CHAPTER XVII.

"Come"—essaying to draw her to the sofa—"tell me what it all means, my dearest. I may say that, may I not?"

"Wait," she said, and freeing herself, took a chair close by. "Rupert, I wish mamma had told you everything. But you do know about my father's money going, do you not—all of it?"

"Yes—all but your mother's and yours, luckily." What was she driving at?

"All but ours—hers and mine—luckily, I suppose, or I might never have been able to do what I shall now. For did you know, too, Rupert that many people—very poor ones—had lent papa their money, and—ah—have never had it back from then till now?"

He caught a glimpse of her intention, and resolved instantly to treat it as untenable.

"Well, yes, I think I know what you are alluding to," he said, assuming carelessness; "but that business was wound up ages ago. All these great smashes involve a lot of little interests. It never can be helped. You must not think of concerning yourself about it. How came you to hear of it even?"

"It was chance, or"—looking beyond him, with what he silently dubbed a fanatical sort of resolve, that made him very uncomfortable—"or something wiser that took me among these very people on Wednesday. St. I know all about them. And the money that is mine to-day is just a very little over the bare sums they lent. So, Rupert, I am going to pay it to them."

"Sydney! Impossible!"

She watched him while she unfolded her plan. Now her spirit sunk, and her head drooped.

"Ah!" she said, "I was afraid you would think so."

"Afraid!" he exclaimed, getting up excitedly. "Why, my dear—why, Sydney, you must have known what I should say. It's only what any man, short of an idiot, would say, let alone any one who cares for you, as I do. Listen to me"—halting before her—"I do assure you occurrences like these are as common as—as ditch-water. Your father's business was purely itself compared to most failures. These people you talk about ought to have watched their own interests better than they did. But for them to go and rake up their grievances!—for you to dream of stripping yourself penniless on their behalf!—why, it isn't to be thought of for an instant. It would be most preposterous absurdity."

"It would be common honesty."

"No, no. You are not a judge of these worldly matters. I tell you we can't allow it. You must not do it, Sydney; you shall not!"

"But, Rupert, I will!"

He had overshot the mark. Sydney stood up, too, confronting him. The color ebbed from her face, but her clear eyes, her mouth, were resolute, in what she now discerned was to be a double sacrifice. Mr. Villiers was beside himself with anger. He walked from her, frowning, and stood at the window, staring moodily out.

"I thought it was just possible," she said, sadly, "that you might have sided with me. But I see now, I ought not to have expected it."

"It seems," he answered, almost roughly, "we have all been expecting things we are not likely to get!"

"Ah, it does!" Her accents were so sorrowful, Mr. Villiers' fit of mortification, on his own behalf, suddenly yielded to other impulse. He turned about. She was young—a most fair woman—the one his imagination had dwelt on for months as his very own. This project must be overthrown. He would have her!

He went to her again, very gently. "Pardon me now for speaking as I had no right. But if you followe your most generous wish, Sydney, don't you know what you would do besides grieving your mother terribly, and putting her—little as you intend it—putting her unjustly to much pain? Why, you would be treating me cruelly. For you must have seen what I have been wanting to tell you for weeks. You are not going to cast away what I was going to offer, just that you may carry out the scheme of one day's surprise—are you, Sydney, dear?"

Such a void was there in her life—in her heart—she bent to the tender note as young bud-laden branches sway before the whisper of the spring's south wind.

"Oh! must it be one or the other?" she cried. And Rupert Villiers caught at a method of hedging out of the dilemma.

"See now," he ventured, "how would this do? Make me your almoner. Let me take a thousand pounds and give it among these people—fourcure they ought to be grateful to you forever for. Then we—you and I, Sydney—would contrive to be satisfied with the rest. Say 'yes' to this, and put an end to all this trouble, and give me leave to be happy!"

She moved away from his offered caress.

"Rupert, I should neither feel myself a wife worthy any man's love nor a daughter worthy of my dear lead father's, if I say 'yes,'" she answered. "So, if it needs five thousand pounds, or three, or one, to buy me a place in your home, why, I must go without it." She stopped herself sharply in a sob. What woman feels no sting in the discovery that it is her purse, and not herself, which is coveted? "And you can be happy without me."

"Sydney, you are obstinate enough to drive a man mad!"

"I can not alter."

"Would you expect me to take you to some hovel of a home—"

"No, I expect nothing of the sort."

"And there vegetate on my salary?"

Old Dutch Cleanser

"Rupert, I have made you angry. Forgive me, and leave me."

But the baffled suitor was over boiling now with disappointed rage and gave it coarsely rein.

"Would you expect me to marry you on my own beggarly pittance and—"

"Mr. Villiers! Go!"

She gave her order still as a status—only her bosom, not her voice upraised. He could have bitten his tongue out for the lapse the moment it was uttered. But there was no quarter in her attitude. He dared no disobey. He turned slowly on his heel, and went.

In the room below, Mrs. Alwyn almoner, much en-de-Colegned, and al-voluted, met him with,

"Well, Rupert, well? What's to be done?"

"Nothing," he answered, sullenly, "but to get our breakfasts. Then I may go and meet my father. Leonora, here's something I've no use for now, if you care for gewgaws, take it."

He tossed the sapphire ring across the table, and there's the three sat down to anything but a lively meal.

An hour later Mr. Villiers went off to Hedyngham to fetch the major, damping his cheery "Well, may I wish you many happy returns of the day to my boy?" with a surly "No, you may not, sir"—and disclosing on the return drive the source of this miserable fiasco.

