KING GEORGE THE FIFTH SEAMEN'S INSTITUTE.

SWIMMING POOL RE-OPEN MARCH 1st, 1922.

The instinctive desire for cleanliness, says Lotze, marks the beginning of culture; at any rate it indicates a fortunate tendency in that direction. Filth is unendurable in the eyes of those civilized peoples alone who prize, in the case of their bodies, the same degree of purity which they impart to their enterprises and their personal environment.

To-day the Seamen's Institute affords abundant opportunity to enjoy the advantage of the bath not only as a means of cleansing the body but also as a tonic and the promoter of a healthy skin—"the finest undergarment ever invented."

The Pool has been redecored, recleaned, and new Shower Baths installed. Inspection invited.

Open daily except Sundays from 9 a.m. till 10.30 p.m. Tuesdays, Ladies only . . . 9 a.m. till 10.30 p.m.

Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XL.

All feeling was numbed, but there was just the faintest resentment in her heart still against someone—she wondered who it could be. She knit her brows, trying to keep her thoughts concentrated.

Ah, yes, of course! It was Tom Calligan with whom she felt resentful. It was he who had pushed her into this fresh hell of suffering; his hands that were forcing her to sit there beside Philip; her promise to him that had brought her to Apsley. She would write and ask him to let her off that promise—she could not go on suffering any more.

The car turned in at the drive and stopped at the door of the Highway House. She moved her cramped limbs and got out; she went on into the hall without waiting for Philip. There was a wood fire burning in the grate; she looked at it and her thoughts carried her back to the last night she had stayed here, when she had stolen downstairs to leave her note for Philip; she turned and looked at him as he followed.

"I suppose you burnt my note that night?" she said. "Burnt your note? What note?" She laughed as she met his eyes. "Oh, only one of the many love-letters I have written you," she said with sarcasm. He passed her without a word and went on to the library. She stood looking after him. "It was I who said that," she was telling herself in a sort of blind terror. "It was my voice—that awful, sarcastic voice. Oh, what will become of me—what will become of me!" She followed Philip into the library. He just glanced at her.

Nervous Breakdown

The extreme depression and discouragement which comes over one at times is the most alarming symptom of nervous exhaustion. This letter is a message of hope to all who find themselves in this unfortunate condition.

Mrs. Geo. T. Tingley, Albert, N.B., writes: "For years I was in a very nervous, run-down condition, was much depressed in spirit and suffered a great deal at times. The least noise would irritate me and at times I felt as though I certainly would go crazy. I consulted different doctors to no effect."

"A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and I can truly testify today to the great benefit received. There was a marked change before I had finished the second box and when I had used a dozen of my nerves were thoroughly restored. I was entirely relieved of those terrible feelings I used to have. I shall ever be ready to testify to the benefits of this wonderful medicine, feeling sure that it will give to others the quick and permanent relief it has given me."

and her pretty features had sharpened; there were hollows beneath her eyes, too, as if she had not slept. Was it because she was fretting about Calligan or that other man? He wondered. Since he had read that incoherent message on the torn paper he was almost sure that it must be Calligan for whom she really cared. What had she meant by saying that there seemed nothing left in all the world but pain?

One or two men whom he had run up against in town yesterday had dropped him a well-meant hint or two. Apparently Eva had spent all her time in Calligan's company, making no attempt to disguise the fact; she had been seen everywhere with him. "Too many late nights, I expect, mother," Philip forced himself to say. "The country will soon pull her round again."

He went out into the hall and met Eva coming down-stairs; she was dressed for walking. "Where are you going?" he asked. "Only home—I want to see them all."

"I told your father you were coming to-day." She looked at him quickly. "You were very sure that I should do as I was told." "I did not tell you—I only asked." She did not contradict him; Philip took his hat. "I will come with you."

She laughed. "We are to make a good beginning, is that it? We are to let everyone see that we do sometimes go out together." She felt better when she had left the house. The throbbing nerves in her temple quieted a little, and the cool autumn air soothed her.

"It seemed strange to be walking with Philip; the last two weeks had seemed like years of separation; once she found herself thinking how very little he had changed, then she laughed, realising the foolishness of the thought—of course, one did not change in a few days."

"We met Mr. Faulkner at dinner last night," she said suddenly. "I didn't remember him, but he remembered me. Mr. Calligan introduced us all over again."

"Yes." "He told me it was all fixed up about Rhodesia, so I knew before I got your note."

"Yes." "I hope you will like it," said Eva; she felt that she must go on talking, anything was better than silence. "I hope I shall," Philip agreed. "Silence again; it seemed impossible to avoid it; she tried to think of something else to say, but there seemed no other subject in all the world but Rhodesia, and the fact that a fortnight held but fourteen days."

"Does father know that you are going away?" she asked. "I have not told him yet. We will tell him to-day, if you like."

"It doesn't make any difference; poor father! He will be upset, won't he?" "Why should he be?" "Well, he thought he had settled us both so comfortably in life. He hates to find that anything he has arranged has gone wrong."

"It cannot matter to him," Philip said, indifferently, but he was secretly relieved to find that his father-in-law was not at home. (To be continued)

Fashion Plates.

A NEW STRAIGHT LINE FROCK.

3837. There are no boundaries to smart versions of this popular style. In this instance the model simulates attractive redingote lines. The effect is becoming to slender as well as mature figures. Tropicote and satin could be here combined, or velvet and satin. Velvet with braiding would be nice, or broad cloth, with bands of kimmer.

A PRACTICAL WORK APRON.

3811. For anything that spells service or occupation, this model will prove convenient and comfortable as a protector for the dress over which it may be worn. Gingham, percale, seateen, rubberized cloth, canvas, drill, repp, lawn, crash, gaiter and calico are all good materials for this style. The underarm girdling simplifies laundering.

The pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: Small, 34-36; Medium, 36-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large 44-48 inches bust measure. A Medium size requires 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.

shroud and hier, while in our youthful bloom. Roast beef is but a deadly snare, and pies are like a gin; shun the accustomed bill of fare, for death's concealed therein. Raw grub is full of vitamins, and that's why cattle grow, and why the horses hump their spines, kick up their heels and go. Most men are languid, needing spurs to keep them at their toll, but when they've eaten cockle-burs they fairly paw the soil. I fed my aunt some cockle-burs, to see what she would do; there never was such smoke as her's, as round the house she flew. I wonder that our fathers stayed on this old earth so long, for all their customs were decayed, and all their theories wrong. They never heard of vitamins, and yet wrong-headed men, they never would take in their signs till three-score years and ten.

Saving Money is Vogue. The laws of fashion all allow, it's stylish to save money now. —Dainty Dorothy. And so it has come to pass that the thinking women of the country as well as serious minded men have come to the conclusion that the development of 'smart' is necessary to the development of national character. But if you are going to make last season's clothes do for a while it does not mean that you cannot have them dry cleaned and thoroughly refreshed, and that you must not change the shape or color of them. Our dyeing system is a perfect one.

Princess Mary's New Home.

There are few, if any, manors in England which have a more romantic and distinguished history than that of Harewood, the future home of Princess Mary, who will, however, it is understood, spend the early years of her married life at Goldborough Hall, Knareborough.

