, Donohue, Fraser and Sealey got away in a combination run. Sealey was finally tackled on the goal line but placed ball over free near touch-line.

Unconverted by Fraser.

Third try (Acadia)—7 minutes. Acadia forwards carried play to U.N.B.'s five yard line. U.N.B. pack was wheeled and McCaffrey plunged over with ball under several red and black players in corner. Unconverted by Davidson.

Second Half—Fourth try (U.N.B.)—25 minutes. Keene got over after a quick pick-up inside Acadia's 25 yard line, bewilder his opponents with fake passes and placed ball outside goal post. Unconverted by Fraser.

Fifth try (U.N.B.)—Five minutes. Fraser on a long run from centre field passed out high to Donohue on Acadia's 10 yard line, after drawing the two opposing tackles against him leaving Donohue unopposed. Donohue placed ball behind goal and try was converted by Fraser.

Sixth try (U.N.B.)—Three minutes. Sealey and Donohue repeated the last play and secured a second try in almost the same identical manner and place. Converted by Fraser after being touched down by Donohue.

Acadia—Full back, O. Noble (captain); halves B. Elderkin, Crossman; Bartheaux and McWha; quaters, Davidson, McLatchey and J. Elderkin; forwards, Anderson, R. Schaffner, Estey, Noble, Warren, T. Taylor and Cleveland.

U. N. B.—Fullback, J. B. Jones; halves, Sealey, Keene, Donohue and McCaffrey; quaters, Sterling, Currie and Fraser; forwards, Wood, Wright, Odell, W. G. Jones, McWha, Sealey, McCaffrey and A. C. P.

CONSERVATIVE LEADER

Re-elected

At the meeting of the Board of Governors of Acadia University on Wednesday last week the department of biology was strengthened by the appointment of an additional professor, the appointee being Ralph H. Wetmore, Ph. D., of Acadia and Harvard.

Mr. Wetmore made a splendid record as an undergraduate student while at Harvard as a graduate student at Harvard was one of the finest in the history of that institution. Professor Jeffrey, of Harvard, writes: "His oral examination for the degree of Ph. D. was one of the finest, if not the finest, in the last twelve years."

REGAN—RAFUSE

A very pretty evening took place at the St. Joseph Catholic church, Kentville, Thursday evening, Oct. 16, at 8:30 o'clock, when Mr. Vincent de Paul Regan, a son of the late Mr. William Regan and Mrs. Regan, of Wolfville, and Miss Myrtle Leona, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Rafuse, of Port Williams, were united in marriage by Rev. Father Donohue. The bridal party motored to church from the bride's home. The bride looked charming in a tailored suit of navy turtleneck, sand hat with veil and white kid gloves. She carried a beautiful bouquet of carnations and maiden hair fern. Mrs. Abner Phinney, a sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and looked beautifully in a grey costume with hat to match. Mr. Robert Regan, a brother of the groom, acted as best man.

After the ceremony the happy couple received the many good wishes of their relatives and friends, after which they motored to their future home, "Hotel Ambassador," Kingsport, N. S., and on their arrival they received a royal welcome by a large gathering of friends. To conclude the happy day a luncheon and dance was enjoyed by all in the main dining room.

KINGS COUNTY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Holds Meeting at Kentville—Interesting Addresses Given—Officers Re-elected

The Kings County Organization of Women's Institutes met in the Town Hall, Kentville, on Monday afternoon, October 27th. Ten of the twelve Institutes in the county were well represented. The President, Mrs. Patriquin, of Wolfville, occupied the chair, and was ably assisted by the 1st Vice President, Mrs. Ward, of Canning, and by the Secretary, Mrs. Sandford, of Coldbrook. The feasibility of establishing a School of Agriculture and Domestic Science during the winter months, at some central point for the young men and women of Kings County, was given some discussion. A motion was passed in sympathy with the project, leaving it in the hands of the executive who assured that the delegates take the question home to the Institutes represented for discussion and report.

The program for the afternoon included an address by Dr. Lillian Chase on insulin, its uses, and the possibility of securing Government aid in the dispensation of it to those financially unable to procure it. This method had been adopted in Ontario and has been a marvelous boon to physicians and patients. Dr. Chase's address was both interesting and instructive.

Mr. Wetmore made a splendid record as an undergraduate student while at Harvard as a graduate student at Harvard was one of the finest in the history of that institution. Professor Jeffrey, of Harvard, writes: "His oral examination for the degree of Ph. D. was one of the finest, if not the finest, in the last twelve years."

An hour of profitable discussion might have followed these addresses, but as the afternoon was deepening into twilight a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the three ladies aforementioned and to the retiring officers, who were thereupon re-elected for another term of office. The meeting then adjourned to re-assemble at the call of the President.

"DAYTIME WIVES"

The young woman stenographer and private secretary who has many times been pictured as the home-breaker in her deep, subtle manner, causes a contrast between a man and his wife, who are calmly pocketing the affections of her employer, but it remains for the vital film drama, "Daytime Wives," to be shown at the Orpheum Theatre next Monday and Tuesday to give the office girl a square deal. Endless stories have been written showing the office girl as a heartless vampire who makes eyes at her boss and wins him away from the sad-eyed, weeping wife. But nothing much has been said about the earnest, young woman who makes her own battles her battles and helps him in his great fight to carve out a living for himself and family. In "Daytime Wives," the private secretary is shown as a beautiful and earnest young woman with high ideals, who works zealously and unselfishly for her employer's interests and resists all temptations to become a female lounge lizard and jazz maniac.

ACADIA CLUB TO BE FORMED AT HALIFAX

HALIFAX, Oct. 25th.—As the result of a motion passed at a rally of former graduates and students of Acadia University, Wolfville, held in the First Baptist church hall last evening, the organization of a society composed of former students of that college will follow shortly.

The meeting last evening was attended by several hundred persons and was held under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Societies of Halifax and Dartmouth.

The purpose of organization is to assist in the raising of $50,000 for Acadia University and also arouse interest and enthusiasm in the activities of the colleges. Several members of the college faculty, including Dr. MacDonald, Dr. Wheelock, Dr. Spidle and Dr. Rogers, were present.

During the course of the evening a pleasing program of music was rendered, the numbers including a quartette solo by the members of the Cornwallis Baptist church choir; vocal solo by Miss McLeod, contralto solo of the First Baptist church choir, and a reading by Mrs. Angus Morton. An address was also given by Dr. F. W. Patterson, president of Acadia. At the close of the program refreshments were served.

DR. MARSHALL SPEAKS AT HALIFAX

Addressed Y. M. C. A. Sunday Afternoon and Preached at First Baptist Church

HALIFAX, Oct. 27th.—Holding up before his hearers the three symbols of dominions, Dr. A. N. Marshall, pastor of the Baptist church, Wolfville, spoke yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. before a large audience on the subject, "The Triple Symbol," urged upon his audience to adopt the method used by Mikado and thus lead a better, purer and more self-conscious life. In opening his address he stated that the Japs could teach the world the fine art of knowing how to get along amongst themselves. He spoke of the triple symbol of the Mikado, a ruler of six dominions in Japan. He informed his audience that he had travelled through Japan as a Y. M. C. A. worker in his younger days and had seen Mikado's Temple and residence, but had never had the pleasure of meeting the ruler.

In explaining his subject Dr. Marshall told of how the Mikado took three symbols into the temple with him when he went to worship. "First," he said, "he took a mirror, into which he would gaze while contemplating. This, he explained, was to see himself as he really was. The Mikado has spiritual visions and tries to see himself as he is as he looks at the reflection in the mirror. "The second symbol," he said, "was a crystal globe. When the Mikado looked into this, he shall explained, "he sees something clear, something clean and better than himself and thinks of the Mikado he should be. "The third symbol—the sword—suggests the question 'what shall I do with it?' It means power," said the speaker. "A symbol of trained, disciplined and equipped power and the Mikado used it graciously in the manner of a helping hand."

"These three symbols," he said in closing, "might well be brought into the Christian Church and used in the same manner for good."

Dr. Marshall was the preacher at the morning and evening services yesterday at the First Baptist church, where he was welcomed by large and appreciative congregations. At the evening service, in his introductory words, Dr. Marshall spoke of his delight in being at the First Baptist church and the Y. M. C. A. during his visit to Halifax. He alluded to visits to the church in former years and of meeting old friends there who had been associated with him elsewhere, complimented the congregation upon the excellence of its musical service (which is under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Taylor) and paid a high tribute to the minister, Rev. A. L. Huddleston, whom he had known in Ottawa as one of the strong men of Ontario.

W. C. T. U. MEETING

At the regular W. C. T. U. meeting on Monday evening, held at the home of Mr. E. Robinson, Mrs. W. O. Taylor, of the Wolfville Union, gave a full and very interesting report of the Provincial Convention held at Windsor, Oct. 1-3, giving a summary of the twenty-one departments of work which the Union in the towns of the Province have taken up during the year.

The reports showed not only advancement in training of the young in temperance work, but also in World Missions and general relief work. There is much to be done at this time in the "world wide" organization and calls for the interest and co-operation of all concerned in the betterment of mankind.

The convention speakers were Rev. Mr. Prosser, who spoke on "Child Welfare," and Rev. Mr. Barrett, on "Prohibition—A Success or Failure."

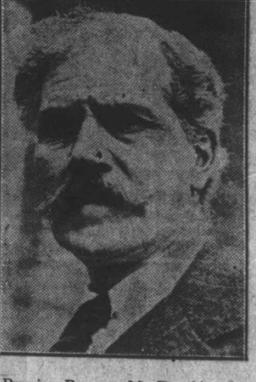

The meeting on Monday was well attended and interest in temperance work locally, revived. After the appointment of Superintendents in the various departments of work, a programme and plans for the years were outlined. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

At the convention at Windsor Mrs. Taylor was appointed Provincial Press Superintendent of W. C. T. U. work.