Astounded, the old officer could only repeat, "Bless my heart! I never heard such a thing, never! To think John Alwyn's obligations should turn up, and his child saddle herself with them like this. Bl—ss—my—heart!"—till, finding these ejaculatory minute-guns only increased his son's irritation, he held his peace while the last two miles were bringing him to his interview with Mrs. Alwyn.

That sorely tried lady received him with tears, and plunged into her afflictions as she shook hands.

"Now, Major Villiers, you see what Sydney is. Now you will find the difficulty of dealing with her disposition. Against my will, as she must have known, though, unhappily, I let poor Rupert overrule me, she went off on that silly sentimental expedition. Without my leave she must go further, forsooth, and hear some whining farrago, which, instead of coming home to have properly explained, she prefers investigating through that most impertinently interfering Mr. Cheene. And this is the upshot. She takes her destiny into her own hands, Major Villiers. Let her! She deliberately impoverishes herself. She is willful—willful to the verge of wickedness. My only consolation is, come what may, the work is none of mine!"

Knowing the domestic drama from its first scenes, and disposed, spite of his disappointment, to view the culprit's conduct as condonable, if not justifiable, the major took this accusing tirade in silence. It went sorely against him to join forces for a moment against an absent minority, that minority one solitary girl, spending her worldly all to redeem her father's name.

"Suppose I go and speak to Sydney myself," he volunteered, "and see if I can win her to look at things differently."

"Oh, by all means go, Major!" his hostess cried, "but as to moving her, h—!" expressively, "as well expect to stop the wind from blowing."

And so, indeed, he found it, not altogether—lightly be it written, for he never dared confess as much from that day to this!—to his dissatisfaction. Sydney, sick and faint—for, saving a cup of luke-warm coffee, brought unorderd, she had taken little enough now for a long wearing stretch—halted his coming not only fearlessly, but gladly. She let him in very sober argument go over the whole ground of contest, point out how absolutely she would alienate herself from comfort at home, probably from all chances of prosperity in any quarter; how quixotic her conduct would sound to the world; how unlooked-for her money was by these statute-run creditors, and therefore "how unnecessary—or—as they're not expecting anything, my dear, what a pity—as it were, to open old wounds—"

"What! Even to heal them?" she said, her pale face irradiating with something better far than loveliness.

"Did you know, Major Villiers, what sort of people they are I want to make amends to?"

"Not exactly," he confessed. "Mr. Russell told me of an effort to get at some of your mother's settlement, but she—but it was resisted. And if I had known every single case I could not have given up a penny of the trust money. That could only be dealt with by principals."

"And it is going to be."

Then Sydney told him simply who "her creditors" were. The old, the poor, the struggling, trusting, defenceless. "And now," she said, looking steadfastly at him through the heavy drops gathering in her eyes, "will you tell me, quite truly, Major Villiers, if you think I do well or ill to pay them?"

They See It.

Years ago Fifth Avenue was a wilderness of brown stone front steps. However, these have all been removed by city order and the houses have been shaved off to give more room for the traffic. The shaving has improved the looks of the street as much as it would the looks of a lieutenant of Coxe's army.

Fifth Avenue contains the only motor bus line in America and a ride on the roof garden of one of these craft is well worth twice the admission fee.

Madame Perreault Tells How She Cured Her Kidneys With Dodd's Kidney Pills and Found Health and Contentment. "I was always tired and nervous," she states. "I felt heavy and sleepy after meals. My limbs were heavy, and I had a dragging sensation across my loins. My skin itched and burned at night. I had a bitter taste in my mouth, especially in the morning. In twenty years I hardly knew what it was to have a well moment. Then I commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Six boxes cured me."

Elective Road Boards.

During the session of the Legislature the Premier, Sir Edward Morris, declared that the Government would allow the people of different settlements of electoral districts an opportunity of selecting the persons who should form the Road Board of the settlements. In a number of cases, the people acted on this promise, held meetings, and sent in copies of the resolutions passed at the public meetings, and the names of the elected candidates.

The Government did not act on these elections. They refused to recognize them and insisted that the elections must be held under the direction of Magistrates.

This decision paralyzed the movement, for it was a matter of expense and delay. In some cases the expenses of the Magistrates would have eaten up the whole grant, for the expenses were to be charged to the grant.

At last the Government awoke to a fact that was obvious to everybody else, and decided to draft rules for the election and permit Magistrates, J. P.'s, or other responsible persons to act, after the receipt of a petition for such an election.

The instructions were printed on April 9th, and copies sent out. On enquiry at the Board of Works, we find that four copies were sent to the Trinity District eight days later.

One to Mr. J. W. James, J. P., Hant's Harbour, for that settlement, one to Mr. E. J. Sanson, J. P., for Winton, and to the Chairman of the Road Board, for Queen's Cove. The Chairman was directed to hold a meeting as the expense was too great to send the Magistrate eight days later. There are 15 voters.

Yesterday another was sent to Mr. J. W. James, J. P., of Hant's Harbour, for new Chelsea, and one is being sent today for Clarendon.

We cannot congratulate the Government on their manner of going about the business. They would have been much wiser had they made public what they were going to do immediately and avoided the vacillation about magistrates.

This Date in History.

APRIL 25, New Moon. Days Past—114 To Come—250.

