CHAPTER XXX.

JACK went up to the hut to say good-bye; it was a sad business, for Molly clung to him tightly, sobbing bitterly, and for some time refusing to be comforted, though Jack assured her that she had not seen the last of him, and made Mrs. Ryan promise to bring the child to Chertson later on. His face was very grave and wistful when he joined Mrs. Feltham and Nora at the quay; and the former regarded him with a ludicrous mixture of affection and dismay, for Jack was still in his navy clothes and most unseemly clad as a companion for two such charmingly-attired ladies.

"Don't you think you'd better get a change of clothes, Jack, dear?" she said piteously.

"Oh, I'm sorry—beg pardon!" he responded, glancing at Nora penitently. "Not fit in this get-up to travel with two such swells as you. Better sit in front with the chauffeur."

"My dear, that would be worse," said Mrs. Feltham, desperately. "I don't see what you've got to laugh at, Nora! We should look as if we'd picked up a tramp. No, you'd better come inside. Thank goodness, it will be dark before we reach Chertson, and you must go in the back way and try not to be seen."

"Very well, Mabel," he assented meekly. "But, perhaps, after all, you two had better go on without me; I'll get a change in London and follow you next morning."

"Oh, no," said Mrs. Feltham, shaking her head decisively. "I don't mean to let you out of my sight until I've got you back to the Hall; you'd be fighting some one or getting into some scrape or other, or disappearing again."

Jack glanced at Nora, who said, with an air of assumed resignation and a shrug of her shoulders:

"I'm afraid there's no help for it, Mr. Chalton; and you will have to come with us."

"I'll sit as far away from you as I can," said Jack, as meekly as before; "though, mind you, it's quite clean dirt, mostly sand."

"Do you think I'm afraid?" said Nora, just a little indignantly. "You have forgotten that I've spent most

SHE COULD NOT STAND OR WORK

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health and Stopped Her Pains.

Portland, Ind.—"I had a displacement and suffered so badly from it that at times I could not be on my feet at all. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my household work, was nervous and could not sit down at night. I took a course of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the credit."

Thousands of American women give this famous root and herb remedy the credit for health restored as did Mrs. Kimble.

For helpful suggestions in regard to such ailments women are asked to write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

of my life with miners and amidst dirt that was sometimes anything but clean."

"They got into the car, mad, before they had been travelling half an hour Jack began to nod; then his head fell forward and he went fast asleep."

"He's weak and ill yet, poor dear!" whispered Mrs. Feltham.

Nora nodded and turned out the electric light; but her eyes dwelt on the sleeping man's face, haggard and worn, and with the ugly wound on the forehead. Presently she took a cushion from behind her and placed it softly behind Jack's head; he woke for an instant and murmured:

"Thanks, awfully, Mabel; that's jolly!"

Mrs. Feltham was about to say it was Nora who had paid him the little attention; but Nora pressed her arm and checked her. He slept for nearly the whole of the journey, and woke with a start and a half-articulate cry; he had been dreaming of Stephen Fleming. Nora had not allowed the car to be driven to the back, and Jack was received by the impassive Forbes and his satellites with obvious satisfaction and delight, and with not the least show of surprise at his attire. Mrs. Feltham took him straight to his room. He had a bath, got into his evening-clothes, and went down to the drawing-room, where Mrs. Feltham greeted him with a sigh of relief and contentment.

"Now I can really believe you've come back," she said. "But, oh, Jack, how pale and thin you are!"

"Just a little bit off colour, Mabel," he said lightly. "I shall be all right when you've fed me up for a day or two."

At this moment the door was opened wide enough, by Nora, to admit Jim; she herself did not enter, but closed the door again.

With yaps of delight and joy, Jim bounded on his master; and, for a minute or two, they were engrossed with each other.

"It's good to see you again, old man," said Jack, as he crushed Jim's head against his knee and looked into the fond eyes. "I hope you haven't missed me half as much as I have you, Jimmy. You're looking fit and fat, anyhow; we shall have to run some of that fat down, old chap. It's evident you've been well taken care of."

"He follows Nora like a shadow and goes with her everywhere," said Mrs. Feltham.

They went into the late meal which had been prepared for them hastily, and Jack gave them an amusing and interesting account of his experiences on the island; but, though they were both amused and interested, the two ladies seemed somewhat preoccupied. As the meal proceeded, Mrs. Feltham stole anxious and uneasy glances at Nora; and presently, after the servants had withdrawn, Mrs. Feltham said, with a little nervous cough:

"What about your letters, Jack? I suppose you haven't had them?"

"No," he said, easily. "Are there any?"

"Yes; they are at your rooms; Mr. Tredgate is taking care of them."

"Good old Jiggles!" said Jack affectionately. "I'll run up to-morrow and see him, and get them. I don't suppose there's anything particular."

"But there is," said poor Mrs. Feltham, piteously. "Oh, Jack, I didn't mean to tell you to-night, but I've got to; it's only right you should know at once."

Then, in broken sentences, she told him of the motor accident which had resulted in the death of his two cousins.

Jack sat quite still and silent for some time, his head resting on his hand, his eyes fixed on the cloth. Nora rose and left the two alone, now that her presence was no longer needed to encourage and uphold Mrs. Feltham in breaking the news.

"You will have to see Damerfeld at once," said Mrs. Feltham. "Of course, he is very anxious that you should go down to him. You see—you see, you come next, Jack."

Jack started slightly and, with a frown, regarded her with a kind of dismay.

"I'd forgotten that," he said; and he had. "I can scarcely believe it's true. Poor fellows! Poor old chap! Yes, I must go down."

"This will make a great difference to you, Jack," said Mrs. Feltham, in a low voice. "I know you're sorry enough; but—but—you will have to settle down now; there are great responsibilities—"

"I know, I know," he said, with a sigh; and he got up and paced the room. "Yes, it will make a great difference; so great that I shan't want this money of poor Chalton's. Surely Miss Norton will understand that, and will be—will be sensible? She and Ferndale must look at the thing from a common-sense point of view. Chalton meant leaving the money to her; I'm dead sure of that; there's his letter to prove it. Ferndale must be made to listen to reason. Why, I shouldn't be surprised if Miss Norton insisted upon breaking off the engagement now that this wretched lot has deprived her of the estate; and that mustn't be."

Mrs. Feltham raised her eyes and opened her lips as if about to speak; then looked down again and made no response.

"Don't you see the fix I'm in, Mabel? If I took the fortune from her, I should feel as if I'd come between them; and, dash it all, I couldn't stand that! Oh, confound it! something's got to be done; it's got to be managed somehow. And the worst of it is that I can't talk to her; I did say something on the island there, and she stared up. No, she didn't stare, but she turned to an iceberg in an instant and froze me to the marrow. You talk to her, Mabel, and—try to knock some sense into her."

"I will do what I can," said Mrs. Feltham, with her eyes still fixed on the cloth.

"How beautiful she is!" said Jack, after a pause, and still pacing up and down. "More beautiful than ever. But she looks—well, I don't know how to put it, but she doesn't look as if she were as happy as she should be."

"She is a little tired to-night, no doubt," said Mrs. Feltham, in a non-committal way; "you must remember all she has gone through this afternoon."

"Yes, yes; of course," said Jack; "but it's all over now; and it isn't only tired that she looks, but as if she were fretting about something. Oh, I can't describe it!"

"Perhaps she is fretting over the loss of her fortune," suggested Mrs. Feltham, with an assumed ingenuousness.

"Not she!" responded Jack, almost indignantly. "She is not that kind of girl; she cares nothing for money, and isn't afraid of poverty. No, I don't know what it is. Let's go in to her."

But when they got there, they were informed by Forbes that Miss Norton had retired for the night.

CHAPTER XXXI.

JACK started for Damerfeld by an early train the next morning. To his great disappointment, Miss Norton did not put in an appearance at breakfast, but sent down an apology by Mrs. Feltham.

"Nora had a bad night," she said, "and I have persuaded her to keep to her bed and try to get some sleep."

"Quite right," said Jack; but he glanced at Nora's empty chair rather wistfully. "Don't forget you promised to talk to her and persuade her to do the right thing, Mabel," he enjoined her, earnestly.

