WON AT LAST.

CHAPTER VIII.

No idle threat was that resolve of madame's about a governess for her ward, and so we soon found out, to our mutual dismay. Nat chafed and grumbled to me, and I kept her company—a course of conduct in which Alice Deeping made an eloquent third. Madame knew of this, no doubt—there were few things in progress around her which escaped her keen eyes—but she said nothing.

There was a good deal of advertising, much letter-writing, and finally, at the end of a couple of weeks, my mother announced one morning that the governess of her selection would arrive at Chavasse the next morning. We were on the west terrace, Nat and I—reading, and she perched up on the broad stone ledge beside me, playing with a lap full of gorgeously tinted fallen leaves which she had picked up. A lazy little puss was our nut-brown maid, always busy with some queer, babyish, fantastic trick or other. Now she sat there with her curly head bare, idly arranging and rearranging some leaves among the ribbons of her broad-brimmed straw hat. Sometimes, to tell the truth, when I thought of the prospective governess, I felt bound to confess to myself that I did not absolutely envy her. Little as she was, Miss Nat could hold her own as well as Alice Deeping herself. Both will and temper had she, when she chose to exhibit them. Madame, coming out of the house, saw us there and promptly made her way towards us; she had an open letter in her hand.

Nat's eyes were as sharp as they were bright, and she dropped her hat with a deep sigh.

"Ned," she said, resignedly, "that letter's governessy!"

"Pooh! Don't think so," I rejoined.

"Oh, isn't it? Y, I'll see."

Madame heard of course—madame always did hear somehow. Coming up, she touched Nat's curls smilingly.

"You are sharper than Ned, my love. Yes, you are quite right. Mademoiselle Valdini will arrive tomorrow evening—in time for dinner probably."

"Mademoiselle Valdini!" Nat and I both echoed the name blankly, and really with reason. We had neither of so much as heard the name of Mlle. Valdini before.

"Is she the governess, mother?"

"Yes."

"You never told me, madame!" said Nat, with a pout.

Could Not Digest His Food

Suffered For Years From Indigestion Until Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. J. D. S. Barrett.

If you suffer from chronic indigestion, forget about the stomach, and pay attention to the condition of the liver and bowels. Ten to one that is where the real trouble lies.

The liver gets sluggish and fails to filter the bile from the blood, the bowels become constipated and the whole digestive system is upset.

As to cure, you cannot do better than to read of Mr. Barrett's experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no treatment so prompt and thoroughly effective.

Mr. J. D. S. Barrett, Nelson, B. C., and formerly of Twillingate, Nfld., writes: "For several years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. The least bit of food caused me considerable trouble and often I could scarcely eat a meal a day. The many remedies I tried proved full a until in 1906 I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and after using about eight boxes I was completely cured. Since that time I have not been troubled with indigestion, which I consider a great blessing."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edman's Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"My dear, I did not see any reason to trouble with my selection, particularly as I knew that you had an objection to the entire plan;" and, touched the girl's curls again. "Mademoiselle Valdini comes with the highest recommendation; she brings, I believe, the most flattering testimonials from her last post. I hope you will like her."

Miss Nat's shrug and pouting frown seemed to express that she did not hope, or wish to hope, anything of the kind. I hastened to speak.

"I suppose she's French? The name sounds like it."

"I believe so. At any rate, she is exceedingly accomplished, and bears the reputation of being a most excellent instructress."

With the utmost vigor Nat gave vent to the alarming words as she jumped off the balcony.

Madame raised her eyebrows.

"My dear child!" she said in a tone of decided displeasure. It was not often that she spoke in that tone to Nat, and the willful little creature raised her little brown face which was crimson.

"I didn't mean to say it, madame," she said, penitently, with comically raised eyebrows "but I couldn't help it. I mean it, you know. Both Mademoiselle Valdini, and both Mademoiselle's accomplishments!"

"Here! Now I won't say it any more."

"I hope not, my dear," said madame as she smiled indulgently. Nice! I should have caught it if I had been in Miss Nat's shoes, I know!

"You must not give mademoiselle a bad idea of her pupil, Natalie. You and Ned had better go for a long ride. I shall be busy all the morning, and you may not have many more at liberty," and madame swept off in doors again, Nat running after her, and making a series of derisive grimaces over her shoulders at me as she went.