The Rummage Sale held last Saturday by the members of the Social and Benevolent Society, assisted by ladies of the Baptist church at Port Williams resulted in over $220 being raised. The day was ideal and a large number of buyers came from the South Mountain and other points. This money was donated to Acadia. A special contribution of one dollar to the Acadia fund was made by Mr. Fred Atwell, Melanston.

RECEPTION FOR BAPTIST PASTOR LAST EVENING

Large Number Attended Banquet Which was Followed by Business Meeting

At the Baptist church last evening an exceedingly pleasant and successful function took place in which a large number of the members participated. The affair took the form of a public reception for Dr. and Mrs. Marshall, which was held in the ladies' parlor, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Shaw and Mrs. (Dr.) Leslie Eaton assisting.

The company then repaired to the dining room, which had been handsomely and artistically decorated for the occasion by Mrs. Herbert Johnson, and where a sumptuous repast was served by a committee composed of ten young men and ten young women from the B.Y.P.U., under the direction of Mrs. A. M. Young. The tables presented a tempting appearance and the whole arrangement was such as to reflect the greatest credit upon those responsible for this feature.

After the good things had received due attention addresses were given by Dr. Cakes on behalf of the church, Mrs. Leslie Eaton on behalf of the ladies, and Dr. Patterson on behalf of the university. These were graciously responded to by Dr. Marshall.

Adjournment was then made to the school-room where the annual business meeting of the congregation was held, with Rev. Dr. DeWolfe in the chair. The reports of the various departments of the church were presented and officers for the ensuing year elected, with the exception of the deacons, which on account of the late hour was deferred until next Wednesday evening.

The financial statement showed that the Union in the receipts for current expenses had been $6610.54 and for denominational and benevolent work $1699.04 had been raised.

DR. E. W. SAWYER MEMORIAL SERVICE

(From the Summerland (B.C.) Review.) Touching references were made to the life and work of the late Dr. E. W. Sawyer in a memorial service held last Sunday evening in the Baptist church.

Dr. Sawyer was for ten years a resident of Summerland, as principal of Okanagan College, and took an active part in community work. He served for a time as chairman of the municipal school board. The pastor, Rev. Z. L. Fash, who knew Dr. Sawyer as a teacher at Horton Academy, Nova Scotia, paid tribute to the sterling character of the man.

As an intimate friend and class mate as well as a neighbor during Dr. Sawyer's residence here, G. J. Coulter White gave briefly more intimate glimpses of the spirit and character of Dr. Sawyer. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir.

IN THE POLICE COURT

This morning at the police court a stanger who was arrested last evening for being in an intoxicated condition on Elm avenue was fined by Stipendiary Magistrate ten dollars, which was paid equally as to where the liquor was procured elicited the information that it came from the vendor at Parrsboro and was furnished to the transgressor by a fellow passenger on the boat. In delivering judgment His Honor stated that it was his practice to inflict rather severe penalties in such cases as there was no provision for the legal sale of intoxicants in this town and citizens had a decided objection to people buying liquor elsewhere and coming here to make an exhibition of themselves.

Local Collegians Scored 12 Points in Final Rally After Opponents Had Scored 8

With a score of 8 points against them the Acadia football team came back strong in the last ten minutes of their match with Mt. Allison this afternoon and won by the score of 12 to 8. Acadia had the better of the territory the most of the game and the forward line played a wonderful game. The half line were, however, weak and missed many chances to score.

Mt. A. opened the scoring in the first few minutes but during the remainder of the half the play was near the Mt. A. line. Acadia tried hard to score but with no avail and finally just before the period ended the visitors carried the ball to the Acadia line and scored. This try was converted, making the score 8 to 0.

Acadia's chances looked slim when the second half opened but they continued to play hard, several times menacing the Mt. A. line. Finally about ten minutes before the period ended the ball was passed out to Davidson who dropped it squarely over the bar, giving Acadia four points. With the locals took courage and went back strong. The half line got the ball and passed out to Woodworth who crossed the Mt. A. line. Although the angle was a difficult one Davidson converted easily, amid the cheers of the Acadia fans. The local collegians were not satisfied, however, with a one point lead and again carried the play to the Mt. A. line, scoring another try which was not converted.

McINTOSH RED DECLARED THE BEST DESERT APPLE

Nova Scotia Apples Won Three Firsts at Empire Fair—Chief Prizes Went to British Columbia

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—For the second time in successive years the McIntosh red apple first produced by the late Henry McIntosh on his Ontario farm at Dundalk near Iroquois, has been declared the finest variety of dessert apple produced in the British Empire, but the particular specimen of the fruit which won this great distinction at the Imperial Fruit Show, which opened at Birmingham on October 24th, was grown at Vernon, B. C., and exhibited by the Associated Growers of British Columbia. The first prize for a cooking apple also went to the same place and the same growers.

The above are outstanding points in the awards made, information regarding which has just been received by the Dominion Fruit Commissioner, George McIntosh, Hanging in the office of the commissioner is a photograph of the first McIntosh red tree which has a tablet erected near it to commemorate the wealth it has added to Canada.

So far as Canada is concerned, British Columbia swept the board in the Dominion Fruit Commission, Kelowna Fruit Growers Exchange secured the other prize award in the British Empire section, second prize for Cox's orange pippa which is an apple of English origin. In the overseas section the awards were as follows: Shows, Wealthy, McIntosh, Jonathan, Cox's Orange Pippa, Spitzenberg, Newtown Pippa, Wagener, King, Spy, Greening, Delicious, first prize for each variety to the Associated Growers of B. C., Vernon and second for Blenheim.

To Nova Scotia went first prizes for Russet, Stark-Baldwin, through the United Fruit Commission of Nova Scotia, Kentville; second prize for Cox's Orange Pippa, Wagener, Spy, going to John Buchanan of the Buchanan Fruit Company of Waterville; second prize for Kings to the United Fruit Co. of Kentville, and third for Wagener, Stark and Cravenstein, to F. A. Parker, of Berwick.

Ontario secured a third prize through the Ontario Fruit Growers Association for the following varieties, Wealthy, Snow, McIntosh, King, Russet, Spy, Greening. The second prize for Russets went to Bruce Chaplin, Abbotsford, Quebec. The special prizes will be announced later.

The department was most anxious that the prize should come for a second time and they have been featuring the McIntosh in England, having distributed a large number of boxes of this variety among the schools of England, having the following printed on the wrappers: "Canadian grown McIntosh, finest dessert apple to the British Empire awarded first prize at the Imperial Fruit Show, Manchester, 1923."

It is pointed out by the department that the work of developing very early varieties has been large very planting.

COST OF PERMANENT SIDEWALKS

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Tuesday evening to hear the report of the Town Manager respecting the work on sidewalk construction and to pass the necessary measures to provide for permanent same. Mr. Stairs reported the total cost of the work $6350 and the proportion of this to be paid by property owners $3478.85. The cost per square yard was $2.41.

By motion of the Council the work was declared completed as the act provides and Nov. 1st was fixed as the date at which payments are due. Property owners may pay their proportion in one payment or three with interest as they desire. Meanwhile arrangement has been made with the Bank of Montreal for a loan to cover the required amount which will be reduced as the funds are paid in.

Editorial

Our pulpits are our work clothes. Each of us live some kind of a sermon every day.

OUR CONTRIBUTION TO THE N. S. PUBLICITY BUREAU

WOLFVILLE citizens should remember that they have as yet made no contribution to the funds of the Nova Scotia Publicity Bureau, an organization which during the past year has done such efficient service in advertising the attractions of this province as a tourist resort. Other towns which figure very much less prominently as bidders for the patronage of summer visitors have given generously to the undertaking which merits the support of the public generally. This is probably no fault of our people as up to the present time no systematic attempt has been made to collect money for this purpose. The Wolfville Board of Trade, which had the matter in hand, deemed it wise to postpone any attempt to raise funds until the end of the season, and now that the opportune time has arrived will seek to secure such an amount as will adequately show our appreciation of the work of the bureau and be creditable to a community which has always shown itself able and willing to do its full share along the line of financial responsibility. Within a short time a canvas of the town will be made, when it is hoped those having the task in hand may receive the cordial co-operation of all good citizens.

The Bureau has spent a large amount in the publication of literature of various kinds and in placing before those whom we desire to interest the merits of Nova Scotia as a mecca for summer visitors. During the past summer the advantages of this campaign were apparent, but naturally the full results cannot yet be estimated. The harvest which will inevitably be ours can only be secured by a program of publicity far more generous than any that has yet been attempted.

Statistics that have been published show that wonderful prosperity has come to some of the states of the neighboring republic, as well as to sections of our country, because of a wise policy of making known what they have to offer tourists, and what has been done elsewhere may easily be accomplished here. There are wonderful opportunities before us in this sea-girt province if we but courageously do our part.

BEST FRUIT BRINGS BEST PRICE

THAT THE orchardists of this section are making a mistake in beginning to pick their apples too early is the opinion of some of our most prominent growers. The first of October they are inclined to regard as early enough to commence operations, apples picked before that time being immature and uncolored and likely to create a bad impression when placed upon the market.

The Gravensteins, which for years back has perhaps been Nova Scotia's most noted variety, has suffered in an especial manner because of this treatment. Very often this apple is picked and shipped while yet unripe and green and as a consequence the returns are frequently most disappointing. Allowed to remain upon the tree until fully matured it is a most delicious fruit and presents a fine appearance. Put up in attractive packages they should at their best sell either in home or foreign markets at prices which would well repay for the additional expense and the risk of loss because of the delayed picking.