Ever since the Conqueror gave the rich Harewood lands, with the neighboring fee of Skipton-in-Craven, to Robert de Romell, one of his soldiers, the manor has had a sequence of lords as illustrious, and of ladies as fair and high-born as any in England, writes Thornton Hall, author of 'The Redmans of Harewood and Levens.'

Robert's only daughter found a husband in William de Meschines, the Conqueror's great-grand-nephew, thus forging the first of many links between Harewood and the Throne. Cecily's daughter, Alice, found a husband in another royal lord, William Fitz-Duncan, Earl of Murray, and nephew of Malcolm, King of Scotland.

And it was the son of this union, the 'Boy of Egremond,' who was so tragically drowned in the waters of the Strid, in Bolton Woods, and whose untimely end found such a sympathetic describer in Wordsworth. As cousin to Malcolm, King of Scotland, and to Henry VI. of England, this youthful Lord of Harewood was within sight of a throne.

Thus the Harewood lords and ladies follow each other down the centuries de Courcy's and Fitzgeraldis; an Earl of Devon and an Earl of Albemarle—until we come to Aveline de Fortibus, who succeeded to both earldoms, and combined the sovereignty of the Isle of Wight with the lordship of Harewood.

An heiress so richly dowered was a prize well worth the winning of a King's son; and thus it came to pass that Aveline was mated with Edmund Plantagenet, afterwards Duke of Lancaster, Henry III.'s son, 'the King and Queen (we read) and almost all the nobility being present at the wedding.' This for the fourth time within two centuries Harewood had a lord of royal blood.

In the generations that followed we find among the lords of Harewood John, Lord de Lisle, one of the first batch of Knights of the Garter; Sir Richard Redman, Speaker of the House of Commons, who had for wife a daughter of the first Lord Aldeburgh; and the great and ill-fated Earl of Strafford, who preferred a 'poorhouse' outside his park to the splendors of his ancestral castle.

Harewood Castle, which had seen six centuries of splendid life, had become a dismantled ruin when, in 1738, the manor passed by purchase to the hands of Henry Lascelles, ancestor of the present earl; and it was not until twenty years later that the walls of Harewood House, one of the most magnificent of England's 'lordly pleasure houses,' began to rise.

Although no link of descent connects the Lascelles with the long line of earlier lords, they have a worthy continued Harewood's splendid traditions for nearly two centuries. They have added to the long and distinguished list of Harewood's ladies two daughters of marquises (Bath and Clanricarde), and the daughter of the third Earl of Bradford; and they have displayed a regal hospitality from the days, a century and more ago, when the Grand Duke Nicholas was their guest, to the recent visit of Queen Mary and Princess Mary, who will be Harewood's first Royal lady.

Lord Lascelles is not only the inheritor of priceless treasure in Cheslerfield House, and the prospective owner of others at Harewood, but he is a collector of note into the bargain. Old English furniture, china, and silver prove irresistible lodgestones to him; and here is formed one big link between the Queen and her future son-in-law, for Her Majesty's knowledge of, and passion for, such things is well known. Princess Mary, too, imbued much of the same taste from her mother, with whom she has paid visits to various museums and collections, so that here, as in the hunting field and other spheres of life, the Princess finds much in common with her future husband.

The Laugh on the Company.

Something along the line of the famous advertisement written by Mark Twain for the Hartford Accident Insurance Co., is the following from an American exchange:

The insurance companies are now making accidents a pleasure. Mr. Smith, the broker, comes down and shows you a policy which is so attractive that you can hardly keep from going right out on the street and getting run over.

If you get killed you lose your life.

Man Without a Pulse.

I don't know Why He is Alive, Says Doctor.

A man with, it would seem, a unique complication of maladies is James Rostron, aged fifty-nine, of Manchester.

"Chronic bronchitis, chronic asthma, sclerosis of the liver, badly diseased kidneys, and frightfully distended heart" were the terms of a diagnosis by several doctors of Rostron, who claimed damages at Manchester County Court in respect of an accident which occurred while at his work.

"I don't know why he is alive," said Dr. Johnson, in giving evidence. "He has no pulse."

Another medical man stated that Rostron's extended to his ribs and reached down to his abdomen.

Rostron, in spite of his afflictions, gave evidence vigorously, describing how he strained himself in the endeavor to lift a beam. He was awarded £15.

Navigation in Fog.

Syren and Shipping says that tests have recently been carried out in Kiel Bay of an acoustic-electrical system for determining the exact whereabouts of a ship, enabling her to enter a port and to navigate difficult coast waters in a fog.

The location of a ship in a fog is effected in the following manner: The ship wishing to determine her whereabouts sends ashore a wireless message to that effect, and she is then requested to make a signal. This is sent from the ship and is taken up by a number of special microphones installed along the coast and connected with the oscillographs furnished by Siemens and Halske. On this apparatus a narrow film strip appears on which are marked the differences in the time occupied by the transmission of the signal from the ship to each of the different microphones. It is from these differences in time, which can be read with the utmost exactness to the hundredth of a second, that the ship's location is determined. This is then at once read off from a chart upon which the lines of a similar time difference in the sound signal are indicated, and the reading is transmitted to the ship by wireless.

The whole procedure occupies about five minutes. It is stated that the experiments at Kiel were thoroughly successful.

Women Smoking Less.

An informal census of the habits of the Oxford undergraduates, reveals the interesting fact that, roughly speaking, only one in five smokes and that in the 20 per cent. of smokers very few make a habit of the cigarette. They smoke one or two now and then as a social accomplishment rather than a pleasant amusement. Those who invite her friends and acquaintances to nine o'clock cocoa is not expected to provide either "gaspers" or "Egyptians. It is no slur on hospitality not to offer a smoke. Without doubt smoking is on the decline in Oxford. One reason may be that the modern girl goes to Oxford to prepare for a profession and is not for the most part rich. But with full allowance for such local influences the census strengthens the general opinion that women smoke less and that the fashion is gradually wanting in England as in many other countries.

The growing belief that smoking is bad for the complexion may be helping to rout the fashion.

THAT PULL AWAY SPIRIT.

Personally, I feel too strongly the advantages to the greatest number of temperance people to have my adversity devil aroused by prohibition, but I know you will be disgusted with me when I tell you what did arouse it.

Silly, But It's True. The "no accident weeks." When I saw all the signs displayed urging us to think always of safety first, and by all means if we had to have an accident to avoid having one this week, I felt a most ungodly desire to have an accident happen to me on the spot.

It may be that in my case this was partly due to the fact that from my earliest youth I have had an overdose of the safety-first spirit. Which leads me back to my first paragraph, and the assertion that it is not only reformers but also parents who fail to make enough allowance for the innate perversity of the human mind.

Over and over again have children develop qualities as sheer reaction against excess of the opposite qualities. In those about them. I feel sure that my own recklessness as a child was largely my reaction against too much safety first.

WHAT DOES THE CHILD DO? If you take a child by the arm and start to pull it away from something what does it do? It pulls back against you, of course. And that's just what children (small and large, both) are apt to do when yanked away from anything too strenuously.

Of course there are times when you have to yank. The child that is about to set himself has to be yanked away from the fireplace. But there are other times when you can avoid arousing the pull away spirit, and will thereby facilitate getting what you want—the best good of the child.