No, I thought, as I went on with my reading, I did not envy Mlle. Valdini her pupil—not by any manner of means.

Mount Chavasse was far too dignified an establishment to indulge in anything so plebeian as bustle-outwardly, at any rate but I dare say that behind the scenes there was a good deal of it going on all that day and the next morning, preparing for mademoiselle. Madame was all her stateliness, was too entirely a lady; not to treat her governess as one and had she been a visitor, there could not have been more fuss—less perhaps. There were prepared for mademoiselle a charming sitting-room in pink, a delightful bedroom in green, a small room for lesson-giving of no color in particular; and finally madame announced at luncheon that everything was ready. Nat receiving the information with a wrathful pout as she cut her cold fowl and with a smart kick at my ankles under the table as an accompaniment to that demonstration.

"And when is the lady due, mother?" I asked.

"She will come on the 6.25 train from Charing Cross, probably. You had better drive to meet her, Ned."

But no—I remonstrated against that. To meet a foreign young woman who would perhaps strike me dumb with some outlandish lingo was I felt, a little too much. Besides, I promised Nat to ride with her round by the river, and afterward call in at the rectory to see Alice Deeping. How I should have sped if she had not been concerned, I do not know; as it was, madame yielded, and said that the carriage should go alone to meet the governess.

"Goodness knows it, will be awful enough when she is here, and we can't help seeing her!" Natalie observed dolefully, when the meal was over, and madame had let us to ourselves. "I tell you what it is, Ned: we'll have a jolly afternoon if we never have another. I'll run and put on my habit now, and do you order the horses. Make haste!"

I obeyed of course. Everybody at Chavasse obeyed Miss Orme, from old Batterbin to the boy who swept out the stables. Her pretty roan mare and my own gray were ready some minutes before she came tripping down the great staircase in her closely fitting habit of green cloth, with its little cap to match. Behind her came Valla, carrying her whip, and following her, Virtue Dent.

The rivalry between these two grew more marked every day, and within the last week had received a fillip, though innocently, from madame herself. Valla, slavishly devoted to her little mistress as she was, yet was not a desirable attendant from more than one point of view. Nat was a careless little creature, liking to look pretty, if it were not so much trouble, but caring very little either what she wore or how she wore it. Valla's notions of costume favored of Jamaica taste, and, generally speaking, was more picturesque than appropriate; and madame was particular—fastidiously particular. Virtue Dent was a born lady's maid, and she had found it out. With exactly ousted Valla, madame had installed Virtue in the post of Miss Orme's lady's maid—a state of things which Nat accepted, Virtue exulted over, and Valla fumed at. Indeed, I had caught such flashings of the black eyes toward Virtue's pale face sometimes as I should have thought, sufficient to make that demure damsel quail! Even now Valla did not look over-pleasant as she put the whip into Natalie's little gauntleted hand, and then drawing aside, stood with her arms folded, casting covert glances from under her downcast black lashes.

"Ready, Ned?" asked Nat, lightly.

"That's a dear boy! We won't get back before dinner time, when Mademoiselle Valdini will be in possession and the bolt will have fallen. Well, what is it, Virtue?"—for Virtue, in her gentle, deprecating way, had come forward.

"What dress shall I get ready, Miss Natalie?" inquired the girl in a low tone.

"It doesn't matter; anything that comes first," answered Nat, fastening her gauntlet.

"The one you wore last night, Miss?"

"Yes, that will do. Why, Virtue, you are more particular over what I wear than I am myself, I do believe; you certainly make more fuss."

She laughed and ran down the steps, and I followed her. I looked back when, having placed Nat on her horse, I mounted in my turn, and saw the tall figure and yellow roses of Valla still there. Her eyes were cast down; but, from the expression of her dark face, I could imagine the wrathful glances she was darting at Virtue Dent from beneath her black lashes. Virtue stood with a little smile upon her pale face and her hands linked before her white muslin apron—a very prim figure indeed. But as I looked I caught a glimpse of madame's skirts sweeping through the hall, and the picture was broken up. Virtue turned towards the passage leading to the kitchen regions, and Valla, still with her eyes on the ground, went slowly in the direction of the staircase.

It was a beautiful afternoon, not too hot, and we had a delightful ride round by Holmeade, down by the river, and finally through the village to the rectory. The church clock was just striking the half hour after five when we pulled up at the gates and I lifted Nat off her horse.