"I won't forget; I'll do my best," said Mrs. Feltham, avoiding his eyes. She insisted upon accompanying him to the station—it is more than probable owing to the desire not to

"Of course, you must go back, Jack," said his uncle, on the morning of Jack's departure; "but you will come again soon? I have only you left now, and I rely on you. Thank God, I've got you. You must not leave me too long, my boy; there is a great deal to be done here, and nothing can be done without you. I hope you will settle down," he went on, after a pause. "Of course, you must marry. I haven't spoken to you on the subject; I was waiting to hear if there was any one."

Jack shook his head. "No; there is no one, sir."

"I'm sorry," said the Earl, with a sigh; "but I hope there will be soon." Jack travelled to Chertson as fast as cross-country trains could take him. Forbes met him in the hall and greeted him with a subdued voice and a respectful and sympathetic glance at his black serge suit.

"I hope you found his lordship well, sir?"

Jack reached Damerfeld late in the afternoon, and there was a pathetic scene between him and the bereaved head of the family. The blow had fallen very heavily on the old man, and, naturally, he clung to Jack, for whom he had always had a liking, and upon whom he now relied with a pathetic completeness. Necessarily, they had to talk business, and, leaning on Jack's arm, the old Earl took him round the great place, pointing out the costly improvements which had been made and making suggestions for future ones. To Jack, perhaps, the most trying side of the affair was his uncle's unspoken but implied conviction that Jack would soon step into his place.

For the first few days Jack found his novel position somewhat painful and burdensome; but, before he left, he had become used to it and less irked by the sense of responsibility. He had written twice to Mabel, and had received lengthy replies from her; but, to Jack's disappointment and annoyance, she said nothing about her proposed talk to Nora, and in her last letter had not even mentioned Miss Norton's name.

"Of course, you must go back, Jack," said his uncle, on the morning of Jack's departure; "but you will come again soon? I have only you left now, and I rely on you. Thank God, I've got you. You must not leave me too long, my boy; there is a great deal to be done here, and nothing can be done without you. I hope you will settle down," he went on, after a pause. Are the Clergy too Young?

How can a boy of 23, snatched from his uncompleted college course with no experience of life and no knowledge of the human heart, be expected to be a sympathetic and capable guide, philosopher, and friend to his flock?

This question is asked in "Cameo Camps," by the Rev. W. Kingsland, but it is the kind of question everybody has wanted to ask years—not with regard to themselves, but with regard to experience he expected to go and be preached at by the inexperienced? Yet they can never be sure that there will not be a "Tommy" has already given his views on the subject in his own unimpeachable fashion. According to Mr. Kingsland "he seeks out some golly-wolly rather than the young paragon with gloves and cane, and pours his soul into experienced ears in the time of his need. . . . He doesn't want a shy, nervous, semi-officer; he wants a father—yes, and a mother."

More than the men go up the line. Regiments upon regiments at the beginning of the war had no padre at all; the officers had "no use" for padres. That is because they had "no use" for them at home. Men do not suddenly develop a habit for Church services. Youth in the pulpit was all very well in the days when people had little "learning," and the boys from college could teach them something. To what young people think is necessary education for older people—not in the form of sermons. Besides, this method of expressing themselves is bad for the young clergy, they get into the habit of thinking that their arguments are unanswerable, as indeed they are from the pulpit. And so they stop learning; there is no competition. If the sermon were given points for discussion the habit of the man who gave it would be to master. The congregation would be "chilled" and give him "food for thought." And they would have an opportunity of learning from each other. The young clergy know that they are "too young." Hear the boys who have taken up the sword in the middle of their clerical training. They are thankful for this experience of life, the chance of knowing other men, and of them realize that they had chosen their vocation too soon, and they will never go back to the Church, they are agreed that a man would be better to have another profession—to serve his apprenticeship to—before he attempts to show the way of life to other men. "What is use of a man telling you what you do not to do when he has not experienced similar temptations?"—that the verdict of a young officer in the line on his young padre.

The young clergyman might be forgiven if he could ever tell it well, but he is only practising. In no other line of life are people regularly put to positions they have to grow to. Let the preaching be done in private, if there must be preaching, in a

Obituary.

Wm. J. Clouston.

With much regret we chronicle the passing of one of our most well-known and widely respected citizens, Mr. William J. Clouston, who passed peacefully away yesterday at his home, Queen's Road, after a rather long illness.

JAMES BROPHY.

James Brophy, son of the late John and Margaret Brophy of this city, passed away at New Jersey, U.S.A., on Monday last, death resulting from a week's illness of Spanish Influenza.

MRS. MARY MURPHY.

There passed away Friday morning, at the advanced age of 85 years, an old and highly respected resident of St. John's in the person of Mrs. Mary Murphy, relict of the late Jas. Murphy.

MISTER MAN.

Do you want a good Suit of Clothes or Overcoat, made as good or better than you ever wore? If you do, give us your next order, and be one of our satisfied customers and help us to advertise our good work.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. Patrick Snow of Noad Street died on Tuesday last after a long illness of cancer. He leaves a widow and one son to mourn their loss.

It was indeed news to your correspondent that item in the Telegram that there were 42 cases of Spanish Influenza here. It may possibly be so, and it may be known to the doctors, but it is not known to be such by our citizens.

On the recommendation of the Board of Health the schools and picture shows will open on Monday. Is not that sufficient proof of the easy mind we have here of the epidemic of "flu" being present in this town.

The ladies of St. Paul's Church will hold their annual sale of work in their hall on Wednesday and Thursday, 13th and 14th. These sales by our church ladies are looked forward to as pleasant gatherings.

A missionary meeting will be held in the Methodist Church to-morrow (Sunday). Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, B.A., pastor of George Street Church, St. John's, will address the meeting.

Rev. F. S. Coffin, of St. Andrew's returned from his holiday to Charlottetown on Wednesday. All his numerous friends are pleased to see such an improvement in his health. Services will be held in St. Andrew's Church to-morrow as usual.

The Shipbuilding Co. are rushing their work night and day, getting ready to launch another big ship.

Mr. James Bradbury, of St. John's, was in town for a couple of days this week.

A baby girl was born to Captain Thomas and Mrs. Dunn on Monday. CORRESPONDENT. Hr. Grace, Nov. 9, 1918.

Peace!

The war is over. It has ended in the only manner in which it could end, in which the Allies would permit it to end—in the consummation of the vows solemnly taken by them in the terrible days of its beginning, in the overwhelming victory of their arms, the complete triumph of their righteous cause.

For there are millions whose eyes indeed that light will overpower for a time. The end of so much and so heroic suffering cannot be felt and understood at once. He would be inspired indeed who could express the least of the thoughts and feelings that possess men's minds and hearts at this moment.

We here in this Dominion, one in that great Empire whose part in the struggle is being at last understood and acclaimed by its generous rivals, can rightly take our share of pride in the glory of its achievements, in the tale that unfolds itself to our eyes in retrospect of the four long years of war.

EMPEROR WILLIAM SIGNED A LETTER OF ABDIICATION. LONDON, NOV. 10. Emperor William signed a letter of abdiication on Saturday morning at the German Headquarters, in the presence of Crown Prince Frederick, William Field Marshal Hindenburg, the Crown Prince signed his resignation to the throne shortly afterwards. Before placing his signature on the document an urgent message to Philip Scheidmann, who was a member without portfolio in the Imperial Cabinet, was handed to Emperor. He read it with a shiver and he signed the paper, saying, 'I pray for the good of Germany.' The Emperor was deeply moved. He consented to sign the document only when he got the latest news of events in the Empire. It is reported that King Ludwig, of Bavaria, King Frederick Augustus, of Saxony, also have abdicated. The Crown Prince and the former Crown Prince are expected to take leave of their troops on Saturday, but nothing has been settled regarding their future movements.

Emperor William signed a letter of abdication on Saturday morning at the Crown Prince's Palace. The Emperor signed his resignation to the throne shortly after 11 o'clock. Before placing his signature on the document an urgent message from Philip Scheidmann, who was a member without portfolio in the Imperial Cabinet, was handed to the Emperor. He read it with a shiver and signed the paper, saying, "I am glad for the good of Germany." The Emperor was deeply shocked. He consented to sign the document only when he got the latest news of events in the Empire. It is reported that King Ludwig, of Bavaria, King Frederick Augustus, of Saxony, and the former Crown Prince, Prince Rupprecht, were expected to sign the document on Saturday, but nothing has been settled regarding their future positions.

PRINCE MAX IS REGENT.
AMSTERDAM, NOV. 9.

Prince Maximilian, of Baden, has been appointed regent of the Empire, Berlin newspapers have semi-officially announced.