Future Fisheries. There are Still Plenty of Good Fish in the Sea, So Why Worry? The war gave the North Sea a chance to become repopulated with fish, and, in consequence, catches have been good since 1919. But seeing that in the course of a year the trawlers working in the North Sea sweep every acre of the available trawling grounds at least once, it cannot be long before the fishing again falls off. The fishing vessels will then be driven farther afield. Already trawlers work large banks near the Faroe Islands and the South of Iceland. They also trawl in the White Sea, and on Banks off the coast of Spain. The Governments of various countries have been busy charting new fishing grounds, and several of great value have already been discovered. Off the Algerian coast, for instance, are shallows extending to 5,600 square miles. This part of the Mediterranean is rich in fish, but these resources have hardly been touched so far. There are banks off the mouth of the Congo populated by huge swarms of mullet. The Portuguese are the only fishermen who have fished in this water. Off the North of Iceland are almost virgin trawling grounds, and among the richest banks in the world are those lying in the Pacific, off British Columbia. South America has magnificent fishing grounds in the Bay of Monte Video, where the Government of Uruguay is organizing trawlers. There are fine fisheries off the barren Kerguelen Island, while banks which positively swarm with dozens of varieties of fine food fish surround those strange islands, the Galapagos, the home of the giant tortoise, and the scene of countless legends of buried treasure. Nearer home there are banks off the Western Irish coast which are little used, yet which yield as good fish as the North Sea itself. RECEIPTS FIGURES. (Wall Street Journal.) An American citizen invested in 100 shares of German securities bought in Germany. He paid 200,000 marks and held them until the market looked favorable and sold for 500,000 marks. His profit was 300,000 marks and looked as though he had a large income tax to pay to this government. He was permitted to figure the transaction in dollars with a contrary result. The 200,000 marks invested in the securities were worth $2,000. When he sold for 500,000 marks, that sum was worth only $5,000. The result was that a gain of 300,000 marks represented an actual loss of $4,000 which he was allowed to deduct in his tax return. —By Bud Fisher.

Vicious Circles.

The letter of Mr. W. G. Gosling, published in yesterday's News and Telegram is rather illuminating and opens up several lines of argument, which could be used with advantage on both sides of his subject. At the same time there is considerable light shed upon methods of governmental business which spots the whole trouble and evil of raising extra duties by means of such a tax system as is in vogue at present.

Something, however, has to be done, and done quickly. The country can no longer stand the intolerable burden of taxation, which takes at least sixty cents of every dollar earned, to apply on Public Account. Raising a million dollars by extra levies and spending that million dollars without any visible return, is not good business.

the remedy in time. The Fish Regulations were not protested by the whole body of exporters. The Sugar Control Board carried on merrily and but little noise was heard from importers. The Budget of 1921 went through, adding the super tax of 25 per cent. and the special import tax of 5 per cent. What objections were made by the trade then? True the Board of Trade did have a few meetings and made certain representations to the Government half-heartedly, but nothing came of them.

Twenty Years Ago To-Day.

Pancake Party and Dance.

Shrove Tuesday was fittingly closed at the S.L.P.F. Rooms by a Pancake Party and Dance given under the auspices of St. John's Lodge, No. 5. About 75 couples attended and after several numbers of the dance programme had been run off supper was served in the dining room. Pancakes being the chief dish. Though the cook alleged that he had put buttons, money, nails, rings and other metallic and bone substance in the batter, no person seemed to have been fortunate or unfortunate enough to have found the lucky or unlucky symbols, at least none would admit their discovery.

Rosalind in Port.

FAILED TO REACH SISTE. S.S. Rosalind, Capt. Mitchell, arrived in port last night from Halifax and New York, bringing the following passengers: George A. England, Mrs. F. LeMessurier, Miss V. LeMessurier, W. and Mrs. Piercey, J. J. Mollaly, J. P. Moohan, F. W. Wilson, T. Cartwright, D. M. Baird, H. E. Cowan, C. F. Watson, F. M. O'Leary, Mrs. J. Onda, P. Haller, J. W. Miller, F. L. Lewis, E. J. Salt, Mrs. J. C. Dunlop and 4 second class. On the passage from Halifax the ship received orders to proceed to the assistance of S.S. Sisto which ship has for the past 3 weeks been endeavouring to make port and in the last report gave her position as 18 1/2 miles off St. John's to the S.E. The Rosalind proceeded to the ship's assistance on Monday morning but meeting heavy fog was obliged to abandon the attempt. Capt. Mitchell sent a radio to the Sisto when he found that he could not reach her but received no reply. The Rosalind was in communication with the French cable ship Edouard Jeremac, which is some 60 miles South of Cape Race and frozen solidly in the ice. This ship is in no danger and reported all well on board. When about 15 miles S.E. of the Cape yesterday the Rosalind named a number of old seals heading North.

Feldians vs. City To-Morrow Night.

The Feldians vs. City should be the piece de resistance of the night's card at the Sports to-morrow night. We understand that at first Manager Jeffrey and Capt. Tommy Payne felt that it would not be quite fair to expect their team to go into action for a mere exhibition and run the risk of having some of their men crooked for the Tie Cup series. To obviate this we would suggest that the referee to-morrow night be empowered to inflict the severest penalties for even minor infringements.

Entries for Ice Sports.

Big interest is being manifested in to-morrow night's Championship Sports at the Prince's Rink which are being held in connection with Col. Nangle's War Memorial Fund Campaign, and up to last night the following entries had been received by Mr. J. A. MacKenzie: LIST OF ENTRIES. 1. Hockey - Proposed Champions 1922 vs. League Selection. 2. 1/2 Mile Championship - R. Peach M.G.O.C., Squires, M.G.O.C. Ern Churchhill, Terra Nova Club. 3. 1/2 Mile Ladies' Championship - Misses Rose Hart, Nellie Cooper, Margaret Lawlor, Vera James, Dorothy Sellers, Eva Noonan, Stella Learning.

Discovered the Fire.

In reporting the fire at Smyth Building on Sunday morning last, we gave credit to Sergeant Savage for discovering the fire, but we now learn that Mr. W. H. Parsons, night watchman at Ayre & Sons was the first to discover the outbreak. He was doing his usual rounds at about 3 o'clock when he noticed smoke issuing from the premises in question, and going to investigate he met Sergeant Savage and brought the matter to his attention, whereupon the alarm was rung in.

Ash Wednesday.

To-day, March 1, Ash Wednesday, or the first day of Lent, is within ten days of the latest date on which it can occur. Last year Ash Wednesday fell on February 9, unusually early. Ash Wednesday is observed by most Christian Churches, and is said to derive its name from the custom of smearing ashes on the heads of penitents on that day—a custom that received papal sanction in 1181, but is believed to be six centuries older.

Our Local Pepps.

HIS DIARY. February 28th.—Up betimes and to the office. A man to the Board of Trade where Sir P. T. McGrath tells me how he learns the Parliament will meet on March 8th. Dispatches out of England tell of the marriage of Princess Mary, to-day, and to a Comptroler, Viscount Lascelles. Which is a good thing, and an example to be followed by others of Royal blood. The engineers of the sealing steamers make certain demands on the owners which will not be countenanced and is like, I learn, to lead to the abandonment of the voyage. Indeed, a matter for much regret. I hear to-day how a woman in the common court did tell the Judge that her husband did assault her, and her tongue the reason of it. Which is, I think, the first time a woman has been found who would make such admission, albeit that it is true. Meeting Mr. Jennings, that is Minister of Public Works, I to have discourse with him on certain matters. I learn how, at the Carnival this night, one did represent me, which is, indeed a sign that I am some to much fame and honor, albeit that I live in my own country. At night, to the Masons' Dance, where a goodly assembly. It did joy me much to see how all did have great content, nor did I take it to shame, that one of my age, should dance also, I hear much praise of this, my journal, and one lady tells me how I do display great gifts in the writing of it, which it tries, I do sell them cheaper than I but those gifts which I do give my wife.