"Another hour or so and mademoiselle will be due," I said, mischievously. "We must hurry, young lady."

"Indeed, I won't—for a dozen mademoiselles! Dinner isn't until eight o'clock to-night—I heard madame tell Batterbin so—and I mean to get home just in time to change my dress. If only mademoiselle's train could come to grief without hurting any of the passengers, I should rather rejoice than otherwise," mademoiselle's pupil observed, willfully.

One of the rectory servants came out to look to our horses, and we went in. The striped sun-blinds were down outside the drawing-room windows, and there was not a sound to be heard from within; from which state of affairs it was pretty safe to augur two things—that Alice was not here, and that her mother was taking her afternoon nap in company with her medicine-bottles. Nat halted in indecision.

"Do you think Alice is there, Ned?" she asked, in a cautious tone.

"No, or we should hear her."

"Then it is only Mrs. Deeping; and if we once go in there will be nothing for it but to listen to her dismal talk until she is tired. Oh, dear, I wish somebody would come out, so that we could ask!" For we were such familiar figures at the rectory that no one ever dreamed of the necessity of announcing us when we appeared there.

"Let's look about the garden," I suggested. "I dare say Alice is idling about them somewhere. I believe she spends half her time in that hammock."

"And, if she does, I'd like you to find her a better place, Master Nat," a bright voice behind us explained.

Easy—Alice Deeping, coming round the corner of the house, had caught the last words. "I thought you would come to-day, Nat. I've been to kiss for you. Have you been indoors?"

The Morris gang must go. The country has had enough of them. People want to see Sir Robert Bond at the head of affairs once more.

The Evening Telegram is all right, and the people know it. They buy it and they read it.

Why do the appointments of the three fish merchants hang fire? What is the object of the appointment anyway?

Have you read what the Harbor Grace Standard wrote about the move? Looking at the matter as we try to do, not through the partisan spectacles, but from the standpoint of the ordinary citizen, we would not think it wise to increase the influence of the mercantile body. We think they themselves will admit that directly and they are, indirectly, to say the least, fairly represented in the Councils of the country, and enjoy sufficient political influence. In the event of matters affecting the fishermen of the country at large particularly its main dependence the fishery, coming up for consideration as they will and should come up, a glance at the list of present Legislative Councilors found below will convince any one that there are sufficient merchants in that body. Great secrecy is being maintained at the Brooklyn Navy Yard regarding a series of gyroscopic tests which have been going on there for several months aboard the destroyed Worden. It is said that Naval officials hope the experiments will solve the problem of preventing the rolling of a war vessel while under way or in a heavy sea.

ALWAYS SOMETHING NEW.

Pittsburg lays claim to the only dental department in the world conducted by a private institution for the benefit of employees. The Armstrong cork company has maintained such a department since April, 1911, and service is free to all who have been in the employ of the company for six months, emergency cases being treated for all. The head of the department, Dr. Sober, is an enthusiast who subscribes to the view of Dr. Osler that bad teeth are a worse evil to the human race than intoxicating liquors.

T. A. & B. SOCIETY MEETING.—The monthly meeting of the T. A. & B. Society, took place yesterday afternoon and was a record one in point of number. In the absence of President Ellis, the chair was occupied by Vice-President Griffin. Six new candidates were admitted to membership. When Secretary Coughlan had finished calling the roll, the Society's Spiritual Director, Rev. Dr. Kitchen, addressed the meeting.

Hard Times on the Atlantic.

Special Evening Telegram.

LONDON, To-day.

The United Kingdom was swept on Saturday and Sunday by heavy gales and snow storms. There have been many wrecks of small craft and coast shipping has been considerably damaged. Vessels arriving in port felt the fury of the storm and some of them were badly battered. In the North of England a storm of terrific severity lasted thirty-three hours. There was a continuous snow fall in the Newcastle district and telephone and telegraph wires are down in all directions. The steamer Mauretania was held alongside the landing stage at Liverpool until 9.30 at night when she was directed to New York. The steamer Celtic from New York on Jan. 4th which arrived at Queenstown yesterday afternoon reports having experienced terrific weather. The gale was so violent on Friday and Saturday that passengers were forbidden to promenade the decks. The Celtic at 5 a.m. Saturday spoke the British steamer Wayfarer from New Orleans; the Wayfarer was at this time in latitude 47 degrees three minutes, longitude 26 degrees 25 minutes. She had lost her funnel and all lifeboats and her steering gear disabled. The Celtic reported the Wayfarer putting back to Liverpool. The wireless message stated that the Corsican and Megantic were standing by the steamer Wilborn, Philadelphia to Hamburg, reports having spoken on Jan. 4th the German steamer Abyssinia which sailed from Hamburg on Dec. 22nd to Philadelphia. The Abyssinia signalled she had met with an accident.