KAISER REMAINS IN OFFICE UNTIL AFFAIRS ARE SETTLED.
LONDON, NOV. 9.

The Imperial Chancellor will remain in office until the questions concerning the abdication of the Kaiser and the renouncing of the Crown Prince of the throne of the German Empire, and of Prussia, and the setting up of a regency, have been settled. Deputy Ebert as Imperial Chancellor, and he proposes that a committee be brought in for the establishment of a law providing for the abdication of the Kaiser and the setting up of a regency, which will settle, finally, the form of government of the German nation and of those people who might be desirous of coming within the Empire. Deputy Ebert, according to the German wireless, is to be appointed Imperial Chancellor, and Friedrich Ebert, Vice-Chancellor of the Reichstag.

EMPEROR'S LEADER AS CANCELLOR.
COPENHAGEN, NOV. 10.

Deputy Ebert, the Socialist leader, has been appointed Imperial Chancellor. He has issued a proclamation to-morrow at 2:30 p.m. from his residence, 47 Patrick Street.

won, begged support in the hard work ahead, and appealed for co-operation in the country and cities in the problem of provisioning. He also stated that Prince Maximilian of Baden, had transferred the Chancellorship to him. All the Secretaries of State bowing their consent, the new government would act in agreement with the various parties.

WILL NOT SHOOT PEOPLE.
BERLIN, NOV. 10.

(German wireless.)—The text of the statement issued by the People's Government reads: "In the course of the forenoon of Saturday, the formation of a new German People's Government was initiated, the greater part of the Berlin garrison and other troops stationed there temporarily went over to the new government. The leaders of the deputations of the Social Democratic Party declared that they would not shoot against the people. They said they would in accord with the people's government intercede in favor of the maintenance of order. Thereupon in the offices and public buildings the guards which had been stationed there was withdrawn."

TO GERMANS ABROAD.
LONDON, NOV. 9.

(British wireless service.)—Just before Prince Maximilian of Baden offered his resignation as Imperial Chancellor, he issued an appeal "to Germans abroad," in which he said: "In these difficult days the hearts of many among you, my fellow-countrymen, who outside the frontier of the German Fatherland are surrounded by manifestations of malicious joy and hatred, will be heavy. Do not despair of the German people. Our soldiers have fought to the last moment as heroically as any army has ever done. The homeland has shown unprecedented strength in suffering and endurance. In the fifth year, abandoned by its allies, the German people could no longer wage war against the increasing superior forces. The victory for which many had hoped has not been granted us, but the German people has won the still greater victory over itself and its belief in the right of might. From this victory we shall draw new strength for the hard time which comes us and on which you also can build."

VICTORY FOR PEOPLE.
BERLIN, NOV. 9.

(Berlin Wireless.)—Deputy Scheidmann, leader of the Majority Socialists in the Reichstag, in a speech, said the Kaiser and the Crown Prince have abdicated and the dynasty has been overthrown. It is a splendid victory for the German people. Herr Ebert has been charged with the formation of a new government, in which all shades of the Social Democratic Party are to participate. Only decreases from the corps of officers of the Imperial Guard, the Social Democrat acting assistant, are official. Deputy Scheidmann exhorted the crowd to keep calm and avoid incidents. Deputy Von Tharr and some soldiers spoke from a motor lorry. A delegate from the corps of officers of the Imperial Guard announced that the officers were on the side of the people. Stormy applause and jubilation accompanied the speeches.

SOME FIGHTING IN BERLIN.
LONDON, NOV. 10.

Some fighting took place in Berlin between six and eight o'clock last night, and a violent cannonade was heard from the heart of the city. The revolution is in full swing in Berlin, and the Red forces occupy the greater part of the German capital. Many persons were killed and wounded before the officers surrendered. The Red forces are in control and have restored order. Strong Guards are marching through the streets. The Crown Prince's Palace has been seized by the revolutionists. The people are shouting, "Long live the Republic," and are singing "The Marseillaise." When revolutionary soldiers attempted to enter a building in which they supposed a number of officers were concealed, shots were fired from the windows. The Reds then began shelling the building. When the cannonade began, the people thought the Reichstag was being bombed and thousands rushed to the square in front of the Crown Prince's Palace. It was later determined that other buildings were under fire.

ALSO REJOICING.
COPENHAGEN, NOV. 10.

News of Emperor William's abdication was received on Saturday afternoon at Berlin with general rejoicing, which was tempered by the fear that it had come too late.

ONLY ONE CLASH IN BERLIN.
BERLIN, NOV. 10.

With regard to the incidents of Nov. 9th in Berlin, the semi-official Telegraph Bureau, working under the control of the Workers' and Soldiers' Council, issues the following report: "This morning at 9 o'clock the workers of the greatest industrial undertakings commenced a general strike. Red flags were carried at the head of the procession, in which marched armed soldiers and all classes. The procession arrived from the Ackerstrasse and Brunnenstrasse. As a preliminary the soldiers and officers were urged to remove their cockades and epaulettes. In the majority of cases this took place voluntarily. There was general fraternizing of soldiers and workmen. The workmen penetrated the barracks, where they received an enthusiastic reception from the soldiers. The military occupants of factories mingled in common with the workers, left the works, and treated with them in common. So far as is known the only clash between the masses and armed forces took place on the occupation of the so-called Cockschafer barracks. In that was a guard of Fusiliers. Two officers fired, three persons were killed and one was injured. This is to be regretted. The taking possession of a majority of the public buildings and establishments was completed without difficulty once it was clear that the military had come over to the people.

BAVARIAN PROCLAMATION.
AMSTERDAM, NOV. 9.

The proclamation issued at Munich in behalf of the Council of Workers, Soldiers and Peasants, which constituted itself into a Diet announcing a republic had been formed in Bavaria, declared that the Democratic and Socialist Republic of Bavaria has the strength to realize peace for Germany, preserving that country from the worst. The proclamation, after promising a constituent assembly to be elected by all adult men and women, says that Bavaria will make Germany ready for a League of Nations. It then continued: "The present revolution is needed to complete the self-government of the people before enemy armies stream across our country or before the troops should, after the armistice, bring about chaos. Soldiers in barracks will govern themselves by means of Soldiers' Councils. Officers acquiescing in the altered situation will not be hindered in their duties. We reckon on the co-operation of the entire population. All officials will remain at their posts. Fundamental social and political reforms will immediately commence."

"WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH THE KAISER?"
WASHINGTON, NOV. 10.

William Hohenzollern has arrived in Holland, and is proceeding to the town of Deestee, near Utrecht, according to a despatch received by the American general staff to-day from the Hague. The message said, "Press reports state that the Kaiser arrived this morning in Maastricht, Holland, and is proceeding to Middachten Castle, in the town of Deestee near Utrecht."

Deestee is on the Guelders Yssel, an arm of the Rhine river about forty miles east of Utrecht and twelve miles from the German border. The chateau Middachten, to which the former emperor is reported to be proceeding, belongs to Count William Frederick Charles Henry Von Bentinck. He is a member of the Prussian Guards and before the war was attaché of the Embassy in London and a member of the English Turf and Royal Automobile Club. He is 33 years old. He belongs to the famous Anglo-Dutch-German house of Bentinck, the continental branch of the family of the Duke of Portland. Middachten Castle dates back to the year 1697.

LITTLE WILLIE ALSO.
LONDON, NOV. 10.

Both the former German Emperor and his oldest son, Frierick William crossed the Dutch frontier Sunday morning, according to advices from the Hague.

SON-IN-LAW FOLLOWS SUIT.
LONDON, NOV. 9.

(British Wireless Service.)—A telegram received from Copenhagen in way of Berlin asserts that Emperor William's son-in-law, the Duke of Brunswick, and his successor has followed suit.

MINISTERS RESIGN.
LONDON, NOV. 9.

(British Wireless Service.)—The resignations of the German Ministers of the Interior, Instruction, Agriculture and Finance, are reported in a telegram from Berlin. The Prussian Food Controller again has refused to be relieved from office, and the resignation of the Prussian Minister of Public Works has been in the hands of the Cabinet for some time.

WAR MINISTRY AT EBERT'S DISPOSAL.
COPENHAGEN, NOV. 10.

It is officially announced from Berlin that the War Ministry has placed itself at the disposal of Friedrich Ebert, the Socialist leader. This action was for the purpose of securing the provisioning of the army and assisting in the solution of the demobilization problems.

THE ISSUE IS SETTLED.
LONDON, NOV. 9.