The World and His Wife.

Alma Rubens Appears in Dramatic Story. A very attractive programme awaits patrons at the Nickel to-day, when the management offers the great dramatic story "The World and His Wife" featuring beautiful Alma Rubens. In conjunction with this photoplay Miss Ruth Chase will be heard in two popular selections, "Ave Maria" and "Thank God for a Garden" whilst Mr. George Dale's numbers are "There is no doubt" and "Somewhere a voice is calling." The above picture presents the unique spectacle of a young and beautiful girl marrying a rich old man for love. However, despite the youthful wife's real affection for her husband, gossip gets in some deadly work and her lot is anything but a happy one. A series of dramatic circumstances clears the way.

Llewellyn Club Tea.

The annual Shrove Tuesday tea of the Llewellyn Club was held last night. The catering was in the hands of the ladies of St. Thomas's Parish. A concert was held in the assembly room and Rev. E. C. Earp presided. Numbers were contributed by Revs. E. C. Earp, C. A. Moulton; Messrs. H. F. Glass, Seymour, A. R. Stanfield, A. E. Holmes, Hon. A. W. Mews, H. A. Striling and the Pittman Bros. The programme concluded with a sketch entitled the "Three Witches" by the girls of St. Margaret's Guild which was especially enjoyable, the performers acquitting themselves in a very creditable manner. The affair was very successful and was brought to a close at 10 a.m. with the singing of the National Anthem.

Good Laughing Act at the Crescent.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you" is the slogan of Crescent patrons lately, for since Eddie McGinley has put in an appearance amusement-lovers get all the laughs coming their own way and last night's act was certainly no exception. Eddie had everybody in good humour with his original comedy. His moonshine parody was a decided hit, and brought forth loud applause. Tonight, however, Eddie will be seen in another complete change of programme, which consists of new character impersonations, songs, dances and jokes. He has also got another "home-brew" recitation which is sufficient guarantee of an enjoyable night's entertainment.

Personal.

The many friends of Mr. H. Torraville, will be pleased to hear of his recent success in the terminal exams at St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, England. Mr. Torraville spent a year pursuing theological studies at Queen's College, St. John's. We congratulate him on his happy record, and bespeak for him a brilliant scholastic career at the historic centre of training for the Priesthood of the Church of England.

McMurdo's Store News.

WEDNESDAY, March 1. With March come the dry and parching winds that are so hard on the complexion. But March winds have no terrors for those who are ready to take a little care of the skin. Use a good mild soap such as Cream of Lilies, Woodburys, Cuticura or Lotli Soap; and before going out into the air apply a little Cream of Lilies, which will vanish immediately so far as appearance goes, but which will protect the skin against the sharpest blasts. Then if you at night use a little Saxolin or Acme Cold Cream, you may bid defiance to March in its maddest merriest mood. We carry all of the above conveniences.

Curliana.

Secretary Salter wishes to announce that the Curliers Grand Memorial Fun will amount to $278,000 more or less, with all expenses paid. This is the record amount from the Curliers Association, and the curliers have done good work in the past, but they lived up to their true password this year, which was "Be up and don't be short." It was a glorious ending to their gallant heroes who sleep in Flanders field where the poppies grow, and elsewhere, the last act of courtesy that men who comprise the Curliers Association could do to their brother men who risked all for Newfoundland. The Memorial Sports Committee met yesterday, to make final arrangements for the Champion Ice Sports on Thursday night in the Prince's Rink. As the Curliers put their very best efforts forward on their Memorial Day so let the loyal citizens of St. John's patronize the Memorial Sports in the Prince's Rink on Thursday evening, fill the rink to overflowing, and show to those gallant warriors, who have simply crossed the Bar, a few days ahead of us, that we remember them, honor and revere their names, and will not soon forget what they did for Newfoundland. Therefore, citizens of St. John's, let the Prince's Rink be packed to overflowing, and show your appreciation to the Memorial Sports Committee, and make it the biggest financial house that the Prince's Rink ever had. The Memorial Sports Committee believe this will occur. The Curliers' Motto for Memorial Day was "Be up, and don't be short," and let the Motto of the loyal citizens of St. John's be to the Memorial Sports Committee. "Pack the Prince's Rink to overflowing on Thursday evening."

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR COUGHS AND COLDS.

Sealing Owners and Engineers Deadlocked.

WORK ON SHIPS STOPPED. A deadlock now exists between the sealing ship owners and the engineers, and it is probable that the ships will not prosecute the voyage this spring. The engineers have made demand for a monthly wage, in addition to a percentage share. Last year the engineers received a captain's share, divided amongst them. This year they demand the same in addition to a port wage. The owners, on the other hand, are willing to pay port wages and give an ordinary share. Yesterday work was stopped, and practically all the engineers were paid off. The sealing ship owners also advised the sealing crews, who are now leaving their homes, not to come on as it is likely the voyage will be abandoned. The sealing crews, recognizing that the men are taking a risk and feel they should have a specific wage, but with very little demand for the oil and skins, the voyage is not a profitable one.

NOW DO MY WORK WITH EASE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored My Health

McCormell, N. Y.--"I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me. I was tired out all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly everyone around me knew of my trouble and they wanted me to try it. So at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and improved every day. I do all my own work now except the washing and do it with ease. I can accomplish as much in a day now as it would have taken me a week to do last winter and I try to get every one I know to take your medicine to build them up. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."--Mrs. CHAS. BAKER, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N. Y. In almost every neighborhood there are women who know of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They know because they have taken it and have been helped. Why don't you give it a trial!

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

WARM SESSION. DUBLIN, Feb. 28.

A much heated party strike marked the opening session of Dail Eireann to-day. Deputies on both sides accused each other of violating the spirit of Ard Fheis. Compromise divisions showed majorities as high as ten for supporters of Treaty.

ALLENBY RECOMMENDED WITHDRAWAL.

LONDON, Feb. 28. A Parliamentary paper giving the correspondence on the Egyptian situation, shows that Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, High Commissioner for Egypt, has been urging the Home Government since the middle of November to withdraw the protectorate and bring into effect the principal proposals of Lord Milner's Draft Treaty.

That on January 10 he again, after his decision to report Lord Zagiouli Fasha, asked for authority to inform the Sultan of England's intention to abolish the protectorate, without waiting the conclusion of the Treaty, but that the Government withheld permission and requested that certain officials be sent to London to advise the Cabinet on the situation. To this the Field Marshal offered the objection that such a course would weaken his authority and declared the officials mentioned were in full accord with him.

After further objections Lord Curzon, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, finally, on January 28, requested the High Commissioner to come to London for a consultation.

Masonic Dance.

GRAND HONOURS FOR VISCOUNT LASCELLES--THE DANCE OF THE SEASON.