Destroyed By Fire.

As noted in the Telegram, a couple of days ago, the reflection of a fire was seen in the western sky at 1 a.m. Friday. The fire was at the Goulds where the residence of a widow named Flynn, was destroyed. The fire was caused, it is believed by a defective chimney and but that Mrs. Flynn awoke and got the smell of the smoke, she with her family would have been burned to death. All escaped in their night clothes and the woman lost all her furniture and effects. The people nearby did all possible to check the fire. The horse in the stable nearby was saved. Some of the family and people about the place were frostbitten. The loss to Mrs. Flynn who carried no insurance, is irreparable.

DIED AT BOSTON.—The death occurred recently in Boston, of Mr. Frank Sylvia. Deceased was well known in St. John's East where he resided for many years. He was a native of Spain and a mason by trade. He leaves a large family to survive.

REPORTS HEAVY SLOB.—Capt. Kneeb, of the Clyde, reports heavy local made slob on the coast extending from Fogu up to the centre of Bonavista Bay. No water can be seen seaward and he believes that if the winds take an eastward trend that the whole coast will be blocked all along to the southward.

Here and There.

While driving his horse attached to a sled, which was drawing a heavy load of fish in drums, Saturday afternoon, on Water Street, Truckman Thomas was thrown to the ground violently, the catamaran having capsized and a portion of the load toppled over and pinned him to the street. Thomas was extricated by citizens who ran to his aid and shortly after continued on his way as he was not hurt seriously.

Harvest Ingathering.

The Harvest Ingathering at the Cookstown Road Church, last evening, was a decided success, financially as well as socially. Every available space in both front and rear of the building was filled with improvised seats and standing room only was the order before the exercises began. The programme was filled with missionary life and ideals, the rendering of which showed not only talent, but considerable training on the part of those in charge of the youngsters. Whist words of commendation might be given each item on the programme yet space will permit of special mention of the choruses "G. double O.D. Good," and "Only a Little Pansy." The solo "He careth for you" was rendered most feelingly by Mrs. Pippy. The chairman gave a brief sketch of the phenomenal growth of the Seventh Day Adventist work especially in both Europe and Asia calling attention to the distinctive features of their special message. Many were the expressions of pleasure and satisfaction as the people filed out of the Church, and it is hoped that the downpour of rain that greeted their return to their homes did not dampen their warmth of appreciation.

The Evelyn Wreck

CAPTAIN BURKE AND CREW HERE—A STORY OF PERIL AND SUFFERING—KINDNESS OF FISHER-FOLK.

Captain Burke, of the wrecked schooner Evelyn, mate C. G. Edgecombe, bosun Jas. Rendell, steward George Wright, and able seamen Wm. Collins, Alex. Keefe, and Jas. Healey, drove in here overland from Ferryland, yesterday morning. From Captain Burke the Telegram obtained the following interesting particulars of an eventful and disastrous voyage. The Evelyn left Pernambuco for this port on the 10th December, and from that till the 27th had fine weather, then being in the Gulf stream it became stormy and prevailed most of the rest of the voyage from S.W. to N.N.W., and

Blew Heavily.

Previous to this on the 22nd, the ship, in lat. 20° 20' North; long. 50° West, sprang the Gaspé, Capt. Connors, from Macello to St. John's, all well. This stormy weather prevailed most of the voyage which came very near being the last for all on board. Saturday and Sunday week, the 4th and 5th insts., a terrific weather prevailed, the wind blowing first from south later from the N.N.W., with hurricane force, with a tremendous sea running and intense frost prevailing. At 4 p.m. Monday land was first sighted in the neighbourhood of Cape Pine, when a blinding snow storm set in and the ship's head was hove to sea. The ship received a fearful overhauling in the terrific sea which ran and which often broke on board, until 5.30 p.m. Tuesday when Cape Pine was passed. If possible the wind became more violent, the frost increased tenfold, and sea and spray freezing on the decks, hull and rigging to the depth of several inches, made it almost impossible to work the ship as the running gear could not be handled with any degree of facility and as she was continually sea-swept the crew held the decks only at

The Risk of Their Lives.