(British Wireless Service.)—Premier Lloyd George and Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, were the speakers to-night at a banquet which followed the Lord Mayor's victory show. "I have no news for you," said the Premier to the banqueters who were expecting an announcement from him regarding the passing of an armistice with Germany "owing to the rapid and triumphant advance of the Allied troops and to their relentless pursuit, the German envoys have not been able to get through and other means have had to be devised to enable them to cross the lines. Owing to these circumstances I have nothing to say to you this evening as to the result of the armistice negotiations. But for all that it does not matter. The issue is settled. In the spring we were being sorely pressed, the Channel ports were being threatened, and the steel of the enemy was pointed at our hearts. It is now autumn, the capital of Turkey is now almost within gunfire of our ships. Austria is shattered and broken, the Kaiser and the Crown Prince have abdicated. Prince Max's decree said that the Kaiser had decided to abdicate. A successor has not been found and a regency has been proclaimed. This is judgment day, the greatest judgment in the world. Germany, said the Premier, has choice to-day, but will have none to-morrow. She has been ruined inside and outside. An army and armament formidable created are now hardly an army or an armament at all. Abdication was only part of the way. The great general staff Germany mobilized to frighten us is reaching its natural end at a moment when it is faced by ruin and can get only by immediate surrender. Germany may continue to increase the volume of suffering she has already caused, she may possibly resist a little longer, but the longer she resists the more quickly will her cities become as the fair lands east has wantonly devastated. There are just terms that will prevent such wantonness again. We will do no wrong if we abandon no right. We have no designs on the German people, but we mean to secure beyond all doubt the freedom of our own people. The recklessness that placed the world in such awful agony must expect stern reckoning. When the conditions were considered all the representative parts of the Empire were consulted. Four years we have had a great brotherhood of suffering, we are now going to have a great brotherhood of joy. The next few years are charged with fate for Britain and the Empire. Let us banish all factions and lift up this country to a position it never held before. Let the British empire keep its head and all will be right with the world."

POLISH REPUBLIC FORMED.
AMSTERDAM, NOV. 9.

A message from Cracow announces the formation of a Polish republic under the Presidency of Deputy Daszynski.

ALLIES REACH SARAJEVO.
SALONIKI, NOV. 9.

Allied troops have entered Sarajevo, in Bosnia, according to an official statement issued to-day by the French headquarters here. It was at Sarajevo that Archduke Francis Ferdinand, of Austria, was assassinated just prior to the outbreak of the great war.

SOCIALISTS IN CONTROL.
LONDON, NOV. 10.

In the new German government there will be only three representatives for the majority parties, namely, Erzberger, Gothien and Richthofen, says a despatch from Copenhagen to the Exchange Telegraph Co. The other posts will be occupied by Socialists and Independents.

A PAN-GERMAN.
PARIS, NOV. 10.

The Temps to-day concludes a sketch of Friedrich Ebert the new German Chancellor, as follows: "He shares the ruling passions of the German. He is a type of pan-German Socialist not to say an Imperialist."

ANOTHER PROCLAMATION.
COPENHAGEN, NOV. 10.

The new Berlin government according to a Wolf Bureau has issued the following proclamation: "Fellow citizens, this day the people's deliverance has been fulfilled. The Social Democratic Party has undertaken to form a government. It has invited the Independent Socialist Party to enter the Government with equal rights."

NEWSPAPERMAN HEADS REVOLUTION.
PARIS, NOV. 9.

Kurt Eisner, a Munich newspaper man and prominent in Socialist circles, is the leader of the revolution which has broken out in the Bavarian capital. It appears from information received here. Some representatives designate him as President of the Bavarian republic which has been proclaimed.

AMERICANS ATTACK IN LORRAINE.
WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, NOV. 10.

(By the A. P.)—The second American army this morning launched its initial attack in Lorraine. Its objectives were limited. The villages of St. Hilaire and Marcheville were captured, as also were a number of woods. (Continued from 7th page.)

An Experiment in Character Reading.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

How beautiful the line of his profile was, tracing a line of inheritance from some ancestor who mysteriously could not transmit also the emotions that must have been at some time behind the dignified exterior. Yet Abial had done things to his face since he had had the moulding of it. He had shut his mouth to a line of repression and he had invited a glint of suspicion into his eyes.

I copied that out of one of Alice Brown's books because I loved it so. It puts into more vivid words than I ever could have found, a feeling I have long had about the things we do to our faces.

I think everyone ought to look in the glass at least once a year and ask himself: "What have I done to my face since I have had the moulding of it? Have I been etching any new lines into it in the past year?"

Try it some day.

Look Closely At That Familiar Yet Unfamiliar Face.

Try to look at that face before you, as if it were another's. You have often essayed to read character in the faces you see on the trolley or the street; try to read the character in this face that looks out at you from the mirror.

Are there lines of sensuality about the mouth?

Is there a nervous frown settling itself between the brows?

Is there any touch of that hardness which too great concentration on the thoughts of money and success is sure to bring?

What Lines Are You Etching In It? Are there, as in Abial's, lines of repression about the mouth, or a glint of suspicion in the eyes.

Or has the will to be more just and kind and unselfish every year, stamped its fine imprint upon your face?

Has strengthening character given a certain purposefulness to the features a certain fine poise to the head?

These are all questions, you remember, that someone else could answer better than the one who is looking at that face in the glass.

Why Not Make It To-Morrow? Perhaps, I am not so sure. But

British War Pictorial.

The second of the new series of the British War Pictorials has reached us, and having perused same we find it every bit as interesting and readable as the first. Not the least interesting war cartoon which appears on the first page of each issue. These cartoons which are drawn by the most eminent cartoonists of Great Britain, clearly illustrate some one or other aspect of the world war, and so, when the war has been long forgotten, the issues will provide a valuable record of the greatest and bloodiest conflict of the sons of the earth have ever engaged in. The cuts are even more interesting in this issue than in the last, and one is led to wonder how they are obtained. The literary matter, too, is of a high standard, many well known writers having contrived splendid articles and stories. The British War Pictorial sells for 15 cents, is now published monthly, and the Canadian agents are Gordon & Gotch, 135 Bay St., Toronto.

WHAT SHALL THEY READ ABOUT US? We are reading of them every day, and we're proud of the news that comes in.

They're there in the thick of the fray and they're full of the spirit to win. They're doing the best that they can with never a whimper or fuss. Are we with them to-day, man to man?

What is it they read about us? They're getting the papers, out there, in dangerous places and queer. They learn if we're doing our share. They know what is going on here. As we sit here and read about them And around their courage discuss. They praise us for our loyalty and manly conduct.

We know that they're licking the Hun. We know they are loyal and true. We've read of the deeds they have done. We shall read of the deeds they shall do. They shall do the papers from home. To find if we're minus or plus; The news of our failures shall roam. Our soldiers shall read about us.

Shall they come from the heat of the fight. To read that we're stuck for more pay? Shall they find by a candle's dull light We're the cause of the battle's delay? Shall they fling down the paper and sneer And liken us all to the Russ That holds nothing but self-interest dear?

What is it they'll read about us? They are giving us glories to read. They are writing proud stories to tell. Are we standing by them in their need? Are we serving our soldiers as well? Our conduct we never can hide; It is something in France they discuss. And it's our every day to decide The news they shall read about us.

For Sore Throat, Hoarseness, etc., a good supply of Throat Pastilles and Lozenges at STAFFORD'S.—Oct 14, 17

Press Opinion.

A MAGNIFICENT EPITAPH.

London Truth: Nothing finer has come out of this war than this line from an epitaph in a British graveyard in France: "For your to-morrow they gave their to-day."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Toronto Globe: The name of the Canadian soldier who escaped from Germany on the seventh attempt and walked 200 miles to gain freedom. It was A. Corker. The name fits.

AN EXPLODED MYTH.

London Daily Mail: The last four years have been hard on supermen. The carefully cultivated myth of German superiority, which gained adherents easily when nobody was particularly interested in examining and exposing it, has been blown sky high through the efforts of men who were compelled by necessity to exert all their power. It can never be restored.

STERN AND RETRIBUTIVE JUSTICE.

Chicago Tribune: The president has solemnly declared for a peace of justice. The Americans are absolutely at one with him on this also. But the peace of justice is a stern justice and the German people must abide its decisions. What they have sown under false leadership to which they consented themselves and their fortunes, they must now reap.