Grand Honours for Viscount Lascelles were given by the members of the Fraternity present at last night's dance of the Masonic Entertainment. The reputation which the Masonic dances have earned is one which would be difficult to improve upon, but the great success of last night's event could not but enhance it. It was not the decorations which counted, for nothing elaborate was done in this connection, but the "joie de vivre" which apparently existed within all present, was responsible for the vim and swing with which the dance proceeded, and for the way in which all enjoyed themselves.

Everything, From Bath Tubs to Bottles, Made From Paper.

Numbers of people are discarding the ordinary cambric and cotton pocket handkerchief in favour of paper handkerchiefs, as used in Japan. The Japanese rightly consider it a most barbaric habit to carry soiled handkerchiefs about in the pocket. Their handkerchiefs are used once, and then burned. This example might well be followed, especially in the case of infectious diseases.

Your Suit of Many Stitches.

Have you any idea how many stitches there are in your suit? It is a big total. To begin with, there are close upon 8,000 stitches in an average size pair of trousers. Of this number about 5,750 are machine-made, the balance being made by hand, chiefly in the form of finishing work to the waist, pockets and turn-ups.

Rink Carnival.

Many novel costumes were in evidence at last night's Carnival at the Prince's Rink, some of them being also exceedingly pretty. The prizes were won as follows:

MRS. ELVA CAULKINS.

"I have gained thirty pounds since taking Tanlac and never felt better in my life than I do now. Mother says she hasn't seen me looking so well since I was a girl," said Mrs. Elva Caulkins, 303 Blandina St., Utica, N.Y. "For eighteen long years I suffered from stomach trouble and sluggish liver, and during all that time I hardly knew what a well day was. As I almost starved myself trying to avoid indigestion, I fell off until I was hardly more than a shadow, and was so weak I was barely able to drag myself around the house. As a result of my long suffering I became almost a nervous wreck."

"This was the condition I was in when I started taking Tanlac, but today I am strong and well, feeling and looking like a different person from what I did a short time ago. It is no wonder to me that so many people praise Tanlac to the skies."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Strange Fate of An Atlantic Liner.

Just when Englishmen and Americans alike were rejoicing because the first steamships had succeeded in crossing the Atlantic regularly, there occurred one of the most mysterious disappearances ever known.

At this time--eighty years ago--a man who had gone to London, spent nearly a week there, and returned within thirty days, was regarded with something like hero-worship.

The President, a vessel which had been launched only a short time before, was hailed by the English-speaking world as the last word in liner service. She was the marvel of the hour, and when she sailed from New York in March, 1841, every craft in the harbor paid tribute to her.

In April, however, reports began to filter in from Liverpool that the President was overdue.

Throughout the spring and far into the summer there was an agony of suspense in England as well as in the United States--particularly as the passenger list of the missing ship contained the names of many men prominent in public life.

The fate of the passengers aboard the President is a mystery to this day. The only ray of light that was shed upon the matter was that a Portuguese ship reported sighting a large steamer moving slowly under sail, but, as the steamer did not hall the brig nor display any signal of distress no assistance was offered.

Whether the President foundered in some violent gale--a theory which hardly appears likely, as no other vessel reported trouble at this time, whether she was crushed and sunk by an iceberg or was utterly destroyed by fire--no man has ever been able to tell, for not so much as a splinter of wreckage was ever found.

Frost Facts.

A strong solution of salt and water poured into the lavatory cistern will prevent the water freezing, and thus do away with the possibility of the cistern cracking.

Doorssteps will not freeze and become dangerously slippery after being washed in frosty weather if a tablespoonful of methylated spirits is added to the water.

Salt and hot water is the quickest way of thawing a frozen drain-pipe.

Straw is the best wrapping for outside pipes during a frost. It should not be tied tightly.

A section cut from the leg of an old stocking and drawn over the boot will prevent one from slipping on tiles or flagstones.

A strip of narrow felt firmly fastened to the sole of a boot or shoe will have the same effect.

A wooden spoon placed inside a toilet jug will prevent a crack should a sudden frost make the water freeze.

Windows will not get "frost-cracked" with frost if wiped over with a rag moistened with methylated spirits.

A touch of olive oil on the ears, rubbed in, and the surplus wiped off, will prevent a "nip" and soreness by frost.

The Barometer's Secret.

Most of us have "tapped" the barometer in the morning. "Ah," we say, if the glass has risen, "it's going to keep fine!" "Um," we say, if the glass has fallen, "another wet day!" But can we explain these mysteries? After all, they are comparatively simple.

The principle of the barometer rests on the fact that the normal weight of the atmosphere at sea level equals the weight of a column of mercury thirty inches high. When the air is hot or cold, its pressure is less than normal, and the barometer falls. When the air is dry or cold, its pressure is greater than normal, and the barometer rises.

Wind Sends It Up and Down.

But wind also affects the pressure of the atmosphere. So it is not safe to assume always that a high barometer means the weather and a low barometer wet.

Generally speaking, the barometer rises for cold, dry, or less wind; and falls for hot, wet, or more wind.

FOUR BISHOPS

And "The Little College Round the Corner."

An outpost clergyman arriving at the railway station, St. John's, one stormy day in the Fall of 1920 was accosted by a cabman, "Cab, sir? Cab, sir?" Handing his grip to the man the person followed him to the station entrance and got into the cab. "Where to, sir?" "Queen's College," was the reply. "Queen's College, sir? Don't know it, sir. Know Bishop Field 'College, sir. Great sports the Field 'College boys." "Do you know the 'Prince's Rink'?" "Rather, sir! And 'Mr. Harry Field's residence!'" "Should say so, sir! Place Sir Edgar Bowring used to live in—the man who gave the Park to St. John's." "Well, set me down between the two places and that will be Queen's College." "Oh, I know, sir." "The Little College 'round the corner." "Right, Oh!" And off he bowled over the paved road by Water Street to Adelaide Street, and thence by way of New Gover and Duckworth Streets, across Cavendish Square, round the corner of Forest Road to Queen's College.

THE FIRST "B"—BISHOP SPENCER AND THE COLLEGE.

There was a time when "The Little College" was not round the corner, nor was it known as Queen's College. What we now know as Queen's College was at first known as "The Theological Institution," it owed its origin to Bishop Spencer, the first Bishop of Newfoundland. His biographer tells us: "He was a very elegant and accomplished man, although a born aristocrat—the nephew of the Duke of St. Albans—he was a most simple and unpretentious in his habits." He came as a Missionary to Newfoundland in 1818, being first stationed at Placentia. He moved to Ferryland in 1819 and to Trinity in 1820. Not being sufficiently robust for a Newfoundland outpost life in the pioneering days, he went to Bermuda and was appointed the first Archdeacon of Bermuda. In 1839 the Ven. Archdeacon Aubrey Spencer was consecrated first Bishop of Newfoundland, which was then cut off from the Diocese of Nova Scotia of which it formed part. "At my consecration," said the Bishop, "I saw of Newfoundland I found only eight clergymen of the Church of England in the whole Colony."

BISHOP SPENCER THE ORIGINATOR OF THE COLLEGE.

"Bishop Spencer aided," we are told, "by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel," established "The Theological Institution" for the training of Divinity students. It was founded in 1841. During the episcopate of Bishop Spencer the students had no proper College, but were boarded with a Mrs. Brown, a Congregationalist, and attended lectures during the daytime at a small schoolroom situated on the Mall close to St. Thomas's Church."