OLIVER CROMWELL, born 1599. At one time contemplating going to America but entering Parliament and becoming enthusiastic in the popular cause, he obtained recognition as one of the Parliamentary leaders, and ultimately on the outbreak of the Civil War, became General of the Roundheads. How he gained battle after battle, and after the execution of Charles I. was installed at the head of the Commonwealth, is familiar history.

WILLIAM COWPER died 1800, aged 69. The great poet published his first poems in 1782, and soon after appeared the ballad, "John Gilpin." He wrote some of the most beautiful hymns in the language and was imbued with much piety of sentiment and a remarkable poetic talent. His "Task" is one of the great poems of the 18th century.

SIGNOR MARCONI born 1874. The ingenious Italian electrician who in 1896 brought forward an apparatus by which he succeeded in sending wireless messages. To-day his system is being adopted in all parts of the world.

PRINCESS MARY born 1897. Only daughter and third child of the King and Queen.

APRIL 26, New Moon—25th Days Past—115 To Come—249. 2nd Sunday after Easter. DAVID HUME born 1711. The celebrated historian and philosopher whose "History of England" is a fascinating and comprehensive study. His philosophical writings were no less famous, and widened the sphere of philosophical thought.

DANIEL DEFOE died 1731, aged 70. The son of a London butcher who after a varied business career, became a political writer and novelist, obtaining world-wide fame by his "Robinson Crusoe," written when he was nearly sixty years of age.

BORNSBERG BURNSSON died 1910, aged 78. The Norwegian poet, dramatist and novelist, is one of the great names in modern European literature, his poems, plays and stories being marked by a strong intellectuality and a rich imagination.

Deeds, not words. He who talks the most or shouts the loudest may not be the most patriotic. The more truth the less better. —Alfred H. Allen.

QUESTION ON MUSICAL MATTERS. L.M.—Do not think of the right hand pedal only as the "loud" pedal. It is used just as frequently in playing softly, as one of its most important functions is the holding of one or more notes while the fingers are playing others; it is in fact a sort of third hand which holds the other two hands sometimes used together. When the notes of one hand are to be played louder than those of the other, the expression marks are given, one for each hand. The usual direction for the soft pedal is "una corda," and for its discontinuance "tre corda." —BATON.

The Mexican Situation.

Special to Evening Telegram.

HOBART, April 24.
Mystery surrounds the disappearance of the steamer Huon, which foundered in Dentrecaux Channel to-day, without apparent reason. Three passengers were drowned. The weather was calm, and the water like a mill-pond at the time of the accident. The vessel was used in the local fruit trade.

VERA CRUZ, April 24.
The battleship Louisiana arrived to-day and landed detachments of marines and bluejackets; the Mississippi is also prepared to send ashore 500 marines and a battalion of bluejackets as well as two aeroplanes. By to-morrow it is probable that the total force on shore will reach 6,000 men. The outposts are equipped with 12 machine guns, and several three-inch field pieces, which were taken to the front to-day.

Over 200 Mexican sick and wounded were found in San Sebastian Hospital to-day, when inspected. Among the dead are a number of Catholic friars, who turned from the sanctuary of their church to fight the invaders. Armed with rifles, a number of the friars ascended the battery, and from this point of vantage fired on the Americans. The fighting friars were dislodged by marines under Ensign Townsend. With automatic pistols in their hands the marines stormed the building, spurring a continuous stream of lead. Those friars, who were left alive, conducted the funeral services of the Mexican dead to-day. The solemn chant of the funeral service was heard in many a hut, where thick incense mingled with the odor of flowers.

LONDON, April 24.
The Daily Mail's Mexico City despatch, dated Thursday, says: "A military guard was placed in the States embassy this afternoon. Arms and ammunition which are said to have been there for some time, were removed, as they were considered unnecessary, in view of the protection afforded by the Mexican Government. Life in the city is almost normal. Many shops have their shutters up. Nearly all are open. Some British residents are wearing rosettes of British colors. Many Americans remain, and may be seen in the streets.

There have been some processions with flags, but no disorders worth mentioning.

LONDON, April 24.
The Daily Telegraph understands that the question of the blockade of Mexican ports is being discussed by the European Powers, and recalls that Britain in 1884 successfully protested against an attempt by France to blockade the coast of China without a formal declaration of war.

Wedding Bells.

PITTMAN-BRAKE.
Yesterday at 4 p.m. the silence was broken by the plays of musketry when Mr. Richard Pittman and Miss Mary Brake were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the R. C. Church by Rev. E. J. Wilson, P.P. The bride was handsomely attired in a white costume with hat and veil to match, and the groom, although older, equalled many of our prominent young men. After the ceremony the happy couple, accompanied by their many friends, returned to the home of the groom, where they spent a very enjoyable evening. The writer extends hearty congratulations to the happy couple.

THE GREATER QUESTION

At this season of the year for Farmers with up-to-date ideas in, what are the best means to use to get the best returns from the land.

Fertilizers must be used liberally if large returns are looked for. There are several good chemical fertilizers which may be recommended, but Sulphate of Ammonia has been proved to give the best returns, and is the most valuable and economical source of Nitrogen for agricultural purposes.

For vegetables, grass, and all leafy crops, about one and a half cwt. per acre is the best quantity to use, and this should be applied when the plant is making its growth, as well as before sowing the seed.

If a liquid manure is preferred, a ¼ oz. of Sulphate to one gallon of water should be used, and applied once a week for a month. This quantity should not be exceeded.

It is a good plan to reduce the Sulphate to a fine powder, and mix with four or more times its own bulk, for the purpose of diluting the manure which is very powerful.