THOSE PAPER VICTORIES.

London Daily Chronicle: Turkey's comic communique on the Palestine debacle, almost sound like victories, but there is an instance in history where a winning General fled the field. This hero was Frederick the Great. So badly were things going for the Prussians during the battle of Mollwitz that the King decided to escape before his army was routed. Marshal Schwerin, however, pulled the halts around, and the Austrians were ultimately defeated. Thus, the great Hohenzollern, twenty miles away, gained his first victory with his back to the foe.

RAW MATERIALS OF WAR.

New York Herald: The chain of Hindenburg's reasoning ran this way:—"Without the colonies, there is no assurance of the supply of raw materials; without raw materials there can be no industry and without industry there can be no prosperity." What he really means by "raw materials" is "naval bases," exactly as Von Reventlow, the impudent, meant, by "freedom of the sea" the possession of outlying stations from which at the outbreak of the war Germany could command the sea and control the trade routes and commerce of the world.

TEACHING THE HUN.

Philadelphia Record: Germany never did a generous thing. Germany never spared a prostrate foe, except that it was a part of Bismarck's policy not to humiliate Austria beyond the point at which she could be utilized. The Allies are not restrained now by any similar consideration in the case of Germany, for they have no use for it. Germany will get about as much consideration, now that she is conquered, as she gave to Denmark and France when she was victorious. One of the results of this war will be to disabuse Germans of the idea that they are in a class by themselves. For years Germany has been telling what she would do to all other nations when she had conquered them—and now they have conquered her.

DISILLUSIONMENT.

(Detroit News.)
It is rumored by cable that the Kaiser is suffering from melancholia. It must be quite a shock for a fellow to

Imagines he owns the earth only to wake up and learn that they don't even want him on it.

HIS REPLY.

(Kingston Whig.)
"What boat brought you over?" was asked an American prisoner in Germany. The prompt reply came: "The Lusitania." And it was the Lusitania that brought to Europe the whole American army. The Hun idea of frightfulness has had terrible consequences—for the Hun.

SCRIPTURAL.

(Morning Chronicle)
If thine enemy hunger, feed him, in an injunction which has not been in conformity with the practices of war, but in deciding to feed the starving people in Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria, the Allies are not only acting humanely: They may be adopting a line of policy which will make a powerful appeal to the furnishing people of Germany.

NOT FIT TO SIT AT TABLE.

(Brantford Expositor.)
Is Germany fit to sit on terms of equality at a peace table with any of the civilized nations of the world—a nation that violates every law of both God and man and encourages among her soldiers, arson, murder, rapine, and the most inhuman practices of all kinds against women, children and weaker peoples? Germany is not penitent. She is the same ruthless barbarian in defeat and disaster as she was at the height of her military triumph.

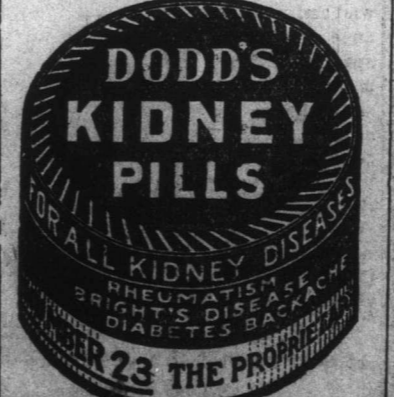

THE GENTLE GERMAN WOMEN.

When your boy was wounded and had his arm taken off it was not the Kaiser who, when your boy cried for a drink of water, handed him a drink of water and then took it away from him before he could drink it. It was a German woman! When the other American boy had his leg amputated and asked for water it was not the Kaiser who came and split in his face. It was a German woman!

We want to quit this pious twaddle about loving the sinner and hating the sin. I am sure there is absolute antagonism on the part of God to every tendency and purpose which would enslave mankind. This war is to determine the government of God in the world, and it is as interesting to God as was the suffering of Jesus Christ in the world. There is no room in the world for God and injustice. America is not going to regard the peace negotiations as a problem for diplomats, but as a moral question, and we don't purpose to appear at the council table as attorney for Germany.

Parcel Post for Nfld. Expeditionary Forces!

The attention of the public is drawn to the very urgent necessity of strictly observing the regulations published by this Department from time to time concerning the despatch of parcels to members of the Regiment overseas and the following particulars should be strictly observed:

- Parcels must not exceed eleven pounds.
- Parcels should be addressed with the Regimental number, rank, name and surname of addressee, followed by the last known address of the Unit with which the individual was serving; for example:
 No. 0978 Cpl. John J. Kent,
 2nd Battalion
 The Royal Newfoundland Regt.,
 Hazley Down Camp,
 Winchester,
 Hant's Camp,
 England.
- Parcels should bear the name and address of a second addressee to whom the parcel may be delivered or forwarded, if it should prove impossible to deliver to the first. The Original address should be written on the FRONT of the parcel where the postage stamps and customs declaration are affixed, and the second or alternative address should be written on the BACK of the parcel.
- If second address is not furnished at the time of posting and delivery cannot be effected, the contents of the parcel, unless of exceptional value or of a personal nature, will be turned over to the Military Authorities for distribution.
- Parcels containing articles of personal nature or of special value will be returned if request for their return, in case of non-delivery, is made by the sender, such request to be written on the cover of the parcel at the time of posting.
- The procedure outlined in (4) and (5) is adopted at the suggestion of the British Post Office, to prevent the waste of a large quantity of perishable food stuffs which form the contents of 90 per cent. of parcels sent to soldiers.
- Parcels should be packed securely.
- Attention is drawn to the Notice concerning Christmas parcels recently published by the Postmaster General. All Christmas mail for E. F. F. should be posted in time to arrive at the Pay and Record Office, London, not later than the end of November.

The Week's War

While the German Government is considering the armistice agreement, the armies of both sides are hotly engaged on the Western Front. Only on the Italian front is there a cessation of hostilities, the armistice with the Austrians being carried out according to the provisions.

Mighty blows are being struck at the German armies by the British, French, Americans and Belgians, their effect being to still further weaken and dishearten the enemy. Everywhere success is being reported and more invaded territory is being reclaimed, with thousands of German soldiers captured, and best of all thousands of rejoicing people liberated from the bondage of the oppressors.

Since the beginning of the Allied offensive, July 18, on the Western Front alone, no less than 400,000 prisoners have been taken, and the gain in war materials, comprise 5,217 cannon, 40,000 machine guns and 4,000 mine throwers. During October alone 108,000 prisoners and 17,000 machine and other guns fell into the Allied hands, the British taking the greater number.

The principal feature of the past week from a military point of view, was the capture of Sedan by the Americans. Thus they have paid their debt to Lafayette. The name Sedan brought hateful memories to the French whenever its name was spoken, for it was here during the Franco-Prussian war that the Emperor, Napoleon III. surrendered to the Germans, with 23,000 men. Some little consolation will be afforded our gallant Allies in the knowledge that once more the tri-color has been raised over the city, but their regret will be that they had not been in at the taking. With the fall of Sedan the German armies in the sector between Metz and Verdun are forced still further into the bottle-neck, the way out of which is between Luxembourg and Metz. With the Americans in possession of St. Mihiel, the left wing of the German army in retreat by this route would be seriously threatened, while to the north by way of Montmedy and Areluis, the forest of Ardennes would prove an insuperable obstacle. The fall of Tournai to the British, in the latter part of the week, imperils the Hungarians, and the recent capture of Maubeuge will have the effect of pushing them back, to rally on Mons, if they decide to make a stand. Should they continue retreating, and leave Mons to its fate, their line must take a course, through another bottle-neck, with its narrow part between Liege and Dinant, Aix-la-Chapelle being the outlet.

The cool effrontery of the Germans in proposing a suspension of hostilities, during the course of the armistice negotiations, is only equalled by the reason for the request—"In the interests of humanity." Precious little the Hun cares for humanity in the days of his successes, but Hun-like he squeals when made feel the pinch of submission. The request, made by the notorious Erzberger, was promptly refused by Marshal Foch, who is well acquainted with the wily German, and will give him no opportunity to take advantage of courtesy. Hostilities will continue and the German give-up on no terms until the higher powers of Prussia consent to sign the agreement. The alternative is armistice or invasion—not evasion, and by this time, we doubt not that the Germans understand this thoroughly.