THE SECOND "B"—BISHOP FIELD AND THE COLLEGE.

Bishop Spencer, after a short episcopate of four years, was succeeded by Bishop Field, who had been styled the Apostle of Newfoundland. When Bishop Field landed in the Island in 1844, he described the College "as a poor wooden building in which six students attended daily to receive instruction from the clergyman of St. Thomas's Church." The Bishop at once saw the need of a building in which the students could reside under the charge of the Principal, and took steps to accomplish this.

BISHOP FIELD THE DEVELOPER OF THE COLLEGE.

In 1847 we first find "The Little College round the Corner," for as a temporary expedient the Bishop secured a house in which the students could live together, and which should be the site of the future College. Bishop Field was not only a Father-in-God, he was a "statesman Bishop." No sooner had he obtained the temporary College, standing on what was to be the permanent site, than he began to look ahead. Looking ahead was with the Bishop, the pre-requisite for getting ahead. He planned for a

Theological College, and a Collegiate School. "To carry out this most desirable plan into successful operation," the Bishop writes, "it is obvious that the first and most essential requisite is an endowment, even more essential than the Collegiate 'Buildings.'"

BISHOP FIELD'S POLICY—ENDOWMENTS BEFORE BUILDINGS.

If we of to-day inherited in full measure the marvellous practical-mindedness of the "statesman Bishop" we should be far more zealous and energetic than we are in doing what he did, namely putting "first things first." An endowment, even more essential than the Collegiate Buildings," Bishop Field put men and money for training men, for the sacred Ministry, "to feed Christ's flock scattered abroad." In the creeks and harbours of the rugged coast of Newfoundland before his own great plans for "bricks and mortar." The Bishop's "scheme was a bold and masterly attempt to grapple with the problem of setting and training men for the mission field and has never yet been fully realized." In 1851, writing from Bermuda the Bishop says, "If I could raise $25,000, the Institution would be safe." In 1856 the Endowment Fund was launched by a Pastoral Letter addressed by Bishop Field to the Church people of Newfoundland. Of the College scheme the Bishop said: "Ist. It is the most certain or most likely means of obtaining a supply of men for the work of the ministry of this Diocese. 2nd. It presents an inducement and affords an opportunity to 'young men in the Colony to develop and prepare themselves for the service of the Church. . . .'"

The Bishop goes on to say, "I come now to the great question: How can this capital sum of $25,000 sterling, or 'the income of $200, sterling a year,' be realized and secured in the and 'the two next following years?' The Bishop, of whom it has been written 'he knew no compromise where principle was at stake,' nailed his colors to the mast and went steadily on in the attempt to put 'the principle of endowment' into effect, thereby hoping to bring about 'the most certain or most likely means of obtaining a supply of men for the work of the Ministry in this Diocese.' It is said 'money talks.' If this be so then how eloquently does Bishop Field's personal gift of $2500 sterling bear testimony to his principles. Bishop Field once, and yet again, reveals the difficulties which hindered, but never stopped him in carrying out his great purpose. He complains "there are 'Missings in the Diocese which had made no collections. Missions more than one or two, which have been assisted by the bounty of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel 'for, I believe, nearly a century, and are still assisted by, I might say almost subsisting upon it, in the use 'and enjoyment of their spiritual 'things.' Yet, notwithstanding, the Bishop went on with his policy of education and perseverance, knowing that finally all difficulties would be overcome. At length he issued "a final statement of the subscriptions 'and collections for the College Endowment Fund. By calling and making the statement the final one I do not mean that more subscriptions 'are not wanted, or would not be received."

BISHOP FIELD'S 'LAST THINGS' FOR THE COLLEGE.

The "statesman Bishop" who planned and worked indefatigably, so that for all future time his successors in the Episcopate might have a college where a due supply of men for the Sacred Ministry "could be retained, planned and worked to the last. Bishop Field's will shows this. "He bequeathed (1) The College property; (2) A property to the South of the College known as the Brewery; (3) Property on the south side of the harbor adjoining St. Mary's Church (if not required by the Rector of the Church); (4) The property adjoining the College known as Avalon cottage to the Diocesan Synod to be held in trust for the Theological College. The will also referred to the "Endowment Fund" (which it states to be £7,400 (currency) yielding £300 per annum). Bishop Field's earthly labours ended in June, 1876.

THE THIRD "B"—BISHOP JONES AND THE COLLEGE.

"Llewellyn, by Divine permission, Bishop of Newfoundland," the Bishop that this generation remembers—the silver-tongued preacher, the Bishop of the compassionate heart, who was well-nigh idolized by his flock—played no unimportant part in the history of "The Little College Round the Corner." If Bishop Spencer was the originator, and Bishop Field the developer,

BISHOP JONES WAS THE CONSERVATOR.

of the College. Bishop Jones' episcopate was co-incident with an era of great development in our Colony's history. Patriotic leaders in Newfoundland were bent on developing the Colony's latent resources to the utmost. "Outside things" loomed large in most peoples' imagination. Graving docks; railways; educational systems; industrial enterprises such as existed in the Old Country and on the American Continent were models for Newfoundland, and every effort was being concentrated on acquiring these things. At this time a few influential churchmen, seen on the Church keeping ahead of the times, began to make comparisons between Queen's College, St. John's, and the Theological Schools and Universities of England and Wales. Strange to say they adopted a directly opposite policy for their Church to what they did for their country. As citizens of Newfoundland they not only invested their own money, but induced other people to invest theirs, for the establishing of industrial enterprises. They left no stone unturned to secure rebates, concessions, guarantees and favourable tariffs for the protection of goods manufactured in the newly erected buttermilk, cordage, boot and shoe, and tobacco factories which, admittedly, could not compare at all favourably with those imported, because they had strong convictions that the surest way to build up the country they loved, and in which their interests lay, was by developing the country's resources, and in so doing to develop the greatest resource of all—the young men who were native to the country, who were conversant with local conditions, and would eventually best develop the country. The most important thing any business can do is to make big men of those who make big business. Strange to say as Newfoundland churchmen they pursued the opposite policy. By a passive indifference to its claims on their generosity and service they allowed Queen's College to remain in the back waters of neglect. They looked down upon the Institution, which the far-seeing "statesman Bishop" had developed, and while professing to admire his greatness they despised his greatest work, the College which possessed latent possibilities for developing the religious, moral and educational life of the Colony by having young men born in the country, knowing and loving the country, to exercise the good of the country, the talents given them by God. Money, energy, time and influence did these Churchmen use, in season and out of season, to develop the natural resources of the Colony for its material enrichment; indifference, a pitying contempt and, in some cases, scorn, for the Institution conceived, planned, and endowed for developing the spiritual resources in the Church for the betterment of the country. While busy organizing companies and building factories to make "soap and candles" they were content to see Queen's College, for all they cared, become a desolation. Some indeed were busy—busy making plans and formulating schemes to divert the income of Queen's College to another College across the seas. Here, however, they were up against the conservative Bishop. Bishop Jones knew that not only had he a great trust from his predecessor to conserve, but that it would be a "policy of madness" to scrap an Institution which had provided considerably more than one-half of all the Clergy in the Diocese. While patriotic business men and leaders in the State were concentrating all their powers on building up local industries for the development and economic well-being of the Colony, how could he, the Bishop of the Diocese—the Father and leader of his people—lightly discard so valuable an Institution? Bishop Jones, firstly, held the great statesmanship of his illustrious predecessor in too great an estimation, and, secondly, owed too great a debt of gratitude to such graduates of Queen's College as Archdeacon Botwood, Canons Noel, Bishop Bayly, Smith and Netten, and the Reverend G. S. Chambrlain, Holland and many others, to become an iconoclast by "scrapping" Queen's College. If he had possessed neither admiration nor gratitude he would not have done it for he had none of the instincts of a ruthless destroyer. We are told of Bishop Jones that "he steadily refused any such proposals, and indeed gave his sanction to a further extension."