Tuesday night all on board spent a miserable and anxious time. It Wednesday morning broke with little change in the weather, and at 2 p.m. that day the ship was 4 miles off the land and about 5 miles north of Bay Bulls. The ship's house flag was then hoisted with the hope that it would be noticed either at Bay Bulls or Cape Spear and the assistance of a tug obtained from either place but nothing came of it, and at 7 p.m. a snow storm set in while the barometer began falling at an alarming rate until it reached 28.60. By midnight in the drift all lights on the coast were obscured and a terrific gale of the S.E. sprang up blowing dead on the land, and veering so that the vessel had to be hove round and headed south in order to try and clear the land. At 4 a.m. Thursday, the wind veered south again, with a

Blinding Snow-Storm Prevailing.

The Evelyn carried double reefed mainsail, foresail, and mizzen with boom jib and jumbo, and by 6 a.m. in the blast, the jib, mainsail and foresail were torn in ribbons and it looked then as if there was no redemption for ship and crew as the vessel was almost completely at the mercy of the elements. After great exertion the ship's head was hove round so that she might lay more easily in the trough of the sea which time and again made clean breaches over her and took everything movable off the deck while both captain and sailors had narrow escapes from being swept into the surging waters. Badly leed up as she was, and filled with wet snow, the vessel was now almost out of hand when at 9 a.m. the welcome sight of a steamer in the distance gladdened the despairing hearts of the imperilled mariners. Distress signals were hoisted and the ship which proved to be the Bellaventure, Capt. Cross, hove down on the left for St. John's, the snow cleared and the captain was sighted and the ship held away south. Then Cape Broyle was discerned and as the vessel had been for hours practically under bare poles with all her canvas gone, it was deemed impossible to clear the land and she was run into Caplin Bay until the lead line recorded 13 fathoms of water and both anchors were let go bringing the ship to rest. She was checked for only a few minutes, however, for the port chain parted with the straining of the ship in the sea, the starboard anchor dragged and she was swept in on Isle au Bois.

Striking Stern foremost with a crash. The ship grounded at 1 p.m., with a big sea running, fortunately she stranded on a narrow strip of beach and at low tide and at least for the present all hands were safe. However, the prospect was gloomy in the extreme as it looked like a forlorn hope to scale the cliff which rose above them and as no boat could be hoisted, the men who were on the boat expected to whether the sea it looked as if inevitable doom was but postponed and that when the tide rose in a few hours, the angry waves would claim their victims. But the hope, now almost without without poor seamen, now almost without without fishermen of Ferryland, who had witnessed their plight, and Captain Burke spoke in terms of the highest praise of their heroism. Soon a skiff manned by H. J. Barnable, Jno. Barnable, Wm. Barnable, Wm. Furlong, M. Devereaux, Jno. Devereaux, Jas. Walsh, Howard Morey and M. White appeared and disregarding the awful weather prevailing endeavored to reach the men by going through what they termed the Y of the "gaps" in the island. In the attempt all came near being drowned, as a big sea broke on the boat, killing her and knocking a hole in her and they had to pull for their lives reaching the south side of the island and effecting a landing. Disregarding wet apparel and the elements the men frantically ropes over the cliff each man was hauled up to safety. Kindness and humanity were prominent characteristics with these fishermen as their bravery and hurrying the half-frozen and frozen seamen to their homes the ship's family showed them every attention and treated them with such consideration that Capt. Burke says he can never forget the treatment received at their hands. He also wishes to convey to the venerable Parish Priest of the place Rev. Fr. Vereker, his thanks and the thanks of his men for the kind attention paid them. The men lost all their clothing and Captain Burke at his nautical instruments, charts, etc., and as certain things were saved from the vessel by people from the shore, he thinks that his property or some of it should be with them. The ship is now gone to pieces and Capt. Burke and crew left here at 1 p.m. Friday but had to put up at Mrs. Scully's, at Cape Broyle, that night where also they were treated with marked kindness. Captain and crew are in good health and spirits.