For potatoes the following mixture is strongly recommended:—

40 lbs. Superphosphate.
25 lbs. Fine bone meal.
10 lbs. Carbonate of Magnesia.
15 lbs. Sulphate of Potash.
21 lbs. SULPHATE OF AMMONIA.

1 cwt.
Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to 43 square yards.

The use of Carbonate of Magnesia in conjunction with Sulphate of Ammonia, is of great importance in potato culture.

For turnips use the following:—
66 lbs. Superphosphate.
13 lbs. Fine bone meal.
13 lbs. Sulphate of Potash.
20 lbs. Sulphate of Ammonia.

1 cwt.
Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to square yards.

Sulphate of Ammonia of excellent quality is now made by the St. John's Gas Light Company, and may be obtained on very reasonable terms, and Full particulars may be obtained at the Gas Works, or at the Board of Trade Building. Ask for special booklet on the use of Sulphate, it will be found of great value in securing the heaviest crops.

Visions of Conquest

During her attack of tonsillitis, Marian, confined to her room, pondered deeply on what Doctor Graham had said to her. He had put into words what she had often thought about the relations of men and women.

She knew that he was right in what he had said about picking a career and mastering its details. She strove to analyze her lens, her leanings toward this, that, and the other callings. But her clash, full-tilt, with the world and its complexity of affairs, had been brief, and the horizon of her outlook was still narrow and blurred.

She shrank from plunging into a business career, save as a mere temporary means to an end. Office work did not appeal to her. She saw no color, no tang, in it. The stage called most insistently. Yet she was in no way "stage struck." She had always regarded it with the puritanical views her mother had drilled into her as a child. But she thought of the stage as offering the best paid opportunity within reach. The glamour of the footlights, in and for themselves, did not call. But she perceived in them the road to independence, expression, and those comforts and luxuries of life she had always craved.

As yet she did not know the degree of untiring energy, persistence, callousness to rebuff, tact, luck, and resolution against odds, that ultimate theatrical success would exact.

She had devoured the Sunday feature stories in the newspapers with avidity, stories recounting how obscure daughters of the stage had flamed into prominence, and she longed to go forth and do likewise.

She thrilled as she pictured herself playing to packed houses which roared with applause, and already she could see in fancy the employee of a hardware concern gazing at her in astonishment from the audience—the man who had been her husband, but who had let her get away.

Already she could see the letters of her name blazing in electric bulbs.

The Newfoundland Disaster Enquiry Before Judge Knight.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL (sworn), examined by Hutchings, K.C.—I am a registered medical practitioner in St. John's, and Port Physician. I had charge of the sick members of the Newfoundland, and the bodies of her dead members landed from on board the Bellaventure, on Saturday, April 4th. The paper writing now produced marked "A.C.1," contains a list of the dead, numbering 69. The addresses of deceased are contained in the exhibits. The paper writing marked "A.C.2," contains a list of the sick members of the crew who were sent to the hospital, numbering 28. The paper writing marked "A.C.3," contains a list of sick members of the crew sent to George Fifth Institute. The book marked "A.C.4," contains a list of all survivors on board the Newfoundland, and who came in on her, numbering 63. I have since found that there are some bodies unrecovered. It is reported the number is 8. Upon enquiry at the office of A. J. Harvey & Co., I have found five names of undiscovered bodies, as follows: Daniel Murray, of Carbon ear; Jordan, of Pouch Cove; Lamb, of Red Islands; David Locke, of St. John's; and Foley, of St. Bride's. John Keels, of Bonavista, who was sent to the hospital, has since died. The dead bodies of all were identified and delivered to their relatives.

SAMUEL HORWOOD (sworn), examined by Hutchings, K.C.—I was one of the Stephano's crew this spring at the sealfishery. Early on Tuesday morning, March 31st, we were put on the ice to kill seals. We were picked up by the Florizel between 12 and 1 o'clock and put on board the Stephano about 4. While on the Florizel I heard a rumor that the Newfoundland's crew were aboard the Stephano, and after getting to our own ship found it was true. I also heard there were put on the ice before dinner. When I heard this I felt anxious for them. Different men of our crew were also anxious. After our steamer stopped taking seats, the captain continued to blow the whistle, and concluded he was anxious about the Newfoundland's crew. Between 8 and 9 o'clock I went on deck and met a man who may be called Devereaux. I am not certain about his name. I asked him what he thought of the Newfoundland's crew, and told him lots of us thought they did not get aboard their own ship. After some talk I went forward and met the captain's brother, Samuel Kean; he was wheelsman while the crew were on the ice. I asked him what he thought of the Newfoundland's crew being on the ice to-night, and he said he thought they would have a terrible night if they were on the ice. He said, "if they stopped to kill seals, he was afraid they did not get on board." I told him I thought that whether they stopped or not they did not get aboard the Newfoundland. I told him I heard a rumor that the class was bottom up, and that if they were so we were sure to have the wind from the N. and W. and freezing, and these men would perish on the ice. He said he was afraid so. He asked my name and where I belonged, and I told him. I then said, "You can depend upon it, Uncle Sam, it is going to be a bad job, these men will perish on the ice." I then wished him good-night and then went down and turned in. Between 10 and 11 o'clock a.m. on March 31st, or perhaps before I told my ice master that it was going to be a bad day. He wanted to follow the master watch John Kelloway, who had gone on ahead and I wanted him to go back to the ship. I said to him we have all the seals scraped together and that if the heavy rough ice we were travelling over stretched abroad we would not be able to get back to the whelping ice. He replied that "if we did not go on and Kelloway killed seals we would get hell when we got aboard." I said suppose we go on and come across them too, and the storm comes on, we will be smothered killing seals. After some more remarks, I said "go on, I'll follow you." We went on till we met Kelloway but killed no seals. At 11:45 we started for our own ship; it was pecking snow then and we kept on till we reached the Florizel. It was snowing thick when she picked us up.