The advantage which first-class fruit has in the British markets over that of inferior quality is fully indicated by recent returns, which show that best quality Gravensteins sold as high as thirty-three shillings while inferior lots failed to attract the attention of best buyers and had to be sold as low as twenty-one shillings or less, and similar conditions prevailed with respect to other varieties.

THE V. O. N. DRIVE

THE TIME for the regular drive in support of the Victorian Order nurse is now near at hand. We understand that this year the canvas which has been made annually for the past few years will be held early in November, and that the exact date will be announced in THE ACADIAN next week. In the past our people have responded generously and if a larger contribution than usual is asked for this year we feel that the call will meet with a ready response. If each citizen will contribute according to his or her means there will be little difficulty in the financing of an institution which has already proved itself of real service to the community.

The objective that is aimed at in this year's canvas, we understand, is eight hundred dollars, an amount that should not be difficult to secure. If this can be raised it is deemed that the necessity of resorting to other devices to raise money for this work during the year will not be necessary.

No one, we feel sure, will question the value of the V. O. N. as an institution of Wolfville and surrounding country. The home, the school and the community have felt the influence of the nurse's helpful ministrations, which in the past year have been more efficient than ever before.

If you want this work continued give generously to the collectors for this fund when they call upon you.

LIBERTY IS YOURS!

WHAT A small world Old King Tut ruled! With all the wealth of the Pharoas, even HE was miserably chained to his own back yard by the meagre methods of transportation.

The automobile of today has made princes of us all. Once only a few years ago, you read about William K. Vanderbilt's "White Ghost", bought in Europe. He was tearing up the highway at the terrific speed of thirty-five miles an hour—the last five imaginary.

Now you can go out and buy an automobile for the price of a second class horse and buggy—and you can, if foolish, go faster than Willie K. ever did in his "White Ghost".

Do you give yourself freedom to move where and when you will—or are you chained to circumstances? Liberty is yours if you want it. When you buy a car—a new one or a good used one—and are able to pay for it—you purchase freedom. It's worth it.

THE HOME NEWSPAPER

WHAT TELLS so readily the standard of a town as the appearance of its newspaper? The enterprise of the citizens is depicted by its advertisements, their liberality by the very appearance of the local newspaper. Some papers show a good solid, healthy foundation; others show a striving to contend with the grappling hundreds around them, trying to wrench out an existence from a close-fisted community.

A newspaper is like a church; it requires fostering in the beginning and for a few years, and then it walks alone and reflects credit on its location. Take your home paper. It gives you more news of immediate interest than foreign papers; it talks for you when other localities belie you; it stands up for your rights; it advocates everything that tends to prosper its town and improve the conditions of all dwellers therein; you always have a champion in your home paper and those who stand up for you should certainly be sustained. Therefore, it is to your interest to support your home paper, not grudgingly, but in a liberal spirit, as a pleasure; not as a duty, but as an investment that will amply repay the expenditure.

OUR GLORIOUS AUTUMN

TOURISTS and others who restrict their visits to Nova Scotia, and particularly the Annapolis Valley, to the summer season make a very decided mistake. Such conditions as have been experienced during the past few weeks have been glorious indeed. With abundance of sunshine, a landscape of unsurpassed beauty, excellent roads everywhere, and the tang of autumn in the air which sets the blood coursing in healthful circulation, what can be imagined that would exceed in pleasure a motor trip through this region of delights during these glorious days.

We are slow to publish the attractions of what must be acknowledged the finest season of all the year and when these are better understood the length of the tourist season will be considerably extended. In the meantime those who cater to the comfort of such visitors by providing cheery open fires for the chilly evenings will do away with the only possible objection to motor trips at this season and will be rewarded by generous patronage in the coming days.

WAR AGAINST RAFFLES

(Dr. J. G. Shearer, General Secretary, Social Service Council of Canada.)

The following Canadian Press dispatch appears in this morning's papers: Port Arthur, Sept. 17.—Acting on instructions from the Attorney-General, Provincial Police are taking steps to close down all games of chance. The first to be affected here are two church organizations, which had sent automobiles onto the streets with banners advertising raffles. The banners were removed by the Police.

Two years ago certain elite ladies of a great patriotic society decided to raffie an automobile in London, Ontario. They sold tickets at one dollar each. Their prospects for a rich harvest were bright. Again the Attorney-General interfered when informed of the proceeding by a local citizen. The Crown Attorney investigated, found that while the ladies had good intentions they were ignorant of the law, and were heading straight for a criminal offence. He advised them that if they proceeded he would prosecute them just as other offenders. They desisted. The raffie was called off at the last moment.

A curling club in Halifax is selling tickets for the raffie of an automobile to be disposed of at the Exhibition. These are mere samples of what is common. Frequently, if not usually, the offenses are due to ignorance of what the law says.

What is the law regarding raffles? Raffles like lotteries are prohibited. There is one exception which is very frequently misunderstood.

The law (sec. 236 S.S. 6 b.) of the code reads: "Raffles for prizes of small value at any bazaar held for any charitable or religious object, if permission to hold the same has been obtained from the city or other municipal council, or from the mayor, reeve or other chief officer of the city, town or other municipality, wherein such bazaar is held, and the articles raffled, for thereat have first been offered for sale and none of them are of a value exceeding fifty dollars."

These permitted raffles are subject to several conditions. (1) They cannot be held at anything but a bazaar. (2) Only at a bazaar held for any charitable or religious object. (3) Only articles of less value than fifty dollars can be raffled. (4) Even these articles cannot be raffled unless they have first been offered for sale at the bazaar. (5) The official permission of the Council mayor or other head of the municipality must be obtained for the raffie and the articles have failed to sell.

Churches have no special privilege over individuals or other organizations. The instances given at the beginning of this article are clearly violations of the law and criminal offences. From all the information he has been able to gather the writer is of the opinion that the great majority of raffles held are undoubted violations of the Criminal Code, and that this is due to ignorance on the part of those holding them of what the law says as to what is permitted and what is not. It is to save well meaning people from putting themselves in the position of criminal offenders that this article is written.

It is not lawful to hold raffles in shops or stores or at fairs or athletic meets or anywhere but at bazaars and then only at bazaars if these are held strictly for a charitable or religious object. Of course the operation of wheels of fortune and other gambling devices cannot be carried on at such bazaars. Only raffles are allowed and only of articles of small value previously offered for sale and not sold.

Good citizens will do well to make sure they understand what is permitted and what not before venturing into a raffie of any sort. All this is said purely from the viewpoint of what the law is. In addition it should be noted that from the standpoint of ethics a raffie is a gambling act even when it comes within the law and will not be practised by those who draw the line at gambling.

From a notice posted outside a church in England:

"On Saturday night, at 8 p.m., the annual potato-pie supper will be held, and on Sunday morning the subject of the sermon will be 'A Night of Horror'."

DYKED LANDS OF NOVA SCOTIA

(By E. D. Haliburton in The Family Herald & Weekly Star.)

Perhaps to most people in Canada the term "dyke" always brings a thought of Holland, but in at least one section of the Dominion it has no such association; it connotes a different vision of broad meadows and marshlands close at hand, of a plain dotted with teams and men and mowing machines at haymaking time or of broken embankments and a wide lake of muddy red water after some unusually high autumn tide has found a weak spot and in a rush of riotous mischief tears away in a few hours what many hands and weeks of labor have built up.

Maybe Nova Scotia vies with Holland herself in the extent of dyked lands she possesses. There are thousands and thousands of acres of such land bordering the Bay of Fundy from which the swiftly rising and falling waters are kept back by running dykes along the tide washed shores and along the banks of winding tidal rivers; rivers which the summer tourist might languidly note as a dried and parched up mud creek, wondering at the size of it and the trickling mud stream in its depths, as he motors across a long wooden bridge in the afternoon and he wonders still more if he has lost his way when he comes back over the same bridge at night and watches the moonlight play on the rushing turbulent river beneath him.

The soil of heavy red clay is naturally fertile and rich, requiring no fertilizer and producing heavy crops of grain and hay year after year. At the head of the Basin of Minas in Cumberland county lies the famous Tantramar Marsh, the greatest area of reclaimed land in one unbroken sweep that the province can boast of, and the greatest dyked area in the world outside Holland.

In this district and across the border into New Brunswick, the dyked land is called "marsh". Further down the bay, in the region of the Annapolis Valley, the land of apple orchards and the scene of Longfellow's "Evangeline", it is known simply as "dyke". Perhaps it was the "dyke" itself that in part inspired the poet. For the "dyke", except in winter, is always inspiring. In spring it shows sweeping spaces of vivid green, chequered with newly ploughed squares, while the upland is still brown. Later in the drowsy summer sunlight when the shining water is at high tide beyond the dyke, it forms a pleasing background; or when the grain has taken on its golden tint and great fields rustle and undulate in the early autumn wind, it is no less impressive; neither fence nor barn mars its expanse on Grand Pre.

Perhaps it was partly this marsh land that early attracted the French. Some time about the first part of the eighteenth century they began to settle there. But although the French are often credited for having built the dykes by far the greater part of the work, and real work it must have been, was done by the grandfathers and great grandfathers of the men who now own the land.