A Narrow Escape

Friday afternoon as Theo. Gosse and David Dunphy, of Torbay, were driving from the woods, they crossed Middle Pond with their teams. Reaching a section which was only covered by a few inches of ice, the leading horse alighted, went through, followed by the other, in very deep water. The men in trying to rescue the animals, fell in themselves and for over an hour battled to reach shallow water by breaking much of the ice. Both men and horses were almost gone and were chilled to the marrow. Their clothes being frozen on their backs before they reached home. There were hot springs in this pond which makes it dangerous to travel over in winter.

Divorce.

BY H. L. RANN.

Divorce is a form of surgical operation which is performed for the purpose of removing an incubus. Sometimes the incubus objects to being removed and sets up a counter claim, in which case it is necessary to administer chloroform in the way of alimony.

Divorce is an American custom which has been legalized to such an extent that the marriage contract is about as binding as a promissory note drawn up on Sunday and signed by a feeble-minded idiot. It has gotten so that people can secure a good, watertight divorce in this country for the price of a secondhand bedstead, but it is not so in other lands. In India, if a man's wife refuses to get up in the morning and split the kindling and bed down the caw, he doesn't have to hire some jack-leg lawyer in order to secure his rights. All he has to do is tie a couple of flatirons about her neck and throw her into the river Ganges, then go out and buy another wife with a piece of telephone wire. Married life in India is only one degree removed from Heaven.

Divorce is granted on any ground that happens to come up first in the mind of the plaintiff, and the courts stand ready to ratify it at so much per rat. It is getting so that a man can't kick his wife several times in rapid succession or accuse her of being a female heretic without having to employ a high-priced attorney to vindicate his character. On the other hand, a wife can go ahead and make the coffee without any egg in it for years, and if the husband tries

To Hunt Lions In London.

Agitation has been raised against a scheme of lion hunting in London, through the papers, due to the fact that an erroneous report was circulated that there was going to be a "shooting of lions in London," whereas, as a matter of fact, it is not "shooting of lions" but hunting and capturing lions in London that is intended. A club is being formed, the initiation fee of which is one hundred guineas—$500—which entitles the members to participate (at their own risk) in the hunting and capturing of lions. Each member of the club is entitled to invite five persons at a fee of five guineas and for their safety a number of cages will be dispersed around the enclosure, where they can sit in perfect safety and watch the event. It has been thoroughly explained to the various participants that there is an element of great danger attached to this thing, and before becoming members they have to sign a document relieving others from all responsibility that may occur as a result thereof, permission for shooting being granted only in case of self-defence, when an animal makes a deliberate attack on any of the hunters, in which case they have the right to the use of their rifles, but not otherwise.

Obituary.

MRS. RUTH WHITEMARSH.
On Saturday, at the Cochrane St. Methodist Parsonage, there passed away Mrs. Ruth Whitemarsh, at the advanced age of 71. The deceased lady was the wife of the late Robert Whitemarsh, who passed to his reward in May, of last year. Although she had passed the usual span of life, death came somewhat unexpectedly. The cause of death was an attack of pneumonia and heart trouble, and but a few days elapsed between the attack and her demise. She had led a saintly life, and her refined character was a beautiful example to all who were associated with her. Her influence was always for good and she leaves behind her a memory fraught for good. She leaves four sons and a daughter to mourn their loss, to whom the Evening Telegram tenders sympathy. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon from the Parsonage at half-past two.

People from that section say that the Exploits River has been much higher the past winter than they have seen it for years, while about Rushy Pond, Leach's Brook, the ice has been breaking and rattling all along since the frost began. ## Fort Amberst Light.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH IT? THE OFFICIAL NOTICE A MONTH AGO DECLARED IT UNCERTAIN IT IS STILL UNRELIABLE.

We are in receipt of a letter from a respected and reliable correspondent, in which he asks us as an Editor, one of whose duties it is to protect the public, to deal with a matter of the most serious importance to seamen and fishermen who enter this port by the Narrows. Here in part is what our correspondent writes:

The matter on which I wish to write is of sufficient importance to create anxiety, as human lives may be implicated in it. You will see the printed notices, which I enclose, that it refers to the Light House at Fort Amberst. This light, at the very entrance to the Harbor, is certainly a most important one and any uncertainty or irregularity about it cannot fail to be a very serious matter.

This light from time immemorial is the oldest light in the country, having been erected about 1813, a hundred years ago, was a fixed light. About a couple of years ago, however, it was changed to an occulting light. I believe the change was made with a good intention and should have been an improvement.