The peaceful forcing of the Dardanelles, as the result of Turkey's surrender, has been accomplished, and on Saturday the Allied fleets anchored off Constantinople. No such array of warships was ever seen on the waters of the Black Sea. The Allied squadrons of the Crimean war when Turkey was associated with Britain and France against Russia, could not compare in majesty with the dreadnoughts and battle cruisers, which make up a modern fleet. As a spectacle of sea power the foregathering of the naval units in the Golden Horn will be most impressive, and doubtless the Turk will realize that his surrender did not come a moment too soon.

The talk of constitutional government for Germany, reminds us that a few weeks before Waterloo, the then King of Prussia, Frederick William III. definitely promised the people a popular form of government. But after Waterloo had been won, this promise was forgotten. Might the present promise of the Kaiser be not made of similar cloth?

Multitudes of cabled stories have been sent from Germany descriptive of political unrest and revolution in that country, the latest being a mutiny in the navy, with the greater part of the fleet in the hands of the revolting sailors. It would be a piece of wisdom, not to place too much reliance on these, probably inspired, despatches. That there is some unrest is unquestionable, but much of it possibly finds its expression in mob oratory, (for there are numerous demonstrations in Berlin and other towns) and sentences with the police. Germany still has great belief in the strength of her armies, and hopes that, notwithstanding recent events, that something may yet be accomplished by means of it.

GERMANS RETIRING IN DISORDER.
 WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 10.—Disorder is beginning to show in the ranks of the retreating German army. French troops with the cavalry in the lead are pressing the enemy closely all along the line. The booty increases in importance as the pursuit goes on. Several railroad trains, batteries of artillery intact, immense ammunition dumps and stores and wagon trains fell into the hands of the Allied troops yesterday and to-day together with a large number of prisoners. The pursuit of the enemy is being rendered extremely difficult by reason of the shortening front which necessitates the withdrawal of material rendered useless on the diminished line and the doubling of traffic on roads already congested by the convoys following the advancing troops. French territory occupied by the enemy along the Belgian frontier is diminishing rapidly in size. Everywhere the French are now within a short day's march of the border line and could complete the liberation of French soil in the north before the end of a day if the roads were not becoming more and more encumbered by the increasingly intense traffic and by the booty left behind by the enemy. At this hour it appears that it will be a close race between the final crossing of the Belgian frontier all along the line and final action on the armistice proposals.

AUSTRIANS SWARMING HOME.
 INNSBRUCK, Austria, Nov. 9.
 Bavarian troops have occupied the railroad station here. Austrian troops are returning from the former front in swarms, clinging to the cars wherever they can get a hold.  ROME, Nov. 9.
 A wireless message signed by the commander-in-chief of the Italian navy says that the naval clauses in the Austro-Hungarian armistice treaty (the time of which elapsed Friday) have not all been complied with. This announcement is made in an official statement issued to-day which declares: "Information has not been supplied as to the location and movement of Austro-Hungarian ships, the part of the navy agreed on and the Allied merchant ships have not been surrendered. These facts constitute a breach of the solemn stipulation of the armistice convention."

ARMISTICE TERMS.
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 11. The announcement of the close of the war was made verbally by an official of the State Department at 2.50 this morning in this form: "The armistice has been signed. It was signed at five o'clock a.m., Paris time, and hostilities will cease at 11 o'clock this morning, Paris time. The terms of the armistice, it was announced, will not be made public until later. Military men here, however, regard it as certain that they include immediate retirement of the German military forces from France, Belgium, and Alsace-Lorraine; disarmament and demobilization of the German army; occupation by the Allied and American forces of such strategic points in Germany as will make impossible a renewal of hostilities; delivery of the German high seas fleet and a certain number of submarines to the Allied and American naval forces; disarmament of all other German warships under supervision of the Allied and American navies, which will guard them; occupation of the principal German naval bases by sea forces of the victorious nations; and release of Allied and American soldiers, sailors and civilians held prisoners in Germany without such reciprocal action by the Associated Governments."

THE COURIER'S JOURNEY.
 LONDON, Nov. 10. The German courier bearing the text of the armistice conditions arrived at German headquarters at ten o'clock this morning, according to the official announcement from Paris. The courier, Captain Hellorf, was delayed long while the German batteries persisted in bombarding the route he had to follow. On Saturday morning the German delegates suggested that the courier's mission might be attempted by airplane. The French high command saw no objection to this and offered to furnish a machine on condition that the German high command pledge itself that the airplane would not be fired at. A radio message was sent to German headquarters which was replied to without delay as follows: "We grant free passage to the French airplane bringing our courier. We are issuing orders that it shall not be attacked by any of our machines. For the purpose of recognition it shall carry two white flags clearly marked." The orders from the German headquarters staff, however, were operative as regarded the land batteries for on Lacapelle Road the enemy's fire, despite reiterated requests to desist, went on without intermission. A French airplane, piloted by an officer of the French air service, was available and the pilot was ordered to hold himself ready to start on his journey. About that time a message came from general headquarters announcing that orders for the cessation of fire had been given to the batteries directed against Lacapelle Road and that Captain Hellorf was at liberty to start by automobile. Almost immediately the German fire ceased and the courier set out on the road for Spa. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, German headquarters was notified of his departure and informed that he might be expected to arrive in the evening. But the road was long and hard and many delays occurred.

THE NEW ORDER.
 AMSTERDAM, Nov. 10. The workers and Soldiers' Council, in a proclamation to the people of Schleswig-Holstein, says a provisional Government is being formed which will cooperate with the existing authorities in re-establishing a new order, our aim is a free social people's republic. The main task is to secure peace. Questions beyond the limit of the Provisional Administration still belong to the Dominion of the State and Imperial legislatures. We are willing to co-operate with the present officials so far as they submit to the new course. We are resolved to put down any resistance with the forces at our disposal. Industrial districts have been established in the various cities under the same general plan.

BRITISH ADVANCE.
 LONDON, Nov. 10. The British have crossed the Franco-Belgian frontier, south of the Sambre river, Field Marshal Haig reports from Headquarters at night. They have advanced four miles east of Renais, bringing them almost within rifle range of Brussels. Day progresses calmly against somewhat increased resistance from the enemy's rear-guards. North of Mons-Condé Canal our troops have taken Leuze, and our cavalry is approaching Ath. We have progressed four miles east of Renais.

REVOLUTION IN GERMANY.
 LONDON, Nov. 10. According to despatches from Amsterdam and Copenhagen, the revolution in Germany is extending rapidly, but in most places the desired effect is being achieved without violence or serious disorders. In some places, notably in Anhalt, Hesse-Darmstadt and Mecklenburg-Schwerin, the princely houses are co-operating with the reforming parties in establishing a new order of things. Up to the present the most serious conflict has taken place in Kiel. The Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils in most of the large cities appear to be devoting their first efforts to organizing the food supply, foreseeing that any lack of provision in this respect will prove a fruitful source of disorder. Complaints already have been heard in Berlin that the press censorship is being exercised as arbitrarily by the new as by the old regime.

EBERT'S PROCLAMATION.
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. Friedrich Ebert, upon assuming office yesterday as Chancellor of Germany, issued a proclamation announcing that the new government at Berlin had taken charge of business to prevent civil war and famine. In a manifesto addressed to the citizens of Germany the Chancellor said he was going to form a people's government to bring about peace "as quickly as possible" and to confirm the liberty which the government had gained. The text of the proclamation and the manifesto were sent out by the German wireless station at Nauzen and picked up to-day by naval radio stations in this country. In making them public the State Department said it would (not) vouch for the accuracy of the facts presented. The proclamation said: "New government has taken charge of business in order to preserve the German people from civil war and famine and in order to enforce its just claims of self-determination. This task can only be accomplished if all authorities in all civil offices in towns and landed districts lend it a helpful hand. I know it will be hard for many to cooperate with the new men who now have to lead and carry on the business of the empire, but I appeal to their love for our people. If the organization of public life stops in this serious hour, then Germany would be prey to anarchy and most terrible misery. Therefore, lend, together with me, your help to our country by continuing work in the festive and unrelenting manner, everybody in his position until the hour has come that relieves us of our duty." The text of the manifesto follows: "Citizens, former Chancellor Maximilian of Baden, with the assent of all the Secretaries, has charged me to carry on the business of Chancellor. I am going to form a new government with the support of the majority parties in the Reichstag, and shall report with but brief delay, about the results to the public. The new government will be a government of the people. Its endeavour must be to bring to the people peace as quickly as possible and to confirm the liberty which it has gained. Citizens! I ask for the assistance of you all in the heavy task which awaits us. You know how seriously war threatened the approximation of the people, which is the first condition of political life. Political revolution ought not to disturb the approximation of land districts, nor to distress production of food nor its transportation into towns but to foster it. Scarcity of food means looting and plundering, with misery for all. The poorest would suffer in the most heavy fashion. Workmen in hundreds would be hit most severely. Whoever takes away food or other objects of necessity or means of transportation necessary for their distribution commits the heaviest sin against all. Citizens, I urge you all to leave the streets and provide for quiet and order. (Signed) EBERT."