The Grand Pre or Grand Prairie was the largest area reclaimed by the Acadians. After the English Government, driven desperate by their inability to make the Acadians recognize their authority, had expelled them, the vacant lands remained unoccupied for five years until a band of settlers, two hundred strong, from Connecticut came there. They occupied the upland but found the dykes broken and dilapidated and most of the meadow under water. For a long time the Yankees made little or no attempt to keep the water out. The construction or repair of these embankments, and of the aboteaux or the sluice or trap arrangement, which is ingeniously built to allow drainage water to run out at low tide and to keep the sea water out at high, called to a very special kind of knowledge or skill which they did not possess.

But a few of the exiled Acadians, who had escaped the soldiers and were lurking in the vicinity of their old homes, did have this skill and enlisting their aid, the newcomers gradually shut the tide out from all the area that had been previously enclosed. That extensive meadow stretching more than three miles east of Wolfville and more than two miles across to Long Island, forming the Grand Pre dyke as it is today, was not completely reclaimed until 1810. It is still cutting two and three tons of hay to the acre. The actual dyke is simply a mound of earth sometimes fifteen feet high, sometimes five, according to the elevation of the marsh, and about fifteen or twenty feet wide at the base, tapering to perhaps two feet wide at the top, depending on its height.

Almost every year dykes have to be repaired. Each section of land enclosed has a "Dykemaster" and under his skilled and experienced direction the work is carried out, every farmer who owns a plot on that particular section either must work himself or send a man in his place. These men bind themselves into a mild form of organization and submit to a peculiar set of regulations known as "dyke laws"; three officials are appointed to administer the affairs of the land and owners, a dyke commissioner, a secretary, and the dyke-master. Another task these autocrats must perform is the determination of the day when cattle shall or may be turned on to pasture the aftergrowth, after the grain has been all gathered in, or ought to be gathered in. To the strange ownership seems rather mysterious. On Annapolis Valley dykelands, at least, there are no boundary lines, no distinguishing mark, no fences, mile after mile of sameness unbroken; yet each man knows his own dyke as unerringly as he knows his own home, and he points out the drains, which, to his mind, mark it off quite clearly from his neighbor's land. Originally in the hands of the small but sturdy band who did most of the reclaiming work, the dyke has been divided and subdivided to a bewildering degree. Large areas like the Grand Pre and the Tantramar, are owned literally by thousands of individuals, some of them living ten miles and more away, and is divided among children further every generation. Illustrative of still another way in which it may be acquired is a story which a certain old farmer told me.

"A man came up to where I was mowing one day," he said, "and he asked me how much dyke was worth," referring to the common practice of selling hay standing at so much per acre, says I. "I don't know," says he. "Do you own the dyke?" says he. "No," says I. "Well, didn't you rent it?" says he. "No," says I. "Well, what claim have you on it," says he.

"I married it," says I. And he laughed heartily at his joke as he assured me that it was the very best way to acquire dyke. Many stories are told of the old French days, mostly of treasure buried in ghost-guarded spots, by the supposedly wealthy farmers who were taken away long ago; and if one is inclined to be dubious of the wealth that may be buried, old people steeped in dyke lore will hasten to remind you that pirates also buried gold there, even the famous Captain Kidd!

So there is one spot where at a certain season a fierce great dog appears when a man comes too close; the man retreats hurriedly and the dog vanishes, the man retraces his steps again and again the dog appears; the man goes back for his gun and a companion; but returning, finds that he cannot locate the spot again. And then there are mysterious lights, and many years ago when the old people were children, there were mysterious visitors, who came by day and dug by night and vanished in the early morning; afterwards the hole would be found with perhaps the imprint of an old-fashioned ironpot in the bottom. A story is told of two men who appeared late one night asking permission to spend the night in an old barn, down where the upland merged into dyke. The farmer urged them to stay in the house, but they refused; they preferred the barn. Next morning the strangers were gone and in one of the giant hand-hewn timbers of the old French structure they found where a sliding door had been pushed aside, revealing a fair-sized cavity; what had been in there is still a secret.

It is probable that many of these stories were not entirely without foundation. It is recorded of the Acadians that they were extremely covetous of specie, that they got all they could and it never made its appearance again, so obviously they must have been in the habit of burying it far away from their old homes. The secret of the hiding place would be handed down with each generation, until some descendant found his way back to reclaim what was probably a slender hoard.

Another story is told of a certain tired individual who hated work so, that he sold his run-out farm and lived most-ly by visiting around where ever he could visit. It came to pass that one day a much bewhiskered peddler, who was also a palmistry expert, essayed to read his fortune, gratis, and this fortune-teller found that his victim was going to find four bars of solid gold on Grand Pre dyke before he died. That summer the tired one was a willing worker on the dyke at haying time, in fact he seemed loath to leave the dyke at all and only lost faith in the gold bars when the grain was ready to be harvested.

During the war years and just after, dyke land in the Annapolis Valley sold at unheard of figures, prices going as high as $400 per acre. Today it will hardly fetch half that. Yet the almost identical marshlands of Cumberland county and vicinity will command only from twenty to fifty dollars per acre, that being near the shore changing hands at the better price. It is hard to see why the difference between prices in the two places should be so great, especially as Cumberland would appear to be more favorably situated in so far as markets are concerned.

To a small extent it may be less desirable because it costs more to keep it up. In the Valley, dykes across the mouth of a river suffice to put an end to the river and reclaim a large area of land, as the Canard dyke does across the mouth of the flat land. The Canard River once meandered through a comparatively short dyke, shutting in so much land making the cost of maintenance very low; at the head of the Gulf on the other hand, the marsh is sometimes almost surrounded by the protective walls and the cost of upkeep is high, the farmer having to give a good deal of dyke labor. Often a breach high tide in spring or fall makes a breach and then the tide does immense havoc, the cost of repairs after such an incident may reach formidable dimensions to the owner of many acres. The long distance of some of this land from the home farms also lowers its value, although the Tantramar is dotted with barns where the hay is stored and where much of it is pressed and sold.

Once the tide piled up so high that the dykes were everywhere broken down with a result that appeared to be disastrous. That was in 1869, a date that has passed into Nova Scotia history and all around the Bay of Fundy people still speak of it, old men date from it, very old men talk about the times before it. It had been predicted by a man named Saxby, so it has been called the Saxby tide for it came on the day set for it.

Following a day of ominous calm and another of a hurricane of South West wind, blowing the water straight up the Bay, the tide began to rise, until heaped up by the gale it came far above any high water mark previously known, a tide only exceeded in one other part of the world. Once the water went above it, the dyke was as nothing. It was late in the fall and hundreds of cattle and sheep were grazing there, haystacks and barns dotted the plain. The tide took everything before it straight on to the highlands ahead, there were fences then and fence poles, barns, dykes, cattle, sheep and haystacks, all were caught up and carried along; cattle fought for places on the stacks and some of them found safety that way but most of them were drowned.

Yet for those who came after the tide was blessing. Temporarily it had reverted to its natural state as "salt marsh", covered by every high tide with a layer of rich sediment; gradually the dykes were rebuilt and repaired and the land within restored to a new lease of fertility by that tide which had seemed to ruin it. It is now customary after the dyke has been washed away very badly, to leave it for a year or two or maybe three or four, until the tides have deposited an entirely new soil. Then when recovered it becomes what is known as "new dyke", land as rich and fertile as any in the world, in the words of the native, "the best land that lies out of doors".

So it would seem that the time or the money the dyke owner gives towards taking back his land from the sea, should not be looked upon as a loss but rather as a fertilizer investment.

The good job does not always fall to the man who is fit for it, but to the man who has fought for it.

MT. DENSON GIRL MARRIED

WINDSOR, Oct. 22.—This afternoon at 3:30 the Windsor Baptist church held a number of friends and relatives of the principals in a wedding of much local interest.

The contracting parties were Miss Jennie Beryl Smith, daughter of Mrs. Annie Smith, Mt. Denson, and Raymond Percy Dimock, eldest son of C. Henry Dimock, a prominent business man of the town.

The church had been beautifully decorated by the friends of the bride and groom, both members of the church, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. F. S. Kinley, pastor of the church. The choir rendered appropriate music.

The bride looked very pretty dressed in a navy blue tailored costume with a most becoming hat of harmonious shades in the same color. She wore a handsome set of wolf furs, and carried an arm shower bouquet of bride's roses and white carnations. Both were unattended.

After the ceremony the happy pair left by train for a honeymoon trip to Montreal. On their return they will reside in their new house on Pinkett street, which was newly erected this summer, and is being furnished for their reception.

The groom is associated in business with his father, and the bride, who has resided in town at different times, is very popular with the friends of both.

There were several "showers" for her during the past week when friends in Hantsport, Pictou and Windsor literally showered her with innumerable gifts of linen, cut glass, silver, and all kinds of beautiful and useful household articles. Jewelry and cheques were also among the wedding gifts from relatives and friends.

The young couple have the best wishes of many friends for their future happiness and prosperity.

HANTS COUNTY MAN DIES IN CALIFORNIA

(From The Ferndale (Cal.) Enterprise of Oct. 17.)

William Lytel, one of the oldest men in Humboldt county and a resident of Ferndale and vicinity since 1884, died at his home in this town early yesterday morning after an illness extending over several weeks.

He was born in Hants county, Nova Scotia, April 8, 1828, and was 96 years of age on his last birthday. On December 13, 1859, he was married to Anna E. Redden in Windsor, Nova Scotia, where they lived until December, 1884, arriving in Ferndale on the 13th of that month.

After a few months spent at Grizzly Bluff they purchased the ranch on the Island which was their home for many years, moving there in the fall of 1885 and residing there continuously until ten years ago, when they moved to Ferndale. Mrs. Lytel died on February 11th, of this year.