Now, it happens that my window (sitting room) looks straight out to the Narrows, and I cannot help seeing this light every time I look out at night and at early morning when I raise my blind. I soon noticed that the machinery of the light was not working and that instead of being an occulting light every 2 1/2 seconds, it was frequently only as in old times a fixed light.

Some effort was made to remedy the defect and for a few nights it ran well but invariably fell back into the fixed state (as I write now it is fixed). A short time ago I received the printed copy of a "Notice to Mariners," which I enclose to you.

A more silly and idiotic production it would be difficult to conceive. Besides it is false and really dangerous. The statement that the frost has anything to do with the defect of the light is absolutely false. It was during the summer months that I first noticed it. Again, why does not the frost affect any other of our coastal lights? And if it really affects this one, why it ought to be condemned but it does not. If the statement were true that this light is unreliable i.e. uncertain during certain atmospheric conditions, would it not be a menace to human safety? And should it not be removed at once? Instead of being left there to lure vessels to destruction! It is really disgraceful and humiliating to us Newfoundlanders to have such a "Notice" sent abroad among Mariners from one of our public offices.

If the light is not a success none can blame these officials. They are not accountable for defective machinery. But what they are accountable for is for not seeing at once that the machinery is defective, but much more so for not acknowledging it, when their attention was called to it, and instead of removing it at once and having it repaired, to resort to the childish method of pretending it is all right and that the defect is only on the part of them looking at it!

Agents of the North German Lloyd S. S. Co. had a wireless via Cape Race from S. S. Groszer Kurfurt, saying that she had broken her port crank shaft yesterday, when 500 miles east of Cape Race. Because of the accident the vessel was only proceeding at half speed, and not expected to reach New York before Friday next. She was due on Tuesday and left Bremen, Jan. 4. She was to have sailed the 16th for a cruise to Panama, for which 400 were booked. The trip is now abandoned.

Cable News.

Special to The Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

Carrying extra lifeboats sufficient for the accommodation of all passengers and crews on ocean liners, have been recommended as the interim report of the departmental Committee on boats and davits appointed after the Titanic disaster to advise the Board of Trade. The report is highly of a technical character, the general recommendations are that extra boats be stowed underneath those which are attached to the davits, and that satisfactory arrangements for launching them be at hand. All foreign going vessels, on which boat accommodation would not be so large that all could be stowed this way, the committee recommends that the carrying of properly equipped reversible pontoon rafts should be allowed. These should be capable of accommodation for not more than 25 per cent. of the persons the vessel is certified to carry. The rafts should be of such size that they could be thrown from the deck is necessary.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

The Standard, voicing the views of cool-headed observers, says though the task of the Ambassadors of the Great Powers has been rendered more difficult by the large crop of rumors concerning the Balkan situation, it is certain the united judgment must in the end ensure peace. The opinion is general, however, that the Ambassadors must not delay too long in applying adequate pressure on Constantinople. To dilly-dally, which marked the procedure of the Powers before war began, when intervention could have saved the slaughter of Christians and Turks, is likely to see the resumption of hostilities. A big military and naval demonstration, if necessary, should be made to convince Turkey she can no longer defy civilization.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.

E. H. James, editor of the Paris Liberator, which printed the libelous story of the marriage of King George to the daughter of Admiral Seymour, before he became King, will likely be detained here on his arrival on the La Provence, of the French Line. It is said orders have been given for his detention, and if James acknowledges the authenticity of the statements attributed to him before sailing from France, efforts will be made to deport him.

HALIFAX, Jan. 12.

The Uranium liner Uranium, owned by McKenzie & Mann, 15 days out from Rotterdam for here and New York, with 800 passengers and a general cargo, went ashore at Chebucto Head near the mouth of the harbour, at 11 this morning, in a blinding hurricane. The steamer is in a dangerous position, and the passengers are being brought ashore to-night by the steamers Bridgewater and Lady Laurier. There is no loss of life.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.

Agents of the North German Lloyd S. S. Co. had a wireless via Cape Race from S. S. Groszer Kurfurt, saying that she had broken her port crank shaft yesterday, when 500 miles east of Cape Race. Because of the accident the vessel was only proceeding at half speed, and not expected to reach New York before Friday next. She was due on Tuesday and left Bremen, Jan. 4. MONTREAL, Jan. 12.