To Warren, K.C.—I did not speak to the captain because I met his brother and spoke to him, thinking it was just as good as if I spoke to the captain. I had not gone to look for Samuel Kean. When I spoke to my ice master about the weather the only reply was if it came to all we could get aboard the Bonaventure. He did not express any opinion of his own about the weather. I did not say coming on the train last night that I would hang Captain Kean.

To Dr. Lloyd.—I have a brother in St. John's. I saw him before I went home; I told my brother in substance what I have sworn to-day.

To the Judge.—I have been going to the sealfishery off and on since 1879. This was my fourth spring with Capt. Kean. The first in the Florizel the last three in the Stephano. I did not know the position of the Newfoundland on the morning of Tuesday. I did not know how far she was from the Stephano any time that morning. I did not know whether the Newfoundland was jammed or not that morning. I only saw the smoke of a ship in the sky that morning and won't swear it was the Newfoundland. I could not say what hour our ship burned down on Wednesday night. On Thursday morning early I remember seeing the Newfoundland. It was shortly after daylight when I saw her.

The hearing was adjourned at 4 o'clock until Monday next at 10 a.m.

Make it thick, glossy, wavy, luxuriant and remove dandruff—Real surprise for you.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, luffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as young girl's after a "Dandarine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Dandarine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have outbid the beauty of your hair. Besides beautifying the hair at once, Dandarine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair. But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Dandarine from your druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

At the City Hall.

At yesterday's Council meeting the people living on Allandale Road petitioned for water and sewerage, which was granted provided, petitioners will pay portion of cost.

R. J. Green's complaint of defective light on Pennywell Road was referred to Lighting Committee.

Plans submitted by A. J. Kennedy, I. H. Dawe, J. C. Barter, W. D. Kelly, W. Snow, W. Dunn and P. Wall were approved.

Ordered that tenders be asked for the painting of Bannerman Park. A. Northfield's claim for $4.00 was handed over to the Solicitor.

The Sanitary Supervisor reported that the refuse deposited near Harvey's factory came from a printing office.

The meeting then closed.

Magic "Nerviline Cures."

Toothache Earache.

IT RELIEVES EVERY EXTERNAL PAIN.

Cures Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Tight Chest and Hoarseness.

It's when sickness come at night, when you are far from the druggist or the doctor, that's when you need Nerviline most. Experienced mothers are never without it. One of the children may have toothache. Without Nerviline—a sleepless night for the entire household. With Nerviline the pain is relieved quickly. It may be earache, perhaps a stiff neck, or one of the kiddies coughing with a bad chest cold. Nothing can give quicker results than vigorous rubbing with this old-time family remedy.

Nerviline is too useful, too valuable to be without. For lumbago, lame back, sciatica, or neuralgia there is no liniment with half of Nerviline's power to penetrate and ease the pain. As a family safeguard, as something to ward off sickness and to cure the minor ills that will occur in every family, to cure pain anywhere, you can find nothing to compare with old-time Nerviline, which for forty years has been the most widely used family remedy in the Dominion. The most economical size is the large 50c. family size bottle, small trial size 25c. All dealers sell Nerviline.

SAGONA GONE NORTH.—The S. S. Sagona sailed this morning for the north, going as far as Quirpon, taking mail, freight and passengers. Returning she will collect seals that were killed along the French Shore.

Message of the Crucifixion.

In addition to the postcard messages published three weeks ago on the above subject we have since received the following. Father O'Brien's thought-impelling article treats the question with a directness that is refreshing in these days of compromise and almost rejection of the Sermon on the Mount. It is generally conceded that this Sermon embodies the essence of Christ's Teaching and we open the columns of this Saturday Evening Page to letters from our readers, Clergymen and Laymen, concerning the following question:

ARE WE LIVING OUT THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT IN THESE DAYS?

Rev. P. J. O'Brien, P.P.,
Tor's Cove.

The message of the Crucifixion is one of humiliation, self-denial, and triumph.

"Christ humbled Himself, becoming obedient to death, even the death of the Cross." "He that humbled himself shall be exalted." His self-humiliation was the supreme act of self-denial. He says to each one of us: Unless you deny yourselves, take up your cross and follow Me, you cannot be My disciple.

The Via Dolorosa leads to Calvary, and Calvary to Glory. "It behoveth Christ to suffer and thus enter into His glory." Through His crucifixion and death He overcame the world and the Apostle tells us that if "we suffer with Christ, we shall be glorified with Him." We serve under one of two standards. If we are followers of the Crucifixion, we can say with the Apostle of the Gentiles: "Now I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. Wherefore I will glory in the cross of my Lord Jesus Christ by which the world is crucified to me and I to the world."

If we are the slaves of sin we serve under the standard of Satan. "We are enemies of the Cross of Christ, whose end is destruction."

If our personal Christianity is genuine, we have taken Christ for our model; if Christ be not our model, then our Christianity is a sham, and we are slaves of the triple alliance, concupiscence.