Fifteen children were born to the couple, of whom nine survive as follows: Samuel H. of Arcata, Thomas R. of Grizzly Bluff, William of Petrolia, Frank B. of Charleston, Oregon, Edward B. of Ferndale, Mrs. Gilbert Stockton of Ruth, Trinity county, James B. of Eureka, Mrs. Belle Anderson of Waddington and Mrs. Maude Terkelsen of Ferndale.

William Lytel was a man who was highly respected in this community and during his long residence here had made for himself a host of friends. Despite his advanced age he was active and alert until his last illness and carried himself with the bearing of a man many years younger. His death is regretted by the people of this community, who join in extending every sympathy to the surviving sons and daughters.

The funeral will be held tomorrow, Saturday, at 1:30 o'clock from the Ferndale Congregational church.—Windsor papers please copy.

DIARY OF MARGARET D. MICHENER

Dec. 19th, 1849.—This has been a very cold day. Joe has brought Adah up to school on the sled for three mornings. I often think what will be the best method of speaking to the scholar for their good, of implanting in their minds useful lessons. One of the boys cut a gash in the temple of one of the others so that it bled considerably. I talked to the culprit of the wickedness of what he had done, and he seemed sorry, but perhaps he was more afraid of being punished than of the injury he had done. However, I will try to instill good principles in their minds and to be peaceful with one another. I desire the Lord may enable me to do my duty. There is to be prayer meeting this evening and tomorrow has been appointed as a day of Thanksgiving.

21st. The ground is nearly bare and is freezing. I went up to Father's after the meeting on Wednesday evening and then attended the Thanksgiving service on morning, which I enjoyed very much. I went home with George and Mercy. James Elder also stopped in. Woodbury was showing us a number of new toys they got for him while they were in England. I called in to see Sarah Whitman who is sick. The doctor came while I was there; then George and Mercy came along and we went up to Lydia's and spent a pleasant evening. On returning to Mercy's I found Maria there and went home to spend the night with her. Asa Hines came up from Halifax yesterday from the "Hantsport".

22nd. Another week has passed. I have been very busy. Joe and Olivia were up to spend the day with Mother yesterday; on the way back they called for Adah.

24th. Monday afternoon. I went up home Saturday night. I called in to Mrs. Nunna and to Mrs. Hines on the way. When I reached home I found that Father, Mother and Ann had gone over to Mary Sams', who is very ill. They returned in a short time. It is quite cold when we retired but in the morning it was raining. Robert and I went to meeting; the roads are quite icy. We were expecting to have a prayer meeting, but saw a stranger come in with Capt. Holmes, who took the preacher's stand, and we saw it was Mr. McKeen, who lodged with us two years ago, accompanied by Mr. Hobbs. He spoke well from the words, "There remaineth therefore a rest for the people of God". Mr. McKeen went to Father's after meeting and stopped till evening. He is attending college at Wolfville and appears to be a fine man. In the evening he gave a discourse on the last Judgment. It was a solemn theme.

TO APPEAL AGAINST CROW'S NEST PASS DECISION

Hon. John Bracken, Premier of Manitoba, and Hon. Herbert Greenfield, Premier of Alberta, are going to appeal without delay to the Governor-in-Council against the Board of Railway Commissioner's decision on the Crow's Nest Pass rates. Premier Greenfield said that at the Alberta Government would confer with the Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan regarding what the nature of the appeal will be. The West feels very strongly about this adverse decision.

27th. Real winter has come at last; it has been snowing all day. Mr. McKeen preached again on Monday evening. I went up home and found Ann was staying with Mary Sam who is still very sick. Mother was up there also in the afternoon. Tuesday night there was a temperance meeting, all the family went but Mother and I. It was late when they returned, as the meeting was very interesting. We then went over to Mary Sams and found she was easier. Yesterday morning I saw a big come in on the beach. It proved to be the "America", so Sam is at home now. I have two invitations out to tea tonight; as the first one came from Abigail I will go there. I wish Simeon was here to accompany me.

29th. This day has been fine, but there is appearance of a storm. I have been busy all day, and alone. Have been thinking of Simeon. I spent a pleasant evening at Abigail's on Thursday in company with Capt. George and Kendal Holmes and their wives. I spent the night with Maria. I spent yesterday at Mary's as she was up to Lydia's. Ann went down to Olivia's and in the evening I went too. Mrs. Lucy Davidson is very sick; I called to see her and she said she never expected to be up again. This morning we heard she had passed away. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn her loss. Mrs. Davidson was a great sufferer—having the dropsy—was tapped sixteen times.

31st. Went to Conference meeting Saturday, all the brethren spoke. Asa Hines had a message for us. I hope the Lord will give him another. Mr. McKeen conducted the meeting, and then went to Father's to spend the night. Ruth stopped with me, and we went to Mrs. Davidson's funeral next day. The house was crowded. Father Harding preached to an attentive audience. His sermons always have a great deal of Christ in them; it is a theme on which he delights to dwell and which sounds sweet to a believer's ear. I could not

Why Advertise ?

Bruce Barton relates a story about a friend who approached the proprietor of a retail store to sell him an advertising contract. "Why should I advertise?" asked the dealer. "I've been here for twenty years. There isn't a man, woman or child here who doesn't know who I am and what I sell."

The advertising man promptly asked, "What is that building over there?"

The proprietor answered, "That's the oldest church in this town."

"How long has it been there?" the advertising man asked.

"Oh, I don't know, seventy-five years probably."

"And yet," explained the advertising man, "they ring the church bell every Sunday morning."

THE INVERTED PYRAMID

BY
Bertrand W. Sinclair
Author of "North of Fifty-three"

They found comfortable chairs in a quiet corner of the great hotel. Their talk covered Europe, politics, certain phases of trench fighting, and came back at last from generalities tinged with pessimism to the particular, to themselves.

"What are you going to do after you're demobilized?" Rod asked. It was not, on his part, an idle question. "I don't know," Andy shook his head. "I'll never sling cable again, that's sure. You need all your fingers for that."

His eyes rested speculatively on the mutilated hand.

"Long before I lost my fingers," he continued, "I used to say to myself that if I got out of it alive, I'd never work for any man again—I'd never have anybody's collar round my neck. The army put that into me. It jarred my old idea of men voluntarily cooperating for the common good or any other purpose. The army—all the rest—were made up of picked men. Eighty per cent. of 'em fell into two categories; they had to be led, or they had to be driven. If there was no one to lead or drive, they ran round in circles when anything happened. So I made up my mind to be a leader or a driver—to play the game the way the rest do, who manage to beat the game. I was so damned sick of orders and discipline. Orders that were stupid, or vicious, or simply issued as an exhibition of authority. Discipline that went beyond its logical purpose of securing cohesive action and became merely a whip to lash a lot of tired unhappy men. Nobody minded the actual fighting so much. That's what you were there for; you expected it; you got used to it. You took your chances without making a fuss, even if now and then your stomach sort of turned. No, the dirt and drudgery were worse than the danger. And to a fellow like me the sight and sound of fussy brass hats laying more stress on recognition of their rank and dignity; the unanimity with which they implied that they were it—hell, you know how everybody below the rank of a battalion commander felt about that. They could do anything they liked to you, say the worst they could think, punish you for somebody else's mistakes. And you couldn't say a damned word. You couldn't even look sour. That was insubordination. No, I didn't mind the war so much; it was the army—the whole fabric of the military system.

"I passed up a chance at a commission in '15—because I was still too class-conscious. But I grabbed the next chance. That's what I'm going to do in civil life—grab chances. I don't know how, yet, but I don't think much. I'm still in the army, and in the army you're not supposed to think. But I didn't run wild in France, except for brief spells, so I've saved most of my pay. And I hear talk of a gratuity to us heroes," he smiled broadly. "I'll probably come out with a couple of thousand dollars. After that—well, you see before you a man who has had a bayonet stuck through his leg, his carcass lightly punctured with shrapnel, one or two faint whiffs of gas. None of which did him more harm than to give him long spells of lying still and thinking. And he thought himself into a condition of mind that will prevent him from ever again working hard—for other people. No, Norquay, I will never again labor faithfully to make two dollars grow—for some one else—where only one grew before. I don't believe I could feel the slightest obligation toward a job again, or an atom of pride in doing a job well. You see, I can't lose sight of the job-owners—I don't like 'em. I despise 'em. They got us all into this mix-up. They called us to arms in the name of all the old gods that man has been taught to reverence. And then they laid down on us, and went to making money out of our necessities. No, whenever a man offers me a job, I'll think of war contracts, of seventeen prices for clothes and food, of the bonds they've salted away, of shoddy boots and defective ammunition—and the fact that some of them are secretly sorry the war is over and the big, easy money at an end. No, I couldn't be loyal to a job, with all that in my mind."

"Fiddlesticks," Rod answered this last. "If I had a stand of timber and I said to you, 'Here's a crew and machinery—go to it; you've got a free hand, you'd get it out for me as if you were getting it out for yourself.'"

"Well," Andy hesitated, "if you bring yourself into it, that's different. You don't come in any of the categories I mentioned, or I'm very much mistaken. Operating a real job for a man you could like and respect. That is different."

"You see, you haven't lost a capacity for loyalty," Rod pointed out. "It's only been deflected. I understand that. Psychologically I've traveled pretty much the same road you have. All that you say is true. Only it isn't all the truth. Andy. Just one side of the shield; the side that's turned to us; that's hard for us to get our eyes off. Follows like you and me are a little up in the air right now. We feel like tramping savagely on the toes of a lot of smug, comfortable persons. That wouldn't get us anywhere. Nor would it change them—because they simply don't understand. What we'll probably get down to after awhile—those of us who have a sense of order and any touch of creativeness—will be some sort of activity that won't set the world on fire or turn it into a Bedlam, but that will possibly do some little good in the immediate radius of our own activity. Sabe? A man has to do what he can, before he can do what he wants."