REBELLION BLOODLESS.
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. Red revolution in Germany, upon the heels of the abdication and flight of the Kaiser, apparently is accomplishing the unexpected by throwing the country into the hands of workmen and soldiers' regiments. Without breaking the thread of government or impairing the credentials of the armistice envoys waiting within the Allied lines. The Allied forces or more severe conditions which may be expected if the victorious armies have to wait for the surrender of individual units of the beaten German forces, will place the future behaviour of Germany at the dictation of the Associated powers, regardless of what form of Provisional Government may hold the reins at Berlin.

NO DETAILS YET.
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 11. There was no information as to the circumstances under which the armistice was signed, but since the German courier did not reach German Military Headquarters until ten o'clock yesterday morning, French time, it was generally assumed here that the German envoys within the French lines had been instructed by wireless to sign the terms. Forty-seven hours had been required for the courier to reach German headquarters and unquestionably several hours were necessary for the examination of the terms and a decision. It was regarded as possible, however, that the decision may have been made at Berlin and instructions transmitted from there by the new German Government.

THE KAISER'S FLIGHT.
 LONDON, Nov. 11. The flight of Emperor William to Holland is confirmed from several sources but there is a divergence in reports relative to the identity and number of his companions. A Copenhagen despatch to Reuters says it is semi-officially reported in Berlin that the Emperor, accompanied by ten men, has arrived at Arnhem and occupied Count Von Bentick's chateau.

PRESIDENT GETS NEWS.
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. The momentous news that the armistice had been signed, was telephoned to the White House for transmission to the President. Later it was said that there would be no statement from the White House at this time.

KAISER SMOKED "FAG."
 LONDON, Nov. 10. The former German Emperor's party which is believed to include Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, arrived at Eysden on the Dutch frontier at 7.30 o'clock Sunday morning, according to the Daily Mail's advices. Practically the whole German General Staff accompanied the former Emperor and ten automobiles carried the party. The automobiles were bristling with rifles and all the fugitives were armed. The ex-Kaiser was in uniform. He alighted at the Eysden station and paced the platform smoking a cigarette. Eysden lies about midway between Liege and Maastricht on the Dutch border.

RED FLAG FLYING.
 COPENHAGEN, Nov. 10. Dr. Liegknecht, the noted Socialist who spent many months in prison for antagonising the German Government, has issued the following announcement at Berlin on behalf of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council: "The Presidency of the police, as well as the chief command is in our hands. Our comrades will be released. The red banner has been hoisted on the Royal Palace and the red flag is waving from the Brandenburger gate. Among those killed in the fighting at the 'Cockchafer' barracks was one of the workmen's leaders known as 'comrade Haberscrpht.'"

DUTCH AUTHORITIES UNEASY.
 LONDON, Nov. 11. The arrival of William Hohenzollern, the former German Emperor, with his wife and eldest son, has caused excitement and much uneasiness among Dutch authorities and the public of that country, says a despatch to the Telegraph from Rotterdam. It is officially stated that the refugees did not obtain authorization from Holland to enter the country, and crossed the frontier in the neighborhood of Eysden because the Dutch neutrality guards were weak at that point. It is said that the Dutch Government faces difficulty as to its treatment of the unwelcome visitors and many people contend that William Hohenzollern and his eldest son are still German soldiers and must be interned; others urge that they should be sent back to Germany; others argue that they cannot be prevented from visiting their old friend Count von Bentick. It is reported that the Dutch frontier is completely open and many German officers are seeking refuge in Holland.

ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.
 NEW YORK, Nov. 11. The Associated Press, this morning, issues the following: After 1,567 days of horror, during which virtually the whole civilized world has been convulsed, the greatest war in history ended this morning at six o'clock, Washington time. Announcement of the tremendous event was made at the State Department at the Capital at 2.45 o'clock this morning and in a few seconds was flashed throughout the Continent by the Associated Press. Details of the terms dictated by Marshal Foch on Friday forenoon to the German armistice delegates, have not as yet been given out, but it is believed they of such a nature as to protect the world from a resumption of the struggle by the Germans. It is assumed that they call for the demobilization of Germany's army, the surrender of part of her fleet and the dismantling of the rest and the evacuation of occupied portions of France and Belgium, and of Alsace-Lorraine. It is probable, also, that Germany has agreed to call home all her troops now in Russia and Rumania. The terms announced by the State Department do not tell anything of the scene at Marshal Foch's headquarters at the time the armistice was signed. It was stated, however, that at five o'clock, Paris time, the signatures of Germany's delegates were affixed to the document, which blasted for ever the dreams which embroiled the world in a struggle which has cost at the very least estimate ten million lives.

STREET FIGHTING IN WARSAW.

CELEBRATING IN LONDON.
 LONDON, Nov. 11. News of the signing of the armistice soon became known to those persons in the centre of the city, as flags were immediately flown to the breeze and the issuance of evening papers for which there was a great rush. At 11 o'clock the first official celebration came, when the old air raid signals were fired from all police and fire stations. London then gave itself to the celebration of the event which, although unexpected, was welcomed, nevertheless.

 NEW YORK, Nov. 11. With Wall Street riotously celebrating the dawn of peace, the Board of Governors of the N. Y. Stock Exchange decided not to open the market to-day.

CELEBRATING IN STRASSBURG.
 ZURICH, Nov. 11. Enthusiastic demonstrations were held in Strassburg on Saturday night, France was cheered, notwithstanding the intervention of the mounted police.

MONS CAPTURED THIS MORNING.
 LONDON, Nov. 11. Mons, the Belgian town near where British troops engaged in bitter fighting with the Germans at the beginning of the war, was captured early this morning by Canadian troops under Gen. Horne, according to Field Marshal Haig's announcement to-day.

THE SITUATION IN GERMANY.
 PARIS, Nov. 11. The situation in Germany in as far as it can be ascertained from news arriving through Switzerland may be summed up as follows: In Prussia the Emperor is gone and a Socialist Government in an undetermined form is in power. In Bavaria and Wurtemberg republics have been proclaimed. The Royal family of Oldenburg has fled and a revolution is reported. A republic has been formed in Schleswig-Holstein, Frankfurt, Hamburg, Cologne, Essen, Muelheim, Aix La Chapelle and Emerich, as well as many other cities are in the hands of the revolutionaries. Kiel, Wilhelmshaven and other ports are in the power of revolutionist naval units.

MINOR MESSAGES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.
 The Belgian frontier east of the forest of Treton, east of Avesnes, has been reached by the French, according to the War Office announcement to-day. Italian troops have entered the town of Boord, less than two miles from the frontier. Between Miedres and Sedan the French have forced their way to the east bank of the Meuse between Lumes and Velgion.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.
 By order of President Wilson, Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder, to-day directed the cancellation of all outstanding draft calls, stopping the movement during the next five days of 252,000 and setting all November calls for over three hundred thousand men.

PARIS, Nov. 11.
 France is hearing the good news with the same equal temperament with which it bore the vicissitudes of the past four years. Quiet joy is visible on every countenance but there is little outward expression. The French public is turning its attention to the extraordinary events in Germany. While a few bands played in the streets and there was much singing in the boulevards paid most attention to the newspaper bulletins boards. Many Parisians remained up until far into the night discussing the news in the cafes.

PARIS, Nov. 11.
 The Prussian Minister at Hamburg was arrested at his home in that city, according to a Basel despatch.

When Flaherty lent the "Rag" to Press.