We have been redeemed without our agency, but we cannot be saved without our co-operation.

Christ is our exemplar, and our Teacher. "I have given you an example." "Justice and peace kissed" on Calvary, and if the world were truly Christian, justice and peace should reign long since and to-day; and there is no more convincing evidence than the reign of Christ has not yet much away, than the fact there is such vast and bitter international contention, domestic broils, and absence of brotherly love. "By this shall all men know that you are My disciples, if you love one another, as I have loved you."

As Christ crucified is our pattern so also is He our teacher. "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life." "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." If then, we would walk in the footsteps of our guide over the "narrow way" that leads to life, we must be directed by that beacon which is the "Light of the World"; for if we presume to guide ourselves, or confide in false guides, we will assuredly fall into the ditch. We have been called into perfection: "Whom He foreknew He called, whom He called He sanctified."

Men of Self Control.

How different is the outlook of a man who feels confident every morning that he is going to do a man's work, the very best he is capable of during the day! How superbly he carries himself who knows that he can work out the Creator's design each day, and has no fear, or doubt, or anxiety as to what he can accomplish! He feels that he is master of himself and knows to a certainty that no moods or conditions have power to hinder him. He has come into his dominion.

Amid the feverish rush and turmoil of modern life, the fierce competition and the nerve-exhausting struggle for existence in which the majority are engaged, we see here and there serene souls who impress us with a sense of power and of calm unshakable assurance and who travel towards their goal with the rhythmic majesty of the stars. They have whom He sanctified He justified, and whom He justified He glorified."

If the voice of the Crucified calling men into Justice speaks to the world to-day, He must speak with the same infallible authority as when He commissioned men to teach to the end of time in His name. "All who are of My fold hear My voice," "And there shall be one fold and one Shepherd." If therefore we desire to learn the lesson of the Cross with profit, we must learn it infallibly; our Christianity must be a genuine brand, and having found it, we must live up to it. "For we must not be hearers of the Word only, we must be doers also."

The message that the Cross proclaims to the world to-day, and one that is sadly needed is that of humility, docility, self-abnegation and brotherly love, and it is because these virtues are so largely wanting, there is so little peace on earth, so many evilly socialistic and material tendencies, and the god of avarice is so extensively worshipped instead of the God of Charity, while there remains, even after nineteen centuries of Christianity, still gigantic work to be done to "restore all things in Christ."

Rev. T. H. James,
Elliston.

The message of the Crucifixion to us to-day is the same as in past ages. Over 30 years ago the Rev. S. B. Dunn preached a sermon in Gower St. Church in which he said: "The Cross was a mirror revealing to us our depraved state by nature. It was also a picture revealing to us the love of God." It was also a power, changing the heart and turning the sinner from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God."

Rev. Kenneth G. Richards,
Hillview.

The Crucifixion spells Sacrifice—the GREATEST sacrifice. "Greatest love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Yes, but He laid down His life for His enemies. Many of us may be quite willing if need be, to lay down our lives for our friends—but for our enemies!

The Crucifixion to my mind teaches us to "bless those who curse us, and to pray for those who despitefully use and persecute us." As we compare Matt. 5:44 with Luke 23:34, we think what an exemplification of "Preaching in Practice."

We all should be saviours of men—but if such we desire to become, we must prepare for lives of sacrifice, which may terminate with a Calvary. The message of the Crucifixion for us to-day is one of love, self-denial and sacrifice for others.

SERVICE OPENS MAY 8th.—On arrival at New York the Red Cross liner Florizel will lay up to have her steering gear, which was damaged at the icebergs, put in proper condition. The Florizel and Stephanos will commence running on schedule time between New York, Halifax and this port on May 8th.

THE HIGHLANDERS' BALL.—Preparations are now being made for the Highlanders' ball, which was postponed owing to the sealing disaster. The date now set for the affair is July 1st, and the decorations will be particularly attractive and will introduce some novel electrical effects.

When April one day was asked whether
She could make reliable weather,
She laughed till she cried;
And said: "Bless you, I've tried,
But the things will get mixed up together."

My Lady.

All things uncomely and broken, all things worn out and cold,
The cry of a child by the roadway,
The creak of a lumbering cart,
The heavy steps of the ploughman splashing the wintry road,
Are wronging your image that blossoms a rose in the deeps of my heart.

The wrong of unshapely things is a wrong too great to be told;
I hunger to build them anew, and sit on a green knoll apart,
With the earth and the sky and the water re-made, like a casket of gold,
For my dreams of your image that blossoms a rose in the deeps of my heart.

These beautiful verses by Mr. Yeats are the song of the new spirit hymning the mistress of the world. The old chivalry couched a lance against dragons that would devour us, and sang our beauty in unmeasured ecstasy. In some legends it proved its gallantry by kissing an ugly hag, and forthwith she turned into a lovely princess. When we were locked in grim dungeons, chivalry assailed the stronghold and delivered us, especially if we were handsome and of royal blood.

The new chivalry is dressed in working clothes, and the dragons it must face are poverty, squalor, industrial slavery. The distressed damsel in the moonlit tower has become the girl in the street, the woman prisoned in a dirty kitchen, the wage-earner in the factory. Our champion need not fare forth into far countries to do wonders and attest his prowess. The enemy is here, everywhere—"all things uncomely and broken."