A London cable to the Witness says that Bonar Law has been presented with a memorial from 119 Unionists of the Commons against making food taxes an issue in the next election. He said he would at once communicate with Lansdowne and answer quickly. The terms of the memorial are secret, although several versions have been given out, one being that the Unionists, if returned to power, shall summon Imperial conferences to discuss by what means Imperial preferences can be decided.

Capt. Dillon III.

The barq. Rosina, Capt. Dillon, arrived here yesterday afternoon after a run of 42 days from Pernambuco, to A. Goodridge & Sons. She had fine weather until she reached the Gulf Stream when terrific storms similar to those which the Evelyn experienced was her portion, and the vessel had some damage done to her canvas but otherwise suffered slight injury. During the whole voyage Capt. Dillon has been very ill suffering from heart trouble and dropsy, but despite his illness and to do his best to navigate the ship and often had to be assisted by the crew to get about the decks. He was dangerously ill for a while at Pernambuco and is still in a bad state. The captain was taken ashore in a launch which went to the ship's side, and was attended by Dr. Campbell who drove him to his home on Lime Street, and who hopes that with good care and attention he will pull through all right.

SCHOONER PEERLESS GOES TO BOTTOM OFF PETTY HARBOR.

Saturday evening Skipper James Walsh, of the schooner Peerless, drove into St. John's reporting the loss of his craft with 307 qts. of fish and 100 Brazil drums consigned to Bowring Brothers on board. Interviewed by a Telegram reporter on arrival here Mr. Walsh said that the vessel, a craft of about 35 tons burden and owned by Ambrose Hearn, of Bay Bulls, left there for St. John's at 10 a.m. Saturday. With him there were on board Theophilus and Patk. Williams, brothers, of Bay Bulls, and everything went well until the schooner was within a mile or so of Petty Harbor Motion when it was seen that she was leaking badly forward and the pumps were quickly manned. Fortunately the weather was fine and the water smooth else all three might have been lost, for though they worked hard the water began to gain until it was up above the floors of the cabin and fore-castle and the craft began to settle by the head and the men concluded to abandon her. Shortly after 4 p.m. the men left her in their dory about three-quarters of a mile inside of the North Head of Petty Harbor, near Staffordside; and about twenty minutes after quitting her she sank into the depths dead first. Goodridge's motor boat, the "A. F. Goodridge" was seen about half a mile across Petty Harbor Bay after they discovered the condition of their craft and they signalled her but there not being wind enough to blow the flag out from the halliards the vessel must not have observed their call for aid and passed on. The men who rowed into Petty Harbour lost their clothing in the vessel, and they think that a plank started in the bottom of the craft and caused her destruction. She was an old vessel and uninsured though the fish on board was fully covered. The Williams brothers proceeded home from Petty Harbour Saturday night.

Nickel's Big Week

COMMENCES TO-DAY.

Manager Kelley has arranged a big and most attractive programme for patrons of the Nickel this week, commencing this evening. The pictures, as will be noted elsewhere in this issue cover a wide range and will be certain to please all. Comedy, the sweet love story and heavy drama are all combined and the whole form a highly pleasing entertainment. The Nickel, Newfoundland's leading house of amusement, aims not only to afford pleasure but to elevate and enlighten. With this object in view only high-class films are imported, and even these are personally inspected by the manager before presented. The theatre is in faultless condition and this high standard will be maintained. This evening's show promises to be the best for some time.

Repairers Gone.

Saturday afternoon, a special wrecking train with two cabooses and a large gang of men left here for Lench's Brook, where the railroad bridge was swept away Friday night and will start in at the work of making a temporary trestle bridge. There went out with the men Messrs. Cobb, Graham, Powell and Joyce, and they brought along all necessary gear including rails, pile drivers, etc. The train arrived at the scene at 2:30 p.m. yesterday, when the work of transferring mats, passengers and luggage from the trains held up at either side of the brook began, so that they might be sent to their destinations. The passengers had to make a wide detour to get around over the ice. Yesterday the river had risen several feet and the ice thrown up by the flood is several feet thick. The girders and spans of the bridge are terribly twisted and the loss to the Reid Nfd. Coy., will total several thousand dollars. The work of building the temporary bridge will begin forthwith and a minute enquiry will be made to ascertain the exact cause of the accident which is almost unprecedented at this season of the year.