"A man," Andy observed thoughtfully, "generally has to solve his material problems before he can tackle spiritual ones. Yet the two are interwoven. It's very difficult. I'm a rampant individualist, by nature. Man is. But if you didn't have some check on individualism the world would be a regular Kilkenny. Rampageous individualism in big affairs is what started the big scrap. The same thing will start another. It may even start hellish struggles between individual exploiters here at home and the masses they're keen to exploit. You can't have order and peace and security in a society where everybody is straining every nerve to get what he wants, and to hell with the other fellow. I'm no Utopian any longer, but I do know that if evolution doesn't speed up the process of industrial reorganization, there are going to be some corking rows, and a lot of material and spiritual uncertainty for everybody. I may not seem very consistent in what I say or do, but I'm consistent in my perception of certain things. We've built up a complex mechanism of affairs. The machine is our master instead of our servant."

Rod thought of the Norquay Trust Company as a vast creaking mechanism exacting unrewarded service, sacrifice, claiming the vital substance of himself, his father, the estate. Grove's Frankenstein creation!

"It may be so," he conceded. "But we are not yet automatons. They continued to talk until the dusk of the short winter day closed in. When the lights began to blink along the street they separated, Andy to his barracks, Rod to his home.

A taxi stand fronted the hotel, looking across Georgia Street. Rod crossed the way. As he did so a newsboy passed crying "ex-x-trust" in a shrill treble. In the distance he could hear other voices wailing the same cry. The Peace Conference, a fresh outbreak in Europe. Anything was possible in that welter of political, racial, and economic antagonisms across the Atlantic. He beckoned the boy.

In the glare of a white-gloved light standard he read the headlines: PRESIDENT NORQUAY TRUST INSTANTLY KILLED SHOTGUN ACCIDENTALLY DISCHARGED

CHAPTER XXIII
A northwest gale rattled a loose window in the library at Hawk's Nest. Beyond that the house stood solid to the blasts, as solid as a mountain mass of the granite that formed its walls. In the surrounding woods branchy cedar and tall, plumed firs bent before that gusty wind like bowing giants, giants that sighed in mournful cadences. Rod stuffed a folded bit of paper between sash and frame to silence the tremulous chatter of the wood.

He flattened his face against the pane for a few seconds. In the dark where the wind lashed at everything as if the Boreas gods were a towering pestilence he could see faint, shifting flecks of white, wind-whipped seas breaking in the channel. In brief lulls he could hear the rapids grumbling at full flood, the deep roar of agitated waters softened by distance. He could mark under that black canopy of sky silver streets where straight current met back eddy in a foaming line, and the devil's dispensers spun about deep vortices.

He went back to his chair before a glowing fireplace. It was near midnight, and he was wakeful, his brain a shimmering pot. A succession of images trooped by; he couldn't stop them. Thoughts, fancies, realities leaped out of nothingness, loomed before him, vanished before the crowding army of their fellows; as if he were engaged upon a review of the past and a projection of the future. He could no more stop that procession than he could check the tide roaring through the Exultant Pass. It was as if he stood aside and watched the entity that was himself performing this and that action—a single thread tracing a formless pattern in the warp and woof of persons and things. He could see it all very clearly up to the present. Beyond that the images were uncertain, tentative, sometimes blurred.

His youthful sense of the family as a permanent, imperishable force, in relation to which he as an individual was negligible, had been wiped out of his mind. The colossal stature of the Norquays had shrunk to his own dimension. The solid had become fluid, ready to trickle through his fingers if he did not have a care.

enormous weights. He would be faced by a necessity to take up a task which offered little hope of reward save a sense of duty performed. Other men's welfare, other men's money, other men's sins. He could draw back from this, or see it through. He could evade it, or grapple it stoutly. But there it was, waiting for him to decide.

Grove had evaded, when he faced the incontrovertible result of his handiwork. Or had he? No one would ever know. He had gone in mid-afternoon from the Norquay Trust office to his home. He had telephoned a friend to join him in a duck hunt at a gun club on the Ladder flats, had arranged to pick up his friend. He had come out from the house to the garage, bearing a shotgun, a bag and a shooting coat, whistling as he came. He spoke to the chauffeur genially. While the man attended to some detail of his machine the shotgun cracked and Grove Norquay fell against the running-board. He was dead before the man could cry for help.

And whether it was sheer accident, or whether he had killed himself in a moment of despair at the muddle he had wrought, Rod could not say. Publicly it went as a sad accident. But he knew what his father thought. He knew, too, what rumors ran like foxes in the street, rumors which did not have their origin in mere conjecture, but which nevertheless would have brought Grove's financial castle tumbling about their ears if his father had not been prepared.

Rod would never forget the crowd of people in the street an hour before the Norquay Trust Company opened its doors. People well and ill-dressed, shop-clerks, business men, middle-aged women, people whose motors were parked at the curb. They strove and pushed and jostled for advantage, eager to be first, until police men came and herded them into line—a line that extended a block and curved around a corner up a side street like the tail of an uneasy, muttering serpent.

All that forenoon and well past the luncheon hour they filed past the paying tellers, presented checks, pass-books, demanding their money, withdrawing accounts. As the cash boxes of the Norquay Trust emptied into pockets that departed hastily through the front door they were replenished by sheafs of Norquay estate currency withdrawn from other banks in hundred-thousand-dollar lots.

From behind bronze grillwork Rod watched this scene. He marked the nervous eagerness of these people over their money. They were frightened, watchful, uneasy, until they had it in their hands. The air was charged with hostile currents, with a tension that communicated itself to department managers, the ledgerkeepers, the tellers. One man made a five-hundred-dollar mistake—and broke under the strain. He sat in his cage and wept, and a murmuring that was like a growl swept through the lofty, pillared room until he was led away and another man took up his work of handing out cash.

Once Rod's father came to sit by him for a minute. He looked out at the anxious faces, the people crowding forward, pressing eagerly up to the tickets. After a little he said to Rod in a low, tense whisper: "The coward. The damned coward! He couldn't face the music."

About one-thirty the run tapered off. Every certificate of deposit, every demand was met promptly, courteously. Human nature asserted itself. An institution that could disgorge an enormous total and still exhibit great bales of currency and gold behind each teller couldn't be shaky. Who peddled the story that the Norquay Trust was broke, anyhow? Some damn fool. It was a false alarm. Fellow that started it ought to be shot—scaring people like that—making so much trouble. The Norquay estate's backing it. No chance of a concern like that being in the hole. What you think? Eh?

They stood out on the curb, repeating things like that. Men turned back at the very wickets. Some returned shamefacedly to redeposit their money, only to be told politely that the Norquay Trust declined to reopen closed accounts.

The ordinary cash depositors ceased from troubling long before the closing hour. "That's that," Charlie Hale grunted. "We've pretty well disposed of the small fry. Fortunately a few big accounts can be met. And none of the trust accounts are at our heads like a pistol."

chaos. And no matter how many other clutching fingers might have been dipped into the trust coffers, Grove had failed to feather his own nest. His personal estate included only his house and his yacht. There was no record of his having ever withdrawn a dollar from trust funds, of receiving more than a liberal salary. His assets didn't include enough cash to bury him. Where, then, did the money go?

"Ask Wall, Richston, Deane—that crowd," Charlie Hale muttered, when Rod put the question. "I'd be able to tell you after awhile. A few things look very, very fishy. The fact remains that half the so-called assets are junk. There's no mistake about the liabilities. If I can follow certain leads far enough, we may be able to make somebody disgorge. But they're pretty clever. They seem to have got Grove coming and going."

"You will have to get crews together soon," his father had told him after Grove's funeral. "I'd put the first crew in on that Horn limit. It's beautiful timber and easy logging. Also start up the old Valdez camp. There are two or three limits on Hardwicke yet, as well. In fact, timber's all we have left. I've hypothecated everything else. I'll look after the town end. The woods will be your field. The weather ought to break soon."

The weather had not permitted woods work. But the turn of affairs had sent Rod and his wife and boy almost immediately to Hawk's Nest. The elder Norquay urged them to go. "That's the place for you," he said. "It's our home. It has always been our home. It will be yours, Rod. You can consider it yours now. When I feel my time coming, I shall want to be there too."

And his time had come, perhaps a little sooner than he expected, perhaps not sooner than he wished. "It's our home. It has always been our home. It will be yours, Rod. You can consider it yours now. When I feel my time coming, I shall want to be there too."

before a fall. And I was too harsh. He was proud too. I killed him myself, Rod."

He would talk like that, full of grief. And he would go on to speak of expiation, of the obligation upon them to give a steward's account of their trust. "You see," he would repeat, "it was not simply Grove, but what Grove represented, what he sprang from, that bred people's confidence. No casual promoter, no fly-by-night financier could have induced that simple trust on such a scale. People looked beyond him and they saw something that was solid as a rock, that couldn't fail. We must live up to that, somehow."

The library door opened. Mary beckoned silently. "He wants to speak to you," she said in the hall.

But the momentary flash of consciousness lapsed before Rod reached the bedside. He had been sinking for days. He was going out now, like a guttering candle. A nurse stood at the foot of the bed. A doctor stood, watch in hand, his fingers on the faint pulse. Rod looked at a question. The man shook his head. Rod sat down beside the bed. To his quickened imagination the room seemed full of the flutter of sable wings.

An hour later his father died. "He wants to speak to you," she said in the hall. "He wants to speak to you," she said in the hall. "He wants to speak to you," she said in the hall.

USE A LITTLE GLYCERINE
Glycerine is so useful for many household purposes that a small quantity should always be at hand for emergencies.