Woman-worship, the central motive of song and legend these many centuries, has been too much inspired by the will to possess and too little by the will to serve. The modern knight sans peur et sans reproche must learn that virtues ascribed to his lady to make her a more precious object of desire have not proved good working substitutes for some plainer virtue which he denies her after he has won his suit. It is but nigardly largess to bestow upon her so much education as will make her a witty, pleasant companion and then refuse her access to the wider knowledge of which man is the jealous custodian. We confess our incapacities. We are inconsistent and timid. We hand down from mother to daughter ideals of ourselves which are not in keeping with our experience. We amuse our brothers by irreconcilable and conflicting assertions. Every day of our lives we justify that superior masculine smile which says, "Just like a woman!" We especially justify it by accepting the legendary ideal of us which he has made for his gratification. This ideal has tender and beautiful aspects. But it is full of contradictions and absurdities. It is on the whole an obstacle to justice intervening darkly between the facts of life and a clear, honest vision.—Helen Keller.

Make Your Own Face.

Do you ever study the faces in public conveyances, trolleys, stages, railway trains, omnibuses?

It is interesting and instructive. Each face is a diary of the thoughts, ambitions, habits and diet of an individual.

And how few attractive faces are found after the owners have passed thirty, forty, or fifty at latest. Not one in one hundred. That is because so few people think, hope, live and eat on a proper and wholesome basis.

Wrong methods do not betray themselves often until after early youth passes.

Youth is a beauty mask which life lends to each of us at birth. At thirty we are obliged to return it to its owner and walk forth with the face of our own making.

The mouths of children almost invariably curl up at the corners. Occasionally the mouth of a young girl or youth keeps this fascinating dart.

It is rarely found on the middle-aged. Not because time causes change, time is powerless to do more than mature what God has bestowed. It is the work of our minds, this transformation of the features at middle age.

It is the drooping, despondent thought which curves the mouth down at the corners, not the flight of time.

Were I a man I should study well the shape of the mouth before I asked its kiss at the altar. I should wed the upturned mouth, and then I should make it the business of my life to keep its corners curled upward afterward.

It is a curious and overwhelming thing, this study of faces. I looked at a man the other day in a public conveyance. He was middle aged, well dressed, and busy reading his paper.

I said to myself: "You are no doubt a husband and father, on your way home after business. I wonder what you represent to that home. Are you a mere money-making machine during the day and a combination of nerves and whims and notions and emperors at home? Do you carry depression and worry and gloom and nervousness into your home, or love light, mirth and good cheer?"

Then I looked at a well-groomed, attractive woman, hanging on a strap (the man was sitting), and I queried: "What do you represent to the home where you belong—love, peace, repose, order, kindness, sympathy and patience, or hysteria, petulance, extravagance, frivolity and jealousy?"

I have you any realization of all you may do or can mean, to your family or to the world?"

Each human being is like an engine rushing down life's track. It depends upon its driver—the will—whether it goes on its way crushing and destroying and maiming, and ends in a ruin or whether it glides straight and harmless to its goal, a vehicle for good thoughts, purposes and deeds.

After you have finished reading this article go to your mirror and study your face. If you have any old photographs taken in earlier days, compare your reflection with them. Find out what your mind is doing with your features.

For it is not time, trouble or sorrow that is changing you—it is your own mind.

Christ's face is sorrowful yet beautiful and illuminated, because He radiated love from within.

Each one of us carries an aura, a reflection of our deepest and most permanent thoughts. All who come near us feel its influence—for better or for worse, for cheer or despondency.

To the very spiritual, the clear-seeing souls, it is visible oft-times. Those who cultivate love thoughts and broad sympathies and wide charity and high hopes carry an aura of light and radiance and warmth which is an inspiration to all who come near them.

Do you?
Ask yourself that as you study your face in the mirror.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

WITH THE ADVENTISTS.—At the Cookstown Road Church to-morrow evening, Elder Young will preach upon the subject recorded in Revelation 6:17, "And Who Shall be Able to Stand?" This will be Elder Young's last Sunday with the Church for some time to come, owing to his many calls away from town, and later on he expects to attend the conference at Moncton, N.B. about the last of May. Elder Young expects to leave for Placentia, Tuesday next, D.V.

The Rhythmical Imitator.

When I took my friend Schmalz into a cabaret I did not know that he was a rhythmical imitator. Have you ever noticed how some people, when playing the piano, cannot talk except in exact time with the music? A rhythmical imitator has this eccentricity developed to the highest degree. His entire organism responds to a musical stimulus and involuntarily copies its rhythm with absolute faithfulness.

The orchestra was playing as we entered, and I took no special notice of the fact that Schmalz pranced gaily to a table in exact time with the music. I merely thought that he was unusually hungry.

The music stopped just as we were ordering our meal, and during this interval Schmalz appeared perfectly normal. But suddenly the orchestra struck up one of those shuffling clog-dances. My friend at once began to adapt his sentences to the syncopations of the dance-rhythm. His napkin had been overlooked and he turned to the waiter with the words, "Walter, won't you—bring—me—that—napkin—a rag?"

I confess that this peculiar method of giving orders caused me some surprise. Soon, however, the music changed to a slow, dreamy waltz, and Schmalz leaned across the table and rhythmically chanted, "Don't you think it's quite a pleasure eating food to tunes like this?"

A little later, when the music had again changed, this time to a stirring march, I observed that he was chewing in absolutely correct time and swallowing only when the thump of the brass-drum announced the end of a phrase. During this time he said nothing, but when a march was being played, he began to sing "The Rosary."