Right to the end of his long episcopate the Bishop took a deep interest

THE FOURTH "B"—BISHOP WHITE AND THE COLLEGE.

Bishop White, the first native Bishop of the Diocese of Newfoundland, came to the Episcopate at a critical time in the history of both Church and State. Having passed through a period of inflated prosperity, due to vast war expenditures, with its attendant evils of waste, extravagance of living and abnormally high prices for the necessities of life, we have entered on a period when men and institutions are "hard hit" if dependent upon small stationary incomes. Queen's College which could only keep its head above water in normal times was soon in financial difficulties. Just imagine a College, the function of which was to train men for the Sacred Ministry, with all its expenses of feeding, housing and instructing from six to nine students, the maintenance of a Principal, a staff of College servants and the upkeep of the property, with an income no bigger than the money spent on the upkeep of an automobile in the city of St. John's. Was it any wonder that Principal Conrad Barton—a man of superior intellectual attainments, a thinker beyond the average, the unassuming gentleman, and withal of deep spirituality of life—felt constrained to resign his position and return to England.

THE COLLEGE DOORS WERE CLOSED.

Those who by their inertia and lethargy had contributed to this condition of things were now witnesses of dust lying thick over chapel, hall, library and lecture room. Spiders were spinning their webs across the closed doors of the College; grass was growing rank over pathway and walk. More than this, they saw the Bishop, whom the whole Church population, through their lawfully appointed Synod delegates, had called to be Bishop-Elect of Newfoundland when consecrated to his high office, and the ranks of his clergy thinned, by deaths and removals, and with no immediate prospect of replacing them because the College—Queen's College—which Bishop Jones declared "has supplied more than half the clergy of the Diocese" had been closed.

THE BEGINNING OF A BRIGHTER DAY.

The prospect looked gloomy indeed when the Rev. N. S. Facey, LL.D., a native of the country returned from England with scholastic honours through upon him. He had spent eight years away from Newfoundland pursuing various courses of study. The Great War had broken in upon his plans, halting for a time his University career. Some of those eight years were spent in service of King and France as Chaplain to the Forces in Canada and Flanders. Dr. Facey proved his resourcefulness, pluck and determination by simply fighting his way through University courses at Durham, Cambridge and Dublin, gaining the coveted degrees of those great schools. Those degrees have no value to Dr. Facey apart from the fact that they are outward signs of greater efficiency and larger opportunities of service to the Church of his baptism and the country of his birth. Backed by his devoted helpmeet, Dr. Facey offered, if Bishop White desired to avail of the offer, to re-open the doors of Queen's College, and to do so on the salary of the Bishop's disposal. The Bishop did desire it, and from the moment that he appointed Dr. Facey as Principal of Queen's College, giving him the Bishop's blessing, from that moment

Lost for Centuries.

A Building of Historic and Civic Importance, All Knowledge of Which Had Been Lost for Centuries, Was Discovered at Hereford, England, Owing to the Collapse of a Modern Chimney in the Booth Hall Hotel during repairs.

The building is an ancient timber-built structure known as the Booth Hall. According to local antiquaries a license was granted in 1384 for the purchase of the site for a municipal building, and it was afterwards used as a house of detention for freemen and bankrupts. When the chimney collapsed parts of the roof and ceilings of upper bedrooms were brought down, and some fine oak beams and rafters were exposed. Closer examination showed portions of carved and moulded work. A member of the Hereford Woolhope Club, a local society whose chief interest is the recording and preservation of ancient work of the county, persuaded the owners, Messrs. Arnold Perrett and Co., of Wickwar, Gloucester, to restore the building, and after the partitions and ceilings of the old attic bedrooms had been removed three handsome hammer-beam principals and two tie-beam principals were discovered, the hammer-beams having carved brackets with figure heads, and the tie-beam principals with pannelled king posts containing beautiful traced panels. Cusped wind-braces between the principals decorate and strengthen the structure.

"Tartar" is a lime-like substance that forms on the teeth. It is composed of saliva, phosphate of lime, etc., and becomes attached to the teeth near the salivary duct. It is porous like a sponge and holds particles of food which decompose and taint the breath with an offensive odor. This tartar once formed increases, always in the direction of the gums; first inflaming them, then causing them to puff up and recede from the teeth, and finally by absorption of the bony sockets, to cause good, sound teeth to drop out for want of support.

The Anglo-Irish Peace Negotiations.

By W. J. BROWNE, B.A., B.A.Sc., Rhodes Scholar, Oxford.

(Concluded.)

WORTH TAKING HOME. Several private conversations with the two leaders at Downing Street proposals were handed over to the delegates. I remember the day when I had the right on which I had the right to have a late supper near the Square with the charming Mr. Fitzgibbon. He got back to his hotel after the proposals had just come in. It was an all-night session. The following day Mr. De Valera went back to the answer that he was not worth taking. At the request of the Prime Minister he consented to summon the Irish Parliament to meet in a few days later. The Government committed their faith by publishing a letter which recommended the proposals. The English press criticized his interference. When he went to England for the conference I thought that he asked to try his powers as a diplomat. He met both Craig and Lloyd George. The doubts of the English I.R.A. kept the truce, and the British for the latter daily committed a minor character; but on the 11th it was well kept.

THE PERSONNEL OF THE CONFERENCE.

On October 11th the Conference opened in London. On the British side were Lloyd George, Lord Birkenhead, Austen Chamberlain, Winston Churchill, Sir Hamar Greenwood, Sir Gordon Stewart, and Sir Lansing Worthington Evans. On the Irish side there were Arthur Griffith, Michael Collins, George Gavan Duffy, Edmund Duggan and Robert C. Barton. Mr. De Valera remained in Dublin "to keep the Republic pure." Mr. Griffith, the Chairman of the Irish Plenipotentiaries is a journalist by profession. He is a short, square man of a very taciturn disposition. He was the founder of the Sinn Féin movement and contemplated gaining independence by the passive resistance method. Mr. Collins is a much younger man, and is a good representative of the young men of Ireland. He was Finance Minister in the Dail and held high rank in the I.R.A. He has been credited with many wonderful exploits, and his strong aggressive face makes him a striking personality.