Flaherty's managing editor had been in the night before the following story—remembered as he always was whenever he stepped into the back room of the drinking emporium. The story was considerably younger at the time than he is now. Yet I remember the managing editor's story will be repeated most of it: the time this story came to pass was as a smaller-city daily published in a busy New York State city. It was a pretty good organization, a substantial circulation, and a good advertising patronage sufficient to keep the ghost walking every Saturday afternoon. This newspaper was published during the week, and the king-pin among the four newspapers published in the city. Our editorial force consisted of an editorial writer, a managing editor, a city editor and several other men. Among the latter was a man named Flaherty, not so old in years as in experience. He had come from the West to see his son on the job. Flaherty sent the "rag" to the press on Saturday the day I was my city editor was taken ill, compelling him to temporarily do the job. My editorial was added to the books half a dozen times, but he was frequently but sometimes one of the times when he went from grace. And now we come to the story—veteran "globe-trotter," a good newspaper man and a good morning drinker for a man who was short on reports. I gave him a chance. Like "travelling" newspaper men, and say that the next morning he was really reincarnated.

When Flaherty wrote the "Rag" to Press.

When Flaherty wrote the "Rag" to press, he was in a state of mind that was not only interesting, but it met with the approval of the owner of the paper, and he was no slouch when it came to judging the contents of his newspaper. Flaherty was that type of newspaper man known in the old days as a "grog-thrasher," and he threw them more or less frequently while with me. Still he was never boozed to the point where his work was not satisfactory. "With myself speeding west of Chicago upon the Southwestern Limited, my editorial writer upon one of his periodical sprints and my city editor home seriously ill, the situation in the office of the old 'rag' was of a nature to make the boys think and think quickly. The owner dropped in at the office along about four o'clock and found the reporters rudderless—that is, they had no directing head. The owner had gathered the reporters about him in my office and was explaining to them that team-work only would save the day. About this time Flaherty dropped in sober and dry, but within him on the "Boss," said he, "things look bad. They sure do! But, if there is anything Flaherty can do to help straighten matters out, lead the way. I have written editorials on two or three of the best papers in the country; I have directed city editors and heads of mechanical departments before now, and I feel pretty sure that I can do so again. Just for to-night, if you say, Boss, I'll put the 'rag' to press on time and with flying colors." The Boss eyed Flaherty keenly for a few moments. Then he rose and walked over to where the "globe-trotter" was sitting and grasping him by the hand he said, "You are everything in authority that goes with the making of a morning newspaper, Flaherty. I have a hunch that things are not going to be one-half so bad as they would be without Flaherty!" "I am going to be strictly honest and say that our newspaper looked the next morning as if it had been reincarnated—as if it had been taken apart and most of its bad features slung away and new sectional timbers inserted here and there. Flaherty presented two columns of the best editorials that ever appeared in our newspaper. They were of the brand that make men think. The worth- while stories started in with two or three 'sticks' of introductory matter that made them gems in newspaper work. The first page was remodelled and the make-up was so refreshingly pleasing and original as to make our readers wonder what had happened over-night. Each heading told a story within itself and the typographical arrangement was of the brand that you don't find in 99 newspapers out of every 100. The advertising was built up upon lines that were considered revolutionary in those days. Flaherty had let himself loose for the night. "The name of the owner of the paper was Daniels. He was a newspaper man of great ability, but for several years had been in poor health. His visits to the office were irregular. It is needless to say that he had elected the night Flaherty stood at the helm. He wasn't sure whether Flaherty would stick to his job or not. Still he had confidence that Flaherty would pull through 'O. K.' if he kept away from the moisture mixtures. But would he? That was the question our owner couldn't answer. The night passed and when at six o'clock the next morning a copy of the paper was delivered to his bedroom door he gasped in astonishment and appreciation of Flaherty's output. It was some newspaper, make no mistake about that. It was the kind of newspaper the Boss always wanted, but apparently couldn't get, even with a managing editor, a city editor and an editorial writer, respectively, on the job. "The Boss was in his office at about two o'clock the next day and his one desire was to see and shake hands with Flaherty—Flaherty of a single night. The latter drifted in along about four o'clock. Evidently he hadn't been to bed, for his eyes had the glaze that goes with half a lead. Flaherty had been drinking, and he made no effort to hide it. 'Flaherty,' said the Boss, 'you represent two types of newspapermen—the type that can make good under trying cir- cumstances and the type that cannot be depended upon in times when de- pendability is the keynote of the situation. To-day's issue made me proud, but I can see that there is work for me to-night. My first thought after looking the paper over this morning was to offer you a cooking good pos- sion—provided you felt that you were once more the man God intended you should be—provided you felt that you wanted to come back and stay that way.' "As soon as the Boss had received word that our city editor was seri- ously ill they telegraphed me. In haste I started eastward, and was back in my chair on the fourth morning after I had left town. Flaherty had sent one edition to press—and it was an edition branded all over with newspaper ability. The other two issues were published under the jurisdic- tion of the Boss. They were sorry examples of the comparison with Flaherty's product. When I called upon the Boss that afternoon his first words were, 'For God's sake, Watson, try and see if you can hot follow that style and finish set by Flaherty. While he was the saving hand for a single night—he set an example that we can follow profitably. Poor Flaherty! Isn't it a pity that only of his type seldom come back?' —Newspaper- man.

Small silk buttons, sewed in groups, are valuable decoration. A much-used trimming is wool and silk tricot embossed in angora. Rhinestone buckles seem especially adapted to black satin slippers. Nearly all gloves nowadays are one or two clasp—rarely mousetails.

CORN PONE.

Some loyal woman from the south should teach us how to make corn pone, the kind o'n s pushes in n i s mouth and bids farewell to grief and groan. All kinds of bread are being made to take the place of wheaten loaves; inventive women are arrayed around the nation's cooking stoves. I've eaten bread composed of rice, I've eaten bread they made of bran and some was punk and some was nice, and some was but an also ran. I've eaten stuff they called corn bread, the kind that helps to win the war; and it outweighed a bar of lead, and tasted like excelsior. Down in the south they make corn pone that soothes the soul it is so nice; a pampered monarch on his throne might envy one who has a slice. If I had southern pone to eat, I would not care a fustiooth comb if all the mills quit grinding wheat, until the speckled crows come home. Ahon a northern woman cries, "I know just how that pone is made; I've been down south, and I am wise to all the secrets of the trade." And then she tries to show her skill, and makes corn bread that I would like to shove into Kaiser Bill until his works went on a strike. We can't make pone deservin' fame, all honest northerners allow; I wish some loyal southern dame would travel round and show us how.

Not Generally Known!

The average man or woman may think all WAR STANDARD FLOURS are alike. Such is not the case. The Canadian Government has decreed that Flour must not be milled ABOVE a certain standard. But there is nothing to prevent millers from milling BELOW that standard.

Ogilvie's Standard Flour is milled to limit of Govt. requirements. Try a Barrel and be convinced.

BOOK TALK

The Devil's Cradle—Mrs. A. Sidgwick, $1.60.

Here is a story that tells the truth. It reveals the German life and character with an astonishing intimacy of detail.

Joe Farrell—"Quiller"—Conch, $1.50. A rousing story of adventure. The plot is an unusual one; it assumes dramatic and powerful proportions.

Greatheart—Ethel Dell, $1.60. An absorbing story which takes an elemental grip on the reader to an amazing degree.

Joan and Peter—H. G. Wells, $2.00. In the study of the characters, Joan and Peter, the author has done some of his finest, most revealing and brilliant work.

The Man in Grey—Baroness Orczy, $1.50. Strange and mysterious creature, that elusive personality known to the historians of the Napoleonic era.

Our Admirable Betty—J. Farnol, $1.60. It is a romance pure and simple, bristling with stirring episodes, with a delightful company of characters.

The Soul of Susan Yellam—H. A. Vachell, $1.60. War novels cannot as a rule be termed delightful, but there is no other word for this one.

Sylvia Scarlett—C. Mackenzie, $1.75. A book full of movement, color and life.

That Which Hath Wings—R. Dehan, $1.60. A colorful novel of love and war, of wrath and humor, skilfully accomplished. A sequel to the "Dop Doctor."

The Watcher by the Threshold—John Buchan, $1.50. These tales of strange happenings on the dark and forbidding moors of Scotland have a true flavor of legend.

Tony Heron—C. Kenneth Burrow, $1.50. The story of a temperamental antagonism which leads to tragedy, but tragedy not without hope.

The Zeppelin's Passenger—E. P. Oppenheim, $1.60. Mystery and suspense, thrills and heart-throbs are intermingled.

Gentlemen at Arms—Centurion, $1.60. They are real stories, and give in bold, unforgettable outlines, vivid pictures of the men who are saving civilization.

"First and Second Books of Arimas", 75c. each. Concerning men, and the things that men did do, at the time when there was war. "Amazing, witty and profoundly wise."