I noticed that Schmalz drank in rhythmical gulps exactly corresponding to the heavy chords of the music, recovering his breath during the quieter passages. By this time I was seriously alarmed, and with reason. The climax came during the lobster-salad. Schmalz, taking advantage of a lull in the music, had crammed his mouth full of his favorite delicacy. Then, when he was at their mercy, those fiendish musicians suddenly launched into the raggedest of modern rags. It was a tune beyond all the laws of conventional rhythm. It started with a headlong rush, then fumbled on its tracks, twisted itself into a knot, snapped out straight again, and continued thus through every rhythmical contortion known to man. Schmalz made a desperate effort. His jaws worked convulsively for a moment. Then a terrible expression of agony came into his features. His face turned purple and I could see that the ragtime was choking him to death. With a horrible rattling in his throat he sank slowly to the ground and lay still. To all appearances Schmalz had breathed his last.

And then a strange thing happened. By a lucky chance we were in one of those restaurants where Chopin's Funeral March is played whenever a patron dies during a meal. The orchestra players had seen my friend fall, and with one accord they changed to the solemn strains and regular rhythm of the familiar tune. The effect on Schmalz was similar to that of artificial respiration on a drowning man. He opened his eyes. He breathed again and his jaws began to work calmly and regularly. I helped him to his feet, and in a series of slow, halting steps we reached the door. Luckily the march continued until we were well outside. Schmalz drew a long breath, then flung his arms around my neck and kissed me. We were safe—safe under the tracks of the Elevated—where no music on earth has a chance!

Bill's in Trouble!

I've got a letter, parson, from my son away out West.
An' my ol' heart is heavy as an anvil in my breast.
To think the boy whose futur' I had once so proudly planned

Should wander from the path of right an' come to such an end!
I told him when he left us only three short years ago
He'd find himself a-plowin' in a mighty crooked row—
He'd miss his father's counsels, an' his mother's prayers, too,
But he said the farm was hateful, an' he guessed he'd have to go.

I know that's big temptation for a youngster in the West,
But I believed our Billy had the courage to resist.
An' when he left I warned him o' the ever-widkin' snare,
That he like hidden snares in life's pathway everwhere.
But Bill he promised faithful to be keepl' an' allowed
He'd build a reputation that'd make us mighty proud.
But it seems as how my counsel sort o' faded from his mind,
An' now the boy's in trouble o' the very wustest kind!

His letters came so seldom that I scarcely ever knowed
That Billy was a-trampin' on a mighty rocky road,
But never once imagined he would bow to it,
An' in the dust'd waller his ol' daddy's honored name.
He writes from out in Denver, an' the story's mighty short;
I just can't tell his mother; it'll crush her poor ol' heart!
And so I reckoned, parson, you might break the news to her—
Bill's in the Legislatur', but he doesn't say what fur.

Love and Peace.

There is a story told
In Eastern tents, when autumn nights grow cold,
And round the fire the Mongol shepherds sit
With grave responses listening unto it.
Once, on the errands of his mercy bent,
Buddha, the holy and benevolent,
Met a fell monster, huge and fierce of look,
Whose awful voice the hills and forests shook.
"O Son of peace!" the giant cried, "thy fate is sealed at last, and love shall yield to hate."

The unsmiled Buddha looking with no trace
Of fear or anger, in the monster's face,
With pity said: "Poor friend, even thee I love."
Lo! as he spake, the sky-tall terror sank
To hairbreadth size; the huge abhorrence shrank
Into the form and fashion of a dove;
And when the thunder of its rage was heard,
Mooding above his sweetly sang the bird:
"Hate hath no harm for lovers," so ran the song.
And peace unweaponed conquers every wrong!"

—Whittier.

The Toys.

My little son, who looked from thoughtful eyes,
And moved and spoke in quiet grown-up wise,
Having my lay the seventh time disobeyed,
I struck him, and dismissed
With hard words and unkindness—
His mother, who was patient, being dead.

Then, fearing lest his grief should hinder sleep,
I visited his bed,
But found his slumbering deep,
With darkened eyelids and their lashes yet
From his late sobbing wet.
And I, with moan,
Kissing away his tears, left others of my own.

For, on a table drawn beside his head,
He had put within his reach,
A box of counters and a red-velvet stone,
A piece of glass abraded by the beach,
And six or seven shells,
A bottle with bluebells,
And two French copper coins, ranged there with careful art,
To comfort his sad heart.
So when that night I prayed
To God I wept, and said:
"Ah, when at last we lie with tranced breath,
Not vexing thee in death,
And thou rememberest of what toys
We made our joys,
How weakly understood
Thy great commanded good,
Than I whom thou hast moulded from the clay,
Thou'lt leave thy wrath, and say,
'I will be sorry for their childishness.'"

Some People Say:
"What is that Medicinal Brandy Sanator"?

WHY SANATOR?
WHY MEDICINAL?

The answer is indeed easy:
Sanator (a Latin word) means: that cures.
Medicinal means that the Brandy although being not a properly so-called "medicine" is composed with the best known growths for their tonic, digestive properties and of course can be used for medicinal purpose in the family like the Hospitals.

When you taste it, it is quite a revelation and people are accustomed to say: "I have never tasted so fine, so rich Brandy."

When you are sick, weak, suffering with a cold or with bad digestion, try the medicinal Brandy "Sanator" and you will be surprised of its good effects.

That can happen at every moment: ask to-day from your dealer a bottle of Medicinal Brandy "Sanator": it is prudent to have it always on hand.