After a few preliminary meetings two were selected from each side as a Sub-Committee. This was composed of Lloyd George, Lord Birkenhead, Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins. They met at all hours of the day and unknown to the press or public. On November 8th, an agreement was reached which the Northern Parliament rejected. About three weeks later, Nov. 29th, the English Premier submitted new proposals which the Irish turned down. It is still vague what happened after that, but the Irish leaders spent a week-end in Dublin in consultation with the Cabinet. Apparently the subject discussed was the oath of allegiance, on which Mr. Griffith declared he would not break. New counter proposals were handed over, the effect of which was, according to the Times to "make Ireland an independent power in loose Treaty relationship." With England Lloyd George would not accept this and a final document was handed to the Irish envoys to take or leave. This was the memorable night of December 5-6. No time was allowed to submit the document to Dublin. Sir James Craig had to be informed on the following day, and therefore the document had to be returned that evening signed by all the delegates. Of that evening two stories have been told. Undoubtedly the situation was a grave one, as the delegates believed, the alternative was war. If Mr. De Valera had been a delegate I doubt much whether he would sign the document under these circumstances. Mr. Duffy and Mr. Barton speaking in the Dail afterwards, said that for themselves they preferred war, but that they hesitated to commit their country to an unequal and hopeless struggle. No delegate felt easy in his mind when he signed the document. But the die was cast. In the early morning of Tuesday, December 5, 1921 the first Treaty between England and Ireland was signed.

DIVERSITY OF OPINION.

To students of the psychology of history the reception of the Treaty must always cause a difficulty. No one in Ireland knew whether to rejoice or feel sad. The Treaty had its good fruits, but then it had its good fruits, too. That it had been signed by Mr. Griffith and Mr. Collins was to many its sole recommendation. Its reception in Dail Eireann was divided into two irreconcilable factors, one favoring, one opposing the Treaty. Mr. De Valera led the opposition of the Treaty. With him were Austin Stack and Cathal Buirgin, Minister of Defence. For the first time in four hundred years, the Dail has disagreed on fundamental matters. Everyone seemed to appreciate the honesty and sincerity of Mr. De Valera, so that recriminations did not run very high. There was no doubt that the Irish people favoured ratification. Think what it meant. For the first time in five hundred years there would be an British troops in five-sixths of Ireland. Dublin Castle, the Irish Bastille, the symbol of persecution and all its paraphernalia of tyranny would go. Black and Tan, Auxiliaries and Court Martials would all go for ever. The jails would be emptied of all the political prisoners. Ireland would get control of her finances, her industries and her army. On the other hand, rejection meant war on a terrible scale. But it is easy to see the attitude taken up by the Republicans. The Treaty does not give self-determination. It was not a Treaty between equals but one produced under threat of duress. A Treaty signed with a pistol at your head, therefore, it would settle nothing. The supporters of the Treaty argued that it was a trench won from the enemy, and from which a new assault could be made.

INDEPENDENCE THE GOAL.

No one in Ireland believes there is any half-way house on the road to independence. No is there. Liberty is never bound. The chain must be broken, not merely loosened. The star of freedom has only begun to rise in Ireland. Independence is still the goal of all Irishmen. Yet the Treaty will bring a new era to Ireland that has never known peer. The future will be a great period in the world's history, and it is very possible that the determination, the love of liberty and the heroic self-sacrifice shown by Ireland in her great struggle with a more powerful neighbor will be an inspiration to those who must re-establish the world. Ireland, says Mr. De Valera, must stand for the doctrine of moral right in International Relations, and that doctrine, although one of its champions President Wilson was wrecked on it, must eventually prevail if swords are ever to be turned into ploughshares.

FRIENDS.
There was sunshine in the valley and the roses were in bloom. The skies were blue above me, but I walked the place in gloom. I was sad and disappointed in a garden that was fair to see. For with all the joy about me, not a friend of mine was there.

I'd have traded right that minute all the fields where violets grow And the balmy summer breezes for a sight of northern snow. For the beauty of the blossoms had but little charm for me. It was friendly, smiling faces I was hungering to see.

Oh, what are scenes of beauty when your friends are far away. And who could like a garden if alone he had to stay? Though the skies are blue above you, there can be no peace of mind Amid scenes of richest splendor if you've left your friends behind.

So I'll gladly brave the blizzard and I'll tramp the snowy street. For at every turn and corner there are smiling friends to meet; And though far away is sunshine, I find happiness depends. Not on sky or trees or roses, but on being with your friends.

Wedding Bells.

O'BRIEN—WALSH.
A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's Church at 4 p.m. on Wednesday last, the contracting parties being Mr. George T. Walsh, of George Neal, Ltd., and Miss Marguerite O'Brien. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Kitchin in the presence of a large gathering of friends of the young couple. The bride was very prettily attired and was attended by Miss Madeline Walsh while Mr. William Walsh performed the duties of best man. After the customary toasts were duly honored and an enjoyable evening was spent. The groom's present to the bride was a set of pearls and to the bridesmaid, a ring, whilst the best man received a handsome watch fob. The presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Walsh were both numerous and costly and included cheques from Mr. W. H. Neil, George Willis and Jas. O'Brien. The employees of George Neal, Ltd., presented the happy couple with a handsome overmantle clock. The Telegram wishes Mr. and Mrs. Walsh many years of wedded bliss.

The End of the Franco-German War.

Just fifty years ago, March 1, 1871, the victorious German army made its formal entry into Paris after the signature of the provisional treaty of peace. The French capital had surrendered a month before, on Jan. 28, when an armistice was concluded at Versailles; and in the interval a French National Assembly had been convened to guarantee the terms. The cession of Alsace and Lorraine and the huge indemnity were the outstanding features of the settlement, which further provided for a brief occupation of part of Paris by the Germans. They had been willing, it is true, to waive that stipulation, but only on condition of receiving the town of Belfort as compensation, and the French Government rightly held that substantial considerations were more important than sentimental ones. King William of Prussia, newly-made German Emperor, enjoyed the honour of entering Paris for the third time, for he had been with the victorious allies in 1814 and 1816. Bismarck and Moltke, who had been the principal instruments of his triumph, were in his train, and the march of the occupying forces was headed by a young subaltern, who was called Bernhardi, and was destined to make his name notorious as a writer in later years. Altogether, in truth, this ostentatious ceremony did much to implant the seeds of aggressive militarism in Germany, which from that time onwards began to dream of world power. By the French the humiliation was deeply felt, but fortunately the day passed without hostile demonstrations. The houses in the way were all closely shuttered, and the populace for the most part was absent, so that no excuse for further claims was given to the Prussians by useless and untimely violence. The invaders marched in and in due course marched out without incident; and less than a week later the German headquarters left Versailles and returned to Berlin. Now the Germans are squealing because they are required to pay for the Great War. It is to be hoped that France will act as the Germans acted in 1871.

"Passing the Buck."

(Hamilton Spectator.)
Premier Drury, speaking in this city, warned the public against expecting too much of a government legislation. The government can never regulate the welfare of the individual, he said, and appealed to that "sturdy sense of independence" which enabled a man to stand upon his own feet. The premier, harassed by the necessity of finding the money for a war-increasing accumulation of public undertakings, may well issue the warning against adding to the tale; but it is not difficult to believe in his disinterestedness. The tendency in these measures are devised.

What is Your Verdict!

Is it not safe to assume that the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, who manufacture in their own huge perfectly equipped plant practically every part of the Ford car, are the people best qualified to make replacement parts at the lowest price compatible with the high quality which must be maintained?

Manufacturers of spurious parts, operating as they do on a small scale with limited capital and inadequate equipment, cannot possibly make parts of the same quality or accuracy at anywhere near the low price you have to pay for Genuine Ford Parts. Yet you are asked to believe that these spurious parts not only equal Genuine Ford Parts in quality but can be produced to sell for less!

We rest our case here. The verdict we leave to you.