For removing stains from table linens, or from delicate-colored and fragile materials such as nylon and georgette, it is unequalled, as it may be used with-out fear of injuring the fabric. The glycerine should be dripped on to the stain from a clean sponge, and after it has been allowed a minute or two to soak in, the mark should be rinsed in clear water. Do not rub. With an obstinate or old-standing stain it may be necessary to use warm glycerine. It should be made warm by pouring a little into a cup, and then standing the cup in hot water.

Leather shoes that are to be put away may be kept soft and uncracked by a protective application of glycerine. It should be applied with a bit of soft cotton.

LOOK FOR RECORD GAME SEASON

The moose and deer-hunting season is now in full swing in the Province of Quebec and the indications are that game is more abundant than it has been for many years. This fact, together with the rainy weather of the summer, which caused many sportsmen to postpone their visit until the fall, may quite possibly lead to a record season.

The fish and game preservation policy of the provincial government, which has resulted in the phenomenal increase of wild life, is of interest to all sportsmen. Interviewed on the subject recently, Mr. J. A. Belleisle, superintendent of that branch of the government concerned in this policy, said: "For the past fifteen years we have concentrated on game preservation in this province. This has been most effectively accomplished by the establishment of small preserves which are leased to private fish and game clubs. We have now no less than 500 of these and are working steadily to establish more. As a condition of the lease we insist that each club provide at least two fully qualified game wardens whom we license as such. The result is that we have 1,000 game wardens more than our own corps of about 125, maintained at no expense to the government, a far larger number than we could possibly supply were we compelled to do so from public funds. Were it not for this policy, large tracts of country into which the fish and game overflow from these preserves would be utterly destitute of such life on account of the great numbers of sportsmen drawn into the province over whom we could exercise little or no effective control. As it is, the whole country teems with trophies awaiting the sportsman, whether he belongs to a club or not.

 On Sunday last meetings of unusual interest were held under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society of Kings County at Berwick, Kingston and Aylesford. Rev. Douglas Hemmeon, D.D., of the United Church of this town, was the speaker and good congregations listened to his able and stirring addresses. Dr. Hemmeon was accompanied by Mr. H. Stairs, agent of the Society who also spoke briefly on each occasion in the interest of this most important work.
 THE ACADIAN understands that Messrs. Wright & Jodrey have disposed of their output of pulp amounting to about two thousand tons gross to parties in the United States, and that this will be shipped by water from this port if vessels can be secured. The value of the pulp in the vicinity of $30,000 and the industry has provided employment for quite a number of men. Probably three or four good-sized vessels will be required to carry this product to its destination.
A CLEVER PARTY
 A party in an automobile saw a baby calf getting its dinner in Nature's way. "Oh, see the self-help restaurant," exclaimed one of the party.
 "Yes, it's a 'Child's restaurant,'" said the little girl.
 "And it is also 'A Cafeteria,'" said the chauffeur, as they rode on.

ABOUT BOOKS

(By THE ACADIAN Bookman.)
 Two delightful books that idealize the experiences of youth as recollected in mature years are Arthur Stringer's "Lone O'Malley", and Rivard's "Chez Nous", translated by W. H. Blake, both reprinted by McLelland and Stewart. The former, though it takes for its hero a rather unusual and misunderstood "new boy", is so full of the healthy, normal life of boyhood, with its laughter and its tears, that the book deserves to become a Canadian boys' classic. In "Chez Nous" the recollection is not the doings of youth but the feelings associated with objects now passing out of the rural life of French Canada: the old-fashioned cradle, tallow dip, stove, and agricultural equipment. The sense for the picturesque and the delicacy of sentiment leave no room for surprise that the book was "crowned" by the French Academy.

 The British Preference was defeated by six votes in the British House of Commons, 272 votes for, 278 votes against. Best opinions are that this preference will be granted within a few years, and growers having trees then coming in bearing will be in a position to take advantage of same.
 We strongly recommend growers planting the Winesap for a well colored, long-keeping dessert apple, highly appreciated on the British markets.

Meek to extend congratulations to Past Master Philip Brown, who on Thursday, Oct. 23, celebrated his 94th birthday. Worshipful Master, (Rev.) Thomas W. Hodgson, presided, and fittingly voiced the good wishes of the members to one who for more than fifty years had been a member of Scotia Lodge. Past Master Brown was presented with a basket of beautiful fruit, and to this tangible expression of appreciation the guest of honor feelingly replied. Speeches and music were followed by supper. The speaker was Dr. Thomas W. Hodgson, who chose for his subject, "The Problem of World Peace". If civilization does not end war, war will end civilization," said Dr. Hodgson. An expression of appreciation was extended to the speaker for his splendid address. Tea and a social hour were then enjoyed with our hostess. Mrs. (Captain) Frank Barkhouse and Miss Saunders have rented an apartment in Wolfville, where they will spend the winter. Rev. Mr. Crosby, pastor, presided, leading the devotional exercises. Miss Reid, who is a pleasing and interesting speaker, was in native costume and showed many curios. A strong plea was made for our prayers and financial aid that this great work might be the more extensively carried on. An interesting programme consisting of piano solos by Mrs. Charles Lombard, Mrs. George Fluck, Mrs. Delbert Munro, and community singing, was followed by supper. Mr. and Mrs. Newcombe, who were taken by surprise, expressed their appreciation of the kindness of their friends, and the evening closed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne. Habitant Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Rufus Porter Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 21st, president, Mrs. W. L. Newcombe, presiding. It was unanimously decided to hold a course in "Home Nursing" and the class will be under the direction of Mrs. Lorne Parker.

The programme, in the interests of Public Health, consisted of a paper on "Scarlet Fever" by Mrs. Lorne Parker, and one on "Diseases and Their Prevention" by Miss Ruth Jackson. Piano duets by Mrs. Owen Strong and Mrs. G. W. Jackson, and piano solos by Mrs. Charles Lombard were also enjoyed. A social hour was followed by supper. SHEFFIELD MILLS INSTITUTE

Sheffield Mills Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Jack Whitehead Friday afternoon, Oct. 17, president, Mrs. W. W. Harris, presiding. The meeting opened by the singing of the Institute ode, followed by "O, Canada" and the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Mrs. Clarke Ross. The business report included the following: A report of the School Exhibition Committee given by Mrs. Fred Burgess, and the Institute decided to hold its annual community gathering in the hall Thursday evening, Oct. 23. It was arranged to ask the School trustees for permission to move the organ from Community hall to the class room as this would be of benefit to the pupils. The sum of $5.00 was voted for the Children's Aid Society. The response to the roll call, "Current Events" was very interesting, while readings by Mrs. Fred Burgess and victrola selections were much enjoyed. We had on this occasion the pleasure of hearing Miss Annie Stuart, of the Board of Federated Institutes, give a delightful helpful talk on the "Mission of Women's Institutes". "The Individual Member" and "Something that has been Accomplished by the Institutes of our Sister Province, New Brunswick". "In speaking of members," said Miss Stuart, "I mean good working members of a loyal institute, to whom the reward for honest effort comes back in full measure." The following work has been successfully carried out in some of the N. B. Institutes: First Aid classes have been held, pianos placed in Community halls, hives of bees, gotten from the government, added to the finances of several Institutes, banquets were held at which the local history was read and saved for those who follow, hallow'en parties were enjoyed at which prizes for the prettiest, the homeliest, and the most original costumes were given. Street lights were installed by one Institute, while another worked in the interests of Better English in the community. Talks on Self Control, Etiquette, "Should a Wife Understand Her Husband's Business" and other equally important subjects were discussed. There are suggestions which would prove of value to our Institutes. Miss Stuart then spoke of the benefits that had been hers in being a member of the band of federated Institutes, thus coming in personal touch with women of marked ability from one end of our fair Dominion to the other, and the feeling of comradeship that prevailed throughout the meetings held in Toronto during that great Exhibition, whose committees are to be congratulated on the success of their splendid efforts. The Women's Institute of Canada is one of the greatest factors in the binding together of Canadian life, said Miss Stuart. All are as one in the study of loyalty, healthy homes, better living conditions; 70,000 members with the motto, "Better Home Conditions and a Better Canada". In speaking of the beautiful city of Toronto Miss Stuart said, "That she is what she is, is largely due to the loyalty of her citizens and the pride that is inculcated in the hearts of her youngest citizens, which we would do well to emulate." A general discussion followed. Mrs. A. H. Patterson then gave a fine interpretation of the greatest factor in any community—"The Child the Hope of the Future", and the problems we must cope with that they may become good Christian citizens. Both speakers were extended a very hearty vote of thanks for an afternoon full of pleasure and interest. Tea was then served and a delightful hour spent.

CANARD

A large number gathered in the vestry of Upper Canard Baptist church Thursday afternoon, Oct. 23, where a strong appeal in the interests of the "Acadia Drive" was made by Mrs. J. C. Hardy and Mrs. (Dr.) W. L. Archibald, of Wolfville. The meeting, presided over by Mrs. Percy McDonald, was a most enthusiastic one, and the allocation of $400.00 was unanimously accepted. The pastor, Rev. G. D. Hudson spoke briefly, and a number of former students spoke in the interest of their Alma Mater. At the close a social hour was enjoyed with the speakers, during which tea was served, the committee in charge being Mrs. Walter Eaton, Mrs. William Harris, Mrs. Ernest Harris, Mrs. Elmer Lantz. A successful Box Social in the interests of Glenora church, Rev. G. D. Hudson, pastor, was held Thursday evening, Oct. 23, the auctioneer being George Brown. A pleasing programme, in which Rev. G. D. Hudson, Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Howard Burdige, Mr. McGowan and Mrs. John Kinsman took part, was followed by supper. Nearly $50.00 was realized. Mrs. Lorne Rand is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Tibert, Freeport. The Women's Institute of Canard held an enjoyable meeting in Lower Canard Hall Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 21, president, Mrs. Percy McDonald, in the chair. At the conclusion of the business session Miss Harry, V. O. N., of Wolfville, gave a very fine address on "Diseases of School Age Children and their Prevention". A vote of thanks was extended to Miss Harry for an afternoon of pleasure and interest. The quack is content if he gets a person's money. NAVY BLUE REP COAT FROCK IS LINED AND TRIMMED WITH WHITE SILK SERGE

Navy blue rep makes an ideal medium for the dress that can be worn for any occasion of the day. The frock shown here is of the coat-dress variety, and it may be worn with or without the white linen stock at the neck.

White silk serge makes the lining, and this reappears in the form of narrow piping across the front width of the frock. The buttons are covered with matching white silk serge.

How would you like to wake up some morning and find you were the winner of $5000? Some person is going to get it. Why not you? BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OCTOBER 31 BLESS THE LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction.—Psalm 103:2-4

NOVEMBER 1 IS NOT THIS THE FAST that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?—Isaiah 58:6.

NOVEMBER 2 HE THAT BY USURY and unjust gain increaseth his substance, he shall pour it out, as the wind blows away, and he shall take it up, as the downy seed.

NOVEMBER 3 O LORD, THOU ART MY GOD; I will exalt thee. I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things.

NOVEMBER 4 THE WORK OF RIGHTEOUSNESS shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever.

NOVEMBER 5 BETTER IS A DRY MORSEL, AND QUIETNESS THEREWITH, THAN A HOUSE FULL OF SACRIFICES WITH STRIFE.—Proverbs 17:5.

NOVEMBER 6 THE PEACE OF GOD, WHICH PASSETH ALL UNDERSTANDING SHALL KEEP YOUR HEARTS AND MINDS THROUGH CHRIST JESUS.—Phil. 4:7.

A BETTER CREED

(On hearing a "Fire and Brimstone forever and ever" sermon.) Some few days since I chanced to hear one preach, "Yet preached a God, the Father of the Christ."

This tearful doom, believing and proclaiming, I looked to see the preacher crushed with woe.

Much moved I left; not that myself had doubts, Assured the Eternal Mercy hath no bounds.

PORT WILLIAMS AND VICINITY

Mrs. R. S. Hockin entertained a number of friends on Monday evening with Bridge. Guests were present from Kentville and Wolfville and spent a very enjoyable evening.

Mr. Gordon Gates left on Tuesday for Boston but was held up at Yarmouth, not having all the red-tape papers necessary to pass. He returned on the midnight train in company with three from Canaan who were in the same predicament. He leaves again on Friday to spend the winter.

Mr. Walter Shaw returned to his home on Saturday, after working some months in United States.

Mr. Donald Ellis, who has been attending college at Guelph, Ont., was obliged to return home last week on account of poor health.

Mr. F. H. Daniels, of the Royal Bank staff, spent the week end with friends in Truro.

The Benefit Sale for the Acadia Fund held on Saturday resulted in over $50.00 gain. This is the first time the ladies of the Baptist church has undertaken anything along this line.

At the Bible school on Sunday afternoon it was announced that the "Royal Oaks" (Miss Ellen Rand, teacher) had in two weeks raised $10.00 for Acadia. This class of girls of ten and twelve years have been most enthusiastic in their campaign for this object. They were asked to stand with their teacher while the school applauded their success.

At the evening meeting of the World Wide Guild a special program was prepared and the offering donated to Acadia. Of the $200.00 allotment for the women of this church over $125 has been realized.

The piers of the iron bridge are now being repaired, the heavy ice of last winter having caused them considerable damage. This bids fair to be a cold job as the work has to be done from a scow. That these piers have withstood the ebb and flow of Fundy's tides for over 89 years is a memorial to the work of James Winthrop, who came from Hantsport in 1834 to build them. His message was that of the poet who wrote:

"Build that these walls to coming generations,
Your skill, your strength, your faithfulness shall tell;
That all may say, as storms and centuries test them,
"The men of old built well!"

Mr. Lloyd Jess has returned home from Fort La Tour, where he has had charge of a group of churches during the summer.

Mr. Wilbur Hicks and Mr. L. C. Goudey, of Port Maitland, were recent guests at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Eldridge.

Mr. Fred Morine, of Church Street, had a very narrow escape on Wednesday, when on examining a rifle it accidentally discharged, the bullet passing through the top of his shoulder and causing an ugly wound.

GREENWICH

A number from here attended the "Found Party" at the parsonage at Port Williams on Tuesday evening, Oct. 21st, for Rev. and Mrs. Chipman, in honour of their twenty-eighth wedding anniversary. A couple of our girls helped in the programme, by invitation. An enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Forsythe and little daughter, Irene, of Cambridge, arrived last Thursday afternoon to visit relatives here for a time. They were recent former residents here.

Mr. Grant Murphy, who for a long time has been on the staff at the station and at our post-office, has been transferred to Kentville station staff. He has the good wishes of friends here, but he is much missed from the office.

Miss Christine Harvey, one of our girls who has a business position in Kentville, visited her friend, Miss Evangeline Cox, here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. I. Fraser are spending this week at the home of their son, Mr. Thomas Fraser, Scotts Bay. They were summoned there on Sunday morning, owing to the serious illness of their son. No change, was the latest news at time of writing. His friends here are interested and wish for him a speedy return to health.

Rev. Mr. Prestwood, of Hantsport, a former minister here and at Wolfville, has been preaching here at the Methodist church the last two Sundays, Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, D.D., being on vacation.

Mr. Prestwood delivered a very splendid sermon. The sermon last Sunday was more especially for children and was an exceptionally fine address, enjoyed by all present.

Mr. Prestwood announced for next Sunday a sermon for young people and there should be a good audience of old and young. Rev. Dr. Hemmeon gave addresses last Sunday at Berwick, Kingston and Aylesford on the Children's Aid Society.

A few from here attended the Harvest and Thanksgiving programme given by the World Wide Guild at the Baptist church at Port Williams on Sunday evening, and thoroughly enjoyed it all.

Mrs. Maga, of New Minas, who has been a patient of Nurse Andrew here for two weeks, returned to her home with her infant son on Monday.

GLORIA SWANSON IN THE HUMMING BIRD

War—the Apache dens of Paris become the hiding places of slackers. Patriotism rises in the heart of Toinette, better known as the "Humming Bird". She shames the gang of thieves, calling themselves the Wolves, of which she is the head, into the defense of Paris. In boy's clothing she herself tries to go to the front but is turned back. The French—the "they shall not pass" spirit that won the war. And it was not without its reward, for in the terrific climax when Toinette is about to give herself up to the police, Inspector La Roche informs her that he knows no "Humming Bird" but has come with the pardon of France for Toinette, and the French cross of war awarded one of the Wolves, who can find no use for it out there.

It's a gripping and altogether unusual ending—unusual in that it is entirely unexpected.

What's it all about?
Gloria Swanson's new Paramount picture, "The Humming Bird", which is showing at the Orpheum Theatre next Thursday.

COLLEGE HEADS MET AT HALIFAX

Will Make Recommendation to Carnegie Corporation Regarding Proposed Appropriation

There was formed in Halifax on Tuesday a central advisory committee composed of heads of the leading educational institutions of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland, for the purpose of advising the Carnegie Corporation as to the proposed appropriation by that organization of a large sum of money toward the development of higher education in this part of Canada and Newfoundland. Those present at the conference were Dr. V. P. Burke, Deputy Minister of Education, Newfoundland; Dr. H. A. Kent, Pine Hill College, Halifax; Dr. W. S. Carter, of St. John, N. B., representing the University of New Brunswick; Brother Cullane, St. Mary's College; President Mackenzie, Dalhousie University; President Patterson, of Acadia University; President Moore, of King's University; Principal Sexton, of Nova Scotia Technical College; President Trueman, of Mount Allison.

Dr. Mackenzie, of Dalhousie, was elected chairman, and Dr. Trueman, secretary. Two recommendations were made to the Carnegie Corporation as follows:

That the Corporation make a substantial annual grant to Newfoundland for a period of five years to assist in maintaining a non-denominational junior college in St. John's.

That the Committee place itself on record as approving of a grant to Dalhousie University to enable her to meet the annual deficits incurred through the operation of her professional schools.

Various educational questions were discussed and several committees were appointed to report at a meeting to be held in Halifax about the middle of January.

ONTARIO WILL STAY DRY

In the recent vote on the temperance question in the Ontario the people declined to follow the lead of the four Western Provinces in the matter of liquor legislation. By a majority of something like 40,000 votes the present Ontario Temperance Act was sustained in preference to a proposition in favor of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under government control. Something like a million of the citizens went to the polls, and while the urban population was overwhelmingly against the act being retained the rural section remained true to the principles of prohibition and saved the day. The result is that the Ontario Temperance Act of 1916, confirmed in 1919 by a majority of 407,000 in the plebiscite held in connection with the provincial election, has been again upheld.

A Methodist negro exhorter shouted, "Come on up an' jine de army of de Lord."

"I've done jined," replied one of the congregation.

"What' you jine?" asked the exhorter.

"In de Baptist church,"

"Why, chile," said the exhorter, "you ain't in de army; you's in de navy."

Diplomacy is something that you need sometimes when a neighbor asks you to tell him just what you think of the used car that he has bought.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 p. c. AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, J. M. Johnson, 244 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.
